On the last day of his term of office, after he had been escorted to his house by almost the whole body of citizens, he heard that many friends of Marcellus and men of influence had closely beset him in the treasury, and were trying to force him to register some remission of moneys due. Now, Marcellus had been a friend of Cato from boyhood, and when associated with him had been a most excellent magistrate. When acting by himself, however, he was led by a feeling of deference to be complaisant towards suppliants, and was inclined to grant every favour. At once, then, Cato turned back, and when he found that Marcellus had been forced to register the remission, he asked for the tablets and erased the entry, while Marcellus himself stood by and said nothing. After this had been done, Cato conducted Marcellus away from the treasury and brought him to his house, and Marcellus had no word of blame for him either then or afterwards, but continued his intimate friendship up to the end.

However, not even after he had laid down the quaestorship did Cato leave the treasury destitute of μὲν αὐτοῦ καθ' ἡμέραν ἀπογραφόμενοι τὰς διοικήσεις παρήσαν, αὐτὸς δὲ βιβλία λόγους περιέχοντα δημοσίων οἰκονομιῶν ἀπὸ τῶν Σύλλα χρόνων εἰς τὴν ἑαυτοῦ ταμείαν ὠνησάμενος πέντε ταλάντων ἀεὶ διὰ χειρὸς εἶχεν.

- XIX. Εἰς δὲ σύγκλητον εἰσῆει τε πρῶτος καὶ τελευταῖος ἀπηλλάττετο· πολλάκις δὲ τῶν ἄλλων σχολῇ συναγομένου καθεζόμενος ἀνεγίνωσκειν ἡσυχῇ, τὸ ἱμάτιον τοῦ βιβλίου προῖσχύμενος. ἀπεδήμησε δὲ οὐδέποτε βουλῆς γενομένης. 768
 ἐπεὶ δὲ ὕστερον οἱ περὶ Πομπηίου ἐώρων¹ αὐτὸν ἐν οἷς ἐσπούδαζον ἀδίκως ἀμετάπειστον καὶ δυσεκβίαστον ἀεὶ, διεμηχανῶντο φιλικαῖς τισι συνηγορίαις ἢ διαίταις ἢ πραγματείαις ἔξω περισπᾶν. συνεῖς οὖν ταχὺ τὴν ἐπιβουλήν ἀπέειπε πᾶσι καὶ παρετάξατο βουλῆς ἀγομένης μηδὲν
 2 ἄλλο πράττειν. οὔτε γὰρ δόξης χάριν οὔτε πλεονεξίας οὔτε αὐτομάτως καὶ κατὰ τύχην, ὥσπερ ἕτεροί τινες, ἐμπεσὼν εἰς τὸ πράττειν τὰ τῆς πόλεως, ἀλλ' ὡς ἴδιον ἔργον ἀνδρὸς ἀγαθοῦ τὴν πολιτείαν ἐλόμενος, μᾶλλον ᾤετο δεῖν προσέχειν τοῖς κοινοῖς ἢ τῷ κηρίῳ τὴν μέλιτταν, ὅς γε καὶ τὰ τῶν ἐπαρχιῶν πράγματα καὶ δόγματα καὶ κρίσεις καὶ πράξεις τὰς μεγίστας ἔργον πεποίητο διὰ τῶν ἑκασταχόθι ξένων καὶ φίλων πέμπεσθαι πρὸς αὐτόν.
 3 Ἐυστὰς δὲ ποτε Κλωδίῳ τῷ δημαγωγῷ κινουῦντι καὶ τaráττοντι μεγάλων ἀρχᾶς νεωτερισμῶν καὶ διαβάλλοντι πρὸς τὸν δῆμον ἱερεῖς καὶ ἱερείας,

¹ ἐώρων Sintenis, with one Paris MS.; Coraës and Bekker have ὀρῶντες, with the other MSS.

CATO THE YOUNGER

his watchful care, but slaves of his were there every day copying the transactions, and he himself paid five talents for books containing accounts of the public business from the times of Sulla down to his own quaestorship, and always had them in hand.

XIX. He used to be the first to reach the senate and the last to leave it; and often, while the other senators were slowly assembling, he would sit and read quietly, holding his toga in front of the book. He never left the city when the senate was in session. But afterwards, when Pompey and his friends saw that he could never be prevailed upon or forced from his position in any unjust measures which they had at heart, they would contrive to draw him away by sundry legal advocacies for friends, or arbitrations, or business matters. Accordingly, Cato quickly perceived their design and refused all such applications, and made it a rule to have no other business on hand while the senate was in session. For it was neither for the sake of reputation, nor to gain riches, nor accidentally and by chance, like some others, that he threw himself into the management of civic affairs, but he chose a public career as the proper task for a good man, and thought that he ought to be more attentive to the common interests than the bee to its honey. And so he was careful to have the affairs of the provinces and decrees and trials and the most important measures sent to him by his connections and friends in every place.

At one time he opposed Clodius the demagogue, who was raising agitation and confusion as a prelude to great changes, and was calumniating to the people priests and priestesses, among whom Fabia, a sister of

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἐν οἷς καὶ Φαβία Τερεντίας ἀδελφή, τῆς Κικέρωνος γυναικός, ἐκινδύνευσε, τὸν μὲν Κλώδιον αἰσχύνῃ περιβαλὼν ἠνάγκασεν ὑπεκστῆναι τῆς πόλεως, τοῦ δὲ Κικέρωνος εὐχαριστοῦντος, τῇ πόλει δεῖν ἔχειν ἔφη χάριν αὐτόν, ὡς ἐκείνης 4 ἕνεκα πάντα ποιῶν καὶ πολιτευόμενος. ἐκ τού-του μεγάλη δόξα περὶ αὐτόν ἦν, ὥστε ῥήτορα μὲν, δίκη τινὶ μαρτυρίας μιᾶς φερομένης, εἰπεῖν πρὸς τοὺς δικαστὰς ὡς ἐνὶ μαρτυροῦντι προσέχειν, οὐδὲ Κάτωνι, καλῶς ἔχει, πολλοὺς δὲ ἤδη περὶ τῶν ἀπίστων καὶ παραδόξων, ὥσπερ ἐν παροιμία τινί, λέγειν ὅτι τοῦτο μὲν οὐδὲ Κάτωνος 5 λέγοντος πιθανόν ἐστι. μοχθηροῦ δὲ ἀνθρώπου καὶ πολυτελοῦς λόγον ἐν συγκλήτῳ διαθεμένου πρὸς εὐτέλειαν καὶ σωφρονισμόν ἐπαναστὰς Ἀμναῖος, “ὦ ἄνθρωπε,” εἶπε, “τίς ἀνέξεται σου δειπνοῦντος μὲν ὡς Λευκόλλου, οἰκοδομοῦντος δὲ ὡς Κράσσου, δημηγοροῦντος δὲ ἡμῖν ὡς Κάτωνος;” καὶ τῶν ἄλλων δὲ τοὺς φαύλους καὶ ἀκολάστους, τοῖς λόγοις δὲ σεμνοὺς καὶ αὐστηροὺς χλευάζοντες ἐκάλουν Κάτωνας.

XX. Πολλῶν δὲ αὐτόν ἐπὶ δημαρχίαν καλούντων οὐκ ᾤετο καλῶς ἔχειν μεγάλης ἐξουσίας καὶ ἀρχῆς, ὥσπερ ἰσχυροῦ φαρμάκου, δύναμιν ἐν πράγμασιν οὐκ ἀναγκαίοις ἐξαναλῶσαι. καὶ ἅμα, σχολῆς οὔσης τῶν δημοσίων, παραλαβὼν βιβλία καὶ φιλοσόφους ἐβάδιζεν εἰς Λευκανίαν, ἀγροὺς αὐτόθι κεκτημένος ἔχοντας οὐκ ἀνελευ-2 θέρους διατριβάς· εἶτα καθ’ ὁδὸν πολλοῖς τισιν ὑποζυγίοις καὶ σκεύεσι καὶ ἀκολούθοις ἀπαντήσας καὶ πυθόμενος Νέπωτα Μέτελλον εἰς Ῥώμην ἐπανέρχεσθαι δημαρχίαν μετιέναι παρεσκευα-

CATO THE YOUNGER

Cicero's wife Terentia, was in danger of conviction. But Cato put Clodius to such shame that he was forced to steal away from the city; and when Cicero thanked him, Cato told him he ought to be thankful to the city, since it was for her sake that all his public work was done. In consequence of this he was held in high repute, so that an orator, at a trial where the testimony of a single witness was introduced, told the jurors that it was not right to give heed to a single witness, not even if he were Cato; and many already, when speaking of matters that were strange and incredible, would say, as though using a proverb, "This is not to be believed even though Cato says it." Again, when a corrupt and extravagant man was expatiating in the senate on frugality and self-restraint, Amnaeus sprang to his feet and said: "Who can endure it, my man, when you sup like Lucullus, build like Crassus, and yet harangue us like Cato?"¹ And other men also who were degraded and licentious in their lives, but lofty and severe in their speech, were mockingly called Catos.

XX. Though many invited him to become a tribune of the people he did not think it right to expend the force of a great and powerful magistracy, any more than that of a strong medicine, on matters that did not require it. And at the same time, being at leisure from his public duties, he took books and philosophers with him and set out for Lucania, where he owned lands affording no mean sojourn. Then, meeting on the road many beasts of burden with baggage and attendants, and learning that Metellus Nepos was on his way back to Rome prepared to sue for the tribuneship, he stopped without a word, and

¹ Cf. the Lucullus, xl. 3.

σμένον, ἐπέστη σιωπῇ, καὶ διαλιπὼν μικρὸν ἐκέλευσεν ἀναστρέφειν ὀπίσω τοὺς ἑαυτοῦ. τῶν δὲ φίλων θαυμασάντων, “Οὐκ ἴστε,” εἶπεν, “ὅτι καὶ καθ’ αὐτὸν ὑπὸ ἐμπληξίας φοβερός ἐστι Μέτελλος, καὶ νῦν ἐκ τῆς Πομπηίου γνώμης ἀφιγμένος εἰς τὴν πολιτείαν ἐμπεσεῖται δίκην 3 σκηπτοῦ πάντα πράγματα ταραττων; οὐκ οὖν σχολῆς οὐδὲ ἀποδημίας καιρός, ἀλλὰ δεῖ κρατῆσαι τοῦ ἀνδρός, ἢ καλῶς ἀποθανεῖν ὑπὲρ τῆς ἐλευθερίας ἀγωνιζόμενον.” ὁμως δὲ τῶν φίλων παραινεσάντων ἀφίκετο πρῶτον εἰς τὰ χωρία καὶ διέτριψεν οὐ πολὺν χρόνον, εἶτα ἐπανῆκεν εἰς πόλιν. ἐσπέρας δὲ ἐλθὼν εὐθύς ἔωθεν εἰς ἀγορὰν κατέβαινε δημαρχίαν μετιῶν, ὡς ἀντιταξόμενος πρὸς τὸν Μέτελλον. τὸ γὰρ ἰσχυρὸν ἢ ἀρχὴ πρὸς τὸ κωλύειν ἔχει μᾶλλον ἢ πρὸς τὸ πράττειν· κἂν πάντες οἱ λοιποὶ παρ’ ἓνα ψηφίσωνται, τοῦ μὴ θέλοντος μηδὲ ἑῶντος τὸ κράτος ἐστί.

XXI. Τὸ μὲν οὖν πρῶτον ὀλίγοι περὶ τὸν Κάτωνα τῶν φίλων ἦσαν· φανερᾶς δὲ τῆς γνώμης 769 αὐτοῦ γενομένης, ὀλίγου χρόνου πάντες οἱ χρηστοὶ καὶ γνώριμοι συνέτρεχον καὶ παρεκάλουν καὶ παρεθάρρυνον αὐτόν, ὡς οὐ λαμβάνοντα χάριν, ἀλλὰ τὴν μεγίστην διδόντα τῇ πατρίδι καὶ τοῖς ἐπιεικεστάτοις τῶν πολιτῶν, ὅτι πολλὰ κίς ἀπραγμῶνως ἄρξαι παρὸν οὐ θελήσας, νῦν ὑπὲρ τῆς ἐλευθερίας καὶ πολιτείας ἀγωνιούμενος
 2 οὐκ ἀκινδύνως κάτεισι. λέγεται δέ, πολλῶν ὑπὸ σπουδῆς καὶ φιλοφροσύνης ὠθουμένων πρὸς αὐτόν, ἐν κινδύνῳ γενόμενος μόλις ἐξικέσθαι διὰ πλῆθος εἰς τὴν ἀγοράν. ἀποδειχθεὶς δὲ δήμαρχος

CATO THE YOUNGER

after waiting a little while ordered his company to turn back. His friends were amazed at this, whereupon he said: "Do ye not know that even of himself Metellus is to be feared by reason of his infatuation? And now that he comes by the advice of Pompey he will fall upon the state like a thunderbolt and throw everything into confusion. It is no time, then, for a leisurely sojourn in the country, but we must overpower the man, or die honourably in a struggle for our liberties." Nevertheless, on the advice of his friends, he went first to his estates and tarried there a short time, and then returned to the city.¹ It was evening when he arrived, and as soon as day dawned he went down into the forum to sue for a tribuneship, that he might array himself against Metellus. For the strength of that office is negative rather than positive; and if all the tribunes save one should vote for a measure, the power lies with the one who will not give his consent or permission.

XXI. At first, then, Cato had only a few of his friends about him; but when his purpose became known, in a little while all the men of worth and note flocked to him with exhortations and encouragements. They felt that he was not receiving a favour, but conferring the greatest favour on his country and the most reputable of his fellow citizens; for he had often refused the office when he could have had it without trouble, and now sued for it at his peril that he might contend for the liberties of the state. It is said, moreover, that he was in peril from the many who crowded upon him in their zeal and affection, and could hardly make his way through the crowd into the forum. He was declared

¹ In 63 B.C.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- σὺν ἐτέροις, καὶ τῷ Μετέλλῳ, τὰς ὑπατικὰς ἀρχαιρεσίας ὄρων ὠνίους οὔσας, ἐπετίμησε τῷ δήμῳ· καὶ καταπαύων τὸν λόγον ἐπώμοσε τοῦ δόντος ἀργύριον, ὅστις ἂν ᾗ, κατηγορήσειν, ἕνα Σιλανὸν ὑπεξελόμενος δι' οἰκειότητα. Σερβιλίαν
- 3 γὰρ ἀδελφὴν Κάτωνος ὁ Σιλανὸς εἶχε. διὸ τοῦτον μὲν παρήκε, Λεύκιον δὲ Μουρήναν ἐδίωκεν ἀργυρίῳ διαπραξάμενον ἄρχοντα μετὰ τοῦ Σιλανοῦ γενέσθαι. νόμῳ δέ τινι τοῦ φεύγοντος αἰεὶ φύλακα τῷ κατηγορῶ διδόντος, ὥστε μὴ λαθεῖν ἂ συνάγει καὶ παρασκευάζεται πρὸς τὴν κατηγορίαν, ὁ τῷ Κάτωνι δοθεὶς ὑπὸ τοῦ Μουρήνα παρακολουθῶν καὶ παραφυλάττων, ὡς ἑώρα
- 4 μῆθὲν ἐπιβούλως πράττοντα μῆδὲ ἀδίκως, ἀλλὰ γενναίως τε καὶ φιλανθρώπως ἀπλήν τινα τῆς κατηγορίας καὶ δικαίαν ὁδὸν πορευόμενον, οὕτως ἐθαύμαζε τὸ φρόνημα καὶ τὸ ἦθος ὥστε κατ' ἀγορὰν προσιῶν καὶ φοιτῶν ἐπὶ θύρας πυνθάνεσθαι τοῦ Κάτωνος εἰ μέλλει τι σήμερον πραγματεύεσθαι τῶν περὶ τὴν κατηγορίαν· εἰ δὲ μὴ φαίη, πιστεύων ἀπήει.
- 5 Τῆς δὲ δίκης λεγομένης ὁ Κικέρων, ὑπατος ὢν τότε καὶ τῷ Μουρήνᾳ συνδικῶν, πολλὰ διὰ τὸν Κάτωνα τοὺς Στωϊκοὺς φιλοσόφους καὶ ταῦτα δὴ τὰ παράδοξα καλούμενα δόγματα χλευάζων καὶ παρασκώπτων γέλωτα παρεῖχε τοῖς δικασταῖς.

CATO THE YOUNGER

tribune with others¹ (including Metellus), and seeing that the consular elections were attended with bribery, he berated the people; and in concluding his speech he swore that he would prosecute the briber, whoever he might be, making an exception only of Silanus because of their relationship. For Silanus was the husband of Cato's sister Servilia. For this reason he let Silanus alone, but he prosecuted Lucius Murena on the charge of having secured his election to the consulship with Silanus by bribery.² Now, there was a law by which the defendant could set a man to watch the prosecutor, in order that there might be no secret about the material which he was collecting and preparing for the prosecution. Accordingly, the man appointed by Murena to watch Cato would follow him about and keep him under observation. When, however, he saw that Cato was doing nothing insidiously or unjustly, but was honourably and considerably following a straightforward and righteous course in the prosecution, he had such admiration for Cato's lofty spirit and noble character that he would come up to him in the forum or go to his house and ask him whether he intended that day to attend to any matters connected with the prosecution; and if Cato said no, the man would take his word and go away.

When the trial was held, Cicero, who was consul at that time and one of Murena's advocates, took advantage of Cato's fondness for the Stoics to rail and jest at length about those philosophers and what were called their "paradoxes," thus making

¹ At this time the number of the popular tribunes was ten.

² Silanus and Murena were consuls in 62 B. C.

τὸν οὖν Κάτωνά φασι διαμειδιάσαντα πρὸς τοὺς παρόντας εἰπεῖν· “ὦ ἄνδρες, ὡς γελοῖον ὑπα-6 τον ἔχομεν.” ἀποφυγῶν δὲ ὁ Μουρήνας οὐ πονηροῦ πάθος οὐδὲ ἄφρονος ἔπαθεν ἀνθρώπου πρὸς τὸν Κάτωνα· καὶ γὰρ ὑπατεύων ἐχρήτο συμβούλῳ τῶν μεγίστων, καὶ τὰλλα τιμῶν καὶ πιστεῦν διετέλεσεν. αἴτιος δὲ ἦν ὁ Κάτων αὐ-τός, ἐπὶ τοῦ βήματος καὶ τοῦ συνεδρίου χαλεπὸς ὦν καὶ φοβερός ὑπὲρ τῶν δικαίων, εἶτα πᾶσιν εὐνοϊκῶς καὶ φιλανθρώπως προσφερόμενος.

XXII. Πρὶν δὲ εἰς τὴν δημαρχίαν καθίστασθαι, Κικέρωνος ὑπατεύοντος, ἄλλοις τε πολλοῖς ἀγῶσι τὴν ἀρχὴν ὄρθωσεν αὐτοῦ καὶ ταῖς περὶ Κατιλίαν πράξεις μεγίσταις καὶ καλλίσταις γενομέναις τέλος ἐπέθηκεν. αὐτὸς μὲν γὰρ ὁ Κατιλίνας ὀλέθριόν τε καὶ παντελεῆ μεταβολὴν ἐπάγων τοῖς Ῥωμαίων πράγμασι καὶ στάσεις ὁμοῦ καὶ πολέμους ταραττων ἐξελεγχθεὶς ὑπὸ
 2 τοῦ Κικέρωνος ἐξέπεσε τῆς πόλεως, Λέντλος δὲ καὶ Κέθηγος καὶ μετ’ αὐτῶν ἕτεροι συχνοὶ δεξάμενοι τὴν συνωμοσίαν, καὶ τῷ Κατιλίᾳ δειλίαν καὶ μικρολογίαν τῶν τολμημάτων ἐπικαλοῦντες, αὐτοὶ διεννοοῦντο τὴν πόλιν ἄρδην ἀναιρεῖν πυρὶ καὶ τὴν ἡγεμονίαν ἐθνῶν ἀποστάσει καὶ πολέμοις 3 ἀλλοφύλοις ἀνατρέπειν. φανερᾶς δὲ τῆς παρασκευῆς αὐτῶν γενομένης, καὶ Κικέρωνος¹ ἐν βουλῇ γνώμην προθέντος, ὁ μὲν πρῶτος εἰπὼν Σιλανὸς ἀπεφήνατο δοκεῖν αὐτῷ τὰ ἔσχατα παθεῖν χρῆναι τοὺς ἄνδρας, οἱ δὲ μετ’ αὐτὸν ἐφε-

¹ καὶ Κικέρωνος so Sintenis² for the corrupt MSS. ὡς ἐν τοῖς περὶ Κικέρωνος γέγραπται; Coraës and Bekker adopt the early anonymous correction καὶ Κικέρωνος, ὡς ἐν τοῖς περὶ ἐκείνου γέγραπται.

CATO THE YOUNGER

the jurors laugh. Cato, accordingly, as we are told, said with a smile to the bystanders: "My friends, what a droll fellow our consul is!" And after Murena had been acquitted, he did not feel towards Cato as a base or senseless man might have done; for during his consulship he asked his advice in the most important matters, and in other ways constantly showed him honour and trust. And Cato himself was responsible for this; on the tribunal and in the senate he was severe and terrible in his defence of justice, but afterwards his manner towards all men was benevolent and kindly.

XXII. Before he entered upon his tribuneship, and during the consulship of Cicero,¹ he maintained the authority of that magistrate in many conflicts, and above all in the measures relating to Catiline, which proved the most important and most glorious of all, he brought matters to a successful issue. Catiline himself, namely, who was trying to bring about a complete and destructive change in the Roman state, and was stirring up alike seditions and wars, was convicted by Cicero and fled the city; but Lentulus and Cethegus and many others with them took over the conspiracy, and, charging Catiline with cowardice and pettiness in his designs, were themselves planning to destroy the city utterly with fire, and to subvert the empire with revolts of nations and foreign wars. But their schemes were discovered, and Cicero brought the matter before the senate for deliberation.² The first speaker, Silanus, expressed the opinion that the men ought to suffer the extremest fate, and those who followed him in

¹ 63 B.C.

² Cf. the Caesar, vii. 4-v ii. 2; and the Cicero, x. ff.

- 4 ξῆς ἠκολούθησαν, ἄχρι Καίσαρος. Καίσαρ δὲ ἀναστὰς, ἅτε δὴ καὶ δεινὸς εἰπεῖν καὶ πᾶσαν ἐν τῇ πόλει μεταβολὴν καὶ κίνησιν ὥσπερ ὕλην ὧν αὐτὸς διενοεῖτο βουλόμενος αὐξεῖν μᾶλλον ἢ σβεννυμένην περιορᾶν, ἐπαγωγὰ πολλὰ καὶ 770 φιλάνθρωπα διαλεχθεὶς ἀποκτεῖναι μὲν ἀκρίτους οὐκ εἶα τοὺς ἄνδρας, εἰρχθέντας δὲ τηρεῖν ἐκέλευσεν, οὕτω δὲ τὰς γνώμας μετέστησε τῆς βουλῆς, φοβηθείσης τὸν δῆμον, ὥστε καὶ Σιλανὸν ἔξαρνον εἶναι καὶ λέγειν ὡς οὐδ' αὐτὸς εἴποι θάνατον, ἀλλὰ εἰργμόν· ἔσχατον γὰρ ἀνδρὶ Ῥωμαίῳ τοῦτο κακῶν ἀπάντων.

- XXIII. Γενομένης δὲ τοιαύτης τῆς τροπῆς καὶ ἀπάντων ἐπὶ τὸ πραότερον ῥυέντων καὶ φιλάνθρωπότερον, ὁ Κάτων πρὸς τὴν γνώμην ἀναστὰς εὐθύς ἴετο τῷ λόγῳ μετ' ὀργῆς καὶ πάθους, τόν τε Σιλανὸν κακίζων τῆς μεταβολῆς, καὶ καταπτόμενος τοῦ Καίσαρος ὡς σχήματι δημοτικῷ καὶ 2 λόγῳ φιλάνθρωπῳ τὴν πόλιν ἀνατρέποντος, καὶ δεδιττομένου τὴν βουλὴν ἐφ' οἷς αὐτὸν ἔδει δεδιέναι καὶ ἀγαπᾶν εἰ τῶν γεγονότων ἀθῶος ἀπαλλάξει καὶ ἀνύποπτος, οὕτως περιφανῶς καὶ ἰταμῶς τοὺς κοινούς ἐξαρπάζων πολεμίους καὶ τὴν παρ' οὐδὲν ἐλθοῦσαν ἀπολέσθαι πατρίδα τοιαύτην καὶ τοσαύτην ὁμολογῶν μὴ ἐλεεῖν, ἀλλ' οὐς ἔδει μὴ γενέσθαι μηδὲ φῦναι δακρῦων καὶ ἀνακλαιόμενος, εἰ φόνων μεγάλων καὶ κινδύνων ἀπαλλάξουσι τὴν πόλιν ἀποθανόντες.
- 3 Τοῦτον μόνον ὧν Κάτων εἶπε διασώζεσθαι

CATO THE YOUNGER

turn were of the same mind, until it came to Caesar. Caesar now rose, and since he was a powerful speaker and wished to increase every change and commotion in the state as so much stuff for his own designs, rather than to allow them to be quenched, he urged many persuasive and humane arguments. He would not hear of the men being put to death without a trial, but favoured their being kept in close custody, and he wrought such a change in the opinions of the senate, which was in fear of the people, that even Silanus recanted and said that he too had not meant death, but imprisonment; for to a Roman this was the "extremest" of all evils.

XXIII. After such a change as this had been wrought and all the senators had hastened to adopt the milder and more humane penalty, Cato rose to give his opinion, and launched at once into a passionate and angry speech, abusing Silanus for his change of opinion, and assailing Caesar. Caesar, he said, under a popular pretext and with humane words, was trying to subvert the state; he was seeking to frighten the senate in a case where he himself had much to fear; and he might be well content if he should come off guiltless of what had been done and free from suspicion, since he was so openly and recklessly trying to rescue the common enemies, while for his country, which had been on the brink of ruin, and was so good and great, he confessed that he had no pity; and yet for men who ought not to have lived or been born even, he was shedding tears and lamenting, although by their deaths they would free the state from great slaughter and perils.

This is the only speech of Cato which has been

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

φασι τὸν λόγον, Κικέρωνος τοῦ ὑπάτου τοὺς διαφέροντας ὀξύτητι τῶν γραφῶν σημεῖα προδιδάξαντος ἐν μικροῖς καὶ βραχέσι τύποις πολλῶν γραμμάτων ἔχοντα δύναμιν, εἶτα ἄλλον ἄλλαχόσε τοῦ βουλευτηρίου σποράδην ἐμβαλόντος.
 οὐπω γὰρ ἤσκουν οὐδ' ἐκέκτηντο τοὺς καλουμέ-νους σημειογράφους, ἀλλὰ τότε πρῶτον εἰς ἴχνος τι καταστῆναι λέγουσιν. ἐκράτησε δ' οὖν ὁ Κάτων καὶ μετέστησε τὰς γνώμας, ὥστε θάνατον καταψηφίσασθαι τῶν ἀνδρῶν.

- XXIV. Εἰ δὲ δεῖ μὴδὲ τὰ μικρὰ τῶν ἡθῶν σημεῖα παραλιπεῖν ὥσπερ εἰκόνα ψυχῆς ὑπο-γραφομένους, λέγεται, τότε πολλὴν ἄμιλλαν καὶ μέγαν ἀγῶνα πρὸς τὸν Κάτωνα τοῦ Καίσαρος ἔχοντος καὶ τῆς βουλῆς εἰς ἐκείνους ἀνηρτημένης, δελτάριον τι μικρὸν ἔξωθεν εἰσκομισθῆναι τῷ Καίσαρι. τοῦ δὲ Κάτωνος εἰς ὑποψίαν ἄγοντος τὸ πρᾶγμα καὶ διαβάλλοντος εἶναί τινος τοὺς κινουμένους, καὶ κελεύοντος ἀναγινώσκειν τὰ γεγραμμένα, τὸν Καίσαρα τῷ Κάτωνι προσδοῦναι
 2 τὸ δελτάριον ἐγγυὲς ἐστῶτι. τὸν δὲ ἀναγόντα Σερβιλίας τῆς ἀδελφῆς ἐπιστόλιον ἀκόλαστον πρὸς τὸν Καίσαρα γεγραμμένον, ἐρώσης καὶ διεφθαρμένης ὑπ' αὐτοῦ, προσρίψαι τε τῷ Καί-σαρι καὶ εἰπεῖν, “Κράτει, μέθυσε,” καὶ πάλιν οὕτως ἐπὶ τὸν ἐξ ἀρχῆς λόγον τραπέσθαι.
 3 Φαίνεται δὲ ὅλως ἀτύχημα γενέσθαι τοῦ
 Κάτωνος ἢ γυναικωνίτις. αὕτη μὲν γὰρ ἐπὶ 290

CATO THE YOUNGER

preserved, we are told, and its preservation was due to Cicero the consul, who had previously given to those clerks who excelled in rapid writing instruction in the use of signs, which, in small and short figures, comprised the force of many letters; these clerks he had then distributed in various parts of the senate-house. For up to that time the Romans did not employ or even possess what are called shorthand writers, but then for the first time, we are told, the first steps toward the practice were taken. Be that as it may, Cato carried the day and changed the opinions of the senators, so that they condemned the men to death.

XXIV. Now, since we must not pass over even the slight tokens of character when we are delineating as it were a likeness of the soul, the story goes that on this occasion, when Caesar was eagerly engaged in a great struggle with Cato and the attention of the senate was fixed upon the two men, a little note was brought in from outside to Caesar. Cato tried to fix suspicion upon the matter and alleged that it had something to do with the conspiracy,¹ and bade him read the writing aloud. Then Caesar handed the note to Cato, who stood near him. But when Cato had read the note, which was an unchaste letter from his sister Servilia to Caesar, with whom she was passionately and guiltily in love, he threw it to Caesar, saying, "Take it, thou sot," and then resumed his speech.

But as regards the women of his household Cato appears to have been wholly unfortunate. For this

¹ Plutarch's ambiguous words here must be interpreted by comparison with the Brutus, v. 2 f., where the same story is told.

Καίσαρι κακῶς ἤκουσε· τὰ δὲ τῆς ἐτέρας Σερβιλίας, ἀδελφῆς δὲ Κάτωνος, ἀσχημονέστερα. Λευκόλλῳ γὰρ γαμηθεῖσα, πρωτεύσαντι Ῥωμαίων κατὰ δόξαν ἀνδρί, καὶ τεκοῦσα παιδίον ἐξέπεσε τοῦ οἴκου δι' ἀκολασίαν. τὸ δὲ αἰσχιστον, οὐδ' ἡ γυνὴ τοῦ Κάτωνος Ἀτιλία τοιούτων ἐκαθάρευσεν ἀμαρτημάτων, ἀλλὰ καίπερ ἐξ αὐτῆς δύο παιδιά πεπονημένους ἀνάγκην ἔσχευ ἐκβαλεῖν ἀσχημογούσαν.

- XXV. Εἶτα ἔγημε θυγατέρα Φιλίππου, Μαρκίαν, ἐπιεικῆ δοκοῦσαν εἶναι γυναῖκα, περὶ ἧς ὁ πλείστος λόγος· καὶ καθάπερ¹ ἐν δράματι τῷ βίῳ τοῦτο τὸ μέρος προβληματώδες γέγονε καὶ ἄπορον. ἐπράχθη δὲ τοῦτον τὸν τρόπον, ὡς ἱστορεῖ Θρασέας, εἰς Μουνάτιον, ἀνδρα Κάτωνος ἐταῖρον καὶ συμβιωτὴν, ἀναφέρων τὴν πίστιν.
- 2 ἐν πολλοῖς ἐρασταῖς καὶ θαυμασταῖς τοῦ Κάτωνος ἦσαν ἐτέρων ἕτεροι μᾶλλον ἐκδηλοὶ καὶ διαφανεῖς, ὧν καὶ Κόϊντος Ὀρτήσιος, ἀνὴρ ἀξιωματὸς τε λαμπροῦ καὶ τὸν τρόπον ἐπιεικῆς. ἐπιθυμῶν οὖν τῷ Κάτωνι μὴ συνήθης εἶναι μηδὲ 77! ἐταῖρος μόνου, ἀλλ' ἀμῶς γέ πως εἰς οἰκειότητα καταμιῖξαι καὶ κοινωνίαν πάντα τὸν οἶκον καὶ τὸ γένος, ἐπεχείρησε συμπεῖθειν ὅπως τὴν θυγατέρα Πορκίαν, Βυβλῳ συνοικοῦσαν καὶ πεπονημένην ἐκείνῳ δύο παῖδας, αὐτῷ πάλιν ὥσπερ εὐγενῆ
- 3 χῶραν ἐντεκνώσασθαι παράσχη. δόξῃ μὲν γὰρ ἀνθρώπων ἄτοπον εἶναι τὸ τοιοῦτον, φύσει δὲ καλὸν καὶ πολιτικόν, ἐν ᾧρα καὶ ἀκμῇ γυναῖκα μήτε ἀργεῖν τὸ γόνιμον ἀποσβέσασαν, μήτε

¹ καὶ καθάπερ the καὶ is supplied by Sintenis; Bekker has καθάπερ γάρ, after Coraës.

CATO THE YOUNGER

sister was in ill repute for her relations with Caesar ; and the conduct of the other Servilla, also a sister of Cato, was still more unseemly. She was the wife of Lucullus, a man of the highest repute in Rome, and had borne him a child, and yet she was banished from his house for unchastity.¹ And what was most disgraceful of all, even Cato's wife Atilia was not free from such transgressions, but although he had two children by her, he was forced to put her away because of her unseemly behaviour.

XXV. Then he married a daughter of Philippus, Marcia, a woman of reputed excellence, about whom there was the most abundant talk ; and this part of Cato's life, like a drama, has given rise to dispute and is hard to explain. However, the case was as follows, according to Thræsea, who refers to the authority of Munatius, Cato's companion and intimate associate. Among the many lovers and admirers of Cato there were some who were more conspicuous and illustrious than others. One of these was Quintus Hortensius, a man of splendid reputation and excellent character. This man, then, desiring to be more than a mere associate and companion of Cato, and in some way or other to bring his whole family and line into community of kinship with him, attempted to persuade Cato, whose daughter Porcia was the wife of Bibulus and had borne him two sons, to give her in turn to him as noble soil for the production of children. According to the opinion of men, he argued, such a course was absurd, but according to the law of nature it was honourable and good for the state that a woman in the prime of youth and beauty should neither quench her productive power and lie idle, nor yet, by bearπλείονα τῶν ἱκανῶν ἐπιτίκτουσαν, ἐνοχλεῖν καὶ καταπτωχεύειν οὐδὲν δεόμενον,¹ κοινομένους δὲ τὰς διαδοχὰς ἀξίοις ἀνδράσι τὴν τε ἀρετὴν ἀφθονοῦν ποιεῖν καὶ πολύχυτον τοῖς γένεσι, καὶ τὴν πόλιν αὐτὴν πρὸς αὐτὴν ἀνακεραυνῦναι ταῖς οἰκειότησιν. εἰ δὲ πάντως περιέχοιτο τῆς γυναικὸς ὁ Βύβλος, ἀποδώσειν εὐθὺς τεκοῦσαν, οἰκειότερος αὐτῷ τε Βύβλω καὶ Κάτωνι κοινωνία παίδων γενόμενος.

¹ See the Lucullus, xxxviii. 1.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- 4 Ἐποκρινάμενου δὲ τοῦ Κάτωνος ὡς Ὀρτήσιον μὲν ἀγαπᾷ καὶ δοκιμάζει κοινωνὸν οἰκειότητος, ἄτοπον δὲ ἡγεῖται ποιεῖσθαι λόγον περὶ γάμου θυγατρὸς ἐτέρῳ δεδομένης, μεταβαλὼν ἐκείνος οὐκ ὤκνησεν ἀποκαλυψάμενος αἰτεῖν τὴν αὐτοῦ γυναῖκα Κάτωνος, νέαν μὲν οὖσαν ἔτι πρὸς τὸ τίκτειν, ἔχοντος δὲ τοῦ Κάτωνος ἀποχρῶσαν
- 5 διαδοχὴν. καὶ οὐκ ἔστιν εἰπεῖν ὡς ταῦτα ἔπραττεν εἰδὼς οὐ προσέχοντα τῇ Μαρκίᾳ τὸν Κάτωνα· κύουσαν γὰρ αὐτὴν τότε τυγχάνειν λέγουσιν. ὁ δ' οὖν Κάτων ὄρων τὴν τοῦ Ὀρτησίου σπουδὴν καὶ προθυμίαν οὐκ ἀντεῖπεν, ἀλλ' ἔφη δεῖν καὶ Φιλίππῳ ταῦτα συνδόξαι τῷ πατρὶ τῆς Μαρκίας. ὡς οὖν ὁ Φίλιππος ἐντευχθεὶς ἔγνω τὴν συγχώρησιν, οὐκ ἄλλως ἐνεγγύησε τὴν Μαρκίαν ἢ παρόντος τοῦ Κάτωνος αὐτοῦ καὶ συνεγγυῶντος. ταῦτα μὲν οὖν, εἰ καὶ χρόνοις ὕστερον ἐπράχθη, μνησθέντι μοι τῶν γυναικῶν προλαβεῖν ἔδοξε.

¹ δεόμενον Coraës supplies οἶκον.

CATO THE YOUNGER

ing more offspring than enough, burden and impoverish a husband who does not want them. Moreover, community in heirs among worthy men would make virtue abundant and widely diffused in their families, and the state would be closely cemented together by their family alliances. And if Bibulus were wholly devoted to his wife, Hortensius said he would give her back after she had borne him a child, and he would thus be more closely connected both with Bibulus himself and with Cato by a community of children.

Cato replied that he loved Hortensius and thought highly of a community of relationship with him, but considered it absurd for him to propose marriage with a daughter who had been given to another. Then Hortensius changed his tactics, threw off the mask, and boldly asked for the wife of Cato himself, since she was still young enough to bear children, and Cato had heirs enough. And it cannot be said that he did this because he knew that Cato neglected Marcia, for she was at that time with child by him, as we are told. However, seeing the earnestness and eager desire of Hortensius, Cato would not refuse, but said that Philippus also, Marcia's father, must approve of this step. Accordingly, Philippus was consulted and expressed his consent, but he would not give Marcia in marriage until Cato himself was present and joined in giving the bride away.¹ This incident occurred at a later time,² it is true, but since I had taken up the topic of the women of Cato's household I decided to anticipate it.

¹ It is plain that Cato divorced Marcia; otherwise her father could not have given her in marriage to Hortensius.

² Probably in 56 B.C.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

XXVI. Τῶν δὲ περὶ τὸν Λέντλον ἀναιρεθέντων, καὶ τοῦ Καίσαρος περὶ ὧν εἰσηγγέλθη καὶ διεβλήθη πρὸς τὴν σύγκλητον εἰς τὸν δῆμον καταφυγόντος καὶ τὰ πολλὰ νοσοῦντα καὶ διεφθαρμένα τῆς πολιτείας μέρη ταράττοντος καὶ συνάγοντος πρὸς αὐτόν, ὁ Κάτων φοβηθεὶς ἔπεισε τὴν βουλὴν ἀναλαβεῖν τὸν ἄπορον καὶ ἀνέμητον ὄχλον εἰς τὸ σιτηρέσιον, ἀναλώματος μὲν ὄντος ἑνιαυσίου χιλίων καὶ διακοσίων καὶ πεντήκοντα ταλάντων, περιφανῶς δὲ τῇ φιλανθρωπία ταύτῃ καὶ χάριτι τῆς ἀπειλῆς ἐκείνης 2 διαλυθείσης. ἐντεῦθεν εἰς τὴν δημαρχίαν ἐμπεσῶν ὁ Μέτελλος ἐκκλησίας τε θορυβώδεις συνῆγε, καὶ νόμον ἔγραψε Πομπηῖον Μάγνον ἵεναι κατὰ τάχος μετὰ τῶν δυνάμεων εἰς Ἰταλίαν καὶ παραλαβόντα σώζειν τὴν πόλιν, ὡς ὑπὸ Κατιλίνα κινδυνεύουσαν. ἦν δὲ τοῦτο λόγος εὐπρεπῆς, ἔργον δὲ τοῦ νόμου καὶ τέλος ἐγχειρίσαι τὰ πράγματα Πομπηῖω καὶ παραδοῦναι τὴν 3 ἡγεμονίαν. γενομένης δὲ βουλῆς καὶ τοῦ Κάτωνος οὐχ, ὥσπερ εἰώθει, τῷ Μετέλλῳ σφοδρῶς ἐμπεσόντος, ἀλλ' ἐπιεικῆ πολλὰ καὶ μέτρια παραινέσαντος, τέλος δὲ καὶ πρὸς δεήσεις τραπομένου καὶ τὴν Μετέλλων οἰκίαν αἰεὶ γενομένην ἀριστοκρατικὴν ἐπαινέσαντος, ἔτι μᾶλλον ἐξαρθεὶς καὶ καταφρονήσας ὁ Μέτελλος ὡς ἐνδιδόντος αὐτοῦ καὶ πτήσσοντος εἰς ὑπερηφάνους ἀπειλὰς καὶ λόγους θρασεῖς ἐξέπεσεν, ὡς βία πάντα τῆς 4 βουλῆς διαπραξόμενος. οὕτω δὲ μεταβαλὼν ὁ Κάτων καὶ σχῆμα καὶ φωνὴν καὶ λόγον, ἐπειπὼν δὲ πᾶσι τοῖς ἄλλοις διατεταμένως ὅτι ζῶντος

CATO THE YOUNGER

XXVI. Lentulus and his associates were executed, and Caesar, in view of the charges and accusations made against him to the senate, took refuge with the people and was stirring up and attaching to himself the numerous diseased and corrupted elements in the commonwealth. Cato was therefore alarmed and persuaded the senate to conciliate the poor and landless multitude by including them in the distribution of grain, the annual expenditure for which was twelve hundred and fifty talents.¹ By this act of humanity and kindness the threatening danger was most successfully dissipated. Then Metellus, who hastened to take up the duties of his tribuneship, began to hold tumultuous assemblies of the people, and proposed a law that Pompey the Great should hasten with his forces to Italy² and undertake the preservation of the city, on the ground that it was imperilled by Catiline. Now, this was a specious proposition; but the end and aim of the law was to put matters in the hands of Pompey and hand over to him the supreme power. The senate met, and Cato did not, as was his custom, attack Metellus with vehemence, but gave him much fitting and moderate advice, and finally, resorting to entreaties, actually praised the family of Metellus for having always been aristocratic in sympathy. Metellus was therefore all the more emboldened, and, despising Cato as a yielding and timorous opponent, broke out in extravagant threats and bold speeches, intending to carry everything through in spite of the senate. So, then, Cato changed his looks and voice and words, and concluded a vehement speech with the declaration

¹ Cf. the Caesar, viii. 4.

² Pompey had just finished his conquest of Mithridates and was on the way home from Asia (62 B.C.).

αὐτοῦ Πομπηῖος οὐ παρέσται μεθ' ὄπλων εἰς τὴν πόλιν, ἐκεῖνο τῇ βουλῇ παρέστησεν, ὡς οὐδέτερος μὲν καθέστηκεν οὐδὲ χρῆται λογισμοῖς ἀσφαλῆσιν, ἔστι δὲ ἡ μὲν Μετέλλου πολιτεία μανία δι' ὑπερβολὴν κακίας φερομένη πρὸς ὄλεθρον καὶ σύγχυσιν ἀπάντων, ἡ δὲ Κάτωνος ἀρετῆς ἐνθουσιασμός ὑπὲρ τῶν καλῶν καὶ δικαίων ἀγωνιζομένης. 772

XXVII. Ἐπεὶ δὲ τὴν ψῆφον ὑπὲρ τοῦ νόμου φέρειν ὁ δῆμος ἔμελλε, Μετέλλῳ μὲν ὄπλα καὶ ξένοι καὶ μονομάχοι καὶ θεράποντες ἐπὶ τὴν ἀγορὰν τεταγμένοι παρήσαν, καὶ τὸ ποθοῦν μεταβολῆς ἐλπίδι Πομπηῖον ὑπῆρχε τοῦ δήμου μέρος οὐκ ὀλίγον, ἦν δὲ μεγάλη καὶ ἀπὸ Καίσαρος ῥώμη στρατηγούντος τότε, Κάτωνι δὲ οἱ πρῶτοι τῶν πολιτῶν συνηγανάκτου καὶ συνηδικοῦντο μᾶλλον ἢ συνηγωνίζοντο, πολλῇ δὲ τὴν οἰκίαν αὐτοῦ κατήφεια καὶ φόβος εἶχεν, ὥστε τῶν φίλων ἐνίους ἀσίτους διαγρυπνήσαι μετ' ἀλλήλων ἐν ἀπόροις ὄντας ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ λογισμοῖς, καὶ γυναῖκα καὶ ἀδελφὰς ποτνωμένας καὶ δακρυούσας. αὐτὸς δ' ἀδεῶς καὶ τεθαρρηκότως ἐντυχὼν πᾶσι καὶ παρηγορήσας, καὶ γενόμενος περὶ δεῖπνον, ὥσπερ εἰώθει, καὶ νυκτερεύσας, ὑφ' ἐνὸς τῶν συναρχόντων, Μινυκίου Θέρμου, βαθέως καθεύδων ἐπηγέρθη· καὶ κατέβησαν εἰς ἀγοράν, ὀλίγων μὲν αὐτοὺς προπεμπόντων, πολλῶν δὲ ἀπαντώντων καὶ φυλάττεσθαι παρακελευομένων. 4

ὡς οὖν ἐπιστάς ὁ Κάτων κατείδε τὸν νεῶν τῶν Διοσκούρων ὄπλοις περιεχόμενον καὶ τὰς ἀναβάσεις φρουρουμένας ὑπὸ μονομάχων, αὐτὸν δὲ καθήμενον ἄνω μετὰ Καίσαρος τὸν Μέτελλον,

CATO THE YOUNGER

that while he lived Pompey should not enter the city with an armed force. The senate was thus led to feel that neither man was in his right mind or using safe arguments, but that the policy of Metellus was madness, which, through excess of wickedness, was leading on to the destruction and confusion of all things, while that of Cato was a wild ebullition of virtue contending in behalf of right and justice.

XXVII. When the people were about to vote on the law, in favour of Metellus there were armed strangers and gladiators and servants drawn up in the forum, and that part of the people which longed for Pompey in their hope of a change was present in large numbers, and there was strong support also from Caesar, who was at that time praetor. In the case of Cato, however, the foremost citizens shared in his displeasure and sense of wrong more than they did in his struggle to resist, and great dejection and fear reigned in his household, so that some of his friends took no food and watched all night with one another in futile discussions on his behalf, while his wife and sisters wailed and wept. He himself, however, conversed fearlessly and confidently with all and comforted them, and after taking supper as usual and passing the night, was roused from a deep sleep by one of his colleagues, Minucius Thermius; and they went down into the forum, only few persons accompanying them, but many meeting them and exhorting them to be on their guard. Accordingly, when Cato paused in the forum and saw the temple of Castor and Pollux surrounded by armed men and its steps guarded by gladiators, and Metellus himself sitting at the top with Caesar, he turned to his friends ἐπιστρέψας πρὸς τοὺς φίλους, “ὦ θρασέος,” εἶπεν, “ἀνθρώπου καὶ δειλοῦ, ὃς καθ’ ἑνὸς ἀνό-πλου καὶ γυμνοῦ τοσοῦτους ἐστρατολόγησεν.”

 5 ἅμα δ’ εὐθὺς ἐβάδιζε μετὰ τοῦ Θέρμου. καὶ διέστησαν αὐτοῖς¹ οἱ τὰς ἀναβάσεις κατέχοντες, ἄλλον δὲ οὐδένα παρήκαν, ἢ μόλις ἐπισπάσας τῆς χειρὸς ὁ Κάτων τὸν Μουνάτιον ἀνήγαγε· καὶ βαδίζων εὐθὺς ὡς εἶχε καθίζει μέσον ἐμβαλῶν ἑαυτὸν τοῦ Μετέλλου καὶ τοῦ Καίσαρος, ὥστε 6 διακόψαι τὴν κοινολογίαν. κάκεινοι μὲν διηπό-ρησαν, οἱ δὲ χαρίεντες θεασάμενοι καὶ θαυμά-σαντες τὸ πρόσωπον καὶ τὸ φρόνημα καὶ τὸ θάρσος τοῦ Κάτωνος ἐγγυτέρω προσῆλθον, καὶ βοῇ διεκελεύσαντο τῷ μὲν Κάτωνι θαρρεῖν, μένειν δὲ ἀλλήλοις καὶ συστρέφεσθαι καὶ μὴ προδιδόναί τὴν ἐλευθερίαν καὶ τὸν ὑπὲρ αὐτῆς ἀγωνιζόμενον.

XXVIII. Ἐνθα δὴ τοῦ ὑπηρέτου τὸν νόμον προχειρισάμενον, τοῦ δὲ Κάτωνος οὐκ ἐῶντος ἀναγινώσκειν, τοῦ δὲ Μετέλλου παραλαβόντος αὐτὸν καὶ ἀναγινώσκοντος, ὁ μὲν Κάτων ἐξήρπασε τὸ βιβλίον, ὁ δὲ Θέρμος ἀπὸ στόματος τοῦ Μετέλλου τὸν νόμον ἐπισταμένου καὶ λέγοντος ἐπέσχε τῇ χειρὶ τὸ στόμα καὶ τὴν φωνὴν ἀπέ-2 κλεισεν, ἄχρι οὗ, ἅμαχον ὀρῶν ἀγῶνα τοὺς ἄνδρας ὁ Μέτελλος ἀγωνιζόμενος, καὶ τὸν δῆμον ἠττώμενον πρὸς τὸ συμφέρον καὶ τρεπόμενον, ἐκέλευσεν ἄποθεν² ὀπλίτας μετὰ φόβου καὶ κραυγῆς ἐπιτρέχειν. γενομένου δὲ τούτου καὶ πάντων διασκεδασθέντων ὑποστάντα μόνον τὸν

¹ αὐτοῖς followed in the MSS. by ἐκείνοι, which Coraës and Bekker delete; Sintenis corrects to ἐκεῖνοις.

² ἄποθεν Kaltwasser: οἴκοθεν (from his house).

CATO THE YOUNGER

and said : “ What a bold man, and what a coward, to levy such an army against a single unarmed and defenceless person ! ” At the same time he walked straight on with Thermus. Those who were occupying the steps made way for them, but would allow no one else to pass, except that Cato with difficulty drew Munatius along by the hand and brought him up ; and walking straight onwards he threw himself just as he was into a seat between Metellus and Caesar, thus cutting off their communication. Caesar and Metellus were disconcerted, but the better citizens, seeing and admiring the countenance, lofty bearing, and courage of Cato, came nearer, and with shouts exhorted him to be of good heart, while they urged one another to stay and band themselves together and not betray their liberty and the man who was striving to defend it.

XXVIII. And now the clerk produced the law, but Cato would not suffer him to read it ; and when Metellus took it and began to read it, Cato snatched the document away from him. Then Metellus, who knew the law by heart, began to recite it, but Thermus clapped a hand upon his mouth and shut off his speech. At last, seeing that the men were making a struggle which he could not resist, and that the people were giving way and turning towards the better course, Metellus ordered men-at-arms, who were standing at a distance, to come running up with terrifying shouts. This was done, and all the people dispersed, leaving Cato standing his ground alone

Κάτωνα καὶ βαλλόμενον λίθοις καὶ ξύλοις
 ἄνωθεν οὐ περιεΐδε Μουρήνας ὁ τὴν δίκην φυγῶν 3 ὑπ' αὐτοῦ καὶ κατηγορηθεὶς, ἀλλὰ τὴν τήβεννον προῖσχύμενος καὶ βοῶν ἀνασχεῖν τοῖς βάλλουσι, καὶ τέλος αὐτὸν τὸν Κάτωνα πείθων καὶ περιπτύσσω, εἰς τὸν νεῶν τῶν Διοσκούρων ἀπήγαγεν.

Ἐπεὶ δὲ κατεΐδεν ὁ Μέτελλος ἐρημίαν περὶ τὸ βῆμα καὶ φυγὴν δι' ἀγορᾶς τῶν ἐναντιουμένων, παντάπασι πεισθεὶς κρατεῖν ἐκέλευσεν ἀπιέναι 4 πάλιν τοὺς ὀπλοφόρους, καὶ προσελθὼν κοσμίως αὐτὸς ἐπεχείρει πράττειν τὰ περὶ τὸν νόμον. οἱ δὲ ἐναντίοι ταχέως ἀναλαβόντες ἑαυτοὺς ἐκ τῆς τροπῆς ἐπήεσαν αὐθις ἐμβοήσαντες μέγα καὶ θαρραλέον, ὥστε τοῖς περὶ τὸν Μέτελλον ἐμ-πεσεῖν ταραχὴν καὶ δέος οἰομένοις ὄπλων ποθὲν εὐπορήσαντας αὐτοὺς ἐπιφέρεισθαι, καὶ μηθένα μένειν, ἀλλὰ φεύγειν ἅπαντας ἀπὸ τοῦ βήματος.
 5 οὕτω δὴ σκεδασθέντων ἐκείνων, τοῦ δὲ Κάτωνος προσελθόντος καὶ τὰ μὲν ἐπαινέσαντος, τὰ δ' 773 ἐπιρρώσαντος τὸν δῆμον, οἳ τε πολλοὶ παρετάξαντο παντὶ τρόπῳ καταλύσαι τὸν Μέτελλον, ἧ τε σύγκλητος ἀθροισθεῖσα παρήγγειλεν ἀρχῆθεν βοηθεῖν τῷ Κάτωνι καὶ διαμάχεσθαι πρὸς τὸν νόμον, ὡς στάσιν ἐπεισάγοντα τῇ Ῥώμῃ καὶ πόλεμον ἐμφύλιον.

XXIX. Ὁ δὲ Μέτελλος αὐτὸς μὲν ἦν ἄτρεπτος καὶ θρασύς ἔτι, ὁρῶν δὲ τοὺς περὶ αὐτὸν ἐκπεπληγμένους κομιδῇ τὸν Κάτωνα καὶ νομίζοντας 302

CATO THE YOUNGER

and pelted with sticks and stones from above. Here Murena, who had been denounced and brought to trial by him,¹ came to his relief, and holding his toga before him, crying to those who were pelting him to stop, and finally persuading Cato himself and folding him in his arms, he led him away into the temple of Castor and Pollux.

When, however, Metellus saw the space about the tribunal² empty and his opponents in flight through the forum, being altogether persuaded that he had won the day, he ordered his armed men to go away again, and coming forward himself in orderly fashion attempted to have the law enacted. But his opponents, quickly recovering from their rout, advanced again upon him with loud and confident shouts, so that his partisans were overwhelmed with confusion and terror. They supposed that their enemies had provided themselves with arms from some place or other in order to assail them, and not a man stood his ground, but all fled away from the tribunal. So, then, when these had dispersed, and when Cato had come forward with commendation and encouragement for the people, the majority of them stood prepared to put down Metellus by any and every means, and the senate in full session announced anew that it would assist Cato and fight to the end against the law, convinced that it would introduce sedition and civil war into Rome.

XXIX. Metellus himself was still unyielding and bold, but since he saw that his followers were completely terrified before Cato and thought him utterly

¹ Cf. chapter xxi. 3-6.

² The steps of the temple of Castor led down to a platform, from which the people were often addressed.

ἄμαχον καὶ δυσεκβίαστον, αἰφνίδιον ἐξεπήδησεν εἰς τὴν ἀγοράν, καὶ συναγαγὼν τὸν δῆμον ἄλλα τε πολλὰ περὶ τοῦ Κάτωνος ἐπίφθονα διήλθε, καὶ φεύγει τὴν τυραννίδα βοῶν τὴν ἐκείνου καὶ τὴν κατὰ Πομπηίου συνωμοσίαν, ἐφ' ἣ μετανοήσκειν ταχὺ τὴν πόλιν ἀτιμάζουσιν ἄνδρα τοσοῦτον, ὥρμησεν εὐθύς εἰς Ἀσίαν, ὡς ταῦτα πρὸς 2 ἐκείνου κατηγορήσων. ἦν οὖν δόξα μεγάλη τοῦ Κάτωνος ἄχθος οὐ μικρὸν ἀπεσκευασμένου τῆς δημαρχίας, καὶ τρόπον τινὰ τὴν Πομπηίου δύναμιν ἐν Μετέλλῳ καθηρηκότος. ἔτι δὲ μᾶλλον εὐδοκίμησε τὴν σύγκλητον ὥρμημένην ἀτιμοῦν καὶ ἀποψηφίζεσθαι τὸν Μέτελλον οὐκ ἑάσας, ἀλλ' ἐναντιωθείς καὶ παραιτησάμενος. οἳ τε γὰρ πολλοὶ φιλανθρωπίας ἐποιοῦντο καὶ μετριότητος τὸ μὴ ἐπεμβῆναι τῷ ἐχθρῷ μηδὲ ἐνυβρίσαι κατὰ κράτος περιγεγόμενον, τοῖς τε φρονίμοις ὀρθῶς ἐφαίνετο καὶ συμφερόντως μὴ παροξύναι Πομπηϊόν.

3 Ἐκ τούτου Λεύκολλος ἐπανελθὼν ἐκ τῆς στρατείας, ἧς ἔδοξε τὸ τέλος καὶ τὴν δόξαν ἀφηρῆσθαι Πομπηϊός, εἰς κίνδυνον ἦλθε τοῦ μὴ θριαμβεῦσαι, Γαῖου Μεμμίου καταστασιάζοντος αὐτὸν ἐν τῷ δήμῳ καὶ δίκας ἐπάγοντος, εἰς τὴν Πομπηίου χάριν μᾶλλον ἢ κατὰ ἔχθος ἴδιον. ὁ δὲ Κάτων, οἰκειότητός τε πρὸς Λεύκολλον αὐτῷ γεγενημένης, ἔχοντα Σερβιλίαν τὴν ἀδελφὴν αὐτοῦ, καὶ τὸ πρᾶγμα δεινὸν ἠγούμενος, ἀντέστη τῷ Μεμμίῳ, καὶ πολλὰς ὑπέμεινε διαβολὰς καὶ invincible, he suddenly rushed off into the forum, assembled the people, and made a long and invidious speech against Cato; then, crying out that he was fleeing from Cato's tyranny and the conspiracy against Pompey, for which the city would speedily repent in that it was dishonouring so great a man, he set out at once for Asia, intending to lay these accusations before Pompey. Accordingly, Cato was in high repute for having relieved the tribunate of a great burden, and for having in a manner overthrown the power of Pompey in the person of Metellus. But he won still more esteem by not allowing the senate to carry out its purpose of degrading Metellus and deposing him from his office, which course Cato opposed, and brought the senate over to his views. For the multitude considered it a token of humanity and moderation not to trample on his enemy or insult him after prevailing completely over him, and prudent men thought it right and advantageous not to irritate Pompey.

CATO THE YOUNGER

After this, Lucullus, having come back from his expedition,¹ the consummation and glory of which Pompey was thought to have taken away from him, was in danger of losing his triumph, since Caius Memmius raised a successful faction against him among the people and brought legal accusations against him, more to gratify Pompey than out of private enmity. But Cato, being related to Lucullus, who had his sister Servilia to wife, and thinking the attempt a shameful one, opposed Memmius, and thereby exposed himself to many ¹ He came back in 66 B.C., and had to wait three years before being allowed to celebrate a triumph. Cf. the Lucullus, xxxvii.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

4 κατηγορίας. τέλος δέ, τῆς ἀρχῆς ἐκβαλλόμενος ὡς τυραννίδος, τοσοῦτον ἐκρίτησεν ὥστε τὸν Μέμμιον αὐτὸν ἀναγκάσαι τῶν δικῶν ἀποστήναι καὶ φυγεῖν τὸν ἀγῶνα. Λεύκολλος μὲν οὖν θριαμβεύσας ἔτι μᾶλλον ἐνεφύετο τῇ φιλίᾳ τοῦ Κάτωνος, ἔχων ἔρυμα καὶ πρόβλημα μέγα πρὸς τὴν Πομπηίου δύναμιν.

XXX. Πομπηῖος δὲ μέγας ἀπὸ τῆς στρατείας ἐπανιών, καὶ τῇ λαμπρότητι καὶ προθυμίᾳ τῆς ὑποδοχῆς πεποιθὼς οὐδὲν ἂν δεηθεῖς ἀποτυχεῖν τῶν πολιτῶν, προὔπεμψεν ἀξιῶν τὰς ὑπατικάς ἀρχαιρεσίας ἀναβαλέσθαι τὴν σύγκλητον, ὡς ἂν

2 αὐτὸς παρῶν Πείσωνι συναρχαιρεσιάσῃ. τῶν δὲ πλείστων ὑπεικόντων, οὐ τὴν ἀναβολὴν μέγιστον ὁ Κάτων ἠγούμενος, ἀλλὰ τὴν πείραν ἀποκόψαι καὶ τὴν ἐλπίδα τοῦ Πομπηίου βουλόμενος, ἀντεῖπε καὶ μετέστησε τὴν βουλήν, ὥστε ἀποψηφίσασθαι. τοῦτο τὸν Πομπηῖον οὐχ ἡσυχῇ διετάραξε· καὶ νομίζων οὐ μικρὰ προσπταίσειν τῷ Κάτωνι μὴ φίλῳ γενομένῳ, μετεπέμψατο Μουνάτιον, ἑταῖρον αὐτοῦ· καὶ δύο τοῦ Κάτωνος ἀδελφιδᾶς ἐπιγάμους ἔχοντος ἦτει τὴν μὲν πρεσβυτέραν ἑαυτῷ γυναῖκα, τὴν δὲ νεωτέραν

3 τῷ υἱῷ. τινὲς δὲ φασιν οὐ τῶν ἀδελφιδῶν, ἀλλὰ τῶν θυγατέρων τὴν μνηστεῖαν γενέσθαι. τοῦ δὲ Μουνατίου ταῦτα πρὸς τὸν Κάτωνα καὶ τὴν γυναῖκα καὶ τὰς ἀδελφὰς φράσαντος, αἱ μὲν ὑπερηγάπησαν τὴν οἰκειότητα πρὸς τὸ μέγεθος

CATO THE YOUNGER

slandrous accusations. Finally, however, though he was on the point of being ejected from his office on the ground that he exercised tyrannical power, he so far prevailed as to compel Memmius himself to desist from his accusations and shun the contest. Lucullus, accordingly, celebrated his triumph, and therefore clung still more closely to the friendship of Cato, finding in him a great bulwark of defence against the power of Pompey.

XXX. And now Pompey returned with great prestige from his expedition,¹ and since the splendour and warmth of his reception led him to believe that he could get whatever he wanted from his fellow citizens, he sent forward a demand that the senate postpone the consular elections, in order that he might be present in person and assist Piso in making his canvass. The majority of the senators were inclined to yield. Cato, however, who did not regard the postponement as the chief matter at issue, but wished to cut short the attempt and the expectations of Pompey, opposed the measure and changed the opinions of the senators, so that they rejected it. This disturbed Pompey not a little, and considering that Cato would be a great stumbling-block in his way unless he were made a friend, he sent for Munatius, Cato's companion, and asked the elder of Cato's two marriageable nieces to wife for himself, and the younger for his son. Some say, however, that it was not for Cato's nieces, but for his daughters, that the suit was made. When Munatius brought this proposal to Cato and his wife and sisters, the women were overjoyed at thought of the alliance, in view of the greatness and high repute of

¹ In 62 B. C.

καὶ τὸ ἀξίωμα τοῦ ἀνδρός, ὁ δὲ Κάτων οὐτ' ἐπι-σχῶν οὔτε βουλευσάμενος, ἀλλὰ πληγείς εὐθύς
 4 εἶπε· “ Βάδιζε, Μουνάτιε, βάδιζε, καὶ λέγε πρὸς Πομπηίου ὡς Κάτων οὐκ ἔστι διὰ τῆς γυναικω-νίτιδος ἀλώσιμος, ἀλλὰ τὴν μὲν εὖνοϊαν ἀγαπᾷ, καὶ τὰ δίκαια ποιοῦντι φιλίαν παρέξει πάσης 774 πιστοτέραν οἰκειότητος, ὄμηρα δὲ οὐ προήσεται τῇ Πομπηίου δόξῃ κατὰ τῆς πατρίδος.”

Ἐπὶ τούτοις ἤχθοντο μὲν αἱ γυναῖκες, ἠτιῶντο δὲ οἱ φίλοι τοῦ Κάτωνος ὡς ἄγροικον ἅμα καὶ 5 ὑπερήφανον τὴν ἀπόκρισιν. εἶτα μέντοι πράτ-των τινὶ τῶν φίλων ὑπατείαν ὁ Πομπηῖος ἀρ-γύριον εἰς τὰς φυλὰς ἔπεμπε, καὶ περιβόητος ὁ δεκασμὸς ἦν, ἐν κήποις ἐκείνου τῶν χρημάτων ἀριθμουμένων. εἰπόντος οὖν τοῦ Κάτωνος πρὸς τὰς γυναῖκας ὅτι τοιούτων ἦν κοινωνεῖν καὶ ἀνα-πίμπλασθαι πραγμάτων ἀνάγκη Πομπηῖῳ συναφθέντα δι' οἰκειότητος, ὠμολόγουν ἐκείναι κάλλιον 6 αὐτὸν βεβουλεῦσθαι διακρουσάμενον. εἰ δὲ δεῖ πρὸς τὰ συμβάντα κρίνειν, τοῦ παντὸς ἔοικεν ὁ Κάτων ἀμαρτεῖν τὴν οἰκειότητα μὴ δεξάμενος, ἀλλ' ἑάσας πρὸς Καίσαρα τραπέσθαι καὶ γῆμαι γάμον ὃς τὴν Πομπηίου δύναμιν καὶ Καίσαρος εἰς ταῦτ' οὐ συνενεγκῶν ὀλίγου τὰ μὲν Ῥωμαίων ἀνέτρεψε πράγματα, τὴν δὲ πολιτείαν ἀνείλεν, ὧν οὐθὲν ἂν ἴσως συνέπεσεν, εἰ μὴ Κάτων τὰ μικρὰ τοῦ Πομπηίου φοβηθεὶς ἀμαρτήματα τὸ μέγιστον περιεΐδεν, αὐτὸν ἐτέρῳ δύναμιν προσ-γεγόμενον.

XXXI. Ταῦτα μὲν οὖν ἔμελλεν ἔτι, Λευκόλλου δὲ περὶ τῶν ἐν Πόντῳ διατάξεων στασιά-

CATO THE YOUNGER

Pompey; Cato, however, without pause or deliberation, but stung to the quick, said at once: "Go, Munatius, go, and tell Pompey that Cato is not to be captured by way of the women's apartments, although he highly prizes Pompey's good will, and if Pompey does justice will grant him a friendship more to be relied upon than any marriage connection; but he will not give hostages for the glory of Pompey to the detriment of his country."

At these words the women were vexed, and Cato's friends blamed his answer as both rude and overbearing. Afterwards, however, in trying to secure the consulship for one of his friends,¹ Pompey sent money to the tribes, and the bribery was notorious, since the sums for it were counted out in his gardens. Accordingly, when Cato told the women that he must of necessity have shared in the disgrace of such transactions, had he been connected with Pompey by marriage, they admitted that he had taken better counsel in rejecting the alliance.² However, if we are to judge by the results, it would seem that Cato was wholly wrong in not accepting the marriage connection, instead of allowing Pompey to turn to Caesar and contract a marriage which united the power of the two men, nearly overthrew the Roman state, and destroyed the constitution. None of these things perhaps would have happened, had not Cato been so afraid of the slight transgressions of Pompey as to allow him to commit the greatest of all, and add his power to that of another.

XXXI. These things, however, were still in the future. Meanwhile Lucullus got into a contention ¹ Lucius Afranius, elected consul in 61 B.C. for the year 60 B.C. Cf. the Pompey, xliv. 3. ² Cf. the Pompey, xliv.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- σαντος πρὸς Πομπηϊον (ἡξιούν γὰρ ἰσχύειν ἐκάτερος τὰ ὑφ' αὐτοῦ γενόμενα), καὶ Λευκόλλω Κάτωνος ἀδικουμένῳ περιφανῶς προσαμύνοντος, ἐλαττούμενος ὁ Πομπηΐος ἐν συγκλήτῳ καὶ δημαγωγῶν, ἐπὶ νομῆν χώρας ἐκάλει τὸ στρατιωτικόν. ὡς δὲ κἀνταῦθα Κάτων ἐνιστάμενος ἐξέκρουσε τὸν νόμον, οὕτω Κλωδίου τε περιείχετο, τοῦ τότε θρασυτάτου τῶν δημαγωγῶν, καὶ Καίσαρα προσήγετο, τρόπον τινὰ Κάτωνος αὐτοῦ παρασχόντος ἀρχήν. ὁ γὰρ Καῖσαρ ἀπὸ τῆς ἐν Ἰβηρίᾳ στρατηγίας ἐπανήκων ἅμα μὲν ὑπατείαν ἐβούλετο παραγγέλλειν, ἅμα δὲ ἦτει θρίαμβον.
- 3 ἐπεὶ δὲ κατὰ νόμον ἔδει τοὺς μὲν ἀρχὴν μετιόντας παρεῖναι, τοὺς δὲ μέλλοντας εἰσελαύνειν θρίαμβον ἔξω τείχους ὑπομένειν, ἡξιού παρὰ τῆς βουλῆς αὐτῷ δοθῆναι δι' ἐτέρων αἰτεῖσθαι τὴν ἀρχήν. βουλομένων δὲ πολλῶν ἀντέλεγεν ὁ Κάτων· ὡς δὲ ἦσθετο χαριζομένους τῷ Καίσαρι, λέγων ὅλην κατανάλωσε τὴν ἡμέραν καὶ τὴν βουλήν οὕτως
- 4 ἐξέκρουσε. χαίρειν οὖν ἑάσας τὸν θρίαμβον ὁ Καῖσαρ εἰσελθὼν εὐθύς εἶχετο Πομπηΐου καὶ τῆς ὑπατείας. ἀποδειχθεὶς δὲ ὑπατος τὴν τε Ἰουλίαν ἐνεγγύησεν αὐτῷ, καὶ συστάντες ἤδη μετ' ἀλλήλων ἐπὶ τὴν πόλιν ὁ μὲν εἰσέφερε νόμους τοῖς πένησι κληρουχίαν καὶ νομῆν χώρας διδόντας, ὁ
- 5 δὲ παρῆν τοῖς νόμοις βοηθῶν. οἱ δὲ περὶ Λεύκολλον καὶ Κικέρωνα Βύβλω τῷ ἐτέρῳ τῶν ὑπᾶτων συντάξαντες ἑαυτοὺς ἀντέπραττον, μάλιστα

CATO THE YOUNGER

with Pompey over the arrangements in Pontus (each of them, namely, demanded that his own proceedings should be confirmed), Cato came to the aid of Lucullus, who was manifestly wronged, and Pompey, worsted in the senate and seeking popular favour, invited the soldiery to a distribution of land.¹ But when Cato opposed him in this measure also, and frustrated the law, then Pompey attached himself to Clodius, at that time the boldest of the popular leaders, and won Caesar to his support, a result for which Cato himself was in a way responsible. For Caesar, on returning from his praetorship in Spain,² desired to be a candidate for the consulship, and at the same time asked for a triumph. But since by law candidates for a magistracy must be present in the city, while those who are going to celebrate a triumph must remain outside the walls, he asked permission from the senate to solicit the office by means of others. Many were willing to grant the request, but Cato opposed it; and when he saw that the senators were ready to gratify Caesar, he consumed the whole day in speaking and thus frustrated their desires. Accordingly, Caesar gave up his triumph, entered the city, and at once attached himself to Pompey and sought the consulship.³ After he had been elected consul, he gave his daughter Julia in marriage to Pompey, and now that the two were united with one another against the state, the one would bring in laws offering allotment and distribution of land to the poor, and the other would be at hand with support for the laws. But the party of Lucullus and Cicero, ranging themselves with Bibulus, the other consul, opposed the measures, δὲ Κάτων, ἤδη μὲν ὑφορώμενος τὴν Καίσαρος καὶ Πομπηίου φιλίαν καὶ σύστασιν ἐπ' οὐδενὶ δικαίῳ γεγενημένην, φοβεῖσθαι δὲ φάσκων οὐ τὴν νομὴν τῆς χώρας, ἀλλ' ὃν ἀντὶ ταύτης ἀπαιτήσουσι μισθὸν οἱ χαριζόμενοι καὶ δελεάζοντες τὸ πλῆθος.

¹ Cf. the Lucullus, xlii. 6; Pompey, xlv. 3 f.

² In the summer of 60 B.C. ³ Cf. the Caesar, xiii. 1 f.

- XXXII. Ὡς δὲ ταῦτα λέγων τὴν τε βουλήν ὁμόψηφον εἶχε, καὶ τῶν ἐκτὸς ἀνθρώπων οὐκ ὀλίγοι παρίσταντο δυσχεραίνοντες τὴν ἀτοπίαν τοῦ Καίσαρος· ἃ γὰρ οἱ θρασύτατοι δῆμαρχοι καὶ ὀλιγωρότατοι πρὸς χάριν ἐπολιτεύοντο τῶν πολλῶν, ταῦτα ἀπ' ἐξουσίας ὑπατικῆς, αἰσχυρῶς καὶ ταπεινῶς ὑποδύμενος τὸν δῆμον, ἔπραττε·
- 2 φοβηθέντες οὖν ἐχώρουν διὰ βίας, καὶ πρῶτον μὲν αὐτῷ τῷ Βύβλω καταβαίνοντι κοπρίων ἐπεσκεδάσθη κόφινος, ἔπειτα τοῖς ῥαβδούχοις προσπεσόντες αὐτοῦ κατέκλασαν τὰς ῥάβδους· τέλος δὲ καὶ βελῶν φερομένων καὶ πολλῶν συντιτρωσκομένων ἔφυγον ἐξ ἀγορᾶς δρόμῳ μὲν οἱ λοιποὶ πάντες, ἔσχατος δὲ Κάτων ἀπήει βᾶδην, μεταστρεφόμενος καὶ μαρτυρόμενος¹ τοὺς πολίτας.
- 3 οὐ μόνον οὖν τὴν διανομὴν ἐκύρωσαν, ἀλλὰ καὶ 775 προσεψηφίσαντο τὴν σύγκλητον ὁμόσαι πᾶσαν ἢ μὴν ἐπιβεβαιώσῃ τὸν νόμον, καὶ βοηθήσῃ ἂν τις τὰναντία πράττῃ, μεγάλα τάξαντες ἐπιτίμια κατὰ τῶν μὴ ὁμοσάντων. ὤμνυσαν οὖν ἅπαντες ἐξ ἀνάγκης, τὸ Μετέλλου τοῦ παλαιοῦ πάθος ἐν νῶ λαμβάνοντες, ὃν εἰς νόμον ὁμοιον ὁμόσαι μὴ θελήσαντα περιεῖδεν ὁ δῆμος ἐκπεσόντα φυγῇ

¹ μαρτυρόμενος Bekker and Sintenis², after Emperius; Coraë's and Sintenis¹ adhere to the MSS. καταρῶμενος (cursing).

, CATO THE YOUNGER

and above all Cato, who now suspected that the friendly alliance between Caesar and Pompey had been made for no just purpose, and declared that he was afraid, not of the distribution of land, but of the reward which would be paid for this to those who were enticing the people with such favours.

XXXII. By these utterances he brought the senate to unanimity, and many men outside the senate supported him out of displeasure at the strange conduct of Caesar; for whatever political schemes the boldest and most arrogant tribunes were wont to practise to win the favour of the multitude, these Caesar used with the support of consular power, in disgraceful and humiliating attempts to ingratiate himself with the people.¹ Accordingly, the opponents of Cato were alarmed and had recourse to violence. To begin with, upon Bibulus himself, as he was going down into the forum, a basket of ordure was scattered; then the crowd fell upon his lictors and broke their fasces; and finally missiles flew and many persons were wounded.² All the other senators fled from the forum at a run, but Cato went off last of all at a walk, turning about and protesting to the citizens. Accordingly, not only was the law for the distribution of lands passed, but also a clause was added requiring the whole senate to swear solemnly that it would uphold the law, and give its aid in case any one should act contrary to it, and heavy penalties were pronounced against such as would not take the oath.³ All took the oath, therefore, under compulsion, bearing in mind the fate of Metellus of old, whom the people suffered to be banished from Italy because

¹ Cf. the Caesar, xiv. 1. ² Cf. the Pompey, xlvi. 1.

³ Cf. the Caesar, xiv. 2 f.

- 4 τῆς Ἰταλίας. διὸ καὶ τὸν Κάτωνα πολλὰ μὲν αἱ γυναῖκες οἴκοι δακρύνουσαι καθικέτευον εἶξαι καὶ ὁμόσαι, πολλὰ δὲ οἱ φίλοι καὶ συνήθεις. ὁ δὲ μάλιστα συμπίσας καὶ ἀγαγὼν ἐπὶ τὸν ὄρκον ἦν Κικέρων ὁ ῥήτωρ, παραινῶν καὶ διδάσκων ὡς τάχα μὲν οὐδὲ δίκαιόν ἐστι τοῖς ἐγνωσμένοις κοινῇ μόνον οἶεσθαι, δεῖν ἀπειθεῖν, ἐν δὲ ἀδυνάτῳ τῷ μεταστῆσαί τι τῶν γεγενομένων ἀφειδεῖν ἑαυτοῦ
- 5 παντάπασι ἀνόητον καὶ μανικόν· ἔσχατον δὲ κακῶν, εἰ δι' ἣν ἅπαντα πράττει πόλιν ἀφείς καὶ προέμενος τοῖς ἐπιβουλεύουσιν ὥσπερ ἄσμενος ἀπαλλάσσεται τῶν ὑπὲρ αὐτῆς ἀγώνων· καὶ γὰρ εἰ μὴ Κάτων τῆς Ῥώμης, ἀλλ' ἡ Ῥώμη δεῖται Κάτωνος, δέονται δὲ καὶ οἱ φίλοι πάντες· ὧν αὐτὸν εἶναι πρῶτον ὁ Κικέρων ἔλεγεν, ἐπιβουλεύομενον ὑπὸ Κλωδίου διὰ δημαρχίας ἀντι-
- 6 κρυς ἐπ' αὐτὸν βαδίζοντος. ὑπὸ τούτων φασὶ καὶ τοιούτων τὸν Κάτωνα λόγων καὶ δεήσεων μαλασσόμενον οἴκοι καὶ κατ' ἀγορὰν ἐκβιασθῆναι μόλις, καὶ προσελθεῖν πρὸς τὸν ὄρκον ἔσχατον ἀπάντων πλὴν ἐνὸς Φαωνίου τῶν φίλων καὶ συνήθων.

XXXIII. Ἐπαρθεὶς οὖν ὁ Καῖσαρ ἄλλον εἰσέφερε νόμον, τὴν Καμπανίαν σχεδὸν ὅλην προσκατανέμοντα τοῖς ἀπόροις καὶ πένησιν. ἀντέλεγε δὲ οὐδεὶς πλὴν τοῦ Κάτωνος. καὶ τούτου ἀπὸ τοῦ βήματος ὁ Καῖσαρ εἶλκεν εἰς δεσμοτήριον, οὐδέν τι μᾶλλον ὑφιέμενον τῆς παρρησίας, ἀλλ' ἐν τῷ βαδίζειν ἅμα περὶ τοῦ νόμου δια-

CATO THE YOUNGER

he would not swear to a similar law.¹ For this reason, also, did the women of Cato's family earnestly and with tears beseech him to yield and take the oath, earnestly, too, did his friends and intimates. But the one who was most successful in persuading and inducing him to take the oath was Cicero the orator, who advised and showed him that it was possibly even a wrong thing to think himself alone in duty bound to disobey the general will; and that his desperate conduct, where it was impossible to make any change in what had been done, was altogether senseless and mad; moreover, it would be the greatest of evils if he should abandon the city in behalf of which all his efforts had been made, hand her over to her enemies, and so, apparently with pleasure, get rid of his struggles in her defence; for even if Cato did not need Rome, still, Rome needed Cato, and so did all his friends; and among these Cicero said that he himself was foremost, since he was the object of the plots of Clodius, who was openly attacking him by means of the tribuneship. By these and similar arguments and entreaties, we are told, both at home and in the forum, Cato was softened and at last prevailed upon. He came forward to take the oath last of all, except Favonius, one of his friends and intimates.

XXXIII. Elated by this success, Caesar introduced another law, which provided that almost the whole of Campania be divided among the poor and needy. No one spoke against the law except Cato, and him Caesar ordered to be dragged from the rostra to prison. Cato did not any the more remit his bold utterances, but as he walked along discoursed about

¹ In 100 B.C. Cf. the Marius, xxix.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- λεγόμενον καὶ παραινοῦντα παύσασθαι τοιαῦτα
 2 πολυτενομένους. ἐπηκολούθει δὲ ἡ βουλή μετὰ κατηφείας, καὶ τοῦ δήμου τὸ βέλτιστον ἀγανα-κτοῦν σιωπῇ καὶ ἀχθόμενον, ὥστε τὸν Καίσαρα μὴ λαυθάνειν βαρέως φέροντας. ἀλλὰ φιλοεικῶν καὶ περιμένων ὑπὸ τοῦ Κάτωνος ἐπίκλησιν γενέσθαι καὶ δέησιν προῆγεν. ἐπεὶ δὲ ἐκεῖνος ἦν δῆλος οὐδὲ μελλήσων τι ποιεῖν, ἡττηθεὶς ὑπὸ αἰσχύνῃς καὶ ἀδοξίας ὁ Καίσαρ αὐτὸς τινα τῶν δημάρχων ὑφῆκε πείσας ἐξελέσθαι τὸν Κάτωνα.
 3 τοῖς μέντοι νόμοις ἐκείνοις καὶ ταῖς χάρισι τιθασεύσαντες τὸν ὄχλον, ἐψηφίσαντο Καίσαρι μὲν Ἰλλυριῶν καὶ Γαλατίας ἀρχὴν ἀπάσης καὶ τέσσαρα τάγματα στρατιᾶς εἰς πενταετίαν, προλέγοντος Κάτωνος ὡς εἰς ἀκρόπολιν τὸν τύραννον αὐτοὶ ταῖς ἑαυτῶν ψήφοις ιδρύουσι, Πόπλιον δὲ Κλώδιον ἐκ πατρικίων εἰς δημοτικούς παρανόμως
 4 μεταστήσαντες ἀπέδειξαν δήμαρχον, ἐπὶ μισθῷ τῇ Κικέρωνος ἐξελάσει πάντα πρὸς χάριν ἐκείνοις πολυτενομένον, ὑπάτους δὲ Πείσωνά τε Καλπούριον, ὃς ἦν πατὴρ τῆς Καίσαρος γυναικός, καὶ Γαβίνιον Αὔλον, ἐκ τῶν Πομπηίου κόλπων ἄνθρωπον, ὡς φασιν οἱ τὸν τρόπον αὐτοῦ καὶ τὸν βίον εἰδότες.

XXXIV. Ἄλλὰ καίπερ οὕτως τὰ πράγματα κατειληφότες ἐγκρατῶς, καὶ τὸ μὲν χάριτι τῆς πόλεως, τὸ δὲ φόβῳ μέρος ὑφ' ἑαυτοὺς ἔχοντες, ὁμως ἐφοβοῦντο τὸν Κάτωνα. καὶ γὰρ ἐν οἷς περιῆσαν αὐτοῦ τό γε χαλεπῶς καὶ μετὰ πόνων

CATO THE YOUNGER

the law and advised the people to put a stop to such legislation. Moreover, the senate followed him with downcast looks, as well as the best part of the people in silence, though they looked annoyed and troubled, so that Caesar could not fail to see that they were displeased ; but he was obstinate, and expected that Cato would resort to appeal or entreaty, and therefore had him led along. However, when it was clear that Cato did not so much as think of doing anything of the sort, Caesar was overcome by the shame and infamy of his course, and by his own secret persuasions induced one of the tribunes of the people to rescue Cato. Nevertheless, by these laws and by other favours Caesar's party so cajoled the people as to get a vote passed giving to Caesar the government of Illyria and all Gaul, with an army of four legions, for five years, although Cato warned the people that they themselves by their own votes were establishing a tyrant in their citadel. They also unlawfully transferred Publius Clodius from patrician to plebeian rank and got him elected tribune of the people, a man who, in order to secure Cicero's banishment as his reward, was using all his political influence for the gratification of the people. For consuls, too, they secured the election¹ of Calpurnius Piso, who was Caesar's father-in-law, and Aulus Gabinius, a man from the lap of Pompey, as those say who knew his ways of life.

XXXIV. But although they had in this way usurped the power, and although one part of the citizens was made submissive to them by gratitude and the other part by fear, nevertheless they were afraid of Cato. For even when they did prevail against him, it was with difficulty and toil and not

¹ For the year 58 B.C.

- καὶ μὴ χωρὶς αἰσχύνης, ἀλλ' ἐλεγχόμενος βια-
 2 ζεσθαι μόλις ἀνιάρων ἦν καὶ πρόσαντες. ὁ δὲ Κλώδιος οὐδὲ Κικέρωνα καταλύσειν ἠλπίζε Κάτωνος παρόντος, ἀλλὰ τοῦτο διαμηχανώμενος πρῶτον, ὡς εἰς ἀρχὴν κατέστη, μετεπέμψατο τὸν 776 Κάτωνα καὶ λόγους αὐτῷ προσήνεγκεν ὡς πάντων ἐκείνων ἡγούμενος ἄνδρα Ῥωμαίων καθαρῶτατον ἔργῳ δίδοναι πίστιν ἔτοιμός ἐστι· πολλῶν γὰρ αἰτουμένων τὴν ἐπὶ Κύπρον καὶ Πτολεμαῖον ἀρχὴν καὶ δεομένων ἀποσταλῆναι μόνον ἄξιον ἐκείνων ἡγεῖσθαι καὶ δίδοναι τὴν χάριν ἡδέως.
 3 ἀνακραγόντος δὲ τοῦ Κάτωνος ὡς ἐνέδρα τὸ πρᾶγμα καὶ προπηλακισμός, οὐ χάρις ἐστίν, ὑπερηφάνως ὁ Κλώδιος καὶ ὀλιγῶρος, “Οὐκοῦν,” εἶπεν, “εἰ μὴ χάριν ἔχεις, ἀνιώμενος πλεύσῃ,” καὶ προσελθὼν εὐθύς εἰς τὸν δῆμον ἐκύρωσε νόμῳ τὴν ἔκπεμψιν τοῦ Κάτωνος. ἐξιώντι δὲ οὐ ναῦν, οὐ στρατιώτην, οὐχ ὑπηρέτην ἔδωκε πλὴν ἢ δύο γραμματεῖς μόνον, ὧν ὁ μὲν κλέπτῃ καὶ παμ-4 πόνηρος, ἄτερος δὲ Κλωδίου πελάτης. ὡς δὲ μικρὸν ἔργον αὐτῷ Κύπρον καὶ Πτολεμαῖον ἀναθεῖς, ἔτι καὶ Βυζαντίων φυγάδας κατάγειν προσέταξε, βουλόμενος ὅτι πλείστον χρόνον ἐκποδῶν ἄρχοντος αὐτοῦ γενέσθαι τὸν Κάτωνα.

XXXV. Τοιαύτη δὲ καταληφθεὶς ἀνάγκη Κικέρρωνι μὲν ἐλαυνομένῳ παρήνευσε μὴ στασιάσαι μηδὲ εἰς ὄπλα καὶ φόρους τὴν πόλιν ἐμβαλεῖν, ἀλλ' ὑπεκστάντα τῷ καιρῷ πάλιν γενέσθαι

CATO THE YOUNGER

without the shame of exposure that they forced their measures through at last, and this was annoying and vexatious to them. Clodius, too, could not even hope to overthrow Cicero while Cato was at Rome, but since he was scheming for this above all else, when he had come into office he sent for Cato and made proposals to him. He said that he regarded Cato as the purest man of all the Romans, and that he was ready to prove this by his acts. Therefore, though many were soliciting the commission to Cyprus and the court of Ptolemy¹ and begging to be sent upon it, he thought Cato alone worthy of it, and therefore gladly offered him this favour. But Cato cried out that the thing was a snare and an insult, not a favour, whereupon Clodius haughtily and contemptuously replied: "Well, then, if you don't think it a favour, you shall make the voyage as a punishment," and going at once before the people he got an edict passed sending Cato on the mission. Moreover, when Cato set out, Clodius gave him neither ship, soldier, nor assistant, except two clerks, of whom one was a thief and a rascal, and the other a client of Clodius. And as if he had put a slight task upon him in the mission to Cyprus and Ptolemy, Clodius enjoined upon him besides the restoration of the exiles of Byzantium, being desirous that Cato should be out of his way as long as possible while he was tribune.

XXXV. Subjected to such constraint as this, Cato advised Cicero, whose enemies were trying to banish him, not to raise a faction or plunge the city into war and bloodshed, but to yield to the necessities of the times, and so to become again a saviour of his ¹ A younger brother of Ptolemy Auletes the king of Egypt.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

σωτήρα τῆς πατρίδος, Κανίδιον δέ τινα τῶν φίλων προπέμφσας εἰς Κύπρον ἔπειθε τὸν Πτολεμαῖον ἄνευ μάχης εἶκειν, ὡς οὔτε χρημάτων οὔτε τιμῆς ἐνδεᾶ βιωσόμενον· ἱερωσύνην γὰρ αὐτῷ 2 τῆς ἐν Πάφῳ θεοῦ δώσειν τὸν δῆμον. αὐτὸς δὲ διέτριβεν ἐν Ῥόδῳ παρασκευαζόμενος ἅμα καὶ τὰς ἀποκρίσεις ἀναμένων.

Ἐν δὲ τούτῳ Πτολεμαῖος ὁ Αἰγύπτου βασιλεὺς ὑπ' ὀργῆς τινος καὶ διαφορᾶς πρὸς τοὺς πολίτας ἀπολελοιπῶς μὲν Ἀλεξάνδρειαν, εἰς δὲ Ῥώμην πλέων, ὡς Πομπηίου καὶ Καίσαρος αὐθις αὐτὸν μετὰ δυνάμεως καταξόντων, ἐντυχεῖν τῷ Κάτῳ βουλευθεὶς προσέπεμψεν, ἐλπίζων ἐκείνῳ
 3 ὡς αὐτὸν ἤξειν. ὁ δὲ Κάτων ἐτύγχανε μὲν ὦν τότε περὶ κοιλίας κάθαρσιν, ἤκειν δὲ τὸν Πτολεμαῖον, εἰ βούλοιτο, κελεύσας πρὸς αὐτόν, ὡς δὲ ἦλθεν, οὔτε ἀπαντήσας οὔτε ὑπεξαναστάς, ἀλλ' ὡς ἓνα τῶν ἐπιτυχόντων ἀσπασάμενος καὶ καθίσαι κελεύσας, πρῶτον αὐτοῖς τούτοις διετάραξε, θαυμάζοντα πρὸς τὸ δημοτικὸν καὶ λιτὸν αὐτοῦ τῆς κατασκευῆς τὴν ὑπεροψίαν καὶ βαρύτητα τοῦ
 4 ἤθους. ἐπεὶ δὲ καὶ διαλέγεσθαι περὶ τῶν καθ' αὐτὸν ἀρξάμενος ἠκροάσατο λόγων νοῦν πολλὴν ἔχόντων καὶ παρρησίαν, ἐπιτιμῶντος αὐτῷ τοῦ Κάτωνος καὶ διδάσκοντος ὅσῃν εὐδαιμονίαν ἀπολιπῶν ὅσαις ἑαυτὸν ὑποτίθησι λατρείαις καὶ πόνοις καὶ δωροδοκίαις καὶ πλεονεξίαις τῶν ἐν Ῥώμῃ δυνατῶν, οὓς μάλιστα ἐξαργυρισθεῖσαν ἐμπλήσειν Αἴγυπτον, συμβουλευόντος δὲ πλεῖν

CATO THE YOUNGER

country. He also sent Canidius, one of his friends, to Cyprus in advance,¹ and tried to persuade Ptolemy to yield his kingdom without fighting, promising that his future life should not be without wealth and honour, since the Romans would give him a priesthood of the goddess in Paphos. He himself, however, tarried at Rhodes, making his preparations and awaiting his answers.

Meanwhile Ptolemy the king of Egypt, who had quarrelled with the citizens of Alexandria and forsaken the city in wrath, and was now on his way to Rome in the hope that Pompey and Caesar would restore him again with an armed force, wished to have an interview with Cato, and sent a messenger to him, expecting that Cato would come to him. But Cato, as it chanced, was taking a course of medicine at the time, and bade Ptolemy come to him if he wished to see him. And when Ptolemy had come, Cato neither went to meet him nor rose from his seat, but greeted him as he would any ordinary visitor and bade him be seated. At first Ptolemy was confounded by the reception itself, and was amazed at the contrast between the haughtiness and severity of Cato's manners and the plainness and simplicity of his outfit. But after he had begun to converse with Cato about his own situation, words of great wisdom and boldness fell upon his ears. For Cato censured his course, and showed him what great happiness he had forsaken, and to how much servility and hardship he was subjecting himself in dealing with the corruption and rapacity of the chief men at Rome, whom Egypt could scarcely glut if it were all turned into money. Cato also advised him

¹ Cf. the Brutus, iii. 1.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ὀπίσω καὶ διαλλάττεσθαι τοῖς πολίταις, αὐτοῦ δὲ καὶ συμπλεῖν καὶ συνδιαλλάττειν ἐτοίμως 5 ἔχοντας, οἷον ἐκ μανίας τινὸς ἢ παρακοπῆς ὑπὸ τῶν λόγων ἔμφρων καθιστάμενος, καὶ κατανοῶν τὴν ἀλήθειαν καὶ τὴν σύνεσιν τοῦ ἀνδρός, ὥρμησε μὲν χρῆσθαι τοῖς ἐκείνου λογισμοῖς, ἀνατραπεῖς δὲ ὑπὸ τῶν φίλων αὐθις ἅμα τῷ πρῶτον ἐν Ῥώμῃ γενέσθαι καὶ θύραις ἐνὸς ἄρχοντος προσελθεῖν ἕσπετε τὴν αὐτοῦ κακοβουλίαν, ὡς οὐκ ἀνδρὸς ἀγαθοῦ λόγων, θεοῦ δὲ μαντείας καταφρονήσας.

XXXVI. Ὁ δὲ ἐν Κύπρῳ Πτολεμαῖος εὐτυχία τινὶ τοῦ Κάτωνος ἑαυτὸν φαρμάκοις ἀπέκτεινε.
 πολλῶν δὲ χρημάτων ἀπολελείφθαι λεγομένων, αὐτὸς μὲν ἔγνω πλεῖν εἰς Βυζαντίους, πρὸς δὲ τὴν Κύπρον ἐξέπεμψε τὸν ἀδελφιδοῦν Βρούτον, οὐ πάνυ τι πιστεύων τῷ Κανιδίῳ. τοὺς δὲ φυγάδας διαλλάξας καὶ καταλιπὼν ἐν ὁμοιοῖα τὸ Βυζάν-2 τιον, οὕτως εἰς Κύπρον ἔπλευσεν. οὕσης δὲ πολλῆς καὶ βασιλικῆς ἐν ἐκπώμασι καὶ τραπέζαις καὶ λίθοις καὶ πορφύραις κατασκευῆς, ἣν ἔδει πραθεῖσαν ἐξαργυρισθῆναι, πάντα βουλόμενος 777 ἐξακριβοῦν καὶ πάντα κατατείνειν εἰς ἄκραν τιμὴν καὶ πᾶσιν αὐτὸς παρῆναι καὶ προσάγειν τὸν ἔσχατον ἐκλογισμὸν, οὐδὲ τοῖς ἐθάσι τῆς ἀγορᾶς ἐπίστευεν, ἀλλὰ ὑπονοῶν ὁμοῦ πάντας, ὑπηρέτας, κήρυκας, ὠνητάς, φίλους, τέλος αὐτὸς ἰδίᾳ τοῖς ὠνούμενοις διαλεγόμενος καὶ προσβιβάζων ἕκα-3 διὸ τοῖς τε ἄλλοις φίλοις ὡς ἀπιστῶν προσέκρουσε, καὶ τὸν συνηθέστατον ἀπάντων Μουνά-

CATO THE YOUNGER

to sail back and be reconciled with his people, holding himself ready also to sail with him and help effect the reconciliation. Then the king, as if brought to his senses by Cato's words after a fit of madness or delirium, and recognizing the sincerity and sagacity of the speaker, determined to adopt his counsels; but he was turned back to his first purpose by his friends. However, as soon as he reached Rome and was approaching the door of a magistrate, he groaned over his own evil resolve, convinced that he had slighted, not the words of a good man, but the prophetic warning of a god.

XXXVI. But the Ptolemy in Cyprus, fortunately for Cato, poisoned himself to death. And since the king was said to have left much treasure, Cato determined, while sailing himself to Byzantium, to send his nephew Brutus to Cyprus, since he did not altogether trust Canidius. Then, after reconciling the exiles and citizens of Byzantium and leaving the city in concord, he sailed to Cyprus. Now, there were many furnishings of a princely sort, such as beakers, tables, precious stones, and purple vestments, which had to be sold and turned into money. So Cato, wishing to treat everything with the greatest exactness, and to force everything up to a high price, and to attend to everything himself, and to use the utmost calculation, would not trust even those who were accustomed to the market, but, suspecting all alike, assistants, criers, buyers, and friends, and at last talking privately himself with the purchasers and encouraging each one to bid, he thus succeeded in selling most of the merchandize. For this reason he gave offence to most of his friends, who thought that he distrusted them, and Munatius, the most τιον εἰς ὄργην ὀλίγου δεῖν ἀνήκεστον γενομένην ἐνέβαλεν, ὥστε καὶ Καίσαρι γράφοντι λόγον κατὰ τοῦ Κάτωνος πικροτάτην τοῦτο τὸ μέρος τῆς κατηγορίας διατριβὴν παρασχεῖν.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

XXXVII. Ὁ μέντοι Μουνάτιος οὐκ ἀπιστία τοῦ Κάτωνος, ἀλλ' ἐκείνου μὲν ὀλιγωρία πρὸς αὐτόν, αὐτοῦ δέ τιμι ζηλοτυπία πρὸς τὸν Κανίδιον ἱστορεῖ γενέσθαι τὴν ὄργην. καὶ γὰρ αὐτὸς σύγγραμμα περὶ τοῦ Κάτωνος ἐξέδωκεν, ᾧ μά-
 2 λιστα Θρασέας ἐπηκολούθησε. λέγει δὲ ὕστερος μὲν εἰς Κύπρον ἀφικέσθαι καὶ λαβεῖν παρημελη-μένην ξενίαν, ἐλθὼν δὲ ἐπὶ θύρας ἀπωσθῆναι, σκευωρουμένου τι τοῦ Κάτωνος οἴκοι σὺν τῷ Κανιδίῳ, μεμψάμενος δὲ μετρίως οὐ μετρίας τυχεῖν ἀποκρίσεως, ὅτι κινδυνεύει τὸ λίαν φιλεῖν, ὡς φησι Θεόφραστος, αἴτιον τοῦ μισεῖν γίνεσθαι 3 πολλάκις. “Ἐπεὶ καὶ σύ,” φάναι, “τῷ μάλιστα φιλεῖν ἤττον οἰόμενος ἢ προσήκει τιμᾶσθαι χαλε-παίνεις. Κανιδίῳ δὲ καὶ δι' ἐμπειρίαν χρώμαι καὶ διὰ πίστιν ἐτέρων μᾶλλον, ἐξ ἀρχῆς μὲν ἀφιγμένῳ, καθαρῷ δὲ φαινομένῳ.” ταῦτα μέντοι μόνον αὐτῷ μόνῳ διαλεχθέντα τὸν Κάτωνα πρὸς τὸν Κανίδιον ἐξενεγκεῖν. αἰσθόμενος οὖν αὐτὸς οὔτε ἐπὶ δεῖπνον ἔτι φοιτᾶν οὔτε σύμβουλος ὑπακούειν καλούμενος. ἀπειλοῦντος δὲ τοῦ Κάτωνος, ὥσπερ εἰώθασι τῶν ἀπειθούντων, ἐνέχυρα λήψεσθαι, μηδὲν φροντίσας ἐκπλεῦσαι καὶ πολὺν intimate of them all, he threw into a rage that was well nigh incurable. Hence Caesar also, when he wrote a discourse against Cato,¹ dwelt most bitterly on this part of his denunciation.

CATO THE YOUNGER

XXXVII. Munatius, however, states that his anger arose, not from Cato's distrust of him, but from his inconsiderate conduct towards him, and from a certain jealousy which Munatius himself felt towards Canidius. For Munatius himself also published a treatise about Cato, which Thræsea chiefly followed. Munatius says that he came to Cyprus after the others, and found that no provision had been made for his entertainment; he says, too, that on going to Cato's door he was repulsed, because Cato had some engagement inside with Canidius. He says, further, that his measured protest met with no measured reply, for Cato told him that excessive affection, according to Theophrastus, was likely to become a ground for hatred in many cases. "And so thou too," said Cato, "by reason of thine especial affection for me, art vexed to think thyself less honoured than is meet. Canidius I employ more than others both because I have made trial of him, and because I trust him; he came at the very first, and shows himself to be incorrupt." This private conversation, however, between himself and Cato, Munatius says was reported by Cato to Canidius, and that therefore, when he heard of it, he would no longer go to Cato's table, or visit him, or share his counsels, when he was invited. Further, Munatius says, when Cato threatened to take security from him, as the Romans do in the case of those who refuse to obey orders, he paid no attention to the threat, but sailed away,

¹ See chapter xi. 4, and note.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- 4 χρόνον ἐν ὀργῇ διατελεῖν· εἶτα τῆς Μαρκίας (ἔτι γὰρ συνῴκει τῷ Κάτωνα) διαλεχθείσης, τυχεῖν μὲν ὑπὸ Βάρκα κεκλημένους ἐπὶ δεῖπνον, εἰσελθόντα δὲ ὕστερον τὸν Κάτωνα, τῶν ἄλλων κατακειμένων, ἐρωτᾶν ὅπου κατακλιθεῖη. τοῦ δὲ Βάρκα κελεύσαντος ὅπου βούλεται, περιβλεψάμενον εἰπεῖν ὅτι παρὰ Μουνάτιον· καὶ περιελθόντα πλησίον αὐτοῦ κατακλιθῆναι, πλέον δὲ μηθὲν
- 5 φιλοφρονήσασθαι παρὰ τὸ δεῖπνον. ἀλλὰ πάλιν τῆς Μαρκίας δεομένης τὸν μὲν Κάτωνα γράφαι πρὸς αὐτόν, ὡς ἐντυχεῖν τι βουλόμενον, αὐτὸς δὲ ἦκειν ἔωθεν εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν καὶ ὑπὸ τῆς Μαρκίας κατασχεθῆναι μέχρι πάντες ἀπηλλάγησαν, οὕτω δὲ εἰσελθόντα τὸν Κάτωνα καὶ περιβαλόντα τὰς χεῖρας ἀμφοτέρας ἀσπάσασθαι καὶ φιλοφρονεῖσθαι. ταῦτα μὲν οὖν οὐχ ἦττον οἰόμενοι τῶν ὑπαίθρων καὶ μεγάλων πράξεων πρὸς ἔνδειξιν ἦθους καὶ κατανόησιν ἔχειν τινὰ σαφήνειαν ἐπὶ πλέον διήλθομεν.

XXXVIII. Τῷ δὲ Κάτωνα συνήχθη μὲν ἀργυρίου τάλαντα μικρὸν ἑπτακισχιλίων ἀποδέοντα, δεδιὼς δὲ τοῦ πλοῦ τὸ μῆκος ἀγγεῖα πολλὰ κατασκευάσας, ὧν ἕκαστον ἐχώρει δύο τάλαντα καὶ δραχμὰς πεντακοσίας, καλῶδιον ἐκάστῳ μακρὸν προσήρτησεν, οὐ τῇ ἀρχῇ προσείχετο φελλὸς εὐμεγέθης, ὅπως, εἰ ῥαγείη τὸ πλοῖον, ἔχων διὰ

2 βυθοῦ τὸ ἄρτημα σημαῖνοι τὸν τόπον. τὰ μὲν οὖν χρήματα πλὴν ὀλίγων τινῶν ἀσφαλῶς διε-

326

CATO THE YOUNGER

and for a long time continued to be angry with Cato. Then, Munatius says, Marcia, who was still living with Cato,¹ spoke with her husband about the matter; and when it chanced that both men were invited to supper by Barca, Cato, who came late and after the others had taken their places, asked where he should recline; and when Barca told him to recline where he pleased, Cato looked about the room and said: "I will take my place by Munatius." So he went round and reclined by his side, but made no further show of friendship during the supper. Marcia, however, made a second request in the matter, Munatius says, and Cato wrote to him, saying that he wished to confer with him about something. So Munatius went to Cato's house early in the morning, and was detained there by Marcia until all the other visitors had gone away. Then Cato came in, threw both arms about him, kissed him, and lavished kindness upon him. Such incidents, now, in my opinion, quite as much as deeds of greatness and publicity, shed considerable light upon the perception and manifestation of character, and I have therefore recounted them at greater length.

XXXVIII. Cato got together nearly seven thousand talents of silver, and fearing the long voyage home, he had many coffers provided, each one of which would hold two talents and five hundred drachmas, and attached to each of them a long rope, to the end of which a huge piece of cork was fastened. This, he thought, in case the vessel were wrecked, would hold to its deep mooring and indicate the place where the treasure lay. Well, then, the money, except a very little, was safely transported;

¹ Cf. chapter xxv. 5.

κομίσθη, λόγους δὲ πάντων ὧν διώκησε γεγραμμένους ἐπιμελῶς ἔχων ἐν δυσὶ βιβλίοις οὐδέτερον ἔσωσεν, ἀλλὰ τὸ μὲν ἀπελεύθερος αὐτοῦ κομίζων ὄνομα Φιλάργυρος ἐκ Κεγχρεῶν ἀναχθεὶς ἀνετράπη καὶ συναπόλεσε τοῖς φορτίοις, τὸ δὲ αὐτὸς ἄχρι Κερκύρας φυλάξας ἐν ἀγορᾷ κατεσκήνωσε. 778

3 τῶν δὲ ναυτῶν διὰ τὸ ῥιγοῦν πυρὰ πολλὰ καιόντων τῆς νυκτὸς ἤφθησαν αἱ σκηναὶ καὶ τὸ βιβλίον ἠφανίσθη. τοὺς μὲν οὖν ἐχθροὺς καὶ συκοφάντας ἐπιστομεῖν ἤμελλον οἱ βασιλικοὶ διοικηταὶ παρόντες, ἄλλως δὲ τῷ Κάτωνι τὸ πρᾶγμα δηγμὸν ἤνεγκεν. οὐ γὰρ εἰς πίστιν ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ τοὺς λόγους, ἀλλὰ παράδειγμα τοῖς ἄλλοις ἀκριβείας ἐξενεγκεῖν φιλοτιμούμενος ἐνεμεσήθη.

XXXIX. Περαιωθεὶς δὲ ταῖς ναυσὶν οὐκ ἔλαθε τοὺς Ῥωμαίους, ἀλλὰ πάντες μὲν ἄρχοντες καὶ ἱερεῖς, πᾶσα δὲ ἡ βουλή, πολὺ δὲ τοῦ δήμου μέρος ἀπήντων πρὸς τὸν ποταμόν, ὥστε τὰς ὄχθας ἀμφοτέρας ἀποκεκρύφθαι καὶ θριάμβου μηδὲν ὄψει καὶ φιλοτιμία λείπεσθαι τὸν ἀνάπλουν 2 αὐτοῦ. καίτοι σκαιὸν ἐνίοις τοῦτο ἐφαίνετο καὶ αὐθαδές, ὅτι τῶν ὑπάτων καὶ τῶν στρατηγῶν παρόντων οὔτε ἀπέβη πρὸς αὐτοὺς οὔτε ἐπέσχε τὸν πλοῦν, ἀλλὰ ῥοθίῳ τὴν ὄχθην παρεξελαύνων ἐπὶ νεῶς ἐξήρους βασιλικῆς οὐκ ἀνῆκε πρότερον 3 ἢ καθορμίσει τὸν στόλον εἰς τὸ νεώριον. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ τῶν χρημάτων παρακομιζομένων δι' ἀγορᾶς ὁ τε δῆμος ἐθαύμαζε τὸ πλῆθος, ἣ τε βουλή

CATO THE YOUNGER

but although he had the accounts of all his administration of the estate carefully written out in two books, neither of these was preserved. One of them a freedman of his, Philargyrus by name, had in charge, but after putting to sea from Cenchræae he was capsized and lost it, together with his cargo; the other Cato himself had safely carried as far as Corcyra, where he pitched his tent in the market-place. But because it was so cold the sailors built many fires during the night, the tents caught fire, and the book disappeared. It is true that the royal stewards who were at hand were ready to stop the mouths of Cato's enemies and traducers, but nevertheless the matter gave him annoyance. For it was not as a proof of his own integrity, but as an example to others of scrupulous exactness that he was eager to produce his accounts, and he was therefore vexed.

XXXIX. The Romans did not fail to hear of his arrival¹ with his ships, and all the magistrates and priests, the whole senate, and a large part of the people went to the river to meet him, so that both banks of the stream were hidden from view, and his voyage up to the city had all the show and splendour of a triumph. Yet some thought it ungracious and stubborn that, although the consuls and praetors were at hand, he neither landed to greet them, nor checked his course, but on a royal galley of six banks of oars swept past the bank where they stood, and did not stop until he had brought his fleet to anchor in the dock-yard. However, when the treasure was carried through the forum, the people were amazed at the great amount of it, and the

¹ In 56 B.C.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

συναχθεῖσα μετὰ τῶν πρεπόντων ἐπαίνων ἐψη-φίσατο τῷ Κάτωνι στρατηγίαν ἐξαιρετον δοθῆναι καὶ τὰς θεάς αὐτὸν ἐν ἐσθῆτι περιπορφύρω θεά-σασθαι. ταῦτα μὲν οὖν ὁ Κάτων παρητήσατο, Νικίαν δὲ τὸν οἰκονόμον τῶν βασιλικῶν ἐλεύθερον ἔπεισε τὴν βουλήν ἀφεῖναι, μαρτυρήσας ἐπιμέ-4 λειαν καὶ πίστιν. ὑπάτευε δὲ Φίλιππος ὁ πατὴρ τῆς Μαρκίας, καὶ τρόπον τινα τὸ ἀξίωμα τῆς ἀρχῆς καὶ ἡ δύναμις εἰς Κάτωνα περιῆλθεν, οὐκ ἐλάττονα τοῦ συνάρχοντος δι' ἀρετὴν ἢ δι' οἰκειότητα τοῦ Φιλίππου τῷ Κάτωνι τιμὴν προστιθέντος.

XL. Ἐπεὶ δὲ Κικέρων ἐκ τῆς φυγῆς, ἣν ἔφυγεν ὑπὸ Κλωδίου, κατελθὼν καὶ δυνάμενος μέγα τὰς δημαρχικὰς δέλτους, ἃς ὁ Κλωδῖος ἔθηκεν ἀνα-γράφας εἰς τὸ Καπιτώλιον, ἀπέσπασε βίβλα καὶ καθεῖλε τοῦ Κλωδίου μὴ παρόντος, ἐπὶ τούτοις δὲ βουλῆς ἀθροισθείσης καὶ τοῦ Κλωδίου κατη-γοροῦντος ἔλεγε παρανόμως τῷ Κλωδίῳ τῆς δημαρχίας γενομένης ἀτελῆ καὶ ἄκυρα δεῖν εἶναι 2 τὰ τότε πραχθέντα καὶ γραφέντα, προσέκρουσεν ὁ Κάτων αὐτῷ λέγοντι, καὶ τέλος ἀναστὰς ἔφη τῆς μὲν Κλωδίου πολιτείας μηδὲν ὑγιὲς μηδὲ χρηστὸν ὄλως νομίζειν, εἰ δὲ ἀναιρεῖ τις ὅσα δημαρχῶν ἔπραξεν, ἀναιρεῖσθαι πᾶσαν αὐτοῦ τὴν περὶ Κύπρον πραγματείαν καὶ μὴ γεγονέναι τὴν ἀποστολὴν νόμιμον ἄρχοντος παρανόμου

CATO THE YOUNGER

senate in special session voted, together with the appropriate praises, that an extraordinary praetorship should be given to Cato, and that when he witnessed the spectacles he might wear a purple-bordered robe. These honours, now, Cato declined, but he persuaded the senate to bestow freedom upon Nicias, the steward of the royal household, after bearing witness to his care and fidelity. Philippus, the father of Marcia, was consul at the time, and the dignity and power of his office devolved in a manner upon Cato; the colleague of Philippus, also, bestowed no less honour upon Cato for his virtue than Philippus did because of his relationship to him.

XL. But Cicero had now come back¹ from the exile into which he was driven by Clodius, and, relying on his great influence in the senate, had forcibly taken away and destroyed, in the absence of Clodius, the records of his tribuneship which Clodius had deposited on the Capitol. When the senate was convened to consider the matter, and Clodius made his denunciation, Cicero made a speech in which he said that, since Clodius had been made tribune illegally, all that had been done or recorded during his tribunate ought to be void and invalid. Cato contradicted Cicero while he was speaking, and finally rose and said that, although he was wholly of the opinion that there was nothing sound or good in the administration of Clodius, still, if everything which Clodius had done while tribune were to be rescinded, then all his own proceedings in Cyprus would be rescinded, and his mission there had not been legal, since an illegal magistrate had obtained it

¹ In 57 B.C., after an absence of sixteen months. Cf. the Cicero, chapters xxx.-xxxiii.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ψηφισαμένου· παρανόμως μὲν οὐ δήμαρχον αἰρεθῆναι¹ τὸν Κλώδιον ἐκ πατρικίων μεταστάνατα νόμου διδόντος εἰς δημοτικὸν οἶκον, εἰ δὲ μοχθηρός, ὥσπερ ἄλλοι, γέγονεν ἄρχων, αὐτὸν εὐθύνειν τὸν ἀδικήσαντα, μὴ λύειν τὴν συναδικηθεῖσαν ἀρχὴν εἶναι προσήκον. ἐκ τούτου δι' ὀργῆς ὁ Κικέρων ἔσχε τὸν Κάτωνα, καὶ φίλφω χρώμενος ἐπαύσατο χρόνον πολύν· εἶτα μέντοι διηλλάγησαν.

- XLII. Ἐκ τούτου Πομπήσιος καὶ Κράσσος ὑπερβαλόντι τὰς Ἄλπεις Καίσαρι συγγενόμενοι γνώμην ἐποίησαντο κοινῇ δευτέραν ὑπατείαν μετιέναι, καὶ καταστάντες εἰς αὐτὴν Καίσαρι μὲν τῆς ἀρχῆς ἄλλον τοσοῦτον ἐπιψηφίζεσθαι χρόνον, αὐτοῖς δὲ τῶν ἐπαρχιῶν τὰς μεγίστας καὶ χρήματα καὶ στρατιωτικὰς δυνάμεις. ὅπερ ἦν ἐπὶ νεμῆσει τῆς ἡγεμονίας καὶ καταλύσει τῆς
- 2 πολιτείας συνωμοσία. πολλῶν δὲ καὶ ἀγαθῶν ἀνδρῶν μετιέναι τὴν ἀρχὴν τότε παρασκευαζομένων, τοὺς μὲν ἄλλους ὀφθέντες ἐν ταῖς παραγωγείαις ἀπέτρεψαν, μόνον δὲ Λεύκιον Δομίτιον Πορκία συνοικούντα τῇ ἀδελφῇ Κάτων ἔπεισε μὴ ἐκστῆναι μηδὲ ὑφέσθαι, τοῦ ἀγῶνος οὐ περὶ ἀρχῆς ὄντος, ἀλλὰ περὶ τῆς Ῥωμαίων ἐλευθερίας.
- 3 καὶ μέντοι καὶ λόγος ἐχώρει διὰ τοῦ σωφρονούντος ἔτι τῆς πόλεως μέρους, ὡς οὐ περισπτόν, εἰς ταῦτ' οὐ τῆς Κράσσου καὶ Πομπηίου δυνάμεως 779
 συνελθούσης, παντάπασιν ὑπέρογκον καὶ βαρεῖαν τὴν ἀρχὴν γενομένην, ἀλλ' ἀφαιρετέον αὐτῆς τὸν

¹ μὲν οὐ δ. αἰρεθῆναι Sintenis, after Schaefer, for the MSS. μὲν οὐν δ. αἰρεθῆναι; Bekker has μὲν οὐν μὴ δ. αἰρεθῆναι.

CATO THE YOUNGER

for him ; but it had not been illegal, he maintained, for Clodius to be elected tribune after a transfer from patrician to plebeian rank which the law allowed,¹ and if he had been a bad magistrate, like others, it was fitting to call to an account the man who had done wrong, and not to vitiate the office which had suffered from his wrong doing. In consequence of this speech Cicero was angry with Cato, and for a long time ceased friendly intercourse with him ; afterwards, however, they were reconciled.²

XLI. After this, Pompey and Crassus had a meeting with Caesar,³ who had come across the Alps, in which they laid a plan to canvass jointly for a second consulship, and, after they were established in the office, to get a vote passed giving to Caesar another term in his command, of the same duration as the first, and to themselves the largest provinces, money and military forces. This was a conspiracy for the division of the supreme power and the abolition of the constitution. And although many honourable men were getting ready to canvass for the consulship at that time, they were all deterred by seeing Pompey and Crassus announce themselves as candidates, excepting only Lucius Domitius, the husband of Cato's sister Porcia. Him Cato persuaded not to withdraw from the canvass or give way, since the struggle was not for office, but for the liberty of the Romans. And indeed it was currently said among those citizens who still retained their good sense, that the consular power must not be suffered to become altogether overweening and oppressive by the union of the influence of Pompey and Crassus, but that one or the

¹ Cf. chapter xxxiii. 3. ² Cf. the Cicero, xxxiv.

³ At Luca, in 56 B.C. Cf. the Pompey, li.; the Caesar, xxi.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἕτερον. καὶ συνίσταντο πρὸς τὸν Δομίτιον παρορμῶντες καὶ παραθαρρύνοντες ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι· πολλοὺς γὰρ αὐτῷ καὶ τῶν σιωπῶντων διὰ δέος ἐν ταῖς ψήφοις ὑπάρξειν.

- 4 Τοῦτο δὴ δείσαντες οἱ περὶ τὸν Πομπήϊον ὑφείσαν ἐνέδραν τῷ Δομιτίῳ καταβαίνοντι ὄρθριον ὑπὸ λαμπάδων εἰς τὸ πεδίου. καὶ πρῶτος μὲν ὁ προφαίνων ἐπιστὰς τῷ Δομιτίῳ πληγεῖς καὶ πεσῶν ἀπέθανε· μετὰ δὲ τοῦτου ἤδη καὶ τῶν ἄλλων συντιτρωσκομένων ἐγένετο φυγὴ πλὴν
- 5 Κάτωνος καὶ Δομιτίου. κατεῖχε γὰρ αὐτὸν ὁ Κάτων, καίπερ αὐτὸς εἰς τὸν βραχίονα τετρωμένος, καὶ παρεκελεύετο μένειν καὶ μὴ προλιπεῖν, ἕως ἐμπνέωσι, τὸν ὑπὲρ τῆς ἐλευθερίας ἀγῶνα πρὸς τοὺς τυράννους, οἱ τίνα τρόπον χρήσονται τῇ ἀρχῇ δηλοῦσι διὰ τηλικούτων ἀδικημάτων ἐπ' αὐτὴν βαδίζοντες.

XLII. Οὐχ ὑποστάντος δὲ τοῦ Δομιτίου τὸ δεινόν, ἀλλ' εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν καταφυγόντος, ἤρέθησαν μὲν ὑπατοὶ Πομπήϊος καὶ Κράσσος, οὐκ ἀπέκαμε δὲ ὁ Κάτων, ἀλλ' αὐτὸς προελθὼν στρατηγίαν μετήει, βουλόμενος ὀρμητήριον ἔχειν τῶν πρὸς ἐκείνους ἀγῶνων καὶ πρὸς ἄρχοντας ἀντικαθίστασθαι μὴ ἰδιώτης. οἱ δὲ καὶ τοῦτο δείσαντες, ὡς τῆς στρατηγίας ἀξιομάχου διὰ

- 2 Κάτωνα πρὸς τὴν ὑπατείαν γενησομένης, πρῶτον μὲν ἐξαίφνης καὶ τῶν πολλῶν ἀγνοούντων βουλὴν συναγαγόντες ἐψηφίσαντο τοὺς αἰρεθέντας

CATO THE YOUNGER

other of these men must be deprived of it. So they joined the party of Domitius, inciting and encouraging him to persist in his opposition; for many, they said, who now held their peace through fear, would help him when it came to voting.

This was precisely what the partisans of Pompey feared, and so they set an ambush for Domitius as he was going down at early morning by torchlight into the Campus Martius. First of all the torch-bearer who stood in front of Domitius was smitten, fell, and died; and after him the rest of the party were presently wounded, and all took to flight except Cato and Domitius. For Cato held Domitius back, although he himself had received a wound in the arm, and exhorted him to stand his ground, and not to abandon, while they had breath, the struggle in behalf of liberty which they were waging against the tyrants, who showed plainly how they would use the consular power by making their way to it through such crimes.

XLII. But Domitius would not face the peril, and fled to his house for refuge, whereupon Pompey and Crassus were elected consuls.¹ Cato, however, would not give up the fight, but came forward himself as candidate for a praetorship, wishing to have a vantage-point for his struggles against the men, and not to be a private citizen when he was opposing magistrates. But Pompey and Crassus feared this also, feeling that Cato would make the praetorship a match for the consulship. In the first place, therefore, they suddenly, and without the knowledge of the majority, got the senate together, and had a vote passed that the praetors elect should enter upon their office at στρατηγούς εὐθύς ἄρχειν καὶ μὴ διαλιπόντας τὸν νόμιμον χρόνον, ἐν ᾧ δίκαι τοῖς δεκάσασι τὸν δῆμον ἦσαν. ἔπειτα διὰ τοῦ ψηφίσματος τὸ δίδοναι¹ ἀνυπεύθυνον κατασκευάσαντες ὑπηρέτας αὐτῶν καὶ φίλους ἐπὶ τὴν στρατηγίαν προήγον, αὐτοὶ μὲν διδόντες ἀργύριον, αὐτοὶ δὲ ταῖς ψήφοις φερομέναις ἐφεστῶτες. ὡς δὲ καὶ τούτων ἢ Κάτωνος ἀρετὴ καὶ δόξα περιῆν, ὑπ' αἰδούς τῶν πολλῶν ἐν δεινῷ πολλῶ τιθεμένων ἀποδόσθαι Κάτωνα ταῖς ψήφοις, ὃν καλῶς εἶχε πρίασθαι τῇ πόλει στρατηγόν, ἣ τε πρώτη κληθεῖσα τῶν φυλῶν ἐκείνου ἀπέδειξεν, ἐξαίφνης ὁ Πομπηῖος βροντῆς ἀκηκοέναι ψευσύμενος αἰσχιστα διέλυσε τὴν ἐκκλησίαν, εἰθισμένων ἀφοσιούσθαι τὰ τοιαῦτα καὶ μηδὲν ἐπικυροῦν διοσημίας γενομένης.

¹ For the year 55 B.C.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

4 αὐθις δὲ πολλῶ χρησάμενοι τῷ δεκάσμῳ, τοὺς βελτίστους ὄσαντες ἐκ τοῦ πεδίου βία διεπράξαντο Βατίνιον ἀντὶ Κάτωνος αἰρεθῆναι στρατηγόν. ἔνθα δὲ λέγεται τοὺς μὲν οὕτω παρανόμως καὶ ἀδίκως θεμένους τὴν ψῆφον εὐθύς ὥσπερ ἀποδράντας οἴχεσθαι, τοῖς δὲ ἄλλοις συνισταμένοις καὶ ἀγανακτοῦσι δημάρχου τινὸς αὐτόθι παρασχόντος ἐκκλησίαν καταστάντα τὸν Κάτωνα ἅπαντα μὲν ὥσπερ ἐκ θεῶν ἐπίπνουν τὰ μέλλοντα τῇ πόλει προειπεῖν, παρορμησαὶ δὲ τοὺς πολίτας ἐπὶ Πομπηῖον καὶ Κράσσον ὡς τοιαῦτα συνειδότας αὐτοῖς, καὶ τοιαύτης ἀπτομένους πολιτείας δι' ἣν ἔδεισαν Κάτωνα, μὴ στρατηγὸς αὐτῶν περιγένηται. τέλος δὲ ἀπίοντα εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν προὔπεμψε πλήθος τοσοῦτον ὅσον οὐδὲ

¹ τὸ δίδοναι Sintenis, after Schaefer, for the MSS. τὸ δίδοναι δίκας; Coraës and Bekker delete also δίδοναι.

CATO THE YOUNGER

once, without waiting for the time prescribed by law to elapse, during which time those who had bribed the people were liable to prosecution. In the next place, now that by this vote they had freed bribery from responsibility, they brought forward henchmen and friends of their own as candidates for the praetorship, themselves offering money for votes, and themselves standing by when the votes were cast. But even to these measures the virtue and fame of Cato were superior, since shame made most of the people think it a terrible thing to sell Cato by their votes, when the city might well buy him into the praetorship; and therefore the first tribe called upon voted for him. Then on a sudden Pompey lyngly declared that he heard thunder, and most shamefully dissolved the assembly, since it was customary to regard such things as inauspicious, and not to ratify anything after a sign from heaven had been given. Then they resorted again to extensive bribery, ejected the best citizens from the Campus Martius, and so by force got Vatinius elected praetor instead of Cato. Then, indeed, it is said, those who had thus illegally and wrongfully cast their votes went off home at once like runaways, while the rest of the citizens, who were banding together and expressing their indignation, were formed into an assembly there by a tribune, and were addressed by Cato. As if inspired from heaven he foretold to the citizens all that would happen to their city, and tried to set them against Pompey and Crassus, who, he said, were privy to such a course and engaged in such a policy as made them afraid of Cato, lest, as praetor, he should get the better of them. And finally, when he went away home, he was escorted on his way by a greater σύμπαντας ἅμα τοὺς ἀποδεδειγμένους στρατηγούς.

- XLIII. Γαίου δὲ Τρεβωνίου γράψαντος νόμον ὑπὲρ νομῆς ἐπαρχιῶν τοῖς ὑπάτοις, ὥστε τὸν μὲν Ἰβηρίαν ἔχοντα καὶ Λιβύην ὑφ' αὐτῷ, τὸν δὲ Συρίαν καὶ Αἴγυπτον, οἷς βούλουτο πολεμεῖν καὶ καταστρέφεσθαι ναυτικαῖς καὶ πεζικαῖς δυνάμεσιν ἐπιόντας, οἱ μὲν ἄλλοι τὴν ἀντίπραξιν καὶ κώλυσιν ἀπεγνωκότες ἐξέλιπον καὶ τὸ ἀντειπεῖν, Κάτωνι δὲ ἀναβάντι πρὸ τῆς ψηφοφορίας ἐπὶ τὸ βῆμα καὶ βουλομένῳ λέγειν μόλις ὠρῶν δυεῖν
- 2 λόγον ἔδωκαν. ὡς δὲ πολλὰ λέγων καὶ διδάσκων 780 καὶ προθεσπίζων κατανάλωσε τὸν χρόνον, οὐκέτι λέγειν αὐτὸν εἶων, ἀλλ' ἐπιμένοντα κατέσπασεν ὑπηρέτης προσελθών. ὡς δὲ καὶ κάτωθεν ἰστάμενος ἐβόα καὶ τοὺς ἀκούοντας καὶ συναγανακτοῦντας εἶχε, πάλιν ὁ ὑπηρέτης ἐπιλαβόμενος καὶ
- 3 ἀγαγὼν αὐτὸν ἔξω τῆς ἀγορᾶς κατέστησε. καὶ οὐκ ἔφθη πρῶτον ἀφεθείς, καὶ πάλιν ἀναστρέψας ἴετο πρὸς τὸ βῆμα μετὰ κραυγῆς ἐγκελευόμενος τοῖς πολίταις ἀμύνειν. πολλάκις δὲ τούτου γενομένου περιπαθῶν ὁ Τρεβώνιος ἐκέλευσεν αὐτὸν εἰς τὸ δεσμωτήριον ἄγεσθαι· καὶ πλῆθος ἐπηκολούθει λέγοντος ἅμα σὺν τῷ βαδίζειν ἀκροώμενον, ὥστε δείσαντα τὸν Τρεβώνιον ἀφεῖναι.
- 4 Κἀκείνην μὲν οὕτω τὴν ἡμέραν ὁ Κάτων κατανάλωσε· ταῖς δ' ἐφεξῆς οὐς μὲν δεδιξάμενοι τῶν πολιτῶν, οὐς δὲ συσκευασάμενοι χάρισι καὶ δωροδοκίαις, ἓνα δὲ τῶν δημάρχων Ἀκύλλιον ὄπλοις εἵρξαντες ἐκ τοῦ βουλευτηρίου προελθεῖν, αὐτὸν δὲ τὸν Κάτωνα βροντὴν γεγονέναι βοῶντα τῆς throng than accompanied all the elected praetors together.

CATO THE YOUNGER

XLIII. And now Caius Trebonius proposed a law for the assignment of provinces to the consuls, whereby one of them was to have Spain and Africa under him, the other Syria and Egypt, and both were to wage war on whom they pleased, and attack and subdue them with land and sea forces. The rest of the opposition were weary of their efforts to prevent such things, and forbore even to speak against the measure; but Cato mounted the rostra before the vote was taken, expressed a wish to speak, with difficulty gained permission, and spoke for two hours. After he had consumed this time in long arguments, expositions, and prophecies, he was not allowed to speak any longer, but an official went up to him as he sought to continue, and pulled him down from the rostra. But even from where he stood below the rostra he kept shouting, and found men to listen to him and share his indignation. So the official once more laid hands on him, led him away, and put him out of the forum. Then, the instant that he was released, he turned back and strove to reach the rostra, shouting, and commanding the citizens to help him. This was repeated several times, until Trebonius, in a passion, ordered him to be led to prison; but a crowd followed listening to what he said as he went along, so that Trebonius took fright and let him go.

In this manner Cato consumed that day; but during the days that followed his adversaries intimidated some of the citizens, won over others by bribes and favours, with armed men prevented one of the tribunes, Aquillius, from leaving the senate-chamber, cast Cato himself out of the forum when he cried out that there

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἀγορᾶς ἐκβαλόντες, οὐκ ὀλίγους δὲ τρώσαντες, ἐνίων δὲ καὶ πεσόντων, βία τὸν νόμον ἐκύρωσαν, ὥστε πολλοὺς συστραφέντας ὀργῇ τοὺς Πομπηίου
 5 βάλλειν ἀνδριάντας. ἀλλὰ τοῦτο μὲν ἐπελθὼν ὁ Κάτων διεκώλυσε· τῷ δὲ Καίσαρι πάλιν νόμον γραφομένου περὶ τῶν ἐπαρχιῶν καὶ τῶν στρατοπέδων, οὐκέτι πρὸς τὸν δῆμον ὁ Κάτων, ἀλλὰ πρὸς αὐτὸν τραπόμενος Πομπηίου ἐμαρτύρατο καὶ προὔλεγεν ὡς ἐπὶ τὸν αὐτοῦ τράχηλον ἀναλαμβάνων Καίσαρα νῦν μὲν οὐκ οἶδεν, ὅταν δὲ ἄρχηται βαρύνεσθαι καὶ κρατεῖσθαι μήτε ἀποθέσθαι
 6 δυνάμενος μήτε φέρειν ὑπομένων, εἰς τὴν πόλιν ἐμπεσεῖται σὺν αὐτῷ, καὶ μεμνήσεται τότε τῶν Κάτωνος παραινέσεων, ὡς οὐδὲν ἡττον ἐν αὐταῖς τὸ Πομπηίου συμφέρον ἐνῆν ἢ τὸ καλὸν καὶ δίκαιον. ταῦτα πολλάκις ἀκούων ὁ Πομπηῖος ἡμέλει καὶ παρέπεμπεν ἀπιστία τῆς Καίσαρος μεταβολῆς διὰ πίστιν εὐτυχίας τῆς ἑαυτοῦ καὶ δυνάμεως.

XLIV. Εἰς δὲ τὸ ἐξῆς ἔτος αἰρεθεὶς ὁ Κάτων στρατηγὸς οὐδὲν ἔδοξε προστιθέσθαι τῇ ἀρχῇ τοσούτον εἰς σεμνότητα καὶ μέγεθος ἄρχων καλῶς, ὅσον ἀφαιρεῖν καὶ καταισχύνειν ἀνυπόδητος καὶ ἀχίτων πολλάκις ἐπὶ τὸ βῆμα προερχόμενος καὶ θανατικὰς δίκας ἐπιφανῶν ἀνδρῶν οὕτω βραβεύων. ἔνιοι δὲ φασὶ καὶ μετ' ἄριστον οἶνον πεπωκότα χρηματίζειν· ἀλλὰ τοῦτο μὲν οὐκ ἀληθῶς λέγεται.
 2 διαφθειρομένου δὲ τοῦ δήμου ταῖς δωροδοκίαις ὑπὸ τῶν φιλαρχούντων καὶ χρωμέ-

CATO THE YOUNGER

had been thunder, and after a few of the citizens had been wounded and some actually slain, forced the passage of the law. Consequently, many banded together and wrathfully pelted the statues of Pompey. But Cato came up and stopped this. However, when once more a law was introduced concerning Caesar's provinces and armies, Cato no longer addressed himself to the people, but to Pompey himself, solemnly assuring and warning him that he was now, without knowing it, taking Caesar upon his own shoulders, and that when he began to feel the burden and to be overcome by it, he would neither have the power to put it away nor the strength to bear it longer, and would therefore precipitate himself, burden and all, upon the city; then he would call to mind the exhortations of Cato, and see that they had sought no less the interests of Pompey than honour and justice. Pompey heard these counsels repeatedly, but ignored and put them by; he did not believe that Caesar would change, because he trusted in his own good fortune and power.

XLIV. For the next year¹ Cato was elected praetor, but it was thought that he did not add so much majesty and dignity to the office by a good administration as he took away from it by disgracing it. For he would often go forth to his tribunal without shoes or tunic, and in such attire would preside over capital cases involving prominent men. Some say, too, that even after the mid-day meal and when he had drunk wine, he would transact public business; but this is untruthfully said. However, seeing that the people were corrupted by the gifts which they received from men who were fond of office and plied the bribery of

¹ 54 B.C.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- νων τῷ δεκάζεσθαι καθάπερ ἐργασία συνήθει τῶν πολλῶν, βουλόμενος ἐκκόψαι παντάπασι τὸ νόσημα τοῦτο τῆς πόλεως, ἔπεισε δόγμα θέσθαι τὴν σύγκλητον ὅπως οἱ κατασταθέντες ἄρχοντες, εἰ μηδένα κατήγορον ἔχοιεν, αὐτοὶ παριόντες ἐξ ἀνάγκης εἰς ἔνορκον δικαστήριον εὐθύνας διδώσιν.
- 3 ἐπὶ τούτῳ χαλεπῶς μὲν ἔσχον οἱ μετιόντες ἀρχάς, ἔτι δὲ χαλεπώτερον ὁ μισθαρνῶν ὄχλος. ἔωθεν οὖν ἐπὶ τὸ βῆμα τοῦ Κάτωνος προελθόντος ἰθρόοι προσπεσόντες ἐβόων, ἐβλασφήμουν, ἔβαλλον, ὥστε φεύγειν ἀπὸ τοῦ βήματος ἅπαντας, αὐτὸν δὲ ἐκείνον ἐξωσθέντα τῷ πλήθει καὶ παραφερό-
- 4 μενον μόλις ἐπιλαβέσθαι τῶν ἐμβόλων. ἐντεῦθεν ἀναστὰς τῷ μὲν ἰταμῷ καὶ θαρροῦντι τῆς ὄψεως εὐθύς ἐκράτησε τοῦ θορύβου καὶ τὴν κραυγὴν ἔπαυσεν, εἰπὼν δὲ τὰ πρέποντα καὶ μεθ' ἡσυχίας ἀκουσθεῖς παντάπασι διέλυσε τὴν ταραχὴν. ἐπαινούσης δὲ τῆς βουλῆς αὐτόν, “Ἐγὼ δέ,” εἶπεν, “ὕμᾱς οὐκ ἐπαινῶ κινδυνεύοντα στρατηγὸν ἐγκαταλιπόντας καὶ μὴ προσαμύναντας.”
- 5 Τῶν δὲ μετιόντων ἀρχὴν ἕκαστος ἀπόρῳ πάθει συνείχετο, φοβούμενος μὲν αὐτὸς δεκάζειν, φοβούμενος δὲ ἑτέρου τοῦτο πράξαντος ἐκπεσεῖν τῆς ἀρχῆς. ἔδοξεν οὖν αὐτοῖς εἰς ταῦτο συνελθοῦσι 781 παραβαλέσθαι δραχμῶν ἕκαστον ἀργυρίου δεκαδύο ἡμισυ μυριάδας, εἶτα μετέναι τὴν ἀρχὴν πάντας ὀρθῶς καὶ δικαίως· τὸν δὲ παραβάντα καὶ χρησάμενον δεκασμῷ στéρεσθαι τοῦ ἀργυρίου.
- 6 ταῦτα ὁμολογήσαντες αἰροῦνται φύλακα καὶ βραβευτὴν καὶ μάρτυρα τὸν Κάτωνα καὶ τὰ χρήματα φέροντες ἐκείνῳ παρετίθεντο· καὶ τὰς συνθήκας ἐγράψαντο πρὸς ἐκείνον, ἀντὶ τῶν χρη-

CATO THE YOUNGER

the masses as they would an ordinary business, he wished to eradicate altogether this disease from the state, and therefore persuaded the senate to make a decree that magistrates elect, in case they had no accuser, should be compelled of themselves to come before a sworn court and submit accounts of their election. At this the candidates for offices were sorely displeased, and still more sorely the hireling multitude. Early in the morning, therefore, when Cato had gone forth to his tribunal, crowds assailed him with shouts, abuse, and missiles, so that everybody fled from the tribunal, and Cato himself was pushed away from it and borne along by the throng, and with difficulty succeeded in laying hold of the rostra. There, rising to his feet, by the firmness and boldness of his demeanour he at once prevailed over the din, stopped the shouting, and after saying what was fitting and being listened to quietly, brought the disturbance completely to an end. When the senate was praising him for this, he said: "But I cannot praise you for leaving an imperilled praetor in the lurch and not coming to his aid."

Now, all the candidates for offices were at a loss what to do; each one was afraid to use bribes himself, but was afraid of losing his office if another used them. They decided, therefore, to come together and deposit severally one hundred and twenty-five thousand drachmas in money, and that all should then sue for their offices in fair and just ways; the one who transgressed and practised bribery forfeiting his money. Having made this agreement, they chose Cato as depositary, umpire, and witness, and bringing their money, offered to deposit it with him; they even drew up their agreement in his presence. Cato

μάτων ἐγγυητὰς λαβόντα, τὰ δὲ χρήματα μὴ δεξάμενον. ὡς δὲ ἦκεν ἡ κυρία τῆς ἀναδείξεως, παραστὰς ὁ Κάτων τῷ βραβεύοντι δημάρχῳ καὶ παραφυλάξας τὴν ψῆφον, ἓνα τῶν παραβαλομένων ἀπέφηνε κακουργούντα καὶ προσέταξεν 7 ἀποδοῦναι τοῖς ἄλλοις τὸ ἀργύριον. ἀλλ' ἐκείνοι μὲν ἐπαινέσαντες αὐτοῦ τὴν ὀρθότητα καὶ θαυμάσαντες ἀνείλον τὸ πρόστιμον. ὡς ἱκανὴν δίκην ἔχοντες παρὰ τοῦ ἀδικήσαντος· τοὺς δὲ ἄλλους ἐλύπησεν ὁ Κάτων καὶ φθόνον ἔσχεν ἀπὸ τούτου πλείστον, ὡς βουλῆς καὶ δικαστηρίων καὶ ἀρχόντων δύναμιν αὐτῷ περιποιησάμενος.

Οὐδεμῶς γὰρ ἀρετῆς δόξα καὶ πίστις ἐπιφθόνους ποιεῖ μᾶλλον ἢ τῆς δικαιοσύνης, ὅτι καὶ δύναμις αὐτῇ καὶ πίστις ἔπεται μάλιστα παρὰ
8 τῶν πολλῶν. οὐ γὰρ τιμῶσι μόνον, ὡς τοὺς ἀνδρείους, οὐδὲ θαυμάζουσιν, ὡς τοὺς φρονίμους, ἀλλὰ καὶ φιλοῦσι τοὺς δικαίους καὶ θαρροῦσιν αὐτοῖς καὶ πιστεύουσιν. ἐκείνων δὲ τοὺς μὲν φοβούνται, τοῖς δὲ ἀπιστοῦσι· πρὸς δὲ τούτοις ἐκείνους μὲν οἴονται φύσει μᾶλλον ἢ τῷ βούλεσθαι διαφέρειν, ἀνδρείαν καὶ φρόνησιν, τὴν μὲν ὀξύτητά τινα, τὴν δ' εὐρωστίαν ψυχῆς τιθέμενοι, δικαίῳ δὲ ὑπάρχοντος εὐθύς εἶναι τῷ βουλομένῳ μάλιστα τὴν ἀδικίαν ὡς κακίαν ἀπροφάσιστον αἰσχύνονται.

XLV. Διὸ καὶ τῷ Κάτωνι πάντες οἱ μεγάλοι προσεπολέμουν ὡς ἐλεγχόμενοι· Πομπήϊος δὲ καὶ κατάλυσιν τῆς ἑαυτοῦ δυνάμεως τὴν ἐκείνου δόξαν ἡγούμενος αἰεὶ τινὰς προσέβαλλεν αὐτῷ λαιδορησομένους, ὧν καὶ Κλώδιος ἦν ὁ δημαγωγός, αὐθις εἰς Πομπήϊον ὑπορρυεῖς καὶ καταβοῶν τοῦ Κάτωtook pledges for their money, but would not accept the money itself. When the day appointed for the election came, Cato took his stand by the side of the presiding tribune, and after watching the vote, declared that one of the depositors was playing false, and ordered him to pay his money over to the others. But these, after admiring and praising Cato's uprightness, cancelled the penalty, feeling that they already had sufficient satisfaction from the wrong-doer. In the rest of the citizens, however, this conduct of Cato caused more vexation and odium than anything else; they felt that he was investing himself with the powers of senate, courts and magistrates.

CATO THE YOUNGER

For no virtue, by the fame and credit which it gives, creates more envy than justice, because both power and credit follow it chiefly among the common folk. These do not merely honour the just, as they do the brave, nor admire them merely, as they do the wise, but they actually love the just, and put confidence and trust in them. As for the brave and wise, however, they fear the one and distrust the other; and besides, they think that these excel by a natural gift rather than by their own volition, considering bravery to be a certain intensity, and wisdom a certain vigour, of soul, whereas any one who wishes can be just forthwith, and the greatest disgrace is visited upon injustice, as being inexcusable baseness.

XLV. For this reason all the great men were hostile to Cato, feeling that they were put to shame by him; and Pompey, who considered Cato's high repute as a dissolution of his own power, was always egging certain persons on to abuse him, among whom was Clodius the demagogue especially, who had again drifted into Pompey's following. He

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

νος, ὡς πολλὰ μὲν ἐκ Κύπρου χρήματα νοσφισα-μένου, Πομπηΐω δὲ πολεμοῦντος ἀπαξιώσαντι 2 γάμον αὐτοῦ θυγατρός. ὁ δὲ Κάτων ἔλεγεν ὅτι χρήματα μὲν ἐκ Κύπρου τοσαῦτα τῇ πόλει συναγάγοι μήτε ἵππον ἓνα μήτε στρατιώτην λαβών, ὅσα Πομπηΐος ἐκ πολέμων τοσοῦτων καὶ θριάμ-βων τὴν οἰκουμένην κυκήσας οὐκ ἀνήνεγκε, κη-δεστήν δὲ μηδέποτε προελέσθαι Πομπηΐιον, οὐκ ἀνάξιον ἡγούμενος, ἀλλ' ὁρῶν τὴν ἐν τῇ πολιτείᾳ 3 διαφοράν. “Αὐτὸς μὲν γάρ,” ἔφη, “διδομένης μοι μετὰ τὴν στρατηγίαν ἐπαρχίας ἀπέστην, οὗ-τος δὲ τὰς μὲν ἔχει λαβών, τὰς δὲ δίδωσιν ἐτέροις· νυνὶ δὲ καὶ τέλος ἔξακισχιλίων ὀπλιτῶν Καίσαρι κέχρηκεν εἰς Γαλατίαν· ὃ οὐτ' ἐκεῖνος ἤτησε παρ' ὑμῶν οὔτε οὗτος ἔδωκε μεθ' ὑμῶν, ἀλλὰ δυνάμεις τηλικαῦται καὶ ὄπλα καὶ ἵπποι χάριτές εἰσιν 4 ἰδιωτῶν καὶ ἀντιδόσεις. καλούμενος δὲ αὐτοκράτωρ καὶ στρατηγὸς ἄλλοις τὰ στρατεύματα καὶ τὰς ἐπαρχίας παραδέδωκεν, αὐτὸς δὲ τῇ πόλει παρακάθηται στάσεις ἀγωνοθετῶν ἐν ταῖς παραγγελίαις καὶ θορύβους μηχανώμενος, ἐξ ὧν οὐ λέληθε δι' ἀναρχίας μοναρχίαν ἑαυτῷ μνηστεύομενος.”

XLVI. Οὕτως μὲν ἠμύνατο τὸν Πομπηΐιον. ἦν δὲ Μάρκος Φαώνιος ἐταῖρος αὐτοῦ καὶ ζηλωτής, οἶος ὁ Φαληρεὺς Ἀπολλόδωρος ἱστορεῖται περὶ Σωκράτην γενέσθαι τὸν παλαιόν, ἐμπαθῆς καὶ παρακεκινηκῶς πρὸς τὸν λόγον, οὐ σχέδην οὐδὲ πράως, ἀλλ' ἄκρατον αὐτοῦ καταψάμενον ὥσπερ

CATO THE YOUNGER

loudly denounced Cato for having appropriated much treasure from Cyprus, and for being hostile to Pompey because he had declined to marry his daughter. But Cato declared that, without taking a single horse or soldier, he had got together from Cyprus more treasure for the city than Pompey had brought back from all his wars and triumphs after stirring up the habitable world; and that he never chose Pompey for a marriage connection, not because he thought him unworthy of it, but because he saw the difference in their political tenets. "I, for my part," said Cato, "when a province was offered me after my praetorship, declined it, but this Pompey took provinces, some of which he holds himself, and some he offers to others; and now he has actually lent Caesar a body of six thousand legionaries for use in Gaul. This force neither did Caesar ask from you, nor did Pompey give it with your consent, but armies of this great size and arms and horses are now the mutual gifts of private persons. And though he has the titles of general and emperor, he has handed over to others his armies and his provinces, while he himself takes up his post near the city, managing factions at the elections as though he were directing games, and contriving disturbances, from which, as we clearly see, by way of anarchy, he is seeking to win for himself a monarchy."

XLVI. With such words did Cato defend himself against Pompey. But Marcus Favonius was a companion and ardent disciple of his, just as Apollodorus of Phalerum is said to have been of Socrates in olden time. Favonius was impulsive, and easily moved by argument, which did not affect him moderately or mildly, but like unmixed wine, and to the point of

- 2 οἶνον καὶ μανικώτερον. οὗτος ἀγορανομίαν μετἰὼν ἠτῶτο, συμπαρὼν δὲ ὁ Κάτων προσέσχε ταῖς δέλτοις μᾶ χειρὶ γεγραμμέναις· καὶ τὴν 782 κακουργίαν ἐξελέγξας τότε μὲν ἐπικλήσει δημάρχων ἔλυσε τὴν ἀνάδειξιν, ὕστερον δὲ τοῦ Φαωνίου κατασταθέντος ἀγορανόμου τά τε ἄλλα τῆς ἀρχῆς ἐπεμελεῖτο καὶ τὰς θεάς διεῖπεν ἐν τῷ θεάτρῳ, διδούς καὶ τοῖς θυμηλικοῖς στεφάνους 3 μὲν οὐ χρυσοῦς, ἀλλ' ὥσπερ ἐν Ὀλυμπία κοτί-νων, δῶρα δὲ ἀντὶ τῶν πολυτελῶν τοῖς μὲν Ἑλ-λησι τεύτλα καὶ θρίδακας καὶ ραφανίδας καὶ ἀπίους, τοῖς δὲ Ῥωμαίοις οἴνου κεράμια καὶ κρέα ὕεια καὶ σῦκα καὶ σικύους καὶ ξύλων ἀγκαλίδας, ὧν τὴν εὐτέλειαν οἱ μὲν ἐγέλων, οἱ δὲ ἠδοῦντο τοῦ Κάτωνος τὸ αὐστηρὸν καὶ κατεστυμμένον ὀρών-
 4 τες ἡσυχῇ μεταβάλλον εἰς διάχυσιν. τέλος δὲ ὁ Φαώνιος εἰς τὸν ὄχλον ἐμβالῶν ἑαυτὸν καὶ καθεζόμενος ἐν τοῖς θεαταῖς ἐκρότει τὸν Κάτωνα καὶ διδόναι τοῖς εὐήμεροῦσι καὶ τιμᾶν ἐβόα, καὶ συμπαρεκάλει τοὺς θεατάς, ὡς ἐκείνῳ τὴν ἐξου-σίαν παραδεδωκώς. ἐν δὲ τῷ ἐτέρῳ θεάτρῳ Κουρίων ὁ Φαωνίου συνάρχων ἐχορήγει πολυτελῶς· ἀλλ' ἐκείνον ἀπολείποντες οἱ ἄνθρωποι μετέβαινον ἐνταῦθα, καὶ συνέπαιζον προθύμως ὑποκρινομένῳ τῷ Φαωνίῳ τὸν ἰδιώτην καὶ τῷ 5 Κάτωνι τὸν ἀγωνοθέτην. ἔπραττε δὲ ταῦτα διασύρων τὸ πρᾶγμα, καὶ διδάσκων ὅτι παίζοντα δεῖ τῇ παιδιᾷ χρῆσθαι καὶ χάριτι παραπέμπειν ἀτύφῳ μᾶλλον ἢ παρασκευαῖς καὶ πολυτελείαις, εἰς τὰ μηδενὸς ἄξια φροντίδας μεγάλας καὶ σπουδὰς κατατιθέμενον.

CATO THE YOUNGER

frenzy. He was being defeated in a candidacy for the aedileship, but Cato, who was present, noticed that the voting tablets were all inscribed in one hand; and having exposed the foul play, at the time he stopped the election by an appeal to the tribunes. Afterwards, when Favonius had been appointed aedile, Cato both discharged the other duties of the office and managed the spectacles in the theatre. He gave to the actors crowns, not of gold, but of wild olive, as was done at Olympia, and inexpensive gifts,—to the Greeks, beets, lettuce, radishes, and pears; and to the Romans, jars of wine, pork, figs, melons, and faggots of wood. At the practical simplicity of these gifts some laughed, but others conceived respect for Cato when they saw his severe and solemn manner gradually relaxing to pleasant good-humour.¹ And at last Favonius, plunging into the crowd and taking a seat among the spectators, applauded Cato and called to him in a loud voice to give presents to the successful performers and to honour them, and helped him to exhort the spectators, as though he had delegated his powers to Cato. Now, in the other theatre, Curio, the colleague of Favonius, was managing things with a lavish hand; but the people left him and went over to the other place, and readily shared in a sport where Favonius was playing the part of a private citizen and Cato that of master of the games. But Cato did all this in disparagement of the usual practice, and with an effort to show that in sport one must adopt a sportive manner and conduct matters with unostentatious gladness rather than with elaborate and costly preparations, where one bestows upon trifling things great care and effort.

¹ Cf. chapter i. 2.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

XLVII. Ἐπεὶ δέ, Σκηπίωνος καὶ Ὑψαίου καὶ Μίλωνος ὑπατείας μετερχομένων οὐ μόνον ἐκείνοις τοῖς συντρόφοις ἤδη καὶ συμπολιτευομένοις ἀδικήμασι, δωροδοκίαις καὶ δεκασμοῖς, ἀλλ' ἀντικρυς δι' ὄπλων καὶ φόρων εἰς ἐμφύλιον πόλεμον ὠθουμένων τόλμη καὶ ἀπονοία, Πομπηϊόν τινες ἤξιον ἐπιστῆναι ταῖς ἀρχαιρεσίαις, τὸ μὲν πρῶτον ἀντεῖπεν ὁ Κάτων, οὐ τοῖς νόμοις ἐκ Πομπηίου φάμενος, ἀλλ' ἐκ τῶν νόμων Πομπηίῳ δεῖν ὑπάρχειν τὴν ἀσφάλειαν, ὡς δὲ πολὺν χρόνον ἀναρχίας οὔσης καὶ τριῶν στρατοπέδων τὴν ἀγορὰν ὀσημέραι περιεχόντων ὀλίγον ἀπέλιπεν ἀνεπίσχετον γεγονέναι τὸ κακόν, ἔγνω τὰ πράγματα πρὸ τῆς ἐσχάτης ἀνάγκης εἰς Πομπηϊόν ἐκουσίῳ χάριτι τῆς βουλῆς περιστῆσαι, καὶ τῷ μετριωτάτῳ τῶν παρανομημάτων χρυσάμενος ἰάματι τῆς τῶν μεγίστων καταστάσεως τὴν μοναρχίαν ἐπαγαγέσθαι μᾶλλον ἢ περιιδεῖν τὴν στάσις εἰς

3 μοναρχίαν¹ τελευτῶσαν. εἶπεν οὖν ἐν τῇ βουλῇ γνώμην Βύβλος οἰκείος ὦν Κάτωνος, ὡς χρὴ μόνον ἐλέσθαι Πομπηϊόν ὑπάτον· ἢ γὰρ ἔξειν καλῶς τὰ πράγματα ἐκείνου καταστήσαντος, ἢ τῷ κρατίστῳ δουλεύσειν τὴν πόλιν. ἀναστὰς δὲ ὁ Κάτων οὐδενὸς ἂν προσδοκήσαντος ἐπήνεσε τὴν γνώμην καὶ συνεβούλευσε πάσαν ἀρχὴν ὡς ἀναρχίας κρείττονα, Πομπηϊόν δὲ καὶ προσδοκᾶν ἄριστα τοῖς παρούσι χρῆσεσθαι πράγμασι καὶ φυλάξειν διαπιστευθέντα τὴν πόλιν.

XLVIII. Οὕτω δ' ἀποδειχθεὶς ὑπάτος ὁ Πομπηϊός ἐδεήθη τοῦ Κάτωνος ἐλθεῖν πρὸς αὐτὸν

¹ μοναρχίαν Sintenis¹ and Coraës, with the MSS.; Sintenis² and Bekker adopt the ἀναρχίαν of Emperius.

CATO THE YOUNGER

XLVII. But presently Scipio, Hypsaeus, and Milo sought the consulship.¹ They not only used those illegal means which were now a familiar feature in political life, namely, the giving of gifts and bribes, but were openly pressing on, by the use of arms and murder, into civil war, with daring and madness. Some therefore demanded that Pompey should preside over the elections. Cato opposed this at first, saying that the laws ought not to derive their security from Pompey, but Pompey from the laws. However, when there had been no regular government for a long time,¹ and three armies were occupying the forum daily, and the evil had well-nigh become past checking, he decided that matters ought to be put into the hands of Pompey by the voluntary gift of the senate, before the extreme necessity for it came, and that by employing the most moderate of unconstitutional measures as a healing remedy for the conservation of the greatest interests, they should themselves introduce the monarchy, rather than allow faction to issue in monarchy. Accordingly, Bibulus, a kinsman of Cato, moved in the senate that Pompey should be chosen sole consul; for either matters would be rectified by his settlement of them, or the state would be in subjection to its most powerful citizen. Then Cato rose up and, to everyone's surprise, approved the measure, advising any government as better than no government at all, and saying that he expected Pompey would handle the present situation in the best manner possible, and would guard the state when it was entrusted to him.

XLVIII. After Pompey had in this way been appointed consul, he begged Cato to come to him in the ¹ For the year 52 B.C. Riots in Rome prevented any election. Cf. the Pompey, chapter liv.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- εἰς τὸ προάστειον. ἐλθόντα δὲ δεξάμενος φιλοφρόνως ἰσπασμοῖς καὶ δεξιώσεσι καὶ χάριν ὁμολογήσας παρεκάλει σύμβουλον αὐτῷ καὶ 2 πάρεδρον εἶναι τῆς ἀρχῆς. ὁ δὲ Κάτων ἀπε-κρίνατο μήτε τὰ πρῶτα πρὸς ἀπέχθειαν εἰπεῖν Πομπηίου μήτε ταῦτα πρὸς χάριν, ἀλλ' ἐπὶ συμφέροντι πάντα τῆς πόλεως· ἰδίᾳ μὲν οὖν αὐτῷ παρακαλοῦντι σύμβουλος ἔσεσθαι, δημοσίᾳ δέ, κἂν μὴ παρακαλῆται, πάντως ἐρεῖν τὸ φαινό-3 μενον. καὶ ταῦτα ἔπραττεν ὡς εἶπε. πρῶτον μὲν γὰρ ἐπὶ τοὺς δεκάσαντας ἤδη τὸν δῆμον ἐπιτίμια καὶ δίκας μεγάλας τοῦ Πομπηίου νομοθετοῦντος ἀμελεῖν ἐκέλευσε τῶν γεγονότων καὶ προσέχειν τοῖς μέλλουσιν· οὔτε γὰρ ὅπου στήσεται τὸ τὰ προημαρτημένα ζητεῖν ὀρίσαι ῥάδιον, εἴαν τε νεώτερα γράφηται τῶν ἰδικημάτων 783 ἐπιτίμια, δεινὰ πείσεσθαι τοὺς, ὃν οὐ παρέβαινον ὄτ' ἠδίκουν νόμον, κατὰ τοῦτον κολαζομένους.
 4 ἔπειτα πολλῶν κρινομένων ἐπιφανῶν ἀνδρῶν, ἐνίων δὲ καὶ φίλων τοῦ Πομπηίου καὶ οἰκείων, ὁρῶν αὐτὸν ἐνδιδόντα ἐν¹ πολλοῖς καὶ καμπτόμενον ἐπετίμα σφοδρῶς καὶ διήγειρεν. ἐπεὶ δὲ νόμῳ τοὺς εἰωθότας λέγεσθαι περὶ τῶν κρινομένων ἐπαίνους αὐτὸς ἀφελῶν, Μουνατίῳ Πλάγκῳ συγγράψας ἔπαινον ἐπὶ τῆς δίκης ἔδωκεν, ἐπι-σχόμενος ὁ Κάτων τὰ ὦτα ταῖς χερσίν (ἔτυχε 5 γὰρ δικάζων) ἐκώλυεν ἀναγινώσκεσθαι τὴν μαρτυρίαν. ὁ δὲ Πλάγκος ἀπέλεξεν αὐτὸν ἐκ τῶν

¹ ἐν Coraë's and Bekker, with most MSS.: τοῖς, with M.

CATO THE YOUNGER

suburbs. And when Cato was come, Pompey gave him a friendly welcome with salutations and hand-clasps, acknowledged his obligations to him, and invited him to be his counsellor and associate in the government. But Cato replied that he had neither spoken as he did at first out of enmity to Pompey, nor as he afterwards did to win his favour, but in every case in the interests of the state; in private, therefore, upon his invitation, he would be his counsellor, but in public, even without his invitation, he would certainly say what he thought was best. And he did this, as he said he would. In the first place, for instance, when Pompey was proposing to fix by law fresh penalties and heavy punishments for those who had already bribed the people, Cato urged him to ignore the past and give his attention to the future; for, he said, it would not be easy to fix the point at which the investigation of past transgressions should stop, and if penalties should be fixed subsequent to the crimes, those would be outrageously dealt with who were punished in conformity with a law which they were not transgressing when they committed their crime. In the second place, when many prominent men were on trial, some of whom were friends and relations of Pompey, Cato saw that Pompey was giving in and yielding in many cases, and therefore rebuked him sharply and tried to spur him on. Moreover, though Pompey himself had made illegal the customary panegyrics upon men under trial, he wrote a panegyric upon Munatius Plancus and handed it in at his trial; but Cato (who chanced to be one of the jurors) stopped his ears with his hands and prevented the reading of the testimony.¹ Plancus got δικαστῶν μετὰ τοὺς λόγους, καὶ οὐδὲν ἤττον ἤλω. καὶ ὄλως ἄπορον ἦν πρᾶγμα καὶ δυσμεταχείριστον ὁ Κάτων τοῖς φεύγουσι, μήτε βουλομένοις αὐτὸν ἀπολιπεῖν δικαστὴν μήτε ἀπολέγειν τολμῶσιν. ἤλωσαν γὰρ οὐκ ὀλίγοι τῷ Κάτωνα φεύγειν δόξαντες οὐ θαρρεῖν τοῖς δικαίοις· ἐνίοις δὲ καὶ προὔφερον οἱ λοιδοροῦντες ὡς ὄνειδος μέγα τὸ μὴ δέξασθαι κριτὴν Κάτωνα προτεινόμενον.

¹ Cf. the Pompey, lv. 5.

XLIX. Ἐπεὶ δὲ Καίσαρος αὐτοῦ μὲν ἐμπεφυκότος τοῖς στρατεύμασιν ἐν Γαλατία καὶ τῶν ὀπλων ἐχομένου, δῶροις δὲ καὶ χρήμασι καὶ φίλοις μάλιστα πρὸς τὴν ἐν τῇ πόλει χρωμένου δύναμιν, ἤδη μὲν αἱ Κάτωνος προαγορεύσεις ἀνέφερον τὸν Πομπηΐον ἐκ πολλῆς ἤδη τῆς πρόσθεν ἀπιστίας ὄνειροπολοῦντα τὸ δεινόν, ἔτι δὲ ἦν ὄκνου καὶ μελλήσεως ἀτόλμου πρὸς τὸ κωλύειν καὶ ἐπιχειρεῖν ὑπόπλεως, ὄρμησεν ὁ Κάτων ὑπατείαν παραγγέλλειν ὡς ἀφαιρησόμενος εὐθύς τὰ ὄπλα τοῦ

2 Καίσαρος ἢ τὴν ἐπιβουλὴν ἐξελέγξων. οἱ δ' ἀντιπαραγγέλλοντες αὐτῷ χαρίεντες μὲν ἦσαν ἀμφοτέροι, Σουλπίκιος δὲ καὶ πολλὰ τῆς τοῦ Κάτωνος ἐν τῇ πόλει δόξης τε καὶ δυνάμεως ἀπολελαυκῶς· οὐ μέτριον οὖν ἐδόκει πρᾶγμα ποιεῖν οὐδ' εὐχάριστον· οὐ μὲν ὅ γε Κάτων ἐνεκάλει

3 “Τί γάρ,” ἔφη, “θαυμαστὸν εἰ ὁ τις νομίζει τῶν ἀγαθῶν μέγιστον ἐτέρῳ μὴ παρίησι;” πείσας δὲ τὴν βουλὴν ψηφίσασθαι τοὺς μετιόντας τὴν ἀρχὴν αὐτοὺς δεξιοῦσθαι τὸν δῆμον, δι' ἐτέρου δὲ μὴ δεῖσθαι μηδὲ ἐντυγχάνειν ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν περιμόντος,

CATO THE YOUNGER

him removed from the jury after the speeches were over, and was convicted none the less. And altogether Cato was a perplexing and unmanageable quantity for defendants; they neither wished to allow him to be a juror in their cases nor had the courage to challenge him. For not a few of them were convicted because their attempted rejection of Cato made it appear that they had no confidence in the justice of their cases; and some were bitterly assailed by their revilers for not accepting Cato as juror when he was proposed.

XLIX. But Caesar, though he devoted himself to his armies in Gaul and was busy with arms, nevertheless employed gifts, money, and above all friends, to increase his power in the city. Presently, therefore, the admonitions of Cato roused Pompey from the great incredulity which he had indulged in up to this time, so that he had forebodings of his peril. However, he was still given to hesitation and spiritless delay in checking or attacking the threatening evil, and therefore Cato determined to stand for the consulship, that he might at once deprive Caesar of his armed forces, or convict him of his hostile designs. But his competitors were both acceptable men, and Sulpicius had actually derived much benefit from Cato's repute and power in the city, and was therefore thought to be acting in an improper and even thankless manner. But Cato had no fault to find with him. "Pray, what wonder is it," said he, "if a man will not surrender to another what he regards as the greatest of all good things?" However, by persuading the senate to pass a decree that candidates for office should canvass the people in person, and not solicit nor confer with the citizens through the

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἔτι μᾶλλον ἐξηγρίανε τοὺς ἀνθρώπους, εἰ μὴ μόνον τὸ λαβεῖν μισθόν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸ διδόναι χάριν αὐτοὺς ἀφηρημένους ἄπορον καὶ ἄτιμον ὁμοῦ τὸν 4 δῆμον πεποίηκε. πρὸς δὲ τούτῳ μῆτε αὐτὸς ἐντυχεῖν ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ πιθανὸς ὢν, ἀλλ' ἐν ἤθει τὸ τοῦ βίου μᾶλλον ἀξίωμα βουλόμενος φυλάσσειν ἢ προσλαβεῖν τὸ τῆς ἀρχῆς ποιούμενος τὰς δεξιώσεις, μῆτε τοὺς φίλους ἐάσας οἷς ὄχλος ἀλίσκεται καὶ θεραπεύεται ποιεῖν, ἀπέτυχε τῆς ἀρχῆς.

L. Φέροντος δὲ τοῦ πράγματος οὐκ αὐτοῖς μόνοις τοῖς ἀποτυχοῦσιν, ἀλλὰ καὶ φίλοις αὐτῶν καὶ οἰκείοις σὺν αἰσχύνη τινὶ κατήφειαν καὶ πένθος ἐφ' ἡμέρας πολλάς, οὕτως ἤνεγκε ραθύμως τὸ συμβεβηκὸς ὥστε ἀλειψάμενος μὲν ἐν τῷ πεδίῳ σφαιρίσαι, μετ' ἄριστον δὲ πάλιν, ὥσπερ εἶθιστο, καταβὰς εἰς ἀγορὰν ἀνυπόδητος καὶ ἀχίτων περι-
 2 πατῆσαι μετὰ τῶν συνήθων. αἰτιᾶται δὲ Κικέρων ὅτι, τῶν πραγμάτων ἄρχοντας τοιοῦτου δεομένων, οὐκ ἐποίησατο σπουδὴν οὐδὲ ὑπῆλθεν ὀμιλία φιλανθρώπῳ τὸν δῆμον, ἀλλὰ καὶ πρὸς τὸ λοιπὸν ἐξέκαμε καὶ ἀπηγόρευσε, καίτοι τὴν στρατηγίαν
 3 αὐθις ἐξ ὑπαρχῆς μετελθών. ἔλεγεν οὖν ὁ Κάτων ὅτι τῆς μὲν στρατηγίας οὐ κατὰ γνώμην ἐξέπεσε τῶν πολλῶν, ἀλλὰ βιασθέντων ἢ διαφθαρέντων, ἐν δὲ ταῖς ὑπατικάις ψήφοις μηδεμιᾶς κακουργίας γενομένης ἔγνω καὶ τῷ δήμῳ προσκεκρουκῶς διὰ τὸν αὐτοῦ τρόπον, ὃν οὔτε μεταθέσθαι πρὸς ἐτέρων χάριν οὔτε χρώμενον ὁμοίῳ πάλιν ὁμοια 784 παθεῖν νοῦν ἔχοντος ἀνδρός ἐστι.

CATO THE YOUNGER

agency of another going about in their behalf, Cato still more exasperated the common folk, in that he deprived them, not only of getting money, but also of bestowing favour, and so made them at once poor and without honour. And besides this, he was not persuasive himself in canvassing for himself, but wished to preserve in his manners the dignity of his life, rather than to acquire that of the consulship by making the customary salutations; neither would he permit his friends to do the things by which the multitude is courted and captivated. He therefore failed to obtain the office.

L. Though the matter brought, not only to the unsuccessful candidates themselves, but also to their friends and relatives, dejection and sorrow tinged with considerable shame for many days, Cato bore so easily what had happened that he anointed himself and practised ball in the Campus Martius, and after the mid-day meal, again, as was his wont, went down into the forum without shoes or tunic and walked about there with his intimates. But Cicero finds fault with him because, when affairs demanded a man like him for office, he would not exert himself nor try to win the people by kindly intercourse with them, but for the future also ceased to make any effort and gave up the contest, although he had renewed his candidacy for the praetorship. Cato replied, accordingly, that he had lost the praetorship, not because the majority wished it to be so, but because they were constrained or corrupted; whereas, since there had been no foul play in the consular elections, he saw clearly that he had given offence to the people by his manners. These, he said, no man of sense would change to please others, nor, keeping them unchanged, would he again suffer a like disaster.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

LI. Τοῦ δὲ Καίσαρος ἐμβαλόντος εἰς ἔθνη μά-χιμα καὶ παραβόλως κρατήσαντος, Γερμανοῖς δὲ καὶ σπονδῶν γενομένων δοκοῦντος ἐπιθέσθαι καὶ καταβαλεῖν τριάκοντα μυριάδας, οἱ μὲν ἄλλοι τὸν δῆμον ἠξίουσαν εὐαγγέλια θύειν, ὁ δὲ Κάτων ἐκέ-λευεν ἐκδιδόναι τὸν Καίσαρα τοῖς παρανομηθεῖσι καὶ μὴ τρέπειν εἰς αὐτοὺς μηδὲ ἀναδέχεσθαι τὸ 2 ἄγος εἰς τὴν πόλιν. “Οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ καὶ τοῖς θεοῖς,” ἔφη, “θύωμεν, ὅτι τῆς τοῦ στρατηγού μανίας καὶ ἀπονοίας τὴν δίκην εἰς τοὺς στρατιώτας οὐ τρέπουσιν, ἀλλὰ φείδονται τῆς πόλεως.”
 ἐκ τούτου Καίσαρ ἐπιστολὴν γράψας ἀπέστειλεν εἰς τὴν σύγκλητον· ὡς δὲ ἀνεγνώσθη βλασφημίας πολλὰς ἔχουσα καὶ κατηγορίας τοῦ Κάτωνος, 3 ἀναστὰς ἐκεῖνος οὐχ ὑπ’ ὀργῆς οὐδὲ φιλονεικίας, ἀλλ’ ὥσπερ ἐκ λογισμοῦ καὶ παρασκευῆς τὰ μὲν εἰς ἑαυτὸν ἐγκλήματα λοιδορίαις καὶ σκώμμασιν ὅμοια καὶ παιδιὰν τινα καὶ βωμολοχίαν τοῦ Καί-σαρος ἀπέδειξεν, ἀψάμενος δὲ τῶν ἐκείνου βου-λευμάτων ἀπ’ ἀρχῆς καὶ πᾶσαν αὐτοῦ τὴν διάνοιαν, ὥσπερ οὐκ ἐχθρός, ἀλλὰ συνωμότης καὶ 4 κοινωνός, ἐκκαλύψας, καὶ διδάξας ὡς οὐ Γερμα-νῶν οὐδὲ Κελτῶν παῖδας, ἀλλ’ ἐκείνον αὐτόν, εἰ σωφρονοῦσι, φοβητέον ἐστὶν αὐτοῖς, οὕτως ἐπέ-στρεψε καὶ παρώξυνεν ὡς τοὺς φίλους τοῦ Καί-σαρος μετανοεῖν, ὅτι τὴν ἐπιστολὴν ἀναγνόντες ἐν τῇ βουλῇ καιρὸν τῷ Κάτωνι λόγων δικαίων καὶ κατηγοριῶν ἀληθῶν παρέσχον. ἐκυρώθη μὲν οὖν οὐδέν, ἀλλ’ ἐλέχθη μόνον ὅτι καλῶς ἔχει διάδοχον
 5 Καίσαρι δοθῆναι. τῶν δὲ φίλων ἀξιούτων καὶ
 Πομπηίου ἐξ ἴσου τὰ ὄπλα καταθέσθαι καὶ ἀπο-

CATO THE YOUNGER

LI. After Caesar had fallen upon warlike nations and at great hazards conquered them, and when it was believed that he had attacked the Germans even during a truce¹ and slain three hundred thousand of them, there was a general demand at Rome that the people should offer sacrifices of good tidings, but Cato urged them to surrender Caesar to those whom he had wronged, and not to turn upon themselves, or allow to fall upon their city, the pollution of his crime. "However," said he, "let us also sacrifice to the gods, because they do not turn the punishment for the general's folly and madness upon his soldiers, but spare the city." After this, Caesar wrote a letter and sent it to the senate; and when it was read, with its abundant insults and denunciations of Cato, Cato rose to his feet and showed, not in anger or contentiousness, but as if from calculation and due preparation, that the accusations against him bore the marks of abuse and scoffing, and were childishness and vulgarity on Caesar's part. Then, assailing Caesar's plans from the outset and revealing clearly all his purpose, as if he were his fellow conspirator and partner and not his enemy, he declared that it was not the sons of Germans or Celts whom they must fear, but Caesar himself, if they were in their right minds, and so moved and incited his hearers that the friends of Caesar were sorry that by having the letter read in the senate they had given Cato an opportunity for just arguments and true denunciations. However, nothing was done, but it was merely said that it were well to give Caesar a successor.² And when Caesar's friends demanded that Pompey also, as well as Caesar, should lay down his arms and give up his provinces,

¹ Cf. Caesar, Bell. Gall. iv. 12-15; Plutarch, Caesar, xxii.

² Cf. the Caesar, xxx.; the Pompey, lviii.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

δοῦναι τὰς ἐπαρχίας ἢ μηδὲ Καίσαρα, νῦν ἐκεῖνα βοῶν ὁ Κάτων ἃ προὔλεγεν αὐτοῖς ἦκειν, καὶ βιάζεσθαι τὸν ἄνθρωπον ἀναφανδὸν ἤδη τῇ δυνάμει χρώμενον ἦν ἔσχευ ἑξαπατῶν καὶ φενακίζων τὴν πόλιν, ἔξω μὲν οὐδὲν ἐπέβαινε, τοῦ δήμου θέλοντος ἀεὶ τὸν Καίσαρα μέγιστον εἶναι, τὴν δὲ σύγκλητον εἶχε πειθομένην καὶ φοβουμένην τὸν δῆμον.

LII. Ὡς δὲ Ἀρίμινον κατείληπτο καὶ Καίσαρ κατηγγέλλετο μετὰ στρατιᾶς ἐλαύνει ἐπὶ τὴν πόλιν, ἐνταῦθα δὴ πάντες ἐπ' ἐκεῖνον ἀφεώρων, οἷ τε πολλοὶ καὶ Πομπήϊος, ὡς μόνον μὲν ἐξ ἀρχῆς προαισθόμενον, πρῶτον δὲ φανερώως προειπόντα
 2 τὴν Καίσαρος γνώμην. εἶπεν οὖν ὁ Κάτων· “Ἄλλὰ εἴ γε οἷς ἐγὼ προὔλεγον ἀεὶ καὶ συμβούλευον ἐπίσθη τις ὑμῶν, ἄνδρες, οὗτ' ἂν ἓνα ἐφοβεῖσθε νῦν οὔτε ἐν ἐνὶ τὰς ἐλπίδας εἶχετε.” Πομπηίου δὲ εἰπόντος μαντικώτερα μὲν εἰρῆσθαι Κάτωνι, φιλικώτερα δὲ αὐτῷ πεπρᾶχθαι, συμβούλευεν ὁ Κάτων ἐνὶ Πομπηίῳ τὰ πράγματα
 3 τὴν σύγκλητον ἐγχειρίσαι· τῶν γὰρ αὐτῶν εἶναι καὶ ποιεῖν τὰ μεγάλα κακὰ καὶ παύειν. ὁ μὲν οὖν Πομπήϊος οὔτε δύναμιν ἔχων ἐτοίμην οὔτε οὐδὲς κατέλεγε τότε προθύμους ὀρών ἐξέλιπε τὴν Ῥώμην, ὁ δὲ Κάτων ἔπεσθαι καὶ συμφεύγειν ἐγνωκὼς τὸν μὲν νεώτερον υἱὸν εἰς Βρεττίου ὑπεξέθετο πρὸς Μουνάτιον, τὸν δὲ πρεσβύτερον εἶχε σὺν ἑαυτῷ. τῆς δὲ οἰκίας καὶ τῶν θυγατέρων κηδε-

360

CATO THE YOUNGER

or else that Caesar should not do so either, "Now," shouted Cato, "those things are come to pass which I foretold to you, and the man is at last resorting to open compulsion, using the forces which he got by deceiving and cheating the state." Outside the senate-house, however, Cato could accomplish nothing, since the people wished all along that Caesar should have the chief power; and although Cato had the senate under his influence, it was afraid of the people.

LII. But when Ariminum was occupied¹ and Caesar was reported to be marching against the city with an army, then all eyes were turned upon Cato, both those of the common people and those of Pompey as well; they realised that he alone had from the outset foreseen, and first openly foretold, the designs of Caesar. Cato therefore said: "Nay, men, if any of you had heeded what I was ever foretelling and advising, ye would now neither be fearing a single man nor putting your hopes in a single man." Pompey acknowledged that Cato had spoken more like a prophet, while he himself had acted too much like a friend. Cato then advised the senate to put affairs into the hands of Pompey alone; for the same men who caused great evils, he said, should put a stop to them. Pompey, however, who had no forces in readiness, and saw that those which he was then enrolling were without zeal, forsook Rome; and Cato, who had determined to follow him and share his exile, sent his younger son to Munatius in Bruttium for safe keeping, but kept his elder son with himself. And since his household and his daughters needed someone to

¹ In 49 B.C. Cf. the Caesar, xxxii. fn.; the Pompey, lx. 1.

μόνος δεομένων ανέλαβε πάλιν τὴν Μαρκίαν
 χηρεύουσαν ἐπὶ χρήμασι πολλοῖς· ὁ γὰρ Ὀρτή-4 σιος θνήσκων ἐκείνην ἀπέλιπε κληρονόμον. εἰς δὲ δὴ μάλιστα λαιδορούμενος ὁ Καῖσαρ τῷ Κάτωνι φιλοπλουτίαν προφέρει καὶ μισθαρνίαν ἐπὶ τῷ γάμῳ. τί γὰρ ἔδει παραχωρεῖν δεόμενον γυναικὸς ἢ τί μὴ δεόμενον αὐθις ἀναλαμβάνειν, εἰ μὴ δέλεαρ ἐξ ἀρχῆς ὑφείθη τὸ γύναιον Ὀρτησίῳ καὶ νέαν ἔχρησεν, ἵνα πλουσίαν ἀπολάβῃ; πρὸς μὲν οὖν ταῦτα μετρίως ἔχει τὸ Εὐριπίδειον ἐκείνο·

πρῶτον μὲν οὖν τᾶρρητ'· ἐν ἀρρήτοισι γὰρ τὴν σὴν νομίζω δειλίαν, ὧ Ἡράκλεις·

785

5 ὁμοιον γὰρ ἔστι τῷ Ἡρακλεῖ μαλακίαν ὄνειδίζειν καὶ κατηγορεῖν αἰσχροκέρδειαν Κάτωνος. εἰ δὲ ἄλλη πη μὴ καλῶς πέπρακται τὰ περὶ τὸν γάμον, ἐπισκεπτέον. ἐγγυησάμενος γὰρ τὴν Μαρκίαν ὁ Κάτων, καὶ τὸν οἶκον ἐπιτρέψας ἐκείνη καὶ τὰς θυγατέρας, αὐτὸς ἐδίωκε Πομπηῖον.

LIII. Ἄπ' ἐκείνης δὲ λέγεται τῆς ἡμέρας μήτε κεφαλὴν ἔτι κείρασθαι μήτε γένεια μήτε στέφανον ἐπιθέσθαι, πένθους δὲ καὶ κατηφείας καὶ βαρύτητος ἐπὶ ταῖς συμφοραῖς τῆς πατρίδος ἐν σχῆμα νικῶντων ὁμοίως καὶ νικωμένων ἄχρι τελευτῆς διαφυλάξαι. τότε δὲ κλήρῳ λαχὼν Σικελίαν διέβη μὲν εἰς Συρακούσας, πυθόμενος δὲ Ἀσίν-νιον Πολλίωνα παρὰ τῶν πολεμίων ἀφίχθαι μετὰ

CATO THE YOUNGER

look after them, he took to wife again Marcia, now a widow with great wealth; for Hortensius, on his death,¹ had left her his heir. It was with reference to this that Caesar heaped most abuse upon Cato,² charging him with avarice and with trafficking in marriage. "For why," said Caesar, "should Cato give up his wife if he wanted her, or why, if he did not want her, should he take her back again? Unless it was true that the woman was at the first set as a bait for Hortensius, and lent by Cato when she was young that he might take her back when she was rich." To these charges, however, the well-known verses of Euripides³ apply very well:—

"First, then, the things not to be named; for in that class

I reckon, Heracles, all cowardice in thee;"

for to charge Cato with a sordid love of gain is like reproaching Heracles with cowardice. But whether on other grounds, perhaps, the marriage was improper, were matter for investigation. For no sooner had Cato espoused Marcia than he committed to her care his household and his daughters, and set out himself in pursuit of Pompey.

LIII. But from that day, as we are told, Cato neither cut his hair nor trimmed his beard nor put on a garland, but maintained the same mien of sorrow, dejection, and heaviness of spirit in view of the calamities of his country, alike in victory and in defeat, until the end. At the time, however, having had Sicily allotted to him as a province, he crossed over to Syracuse, and on learning that Asinius Pollio had come

¹ In 50 B.C. Cf. chapter xxv.

² In his treatise entitled "Anti-Cato." Cf. chapter xi. 4.

³ Hercules Furens, 173 f. (Kirchhoff).

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

δυνάμεως εἰς Μεσσήνην ἔπεμψε, λόγον ἀπαιτῶν 2 παρ' αὐτοῦ τῆς διαβάσεως. ἀνταπαιτηθεὶς δὲ λόγον ὑπ' ἐκείνου τῆς τῶν πραγμάτων μεταβολῆς, καὶ Πομπηίου ἀκούσας ἐκλελοιπότα παντελῶς Ἰταλίαν ἐν Δυρραχίῳ στρατοπεδεύειν, πολὺν ἔφη περὶ τὰ θεῖα πλάνον εἶναι καὶ ἀσάφειαν, εἰ Πομ-πήιον ἐν οἷς ὑγιᾶς οὐδὲν οὐδὲ δίκαιον ἔπραττεν ἀήττητον γενόμενον νῦν, ὅτε τὴν πατρίδα βούλεται σώζειν καὶ τῆς ἐλευθερίας ὑπερμάχεται, 3 προλέλοιπε τὸ εὐτυχεῖν. Ἀσίννιον μὲν οὖν ἔφη δυνατὸς εἶναι Σικελίας ἐκβαλεῖν, ἄλλης δὲ μεί-ζονος ἐπερχομένης δυνάμεως οὐ βούλεσθαι τὴν νῆσον ἐμπολεμῶν ἀπολέσαι, χωρεῖν δὲ πρὸς τὸ κρατοῦν καὶ σώζεσθαι παραινέσας Συρακουσίους ἐξέπλευσεν.

Ἀφικόμενος δὲ πρὸς Πομπηίου ἀεὶ μὲν εἶχετο μιᾶς γνώμης, χρονοτριβεῖν τὸν πόλεμον, ἐλπίζων διαλύσεις καὶ μὴ βουλόμενος ἐν ἀγῶνι χεῖρω γενομένην τὴν πόλιν αὐτὴν ὑφ' αὐτῆς παθεῖν τὰ 4 ἔσχατα, σιδήρῳ διακριθεῖσαν. ἄλλα δὲ τούτων ἀδελφὰ Πομπηίου ἔπεισε καὶ τοὺς συνέδρους ψη-φίσασθαι, μήτε πόλιν ὑπήκοον Ῥωμαίων διαρπάζειν μήτε ἄνδρα Ῥωμαῖον ἔξω παρατάξεως ἀναιρεῖν· ἃ καὶ δόξαν ἤνεγκε καὶ προσηγάγετο πολλοὺς τῇ Πομπηίου μερίδι, τὴν ἐπιείκειαν αὐτοῦ καὶ τὸ ἡμερον ἀσπασαμένους.

LIV. Ἐκπεμφθεὶς δὲ εἰς Ἀσίαν, ὡς τοῖς ἐκεῖ συναγοῦσι πλοῖα καὶ στρατιὰν ὠφέλιμος γένοιτο, Σερβιλίαν ἐπηγάγετο τὴν ἀδελφὴν καὶ τὸ Λευκούλλου παιδίον ἐξ ἐκείνης γεγονός. ἠκολούθησε

CATO THE YOUNGER

to Messina with a force from the enemy, he sent and demanded a reason for his coming. But having been asked by Pollio in turn a reason for the convulsion in the state, and hearing that Pompey had abandoned Italy altogether, and was encamped at Dyrrhachium, he remarked that there was much inconsistency and obscurity in the divine government, since Pompey had been invincible while his course was neither sound nor just, but now, when he wished to save his country and was fighting in defence of liberty, he had been deserted by his good fortune. As for Asinius, indeed, Cato said he was able to drive him out of Sicily; but since another and a larger force was coming to his aid, he did not wish to ruin the island by involving it in war, and therefore, after advising the Syracusans to seek safety by joining the victorious party, he sailed away.

After he had come to Pompey, he was ever of one mind, namely, to protract the war; for he looked with hope to a settlement of the controversy, and did not wish that the state should be worsted in a struggle and suffer at its own hands the extreme of disaster, in having its fate decided by the sword. Other measures, too, akin to this, he persuaded Pompey and his council to adopt, namely, not to plunder a city that was subject to Rome, and not to put a Roman to death except on the field of battle. This brought to the party of Pompey a good repute, and induced many to join it; they were delighted with his reasonableness and mildness.

LIV. When Cato was dispatched to Asia, that he might help those who were collecting transports and soldiers there, he took with him Servilia his sister and her young child by Lucullus. For Servilia had γὰρ αὐτῷ χηρεύουσα, καὶ πολὺ τῶν εἰς τὸ ἀκόλαστον αὐτῆς διαβολῶν ἀφείλεν ὑποδύσα τὴν ὑπὸ Κάτωνι φρουρὰν καὶ πλάνην καὶ δίκαιαν 2 ἐκουσίως. ἀλλ' ὃ γε Καῖσαρ οὐδὲ τῶν ἐπ' ἐκείνην βλασφημιῶν τοῦ Κάτωνος ἐφείσατο.

Πρὸς μὲν οὖν τὰλλα τοῦ Κάτωνος οὐδέν, ὡς ἔοικεν, ἐδεήθησαν οἱ Πομπηίου στρατηγοί, Ῥοδίου δὲ πειθοῖ προσαγαγόμενος καὶ τὴν Σερβιλίαν αὐτόθι καὶ τὸ παιδίον ἀπολιπὼν ἐπανήλθε πρὸς Πομπήϊον, ἤδη πεζικῆς τε λαμπρᾶς καὶ
 3 ναυτικῆς δυνάμεως περὶ αὐτὸν οὔσης. ἔνθα δὴ καὶ μάλιστα τῆς γνώμης κατάφωρος ἔδοξε γεγονέναι Πομπηίος. ὥρμησε μὲν γὰρ ἐγχειρίσαι τῷ Κάτωνι τὴν τῶν νεῶν ἡγεμονίαν· ἦσαν δὲ πεντακοσίων μὲν οὐκ ἐλάττους αἱ μάχιμοι, λιβυρικὰ δὲ καὶ κατασκοπικὰ καὶ ἄφρακτα παμπληθῆ·
 4 ταχὺ δὲ ἐννοήσας ἢ διδαχθεὶς ὑπὸ τῶν φίλων ὡς ἓν ἐστὶ κεφάλαιον Κάτωνι πάσης πολιτείας ἐλευθερῶσαι τὴν πατρίδα, κὰν γένηται κύριος τηλικαύτης δυνάμεως, ἧς ἂν ἡμέρας καταγωνίσωνται Καῖσαρα, τῆς αὐτῆς ἐκείνης ἀξιώσει καὶ Πομπηίου τὰ ὄπλα καταθέσθαι καὶ τοῖς νόμοις ἔπεσθαι, μετέγνω, καίπερ ἤδη διειλεγμένος αὐτῷ,
 5 καὶ Βύβλον ἀπέδειξε ναύαρχον. οὐ μὲν ἦσθετό γε παρὰ τοῦτο τῆς προθυμίας τοῦ Κάτωνος ἀμβλυτέρας· ἀλλὰ καὶ λέγεται πρὸς τινα μάχην πρὸ τοῦ Δυρραχίου αὐτοῦ τε Πομπηίου παρορμῶντος τὴν δύναμιν, καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἕκαστου ἡγεμόνων εἰπεῖν τι καὶ προτρέψασθαι κελεύοντος, ἀργῶς καὶ σιωπῇ τοὺς στρατιώτας ἀκούειν, Κάfollowed Cato, now that she was a widow, and had put an end to much of the evil report about her dissolute conduct¹ by submitting to Cato's guardianship and sharing his wanderings and his ways of life of her own accord. But Caesar² did not spare abuse of Cato even on the score of his relations with Servilia.

786

CATO THE YOUNGER

Now, in other ways, as it would seem, Pompey's commanders in Asia had no need of Cato, and therefore, after persuading Rhodes into allegiance, he left Servilia and her child there, and returned to Pompey, who now had a splendid naval and military force assembled. Here, indeed, and most clearly, Pompey was thought to have made his opinion of Cato manifest. For he determined to put the command of his fleet into the hands of Cato, and there were no less than five hundred fighting ships, besides Liburnian craft, look-out ships, and open boats in great numbers. But he soon perceived, or was shown by his friends, that the one chief object of Cato's public services was the liberty of his country, and that if he should be made master of so large a force, the very day of Caesar's defeat would find Cato demanding that Pompey also lay down his arms and obey the laws. Pompey therefore changed his mind, although he had already conferred with Cato about the matter, and appointed Bibulus admiral. Notwithstanding, he did not find that in consequence of this the zeal of Cato was blunted; nay, it is even said that when Pompey himself was trying to incite his forces to a battle before Dyrrhachium, and bidding each of the other commanders to say something to inspire the men, the soldiers listened to them sluggishly and in silence;

¹ Cf. chapter xxiv. 3.

² In his "Anti-Cato." Cf. chapter xi. 4.

τωνος δὲ μετὰ πάντας ὅσα καιρὸν εἶχε τῶν ἀπὸ φιλοσοφίας ἀκούειν λεγομένων περὶ ἐλευθερίας καὶ ἀρετῆς καὶ θανάτου καὶ δόξης διελθόντος 6 αὐτοπαθῶς, καὶ τελευτῶντα τρέψαντος τὸν λόγον εἰς θεῶν ἀνάκλησιν, ὡς παρόντων καὶ ἐφορώντων τὸν ὑπὲρ τῆς πατρίδος ἀγῶνα, τηλικούτον ἀλαλαγμὸν γενέσθαι καὶ τοσοῦτον κίνημα τῆς στρατιᾶς ἐπαρθείσης ὥστε πάντας ἐλπίδων μεστοὺς ἐπὶ τὸν κίνδυνον ὀρμῆσαι τοὺς ἡγεμόνας. τρεψαμένων δὲ καὶ κρατησάντων ἀφείλετο τὴν παντελεῆ νίκην ὁ Καίσαρος δαίμων, τῇ Πομπηίου χρησάμενος εὐλαβείᾳ καὶ ἀπιστίᾳ περὶ τὸ εὐτύχημα.
 7 ταῦτα μὲν οὖν ἐν τοῖς περὶ Πομπηίου γέγραπται. χαιρόντων δὲ πάντων καὶ μεγαλυνόντων τὸ ἔργον ὁ Κάτων ἀπεδάκρυε τὴν πατρίδα, καὶ τὴν ὀλέθριον καὶ κακοδαίμονα φιλαρχίαν ὠδύρετο, πολλοὺς καὶ ἀγαθοὺς ὀρώων πολίτας ὑπ' ἀλλήλων πεπτωκότας.

LV. Ἐπεὶ δὲ Καίσαρα διώκων Πομπηίος εἰς Θεσσαλίαν ἀνεξεύγνυε πολλὰ καταλιπὼν περὶ Δυρράχιον ὄπλα καὶ χρήματα καὶ σώματα συγγενῆ καὶ οἰκεῖα, πάντων ἀπέδειξεν ἡγεμόνα καὶ φύλακα τὸν Κάτωνα πεντεκαίδεκα σπείρας ἔχοντα στρατιωτῶν διὰ πίστιν ἅμα καὶ φόβον τοῦ ἀνδρός. ἡττωμένῳ μὲν γὰρ πάντων εἶναι βεβαιότατον ἐνόμιζεν, εἰ δὲ νικῶν, μὴ ἐπιτρέψειν παρόντα χρῆσασθαι τοῖς πράγμασιν ὡς προήρηται.
 2 πολλοὶ δὲ καὶ τῶν ἐπιφανῶν ἀνδρῶν ἀπερρίφθησαν ἐν Δυρραχίῳ μετὰ Κάτωνος.

Γενομένης δὲ τῆς κατὰ Φάρσαλον ἥττης οὕτως ἔσθη τοῖς λογισμοῖς ὁ Κάτων ὡς, εἰ μὲν τεθνήκοι

CATO THE YOUNGER

but that when Cato, after all the other speakers, had rehearsed with genuine emotion all the appropriate sentiments to be drawn from philosophy concerning freedom, virtue, death and fame, and finally passed into an invocation of the gods as eye-witnesses of their struggle in behalf of their country, there was such a shouting and so great a stir among the soldiers thus aroused that all the commanders were full of hope as they hastened to confront the peril. They overcame and routed their enemies, but were robbed of a complete and perfect victory by the good genius of Caesar, which took advantage of Pompey's caution and distrust of his good fortune. These details, however, have been given in the Life of Pompey.¹ But while all the rest were rejoicing and magnifying their achievement, Cato was weeping for his country, and bewailing the love of power that had brought such misfortune and destruction, as he saw that many brave citizens had fallen by one another's hands.

LV. When Pompey, in pursuit of Caesar, was breaking camp to march into Thessaly, he left behind him at Dyrrhachium a great quantity of arms and stores, and many kindred and friends, and over all these he appointed Cato commander and guardian, with fifteen cohorts of soldiers, because he both trusted and feared him. For in case of defeat, he thought that Cato would be his surest support, but in case of a victory, that he would not, if present, permit him to manage matters as he chose. Many prominent men were also ignored by Pompey and left behind at Dyrrhachium with Cato.

When the defeat at Pharsalus came, Cato resolved that, if Pompey were dead, he would take over to

¹ Chapter lxxv. Cf. the Caesar, xxxix.

Πομπήϊος, εἰς Ἰταλίαν τοὺς σὺν αὐτῷ περαιώ-σων, αὐτὸς δὲ πορρωτάτῳ τῆς τυραννίδος ἐπὶ φυγῇ βιωσόμενος· εἰ δὲ σώζοιτο, πάντως ἐκείνῳ
 3 διαφυλάξων τὴν δύναμιν. οὕτω δὴ διαβαλὼν εἰς
 Κέρκυραν, ὅπου τὸ ναυτικὸν ἦν, ἐξίστατο μὲν Κικέρωνι τῆς ἀρχῆς ὡς ὑπατικῷ στρατηγικός, οὐ δεξαμένου δὲ Κικέρωνος, ἀλλ' ἀπαίροντος εἰς Ἰταλίαν, ἰδὼν τὸν Πομπήϊον ὑπ' αὐθαδείας καὶ φρονήματος ἀκαίρου βουλόμενον κολάζειν τοὺς ὑποπλέοντας, πρώτῳ δὲ μέλλοντα τῷ Κικέρωνι προσφέρειν τὰς χεῖρας, ἐνουθέτησεν ἰδίᾳ καὶ κατε-πράυνεν, ὥστε τὸν Κικέρωνα περισῶσαι σαφῶς ἐκ θανάτου καὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις ἄδειαν παρασχεῖν.

LVI. Τεκμαιρόμενος δὲ Πομπήϊον Μάγνον εἰς Αἴγυπτον ἢ Λιβύην διεκπεσεῖσθαι καὶ σπεύδων πρὸς ἐκεῖνον ἀνήχθη μὲν ἔχων ἅπαντας, ἔπλει δὲ πρῶτον ἀπιέναι διδοὺς καὶ ὑπολείπεσθαι τοὺς οὐ προθύμως συστρατευομένους. ἀψάμενος δὲ Λιβύης καὶ παραπλέων ἐντυγχάνει Σέξτῳ τῷ νεω-τέρῳ τῶν Πομπηίου παιδῶν ἀγγέλλουσι τὴν ἐπ' 2 Αἰγύπτου τοῦ πατρὸς τελευτήν. πάντες μὲν οὖν βαρέως ἠνεγκαν, οὐδεὶς δὲ μετὰ Πομπήϊου ἠξίου Κάτωνος παρόντος οὐδὲ ἀκούειν ἄλλον ἠγεμόνα.
 διὸ καὶ Κάτων αἰδούμενος καὶ οἰκτεῖρων ἄνδρας ἀγαθοὺς καὶ πίστεως δεδωκότας πείραν ἐπὶ ξένης ἐρήμους καὶ ἀπόρους ἀπολιπεῖν, ὑπέστη τε τὴν ἀρχὴν καὶ παρήλθεν εἰς Κυρήνην· ἐδέξαντο γὰρ 37°

CATO THE YOUNGER

Italy those who were with him, but would himself live in exile as far as possible from the tyranny of Caesar; if, on the contrary, Pompey were alive, he would by all means keep his forces intact for him. Accordingly, having crossed over to Corcyra, where the fleet was, he offered to give up the command to Cicero, who was of consular rank, while he himself had been only a praetor. But Cicero would not accept the command, and set out for Italy. Then Cato, seeing that the younger Pompey¹ was led by his obstinacy and unseasonable pride into a desire to punish all those who were about to sail away, and was going to lay violent hands on Cicero first of all, admonished him in private and calmed him down, thus manifestly saving Cicero from death and procuring immunity for the rest.

LVI. Conjecturing, now, that Pompey the Great would make his escape into Egypt or Libya, and being eager to join him, Cato put to sea with all his company and sailed away, after first giving those who had no eagerness for the expedition leave to depart and remain behind. After reaching Libya, and while sailing along its coast, he fell in with Sextus, the younger son of Pompey, who told him of his father's death in Egypt. All, of course, were deeply distressed, but no one, now that Pompey was gone, would even listen to any other commander while Cato was at hand. For this reason also Cato, who had compassion on men who were brave and had given proof of fidelity, and was ashamed to leave them helpless and destitute in a foreign land, undertook the command, and went along the coast to Cyrene, the people of which received him kindly,

¹ Gnaeus Pompey, the elder son of Pompey the Great. Cf. chapter lix. 5.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἐκείνον, ὀλίγαις ἡμέραις ἔμπροσθεν ἀποκλείσαν-3 τες Λαβηνόν. ἐνταῦθα πυνθανόμενος Σκηπίωνα τὸν Πομπηίου πενθερὸν ὑπὸ Ἴόβα τοῦ βασιλέως ἀνελήφθαι, καὶ Οὔαρὸν Ἄττιον, ὃς ἦν ὑπὸ Πομπηίου Λιβύης ἀποδεδειγμένος ἡγεμών, εἶναι σὺν αὐτοῖς μετὰ δυνάμεως, ἐξώρμησε πεζῇ χειμῶνος ὥρα, πολλοὺς μὲν ὄνους ὕδωρ κομίζοντας συναγα- 787 γών, πολλὴν δὲ λείαν ἐλαύνων, ἔτι δὲ ἄρματα καὶ τοὺς καλουμένους Ψύλλους ἐπαγόμενος, οἱ τὰ τε δῆγματα τῶν θηρίων ἰῶνται τοῖς στόμασιν ἔλκοντες τὸν ἰόν, αὐτὰ τε τὰ θηρία κατεπάρδοντες 4 ἀμβλύνουσι καὶ κηλοῦσιν. ἡμέρας δὲ συνεχῶς ἐπτά τῆς πορείας γενομένης πρῶτος ἠγήσατο μήτε ἵππῳ μήτε ὑποζυγίῳ χρησάμενος. ἐδείπνει δὲ καθήμενος ἀφ' ἧς ἡμέρας τὴν κατὰ Φάρσαλον ἦτταν ἔγνω· καὶ τοῦτο τῷ λοιπῷ προσέθηκε πένθει, τὸ μὴ κατακλιθῆναι πλὴν καθεύδων. ἐν δὲ Λιβύῃ διαγαγὼν τοῦ χειμῶνος ἐξήγαγε τὴν στρα-τιάν· ἦσαν δὲ μυρίων ὀλίγον ἀποδέοντες.

LVII. Τὰ δὲ πράγματα κακῶς εἶχε τοῖς περὶ Σκηπίωνα καὶ Οὔαρὸν, ἐκ διαφορᾶς καὶ στάσεως ὑποδνομένοις καὶ θεραπεύουσι τὸν Ἴόβαν, οὐκ ἀνεκτὸν ὄντα βαρύτητι φρονήματος καὶ ὄγκῳ διὰ πλοῦτον καὶ δύναμιν· ὃς γε Κάτωνι πρῶτον ἐν-τυγχάνειν μέλλων μέσον ἔθηκε τὸν ἑαυτοῦ θρόνον
 2 τοῦ Σκηπίωνος καὶ τοῦ Κάτωνος. ὁ μέντοι Κάτων

¹ Now a partisan of Pompey, and a fugitive from Pharsalus.
 Cf. the Caesar, xxxiv. 2. ² Cf. Herodotus, iv. 173.

CATO THE YOUNGER

although a few days before they had closed their gates against Labienus.¹ There he learned that Scipio, the father-in-law of Pompey, had been well received by Juba the king, and that Attius Varus, who had been appointed governor of Libya by Pompey, was with them at the head of an army. Cato therefore set out thither by land in the winter season, having got together a great number of asses to carry water, and driving along with him many cattle. Besides, he took with him chariots, and the people called Psylli.² These cure the bites of serpents by sucking out the venom, and charm and deaden the serpents themselves by means of incantations. Though the march lasted for seven days consecutively, Cato led at the head of his force, without using either horse or beast of burden. Moreover, he used to sup in a sitting posture from the day when he learned of the defeat at Pharsalus; yes, this token of sorrow he added to others, and would not lie down except when sleeping. After finishing the winter in Libya, he led forth his army;³ and it numbered nearly ten thousand.

LVII. But matters were in a bad way with Scipio and Varus. Their dissension and quarrelling led them to pay court to Juba in efforts to win his favour, and the king was unendurable for the severity of his temper and for the arrogance which his wealth and power gave him. When he was going to have an interview with Cato for the first time, he placed his own seat between that of Scipio and that of Cato. Cato, however, when he saw the arrangement, took

¹ The text of this sentence is uncertain: Sintenis and Bekker assume a lacuna. Libya means here the Roman province of Africa.

ὡς εἶδεν, ἄρας τὸν ἑαυτοῦ μετέθηκεν ἐπὶ θάτερα, μέσον λαμβάνων τὸν Σκηπίωνα, καίπερ ἐχθρὸν ὄντα καὶ τι καὶ βιβλίον ἐκδεδωκότα βλασφημίας ἔχον τοῦ Κάτωνος. εἶτα τοῦτο μὲν εἰς οὐδένα τίθενται λόγον, εἰ δὲ Φιλόστρατον ἐν Σικελίᾳ μέσον εἶχε περιπατῶν ἐπὶ τιμῇ φιλοσοφίας, ἐγκαλοῦσι. τότε δ' οὖν καὶ τὸν Ἰόβαν ἔπαυσε μονουοῦχί σατράπας πεποιημένον ἑαυτοῦ τοὺς
 3 περὶ τὸν Σκηπίωνα, κακείνους διήλλαξεν. ἀξιούντων δὲ πάντων ἄρχειν αὐτόν, καὶ πρώτων τῶν περὶ Σκηπίωνα καὶ Οὔαρον ἐξισταμένων καὶ παραδιδόντων τὴν ἡγεμονίαν, οὐκ ἔφη καταλύσειν τοὺς νόμους περὶ ὧν τῷ καταλύουσι πολεμοῦσιν, οὐδὲ ἑαυτὸν ἀντιστράτηγον ὄντα παρόντος ἀνθυπάτου προτάξειν. ἀνθύπατος γὰρ ὁ Σκηπίων ἀπεδέδεικτο, καὶ θάρσος εἶχον οἱ πολλοὶ διὰ τοῦνομα, κατορθώσειν ἄρχοντας ἐν Λιβύῃ Σκηπίωνος.

LVIII. Ἐπεὶ μέντοι τὴν ἀρχὴν ὁ Σκηπίων παραλαβὼν εὐθύς ἐβούλετο Ἰόβα χαριζόμενος Ἰτυκαίους ἠβηδὸν ἀποκτείνειν καὶ κατασκάψαι τὴν πόλιν ὡς τὰ Καίσαρος φρονούσαν, οὐχ ὑπέμεινεν ὁ Κάτων, ἀλλὰ μαρτυρόμενος καὶ κεκραγῶς ἐν τῷ συνεδρίῳ καὶ θεοκλυτῶν μόλις ἐξείλετο τῆς
 2 ὠμότητος αὐτῶν τοὺς ἀνθρώπους· καὶ τὰ μὲν αὐτῶν δεηθέντων, τὰ δὲ τοῦ Σκηπίωνος ἀξιούντος, ἀνεδέξατο φρουρήσειν τὴν πόλιν, ὡς μήτε ἄκουσα μήτε ἐκούσα Καίσαρι προσγένοιτο. καὶ γὰρ ἦν εἰς ἅπαντα τὸ χωρίον ὠφέλιμον καὶ διαρκές up his own seat and moved it over to the other side, thus placing Scipio in the middle, although Scipio was an enemy, and had published a book which contained abuse of Cato. And yet there are those who give Cato no credit for this, although they censure him because, in Sicily, as he was walking about with Philostratus, he placed him in the middle, to show his respect for philosophy. But at the time of which I speak, Cato actually put a check upon Juba, who had all but made Scipio and Varus his satraps, and reconciled the two Romans. And though all thought it meet that he should have the command, especially Scipio and Varus, who resigned and tendered to him the leadership, he refused to break the laws to support which they were waging war with one who broke them, nor, when a pro-consul was present, would he put himself, who was only a praetor, above him. For Scipio had been made pro-consul, and the greater part of the army were emboldened by his name; they thought that they would be successful if a Scipio had command in Africa.

CATO THE YOUNGER

LVIII. When Scipio, however, after assuming the command, straightway desired to gratify Juba by putting all the people of Utica to death and demolishing their city, on the ground that it favoured the cause of Caesar, Cato would not suffer it, but by adjurations and loud outcries in the council, and by invoking the gods, with difficulty rescued the people from this cruelty; and partly at the request of the people, and partly at the instance of Scipio, he undertook to watch over the city, that it might not, either willingly or unwillingly, attach itself to Caesar. For the place was in every way advantageous for

τοῖς ἔχουσιν· ἔτι δὲ μᾶλλον ὑπὸ τοῦ Κάτωνος ἐρρώσθη. καὶ γὰρ σίτον εἰσήγαγεν ὑπερβάλλοντα πλήθει καὶ κατεσκευάζε τὰ τείχη πύργους ἐπαιρόμενος καὶ τάφρους ὄχυράς καὶ χαρακώματα πρὸ

3 τῆς πόλεως βαλλόμενος. Ἴτυκαίων δὲ τοὺς μὲν ἠβῶντας ἐν τοῖς χαρακώμασι ἔταξεν οἰκεῖν, τὰ ὄπλα παραδόντας αὐτῷ, τοὺς δὲ ἄλλους ἐν τῇ πόλει συνείχεν, ἰσχυρῶς ἐπιμελόμενος μὴ ἀδικεῖσθαι μηδὲ πάσχειν κακῶς ὑπὸ τῶν Ῥωμαίων. ὄπλα δὲ πολλὰ καὶ χρήματα καὶ σίτον ἐξέπεμψε τοῖς ἐπὶ στρατοπέδου, καὶ ὅλως εἶχε τοῦ πολέμου

4 τὴν πόλιν ταμεῖον. ἂ δὲ Πομπηῖφ συνεβούλευε πρότερον καὶ τότε Σκηπίωνι, μὴ μάχεσθαι πρὸς ἄνδρα πολεμιστὴν καὶ δεινόν, ἀλλὰ τῷ χρόνῳ χρῆσθαι πᾶσαν ἀκμὴν ἢ τυραννὶς ἰσχύει μαραίνοντι, τούτων ὁ Σκηπίων ὑπὸ αὐθαδείας κατεφρόνει· καὶ ποτε τῷ Κάτωνι δειλίαν ὀνειδίζων ἔγραψεν, εἰ μὴ μόνον αὐτὸς ἀγαπᾷ καθήμενος ἐν πόλει καὶ τείχεσιν, ἀλλὰ μηδὲ ἑτέρους ἐὰ πρὸς τὸν καιρὸν εὐθαρσῶς χρῆσθαι τοῖς λογισμοῖς.

5 πρὸς ταῦτα ὁ Κάτων ἀντέγραψεν ὡς ἔτοιμός ἐστιν οὗς ἤγαγεν αὐτὸς εἰς Λιβύην ὀπίλιτας καὶ ἵππεῖς παραλαβὼν εἰς Ἰταλίαν περαιούν, καὶ Καίσαρα μεθιστάναι καὶ τρέπειν ἀπ' ἐκείνων 788 πρὸς αὐτόν. ὡς δὲ καὶ τούτων ὁ Σκηπίων κατεγέλα, πάνυ δῆλος ἦν ἀχθόμενος ὁ Κάτων τῇ παραχωρήσει τῆς ἀρχῆς, ὡς οὔτε τῷ πολέμῳ καλῶς τὸν Σκηπίωνα χρησόμενον, οὔτε, ἂν παρὰ λόγῳ εὐτυχήσῃ, μέτριον ἐν τῷ κρατεῖν πρὸς τοὺς

CATO THE YOUNGER

those who held it, and fully capable of defence ; and it was still further strengthened by Cato. For he brought in a great abundance of grain, and perfected the walls by building towers and by running formidable trenches and palisades in front of the city. To the men of Utica who were of military age he assigned the palisades for quarters, and made them give up their arms to him ; the rest he kept together in the city, taking great pains that they should not be wronged or suffer harm at the hands of the Romans. Moreover, he sent out great quantities of arms and stores and grain to the Romans in their camp, and, in a word, made the city a store-house for the war. But as for the advice which he had given Pompey before and now gave Scipio, namely, not to give battle to a man who was versed in war and of formidable ability, but to trust to time, which withers away all the vigour which is the strength of tyranny, —this advice Scipio, out of obstinate self-will, despised. And once he wrote to Cato reproaching him with cowardice, seeing that he was not only well content to sit quietly in a walled city himself, but would not even allow others to carry out their plans with boldness as opportunity offered. To this Cato wrote in reply that he was ready to take the legionaries and the horsemen whom he himself had brought to Libya and cross the sea with them to Italy, thus forcing Caesar to change his plan of campaign, and turning him away from Scipio and Varus against himself. When Scipio mocked at this also, it was very clear that Cato was distressed at having declined the command, being convinced that Scipio would neither conduct the war well, nor, in case he should have unexpected good fortune behave with moder-

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

6 πολίτας ἐσόμενον. διὸ καὶ γνώμην εἶχεν ὁ Κάτων, καὶ πρὸς τοὺς συνήθεις ἔλεγεν, οὐ χρηστὰς μὲν ἐλπίδας ἔχειν ὑπὲρ τοῦ πολέμου δι' ἀπειρίαν καὶ θρασύτητα τῶν ἡγεμόνων, εἰ δ' οὖν εὐτυχία τις γένοιτο καὶ καταλυθείη Καῖσαρ, οὐ μενεῖν ἐν Ῥώμῃ, φεῦξεσθαι δὲ τὴν χαλεπότητα καὶ πικρίαν τοῦ Σκηπίωνος, ἥδη τότε δεινὰς καὶ ὑπερηφάνους ποιομένους κατὰ πολλῶν ἀπειλάς.

7 Ἀπέβη δὲ μᾶλλον ἢ προσεδόκα· καὶ περὶ ἐσπέραν βαθείαν ἤκέ τις ἀπὸ στρατοπέδου τριταῖος ἀγγέλλων ὅτι μάχης μεγάλης πρὸς Θάψφ γενομένης διέφθαρται παντάπασι τὰ πράγματα καὶ κρατεῖ Καῖσαρ τῶν στρατοπέδων, Σκηπίων δὲ καὶ Ἰόβας σὺν ὀλίγοις ἐκπεφεύγασιν, ἡ δὲ ἄλλη δύναμις ἀπόλωλε.

LIX. Τούτων προσπεσόντων ἡ μὲν πόλις, οἶον εἰκὸς ἐν νυκτὶ καὶ πολέμῳ, πρὸς τοιοῦτον ἀγγελμα μικροῦ δεῖν ἔκφρων γενομένη μόλις ἑαυτὴν ἐντὸς τειχῶν κατεῖχεν, ὁ δὲ Κάτων προελθὼν τότε μὲν, ὡς ἐκάστοις ἀπήντα διαθέουσι καὶ βοῶσιν, ἐπιλαμβανόμενος καὶ παραμυθούμενος ἀφήρει τοῦ δέους τὸ περιθαμβὲς καὶ ταραχῶδες, ὡς οὐ τηλικούτων ἴσως γεγονότων, ἀλλὰ ἐπὶ μείζον αἰρομένων τῷ λόγῳ, καὶ κατέστησε τὸν θόρυβον·
2 ἄμα δ' ἡμέρα τοὺς τριακοσίους οἷς ἐχρήτο βουλή, Ῥωμαίους μὲν ὄντας, ἐν δὲ Λιβύῃ πραγματευομέ-

CATO THE YOUNGER

ation towards his fellow citizens in the hour of victory. Therefore Cato made up his mind, and said to his intimate friends, that there were no good hopes for the war owing to the inexperience and rashness of the commanders; but that if, then, by any good fortune, Caesar should be overthrown, he himself would not remain in Rome, but would fly from the harshness and cruelty of Scipio, who was even then making extravagant and dreadful threats against many.

But his fears were realized more fully than he expected; for late one evening there came a messenger from the camp who had been three days on the road, announcing that there had been a great battle at Thapsus, that their cause was utterly ruined, that Caesar was in possession of their camps,¹ that Scipio and Juba had escaped with a few followers, and that the rest of the force had perished.

LIX. These things coming suddenly upon the city, the people, as was natural at night and in time of war, were almost beside themselves at such tidings, and could with difficulty keep themselves within the walls. But Cato came forth, and for the present, whenever he met people running about and shouting, would lay hold of them one by one, and with encouraging words would take away the excessive wildness and confusion of their fear, saying that perhaps the defeat was not so bad as reported, but had been magnified in the telling, and thus he allayed the tumult; but as soon as it was day, he issued proclamation that the three hundred who made up his senate (they were Romans, and were doing business

¹ Scipio had separated from his allies and was encamped apart. Cf. the Caesar, liii.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

νους ἀπὸ ἐμπορίας καὶ δανεισμῶν, εἰς ἱερὸν Διὸς ἐκήρυττε συνιέναι, καὶ ὅσοι παρήσαν ἀπὸ συγκλήτου, καὶ παιδάς αὐτῶν. ἔτι δὲ συλλεγομένων ἐκείνων προσελθὼν ἀθορύβως καὶ μετὰ εὐσταθείας, ὥσπερ οὐδενὸς καινοῦ γεγονότος, βιβλίον ἔχων ἐν ταῖς χερσὶν ἀνεγίνωσκεν. ἦν δὲ ἀναγραφὴ τῶν πρὸς τὸν πόλεμον ὀργάνων, ὄπλων, 3 σίτου, τόξων, ὀπλιτῶν.¹ ἐπεὶ δὲ συνῆλθον, ἀρξάμενος ἀπὸ τῶν τριακοσίων καὶ διελθὼν πο-λὺν ἔπαινον τῆς προθυμίας αὐτῶν καὶ τῆς πίστεως, ἦν ἐπεδείξαντο καὶ χρήμασι καὶ σώμασι καὶ βουλαῖς ὠφελιμώτατοι γενόμενοι, παρεκάλει μὴ διαλυθῆναι ταῖς ἐλπίσιν ἕκαστον αὐτῷ φυγὴν ἰδίαν ἢ ἀπόδρασίν τινα ποριζόμενον. ἂν γὰρ ἐν ταύτῳ συμμένωσι, καὶ πολεμούντων ἦττον κατα-φρονήσειν Καίσαρα, καὶ φείσεσθαι μᾶλλον δεο-4 μένων. βουλευέσθαι δ' ἐκέλευεν αὐτοὺς ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν, οὐδέτερα μεμψόμενος, ἀλλ' εἰ μὲν τρέποινοτο τῇ γνώμῃ πρὸς τὴν τύχην, τῆς ἀνάγκης θησόμενος τὴν μεταβολήν· ἰσταμένων δὲ πρὸς τὰ δεινὰ καὶ δεχομένων τὸν ὑπὲρ τῆς ἐλευθερίας κίνδυνον, οὐκ ἐπαινεσόμενος μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ θαυμασόμενος τὴν ἀρετήν, καὶ παρέξων ἑαυτὸν 5 ἄρχοντα καὶ συναγωνιζόμενον, ἄχρι οὗ τὴν ἐσχάτην τύχην τῆς πατρίδος ἐξελέγξωσιν, ἦν οὐκ Ἰτύκην οὐδὲ Ἀδρούμητον οὐσαν, ἀλλὰ Ῥώμην, πολλάκις ἐκ χαλεπωτέρων σφαλμάτων ὑπὸ μεγέθους ἀναφέρεσθαι. πολλῶν δ' αὐτοῖς εἰς σωτηρίαν καὶ ἀσφάλειαν ὑποκειμένων, καὶ μεγίστου πρὸς ἄνδρα πολεμεῖν ἐπὶ πολλὰ τοῖς καιροῖς

¹ ὀπλιτῶν bracketed by Bekker.

CATO THE YOUNGER

in Libya as merchants and money-lenders) should assemble in the temple of Jupiter, as well as all the senators from Rome who were present, with their children. And while they were still coming together, he advanced quietly and with a composed countenance, and as if nothing unusual had happened, with a book in his hands from which he was reading. This was a register of his military engines, arms, grain, and men-at-arms. After they had come together, beginning with the three hundred and commending at great length their zeal and fidelity, which they had manifested by making themselves most helpful with their means and persons and advice, he exhorted them not to ruin their good prospects by trying to procure for themselves severally some separate flight or escape. For if they should hold together, he said, Caesar would despise them less as foes, and show them more mercy as suppliants. Moreover, he urged them to deliberate upon their future course, declaring that he would have no fault to find with either decision which they might make. If they should turn their allegiance to the fortunate side, he would attribute their change to necessity; but if they should face the threatening evil and accept danger in defence of liberty, he would not only praise them, but would admire their valour and make himself their leader and fellow combatant, until they had fully tested the ultimate fortunes of their country; and this country was not Utica, nor Adrumetum, but Rome, and had many times by her greatness recovered from more grievous disasters. Besides, he said, many things favoured their salvation and security, and chiefly the fact that they were waging war against a man who was drawn in many opposing ἀνθελκόμενον, Ἰβηρίας τε πρὸς Πομπήϊον ἀφε-6 στώσης τὸν νέον, αὐτῆς τε τῆς Ῥώμης οὐπω δι' ἀήθειαν παντάπασι δεδεγμένης τὸν χαλινόν, ἀλλ' ἀναξιοπαθούσης καὶ συνεξανισταμένης πρὸς πᾶ-σαν μεταβολήν, οὐδὲ τὸν κίνδυνον εἶναι φευκτέον, ἀλλὰ ἔχειν διδάσκαλον τὸν πολέμιον ἀφειδοῦντα τῆς ψυχῆς ἐπὶ ταῖς μεγίσταις ἀδικίαις, οὐχ ὥσπερ ἑαυτοῖς εἰς τὸν εὐτυχέστατον βίον κατορθοῦσιν ἢ πταίουσιν εἰς τὸν εὐκλεέστατον θάνατον τὴν ἀδηλόγητα τοῦ πολέμου τελευτᾶν.

 7 οὐ μὴν ἀλλ' ἐκείνους γε δεῖν ἔφη βουλευέσθαι 789 καθ' ἑαυτούς, συνευχόμενος ἀντὶ τῆς πρόσθεν ἀρετῆς καὶ προθυμίας αὐτοῖς τὰ δόξαντα συνενεγκεῖν.

LX. Τοιαῦτα τοῦ Κάτωνος εἰπόντος, ἦσαν μὲν οἱ καὶ τοῖς λόγοις ἀγόμενοι πρὸς τὸ θαρρεῖν, οἱ δὲ πλείστοι πρὸς τὸ ἀδεῆς καὶ γενναῖον αὐτοῦ καὶ φιλάνθρωπον ὀλίγου δεῖν ἐκλαθόμενοι τῶν παρόντων, ὡς μόνον ὄντα τοῦτον ἀήττητον ἡγε-μόνα καὶ πάσης κρείττονα τύχης, ἐδέοντο χρήσθαι καὶ σώμασιν αὐτῶν καὶ χρήμασι καὶ ὄπλοις, ὅπως αὐτὸς ἔγνωκε· κρείττον γὰρ ἐκείνῳ πειθομένους ἀποθανεῖν ἢ σώζεσθαι προδόντας ἀρετὴν τσοαύτην.

2 Εἰπόντος δέ τινος ὡς χρή ψηφίσασθαι δούλοις ἐλευθερίαν, καὶ τῶν πλείστων συνεπαινεσάντων, οὐκ ἔφη τοῦτο ποιήσειν ὁ Κάτων· οὐ γὰρ εἶναι νόμιμον οὐδὲ δίκαιον, αὐτῶν μέντοι τῶν δεσποτῶν ἀφιέντων τοὺς ἐν ἡλικίᾳ δέχεσθαι. γενομένων δὲ πολλῶν ὑποσχέσεων κελεύσας ἀπογράφεσθαι
 3 τὸν βουλόμενον ἀπηλλάττετο. καὶ μετὰ μικρὸν

CATO THE YOUNGER

directions by the exigencies of the times. For Spain had gone over to the younger Pompey, and Rome herself had not yet altogether accepted the bit to which she was so unaccustomed, but was impatient of her lot and ready to rise up unitedly at any change in the situation. Nor, he assured them, was danger a thing to be shunned, but they must learn a lesson from their enemy, who spared not his life in perpetrating the greatest wrongs, while in their own case, so different from his, the uncertainties of war would end in a most happy life, if they were successful, or in a most glorious death, if they failed. However, it was for them to deliberate by themselves, he said, and in return for their former bravery and zeal he joined them in praying that what they decided might be for their advantage.

LX. When Cato had thus spoken, there were some whom his words merely restored to confidence, but the majority, in view of his fearlessness, nobility, and generosity, almost forgot their present troubles in the conviction that he alone was an invincible leader and superior to every fortune, and they begged him to use their lives and property and arms as he himself judged best; for it was better to die as his willing followers than to save their lives by betraying such virtue as his.

And now someone proposed that they should pass a vote giving freedom to the slaves, and the majority approved; but Cato said he would not do this, since it was not lawful or right; if, however, the masters of their own accord gave up their slaves, those slaves who were of military age should be accepted. Many promises to do this were made, and after ordering a list to be made of all who were willing, Cato withἤκεν αὐτῷ γράμματα παρὰ Ἰόβα καὶ Σκηπίωνος, Ἰόβα μὲν ἐν ὄρει κεκρυμμένου μετ' ὀλίγων ἐρωτῶντος ὃ τι πράττειν δέδοκται τῷ Κάτωνι· καὶ γὰρ περιμενεῖν Ἰτύκην ἐκλιπόντα καὶ πολιορκουμένῳ μετὰ στρατιᾶς ἐπιβοηθήσειν, Σκηπίωνος δὲ πρὸς ἄκρα τινὶ ναυλοχοῦντος οὐ πόρρω τῆς Ἰτύκης ἐπὶ τοῖς αὐτοῖς караδοκοῦντος.

- LXI. Ἔδοξεν οὖν τῷ Κάτωνι τοὺς γραμματοφόρους ἐπισχεῖν, ἄχρι οὗ βεβαιώσῃ τὰ παρὰ τῶν τριακοσίων. οἱ μὲν γὰρ ἀπὸ βουλῆς ἦσαν πρόθυμοι, καὶ τοὺς οἰκέτας εὐθύς ἀφιέντες ἐλευθέρους ὤπλιζον· τῶν δὲ τριακοσίων, ἅτε δὴ πλωτικῶν καὶ δανειστικῶν ἀνθρώπων καὶ τὸ πλεῖστον ἐν τοῖς οἰκέταις τῆς οὐσίας ἐχόντων, οὐ πολὺν οἱ Κάτωνος λόγοι χρόνον ἐμμείναντες ἐξερρήσαν·
- 2 καθάπερ γὰρ τῶν σωμάτων τὰ μανὰ δέχεται ῥαδίως τὴν θερμότητα καὶ πάλιν μεθίησι, τοῦ πυρὸς ἀπαχθέντος ψυχούμενα, παραπλησίως ἐκείνους ὁ μὲν Κάτων ὀρώμενος ἀνεξωπύρει καὶ διεθέρμαινεν, αὐτοὺς δὲ ἑαυτοῖς λόγον διδόντας ὁ Καίσαρος φόβος ἐξέκρουσε τῆς πρὸς Κάτωνα καὶ τὸ καλὸν αἰδοῦς. “Τίνες γάρ,” ἔφασαν, “ὄντες, τίνι τὸ προστασσόμενον ποιεῖν ἀπαξιού-
- 3 μεν; οὐχὶ Καίσαρ μὲν οὗτος εἰς ὃν ἡ Ῥωμαίων ἅπασα περιέστηκεν ἰσχύς; ἡμῶν δὲ Σκηπίων οὐδεὶς οὐδὲ Πομπηῖος οὐδὲ Κάτων. ἀλλὰ ἐν οἷς καιροῖς πάντες ἀνθρωποὶ ταπεινότερα τῶν προσηκόντων διὰ φόβον φρονοῦσιν, ἐν τούτοις ἡμεῖς ὑπερμαχοῦντες τῆς Ῥωμαίων ἐλευθερίας πολεμοῦμεν ἐξ Ἰτύκης ὧς Κάτων μετὰ Πομπηίου Μάγνου φεύγων ὑφέϊτο τῆς Ἰταλίας; καὶ δού-

CATO THE YOUNGER

drew. After a little while there came to him letters from Juba and Scipio. Juba, who was hidden on a mountain with a few men, asked what Cato had decided to do; for if he abandoned Utica, Juba would wait for him, and if he underwent a siege, Juba would come to his aid with an army. Scipio, who was stationed with his fleet off a certain headland not far from Utica, awaited Cato's decision in the same way.

LXI. Accordingly, Cato decided to detain the bearers of the letters until he felt sure of the attitude of the three hundred. For the Romans of senatorial rank were eager in his cause, and after promptly manumitting their slaves, were arming them; but as for the three hundred, since they were men engaged in navigation and money-lending and had the greater part of their property in slaves, the words of Cato did not long abide in their minds, but lapsed away. For just as porous bodies readily receive heat and as readily yield it up again and grow cold when the fire is removed, in like manner these men, when they saw Cato, were filled with warmth and kindled into flame; but when they came to think matters over by themselves, their fear of Caesar drove away their regard for Cato and for honour. "Who, pray, are we," they said, "and who is he whose commands we are refusing to obey? Is he not Caesar, upon whom the whole power of Rome has devolved? And not one of us is a Scipio, or a Pompey, or a Cato. But at a time when all men are led by fear to think more humbly than they ought to think, at such a time shall we fight in defence of the liberty of Rome, and wage war in Utica against a man before whom Cato, with Pompey the Great, fled and gave up Italy? And λους ἐλευθεροῦμεν κατὰ Καίσαρος, οἷς αὐτοῖς ἐλευθερίας, ὅσον ἂν ἐκεῖνος θέλῃ, μέτεστιν; ἀλλ' ἔτι νῦν, ὦ μοχθηροί, γνόντες ἑαυτοὺς παραιτώμεθα τὸν κρατοῦντα καὶ πέμψωμεν τοὺς δεησομένους."

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- 4 Ταῦτα οἱ μετριώτατοι τῶν τριακοσίων παρήνουν· οἱ δὲ πλείστοι τοῖς συγκλητικοῖς ἐπεβούλευον, ὡς, εἰ τούτους συλλάβοιεν, ἰλασόμενοι τὴν πρὸς αὐτοὺς ὀργὴν τοῦ Καίσαρος.

LXII. Ὁ δὲ Κάτων ὑπονοῶν τὴν μεταβολὴν οὐκ ἤλεγχε, τῷ μέντοι Σκηπίωνι καὶ τῷ Ἴόβῳ γράψας ἀπέχεσθαι τῆς Ἰτύκης ἀπιστία τῶν τριακοσίων ἐξέπεμψε τοὺς γραμματοφόρους. τῶν δὲ ἰππέων οἱ διαφυγόντες ἀπὸ τῆς μάχης, ἀριθμὸς οὐκ εὐκαταφρόνητος, προσελάσαντες τῇ Ἰτύκῃ πέμπουσι πρὸς τὸν Κάτωνα τρεῖς ἄνδρας οὐ τὴν
 2 αὐτὴν γνώμην ἀπὸ πάντων ἔχοντας. οἱ μὲν γὰρ ἀπιέναι πρὸς Ἴόβαν, οἱ δὲ τῷ Κάτωνι προσχωρεῖν ὤρμητο, τοὺς δὲ καὶ δέος εἶχεν εἰς Ἰτύκην παριέναι. ταῦτα ὁ Κάτων ἀκούσας τοῖς μὲν τριακοσίοις ἐκέλευσε προσέχειν Μάρκον Ῥούβριον, ἀτρέμα τὰς ἀπογραφὰς τῶν ἐλευθερούντων
 3 δεχόμενον καὶ μὴ προσβιαζόμενον, αὐτὸς δὲ τοὺς συγκλητικοὺς ἀναλαβὼν προῆλθεν ἔξω τῆς Ἰτύκης, καὶ τοῖς ἰππάρχοις ἐνέτυχε δεόμενος μὴ προέσθαι Ῥωμαίων ἄνδρας ἀπὸ βουλῆς τοσούτους μηδὲ Ἴόβαν ἐλέσθαι στρατηγὸν ἀντὶ Κάτωνος, ἀλλὰ σώζεσθαι κοινῇ καὶ σώζειν, παρελθόντας εἰς πόλιν οὔτε κατὰ κράτος ἀλώσιμον εἰς shall we give our slaves freedom in opposition to Caesar, we who ourselves have only as much freedom as he may wish to give us? Nay, before it is too late, poor wretches, let us know ourselves, crave the conqueror's grace, and send men to entreat him."

CATO THE YOUNGER

This was the course which the more moderate of the three hundred advised; but the majority of them were laying a plot against the men of senatorial rank, in the hope that by seizing these they might mitigate Caesar's wrath against themselves.

LXII. Cato suspected their change of heart, but would not tax them with it. However, he wrote to Scipio and Juba advising them to keep away from Utica, because the three hundred were not to be trusted, and sent away the letter-bearers. And now the horsemen who had escaped from the battle, in numbers quite considerable, rode up to Utica and sent three of their number to Cato. These men, however, did not bring the same proposition from the whole body. For one party among them was bent on going off to Juba, another wanted to join Cato, while a third was prevented by fear from entering Utica. On hearing their views, Cato ordered Marcus Rubrius to attend to the three hundred; he was to accept quietly the lists of those who gave freedom to their slaves, and was to use no compulsion. But Cato himself took the men of senatorial rank and went forth outside of Utica. Here he conferred with the leaders of the horsemen, entreating them not to abandon so great a number of Roman senators, and not to choose Juba as their commander instead of Cato, but to save others as well as save themselves by coming into a city which could not be taken by storm,

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἔτη τε πάμπολλα σίτον καὶ τὴν ἄλλην παρα-4 σκευὴν ἔχουσαν. ταῦτα δὲ καὶ τῶν συγκλητικῶν δεομένων καὶ δακρύνοντων οἱ μὲν ἵππαρχοι διελέ-γοντο τοῖς ἱππεύσιν, ὁ δὲ Κάτων ἐπὶ χώματός τινος καθίσας μετὰ τῶν συγκλητικῶν ἀνέμεινε τὰς ἀποκρίσεις.

LXIII. Ἐν δὲ τούτῳ παρῆν ὁ Ῥούβριος σὺν ὀργῇ κατηγορῶν τῶν τριακοσίων ἀκοσίαν πολ-λὴν καὶ θόρυβον, ὡς ἀφισταμένων καὶ διατα-ραπτόντων τὴν πόλιν. ἐφ' οἷς οἱ μὲν ἄλλοι παντάπασιν ἀπογνόντες ἑαυτῶν εἰς δάκρυα καὶ ὄδυρμους ἐξέπεσον, ὁ δὲ Κάτων ἐκείνους τε θαρ-2 ἀναμείναι κελεύων. οἱ δὲ ἀπὸ τῶν ἱππέων ἤκου οὐ μέτρια προστάττοντες· ἔφασαν γὰρ οὔτε Ἴοβα δεῖσθαι μισθοδοτοῦντος οὔτε Καίσαρα φοβεῖσθαι Κάτωνος αὐτῶν ἄρχοντος, Ἴτυκαίους δέ, Φοίνιξιν ἀνθρώποις εὐμεταβόλοις, συγκαθείργνησθαι δει-νὸν εἶναι· καὶ γὰρ εἰ νῦν ἀτρεμοῦσιν, ὅταν 3 Καίσαρ ἐπίῃ, συνεπιθήσεσθαι καὶ προδώσειν.
 εἴπερ οὖν δεῖται τις αὐτῶν συμπολεμούντων καὶ συμπαρόντων, ἐκβαλὼν ἅπαντας Ἴτυκαίους ἢ διαφθείρας, οὕτως εἰς πόλιν καθαρὰν πολεμίων καὶ βαρβάρων καλείτω. ταῦτα ὁ Κάτων ἄγρια μὲν δεινῶς ἠγεῖτο καὶ βάρβαρα, πράως δὲ ἀπε-κρίνατο βουλευσεσθαι μετὰ τῶν τριακοσίων.
 4 Καὶ παρελθὼν αὐθις εἰς τὴν πόλιν ἐνετύγχανε τοῖς ἀνδράσιν οὐκέτι σκῆψεις οὐδὲ παραγωγὰς πλασσομένοις ὑπ' αἰδοῦς πρὸς αὐτόν, ἀντικρυς δὲ χαλεπαίνουσιν εἴ τις αὐτοὺς βιάζοιτο πολεμεῖν Καίσαρι μὴ δυναμένους μηδὲ βουλομένους. ἔνιοι

CATO THE YOUNGER

and had grain and other requisite provision for very many years. In these entreaties the senators also joined, and with tears; whereupon the leaders of the horsemen discussed the matter with the horsemen, while Cato sat down on a mound with the senators and awaited the answers.

LXIII. At this juncture Rubrius came up, wrathfully denouncing the three hundred for great disorder and tumult, inasmuch as they were falling away and throwing the city into confusion. Thereupon the other Romans altogether despaired of their case and burst into tears and lamentations; but Cato tried to encourage them, and sent to the three hundred bidding them await his coming. And now the spokesmen of the horsemen came with immoderate demands. They said they neither wanted Juba for a paymaster, nor feared Caesar if Cato were their leader, but that to be shut up with the people of Utica, a fickle Phoenician folk, was a fearful thing; for even though they were quiet now, whenever Caesar came up against them they would play the traitor and aid him in his attacks. If, therefore, any one wanted their aid in war and their presence, he must first drive out or destroy all the people of Utica, and then invite the horsemen into a city that was free from Barbarians and enemies. This proposal Cato regarded as excessively barbarous and cruel, but he returned a mild answer, saying that he would advise with the three hundred.

So he went back into the city, where he found the men no longer manufacturing pretexts or evasions out of regard for him, but downright angry that any one should try to force them to war with Caesar when they were neither able nor willing. And some of δὲ καὶ παρεφθέγγοντο περὶ τῶν συγκλητικῶν, ὡς καθεκτέον ἐν τῇ πόλει Καίσαρος προσιόντος.

5 ἀλλὰ τοῦτο μὲν¹ ὡς οὐκ ἀκούσας ὁ Κάτων παρ-ῆκε· καὶ γὰρ ἦν ὑποκωφότερος· ὡς δέ τις αὐτῷ προσελθὼν ἀπήγγειλε τοὺς μὲν ἵππεῖς ἀπιέναι, φοβηθεῖς μὴ παντάπασιν οἱ τριακόσιοι κατὰ τῶν συγκλητικῶν ἀπονοηθῶσιν, ἐβάδιζε μετὰ τῶν φίλων ἐξαναστάς· καὶ θεασάμενος ἤδη προκεχω-6 ρηκότας ἵππον λαβὼν ἐδίωκε πρὸς αὐτούς. οἱ δὲ ιδόντες ἄσμενοι προσελαύνοντα καὶ ἐδέξαντο καὶ παρεκάλουν σώζεσθαι μετ' αὐτῶν. τότε καὶ δακρῦσαι τὸν Κάτωνά φασιν ὑπὲρ τῶν συγκλητικῶν δεόμενον καὶ προτείνοντα τὰς χεῖρας, ἐνίων δὲ καὶ τοὺς ἵππους ἀναστρέφοντα καὶ τῶν ὄπλων ἀντι-λαμβανόμενον, μέχρι οὐ κατειργάσατο τὴν γοῦν ἡμέραν ἐκείνην ἐπιμείναντας ἀσφαλῆ τοῖς ἀν-δράσι φυγὴν παρασχεῖν.

LXIV. Ὡς οὖν ἔχων αὐτοὺς ἀφίκετο καὶ τοὺς μὲν ἐπὶ τὰς πύλας κατέστησε, τοῖς δὲ τὴν ἄκραν φυλάττειν παρέδωκεν, ἔδεισαν οἱ τριακόσιοι μὴ δίκην δῶσι τῆς μεταβολῆς· καὶ πρὸς τὸν Κάτωνα πέμποντες ἐδέοντο πάντως ἀφικέσθαι πρὸς αὐτούς. οἱ δὲ συγκλητικοὶ περιχυθέντες οὐκ εἶων, οὐδὲ ἔφασαν προήσεσθαι τὸν κηδεμόνα καὶ σω-2 τήρα τοῖς ἀπίστοις καὶ προδόταις. σαφεστάτη γὰρ, ὡς εἰοικεν, αἴσθησις τότε παρέστη καὶ πόθος καὶ θαῦμα τῆς τοῦ Κάτωνος ἀρετῆς πᾶσιν ὁμαλῶς τοῖς ἐν τῇ Ἰτύκῃ γενομένοις, ὡς οὐδὲν ἄρα κίβδηλον οὐδὲ ἀπατηλὸν ἐμέμικτο τοῖς πραττο-μένοις ὑπ' αὐτοῦ.

Πάλαι δὲ ἄνθρωπος ἑαυτὸν ἐγνωκῶς ἀνελεῖν

¹ μὲν bracketed by Coraës and Bekker.

CATO THE YOUNGER

them actually muttered that the men of senatorial rank ought to be detained in the city while Caesar was approaching. But this Cato let pass, as though he had not heard it (and indeed he was somewhat deaf); when, however, men came to him with tidings that the horsemen were going away, he was afraid that the three hundred might become altogether desperate in their hostility to the senators, and therefore rose up and set out on foot with his friends; and when he perceived that the horsemen had already gone on, he took a horse and hastened after them. The horsemen were glad when they saw him riding up, and greeted him, and exhorted him to save himself with them. Then, it is said, Cato actually burst into tears as he begged with outstretched hands in behalf of the senators, even trying to turn back the horses of some of the horsemen and laying hold of their arms, until he prevailed upon them to remain there that day at least, and to make the flight of the senators safe.

LXIV. Accordingly, when he came to the city with them, stationed some of them at the gates, and committed the citadel to others to guard, the three hundred were afraid they might be punished for their change of allegiance, and sending to Cato they begged him by all means to come to them. But the senators crowded about him and would not let him go, declaring that they would not give up their saviour and guardian to treacherous and faithless men. For by that time all the inhabitants of Utica alike most clearly perceived and fondly admired the virtuous qualities of Cato, convinced that nothing deceitful or spurious entered into what he did.

But for a long time the man had determined to δεινούς πόνους ἐπόνει καὶ φροντίδας καὶ ὠδύνας εἶχεν ὑπὲρ ἄλλων, ὅπως εἰς ἀσφαλές καταστήσας 3 ἅπαντας ἀπαλλάξαιτο τοῦ ζῆν. οὐ γὰρ ἦν ἀδη- 791 λος ἢ πρὸς τὸν θάνατον αὐτοῦ φορά, καίπερ οὐ φάσκοντος. ὑπήκουσεν οὖν τότε τοῖς τριακοσίοις παραμυθησάμενος τοὺς συγκλητικούς· καὶ μόνος ἦκε πρὸς αὐτοὺς χάριν ἔχειν ὁμολογοῦντας καὶ δεομένους τὰ μὲν ἄλλα χρῆσθαι καὶ πιστεύειν, εἰ δὲ Κάτωνας οὐκ εἰσὶν οὐδὲ τὸ Κάτωνος φρόνημα 4 χωροῦσιν, οἰκτεῖρειν τὴν ἀσθένειαν αὐτῶν· ἐγνω-κότες δ' οὖν Καίσαρος δεῖσθαι καὶ πέμπειν πρὸς αὐτόν, ὑπὲρ ἐκείνου μάλιστα καὶ πρώτου ποιήσε-σθαι δέησιν· εἰ δὲ μὴ πείθοιεν, οὐδ' αὐτοῖς διδομένην δέξεσθαι τὴν χάριν, ἀλλ' ἄχρι ἂν ἐμπνέωσι πολεμήσειν ὑπὲρ ἐκείνου.

Πρὸς ταῦτα ὁ Κάτων ἐπαινέσας τὴν εὐνοίαν ἔφη χρῆναι τῆς αὐτῶν σωτηρίας ἕνεκα πέμπειν 5 κατὰ τάχος, ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ δὲ μὴ δεῖσθαι· κεκρατη-μένων γὰρ εἶναι δέησιν καὶ ἀδικούντων παραίτησιν· αὐτὸς δὲ οὐ μόνον ἀήττητος γεγονέναι παρὰ πάντα τὸν βίον, ἀλλὰ καὶ νικᾶν ἐφ' ὅσον ἐβούλετο καὶ κρατεῖν Καίσαρος τοῖς καλοῖς καὶ δικαίοις· ἐκείνον δ' εἶναι τὸν ἐαλωκότα καὶ νενικημένον· ἃ γὰρ ἠρνεῖτο πράττων κατὰ τῆς πα-τρίδος πάλαι, νῦν ἐξηλέγχθαι καὶ πεφωρᾶσθαι.

LXV. Τοιαῦτα διαλεχθεὶς τοῖς τριακοσίοις ἀπηλλάττετο· καὶ πυθόμενος Καίσαρα πᾶσαν ἄγοντα τὴν στρατιὰν ἤδη καθ' ὁδὸν εἶναι, “Πα-παί,” εἶπεν, “ὡς ἐπ' ἄνδρας ἡμᾶς ἐκείνος.” καὶ τραπόμενος πρὸς τοὺς συγκλητικούς ἐκέλευε μὴ μέλλειν, ἀλλ' ἕως παραμένουσιν οἱ ἵππεῖς σώζε-

CATO THE YOUNGER

destroy himself, and he was undergoing dreadful toils and suffering anxiety and pain in behalf of others, that he might put them all in the way of safety before he took his leave of life. Indeed, there was no secret about his resolution to die, although he said nothing about it. Accordingly, after comforting the senators, he obeyed the call of the three hundred. He came alone to them, and they thanked him, and begged him in all other ways to trust and make use of them, but if they were not Catos and could not carry the large thoughts of Cato, to have pity on their weakness; and now that they had determined to send to Caesar and pray for his mercy, for Cato first of all they would make their prayers; and if they could not prevail with Caesar, they would not accept the grace which he might offer to them, but as long as they had breath would fight for Cato.

In reply to this, after praising their good will, Cato said that to secure their own safety they ought to send to Caesar with all speed, but they must make no prayer for him; prayer belonged to the conquered, and the craving of grace to those who had done wrong; but for his part he had not only been unvanquished all his life, but was actually a victor now as far as he chose to be, and a conqueror of Caesar in all that was honourable and just; Caesar was the one who was vanquished and taken; for the hostile acts against his country which he had long denied, were now detected and proven.

LXV. After this discourse to the three hundred, he withdrew; and on learning that Caesar with all his army was already on the march, "Aha!" he said, "he thinks we are men!" Then turning to the senators he bade them not delay, but save themselves

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- σθαι. καὶ τὰς μὲν ἄλλας ἀπέκλεισε θύρας, μιᾷ δὲ τῇ πρὸς θάλασσαν φερούσῃ¹ τὰ τε πλοῖα τοῖς ὑφ' ἑαυτὸν διένειμε καὶ τάξεως ἐπεμελεῖτο, παύων τὰς ἀδικίας καὶ διαλύων τοὺς θορύβους, καὶ τοὺς
- 2 ἀπόρως ἔχοντας ἐφοδιάζων. ἐπεὶ δὲ Μάρκος Ὀκτάβιος ἄγων δύο τάγματα πλησίον κατεστρατοπέδευσε καὶ πέμπων ἡξίου τὸν Κάτωνα περὶ ἀρχῆς διορίσασθαι πρὸς αὐτόν, ἐκείνῳ μὲν οὐθὲν ἀπεκρίνατο, πρὸς δὲ τοὺς φίλους εἶπεν “Εἶτα θαυμάζομεν ὅπως ἀπόλωλε τὰ πράγματα, τὴν φιλαρχίαν ὀρώντες ἡμῖν ἐν αὐτῷ τῷ ὀλέθρῳ βεβηκόσι παραμένουσαν;”
- 3 Ἐν τούτῳ δὲ τοὺς ἵππεῖς ἀκούσας ἀπίοντας ἤδη φέρειν καὶ ἄγειν τὰ τῶν Ἴτυκαίων ὥσπερ λάφυρα, δρόμῳ συνέτεινε πρὸς αὐτοὺς καὶ τοῖς πρώτοις ἐντυχῶν ἀφηρείτο, τῶν δὲ ἄλλων ἕκαστος ἔφθανε ῥίπτων καὶ κατατιθέμενος, πάντες δὲ ὑπ' αἰσχύνης σιωπῇ καὶ κάτω βλέποντες ἀπήσαν. ὁ δὲ Κάτων εἰς τὴν πόλιν τοὺς Ἴτυκαίους συναγαγὼν ἐδεῖτο περὶ τῶν τριακοσίων, μὴ παροξῦναι Καίσαρα κατ' αὐτῶν, ἀλλὰ καὶ
- 4 κοινῇ τὴν σωτηρίαν πράττειν ἀλλήλοις. εἶτα πάλιν τραπόμενος πρὸς τὴν θάλατταν ἐπεσκόπει τοὺς ἐμβαίνοντας, καὶ τῶν φίλων καὶ ξένων ὅσους ἔπεισεν ἡσπάζετο καὶ προῦπεμπε. τὸν δὲ λῆδον οὐκ ἔπεισε λαβεῖν πλοῖον, οὐδὲ ᾤετο δεῖν ἀποτρέπειν περιεχόμενον τοῦ πατρός. ἦν δὲ τις Στατύλλιος, ἀνὴρ τῇ μὲν ἡλικίᾳ νέος, ἰσχυρὸς δὲ τῇ

¹ φερούσῃ after this word one Paris MS. (C) has ἐχρήτο πρὸς ἔξοδον (he used as an exit). Bekker adopts what other editors regard as a gloss, adding also καί; Sintenis² assumes a lacuna.

CATO THE YOUNGER

while the horsemen were still there. He also closed the other gates of the city, and stationing himself at the one leading to the sea, he assigned transports to those under his command, and tried to keep things in order, stopping deeds of wrong, quelling tumults, and supplying stores to those who were destitute. And when Marcus Octavius with two legions encamped near by and sent to Cato demanding that he come to terms with him about the command in the province, Cato would make no reply to him, but said to his friends: "Can we then wonder that our cause is lost, when we see that the love of command abides with us though we are standing on the brink of destruction?"

At this juncture, hearing that the horsemen, as they went away, were already plundering the people of Utica as though their property was booty, he ran to them as fast as he could; from the first whom he met he took away their plunder, but the rest, every man of them, made haste to lay down or throw away what they had, and all felt so ashamed that they went off in silence and with downcast looks. Then Cato, after calling the people of Utica together into the city, begged them not to embitter Caesar against the three hundred, but to unite with one another in securing safety for all. Next, he betook himself again to the sea and superintended the embarkation there, embracing and escorting on their way all the friends and acquaintances whom he could persuade to go. His son, however, he could not persuade to take ship, nor did he think it his duty to try to turn the young man from his purpose of clinging to his father. But there was one Statyllius, a man who was young in years, but minded γνώμη βουλόμενος εἶναι καὶ τοῦ Κάτωνος ἀπομι-5 μείσθαι τὴν ἀπάθειαν. τοῦτον ἠξίου πλεῖν· καὶ γὰρ ἦν καταφανὴς μισοκαίσαρ· ὡς δὲ οὐκ ἠθέλεν, Ἀπολλωνίδῃ τῷ Στωϊκῷ καὶ Δημητρίῳ τῷ Περιπατητικῷ προσβλέψας ὁ Κάτων, “Ἐμέτερον,” εἶπεν, “ἔργον οἰδοῦντα τοῦτον μαλάξαι καὶ καταρτίσαι πρὸς τὸ συμφέρον.”

 αὐτὸς δὲ τοὺς λοιποὺς συνεκπέμπων καὶ χρημα-τίζων τοῖς δεομένοις τὴν τε νύκτα διέτριβε περὶ ταῦτα καὶ τῆς ἐπιούσης ἡμέρας τὸ πλεῖστον μέρος.

LXVI. Ἐπεὶ δὲ Λεύκιος Καίσαρ, οἰκείος μὲν ὦν Καίσαρος ἐκείνου, μέλλων δὲ πρεσβεῦειν ὑπὲρ τῶν τριακοσίων, παρεκάλει τὸν Κάτωνα λόγον αὐτῷ συνυποθέσθαι πιθανὸν ᾧ χρήσεται περὶ ἐκείνων, “ὑπὲρ σοῦ μὲν γὰρ αὐτοῦ καὶ χειρῶν ἐμοὶ καλὸν ἄψασθαι καὶ γόνασι προσπεσεῖν Καίσαρος,” οὐκ εἶα ταῦτα ποιεῖν ὁ Κάτων αὐτόν. 792 2 “Ἐμοὶ γάρ,” εἶπεν, “εἰ σῶζεσθαι χάριτι Καί-σαρος ἐβουλόμην, αὐτῷ βαδιστέον ἦν πρὸς ἐκεῖνον μόνον. οὐ βούλομαι δὲ τῷ τυράννῳ χάριν ἔχειν ὑπὲρ ὧν παρανομεῖ. παρανομεῖ δὲ σῶζων ὡς κύριος ὧν αὐτῷ δεσπύζειν οὐδὲν προσῆκεν.
 ὅπως μέντοι παραιτήσῃ τοὺς τριακοσίους κοινῇ 3 σκοπῶμεν, εἰ βούλει.” γενόμενος δὲ πρὸς τούτῳ μετὰ τοῦ Λευκίου τὸν υἱὸν αὐτῷ συνέστησε καὶ τοὺς ἐταίρους ἀπιόντι· καὶ προπέμψας ἐκείνον καὶ δεξιωσάμενος ἐπανῆλθεν οἴκαδε, καὶ τὸν υἱὸν καὶ τοὺς φίλους συναγαγὼν ἄλλα τε πολλὰ διε-λέχθη καὶ πολιτείας ἀπέειπεν ἄψασθαι τῷ μεира-κίῳ· τὸ μὲν γὰρ ἀξίως Κάτωνος οὐκέτι τὰ πρά-

CATO THE YOUNGER

to be strong in purpose and to imitate Cato's calmness. This man Cato insisted should take ship; for he was a notorious hater of Caesar. But when Statyllius would not consent, Cato turned his eyes upon Apollonides the Stoic and Demetrius the Peripatetic, saying: "It is your task to reduce this man's swollen pride and restore him to conformity with his best interests." He himself, however, continued to assist the rest in getting off, and to supply the needy with ways and means, and was thus engaged all through the night and the greater part of the following day.

LXVI. Lucius Caesar, a kinsman of the great Caesar, was about to go on an embassy to him in behalf of the three hundred, and requested Cato to suggest to him a convincing speech which he might employ in the case; "for," said he, "in thine own behalf it were well for me to fall down at Caesar's knees and clasp his hands." But Cato would not suffer him to do this. "For if," said he, "I were willing to be saved by grace of Caesar, I ought to go to him in person and see him alone; but I am unwilling to be under obligations to the tyrant for his illegal acts. And he acts illegally in saving, as if their master, those over whom he has no right at all to be the lord. However, if it is thy wish, let us consider jointly how thou mayest obtain mercy for the three hundred." After his conference with Lucius on this matter, he presented his son and his companions to him as he was going away; and after escorting him on his way and bidding him farewell, he came back home, called together his son and his friends, and discoursed with them on many subjects. In particular, he forbade the young man to engage in political matters; for to do so worthily of a Cato was no longer possible, as γματα δέξασθαι, τὸ δὲ ἄλλως αἰσχρὸν εἶναι. καὶ 4 περὶ ἐσπέραν ἤδη τρέπεται πρὸς τὸ βαλανεῖον.

 Ἐν δὲ τῷ λούεσθαι τοῦ Στατύλλιου μνησθεὶς καὶ μέγα φθεγξάμενος, “Ἐξέπεμψας,” εἶπεν, “ὦ Ἀπολλωνίδη, τὸν Στατύλλιον ἀπὸ τοῦ φρονή-ματος ἐκείνου καθελών; καὶ πέπλευκεν ὁ ἀνὴρ μηδὲ ἀσπασάμενος ἡμᾶς;” “Πόθεν;” εἶπεν ὁ Ἀπολλωνίδης· “καίτοι πολλὰ διελέχθημεν· ἀλλὰ ὑψηλὸς ἐστὶ καὶ ἄτρεπτος, καὶ μένειν φησὶ καὶ πρᾶττειν ὃ τι ἂν σὺ πρᾶττης.” πρὸς ταῦτά φασι τὸν Κάτωνα μειδιᾶσαι καὶ εἰπεῖν· “Ἄλλὰ τοῦτο μὲν αὐτίκα φανείται.”

LXVII. Λουσάμενος δὲ μετὰ πολλῶν ἐδείπνει καθήμενος, ὥσπερ εἰώθει μετὰ τὴν μάχην· οὐ γὰρ κατεκλίθη πλὴν καθεύδων· συνεδείπνουσι δὲ πάντες οἱ ἐταῖροι καὶ τῶν Ἰτυκαίων οἱ ἄρχοντες.
 καὶ μετὰ τὸ δεῖπνον ὁ πότος ἔσχε μούσαν πολλήν καὶ χάριν, ἄλλων ἐπ’ ἄλλοις λόγων φιλοσόφων κυκλούντων, ἄχρι οὗ περιῆλθεν ἡ ζήτησις εἰς ταῦτα δὴ τὰ παράδοξα καλούμενα τῶν Στωϊκῶν, τὸ μόνον εἶναι τὸν ἀγαθὸν ἐλεύθερον, δούλους δὲ 2 τοὺς φαύλους ἅπαντας. ἐνταῦθα δὴ, ὡς εἰκός, ἀντιβάντος τοῦ Περιπατητικοῦ, σφοδρὸς ἐμπεισῶν ὁ Κάτων καὶ τόνον προσθεὶς καὶ τραχύτητα φωνῆς ἀπέτεινε πορρωτάτω τὸν λόγον, ἀγῶνι θαυμαστῷ χρησάμενος, ὥστε μηδένα λαθεῖν ὅτι τῷ βίῳ πέρας ἔγνωκεν ἐπιθεὶς ἀπαλλάττεσθαι τῶν παρόντων. διὸ καὶ μετὰ τὸν λόγον σιωπῆς καὶ κατηφείας γενομένης ἐν πᾶσιν, ἀναλαμβάνων αὐτοὺς καὶ ἀπάγων τῆς ὑποψίας ὁ Κάτων αὖθις ὑπὲρ τῶν παρόντων ἐνέβαλλεν ἐρωτήματα καὶ

CATO THE YOUNGER

things were going, and to do so otherwise would be disgraceful. And presently, towards evening, he betook himself to the bath.

But while he was bathing he bethought himself of Statyllius, and called out in loud tones, saying: "Apollonides, didst thou send off Statyllius? And didst thou bring him down from that lofty purpose of his? And has the man set sail without even bidding me good-bye?" "By no means," said Apollonides; "although we reasoned much with him; but he is lofty and unbending, and says he will remain and do whatever thou doest." At this, we are told, Cato smiled, and said: "Well, we shall see about that presently."

LXVII. After his bath, he took supper with a large company, sitting at table, as was his wont after Pharsalus; indeed, he lay down only when he slept;¹ and there were at supper with him all his companions, and the magistrates of Utica. After supper, there was much literary and genial discourse over the wine, and one philosophical tenet after another made the rounds, until there came up the enquiry into what were called the "paradoxes" of the Stoics, namely, that the good man alone is free, and that the bad are all slaves. Here, as was to be expected, the Peripatetic made objections, whereupon Cato broke in with vehemence, and in loud and harsh tones maintained his argument at greatest length and with astonishing earnestness, so that everyone perceived that he had made up his mind to put an end to his life and free himself from his present troubles. Therefore, as all were dejected and silent after his discourse, Cato tried to revive their spirits and remove their suspicions by once more putting questions and expressing anxiety about what was going on, implying that he feared for those φροντίδας, ὡς δεδιὼς μὲν ὑπὲρ τῶν πλεόντων, δεδιὼς δὲ ὑπὲρ τῶν ὀδεούντων ἐρημίαν ἀνυδρον καὶ βύρβαρον.

¹ Cf. chapter lvi. 4.

- LXVIII. Οὕτω δὲ διαλύσας τὸ σύνδειπνον, καὶ περιπατήσας μετὰ τῶν φίλων τὸν συνήθη μετὰ τὸ δεῖπνον περίπατον, καὶ τοῖς ἄρχουσι τῶν φυλάκων ἃ καιρὸς ἦν προστάξας, ἀπιὼν εἰς τὸ δωμάτιον ἤδη, τὸν τε παῖδα καὶ τῶν φίλων ἕκαστον μᾶλλον ἢ πρότερον εἰώθει προσαγαγόμενος καὶ φιλοφρονηθεῖς, πάλιν ὑποψίαν παρέσχε
- 2 τοῦ μέλλοντος. εἰσελθὼν δὲ καὶ κατακλιθεὶς ἔλαβεν εἰς χεῖρας τῶν Πλάτωνος διαλόγων τὸν περὶ ψυχῆς· καὶ διελθὼν τοῦ βιβλίου τὸ πλεῖστον καὶ ἀναβλέψας ὑπὲρ κεφαλῆς, ὡς οὐκ εἶδε κρεμάμενον τὸ ξίφος (ὑφήρητο γὰρ ὁ παῖς ἔτι δειπνοῦντος αὐτοῦ), καλέσας οἰκέτην ἠρώτησεν ὅστις λάβοι τὸ ἐγχειρίδιον. σιωπῶντος δὲ ἐκείνου
- 3 πάλιν ἦν πρὸς τῷ βιβλίῳ· καὶ μικρὸν διαλιπὼν, ὥσπερ οὐ σπεύδων οὐδὲ ἐπειγόμενος, ἄλλως δὲ τὸ ξίφος ἐπιζητῶν, ἐκέλευσε κομίσαι. διατριβῆς δὲ γινομένης καὶ μηδενὸς κομίζοντος, ἐξαναγνοὺς τὸ βιβλίον αὐθις ἐκάλει καθ' ἓνα τῶν οἰκετῶν καὶ μᾶλλον ἐνέτεινε τὴν φωνὴν τὸ ξίφος ἀπαιτῶν· ἐνὸς δὲ καὶ πύξ τὸ στόμα πατάξας ἤμαξε τὴν αὐτοῦ χεῖρα, χαλεπαίνων καὶ βοῶν ἤδη μέγα παραδίδοσθαι τῷ πολεμίῳ γυμνὸς ὑπὸ τοῦ παιδὸς αὐτοῦ καὶ τῶν οἰκετῶν, ἄχρι οὗ κλαίων ὁ υἱὸς εἰσέδραμε μετὰ τῶν φίλων καὶ περιπεσὼν ὠδύρετο
- 4 καὶ καθικέτευεν. ὁ δὲ Κάτων ἐξαναστὰς ἐνέβλεψέ τε δεινὸν καὶ “Πότε,” εἶπεν, “ἐγὼ καὶ ποῦ λέληθα παρανοίας ἠλωκῶς, ὅτι διδάσκει μὲν

CATO THE YOUNGER

who were going away by sea, and feared, too, for those whose path lay through a barbarous and waterless desert.

LXVIII. Thus the supper came to an end, and after walking about with his friends as he usually did after supper, he gave the officers of the watch the proper orders, and then retired to his chamber, but not until he had embraced his son and each of his friends with more than his wonted kindness, and thus awakened anew their suspicions of what was to come. After entering his chamber and lying down, he took up Plato's dialogue "On the Soul,"¹ and when he had gone through the greater part of the treatise, he looked up above his head, and not seeing his sword hanging there (for his son had taken it away while Cato was still at supper), called a servant and asked him who had taken the weapon. The servant made no answer, and Cato returned to his book; and a little while after, as if in no haste or hurry, but merely looking for his sword, he bade the servant fetch it. But as there was some delay, and no one brought the weapon, he finished reading his book, and this time called his servants one by one and in louder tones demanded his sword. One of them he smote on the mouth with his fist, and bruised his own hand, angrily crying now in loud tones that his son and his servants were betraying him into the hands of the enemy without arms. At last his son ran in weeping, together with his friends, and after embracing him, betook himself to lamentations and entreaties. But Cato, rising to his feet, took on a solemn look, and said: "When and where, without my knowledge, have I been adjudged a madman, that no

¹ The Phaedo.

οὐδείς οὐδὲ μεταπίθει περὶ ὧν δοκῶ κακῶς βεβουλεύσθαι, κωλύομαι δὲ χρῆσθαι τοῖς ἑμαυτοῦ λογισμοῖς καὶ παροπλίζομαι; τί δ' οὐχὶ καὶ συνδεῖς, ὦ γενναῖε, τὸν πατέρα καὶ τὰς χεῖρας ἀποστρέφεις, μέχρι ἂν ἔλθῶν Καῖσαρ εὖρη με 5 μηδὲ ἀμύνασθαι δυνάμενον; οὐ γὰρ ἐπ' ἑμαυτὸν γε δέομαι ξίφους, ὅπου καὶ τὸ πνεῦμα βραχὺν χρόνον ἐπισχόντα καὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν ἅπαξ πατά-ξαντα πρὸς τὸν τοῖχον ἀποθανεῖν ἔνεστι."

LXIX. Ταῦτα λέγοντος αὐτοῦ τὸ μὲν μεираκιον ἐξῆλθε μετὰ κλαυθμοῦ καὶ πάντες οἱ λοιποὶ τῷ δὲ Δημητρίῳ καὶ τῷ Ἀπολλωνίδῃ μόνοις ὑπο-λειφθεῖσι πρῶτον ἤδη λαλῶν, "Ἡ που καὶ ὑμῖν," ἔφη, "δέδοκται βία κατέχειν ἄνδρα τοσοῦτου ἡλικίας ἐν τῷ βίῳ καὶ καθημένους αὐτοῦ σιωπῇ παραφυλάσσειν, ἢ λόγον ἤκετε κομίζοντες ὡς οὐ δεινὸν οὐδὲ αἰσχρὸν ἐστὶν ἀποροῦντα 2 σωτηρίας ἑτέρας Κάτωνα τὴν ἀπὸ τοῦ πολεμίου περιμένειν; τί οὖν οὐ λέγετε πείθοντες ἡμᾶς ταῦτα καὶ μεταδιδάσκοντες, ἵνα τὰς προτέρας δόξας ἐκείνας καὶ λόγους, οἷς συμβεβιώκαμεν, ἐκβαλόντες καὶ γενόμενοι διὰ Καίσαρα σοφώτεροι μείζονα χάριν εἰδῶμεν αὐτῷ; καίτοι βεβούλευμαι μὲν οὐθὲν ἔγωγε περὶ ἑμαυτοῦ· δεῖ δέ με βουλευ-3 σάμενον εἶναι κύριον οἷς ἔγνωκα χρῆσθαι. βουλεύσομαι δὲ τρόπον τινὰ μεθ' ὑμῶν, βουλευόμενος μετὰ τῶν λόγων οἷς καὶ ὑμεῖς φιλοσοφούντες χρῆσθε. θαρροῦντες οὖν ἄπιτε, καὶ κελεύετε τὸν υἱὸν ἂ μὴ δύναται τὸν πατέρα πείθειν μὴ βιάζεσθαι."

LXX. Πρὸς ταῦτα μὴθὲν ἀντειπόντες οἱ περὶ τὸν Δημήτριον, ἀλλὰ δακρύσαντες ὑπεξῆλθον.

CATO THE YOUNGER

one instructs or tries to convert me in matters wherein I am thought to have made bad decisions, but I am prevented from using my own judgement, and have my arms taken from me? Why, generous boy, dost thou not also tie thy father's hands behind his back, that Caesar may find me unable to defend myself when he comes? Surely, to kill myself I have no need of a sword, when I have only to hold my breath a little while, or dash my head against the wall, and death will come."

LXIX. As Cato said these words the young man went out sobbing, and all the rest also, except Demetrius and Apollonides. These alone remained, and with these Cato began to talk, now in gentler tones. "I suppose," said he, "that ye also have decided to detain in life by force a man as old as I am, and to sit by him in silence and keep watch of him: or are ye come with the plea that it is neither shameful nor dreadful for Cato, when he has no other way of salvation, to await salvation at the hands of his enemy? Why, then, do ye not speak persuasively and convert me to this doctrine, that we may cast away those good old opinions and arguments which have been part of our very lives, be made wiser through Caesar's efforts, and therefore be more grateful to him? And yet I, certainly, have come to no resolve about myself; but when I have come to a resolve, I must be master of the course which I decide to take. And I shall come to a resolve with your aid, as I might say, since I shall reach it with the aid of those doctrines which ye also adopt as philosophers. So go away with a good courage, and bid my son not to try force with his father when he cannot persuade him."

LXX. Without making any reply to this, but bursting into tears, Demetrius and Apollonides slowly

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- εἰσπέμπεται δὲ διὰ παιδίου μικροῦ τὸ ἐγχειρίδιον· καὶ λαβὼν ἐσπάσατο καὶ κατενόησεν. ὡς δὲ εἶδεν ἐστῶτα τὸν ἀθέρα καὶ τὴν ἀκμὴν διαμένουσαν, εἰπὼν, “Νῦν ἐμός εἰμι,” τὸ μὲν ξίφος ἔθηκε, τὸ δὲ βιβλίον αὐθις ἀνεγίνωσκε, καὶ λέγεται δις
- 2 ὄλον διεξελθεῖν. εἶτα κοιμηθεὶς ὕπνον βαθύν, ὥστε τοὺς ἐκτὸς αἰσθέσθαι, περὶ μέσας νύκτας ἐκάλει τῶν ἀπελευθέρων Κλεάνθην τὸν ἱατρὸν καὶ Βούταν, ᾧ μάλιστα πρὸς τὰς πολιτικὰς πράξεις ἐχρήτο. καὶ τοῦτον μὲν ἐπὶ θάλατταν ἔπεμψεν, ὅπως σκεψάμενος εἰ πάντες ἀνηγμένοι τυγχάνουσι, φράσοι πρὸς αὐτόν· τῷ δὲ ἱατρῷ τὴν χεῖρα φλεγμαίνουσαν ὑπὸ τῆς πληγῆς ἦν ἐπληξε
- 3 τὸν οἰκέτην, ἐπιδῆσαι παρέσχε. καὶ τοῦτ' ἐποίησεν ἠδίους ἅπαντας, ὡς ζωτικῶς ἔχοντος αὐτοῦ. μετ' ὀλίγον δὲ παρήν ὁ Βούτας ἀπαγγέλλων τοὺς μὲν ἄλλους ἀνήχθαι, Κράσσον δὲ λείπεσθαι ὑπὸ ἀσχολίας τινός, ὅσον δὲ οὐπω καὶ τοῦτον ἐμβαίνειν, πολὺν δὲ χειμῶνα καὶ μέγα πνεῦμα κατέχειν τὴν θάλατταν. τοῦτο ἀκούσας ὁ Κάτων ἐστέναξεν οἰκτῶ τῶν πλεόντων, καὶ πάλιν ἔπεμψε τὸν Βούταν ἐπὶ θάλατταν, εἴ τις ἄρα παλινδρομήσας δέοιτό τις τῶν ἀναγκαίων, ἀπαγγελοῦντα πρὸς αὐτόν.
- 4 Ἦδη δὲ ὄρνιθες ἦδον, καὶ μικρὸν αὐθις κατηνέχθη πρὸς ὕπνον. ἐπανελθόντος δὲ τοῦ Βούτα καὶ φράσαντος πολλὴν ἠσυχίαν περὶ τοὺς λιμένας εἶναι, προσέταξεν αὐτῷ τὴν θύραν κλείσαι, καὶ καθῆκεν ἑαυτὸν εἰς τὸ κλινίδιον ὡς τὸ λοιπὸν
- 5 ἔτι τῆς νυκτὸς ἀναπαυσόμενος. ἐξελθόντος δὲ τοῦ Βούτα σπασάμενος τὸ ξίφος ἔωσε μὲν ὑπὸ τὸ

CATO THE YOUNGER

withdrew. Then the sword was sent in, carried by a little child, and Cato took it, drew it from its sheath, and examined it. And when he saw that its point was keen and its edge still sharp, he said : " Now I am my own master." Then he laid down the sword and resumed his book, and he is said to have read it through twice. Afterwards he fell into so deep a sleep that those outside the chamber heard him. But about midnight he called two of his freedmen, Cleanthes the physician, and Butas, who was his chief agent in public matters. Butas he sent down to the sea, to find out whether all had set sail successfully, and bring him word ; while to the physician he gave his hand to bandage, since it was inflamed by the blow that he had given the slave. This made everybody more cheerful, since they thought he had a mind to live. In a little while Butas came with tidings that all had set sail except Crassus, who was detained by some business or other, and he too was on the point of embarking ; Butas reported also that a heavy storm and a high wind prevailed at sea. On hearing this, Cato groaned with pity for those in peril on the sea, and sent Butas down again, to find out whether anyone had been driven back by the storm and wanted any necessaries, and to report to him.

And now the birds were already beginning to sing, when he fell asleep again for a little while. And when Butas came and told him that the harbours were very quiet, he ordered him to close the door, throwing himself down upon his couch as if he were going to rest there for what still remained of the night. But when Butas had gone out, Cato drew his sword from its sheath and stabbed himself below

στῆθος, τῇ δὲ χειρὶ κουφότερον διὰ τὴν φλεγμονὴν χρησάμενος οὐκ εὐθὺς ἀπήλλαξεν ἑαυτὸν, ἀλλὰ δυσθανατῶν ἐξέπεσε τῆς κλίνης καὶ ψόφον ἐποί-ησε, καταβαλὼν ἀβάκιόν τι τῶν γεωμετρικῶν παρακείμενον, ὥστε τοὺς θεράποντας αἰσθομένους ἀναβοῆσαι καὶ τὸν υἱὸν αὐτίκα καὶ τοὺς φίλους 794 6 ἐπεισελθεῖν. ἰδόντες δὲ πεφυρμένον αἵματι καὶ τῶν ἐντέρων τὰ πολλὰ προπεπτωκότα, ζῶντα δ' αὐτὸν ἔτι καὶ βλέποντα, δεινῶς μὲν ἅπαντες ἔσχον, ὁ δὲ ἰατρὸς προσελθὼν ἐπειράτο τῶν ἐντέρων ἀτρώτων διαμεινάντων ταῦτά τε καθιστάναι καὶ τὸ τραῦμα διαρράπτειν. ὡς οὖν ἀνήνεγκεν ὁ Κάτων καὶ συνεφρόνησε, τὸν μὲν ἰατρὸν ἀπεώ-σατο, ταῖς χερσὶ δὲ τὰ ἔντερα σπαράξας καὶ τὸ τραῦμα ἐπαναρρήξας ἀπέθανεν.

LXXI. Ἐν ᾧ δὲ οὐκ ἂν τις ᾤετο χρόνῳ τοὺς κατὰ τὴν οἰκίαν πάντας ἡσθῆσθαι τὸ πάθος, ἐπὶ ταῖς θύραις ἦσαν οἱ τριακόσιοι, καὶ μικρὸν ὕστερον ὁ δῆμος ἤθροιστο τῶν Ἴτυκαίων, μιᾶ φωνῇ τὸν εὐεργέτην καὶ σωτῆρα καὶ μόνον ἐλεύθερον 2 καὶ μόνον ἀήττητον καλοῦντων. καὶ ταῦτα ἔπραττον ἀγγελλομένου προσιέναι Καίσαρος· ἀλλ' οὔτε φόβος αὐτοῦς οὔτε κολακεία τοῦ κρατοῦντος οὔτε ἢ πρὸς ἀλλήλους διαφορὰ καὶ στάσις ἀμβλυτέ-ρους ἐποίησε τῆς πρὸς Κάτωνα τιμῆς. κοσμή-σαντες δὲ τὸ σῶμα λαμπρῶς καὶ πομπὴν ἐπιφανῆ παρασχόντες καὶ θάψαντες παρὰ τὴν θάλασσαν, οὐκ οὖν ἀνδριάς ἐφέστηκεν αὐτοῦ ξιφήρης, οὕτως ἐτράποντο πρὸς τὸ σῶζειν ἑαυτοὺς καὶ τὴν πόλιν.

LXXII. Καίσαρ δὲ πυνθανόμενος παρὰ τῶν ἀφικνουμένων ὑπομένειν ἐν Ἰτύκῃ τὸν Κάτωνα μηδὲ φεύγειν, ἀλλὰ τοὺς ἄλλους προπέμπειν,

CATO THE YOUNGER

the breast. His thrust, however, was somewhat feeble, owing to the inflammation in his hand, and so he did not at once dispatch himself, but in his death struggle fell from the couch and made a loud noise by overturning a geometrical abacus that stood near. His servants heard the noise and cried out, and his son at once ran in, together with his friends. They saw that he was smeared with blood, and that most of his bowels were protruding, but that he still had his eyes open and was alive; and they were terribly shocked. But the physician went to him and tried to replace his bowels, which remained uninjured, and to sew up the wound. Accordingly, when Cato recovered and became aware of this, he pushed the physician away, tore his bowels with his hands, rent the wound still more, and so died.

LXXI. Before one would have thought that all in the house could learn of the event, the three hundred were at the door, and a little later the people of Utica had assembled. With one voice they called Cato their saviour and benefactor, the only man who was free, the only one unvanquished. And this they continued to do even when word was brought that Caesar was approaching. But neither fear of the conqueror, nor a desire to flatter him, nor their mutual strife and dissension, could blunt their desire to honour Cato. They decked his body in splendid fashion, gave it an illustrious escort, and buried it near the sea, where a statue of him now stands, sword in hand. Then they turned their thoughts to their own salvation and that of their city.

LXXII. When Caesar learned from people who came to him that Cato was remaining in Utica and not trying to escape, but that he was sending off the αὐτὸν δὲ καὶ τοὺς ἐταίρους καὶ τὸν υἱὸν ἀδεῶς ἀναστρέφεισθαι, δυστέκμαρτον ἠγείτο τὴν γνώμην τοῦ ἀνδρός, ἅτε δὲ τὸν πλείστον λόγον ἔχων ἐκείνου προσήγε μετὰ τῆς δυνάμεως ἐπειγόμενος.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

 2 ὡς δὲ ἤκουσε τὸν θάνατον αὐτοῦ, λέγεται τοσοῦτον εἰπεῖν· “ὦ Κάτων, φθονῶ σοι τοῦ θανάτου· καὶ γὰρ ἐμοὶ σὺ τῆς σαυτοῦ σωτηρίας ἐφθόνησας.” τῷ γὰρ ὄντι σωθῆναι Κάτων ἀνασχομένος ὑπὸ Καίσαρος οὐκ ἂν οὕτω δοκεῖ καταισχύναί τὴν αὐτοῦ δόξαν, ὡς κοσμήσαι τὴν ἐκείνου, τὸ δὲ πραχθὲν ἂν ἄδηλον· εἰκάζεται δὲ τὰ χρηστότερα παρὰ Καίσαρος.

LXXIII. Ἐτελεύτησε δὲ Κάτων ἔτη δυεῖν δέοντα πεντήκοντα βεβιωκώς. ὁ δὲ υἱὸς αὐτοῦ ὑπὸ Καίσαρος μὲν οὐδὲν ἠδικήθη· λέγεται δὲ ῥάθυμος γενέσθαι καὶ περὶ γυναῖκας οὐκ ἀνεπίληπτος. ἐν δὲ Καππαδοκίᾳ ξένῳ τινὶ χρησίμενος Μαρφαδάτῃ τῶν βασιλικῶν ἔχοντι γυναῖον εὐπρεπές, καὶ πλείονα παρ' αὐτοῖς ἢ καλῶς εἶχε
 2 διατρίβων χρόνον, ἐσκώπτετο τοιαῦτα γραφόντων εἰς αὐτόν· αὔριον Κάτων βαδίζει μετὰ τριάκονθ' ἡμέρας·

 καί,

Πόρκιος καὶ Μαρφαδάτης, δύο φίλοι, ψυχὴ μία.
 Ψυχὴ γὰρ ἐκαλεῖτο τοῦ Μαρφαδάτου τὸ γύναιον.
 καὶ ἔτι,

εὐγενῆς καὶ λαμπρὸς ὁ Κάτων· βασιλικὴν ψυχὴν ἔχει.

CATO THE YOUNGER

rest, while he himself, his companions, and his son, were fearlessly going up and down, he thought it difficult to discern the purpose of the man, but since he made the greatest account of him, he came on with his army in all haste. When, however, he heard of his death, he said thus much only, as we are told: "O Cato, I begrudge thee thy death; for thou didst begrudge me the sparing of thy life." For, in reality, if Cato could have consented to have his life spared by Caesar, he would not be thought to have defiled his own fair fame, but rather to have adorned that of Caesar. However, what would have happened is uncertain; though the milder course is to be conjectured on the part of Caesar.

LXXIII. When Cato died,¹ he was forty-eight years old. His son received no harm at the hands of Caesar, but he was of an easy disposition, as we are told, and in his relations with women not blameless. In Cappadocia he enjoyed the hospitality of Marphadates, one of the royal family, who had a comely wife; and since young Cato spent more time with them than was seemly, he was satirized in such writings as these:

"On the morrow Cato journeys,—after a good round thirty days;"

and,

"Marphadates and Porcius, two friends with but a single Soul."

For the wife of Marphadates was named Psyche (soul). And again:

"Nobly born, illustrious, our Cato hath a royal Soul."

¹ In 46 B.C. A single letter of his to Cicero is extant (ad div. xv. 5): cf. chapter xxiii. 3.

- 3 ἀλλὰ πᾶσάν γε τὴν τοιαύτην ἐξήλειψε καὶ ἠφάνισε τῷ θανάτῳ δύσκειαν. ἀγωνιζόμενος γὰρ ἐν Φιλίπποις πρὸς Καίσαρα καὶ Ἀντώνιον ὑπὲρ τῆς ἐλευθερίας, καὶ κλινομένης τῆς φάλαγγος οὔτε φυγεῖν οὔτε λαθεῖν ἀξιώσας, ἀλλὰ προκαλούμενος τοὺς πολεμίους ἔμπροσθεν ἑαυτὸν ἐμφανίζων καὶ συνεξορμῶν τοὺς συμμένοντας ἔπεσε, θαῦμα τῆς ἀρετῆς τοῖς ἐναντίοις παρασχών.
- 4 Ἔτι δὲ μᾶλλον ἢ θυγάτηρ τοῦ Κάτωνος οὔτε σωφροσύνης οὔτε ἀνδρείας ἀπολειφθεῖσα (Βρούτῳ γὰρ συνώκει τῷ κτείναντι Καίσαρα) αὐτῆς τε τῆς συνωμοσίας μετέσχε, καὶ προήκατο τὸν βίον ἀξίως τῆς εὐγενείας καὶ ἀρετῆς, ὡς ἐν τοῖς περὶ Βρούτου γέγραπται. Στατύλλιος δὲ φήσας μμείσθαι Κάτωνα τότε μὲν ὑπὸ τῶν φιλοσόφων ἐκωλύθη βουλόμενος ἑαυτὸν ἀνελεῖν, ὕστερον δὲ τῷ Βρούτῳ πιστότατον ἑαυτὸν παρασχών καὶ χρησιμώτατον ἐν Φιλίπποις ἀπέθανεν.

CATO THE YOUNGER

But all such ill-report was blotted out and removed by the manner of his death. For he fought at Philippi against Caesar and Antony, in behalf of liberty; and when his line of battle was giving way, he deigned not either to fly or to hide himself, but challenged the enemy, displayed himself in front of them, cheered on those who held their ground with him, and so fell, after amazing his foes by his valour.

And still more true is it that the daughter of Cato was deficient neither in prudence nor courage. She was the wife of the Brutus who slew Caesar, was privy to the conspiracy itself, and gave up her life in a manner worthy of her noble birth and her lofty character, as is told in the Life of Brutus.¹ Statyllius, too, who declared that he would follow Cato's example,² was prevented at the time by the philosophers from destroying himself, as he wished to do, but afterwards gave most faithful and efficient service to Brutus, and died at Philippi.³

¹ Chapters xiii. and liii. ² Cf. above, chapter lxvi. 4.

³ Cf. the Brutus, li. 4.

A PARTIAL DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

A PARTIAL DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

A

- Adrumetum (or Hadrumetum), 381, a Phoenician sea-port on the coast of northern Africa, a few miles south of Carthage.
- Afranius, 53, Lucius A., a warm partisan of Pompey, and one of his legates in Spain during the war with Sertorius, as well as in Asia during the Mithridatic war. In 55 B.C. he was sent by Pompey with Petreius, to hold Spain for him. He was killed after the battle of Thapsus (46 B.C.).
- Annius, 19, Caius A. Luscus, had served under Metellus Numidicus in the Jugurthine war (108 B.C.).
- Antaeus, 25, a fabled Libyan giant and wrestler, son of Poseidon, whose strength was invincible as long as he remained in contact with his mother Earth. Heracles discovered his secret and slew him.
- Antigonus, 5, 85, 211, 215, surnamed the One-eyed, a general of Alexander who received the provinces of Phrygia, Lycia and Pamphylia in the division of Alexander's empire, and succeeded in making himself king of all Asia. He fell in the battle of Ipsus (301 B.C.).
- Antipater the Tyrian, 245, died shortly before 44 B.C., according to Cicero (de off. ii. 86).
- Antipater, 87, 91-95, 145, 185, 197, 201-217, regent of Macedonia during Alexander's absence in the East, and of Alexander's empire after the murder of Perdiccas in 321 B.C. He died in 319.
- Antiphilus, 199, 201, an Athenian general known only from these events of the Lamian war.
- Antonius, 73, known only from this incident.
- Apollonides the Stoic, 397, 399, 403, known only from these incidents.
- Aquinius, 37, known only from these incidents.
- Archilochus, 161, 251, of Paros, one of the earliest Ionian lyric poets, flourishing in 650 B.C.
- Ariminum, 361, an important city of Umbria, on the sea-coast, about nine miles south of the Rubicon.
- Aristophon, 161, of the Athenian deme Colyttus, a prominent orator and politician contemporary with Demosthenes.
- Athenodorus (1), of Imbros, 187, an Athenian of Imbrian family, and a mercenary captain in the East, who attained political power in Thrace in 359 B.C. He was a supporter of Persia against Alexander, by whom he was captured at Sardis in 334.
- Athenodorus (2), surnamed Cordylion, 257, 269, a Stoic philosopher, born at Tarsus. He was keeper of the library at Pergamum, whence he removed to Rome in 70 B.C., and lived there with Cato.

B

- Baetica, 21, 31, the southern district of Spain, traversed by the great river Baetis.
- Barca, 327, not otherwise known.

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

Bibulus, 293, 295, 311, 313, 351, 367, Lucius Calpurnius B., aedile in 65 B.C., praetor in 62, and consul in 59, in each case a colleague of Julius Caesar. He died in 48.

Boëdromion, 207, the Attic month corresponding to parts of our September and October.

Butas, 405, known also as an author from the Romulus. xxv 3.

C

Caepio (1), 7, Quintus Servilius C., consul in 106 B.C., and pro-consul in Gallia Narbonensis for the following year. Ten years after his defeat by the Cimbri (Camillus, xix. 7) he was brought to trial for misconduct of the war, condemned, and thrown into prison.

Caepio (2), 237, 239, 243, 245, 253, Quintus Servilius C., half-brother of Cato.

Caesar, 397, Lucius, not otherwise known.

Callimædon, 221, 227, 229, surnamed the Crab, one of the Athenian orators who favoured the Macedonian interest.

Canidius, 321-325, not otherwise known.

Carbo, 15, 19, 61, Gnaeus Papirius C., one of the leaders of the Marian party. After his flight to Libya (Sulla, xxix. 8) he was taken prisoner by Pompey and cruelly put to death (Pompey, chapter x.).

Cardia, 79, 85, 87, one of the chief towns of the Thracian Chersonese.

Cassander, 215, 217, a son of Antipater the regent of Macedonia, to whom his father refused the succession. He was master of Athens from 318 to 307 B.C., and died in 297.

Castulo, 7, an important city in the southern part of Hispania Tarraconensis, on the upper waters of the Baetis.

Catiline, 287, Lucius Sergius, the famous conspirator in the consulship of Cicero (63 B.C.). See the Cicero, chapters x.-xxii.

Catulus, 271, 273, Quintus Lutatius C., a leading aristocrat of the nobler sort, consul in 78 B.C., censor in 65, died in 60.

Cenchraeae, 329, the eastern harbour-town of Corinth.

Cephisodotus, 189, a celebrated Athenian sculptor. In 371 B.C. he executed for the Athenians a group of Peace holding Pluto the god of riches in her arms.

Ceraunian Mountains, 211, sometimes called Acroceraunian, a range in the northern part of Epirus.

Chabrias, 157-161, an able and successful Athenian general, prominent from 392 B.C. till his gallant death at the siege of Chios in 357.

Chaeroneia, 181, a town commanding the entrance from Phocis into Boeotia, celebrated for the number of important battles fought in its neighbourhood. Here Philip of Macedon defeated the allied Greeks in 338 B.C.

Chares (1), 155, 175, a famous Athenian general, prominent from 367 to 334 B.C.

Chares (2), 185, of Mitylene, court chamberlain of Alexander, and author of an anecdotal history of Alexander's campaigns.

Charicles, 193, 195, 221, 229, known only from these incidents.

Charidemus, 5, 179, 183, an Athenian general and a roving soldier of fortune, prominent from 367 to 349 B.C.

Cinna, 11-15, Lucius Cornelius C., leader of the Marian party during Sulla's absence in the East (87-84 B.C.). He was consul in 87, 86, 85, and 84. He was slain in a mutiny of his soldiers at Brundisium, where he hoped to prevent the landing of Sulla. See the Pompey, v. 1.

Cleanthes, 405, known only from this passage.

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

Cleitus, 225, 227, successfully commanded the fleet of Antipater in the Lamian war (323 B.C.), and later (318) that of Polysperchon at Byzantium, but was surprised by Antigonus, defeated, and slain.

Clodius, 279, 281, 311, 315-319, 331, 333, 345. Publius Claudius (Clodius) Pulcher, youngest son of the Appius Claudius mentioned in the Sulla, xxix. 3. He helped to demoralise the soldiers of Lucullus (Lucullus, xxxiv.), and became a venomous foe of Cicero.

Corcyra, 329, 371, an island in the Ionian sea, opposite Epirus; the modern Corfu.

Cotta, 31, possibly the Marcus Aurelius Cotta who became consul with Lucullus in 74 B.C. now a legate under Caius Annius (pp. 19 f.).

Crassus, 405, not otherwise known.

Craterus, 91-95, 187, 201, 203, one of the ablest of Alexander's officers, and a man of noble character. He fell in battle against Eumenes in 321 B.C. See the Eumenes, v. ff.

Ctesippus, 159, not otherwise known.

Curio, 267, 349, probably the Calus Scribonius Curio who was consul in 76 B.C. He was a steadfast opponent of Julius Caesar, and a friend of Cicero and Cato. He was pontifex maximus in 57, and died in 53.

Cyrene, 371, the most important Greek colony on the northern coast of Africa, almost directly south of Crete. It was founded in 631 B.C.

D

Delotarus the Galatian, 261, 267, 289, tetrarch of Galatia in Asia Minor, and an old man in 54 B.C. (Crassus, xvii. 1 f.). He was a faithful friend of the Romans in their Asiatic wars, and in 63 was rewarded by the senate with the title of King. Caesar could never be brought to pardon him for siding with Pompey.

Demades, 145, 181, 191, 195, 213, 215, an Athenian politician and orator of Macedonian sympathies, and bitterly hostile to Demosthenes.

Demetrius the Peripatetic, 397, 403, not definitely known.

Demetrius of Phalerum, a celebrated rhetorician and orator (346-283 B.C.). He was regent of Athens for Cassander from 318 to 307.

Demophilus, 233, not otherwise known.

Didius, 7, Titus Didius, consul in 98 B.C. He fell in battle during the Marsic war (89 B.C.).

Diopithes, 161, an Athenian general, father of the poet Menander. He was arraigned by the Macedonian party at Athens, and was defended by Demosthenes in the extant oration "On the Chersonese."

Dodona, 209, a town in Epirus, famous in earlier times for its oracle of Zeus, the influence of which among the Greek states was later assumed by the oracle of Apollo at Delphi.

Domitius (1), 31, Lucius Domitius Ahenobarbus, known only from this defeat, in which he was killed.

Domitius (2), 333, 335, Lucius Domitius Ahenobarbus, consul in 54 B.C. He was one of the ablest supporters of the aristocratic party. He opposed both Pompey and Caesar until their quarrel, then sided with Pompey. He met his death at Pharsalus.

Drusus, 237, 239, Marcus Livius D., at first an able and ardent supporter of the aristocratic party and the senate, but afterwards an agitator like the Gracchi. He was assassinated in 91 B.C.

Duris, 79, 153, 185, the Samian, a

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

pupil of Theophrastus, historian and, for a time, tyrant of Samos, lived circa 350-280 B.C.

Dyrrhachium, 365-369, a city on the coast of Illyricum, opposite to Brundisium, known in Greek history as Epidamnus. It was a free state, and sided with the Romans consistently.

E

Ebro (Iberus), 41, a large river the basin of which forms the north-eastern part of the peninsula of Spain.

Echecratides the sophist, 187, not otherwise known.

Elateia, 223, a city of Phocis in a plain commanding passes into southern Greece.

Epicurus, 233, not otherwise known.

Eubulus, 161, a leading Athenian orator and statesman, highly successful as a minister of finance. He was of the party opposed to Demosthenes.

F

Favonius, 315, 347, 349, Marcus F., called the "Ape of Cato," was aedile in 52 B.C. and praetor in 49. He joined Pompey in the East, notwithstanding personal enmity towards him, and accompanied him in his flight from Pharsalus (cf. the Pompey, lxxiii. 6 f.). He was put to death by order of Octavius Caesar after the battle of Philippi (42 B.C.).

Fimbria, 65, Caius Flavius F., a partisan of Marius. He won important successes against Mithridates in 85 B.C., but was defeated and brought to death by Sulla in 84. See the Sulla, xxiii.-xxv.

Fufidius, 31, a creature of Sulla, mentioned also in the Sulla, xxxi. 3.

G

Gabinus, 317, Aulus G., tribune of the people in 66 B.C., praetor in 61, consul with Piso in 58, the year during which Cicero was in exile. He was recalled from his province of Syria in 55, prosecuted for taking bribes, and exiled. He died in 48.

Glaucippus, 153, not otherwise known.

Gracinus, 69, not otherwise known.

H

Hagnonides (or Agnonides), 211, 221, 223, 227, 233, an Athenian sycophant and demagogue, whose career is known mostly from this Life.

Harpalus, 191-195, the faithless treasurer of Alexander. Antipater demanded his surrender by the Athenians, who put him in prison. Thence he escaped and went to Crete, where he was assassinated.

Hegemon, 225, 229, a minor Athenian orator of the time of Demosthenes, who supported the interests of Macedon.

Hephaestion, 29, 81, 83, officer and beloved friend of Alexander.

Hortensius, 293, 295, 363, the great oratorical rival of Cicero, a man of high character, brilliant parts, and great wealth. He died in 50 B.C.

Hypereides, 153, 161, 169, 183, 197, 203, 205, 211, a great Athenian orator, who stood with Demosthenes at the head of the anti-Macedonian party.

Hypsaeus, 351, Publius Plautius H., tribune of the people in 54 B.C., and candidate for the consulship two years later. He was accused of corrupt practices, tried, and convicted. Pompey, whom he had devotedly served, forsook him in the hour of need.

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

I

- Iberians, 69 and passim, a general name for the original peoples of the Spanish peninsula.
- Ios, 5, an island in the eastern Aegean sea, one of the Sporades, south of Naxos.

J

- Juba (1), 373-379, 385-389, Juba I., king of Numidia, and a supporter of Pompey, to whom he owed his throne. He followed Cato's example and put an end to his own life.
- Juba (2), 25, Juba II., king of Mauretania, son of the preceding. After his father's death in 46 B.C., he was taken as a child to Rome by Caesar, where he was educated. He became a learned and voluminous writer, and among his works was a History of Rome.

L

- Labienus, 373, though a trusted officer of Caesar in Gaul, he went over to Pompey in the Civil War, fled to Africa after the battle of Pharsalus, and after the battle of Thapsus (46 B.C.) to Spain, where he was the immediate cause of the defeat of the Pompeians at Munda, and was slain (45 B.C.).
- Laelius, 253, Caius L., a brilliant commander and statesman, whose deeds are inseparably interwoven with those of his friend and companion, the elder Scipio. He died about 170 B.C.
- Laomedon, 3, a mythical king of Troy, the father of Priam.
- Lauron, 49, a small town in the S.E. part of Spain, south of Valentia, near the sea.
- Leonnatus, 85, 87, 201, one of Alexander's most distinguished officers.

- Leosthenes, 161, 195-203, an Athenian, general of the league for expelling the Macedonians from Greece after the death of Alexander.
- Lollius, 273, Marcus L., not further known.
- Lusitanians, 25-31, 69, the people of the western district or province of Spain.
- Lycurgus (1), 191, the great Spartan lawgiver.
- Lycurgus (2), 161, 167, 183, an able Athenian orator and a highly successful minister of finance (396-323 B.C.), one of the noblest specimens of old Attic integrity and virtue in a degenerate age.

M

- Manlius (1), 33, Lucius M., pro-consul in Narbonese Gaul in 78 B.C. He was badly defeated by one of the generals of Sertorius.
- Manlius (2), 69, 71, 75, not otherwise known.
- Marcellus, 277, perhaps the Caius Claudius Marcellus who was consul in 50 B.C., a friend of Cicero and Pompey, and an uncompromising foe of Caesar.
- Marius, 15, an adopted son of the elder Marius. He became consul at the age of twenty-seven, and was as merciless and cruel as his father. His death by his own hands is noted in the Sulla, xxxii. 1.
- Mellaria, 31, a small town on the southern coast of Spain.
- Memmius (1), 55, Caius M., a brother-in-law of Pompey, and his quaestor in Spain. Cf. the Pompey, xi. 2.
- Memmius (2), 305, 307, Caius M. Gemellus, tribune of the people at this time (66 B.C.), and two years later an unsuccessful candidate for the consulship. He left Rome under impeachment for

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

- corrupt practices, and spent the rest of his life in Mitylene.
- Menestheus, 161, a son of the famous Athenian general Iphicrates by a Thracian princess. He was distinguished for his military skill, and was prominent with his father in the Social War (356 B.C.). Nothing is heard of him after 325 B.C.
- Menon the Thessalian, 201, a citizen of Pharsalus, and a man of great influence and reputation. His cavalry bore themselves well in the battle of Crannon. In 321 he was defeated and slain by Polysperchon.
- Mentor, 81, not further known.
- Menyllus, 207, 209, 213, 217, known only from these passages.
- Metellus (1), 5, 31-61, 73, Quintus Caecilius M. Pius, consul with Sulla in 80 B.C., and one of his most successful generals. After Sulla's death in 78 Metellus was sent to Spain as pro-consul to prosecute the war against Sertorius. He died about 63.
- Metellus (2), 281-285, 297-305, Quintus M. Nepos, a partisan of Pompey, and for a time a violent opponent of Cicero. As consul, however, in 57 B.C., he did not oppose the recall of Cicero from exile. He died in 55.
- Metellus (3), 313, Quintus Caecilius M. Numidicus, victor over Jugurtha in 109 B.C., but supplanted by Marius. He was censor in 102, was unjustly expelled from the senate, and went into exile, from which he was recalled in 99 B.C., largely through the efforts of his son, Metellus Pius.
- Micion, 201, known only from this passage.
- Milo, 351, Titus Annius Papianus, a ruffian and swashbuckler, tribune of the people in 57 B.C., and from that time on involved in a fierce quarrel with Clodius, which ended with the murder of Clodius. Milo was impeached for the crime, defended by Cicero in an extant oration, condemned, and sent into exile. Attempting to return by force in 48, he was slain.
- Mithridates, 11, 63-67, the sixth king of Pontus bearing this name, commonly called the Great, 120-63 B.C., the most formidable enemy of the Romans in the East.
- Molossus, 175, not otherwise known.
- Munatius, 255, 293, 301, 307, 309, 323-327, 361, the bosom friend of Cato.
- Murena, 285, 287, 303, Lucius Licinius M., had served under Lucullus (Lucullus, xix. 7). On his trial he was defended by Hortensius and Cicero (in an extant oration), and acquitted.

N

- Nearchus, 81, the able and trusted admiral of Alexander.
- Neoptolemus, 79, 89-101, an officer of Alexander.
- New Carthage, 19, a famous colony of Carthage on the south-eastern coast of Spain.
- Nicanor, 217-221, held the Peiraeus for Cassander, and afterwards served him successfully as naval commander in the Hellespont, but awakened his jealousy and was put to death by him.
- Nicocles, 183, 229, 231, not otherwise known.
- Norbanus, 15, Caius N., consul in 83 B.C. After his defeats by Sulla and Metellus, he fled to Rhodes, where he put an end to his own life.

O

- Octavius (1), 11, 13, Gnaeus O., consul with Cinna in 87 B.C. His death is described in the Marius, xiii.

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

Octavius (2), 395, Marcus O., consul in 54 B.C., and a supporter of Pompey in the Civil War. He fled to Africa in 47. He is last heard of as serving under Antony at the battle of Actium in 31.

Osca, 37, 69, a Roman colony in north-eastern Spain.

P

- Paccianus, 23, not otherwise known.
- Pella, 87, the capital city of Macedonia.
- Perdiccas, 79, 85, 89-93, the officer to whom the dying Alexander is said to have given his signet-ring, and regent for the royal successors of Alexander till 321 B.C.
- Perpenna, 39, 41, 67-75, Marcus P. Vento, a leading partisan of Marius. On the death of Sulla (78 B.C.) he joined Lepidus in his attempt to win the supreme power, and falling here, retired to Spain and served under Sertorius.
- Pessinus, 269, an important town in the west of Galatia, famous for its cult of Cybele.
- Pharsalus, 369, 373, an ancient town in southern Thessaly, near which Caesar finally defeated Pompey.
- Philip, 5, 79, Philip of Macedon, father of Alexander.
- Philippi, 411, a city of Macedonia on the river Strymon, formerly called Crenides, but renamed by Philip II.
- Philippus, 293, 295, 331, Lucius Marcius P., consul in 56 B.C., and step-father of Octavius Caesar. He remained neutral in the civil wars, and lived to see his step-son master of the world.
- Philostratus, 375, the Aegyptian, a professed but degenerate follower of the Academy, afterwards associated with Antony and Cleopatra (Antony, lxxx. 2).
- Phocus, 189, 191, 213, 229, 233, the son of Phocion, not otherwise known.
- Pigres, 95, an officer not otherwise known.
- Piso, 307, 317, Lucius Calpurnius P., father-in-law of Julius Caesar. He plundered his province of Macedonia shamelessly, and was recalled in 55 B.C. He is covered with invective in Cicero's oration de Provinc. Cons. He took no part in the Civil War.
- Pityussa, 19, the name of two islands (often spoken of as one) lying off the southern coast of Spain.
- Plancus, 353, Titus Munatius P. Bursa, tribune of the people in 52 B.C. and largely responsible for the riots of that year, for complicity in which he was tried and condemned. He was restored to civil rights by Julius Caesar, and served under Antony.
- Plutarch the Eretrian, 171, 173, sought the aid of the Athenians against his rival, the tyrant of Chalcis, who had allied himself with Philip of Macedon.
- Pollio, 363, 365, Caius Asinius P., a famous orator, poet, and historian, 76 B.C.-4 A.D. He was an intimate friend of Julius Caesar, fought under him in Africa and Spain, and after Caesar's death supported Octavius Caesar. After 29, he devoted himself entirely to literature, and was a patron of Vergil and Horace. None of his works are extant.
- Polyeuctus the Sphettian, 165, an Athenian of the deme Sphettus, a political friend of Demosthenes, and an orator of some note.
- Polysperchon, 217, 221-225, a distinguished officer of Alexander, appointed by Antipater to succeed him in the regency. He connived at some of the worst crimes of Cassander.
- Pompeius (1), 371 ("the younger Pompey"), Gnaeus P., the elder son of the triumvir by his third

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

S

- wife, put to death by the troops of Caesar after the battle of Munda in Spain (45 B.C.).
- Pompeius (2), 371, 383, Sextus P., the younger son of the triumvir by his third wife, escaped after the battle of Munda and was active against the triumvirate until his death in 35 B.C.
- Porcia (1), 333, Cato's own sister, died in 46 B.C., ten years after her husband.
- Porcia (2), 293, 411, Cato's daughter, married first to Bibulus, Caesar's consular colleague, in 59 B.C. Bibulus died in 48, and in 45 Porcia married Brutus the conspirator.
- Ptolemy (1), 81, 91, Ptolemy Lagus, the most far-sighted and successful of the officers of Alexander, afterwards Ptolemy I. of Egypt.
- Ptolemy (2), 321, Ptolemy XI. of Egypt, commonly known as Ptolemy Auletes. After many disappointments he was at last restored to his throne in 55 B.C., through the influence of Pompey, but never regained the goodwill of his people.
- Ptolemy (3), 319, 321, younger brother of Ptolemy Auletes, and king of Cyprus. He incurred the enmity of Clodius, who, as tribune of the Roman people, brought in a decree depriving him of his kingdom.
- Pytheas, 191, an Athenian orator chiefly known for his unreasoning hatred of Demosthenes. He was a man of no fixed character, and in the Lamian War became a renegade from Athens. See the Demosthenes, xxxii.
- Pythocles, 229, not otherwise known.

R

- Rubrius (1), 255, known only from this allusion.
- Rubrius (2), Marcus R., not otherwise known.

- Saguntum, 55, a rich commercial city on the east coast of Spain, near the sea.
- Salinator, 19, Julius, not otherwise known.
- Scipio (1), 3, 253, Publius Cornelius S. Africanus Major (234-183 B.C.), the conqueror of Hannibal.
- Scipio (2), 3, Publius Cornelius S. Aemilianus Africanus Minor (185-129 B.C.), the destroyer of Carthage.
- Scipio (3), 15, 17, Lucius Cornelius S. Asiaticus, belonged to the Marian party in the civil wars, and was consul in 83 B.C., the year when Sulla returned from the East (cf. the Sulla, xxviii. 1-3). He was proscribed in 82, and fled to Massilla, where he died.
- Scipio (4), 251, 351, 375-379, 385, 387, Publius Cornelius S. Nasica, adopted by Metellus Pius and therefore called Metellus Scipio, was made Pompey's colleague in the consulship late in the year 52 B.C., and became a determined foe of Caesar. He commanded Pompey's centre at Pharsalus, fled to Africa, and killed himself after the battle of Thapsus (46 B.C.). Though a Scipio by birth, a Metellus by adoption, and the father-in-law of Pompey, he was rapacious and profligate.
- Serranus, 251, probably the Sextus Atilius S. Gavianus, who was quaestor in 63 B.C. and favoured by Cicero, but as tribune of the people in 57 opposed the recall of Cicero from exile.
- Servilia (1), 285, 291, half-sister of Cato, and faithless wife of Silanus.
- Servilia (2), 293, 305, 365 f., another half-sister of Cato, the faithless wife of Lucullus.
- Silanus, 285-289, Decimus Junius S., consul in 64 and 62 B.C.
- Silo, 239, 241, Pompaedius S., leader of the Marsi in the Social

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

War, and confederate. with Drusus. He displayed great military ability in the war, but was finally defeated by Metellus Pius in 88 B.C., and died in battle.

Statyllius, 395-399, 411, known only from these passages.

Sucro, 51, a river in south-eastern Spain, between Valentia and Lauron.

Sulpicius, 355, Servius S. Lemonia Rufus, a friend and fellow-student of Cato, and a successful competitor against him for the consulship in 51 B.C. He supported the cause of Caesar, and died in 43.

Thrasea, 293, 325, Publius T. Paetus, a noble Roman who fell a victim to the hatred of Nero in 66 A.D. In his youth he was devoted to the Stoic philosophy, and wrote a study of the life of Cato the Younger.

Thudippus, 229, not otherwise known.

Trebonius, 339, Caius T., tribune of the people in 55 B.C., and an instrument of the triumvirs. He was afterwards legate of Caesar in Gaul, and was loaded with favours by him, but was one of the conspirators against his life.

Turia, 51, a small town near the upper waters of the Sucro, in south-eastern Spain.

T

Taenarum, 211, the promontory at the extreme south of Laconia.

Tagonius, 43, a tributary of the river Tagus, in south-western Spain.

Thapsus, 379, a maritime city of northern Africa, south of Carthage.

Theodorus the Athelst, 233, a philosopher of the Cyrenaic school, banished from his native city of Cyrene, and resident at Athens during the regency of Demetrius the Phalerian (318-307 B.C.).

Theophrastus, 35, 325, the most famous pupil of Aristotle, and his successor as head of the Peripatetic school at Athens. He was born at Eresos in Lesbos, and died at Athens in 287 B.C., at the age of eighty-five.

Thermus, 299, 301, Minucius, not otherwise definitely known.

Thessalonica, 259, the capital of the Roman province of Macedonia, situated at the head of the Thermaic gulf.

Thoranius, 31, not otherwise known.

U

Utica, 375-407, a Phoenician colony from Tyre, older than Carthage, on the northern coast of Africa twenty-seven miles north-west of Carthage.

V

Vaccaei, 59, an important people in the interior of Hispania Tarraconensis, or north-eastern Spain.

Varus, 373-377, Publius Attius V., a zealous partisan of Pompey. When Pompey forsook Italy in 49 B.C., Varus took possession of Africa, where he had formerly been pro-praetor. In conjunction with King Juba he crushed Curio, the legate of Caesar. He fell in the battle of Munda (45).

Vatinius, 337, Publius V., a leading partisan of Caesar, praetor in 55 B.C., after which he served Caesar as legate in Gaul, and in important commands during the Civil War. He is last heard of in 43.

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

X

Xenocrates, the philosopher, 205, 213, a native of Chalcedon in Bithynia, and a disciple at Athens of Aeschines the Socratic. He lived 396-314 B.C.

Z

Zeno, 155, probably the Stoic philosopher is meant, who taught at Athens in the third century B.C., and wrote on law and government.

PRINTED IN GREAT BRITAIN BY E. CLAY AND SONS, LTD., BRUNSWICK STREET, STAMFORD STREET, S.E. 1, AND BUNGAY, SUFFOLK.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

WITH AN ENGLISH TRANSLATION BY BERNADOTTE PERRIN

IN ELEVEN VOLUMES

IX

DEMETRIUS AND ANTONY
PYRRHUS AND CAIUS MARIUS

LONDON : WILLIAM HEINEMANN
NEW YORK : G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS

MCMXX

Hi

306282

ANNUAL REPORT

PREFATORY NOTE

As in the preceding volumes of this series, agreement between the Sintenis (Teubner, 1873-1875) and Bekker (Tauchnitz, 1855-1857) editions of the Parallel Lives has been taken as the basis for the text. Any preference of one to the other, and any important deviation from both, have been indicated. An abridged account of the manuscripts of Plutarch may be found in the Introduction to the first volume. Of the Lives presented in this volume, the last part of the Antony (from chapter lxxvii.), and the Pyrrhus and Marius are contained in the Codex Sangermanensis (S^s), but none in the Codex Seitenstetensis (S). These are the two oldest and most authoritative manuscripts. The readings of the excellent Paris manuscript No. 1676 (F^a) are not accessible for any of them. No attempt has been made, naturally, to furnish either a diplomatic text or a full critical apparatus. For these, the reader must be referred to the major edition of Sintenis (Leipzig, 1839-1846, 4 voll., 8vo), or to the new text of the Lives by Lindskog and Ziegler, in the Teubner Library of Greek and Latin texts (now half published). In the present edition, the reading which follows the colon in the brief critical notes is that of the Teubner Sintenis, and also, unless otherwise stated in the note, of the Tauchnitz Bekker.

PREFATORY NOTE

The Siefert-Blass edition of the Pyrrhus, in the Teubner series of annotated Greek and Latin texts, has been of great service.

All the standard translations of the Lives have been carefully compared and utilized, including those of the Antony and Marius by Professor Long.

B. PERRIN.

NEW HAVEN, CONNECTICUT, U.S.A.

June, 1920.

CONTENTS

	PAGE
PREFATORY NOTE	v
ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES IN THIS EDITION	viii
TRADITIONAL ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES	ix
DEMETRIUS	1
ANTONY	137
COMPARISON OF DEMETRIUS AND ANTONY	333
PYRRHUS	345
CAIUS MARIUS	463
DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES	601

ORDER. OF THE PARALLEL LIVES IN THIS EDITION IN THE CHRONOLOGICAL SEQUENCE OF THE GREEK LIVES.

VOLUME I.

- (1) Theseus and Romulus.
Comparison.
- (2) Lycurgus and Numa.
Comparison.
- (3) Solon and Publicola.
Comparison.

VOLUME II.

- (4) Themistocles and Camillus.
- (9) Aristides and Cato the Elder.
Comparison.
- (13) Cimon and Lucullus.
Comparison.

VOLUME III.

- (5) Pericles and Fabius Max-
imus.
Comparison.
- (14) Nicias and Crassus.
Comparison.

VOLUME IV.

- (6) Alcibiades and Coriola-
nus.
Comparison.
- (12) Lysander and Sulla.
Comparison.

VOLUME V.

- (16) Agesilaüs and Pompey.
Comparison.
- (8) Pelopidas and Marcellus.
Comparison.

VOLUME VI.

- (22) Dion and Brutus.
Comparison.
- (7) Timoleon and Aemilius
Paulus.
Comparison.

VOLUME VII.

- (20) Demosthenes and Cicero.
Comparison.
- (17) Alexander and Julius Caesar.

VOLUME VIII.

- (15) Sertorius and Eumenes.
Comparison.
- (18) Phocion and Cato the Younger.

VOLUME IX.

- (21) Demetrius and Antony.
Comparison.
- (11) Pyrrhus and Caius Marius.

VOLUME X.

- (19) Agis and Cleomenes, and Tiberius and Caius
Gracchus.
Comparison.
- (10) Philopoemen and Flam-
inius.
Comparison.

VOLUME XI.

- (24) Aratus.
- (23) Artaxerxes.
- (25) Galba.
- (26) Otho.

THE TRADITIONAL ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES.

- (1) Theseus and Romulus.
- (2) Lycurgus and Numa.
- (3) Solon and Publicola.
- (4) Themistocles and Camillus.
- (5) Pericles and Fabius Maximus.
- (6) Alcibiades and Coriolanus.
- (7) Timoleon and Aemilius Paulus.
- (8) Pelopidas and Marcellus.
- (9) Aristides and Cato the Elder.
- (10) Philopœnen and Flaminius.
- (11) Pyrrhus and Caius Marius.
- (12) Lysander and Sulla.
- (13) Cimon and Lucullus.
- (14) Nicias and Crassus.
- (15) Sertorius and Eumenes.
- (16) Agesilaüs and Pompey.
- (17) Alexander and Julius Caesar.
- (18) Phocion and Cato the Younger.
- (19) Agis and Cleomenes, and Tiberius and Caius
Gracchus.
- (20) Demosthenes and Cicero.
- (21) Demetrius and Antony.
- (22) Dion and Brutus.
.
- (23) Artaxerxes.
- (24) Aratus.
- (25) Galba.
- (26) Otho.

DEMETRIUS

VOL. IX.

B

ΔΗΜΗΤΡΙΟΣ

- Ι. Οἱ πρῶτοι τὰς τέχνας εὐκέναι ταῖς αἰσθήσεσιν ὑπολαβόντες οὐχ ἥκιστα μοι δοκοῦσι τὴν περὶ τὰς κρίσεις αὐτῶν κατανοῆσαι δύναμιν, ἣ τῶν ἐναντίων ὁμοίως ἐν ἑκατέρῳ¹ γένει πεφύκαμεν ἀντιλαμβάνεσθαι. τοῦτο γὰρ αὐταῖς κοινόν ἐστι· τῇ δὲ πρὸς τὰ τέλη τῶν κρινομένων
- 2 ἀναφορᾷ διαλλάττουσιν. ἡ μὲν γὰρ αἴσθησις οὐδέν τι μᾶλλον ἐπὶ λευκῶν ἢ μελάνων διαγνώσει γέγονεν, οὐδὲ γλυκέων ἢ πικρῶν, οὐδὲ μαλακῶν καὶ εἰκόντων ἢ σκληρῶν καὶ ἀντιτύπων, ἀλλ' ἔργον αὐτῆς ἐκάστοις ἐντυγχάνουσαν ὑπὸ πάντων τε κινεῖσθαι καὶ κινουμένην πρὸς τὸ φρονοῦν ἀναφέρειν ὡς πέπονθεν. αἱ δὲ τέχναι μετὰ λόγου συνεστῶσαι πρὸς αἵρεσιν καὶ λήψιν οἰκείου τινός, φυγὴν δὲ καὶ διάκρουσιν ἀλλοτρίου, τὰ μὲν ἀφ' αὐτῶν προηγουμένως, τὰ δὲ ὑπὲρ τοῦ φυλάξασθαι
- 3 κατὰ συμβεβηκὸς ἐπιθεωροῦσι· καὶ γὰρ ἰατρικῇ τὸ νοσερὸν καὶ ἀρμονικῇ τὸ ἐκμέλές, ὅπως ἔχει, σκοπεῖν συμβέβηκε πρὸς τὴν τῶν ἐναντίων ἀπεργασίαν, αἷ τε πασῶν τελειόταται τεχνῶν, σωφροσύνη καὶ δικαιοσύνη καὶ φρόνησις, οὐ καλῶν

¹ ἐν ἑκατέρῳ Coraës and Bekker, after Reiske : ἑκατέρῳ.

DEMETRIUS:

I. THOSE who first assumed that the arts are like the bodily senses, seem to me to have perceived very clearly the power of making distinctions which, both possess, by which power we are enabled to apprehend opposites, as well in the one case as in the other. For the arts and the senses have this power in common; though in the use to which we put the distinctions made, they differ. For our sense-perception has no greater facility in distinguishing white objects than black, or sweet things than bitter, or soft and yielding substances than hard and resisting ones, but its function is to receive impressions from all objects alike, and having received them, to report the resulting sensation to the understanding. The arts, on the other hand, which proceed by the use of reason to the selection and adoption of what is appropriate, and to the avoidance and rejection of what is alien to themselves, contemplate the one class of objects with direct intent and by preference, and yet incidentally contemplate the other class also, and in order to avoid them. For instance, the art of healing has incidentally studied the nature of disease, and the art of harmony the nature of discord, in order to produce their opposites; and the most consummate arts of all, namely, temperance, justice, and wisdom, since their function is to distinguish, not only what is good and just

- μόνον καὶ δικαίων καὶ ὠφελίμων, ἀλλὰ καὶ βλαβερῶν καὶ αἰσχροῶν· καὶ ἀδίκων κρίσεις οὐσαι, τὴν ἀπειρία τῶν ἡλικίων καλλωπιζομένην ἀκακίαν οὐκ ἐπαινοῦσιν, ἀλλ' ἀβελτερίαν ἡγοῦνται καὶ ἄγνοιαν ὧν μάλιστα γινώσκειν προσήκει τοὺς
- 4 ὀρθῶς βιβασμένους. οἱ μὲν οὖν παλαιοὶ Σπαρτιᾶται τοὺς ἐλλώτας ἐν ταῖς ἑορταῖς πολὺν ἀναγκάζοντες πίνειν ἄκρατον εἰσηγόν εἰς τὰ συμπόσια, τοῖς νέοις οἷόν ἐστι τὸ μεθύειν ἐπιδεικνύντες ἡμεῖς δὲ τὴν μὲν ἐκ διαστροφῆς ἑτέρων ἐπανόρθωσιν οὐ πάνυ φιλάνθρωπον οὐδὲ πολιτικὴν
- 5 ἡγοῦμεθα, τῶν δὲ κεκρημένων ἀσκεπτότερον αὐτοῖς καὶ γεγονότων ἐν ἐξουσίαις καὶ πράγμασι μέγαλοις ἐπιφανῶν εἰς κακίαν, οὐ χεῖρον ἴσως ἐστὶ συζυγίαν μίαν ἢ δύο παρεμβαλεῖν εἰς τὰ παραδείγματα τῶν βίων, οὐκ ἐφ' ἡδονῆ, μὰ Δία, καὶ διαγωγῇ τῶν ἐντυγχανόντων ποικίλλοντας
- 6 τὴν γραφήν, ἀλλ' ὥσπερ Ἰσμηνίας ὁ Θηβαῖος ἐπιδεικνύμενος τοῖς μαθηταῖς καὶ τοὺς εὐ καὶ τοὺς κακῶς αὐλοῦντας εἰώθει λέγειν, "Οὕτως αὐλεῖν δεῖ," καὶ πάλιν, "Οὕτως αὐλεῖν οὐ δεῖ," ὁ δ' Ἀντιγενίδας καὶ ἥδιον ᾤετο τῶν ἀγαθῶν ἀκροᾶσθαι τοὺς νέους αὐλητῶν ἢ καὶ τῶν φαύλων πείραν λαμβάνωσιν, οὕτω μοι δοκοῦμεν καὶ ἡμεῖς προθυμότεροι τῶν βελτιόνων ἔσεσθαι καὶ θεαταὶ καὶ μιμηταὶ βίων εἰ μὴδὲ τῶν φαύλων καὶ ψεγομένων ἀνιστορήτως ἔχοιμεν.
- 7 Περιέξει δὴ τοῦτο τὸ βιβλίον τὸν Δημητρίου τοῦ Πολιορκητοῦ βίον καὶ Ἀντωνίου τοῦ αὐτοκράτορος, ἀνδρῶν μάλιστα δὴ τῷ Πλάτωνι μαρτυρησάντων ὅτι καὶ κακίας μεγάλας, ὥσπερ and expedient, but also what is bad and unjust and disgraceful, have no praises for a guilelessness which plumes itself on its inexperience of evil, nay, they consider it to be foolishness, and ignorance of what ought especially to be known by men who would live aright. Accordingly, the ancient Spartans would put compulsion upon their helots at the festivals to drink much unmixed wine, and would then bring them into the public messes, in order to show their young men what it was to be drunk. And though I do not think that the perverting of some to secure the setting right of others is very humane, or a good civil policy, still, when men have led reckless lives, and have become conspicuous, in the exercise of power or in great undertakings, for badness, perhaps it will not be much amiss for me to introduce a pair or two of them into my biographies, though not that I may merely divert and amuse my readers by giving variety to my writing. Ismenias the Theban used to exhibit both good and bad players to his pupils on the flute and say, "you must play like this one," or again, "you must not play like this one"; and Antigenidas used to think that young men would listen with more pleasure to good flute-players if they were given an experience of bad ones also. So, I think, we also shall be more eager to observe and imitate the better lives if we are not left without narratives of the blameworthy and the bad.

DEMETRIUS

This book will therefore contain the Lives of Demetrius the City-besieger and Antony the Emperor, men who bore most ample testimony to the truth of Plato's saying¹ that great natures exhibit

¹ It is uncertain what passage in Plato is meant.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἀρετάς, αἱ μεγάλαι φύσεις ἐκφέρουσι. γενόμενοι δ' ὁμοίως ἐρωτικοί, ποτικοί, στρατιωτικοί, μεγαλόδωροι, πολυτελεῖς, ὑβρισταί, καὶ τὰς κατὰ 8 τύχην ὁμοιότητος ἀκολουθοῦς ἔσχον. οὐ γὰρ μόνον ἐν τῷ λοιπῷ βίῳ μεγάλα μὲν κατορθοῦντες, μεγάλα δὲ σφαλλόμενοι, πλείστων δὲ ἐπικρατοῦντες, πλείστα δὲ ἀποβάλλοντες, ἀπροσδοκῆτως δὲ πταίοντες, ἀνελπίστως δὲ πάλιν ἀναφέροντες διετέλεσαν, ἀλλὰ καὶ κατέστρεψαν, ὁ μὲν ἀλοὺς ὑπὸ τῶν πολεμίων, ὁ δὲ ἔγγιστα τοῦ παθεῖν τοῦτο γενόμενος.

II. Ἀντιγόνῳ τοίνυν δυεῖν υἱῶν ἐκ Στρατονίκης τῆς Κορράγου γενομένων, τὸν μὲν ἐπὶ τῷ δελφῷ Δημήτριον, τὸν δ' ἐπὶ τῷ πατρὶ Φίλιππον ὠνόμασεν. οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ τῶν πλείστων λόγος. ἔνιοι δὲ τὸν Δημήτριον οὐχ υἱόν, ἀλλ' ἀδελφιδοῦν γενέσθαι τοῦ Ἀντιγόνου λέγουσιν· ἐπὶ νηπίῳ γὰρ αὐτῷ παντάπασι τοῦ πατρὸς τελευτήσαντος, εἶτα τῆς μητρὸς εὐθύς τῷ Ἀντιγόνῳ γαμηθείσης,
 2 υἱὸν ἐκείνου νομισθῆναι. τὸν μὲν οὖν Φίλιππον οὐ πολλοῖς ἔτεσι τοῦ Δημητρίου νεώτερον ὄντα συνέβη τελευτήσαι· Δημήτριος δὲ μεγέθει μὲν ἦν τοῦ πατρὸς ἐλάττων, καίπερ ὦν μέγας, ἰδέα δὲ καὶ κάλλει προσώπου θαυμαστός καὶ περιττός, ὥστε τῶν πλαττόντων καὶ γραφόντων μῆθενα τῆς ὁμοιότητος ἐφικέσθαι. τὸ γὰρ αὐτὸ χάριν καὶ βάρος καὶ φόβον καὶ ὄραν εἶχε, καὶ συνεκέκρατο τῷ νεαρῷ καὶ ἰταμῷ δυσμίμητος ἡρωικὴ
 3 τις ἐπιφάνεια καὶ βασιλικὴ σεμνότης. οὕτω δὲ πως καὶ τὸ ἦθος ἐπεφύκει πρὸς ἑκπληξιν ἀνθρώπων ἅμα καὶ χάριν. ἡδιστος γὰρ ὦν συγγενέσθαι, σχολάζων τε περὶ πότους καὶ τρυφὰς great vices also, as well as great virtues. Both alike were amorous, bibulous, warlike, munificent, extravagant, and domineering, and they had corresponding resemblances in their fortunes. For not only were they all through their lives winning great successes, but meeting with great reverses ; making innumerable conquests, but suffering innumerable losses ; unexpectedly falling low, but unexpectedly recovering themselves again ; but they also came to their end, the one in captivity to his enemies, and the other on the verge of this calamity.

DEMETRIUS

II. To begin, then, Antigonus had two sons by Stratonice the daughter of Corrhagus, one of whom he named Demetrius, after his brother, and the other Philip, after his father. This is what the majority of writers say. But some have it that Demetrius was not the son, but the nephew of Antigonus ; for his own father died when the boy was quite young, and then his mother immediately married Antigonus, so that Demetrius was considered to be his son. Well then, Philip, who was a few years younger than Demetrius, died. Demetrius, the surviving son, had not the height of his father, though he was a tall man, but he had features of rare and astonishing beauty, so that no painter or sculptor ever achieved a likeness of him. They had at once grace and strength, dignity and beauty, and there was blended with their youthful eagerness a certain heroic look and a kingly majesty that were hard to imitate. And in like manner his disposition also was fitted to inspire in men both fear and favour. For while he was a most agreeable companion, and most dainty of princes in the leisure devoted to drinking and καὶ διαίτας ἀβροβιώτατος βασιλέων, ἐνεργότατον αὐτὸν πάλιν καὶ σφοδρότατον τὸ περὶ τὰς πράξεις ἐνδελεχῆς εἶχε καὶ δραστήριον ἢ καὶ μάλιστα τῶν θεῶν ἐξήλου τὸν Διόνυσον, ὡς πολέμῳ τε χρῆσθαι δεινότατον, εἰρήνῃν τε αὐτῷ ἐκ πολέμου τρέψαι πρὸς εὐφροσύνην καὶ χάριν ἐμμελέστατον.

III. Ἦν μὲν οὖν καὶ φιλοπάτωρ διαφερόντως· τῇ δὲ περὶ τὴν μητέρα σπουδῇ καὶ τὸν πατέρα 890
τιμῶν ἐφαίνετο δι' εὐνοίαν ἀληθινὴν μᾶλλον ἢ θεραπείαν τῆς δυνάμεως. καὶ ποτε πρεσβεία τινὶ τοῦ Ἀντιγόου σχολάζοντος ἀπὸ θήρας ὁ Δημήτριος ἐπέστη· καὶ προσελθὼν τῷ πατρὶ καὶ φιλήσας, ὥσπερ εἶχε τὰς βολίδας, ἐκάθισε παρ' 2 αὐτόν. ὁ δὲ Ἀντίγονος ἀπιόντας ἤδη τοὺς πρέσβεις ἔχοντας τὰς ἀποκρίσεις μεγάλῃ φωνῇ προσαγορεύσας, “Καὶ τοῦτο,” εἶπεν, “ὦ ἄνδρες, ἀπαγγέλλετε περὶ ἡμῶν, ὅτι πρὸς ἀλλήλους οὐτως ἔχομεν,” ὡς ἰσχύν τινα πραγμάτων βασιλικῶν καὶ δυνάμεως ἐπίδειξιν οὖσαν τὴν πρὸς υἱὸν 3 ὁμόνοιαν καὶ πίστιν. οὕτως ἄρα πάντῃ δυσκοινώνητον ἢ ἀρχή, καὶ μεστὸν ἀπιστίας καὶ δυσνοίας, ὥστε ἀγάλλεσθαι τὸν μέγιστον τῶν Ἀλεξάνδρου διαδόχων καὶ πρεσβύτατον ὅτι μὴ φοβεῖται τὸν υἱόν, ἀλλὰ προσίεται τὴν λόγῃν ἔχοντα τοῦ σώματος πλησίον. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ καὶ μόνος, ὡς εἶπεῖν, ὁ οἶκος οὗτος ἐπὶ πλείστας διαδοχὰς τῶν τοιούτων κακῶν ἐκαθάρευσε, μᾶλλον δὲ εἰς μόνος τῶν ἀπ' Ἀντιγόου Φίλιππος ἀνεῖλεν υἱόν.

DEMETRIUS

luxurious ways of living, on the other hand he had a most energetic and eager persistency and efficiency in action. Wherefore he used to make Dionysus his pattern, more than any other deity, since this god was most terrible in waging war, and on the other hand most skilful, when war was over, in making peace minister to joy and pleasure.

III. Moreover, Demetrius was also exceedingly fond of his father; and from his devotion to his mother it was apparent that he honoured his father also from genuine affection rather than out of deference to his power. On one occasion, when Antigonus was busy with an embassy, Demetrius came home from hunting; he went up to his father and kissed him, and then sat down by his side just as he was, javelins in hand. Then Antigonus, as the ambassadors were now going away with their answers, called out to them in a loud voice and said: "O men, carry back this report also about us, that this is the way we feel towards one another," implying that no slight vigour in the royal estate and proof of its power were to be seen in his harmonious and trustful relations with his son. So utterly unsociable a thing, it seems, is empire, and so full of ill-will and distrust, that the oldest and greatest of the successors of Alexander could make it a thing to glory in that he was not afraid of his son, but allowed him near his person lance in hand. However, this house was almost the only one which kept itself pure from crimes of this nature for very many generations, or, to speak more definitely, Philip was the only one of the descendants of Antigonus who put a son to death.¹

¹ Philip V., King of Macedonia. Cf. the Aemilius Paulus, viii. 6.

4 αἱ δὲ ἄλλαι σχεδὸν ἅπασαι διαδοχαὶ πολλῶν μὲν ἔχουσι παίδων, πολλῶν δὲ μητέρων φόνους καὶ γυναικῶν· τὸ μὲν γὰρ ἀδελφοὺς ἀναιρεῖν, ὥσπερ οἱ γεωμέτραι τὰ αἰτήματα λαμβάνουσιν, οὕτω συνεχωρεῖτο κοινόν τι νομιζόμενον αἴτημα καὶ βασιλικὸν ὑπὲρ ἀσφαλείας.

IV. Τοῦ μέντοι καὶ φιλόανθρωπον φύσει καὶ φιλεταῖρον γεγονέναι τὸν Δημήτριον ἐν ἀρχῇ παράδειγμα τοιοῦτόν ἐστιν εἰπεῖν· Μιθριδάτης ὁ Ἀριοβαρζάνου παῖς ἐταῖρος ἦν αὐτοῦ καὶ καθ' ἡλικίαν¹ συνήθης, ἐθεράπευε δὲ Ἀντίγονον, οὔτε ὦν οὔτε δοκῶν πονηρός, ἐκ δὲ ἐνυπνίου τινὸς
 2 ὑποψίαν Ἀντιγόνῳ παρέσχεν. ἐδόκει γὰρ μέγα καὶ καλὸν πεδίον ἐπιῶν ὁ Ἀντίγονος ψῆγμά τι² χρυσοῦ κατασπείρειν· ἐξ αὐτοῦ δὲ πρῶτον μὲν ὑποφύεσθαι θέρος χρυσοῦν, ὀλίγῳ δ' ὕστερον ἐπανεληθὼν ἰδεῖν οὐδὲν ἄλλ' ἢ τετμημένην καλάμην. λυπούμενος δὲ καὶ περιπαθῶν ἀκούσαι τινων λεγόντων ὡς ἄρα Μιθριδάτης εἰς Πόντον Εὐξεινον οἴχεται, τὸ χρυσοῦν θέρος ἐξαμνησάμενος.
 3 ἐκ τούτου διαταραχθεὶς καὶ τὸν υἱὸν ὀρκώσας σιωπήσειν, ἔφρασε τὴν ὄψιν αὐτῷ, καὶ ὅτι πάντως τὸν ἄνθρωπον ἐκποδῶν ποιεῖσθαι καὶ διαφθεῖρειν ἔγνωκεν. ἀκούσας δὲ ὁ Δημήτριος ἠχθέσθη σφόδρα, καὶ τοῦ νεανίσκου, καθάπερ εἰώθει, γενομένου παρ' αὐτῷ καὶ συνόντος ἐπὶ σχολῆς, φθέγγασθαι μὲν οὐκ ἐτόλμησεν οὐδὲ τῇ φωνῇ κατειπεῖν διὰ τὸν ὄρκον, ὑπαγαγὼν δὲ κατὰ μικρὸν ἀπὸ τῶν φίλων, ὡς ἐγεγόνεσαν μόνοι καθ' αὐτούς, τῷ στύρακι τῆς λόγχης κατέγραφεν εἰς

¹ καὶ καθ' ἡλικίαν Ziegler : καθ' ἡλικίαν καί.

² ψῆγμά τι Ziegler : ψῆγματι.

DEMETRIUS

But almost all the other lines afford many examples of men who killed their sons, and of many who killed their mothers and wives; and as for men killing their brothers, just as geometers assume their postulates, so this crime came to be a common and recognized postulate in the plans of princes to secure their own safety.

IV. In proof that in the beginning Demetrius was naturally humane and fond of his companions, the following illustration may be given. Mithridates the son of Ariobarzanes was a companion of his, and an intimate of the same age. He was one of the courtiers of Antigonus, and though he neither was nor was held to be a base fellow, still, in consequence of a dream, Antigonus conceived a suspicion of him. Antigonus dreamed, namely, that he was traversing a large and fair field and sowing gold-dust. From this, to begin with, there sprang up a golden crop, but when he came back after a little while, he could see nothing but stubble. In his vexation and distress, he heard in his dream sundry voices saying that Mithridates had reaped the golden crop for himself and gone off to the Euxine Sea. Antigonus was much disturbed by this vision, and after he had put his son under oath of silence, told it to him, adding that he had fully determined to destroy Mithridates and put him out of the way. On hearing this, Demetrius was exceedingly distressed, and when the young man, as was his wont, came to share his diversions with him, though he did not venture to open his lips on the matter or to warn him orally, because of his oath, he gradually drew him away from his friends, and when they were by themselves, with the sharp butt of his lance he wrote on the τὴν γῆν ὀρώντος αὐτοῦ, “Φεῦγε, Μιθριδάτα.” 4 συνεῖς δὲ ἐκεῖνος ἀπέδρα νυκτὸς εἰς Καππαδοκίαν.

 καὶ ταχὺ τὴν Ἀντιγόνῳ γενομένην ὄψιν ἕπαρ αὐτῷ συνετέλει τὸ χρεῶν. πολλῆς γὰρ καὶ ἀγα-θῆς ἐκράτησε χώρας, καὶ τὸ τῶν Ποντικῶν βασι-λέων γένος ὀγδόῃ που διαδοχῇ παυσάμενον ὑπὸ Ῥωμαίων ἐκεῖνος παρέσχε. ταῦτα μὲν οὖν εὐφυίας δείγματα τοῦ Δημητρίου πρὸς ἐπιείκειαν καὶ δικαιοσύνην.

V. Ἐπεὶ δέ, ὥσπερ ἐν τοῖς Ἐμπεδοκλέους στοιχείοις διὰ τὸ νεῖκος καὶ τὴν φιλίαν ἔνεστι διαφορὰ πρὸς ἄλληλα καὶ πόλεμος, μᾶλλον δὲ τοῖς ἀλλήλων ἀπτομένοις καὶ πελάζουσιν, οὕτω τὸν πᾶσι τοῖς Ἀλεξάνδρου διαδόχοις πρὸς ἀλλήλους ὄντα συνεχῇ πόλεμον αἰ τῶν πραγμάτων καὶ τῶν τύπων συνάφειαι πρὸς ἐνίους ἐποίουν ἐπιφανέστερον καὶ μᾶλλον ἐξέκαον, ὥσπερ Ἀντι-2 γόνῳ τότε πρὸς Πτολεμαῖον, αὐτὸς μὲν Ἀντίγονος ἐν Φρυγίᾳ διέτριβε, Πτολεμαῖον δ' ἀκούων ἐκ 891 Κύπρου διαβάντα πορθεῖν Συρίαν καὶ τὰς πόλεις ἀπάγειν καὶ βιάζεσθαι, κατέπεμψε τὸν υἱὸν Δημήτριον, δύο καὶ εἴκοσιν ἐτῶν ὄντα καὶ στρατείας τότε πρῶτον αὐτοτελῶς ἐπὶ πράγμασι μεγάλοις ἀπτόμενον. οἷα δὲ νέος καὶ ἄπειρος ἀνδρὶ συμπεσῶν ἐκ τῆς Ἀλεξάνδρου παλαιστρας ἠθληκότη πολλοὺς καὶ μεγάλους καθ' αὐτὸν ἀγῶνας, ἐσφάλη περὶ πόλιν Γάζαν ἠττηθείς, ὀκτακισχιλίων 3 ἀλόντων καὶ πεντακισχιλίων ἀποθανόντων. ἀπέ-

DEMETRIUS

ground so that he could see it, "Fly, Mithridates." Mithridates understood, and ran away by night to Cappadocia. And soon the vision of Antigonus was accomplished for him by fate. For Mithridates made himself master of a large and fair territory, and founded the line of Pontic kings, which, in the eighth generation, was brought to an end by the Romans.¹ This, then, is an illustration of the strong natural bent of Demetrius towards kindness and justice.

V. But just as among the elements of the universe, according to Empedocles, love and hate produce mutual dissension and war, particularly among those elements which touch or lie near one another, so the continuous wars which the successors of Alexander waged against one another were aggravated and more inflamed in some cases by the close proximity of interests and territories, as at this time in the case of Antigonus and Ptolemy. Antigonus himself was tarrying in Phrygia, and hearing there that Ptolemy had crossed over from Cyprus and was ravaging Syria and reducing or turning from their allegiance its cities, he sent against him his son Demetrius, who was only twenty-two years of age, and was then for the first time engaging with sole command in an expedition where great interests were at stake. But since he was young and inexperienced, and had for his adversary a man trained in the training-school of Alexander who had independently waged many great contests, he met with utter defeat near the city of Gaza,² where eight thousand of his men were taken prisoners and five thousand were slain. He

¹ In 63 B.C., when Pompey conquered Mithridates VI. and dismembered his kingdom. ² In the spring of 312 B.C.

βαλε δὲ καὶ σκηνὴν καὶ χρήματα καὶ ὅλως σύμπασαν τὴν περὶ τὸ σῶμα θεραπείαν. ἀλλὰ ταῦτα μὲν αὐτῷ Πτολεμαῖος ἀπέπεμψε μετὰ τῶν φίλων, εὐγνώμονα καὶ φιλάνθρωπον ἀνειπὼν λόγον, ὡς οὐ περὶ πάντων ἅμα, περὶ δόξης δὲ καὶ ἀρχῆς πολεμητέον ἐστὶν αὐτοῖς. Δημήτριος δὲ δεξάμενος εὔξατο τοῖς θεοῖς μὴ πολὺν χρόνον ὀφειλέ-την γενέσθαι Πτολεμαίῳ χάριτος, ἀλλὰ ταχέως 4 ἀμείψασθαι διὰ τῶν ὁμοίων. καὶ πάθος οὐ μειρακίου παθὼν ἐν ἀρχῇ πράξεως ἀνατραπέντος, ἀλλ' ἐμβριθοῦς στρατηγοῦ κεχρημένου πραγμάτων μεταβολαῖς, ἀνδρῶν τε συλλογῆς καὶ κατασκευῆς ὀπλων ἐπεμελεῖτο καὶ τὰς πόλεις διὰ χειρὸς εἶχε καὶ τοὺς ἀθροιζομένους ἐγύμναζεν.

VI. Ἀντίγονος δὲ τὴν μάχην πυθόμενος Πτολεμαῖον μὲν ἀγενεῖους νενικηκότα ἔφη νῦν αὖθις διαγωνιεῖσθαι πρὸς ἄνδρας, τοῦ δὲ υἱοῦ τὸ φρόνημα καθελεῖν καὶ κολουῖσαι μὴ βουλόμενος οὐκ ἐνέστη πάλιν αἰτουμένῳ μάχεσθαι καθ' αὐτόν, ἀλλ' ἀφήκε. καὶ μετ' οὐ πολὺν χρόνον ἀφίκτο
 Κίλλης, Πτολεμαίου στρατηγός, μετὰ λαμπρᾶς
 2 δυνάμεως, ὡς ἐξελάσων Συρίας Δημήτριον ἀπά-σης, τῷ προητηῖσθαι καταφρονούμενον. ὁ δ' ἐξαίφνης ἐπιπεσὼν οὐ προαισθομένῳ καὶ φοβήσας ἔλαβεν αὐτῷ στρατηγῷ τὸ στρατόπεδον· καὶ στρατιώτας μὲν ἑπτακισχιλίους ζῶντας εἶλε, χρημάτων δὲ παμπόλλων ἐκυρίευσεν. ἔχαιρε δὲ νικήσας οὐχ οἷς ἔξειν, ἀλλ' οἷς ἀποδώσειν

DEMETRIUS

lost also his tent, his money, and in a word, all his personal effects. But Ptolemy sent these back to him, together with his friends, accompanying them with the considerate and humane message that their warfare must not be waged for all things alike, but only for glory and dominion. Demetrius accepted the kindness, and prayed the gods that he might not long be indebted to Ptolemy for it, but might speedily make him a like return. And he took his disaster, not like a stripling thwarted at the outset of an undertaking, but like a sensible general acquainted with reverses of fortune, and busied himself with the levying of men and the preparation of arms, while he kept the cities well in hand and practised his new recruits.

VI. When Antigonus learned of the battle, he said that Ptolemy had conquered beardless youths, but must now fight with men;¹ however, not wishing to humble or curtail the spirit of his son, he did not oppose his request that he might fight again on his own account, but suffered him to do it. And not long after, up came Cilles, a general of Ptolemy, with a splendid army, intending to drive Demetrius out of all Syria, and looking down upon him because of his previous defeat. But Demetrius fell upon him suddenly and took him by surprise, put him to rout, and captured his camp, general and all; he also took seven thousand of his soldiers prisoners, and made himself master of vast treasures. However, he rejoiced to have won the day, not by reason of what he was going to have, but of what he could

¹ The competitors at the great games were divided into three classes: boys, beardless youths, and men (Plato, Laws, 833 c).

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἔμελλε, καὶ τῆς νίκης οὐ τὸν πλοῦτον οὕτως οὐδὲ τὴν δόξαν, ὡς τὴν διάλυσιν τοῦ φιλανθρωπευ-3 ματος ἐκείνου καὶ τὴν χάριν ἠγάπησεν. οὐ μὴν αὐτογνωμόνως ταῦτα ἔπραξεν, ἀλλ' ἔγραψε τῷ πατρί. δόντος δ' ἐκείνου καὶ κελεύσαντος δν βούλεται πᾶσι χρῆσασθαι τρόπον, αὐτὸν τε τὸν Κίλλην καὶ φίλους αὐτοῦ δωρησάμενος ἀφθόνως ἀπέπεμψε. τοῦτο τὸ πάθος Συρίας ἐξήλασε Πτολεμαῖον, Ἀντίγονον δὲ κατήγαγεν ἐκ Κελαινῶν χαίροντα τῇ νίκῃ καὶ ποθοῦντα θεάσασθαι τὸν υἱόν.

VII. Ἐκ τούτου δὲ τῶν Ἀράβων τοὺς καλουμένους Ναβαταίους ὑπαγαγέσθαι πεμφθεὶς ὁ Δημήτριος ἐκινδύνευσεν μὲν εἰς τόπους ἀνύδρους ἐμπροσθέν, τῷ δὲ μὴ διαταραχθῆναι μηδ' ἐκπλαγῆναι καταπληξάμενος τοὺς βαρβάρους, λείαν τε λαβῶν πολλὴν καὶ καμήλους ἑπτακοσίας παρ' αὐτῶν ἀνεχώρησεν.

2 Ἐπεὶ δὲ Σέλευκος, ἐκπεσὼν μὲν ὑπὸ Ἀντιγόνου τῆς Βαβυλωνίας πρότερον, ὕστερον δὲ ἀναλαβὼν τὴν ἀρχὴν δι' αὐτοῦ καὶ κρατῶν, ἀνέβη μετὰ δυνάμεως, τὰ συνοροῦντα τοῖς Ἰνδοῖς ἔθνη καὶ τὰς περὶ Καύκασον ἐπαρχίας προσαξόμενος, ἐλπίζων Δημήτριος ἔρημον εὐρήσειν τὴν Μεσοποταμίαν καὶ περάσας ἄφνω τὸν Εὐφράτην εἰς τὴν Βαβυλωνίαν παρεισπέσων ἔφθη, καὶ τῆς ἐτέρας ἄκρας (δύο γὰρ ἦσαν) ἐκκρούσας τὴν τοῦ Σελεύκου φρουρὰν καὶ κρατήσας ἰδίου ἐγκατ-
 3 ἔστησεν ἑπτακισχιλίουσ ἀνδρας. ἐκ δὲ τῆς

DEMETRIUS

restore, and was delighted, not so much with the wealth and glory which his victory brought, as with the power it gave him to recompense the kindness and return the favour of Ptolemy. And yet he did not do this on his own responsibility, but first wrote to his father about it. And when his father gave him permission and bade him dispose of everything as he liked, he sent back to Ptolemy both Cilles himself and his friends, after loading them with gifts. This reverse drove Ptolemy out of Syria, and brought Antigonus down from Celaenae; he rejoiced at the victory and yearned to get sight of the son who had won it.

VII. After this, Demetrius was sent to bring into subjection the Arabs known as Nabataean, and incurred great peril by getting into regions which had no water; but he was neither terrified nor greatly disturbed, and his demeanour overawed the Barbarians, so that he took much booty and seven hundred camels from them and returned.

And now Seleucus, who had once been expelled from Babylonia by Antigonus, but had afterwards succeeded in recovering the realm and was now wielding the power there, went up with an army, designing to annex the tribes on the confines of India and the provinces about Mount Caucasus. Demetrius, accordingly, expecting that he would find Mesopotamia unprotected, suddenly crossed the Euphrates and invaded Babylonia before Seleucus could stop him. He expelled from one of its citadels (there were two of them) the garrison left there by Seleucus, got it into his power and established in it seven thousand of his own men. But χώρας ὅσα φέρειν ἢ ἄγειν ἠδύναντο τοὺς στρατιώτας ὠφελεῖσθαι καὶ λαμβάνειν κελεύσας, ἐπανῆλθεν ἐπὶ θάλασσαν βεβαιοτέραν Σελεύκῳ τὴν ἀρχὴν ἀπολιπὼν ἐξίστασθαι γὰρ ἐδόκει τῷ κακοῦν ὡς μηκέτι προσήκουσαν αὐτοῖς. Πτολεμαίου μέντοι πολιορκοῦντος Ἀλικαρνασὸν ὀξέως βοηθήσας ἐξήρπασε τὴν πόλιν.

VIII. Ἐνδόξου δὲ τῆς φιλοτιμίας ταύτης γενομένης, ὄρμῃ παρέστη θαυμάσιος αὐτοῖς ἐλευθεροῦν 892 τὴν Ἑλλάδα πᾶσαν ὑπὸ Κασάνδρου καὶ Πτολεμαίου καταδεδουλωμένην. τούτου πόλεμον οὐδεὶς ἐπολέμησε τῶν βασιλέων καλλίῳ καὶ δικαιότερον ἄς γὰρ ἅμα τοὺς βαρβάρους ταπεινοῦντες εὐπορίας συνήγαγον, εἰς τοὺς Ἕλληνας ὑπὲρ εὐδοξίας 2 καὶ τιμῆς ἀνήλισκον. ὡς δὲ πρῶτον ἐδόκει πλεῖν ἐπὶ τὰς Ἀθήνας, τῶν φίλων εἰπόντος τινὸς πρὸς τὸν Ἀντίγονον ὅτι δεῖ ταύτην τὴν πόλιν, ἂν ἔλωσι, κατέχειν δι' αὐτῶν, ἐπιβάθραν τῆς Ἑλλάδος οὔσαν, οὐ προσέσχευεν ὁ Ἀντίγονος, ἀλλ' ἐπιβάθραν μὲν ἔφη καλὴν καὶ ἀσάλευτον εἶναι τὴν εὐνοίαν, τὰς δὲ Ἀθήνας, ὥσπερ σκοπὴν τῆς οἰκουμένης, ταχὺ τῇ δόξῃ διαπυρσεύειν εἰς ἅπαντας 3 ἀνθρώπους τὰς πράξεις. ἔπλει δὲ Δημήτριος ἔχων ἀργυρίου πεντακισχίλια τάλαντα καὶ στόλον νεῶν πεντήκοντα καὶ διακοσίων ἐπὶ τὰς Ἀθήνας, τὸ μὲν ἄστυ Δημητρίου τοῦ Φαληρέως Κασάνδρῳ διοικούντος, ἐν δὲ τῇ Μουνυχίᾳ φρουρᾶς καθεστῶσης. εὐτυχία δὲ ἅμα καὶ προνοία χρησάμενος ἐπεφαίνετο τῷ Πειραιεῖ πέμπτη

DEMETRIUS

after ordering his soldiers to take and make booty of everything which they could carry or drive from the country, he returned to the sea-coast, leaving Seleucus more confirmed than before in his possession of the realm; for by ravaging the country Demetrius was thought to admit that it no longer belonged to his father. However, while Ptolemy was besieging Halicarnassus, Demetrius came swiftly to the aid of the city and rescued it.

VIII. The glory won by this noble deed inspired father and son with a wonderful eagerness to give freedom to all Greece, which had been reduced to subjection by Cassander and Ptolemy. No nobler or juster war than this was waged by any one of the kings; for the vast wealth which they together had amassed by subduing the Barbarians, was now lavishly spent upon the Greeks, to win glory and honour. As soon as father and son had determined to sail against Athens, one of his friends said to Antigonus that they must keep that city, if they took it, in their own hands, since it was a gangway to Greece. But Antigonus would not hear of it; he said that the goodwill of a people was a noble gangway which no waves could shake, and that Athens, the beacon-tower of the whole world, would speedily flash the glory of their deeds to all mankind. - So Demetrius sailed, with five thousand talents of money and a fleet of two hundred and fifty ships, against Athens, where Demetrius the Phalerean was administering the affairs of the city for Cassander and a garrison was set in Munychia. By virtue of forethought combined with good fortune, he appeared off Piraeus on the twenty-sixth of the

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- 4 φθίνοντος Θαρρηλιῶνος, προαισθημένου μὲν οὐδενός, ἐπεὶ δὲ ὤφθη πλησίον ὁ στόλος, ἀπάντων ὡς Πτολεμαϊκὰς τὰς ναῦς ὑποδέχεσθαι παρασκευαζομένων, ὃφρὲ συμφρονήσαντες ἐβοήθουν οἱ στρατηγοί, καὶ θόρυβος ἦν, οἷον εἰκὸς ἐν ἀπροσδοκῆτῳ πολεμίους ἀποβαίνοντας ἀναγκαζομένων ἀμύνεσθαι. τοῖς γὰρ στόμασι τῶν λιμένων ἀκλείστοις ἐπιτυχῶν ὁ Δημήτριος καὶ διεξελάσας ἐντὸς ἦν ἤδη καταφανῆς πᾶσι, καὶ διεσήμηνεν ἀπὸ τῆς νεῶς αἴτησιν ἡσυχίας καὶ σιωπῆς
- 5 γενομένου δὲ τούτου κήρυκα παραστησάμενος ἀνεῖπεν ὅτι πέμψειεν αὐτὸν ὁ πατὴρ ἀγαθῇ τύχῃ τοὺς Ἀθηναίους¹ ἐλευθερώσοντα καὶ τὴν φρουρὰν ἐκβαλοῦντα καὶ τοὺς νόμους αὐτοῖς καὶ τὴν πατριὸν ἀποδώσοντα πολιτείαν.

IX. Ἀναρρηθέντων δὲ τούτων οἱ μὲν πολλοὶ παραχρῆμα τὰς ἀσπίδας θέμενοι πρὸ τῶν ποδῶν ἀνεκρότησαν καὶ βοῶντες ἐκέλευον ἀποβαίνειν τὸν Δημήτριον, εὐεργέτην καὶ σωτήρα προσαγορεύοντες· οἱ δὲ περὶ τὸν Φαληρέα πάντως μὲν ᾤοντο δεῖν δέχεσθαι τὸν κρατοῦντα, κἂν μηδὲν ὦν ἐπαγγέλλεται μέλλη βεβαιοῦν, ὅμως δὲ πρέσβεις δεομένους² ἀπέστειλαν, οἷς ὁ Δημήτριος ἐντυχῶν φιλανθρώπως συνέπεμψε παρ' ἑαυτοῦ τῶν πατρῶων φίλων τὸν Μιλήσιον Ἀριστόδημον. τοῦ δὲ Φαληρέως διὰ τὴν μεταβολὴν τῆς πολιτείας μᾶλλον τοὺς πολίτας ἢ τοὺς πολεμίους δεδοικότος, οὐκ ἠμέλησεν ὁ Δημήτριος, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὴν δόξαν month Thargelion.¹ Nobody knew beforehand of his approach, but as soon as his fleet was seen in the vicinity, everybody thought that the ships belonged to Ptolemy and prepared to receive them. At last, however, the generals discovered their mistake and came to the rescue, and there was confusion, as is natural when men are compelled to defend themselves against enemies who are making an unexpected landing. For Demetrius, finding the entrances to the harbours open and sailing through them, was presently inside and in view of all, and signalled from his ship a demand for quiet and silence. When this was secured, he proclaimed by voice of herald at his side that he had been sent by his father on what he prayed might be a happy errand, to set Athens free, and to expel her garrison, and to restore to the people their laws and their ancient form of government.

¹ τοὺς Ἀθηναίους Sintenis and Ziegler: Ἀθηναίους.

² δεομένους Bekker has δεησομένους, after Coraës.

DEMETRIUS

IX. On hearing this proclamation, most of the people at once threw their shields down in front of them, and with clapping of hands and loud cries urged Demetrius to land, hailing him as their saviour and benefactor. The party of Demetrius the Phalerean also thought they must by all means receive the conqueror, even though he should confirm none of his promises, but nevertheless sent ambassadors to supplicate his mercy. These Demetrius met in a friendly spirit, and sent back with them one of his father's friends, Aristodemus of Miletus. Now the Phalerean, owing to the change of government, was more afraid of his fellow-citizens than of the enemy. Demetrius, however, was not unmindful of him, but out of regard for the man's αἰδεσθεῖς καὶ τὴν ἀρετὴν τοῦ ἀνδρὸς εἰς Θήβας αὐτόν, ὥσπερ ἐβούλετο, μετὰ ἀσφαλείας συνεξέπεμψεν. αὐτὸς δὲ τὴν μὲν πόλιν, οὐκ ἂν ἔφη, καίπερ ἐπιθυμῶν, ἰδεῖν πρότερον ἢ παντάπασιν ἐλευθερῶσαι τῆς φρουρᾶς ἀπαλλάξας· τῇ δὲ Μουνυχία χαράκωμα καὶ τάφρον περιβαλὼν διὰ μέσου, Μεγάρους ἐπέπλευσεν ὑπὸ Κασάνδρου φρουρουμένοις.

¹ May-June, 307 B.C.

- 3 Πυθόμενος δὲ τὴν Ἀλεξάνδρου τοῦ Πολυέρχοντος γενομένην γυναῖκα Κρατησίπολιν ἐν Πάτραις διατρίβουσαν οὐκ ἂν ἀηδῶς γενέσθαι μετ' αὐτοῦ, περιβόητον οὔσαν ἐπὶ κάλλει, καταλιπὼν τὴν δύναμιν ἐν τῇ Μεγαρικῇ προῆλθεν εὐζώνους τινὰς ἔχων σὺν αὐτῷ. καὶ τούτων πάλιν ἀποστρέψας ἀπεσκήνωσε χωρὶς ὑπὲρ τοῦ λαθεῖν τὴν
- 4 γυναῖκα συνελθοῦσαν αὐτῷ. τοῦτό τινες αἰσθόμενοι τῶν πολεμίων ἐξαίφνης κατέδραμον ἐπ' αὐτόν. ὁ δὲ φοβηθεὶς καὶ λαβὼν χλαμύδιον εὐτελὲς δρόμῳ φεύγων ἐξέφυγεν, ὀλίγου δεήσας αἰσχίστην ἄλωσιν ἐξ ἀκρασίας ἄλῶναι. τὴν δὲ σκηνὴν μετὰ τῶν χρημάτων ᾤχοντο λαβόντες οἱ πολέμοι.

- 5 Τῶν δὲ Μεγάρων ἀλόντων καὶ τῶν στρατιωτῶν 893 ἐφ' ἄρπαγὴν τραπομένων Ἀθηναῖοι παρητήσαντο πολλῇ δεήσει τοὺς Μεγαρεῖς· καὶ τὴν φρουρὰν ὁ Δημήτριος ἐκβαλὼν ἠλευθέρωσε τὴν πόλιν. ἔτι δὲ τοῦτο πράττων τοῦ φιλοσόφου Στίλπωνος ἐμνήσθη, δόξαν ἔχοντος ἀνδρὸς ἡρημένου πως ἐν ἡσυχίᾳ καταβιῶναι. μεταπεμψάμενος οὖν αὐτὸν ἠρώτα μή τις εἴληφέ τι τῶν ἐκείνου. καὶ ὁ Στίλπων, “Οὐδεὶς,” εἶπεν· “οὐδένα γὰρ εἶδον
- 6 ἐπιστάμαν ἀποφέροντα.” τῶν δὲ θεραπόντων

DEMETRIUS

good reputation and excellence, sent him and his friends under safe conduct to Thebes, as he desired. As for himself, he declared that, although he desired to see the city, he would not do so before he had completed its liberation by ridding it of its garrison; meanwhile, after running a trench and a palisade round Munychia, he sailed against Megara, where a garrison had been stationed by Cassander.

But on learning that Cratesipolis, who had been the wife of Polyperchon's son Alexander, was tarrying at Patrae, and would be very glad to make him a visit (and she was a famous beauty), he left his forces in the territory of Megara and set forth, taking a few light-armed attendants with him. And turning aside from these also, he pitched his tent apart, that the woman might pay her visit to him unobserved. Some of his enemies learned of this, and made a sudden descent upon him. Then, in a fright, he donned a shabby cloak and ran for his life and got away, narrowly escaping a most shameful capture in consequence of his rash ardour. His tent, together with his belongings, was carried off by his enemies.

Megara, however, was captured, and the soldiers would have plundered it had not the Athenians made strong intercession for its citizens; Demetrius also expelled its garrison and gave the city its freedom. While he was still engaged in this, he bethought himself of Stilpo the philosopher, who was famous for his election of a life of tranquillity. Accordingly, Demetrius summoned him and asked him whether any one had robbed him of anything. "No one," said Stilpo, "for I saw nobody carrying away knowledge." But nearly all the servants in σχεδὸν ἀπάντων διακλαπέντων, ἐπεὶ πάλιν αὐτὸν ὁ Δημήτριος ἐφιλοφρονεῖτο καὶ τέλος ἀπαλλατόμενος εἶπεν· “Ἐλευθέραν ὑμῶν, ὦ Στίλπων, ἀπολείπω τὴν πόλιν,” “Ὁρθῶς,” ἔφη, “λέγεις· οὐδένα γὰρ ἀμῶν δοῦλον ἀπολέλοιπας.”

X. Ἐπεὶ δὲ πάλιν ἐπανελθὼν πρὸς τὴν Μουνυχίαν καὶ στρατοπεδεύσας ἐξέκοψε τὴν φρουρὰν καὶ κατέσκαψε τὸ φρούριον, οὕτως ἤδη τῶν Ἀθη-ναίων δεχομένων καὶ καλούντων παρελθὼν εἰς τὸ ἄστυ καὶ συναγαγὼν τὸν δῆμον ἀπέδωκε τὴν πάτριον πολιτείαν· καὶ προσυπέσχετο παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς αὐτοῖς ἀφίξεσθαι σίτου πεντεκαίδεκα μυριάδας μεδίμνων καὶ ξύλων ναυπηγησίων 2 πλῆθος εἰς ἑκατὸν τριῆρεις. Ἀθηναῖοι δὲ ἀπολαβόντες τὴν δημοκρατίαν ἔτει πεντεκαιδεκάτῳ, τὸν δὲ μέσον χρόνον ἀπὸ τῶν Λαμιακῶν καὶ τῆς περὶ Κραννῶνα μάχης λόγῳ μὲν ὀλιγαρχικῆς, ἔργῳ δὲ μοναρχικῆς καταστάσεως γενομένης διὰ τὴν τοῦ Φαληρέως δύναμιν, οὕτω λαμπρὸν ἐν ταῖς εὐεργεσίαις καὶ μέγαν φανέντα τὸν Δημήτριον ἐπαχθῆ καὶ βαρὺν ἐποίησαν τῶν τιμῶν 3 ταῖς ἀμετρίαις ἃς ἐψηφίσαντο. πρῶτοι μὲν γὰρ ἀνθρώπων ἀπάντων τὸν Δημήτριον καὶ Ἀντίγονον βασιλεῖς ἀνηγόρευσαν, ἄλλως ἀφοσιουμέ-νους τοῦνομα, καὶ τοῦτο¹ δὴ μόνον τῶν βασιλικῶν ἔτι τοῖς ἀπὸ Φιλίππου καὶ Ἀλεξάνδρου περιεῖναι δοκοῦν ἄθικτον ἐτέροις καὶ ἀκοινωνήτον·

¹ καὶ τοῦτο Coraës and Ziegler delete the καί; Bekker corrects to ὡς, after Schaefer.

DEMETRIUS

the city were stolen away, and when Demetrius once more tried to deal kindly with the philosopher, and finally, on going away, said: "Your city, Stilpo, I leave in freedom," "Thou sayest truly," replied Stilpo, "for thou hast not left a single one of our slaves."

X. Coming back again to Munychia and encamping before it, he drove out the garrison and demolished the fortress, and this accomplished, at last, on the urgent invitation of the Athenians, he made his entry into the upper city, where he assembled the people and gave them back their ancient form of government. He also promised that they should receive from his father a hundred and fifty thousand bushels of grain, and enough ship timber to build a hundred triremes. It was fourteen years since the Athenians had lost their democratic form of government, and during the period which followed the Lamian war and the battle at Crannon¹ their government had been administered, nominally as an oligarchy, but really as a monarchy, owing to the great influence of the Phalerean. And now that Demetrius had shown himself great and splendid in his benefactions, the Athenians rendered him odious and obnoxious by the extravagance of the honours which they voted him. For instance, they were the first people in the world to give Demetrius and Antigonus the title of King, although both had up to that time shrunk from using the word, and although this was the only royal prerogative still left to the descendants of Philip and Alexander which it was thought that others could not assume or share;

¹ 323-322 B.C. See the Phocion, xxiii.; xxvi. 1.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

μόνοι δὲ σωτήρας ἀνέγραψαν θεούς, καὶ τὸν ἐπώ-νυμον καὶ πάτριον ἄρχοντα καταπαύσαντες ἱερέα σωτήρων ἐχειροτόνου καθ' ἕκαστον ἐνιαυτόν· καὶ τοῦτον ἐπὶ τῶν ψηφισμάτων καὶ τῶν συμβο-4 λαιῶν προέγραφον. ἐνυφαίνεσθαι δὲ τῷ πέπλῳ μετὰ τῶν θεῶν αὐτοὺς ἐψηφίσαντο· καὶ τὸν τό-πον ὅπου πρῶτον ἀπέβη τοῦ ἄρματος, καθιερώ-σαντες καὶ βωμὸν ἐπιθέντες Δημητρίου Καται-βάτου προσηγόρευσαν· ταῖς δὲ φυλαῖς δύο προσέθεσαν, Δημητριάδα καὶ Ἀντιγονίδα, καὶ τὴν βουλὴν τῶν πεντακοσίων πρότερον ἑξακοσίων ἐποίησαν, ἅτε δὴ φυλῆς ἐκάστης πεντήκοντα βουλευτὰς παρεχομένης.

XI. Τὸ δὲ ὑπερφυέστατον ἐνθύμημα τοῦ Στρατοκλέους (οὗτος γὰρ ἦν ὁ τῶν σοφῶν τούτων καὶ περιτῶν καινουργὸς ἀρεσκευμάτων), ἔγραψεν ὅπως οἱ πεμπόμενοι κατὰ ψήφισμα δημοσίᾳ πρὸς Ἀντίγονον ἢ Δημήτριον ἀντὶ πρεσβευτῶν θεωροὶ λέγοιντο, καθάπερ οἱ Πυθοῖ καὶ Ὀλυμπίαζε τὰς πατρίους θυσίας ὑπὲρ τῶν πό-2 λεων ἀνάγοντες ἐν ταῖς Ἑλληνικαῖς ἑορταῖς. ἦν δὲ καὶ τᾶλλα παράτολμος ὁ Στρατοκλῆς, καὶ βεβιωκῶς ἀσελγῶς καὶ τὴν τοῦ παλαιοῦ Κλέωνος ἀπομιμῆσθαι δοκῶν βωμολοχίαν καὶ βδε-λυρίαν τῇ πρὸς τὸν δῆμον εὐχερεία. ἔσχε δὲ τὴν ἑταίραν Φυλάκιον ἀνειληφώς· καὶ ποτε αὐτῷ

¹ Every fifth year, at the Panathenaic festival, a sacred robe was carried in solemn procession and deposited with

DEMETRIUS

moreover, the Athenians were the only people to give them the appellation of Saviour-gods, and they put a stop to the ancient custom of designating the year with the name of the annual archon, and elected every year a priest of the Saviour-gods, whose name they prefixed to their public edicts and private contracts. They also decreed that the figures of Demetrius and Antigonus should be woven into the sacred robe,¹ along with those of the gods; and the spot where Demetrius first alighted from his chariot they consecrated and covered with an altar, which they styled the altar of Demetrius Alighter; they also created two new tribes, Demetrias and Antigonis; and they increased the number of the senators, which had been five hundred, to six hundred, since each of the tribes must furnish fifty senators.

XI. But the most monstrous thing that came into the head of Stratocles (he it was who invented these elegant and clever bits of obsequiousness) was his motion that envoys sent by public decree and at public expense to Antigonus or Demetrius should be called sacred deputies, instead of ambassadors, like those who conducted to Delphi and Olympia the ancient sacrifices in behalf of the cities at the great Hellenic festivals. In all other ways also Stratocles was an audacious fellow; he lived an abandoned life, and was thought to imitate the scurrility and buffoonery of the ancient Cleon in his familiarities with the people. He had taken up with a mistress named Phylacion; and one day when she had bought the goddess Athena on the Acropolis. On it were represented the exploits of the goddess, particularly in the Battle of the Giants.

πρὸς δειπνον ἐξ ἀγορᾶς πριαμένης ἐγκεφάλους καὶ τραχήλους, “Παπαί,” εἶπε, “τοιαῦτά γε ὠψώνηκας οἷς σφαιρίζομεν οἱ πολιτευόμενοι.” 3 τῆς δὲ περὶ Ἀμοργὸν ἤττης τῶν νεῶν συμβάσης τοῖς Ἀθηναίοις, φθάσας τοὺς ἀπαγγέλλοντας εἰσήλασεν ἐστεφανωμένος διὰ τοῦ Κεραμεικοῦ, καὶ προσαγγείλας ὅτι νενικήκασιν, εὐαγγέλια θύειν ἔγραψε καὶ κρεωδαισίαν τινὰ κατὰ φυλὴν ἐποίησεν. ὀλίγῳ δ’ ὕστερον τῶν τὰ ναυάγια κο- 894 μιζόντων ἀπὸ τῆς μάχης παραγενομένων καὶ τοῦ δήμου πρὸς ὀργὴν καλοῦντος αὐτόν, ἰταμῶς ὑπο-σταὶς τὸν θόρυβον, “Εἶτα,” ἔφη, “τί πεπόνθατε δεινόν, εἰ δύο ἡμέρας ἠδέως γεγόνατε;” τοιαύτη μὲν ἡ τοῦ Στρατοκλέους θρασυτήης.

XII. Ἦν δὲ ἄρα καὶ πυρὸς ἕτερα θερμότερα κατὰ τὸν Ἀριστοφάνη. γράφει γάρ τις ἄλλος ὑπερβαλλόμενός ἀνελευθερίᾳ τὸν Στρατοκλέα, δέχεσθαι Δημήτριον, ὁσάκις ἂν ἀφίκηται, τοῖς Δήμητρος καὶ Διονύσου ξενισμοῖς, τῷ δ’ ὑπερ-βαλλομένῳ λαμπρότητι καὶ πολυτελείᾳ τὴν ὑποδοχὴν ἀργύριον εἰς ἀνάθημα δημοσίᾳ δίδο-2 σθαι. τέλος δὲ τῶν τε μηνῶν τὸν Μουνυχιῶνα
 Δημητριῶνα καὶ τῶν ἡμερῶν τὴν ἔνην καὶ νέαν
 Δημητριάδα προσηγόρευσαν, καὶ τῶν ἐορτῶν τὰ Διονύσια μετωνόμασαν Δημήτρια. ἐπεσήμηνε δὲ τοῖς πλείστοις τὸ θεῖον. ὁ μὲν γὰρ πέπλος, ᾧ περ ἐψηφίσαντο μετὰ τοῦ Διὸς καὶ τῆς Ἀθηναῖς προσενυφῆναι Δημήτριον καὶ Ἀντίγονον, πεμ-28

DEMETRIUS

in the market-place for his supper some brains and neck-bones, "Aha!" he cried, "thou hast bought just such delicacies for me as we statesmen used to play ball with." Again, when the Athenians suffered their naval defeat near Amorgus,¹ before the tidings of the disaster could reach the city he put a garland on his head and drove through the Cerameicus, and after announcing that the Athenians were victorious, moved a sacrifice of glad tidings and made a generous distribution of meat to the people by tribes. Then, a little later, when the wrecks were brought home from the battle and the people in their wrath called him out, he faced the tumult recklessly and said: "What harm have I done you, pray, if for two days ye have been happy?" Such was the effrontery of Stratocles.

XII. But there are things hotter even than fire, as Aristophanes puts it.² For some one else, out-doing Stratocles in servility, proposed that whenever Demetrius visited the city he should be received with the hospitable honours paid to Demeter and Dionysus, and that to the citizen who surpassed all others in the splendour and costliness of his reception, a sum of money should be granted from the public treasury for a dedicatory offering. And finally, they changed the name of the month Mounychion to Demetrium, and that of the last day of a month, the "Old and New," to Demetrias, and to the festival called Dionysia they gave the new name of Demetria. Most of these innovations were marked with the divine displeasure. The sacred robe, for instance, in which they had decreed that the figures of Demetrius and Antigonus should be woven along with those of Zeus and

¹ In 322 B.C. A Macedonian fleet was victorious.

² Knights, 382.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES.

3 πόμενος διὰ τοῦ Κεραμεικοῦ μέσος ἐρράγη θυέ-λης ἐμπεσοῦσης· περὶ δὲ τοὺς βωμοὺς τοὺς ἐκείνων ἐξήνθησεν ἡ γῆ κύκλω πολὺ κώνειον, ἄλλως μηδὲ τῆς χώρας πολλαχοῦ φυόμενον· τῇ δὲ ἡμέρᾳ ἣ τὰ τῶν Διονυσίων ἐγίνετο, τὴν πομπὴν κατέλυσαν ἰσχυρῶν πάγων γενομένων παρ' ὄραν.
 καὶ πάχνης βαθείας ἐπιπεσοῦσης οὐ μόνον ἀμπέλους καὶ συκᾶς ἀπάσας ἀπέκαυσέ τὸ ψύχος, 4 ἐν χλόῃ. διὸ καὶ Φιλιππίδης ἐχθρὸς ὢν τοῦ Στρατοκλέους ἐν κωμωδίᾳ πρὸς αὐτὸν ἐποίησε ταῦτα·

δι' ὃν ἀπέκαυσεν ἡ πάχνη τὰς ἀμπέλους, δι' ὃν ἀσεβοῦνθ' ὁ πέπλος ἐρράγη μέσος, τὰς τῶν θεῶν τιμὰς ποιοῦντ' ἀνθρωπίνας.
 ταῦτα καταλύει δῆμον, οὐ κωμωδία.

5 Ἦν δὲ ὁ Φιλιππίδης Λυσιμάχου φίλος, καὶ πολλὰ δι' αὐτὸν ὁ δῆμος εὖ ἔπαθεν ὑπὸ τοῦ βασιλέως. ἐδόκει δὲ καὶ πρὸς πρᾶξιν αὐτῷ καὶ πρὸς στρατείαν εὐσύμβολος ἀπαντήσας εἶναι καὶ ὀφθεῖς. ἄλλως δὲ καὶ διὰ τὸ ἦθος εὐδοκίμει, μηθὲν ἐνοχλῶν μηδ' αὐλικῆς περιεργίας ἀνα-πιμπλάμενος. φιλοφρονουμένου δέ ποτε τοῦ Λυσιμάχου πρὸς αὐτὸν καὶ εἰπόντος, “ὦ Φιλιππίδη, τίνος σοι τῶν ἐμῶν μεταδῶ;” “Μόνον,” ἔφη, “βασιλεῦ, μὴ τῶν ἀπορρήτων.” τοῦτου μὲν

DEMETRIUS

Athena, as it was being carried in procession through the midst of the Cerameicus, was rent by a hurricane which smote it;¹ again, all around the altars of those Saviour-gods the soil teemed with hemlock, a plant which did not grow in many other parts of the country at all; and on the day for the celebration of the Dionysia, the sacred procession had to be omitted on account of severe cold weather that came out of season. And a heavy frost followed, which not only blasted all the vines and fig-trees with its cold, but also destroyed most of the grain in the blade. Therefore Philippides, who was an enemy of Stratocles, assailed him in a comedy with these verses² :—

“ Through him it was that hoar-frost blasted all the vines,
Through his impiety the robe was rent in twain,
Because he gave the gods' own honours unto men.
Such work undoes a people, not its comedy.”

Philippides was a friend of Lysimachus, and for his sake the king bestowed many favours on the Athenian people. Moreover, when he was about to undertake anything or make an expedition, he thought it a good omen to meet or catch sight of Philippides. And in general the character of Philippides gave him a good repute, since he was no busybody, and had none of the officious ways of a courtier. On one occasion Lysimachus wished to do him a kindness, and said: “ Philippides, what have I that I can share with thee?” “ O King,” said Philippides, “ anything but one of thy state secrets.”

¹ The “ peplos ” was spread like a sail on the mast of the sacred Panathenaic ship.

² Cf. Kock, Com. Att. Frag. iii. p. 308.

οὖν ἐπίτηδες ἐκείνῳ παρεθήκαμεν, τῷ ἀπὸ τοῦ βήματος τὸν ἀπὸ τῆς θυμέλης.

XIII. Ὁ δὲ μάλιστα τῶν τιμῶν ὑπερφυῆς ἦν καὶ ἀλλόκοτον, ἔγραψε Δρομοκλείδης ὁ Σφήττιος ὑπὲρ τῆς τῶν ἀσπίδων ἀναθέσεως εἰς Δελφοὺς παρὰ Δημητρίου λαβεῖν χρησμόν. αὐτὴν δὲ παραγράφῳ τὴν λέξιν ἐκ τοῦ ψηφίσματος οὕτως ² ἔχουσιν. “Ἀγαθῇ τύχῃ. δεδόχθαι τῷ δήμῳ χειροτονῆσαι τὸν δῆμον ἓνα ἄνδρα ἐξ Ἀθηναίων, ὅστις ἀφικόμενος πρὸς τὸν Σωτήρα καὶ καλλιερησάμενος ἐπερωτήσῃ τὸν Σωτήρα πῶς ἂν εὐσεβέστατα καὶ κάλλιστα καὶ τὴν ταχίστην ὁ δῆμος τὴν ἀποκατάστασιν ποιήσῃ τῶν ἀναθημάτων· ὃ τι δ’ ἂν χρῆση, ταῦτα πράττειν τὸν δῆμον.” οὕτω καταμωκώμενοι τοῦ ἀνθρώπου προσδιέφθειραν αὐτόν, οὐδὲ ἄλλως ὑγιαίνοντα τὴν διάνοιαν.

XIV. Ἄλλ’ ἐν γὰρ ταῖς Ἀθήναις τότε σχολάζων ἠγάγετο χηρεύουσαν Εὐρυδίκην, ἣ Μιλτιάδου μὲν ἦν ἀπόγονος τοῦ παλαιοῦ, συνοικήσασα δὲ Ὀφέλα¹ τῷ Κυρήνης ἄρξαντι μετὰ τὴν ἐκείνου τελευτὴν ² ἀφίκετο πάλιν εἰς τὰς Ἀθήνας. οἱ μὲν οὖν Ἀθηναῖοι τὸν γάμον τούτου εἰς χάριν ἔθεντο καὶ τιμὴν τῆς πόλεως· ἄλλως δὲ ὁ Δημήτριος εὐχερῆς τις ἦν περὶ γάμους, καὶ πολλαῖς ἅμα συνῆν γυναιξίν, ὧν ἀξίωμα μέγιστον εἶχε καὶ τιμὴν Φίλα δι’ Ἀντίπατρον τὸν πατέρα καὶ διὰ τὸ προσυμφωκῆναι Κρατερῷ, τῷ πλείστην εὖνοιαν

895

¹ Ὀφέλα Ziegler, after Wilamowitz: Ὀφέλα.

DEMETRIUS

Such a man, then, I purposely compare with Stratoles, the man of the stage with the man of the bema.

XIII. But there was one honour proposed for Demetrius which was more strange and monstrous than any other. Dromocleides the Sphettian moved, when the dedication of certain shields at Delphi was in question, that the Athenians should get an oracle from Demetrius. And I will transcribe his very words from the decree; they run thus: "May it be for the best.¹ Decreed by the people that the people elect one man from the Athenians, who shall go to the Saviour-god, and, after a sacrifice with good omens, shall enquire of the Saviour-god in what most speedy, decorous, and reverent manner the people may accomplish the restoration to their places of the dedicatory offerings; and that whatever answer he shall give, the people shall act according thereunto." With such mockery of adulation they finally perverted the man's mind, which even before was not wholly sound.

XIV. Furthermore, while he lingered in Athens at this time, Demetrius took to wife Eurydicé, a widow. She was a descendant of the ancient Miltiades, had married Ophelas the ruler of Cyrené, and after his death had come back to Athens. The Athenians, accordingly, took this marriage as a graceful compliment to their city; but in general Demetrius made a rather light matter of marriages, and had many wives at the same time, of whom Phila enjoyed the greatest esteem and honour, both because of her father, Antipater, and because she had been the wife of Craterus, the one of all the successors of Alexander

¹ A pious formula prefixed to important documents.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

αὐτοῦ παρὰ Μακεδόσι τῶν Ἀλεξάνδρου διαδόχων ἀπολιπόντι. ταύτην, ὡς ἔοικε, κομιδῇ νέον ὄντα τὸν Δημήτριον ἔπειθεν ὁ πατήρ, οὐκ οὔσαν αὐτῷ 3 καθ' ὥραν, ἀλλὰ πρεσβυτέραν, λαβεῖν· ἀπροθύμως δ' ἔχοντι λέγεται πρὸς τὸ οὖς τὸ Εὐριπίδειον εἰπεῖν·

ὅπου τὸ κέρδος, παρὰ φύσιν γαμητέον,¹ ὁμοιόπτωτόν τι τῷ δουλευτέον εὐθυρρημονήσας. τοιαύτη μὲν οὖν τις ἦν ἢ τοῦ Δημητρίου τιμὴ πρὸς τε Φίλαν καὶ τὰς ἄλλας γαμετὰς ὥστε πολλαῖς μὲν ἀνέδην ἐταίραις, πολλαῖς δὲ ἐλευθέραις συνείναι γυναιξί, καὶ μάλιστα δὴ περὶ τὴν ἡδονὴν ταύτην κακῶς ἀκούσαι τῶν τότε βασιλέων.

XV. Ἐπεὶ δὲ ὁ πατήρ αὐτὸν ἐκάλει Πτολεμαίῳ περὶ Κύπρου πολεμήσοντα, πείθεσθαι μὲν ἦν ἀναγκαῖον, ἀχθόμενος δὲ ὅτι τὸν ὑπὲρ τῆς Ἑλλάδος πόλεμον, ὄντα καλλίω καὶ λαμπρότερον, ἀπολείπει, προσέπεμψε Κλεωνίδῃ τῷ Πτολεμαίου στρατηγῷ φρουροῦντι Σικυῶνα καὶ Κόρινθον χρήματα προτείνων, ὥστε ἐλευθέρως ἀφεῖναι τὰς
 2 πόλεις. οὐ προσδεξαμένοι δὲ ἐκείνου, διὰ ταχέων ἀναχθεῖς καὶ προσλαβὼν δύναμιν ἐπέπλευσε Κύπρῳ. καὶ Μενέλαον μὲν, ἀδελφὸν Πτολεμαίου, μάχην συνάψας εὐθὺς ἐνίκησεν· αὐτοῦ δὲ Πτολεμαίου μετὰ δυνάμεως πεζικῆς ἅμα καὶ ναυτικῆς μεγάλῃς ἐπιφανέντος, ἐγένοντο μὲν ἀπειλαὶ τινες καὶ διάλογοι κομπῶδεις, τοῦ μὲν ἀποπλεῖν Δη-

¹ ἀλλ' εἰς τὸ κέρδος παρὰ φύσιν δουλευτέον, Rhoenissae, 396 (Kirchhoff).

DEMETRIUS

who left behind him the most goodwill among the Macedonians. This woman, as it would appear, his father had persuaded Demetrius to marry when he was quite young, although she was not of his age, but older; and when his son was disinclined to the match, it is said that Antigonus whispered in his ear the verse of Euripides:

“Where there is gain, 'gainst nature's dictates must one wed,”

substituting off-hand “must one wed” for the similar inflection “must one serve.” However, so slight was the respect which Demetrius paid to Phila and to the rest of his wives, that he consorted freely with many courtesans, as well as with many women of free birth, and as regards this indulgence he had the worst reputation of all the kings of his time.

XV. And now his father summoned him to wage war against Ptolemy for the possession of Cyprus. He must needs obey the summons, but was loth to abandon the war for the liberation of Greece, which was a nobler and more glorious war, and therefore sent to Cleonides, the general of Ptolemy who was occupying Sicyon and Corinth with a garrison, and offered him money to set the cities free. Cleonides, however, would not accept the bribe, and Demetrius therefore put to sea in haste, and taking additional forces, sailed against Cyprus.¹ There he joined battle with Menelaüs, a brother of Ptolemy, and promptly defeated him; but Ptolemy himself appeared on the scene with a large land and naval force combined, and there were sundry interchanges of threats and boasts, Ptolemy ordering Demetrius to μήτριον κελεύοντος πρὶν ὑπὸ τῆς δυνάμεως πάσης ἀθροισθείσης καταπατηθῆναι, Δημητρίου δὲ ἐκείνον ἀφεῖναι φάσκοντος, ἂν ὁμολογήσῃ Σικυῶνα καὶ Κόρινθον ἀπαλλάξειν τῆς φρουρᾶς.

¹ In 306 B.C.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- 3 ὁ δὲ ἀγὼν οὐ μόνον αὐτοῖς ἐκείνοις, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις ἅπασιν δυνάσταις πολλὴν εἶχε προσδοκίαν τῆς ἐπικρεμαμένης ἀδηλότητος, ὡς οὐ Κύπρον οὐδὲ Συρίαν, ἀλλὰ τὸ μέγιστον εὐθύς εἶναι πάντων τῶ κρατοῦντι τῆς νίκης προστιθείσης.

XVI. Αὐτὸς μὲν οὖν ὁ Πτολεμαῖος ἐπέπλει πενήκοντα καὶ ἑκατὸν ναῦς ἔχων, ἐκ δὲ Σαλαμίνας ἐκέλευσε Μενέλαον ἐξήκοντα ναυσίν, ὅταν μάλιστα σύστασιν ὁ ἀγὼν ἔχῃ, προσφερόμενον τὰς Δημητρίου κόπτειν ἐξόπισθεν καὶ διαταράττειν τὴν τάξιν. Δημήτριος δὲ ταῖς μὲν ἐξήκοντα ταύταις ἀντέταξε δέκα ναῦς (τοσαῦται γὰρ ἦρκουν στενὸν ὄντα τοῦ λιμένος ἐμφράξαι τὸν ἑκπλοῦν),

2 αὐτὸς δὲ τὸ πεζὸν ἐκτάξας καὶ τοῖς ἀνατείνουσιν εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν ἀκρωτηρίοις περιχεύμενος, οὕτως ἀνήχθη ναυσίν ἑκατὸν ὀγδοήκοντα· προσμίξας δὲ ῥώμῃ καὶ βίᾳ πολλῇ κατὰ κράτος ἐτρέψατο τὸν Πτολεμαῖον, αὐτὸν μὲν, ὡς ἐνικῆθη, διὰ ταχέων φυγόντα ναυσίν ὀκτὼ μόναίς (τοσαῦται γὰρ ἐκ πασῶν περιεσώθησαν, τῶν δὲ ἄλλων αἱ μὲν ἐν τῇ ναυμαχίᾳ διεφθάρησαν, ἐβδομήκοντα δὲ

3 ἤλωσαν αὐτανδροί), τοῦ δὲ ἐν ὀλκάσι παρορμῶντος ὄχλου θεραπόντων καὶ φίλων καὶ γυναικῶν, ἔτι δὲ ὄπλων καὶ χρημάτων καὶ μηχανημάτων ἀπλῶς οὐδὲν ἐξέφυγε τὸν Δημήτριον, ἀλλ' ἔλαβε πάντα καὶ κατήγαγεν εἰς τὸ στρατόπεδον. ἐν δὲ τούτοις ἡ περιβόητος ἦν Λάμια, τὴν μὲν ἀρχὴν σπουδασθεῖσα διὰ τὴν τέχνην (ἐδόκει γὰρ αὐλεῖν sail away before the entire force should assemble and crush him, and Demetrius offering to let Ptolemy go if he would agree to withdraw his garrisons from Sicyon and Corinth. And not only Demetrius and Ptolemy themselves, but also all the other potentates, awaited with great expectancy the uncertain issue of the impending struggle; they felt that not Cyprus, nor yet Syria, but the absolute supremacy would at once be the prize of the victor.

DEMETRIUS

XVI. Well, then, Ptolemy himself sailed to the attack with a hundred and fifty ships, and ordered Menelaüs to put out from Salamis with sixty ships, and when the struggle was fiercest, to assail the ships of Demetrius in the rear, and throw them into confusion. But to these sixty ships Demetrius opposed only ten ships (for that small number sufficed to block the narrow exit from the harbour), while he himself, after first drawing out his land forces and encompassing the headlands that extended into the sea, put out to battle with a hundred and eighty ships. He made his onset with great impetus and force, and utterly routed Ptolemy. Ptolemy himself, after his defeat, fled swiftly with eight ships only (for that small number were left from his whole fleet; of the rest, some had been destroyed in the sea-fight, and seventy had been captured, crews and all), but of the throng of attendants, friends, and women which lay in ships of burden close at hand, and further, of all Ptolemy's arms, money, and engines of war, absolutely nothing escaped Demetrius, but he took everything and brought it safely into his camp. Among this booty was the celebrated Lamia, originally held in esteem for her artistic skill (she was thought to play the flute quite admirably), οὐκ εὐκαταφρονήτως), ὕστερον δὲ καὶ τοῖς ἐρωτι-4 κοῖς λαμπρὰ γενομένη. τότε γοῦν ἤδη λήγουσα τῆς ὥρας καὶ πολὺ νεώτερον ἑαυτῆς λαβοῦσα τὸν Δημήτριον ἐκράτησε τῇ χάριτι καὶ κατέσχευεν, ὥστε ἐκείνης εἶναι μόνης ἐραστήν, τῶν δ' ἄλλων ἐρώμενον γυναικῶν.

Μετὰ δὲ τὴν ναυμαχίαν οὐδὲ ὁ Μενέλαος ἀντέσχευεν, ἀλλὰ τὴν τε Σαλαμίνα παρέδωκε τῷ Δημητρίῳ καὶ τὰς ναῦς καὶ τὸ πεζόν, ἰππεῖς τε 896 χιλίους καὶ διακοσίους καὶ μυρίους καὶ δισχιλίους ὀπλίτας.

XVII. Οὕτω δὲ λαμπρὰν καὶ καλὴν τὴν νίκην γενομένην ἔτι μᾶλλον ἐπικοσμῶν ὁ Δημήτριος εὐγνωμοσύνη καὶ φιλανθρωπία τοὺς νεκροὺς τῶν πολεμίων ἔθαψε μεγαλοπρεπῶς καὶ τοὺς αἰχμα-λώτους ἀφῆκεν. Ἀθηναίοις δὲ χιλίας καὶ δια-κοσίας ἀπὸ τῶν λαφύρων ἐδωρήσατο πανοπλίας.
 2 Αὐτάγγελον δὲ τῆς νίκης τῷ πατρὶ τὸν Μιλή-σιον Ἀριστόδημον ἔπεμψε, πρωτεύοντα κολακεία τῶν αὐλικῶν ἀπάντων, καὶ τότε παρεσκευασμένον, ὡς ἔοικε, τῶν κολακευμάτων τὸ μέγιστον ἐπενεγ-κεῖν τοῖς πράγμασιν. ὡς γὰρ ἐπέρασεν ἀπὸ τῆς Κύπρου, προσέχειν μὲν οὐκ εἶασε τῇ γῇ τὸ πλοῖον, ἀγκύρας δ' ἀφείναι κελεύσας καὶ κατὰ ναῦν ἔχειν 3 ἀτρέμα πάντα, αὐτὸς ἐμβὰς εἰς τὸ ἐφόλκιον ἐξῆλθε μόνος καὶ πρὸς τὸν Ἀντίγονον ἀνέβαινε, μετέωρον ὄντα τῇ προσδοκίᾳ τῆς μάχης καὶ διακειόμενον ὡς εἰκὸς ἐστὶ διακεῖσθαι τοὺς περὶ πραγμάτων τηλικούτων ἀγωνιῶντας. τότε γε μὴν ἀκούσας ἐκείνου ἤκειν ἔτι μᾶλλον ἢ πρότερον ἔσχε ταρα-χωδῶς, καὶ μόλις μὲν αὐτὸν οἶκοι κατεῖχεν, ἄλλους δ' ἐπ' ἄλλοις ἔπεμπεν ὑπηρέτας καὶ

DEMETRIUS

but afterwards becoming illustrious in the annals of love also. At this time, at any rate, although she was past her prime and found Demetrius much younger than herself, she so mastered and swayed him by her charms that he was a lover for her alone, but a beloved for all other women.

After the sea-fight, Menelaüs also made no further resistance, but handed over Salamis to Demetrius, together with his fleet, and his land forces, which comprised twelve hundred horsemen and twelve thousand men-at-arms.

XVII. This victory, which was so fair and brilliant, Demetrius adorned still more by his humanity and kindness of heart. He gave the enemy's dead a magnificent burial, and set his captives free; moreover, upon the Athenians he bestowed twelve hundred suits of armour from the spoils.

As his special messenger to carry word of the victory to his father, Demetrius sent Aristodemus of Miletus, the arch-flatterer among all his courtiers, and ready now, as it would seem, to crown the achievement with the grossest of his flatteries. For when he had crossed over from Cyprus, he would not suffer his vessel to come to land, but ordered the crew to cast anchor and remain quietly on board, all of them, while he himself got into the ship's small boat, landed alone, and proceeded towards Antigonus, who was anxiously awaiting news of the battle, and was disposed as men are apt to be disposed who are struggling for so high a stake. And now, indeed, when he heard that Aristodemus was coming, he was more disturbed than before, and, with difficulty keeping himself indoors, sent servants and friends,

4 φίλους πεισομένους τοῦ Ἀριστοδήμου περὶ τῶν γεγονότων. ἀποκρινομένου δὲ μηδὲν αὐτοῦ μηδεὶ, βιάην δὲ καὶ συνεστῶτι τῷ προσώπῳ μετὰ πολλῆς σιωπῆς προσίοντος, ἐκπλαγεὶς κομιδῇ καὶ μηκέτι καρτερῶν ὁ Ἀντίγονος ἐπὶ τὰς θύ-ρας ἀπήντησε, πολλοῦ παραπέμποντος ἤδη τὸν 5 Ἀριστόδημον ὄχλου καὶ συντρέχοντος ἐπὶ τὸ βασιλείου. ὡς οὖν ἐγγὺς ἦλθεν, ἐκτείνας τὴν δεξιὰν ἀνεβόησε μεγάλη τῇ φωνῇ “Χαῖρε, βασι-λεῦ Ἀντίγονε, νικῶμεν Πτολεμαῖον ναυμαχία καὶ Κύπρον ἔχομεν καὶ στρατιώτας αἰχμαλώτους μυρίους ἑξακισχιλίους ὀκτακοσίους.” ὁ δὲ Ἀντίγονος, “Καὶ σύ, νῆ Δία, χαῖρε,” εἶπεν “οὕτω δὲ ἡμᾶς βασανίσας δίκην ὑφέξεις· βράδιον γὰρ ἀπολήψῃ τὸ εὐαγγέλιον.”

XVIII. Ἐκ τούτου πρῶτον ἀνεφώνησε τὸ πλήθος Ἀντίγονον καὶ Δημήτριον βασιλέας.
Ἀντίγονον μὲν οὖν εὐθύς ἀνέδησαν οἱ φίλοι, Δημητρίῳ δὲ ὁ πατήρ ἔπεμψε διάδημα καὶ γράφων ἐπιστολὴν βασιλέα προσεῖπεν. οἱ δ' ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ τούτων ἀπαγγελλομένων καὶ αὐτοὶ βασιλέα τὸν Πτολεμαῖον ἀνηγόρευσαν, ὡς μὴ δοκεῖν τοῦ φρονήματος ὑφίσσθαι διὰ τὴν ἡτταν.
2 ἐπενείματο δὲ οὕτως τὸ πρᾶγμα τῷ ζήλῳ τοῦς διαδόχους. καὶ γὰρ Λυσίμαχος ἤρξατο φορεῖν διάδημα, καὶ Σέλευκος ἐντυγχάνων τοῖς Ἑλλησιν, ἐπεὶ τοῖς γε βαρβάρους πρότερον οὗτος ὡς βασιλεὺς ἐχρημάτιζε. Κάσανδρος δέ, τῶν ἄλλων αὐτὸν βασιλέα καὶ γραφόντων καὶ καλούντων, αὐτός, ὥσπερ πρότερον εἰώθει, τὰς ἐπιστολάς ἔγραφε.

DEMETRIUS

one after the other, to learn from Aristodemus what had happened. Aristodemus, however, would make no answer to anybody, but step by step and with a solemn face drew near in perfect silence. Antigonus, therefore, thoroughly frightened, and no longer able to restrain himself, came to the door to meet Aristodemus, who was now escorted by a large throng which was hurrying to the palace. Accordingly, when he had come near, he stretched out his hand and cried with a loud voice: "Hail, King Antigonus, we have conquered Ptolemy in a sea-fight, and now hold Cyprus, with twelve thousand eight hundred soldiers as prisoners of war." To this Antigonus replied: "Hail to thee also, by Heaven! but for torturing us in this way, thou shalt undergo punishment; the reward for thy good tidings thou shalt be some time in getting."

XVIII. Upon this, the multitude for the first time saluted Antigonus and Demetrius as kings. Antigonus, accordingly, was immediately crowned by his friends, and Demetrius received a diadem from his father, with a letter in which he was addressed as King. The followers of Ptolemy in Egypt on their part also, when these things were reported to them, gave him the title of King, that they might not appear to lose spirit on account of their defeat. And thus their emulation carried the practice among the other successors of Alexander. For Lysimachus began to wear a diadem, and Seleucus also in his interviews with the Greeks; with the Barbarians he had before this dealt as king. Cassander, however, although the others gave him the royal title in their letters and addresses, wrote his letters in his own untitled name, as he had been wont to do.

- 3 Τοῦτο δὲ οὐ προσθήκη ονόματος καὶ σχήματος ἐξαλλαγὴν εἶχε μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὰ φρονήματα τῶν ἀνδρῶν ἐκίνησε καὶ τὰς γνώμας ἐπῆρε καὶ τοῖς βίοις καὶ ταῖς ὀμιλίαις αὐτῶν ὄγκον ἐνεποίησε καὶ βαρύτητα, καθάπερ τραγικῶν ὑποκριτῶν ἅμα τῇ σκευῇ συµμεταβαλλόντων καὶ βάδισμα καὶ 4 φωνὴν καὶ κατάκλισιν καὶ προσαγόρευσιν. ἐκ δὲ τούτων ἐγένοντο καὶ περὶ τὰς δικαιοῦσαι βιαιότεροι, τὴν εἰς πολλὰ παρέχουσιν αὐτοὺς ἐλαφροτέρους καὶ μαλακωτέρους τοῖς ὑπηκόοις πρότερον εἰρωνείαν τῆς ἐξουσίας ἀφελόντες. τοσοῦτον ἴσχυσε κόλακος φωνὴ μία καὶ τοσαύτης ἐνέπλησε τὴν οἰκουμένην μεταβολῆς.

XIX. Ἀντίγονος δὲ τοῖς πεπραγμένοις ὑπὸ Δημητρίου περὶ Κύπρον ἐπαρθεὶς εὐθύς ἐστρά-τευσεν ἐπὶ Πτολεμαῖον, αὐτὸς μὲν ἄγων πεζῇ τὴν δύναμιν, Δημητρίου δὲ μεγάλῳ στόλῳ συμ-παραπλέοντος. ὃν δὲ τρόπον ἔμελλε κρίνεσθαι τὰ πράγματα, Μήδιος, Ἀντιγόνου φίλος, ὄψιν 2 εἶδε κατὰ τοὺς ὕπνους. ἐδόκει γὰρ αὐτὸν Ἀντί- 897 γονον ἀγωνίζεσθαι μετὰ τῆς στρατιᾶς ἀπάσης διάυλον εὐρώστως καὶ ταχὺ τὸ πρῶτον, εἶτα κατὰ μικρὸν ἐνδιδόναι τὴν δύναμιν αὐτῷ· καὶ τέλος, ὡς ἔκαμψεν, ἀσθενῆ γενόμενον καὶ μεστὸν ἄσθματος οὐ ῥαδίως ἀναφέρειν. αὐτὸς τε οὖν ἐντυχῶν κατὰ γῆν πολλαῖς ἀπορίαις, καὶ Δημητρίου χειμῶνι μεγάλῳ καὶ κλύδωνι κινδυνεύσαντος εἰς τόπους ἀλιμένους καὶ χαλεποὺς ἐκριφῆναι, πολλὰς δὲ τῶν νεῶν ἀπολέσαντος, ἐπανήλθεν ἄπρακτος.

- 3 Ἦν δὲ τότε μικρὸν ἀπολείποντα γεγονῶς ἔτη

DEMETRIUS

Now, this practice did not mean the addition of a name or a change of fashion merely, but it stirred the spirits of the men, lifted their thoughts high, and introduced into their lives and dealings with others pomposity and ostentation, just as tragic actors adapt to their costumes their gait, voice, posture at table, and manner of addressing others. Consequently they became harsher in their judicial decisions also; they laid aside that dissemblance of power which formerly had often made them more lenient and gentle with their subjects. So great influence had a flatterer's single word, and with so great a change did it fill the whole world.

XIX. Antigonus, elated by the achievements of Demetrius at Cyprus, at once¹ made an expedition against Ptolemy; he himself led his forces by land, while Demetrius with a great fleet coöperated with him by sea. How the enterprise was to issue, Medius, a friend of Antigonus, was warned by a vision in his sleep. He dreamed, namely, that Antigonus himself, with his whole army, was competing in a race over the course and back; he ran vigorously and swiftly at first, then, little by little, his strength failed him; and at last, after he had made the turn, he became weak, breathed heavily, and with difficulty made the finish. And conformably to the vision, Antigonus himself encountered many difficulties by land, and since Demetrius also encountered a great storm and a heavy sea and was cast upon a rough coast which had no harbours, losing many of his ships, he returned without accomplishing anything.

Antigonus was at this time almost eighty years

¹ During the same year, namely, 306 B.C.

ὀγδοήκοντα,¹ μεγέθει δὲ καὶ βαρύτητι σώματος μάλλον ἢ διὰ τὸ γῆρας ἐπὶ τὰς στρατείας γεγωνῶς δυσπαρακόμιστος ἐχρήτο τῷ παιδί καὶ δι' ἐντυχίαν καὶ δι' ἐμπειρίαν ἤδη τὰ μέγιστα καλῶς διοικοῦντι, τρυφὰς δὲ καὶ πολυτελείας καὶ πότους αὐτοῦ μὴ βαρυνόμενος. εἰρήνης γὰρ οὔσης ἀφύβριζεν εἰς ταῦτα καὶ σχολάζων ἐχρήτο πρὸς τὰς ἡδονὰς ἀνειμένως αὐτῷ καὶ κατακόρως, ἐν δὲ τοῖς πολέμοις ὡς οἱ φύσει σώφρονες ἔνηφε.

- 4 λέγεται δὲ τῆς Λαμίας ἀναφανδὸν ἤδη κρατούσης, τὸν Ἀντίγονον ὑπὸ τοῦ Δημητρίου καταφιλούμενον ἤκουτος ἀπὸ ξένης εἶπειν ἄμα γελῶντα, “Δοκεῖς Λαμῖαν, ὦ παῖ, καταφιλεῖν.” πάλιν δέ ποτε πλείονας ἡμέρας ἐν πότοις γενομένου, καὶ πρόφασιν λέγοντος ὡς ρεῦμα διοχλήσειεν αὐτόν, “Ἐπυθόμεν,” φάσαι τὸν Ἀντίγονον, “ἀλλὰ πότερον Θάσιον ἢ Χίον ἦν τὸ ρεῦμα;” πυθόμενος δὲ αὐθις ἀσθενῶς ἔχειν αὐτὸν ἐβάδιζεν ὀψόμενος, καὶ τῶν καλῶν τιμι περὶ θύρας ἀπήνητησεν· εἰσελθὼν δὲ καὶ καθίσας παρ' αὐτὸν ἤψατο τῆς χειρὸς· ἐκείνου δὲ εἰπόντος ὅτι νῦν ὁ πυρετὸς ἀποκεχώρηκεν, “Ἀμέλει, παιδίον,” ἔφη, “καὶ ἐμοὶ νῦν
- 5 6 περὶ θύρας ἀπιὼν ἀπήνητηκε.” ταῦτα δὲ οὕτω πράως ἔφερε τοῦ Δημητρίου διὰ τὴν ἄλλην πρᾶξιν. οἱ μὲν γὰρ Σκύθαι πίνοντες καὶ μεθυσκόμενοι παραψάλλουσι τὰς νευρὰς τῶν τόξων, οἷον ἐκλυόμενον ὑπὸ τῆς ἡδονῆς ἀνακαλούμενοι

¹ ὀγδοήκοντα MSS. and most editors: τῶν ὀγδοήκοντα.

DEMETRIUS

old, and his great size and weight, even more than his old age, made it difficult for him to conduct expeditions. He therefore made use of his son instead, whose good fortune and experience now enabled him to conduct the greatest affairs successfully, and whose luxuries, extravagances, and revelries gave his father no concern. For although in time of peace Demetrius plunged deep into these excesses and devoted his leisure to his pleasures without restraint and intemperately, yet in time of war he was as sober as those who were abstemious by nature. And we are told that once, after Lamia was known of all men to be in complete control of Demetrius, he came home from abroad and greeted his father with a kiss, whereupon Antigonus said with a laugh, "One would think, my son, that thou wert kissing Lamia." Again, on another occasion, when Demetrius had been at his revels for several days, and excused his absence by saying that he was troubled with a flux, "So I learned," said Antigonus, "but was it Thasian or Chian wine that flowed?" And again, learning that his son was sick, Antigonus was going to see him, and met a certain beauty at his door; he went in, however, sat down by his son, and felt his pulse. "The fever has left me now," said Demetrius. "No doubt, my boy," said Antigonus, "I met it just now at the door as it was going away." These failings of Demetrius were treated with such lenity by his father because the young man was so efficient otherwise. The Scythians, in the midst of their drinking and carousing, twang their bow-strings, as though summoning back their courage when it is dissolved in pleasure; but τὸν θυμὸν, ἐκείνος δὲ τὰ μὲν ἡδονῇ διδοὺς ἀπλῶς ἑαυτὸν, τὰ δὲ σπουδῇ, καὶ θάτερα τῶν ἐτέρων ἄκρατα μεταχειριζόμενος, οὐχ ἦττον ἦν δεινὸς ἐν ταῖς τοῦ πολέμου παρασκευαῖς.

- XX. Ἄλλὰ καὶ παρασκευάσασθαι δύναμιν ἢ χρῆσασθαι βελτίων ἐδόκει στρατηγὸς εἶναι, πάντα μὲν ἐκ περιουσίας ὑπάρχειν βουλόμενος ἐπὶ τὰς χρείας, τῆς δὲ περὶ τὰς ναῦς καὶ τὰ μηχανήματα μεγαλουργίας καὶ καθ' ἡδονὴν τινα τοῦ θεωρεῖν ἀπλήστως ἔχων. εὐφυῆς γὰρ ὢν καὶ θεωρητικὸς οὐκ εἰς παιδιὰς οὐδ' εἰς διαγωγὰς ἀχρήστους ἔτρεψε τὸ φιλότεχνον, ὥσπερ ἄλλοι βασιλεῖς αὐλοῦντες καὶ ζωγραφοῦντες καὶ τορεύοντες.
- 2 Ἀέροπος γὰρ ὁ Μακεδῶν τραπέζια μικρὰ καὶ λυχνίδια τεκταινόμενος, ὁπότε σχολάζοι, διήγευε. Ἄτταλος δὲ ὁ Φιλομήτωρ ἐκήπευε τὰς φαρμακώδεις βοτάνας, οὐ μόνον ὑοσκύαμον καὶ ἐλλέβορον, ἀλλὰ καὶ κώνειον καὶ ἀκόνιτον καὶ δορύκνιον, αὐτὸς ἐν τοῖς βασιλείοις σπειρῶν καὶ φυτεύων, ὁπούς τε καὶ καρπὸν αὐτῶν ἔργον πεποιημένος εἶδέναι καὶ κομίζεσθαι καθ' ὥραν. οἱ δὲ Πάρθων βασιλεῖς ἐσεμνύοντο τὰς ἀκίδας τῶν βελῶν χαράττοντες αὐτοὶ καὶ παραθήγοντες.
- 3 ἀλλὰ μὴν Δημητρίου καὶ τὸ βάνουσον ἦν βασιλικόν, καὶ μέγεθος ἢ μέθοδος εἶχεν, ἅμα τῷ περιττῷ καὶ φιλοτέχνῳ τῶν ἔργων ὑψος τι διανοίας καὶ φρονήματος συνεκφερόντων, ὥστε μὴ μόνον γνώμης καὶ περιουσίας, ἀλλὰ καὶ χειρὸς ἄξια φαίνεσθαι βασιλικῆς. μεγέθει μὲν γὰρ ἐξέπληττε καὶ τοὺς φίλους, κάλλει δὲ καὶ τοὺς πολεμίους ἔτερπε. τοῦτο δὲ ἔτι μᾶλλον ἀληθῶς ἢ κομψῶς

DEMETRIUS

Demetrius, giving himself up completely, now to pleasure, and now to duty, and keeping the one completely separate from the other, was no less formidable in his preparations for war.

XX. Nay, he was actually thought to be a better general in preparing than in employing a force, for he wished everything to be at hand in abundance for his needs, and could never be satisfied with the largeness of his undertakings in building ships and engines of war, or in gazing at them with great delight. For he had good natural parts and was given to speculation, and did not apply his ingenuity to things that would afford useless pleasure or diversion, like other kings who played on the flute, or painted, or chased metals. Aeropus the Macedonian, for instance, used to spend his leisure time in making little tables or lamp-stands. And Attalus Philometor used to grow poisonous plants, not only henbane and hellebore, but also hemlock, aconite, and doryenium, sowing and planting them himself in the royal gardens, and making it his business to know their juices and fruits, and to collect these at the proper season. And the kings of the Parthians used to take pride in notching and sharpening with their own hands the points of their missiles. But with Demetrius, even the work of his hands was kingly, and his method had grandeur about it, since what he produced displayed loftiness of purpose and spirit combined with elegance and ingenuity, so that men thought it worthy, not only to be designed and paid for by a king, but actually to be wrought by his hand. For its magnitude terrified even his friends, and its beauty delighted even his enemies. And this has still more truth in it than elegance of

4 εἴρηται. καὶ τὰς μὲν ἑκκαίδεκῆρεις αὐτοῦ καὶ τὰς πεντεκαίδεκῆρεις ἐθαύμαζον ἐστῶτες οἱ 898 πολέμοιοι παρὰ τὴν γῆν αὐτῶν πλεούσας, αἱ δ' ἐλεπόλεις ὡς θέαμα τοῖς πολιορκουμένοις ἦσαν, ὡς αὐτὰ τὰ πράγματα μαρτυρεῖ. Λυσίμαχος μὲν γάρ, ἔχθιστος ὢν Δημητρίῳ τῶν βασιλέων καὶ πολιορκοῦντι Σόλους τοὺς Κιλικίους ἀντιτεταγμένους, ἔπεμψε παρακαλῶν ἐπιδείξαι τὰς μη-χανὰς αὐτῷ καὶ τὰς ναῦς πλεούσας· ἐπιδείξαντος 5 δὲ θαυμάσας ἀπῆλθε. Ῥόδιοι δὲ πολὺν χρόνου ὑπ' αὐτοῦ πολιορκηθέντες, ἐπεὶ κατελύσαντο τὸν πόλεμον, ἠτήσαντο τῶν μηχανῶν ἐνίας, ὅπως ὑπόμνημα τῆς ἐκείνου δυνάμεως ἅμα καὶ τῆς αὐ-τῶν ἀνδραγαθίας ἔχωσιν.

XXI. Ἐπολέμησε δὲ Ῥοδίοις Πτολεμαίου συμμάχοις οὖσι, καὶ τὴν μεγίστην ἐλέπολιν τοῖς τεί-χεσι προσήγαγεν, ἧς ἔδρα μὲν ἦν τετράγωνος, ἐκάστην ἔχουσα τοῦ κάτω πλαισίου πλευρὰν ὀκτῶ καὶ τεσσαράκοντα πηχῶν, ἕξ δὲ καὶ ἐξή-κοντα πηχῶν ὕψος εἶχεν, εἰς κορυφὴν συννεύουσα 2 ταῖς ἄνω πλευραῖς στενωτέραν τῆς βάσεως. ἐνδοθεν μὲν οὖν στέγαις διεπέφρακτο καὶ χώραις πολλαῖς, τὸ δὲ πρὸς τοὺς πολεμίους αὐτῆς μέτωπον ἀνέφκτο καθ' ἐκάστην στέγην θυρίσιν, καὶ διὰ τούτων ἐξέπιπτε βέλη παντοδαπά· μεστὴ γὰρ ἦν ἀνδρῶν μαχομένων πᾶσαν ἰδέαν μάχης. καὶ τὸ μὴ κραδαινόμενον αὐτῆς μηδὲ κλινόμενον ἐν ταῖς κινήσεσιν, ἀλλ' ὀρθὸν ἐν ἔδρα καὶ ἀσάλευτον, ἰσορρόπως ἅμα ροίζῳ καὶ τόνῳ πολλῷ προχωροῦν, θάμβος ἅμα τῇ ψυχῇ καὶ χάριν τινα τῇ ὄψει τῶν θεωμένων παρείχε.
 3 Πρὸς δὲ τούτον τὸν πόλεμον αὐτῷ καὶ θώρακες

DEMETRIUS

diction. His enemies would stand on shore and admire his galleys of fifteen or sixteen banks of oars as they sailed along past, and his "city-takers" were a spectacle to those whom he was besieging, as the actual facts testify. For Lysimachus, although he was the bitterest enemy Demetrius had among the kings, and had arrayed himself against him when he was besieging Soli in Cilicia, sent and asked Demetrius to show him his engines of war, and his ships in full career; and when Demetrius had shown them, Lysimachus expressed his admiration and went away. The Rhodians also, after they had been for a long time besieged by Demetrius and had come to terms with him, asked him for some of his engines of war, that they might keep them as a reminder of his power as well as of their own bravery.

XXI. Now, he made war upon the Rhodians¹ because they were allies of Ptolemy, and brought up against their walls his greatest "city-taker." Its base was square, and each of its sides measured at the bottom forty-eight cubits. It rose to a height of sixty-six cubits, and tapered from base to summit. Within, it was divided off into many storeys and chambers, and the side of it which faced the enemy had windows opening out of every storey, and out through these issued missiles of every sort; for it was full of men who fought in every style of fighting. Moreover, it did not totter or lean when it moved, but remained firm and erect on its base, advancing evenly with much noise and great impetus, and this astounded the minds and at the same time greatly charmed the eyes of those who beheld it.

For his use in this war there were brought to ¹ In 305-304 B.C. The siege lasted about a year.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

έκομίσθησαν εκ Κύπρου δύο σιδηροί, μνῶν ὀλκῆς ἐκάτερος τεσσαράκοντα. δυσπάθειαν δὲ καὶ ῥώμην αὐτῶν ἐπιδεικνύμενος ὁ τεχνίτης Ζωΐλος ἐκέλευσεν ἐξ εἴκοσι βημάτων ἀφείναι καταπελτικὸν βέλος, οὐ προσπεσόντος ἀρραγῆς διέμεινεν ὁ σίδηρος, ἀμυχὴν δὲ μόλις ἔσχεν ἀμβλείαν, οἶον ἀπὸ
 4 γραφείου. τοῦτον αὐτὸς ἐφόρει· τὸν δ' ἕτερον Ἄλκιμος ὁ Ἡπειρώτης, ἀνὴρ πολεμικώτατος τῶν σὺν αὐτῷ καὶ ῥωμαλεώτατος, ὃς μόνος ἐχρήτο διταλάντῳ πανοπλίᾳ, τῶν ἄλλων χρωμένων τα-λαντιαίᾳ· καὶ μαχόμενος ἐν Ῥόδῳ περὶ τὸ θέατρον ἔπεσεν.

XXII. Εὐρώστως δὲ καὶ τῶν Ῥοδίων ἀμυνομένων, οὐδὲν ἄξιον λόγου πράττων ὁ Δημήτριος ὁμως ἐθυμομάχει πρὸς αὐτούς, ὅτι, Φίλας τῆς γυναικὸς αὐτῷ γράμματα καὶ στρώματα καὶ ἱμάτια πεμψύσης, λαβόντες τὸ πλοῖον, ὥσπερ εἶχε, πρὸς Πτολεμαῖον ἀπέστειλαν, καὶ τὴν Ἀθηναίων οὐκ ἐμιμήσαντο φιλανθρωπίαν, οἱ Φιλίππου πολεμοῦντος αὐτοῖς γραμματοφόρους ἐλόντες τὰς μὲν ἄλλας ἀνέγνωσαν ἐπιστολάς, μύνην δὲ τὴν Ὀλυμπιάδος οὐκ ἔλυσαν, ἀλλ', ὥσπερ ἦν κατα-2 σεσημασμένη, πρὸς ἐκείνιον ἀπέστειλαν. οὐ μὴν ἀλλά, καίπερ ἐπὶ τούτῳ σφόδρα δηχθεὶς ὁ Δημήτριος, εὐθύς παρασχόντας λαβὴν οὐχ ὑπέμεινεν ἀντιλυπῆσαι τοὺς Ῥοδίους. ἔτυχε γὰρ αὐτοῖς ὁ Καύνιος Πρωτογένης γράφων τὴν περὶ τὸν Ἰάλυ-σον διάθεσιν, καὶ τὸν πίνακα μικρὸν ἀπολείποντα

DEMETRIUS

Demetrius from Cyprus two iron coats of mail, each of which weighed only forty pounds. Wishing to show their strength and power of resistance, Zoilus their maker gave orders that a catapult's missile should be shot at one of them from a distance of twenty paces, and in the place where it struck the iron remained intact, although it did get a faint scratch, such as might be made by a graver. This coat of mail Demetrius wore himself; the other was worn by Alcimus the Epeirot, the sturdiest and most warlike of all the men under him, and the only one whose suit of armour weighed a hundred pounds (the rest used suits of fifty pounds weight); he fell in battle at Rhodes near the theatre.

XXII. But the Rhodians on their part made a vigorous resistance, and Demetrius, although he was accomplishing nothing worthy of mention, nevertheless kept up the fight against them in a rage, because, when Phila his wife sent him letters, bedding, and clothing, the Rhodians had captured the vessel containing them, and had sent it, just as it was, to Ptolemy. In this they did not imitate the considerate kindness of the Athenians, who, having captured Philip's letter-carriers when he was making war upon them, read all the other letters, indeed, but one of them, which was from Olympias, they would not open; instead, they sent it back to the king with its seal unbroken. However, although Demetrius was exceedingly exasperated by this, when the Rhodians soon after gave him a chance to retaliate, he would not allow himself to do so. It happened, namely, that Protogenes the Caunian had been making a painting for them which illustrated the story of Ialysus, and this picture, nearly finished,

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

τοῦ τέλος ἔχειν ἔν τινι τῶν προαστείων ἔλαβεν ὁ Δημήτριος. πεμψάντων δὲ κήρυκα τῶν Ῥοδίων καὶ δεομένων φείσασθαι καὶ μὴ διαφθεῖραι τὸ ἔργον, ἀπεκρίνατο τὰς τοῦ πατρὸς εἰκόνας ἂν
 3 ἔμπρῃσαι μᾶλλον ἢ τέχνης πόνον τοσοῦτον. ἑπτὰ γὰρ ἔτεσι λέγεται συντελέσαι τὴν γραφὴν ὁ Πρωτογένης. καὶ φησιν ὁ Ἀπελλῆς οὕτως ἐκπλαγῆναι θεασάμενος τὸ ἔργον ὥστε καὶ φωνὴν ἐπιλιπεῖν αὐτόν, ὃψὲ δὲ εἰπεῖν ὅτι “Μέγας ὁ πόνος καὶ θαυμαστὸν τὸ ἔργον,” οὐ μὴν ἔχειν γε χάριτας δι’ ἃς οὐρανοῦ ψαύειν τὰ ὑπ’ αὐτοῦ γραφό
 4 μενα. ταύτην μὲν οὖν τὴν γραφὴν εἰς ταῦτό ταῖς ἄλλαις συνωσθείσαν ἐν Ῥώμῃ τὸ πῦρ ἐπενείματο. τῶν δὲ Ῥοδίων κατεξανισταμένων τοῦ πολέμου, 899 δεόμενον προφάσεως τὸν Δημήτριον Ἀθηναῖοι παραγενόμενοι διήλλαξαν ἐπὶ τῷ συμμαχεῖν Ῥοδίουσιν Ἀντιγόνῳ καὶ Δημητρίῳ πλὴν ἐπὶ Πτολεμαῖον.

XXIII. Ἐκάλουν δὲ τὸν Δημήτριον οἱ Ἀθηναῖοι Κασάνδρον τὸ ἄστυ πολιορκούντος. ὁ δὲ ναυσὶν ἐπιπλεύσας τριακοσίαις τριάκοντα καὶ πολλοῖς ὀπλίταις, οὐ μόνον ἐξήλασε τῆς Ἀττικῆς τὸν Κάσανδρον, ἀλλὰ καὶ φεύγοντα μέχρι Θερμοπυλῶν διώξας καὶ τρεψάμενος, Ἡράκλειαν ἔλαβεν, ἐκουσίως αὐτῷ προσθεμένην, καὶ τῶν Μακεδόνων ἑξακισχιλίους μεταβαλομένους πρὸς
 2 αὐτόν. ἐπανιῶν δὲ τοὺς ἐντὸς Πυλῶν Ἕλληνας ἤλευθέρου, καὶ Βοιωτοὺς ἐποιήσατο συμμαχοῦς,

¹ When Strabo wrote, during the reign of Augustus, the painting was still at Rhodes, where it had been seen and admired by Cicero (Orat. 2, 5); when the elder Pliny wrote, had been captured by Demetrius in one of the suburbs of the city. The Rhodians sent a herald and begged Demetrius to spare and not destroy the work, whereupon he replied that he would rather burn the likenesses of his father than so great a labour of art. For we are told that it took Protogenes seven years to complete the painting. And Apelles says he was so smitten with amazement on beholding the work that his voice actually failed him, and that when at last he had recovered it, he cried, "Great is the toil and astonishing the work," remarking, however, that it had not the graces which made the fame of his own paintings touch the heavens. This painting, then, crowded into the same place with the rest at Rome, the fire destroyed.¹ As for the Rhodians, they continued their strenuous resistance in the war until Demetrius, who wanted a pretext for abandoning it, was induced to make terms with them by a deputation of Athenians, on condition that the Rhodians should be allies of Antigonus and Demetrius, except in a war against Ptolemy.

DEMETRIUS

XXIII. And now the Athenians called upon Demetrius because Cassander was besieging their city. So Demetrius sailed to their help with three hundred and thirty ships and a great number of men-at-arms, and not only drove Cassander out of Attica, but actually pursued him in his headlong flight as far as Thermopylae, and then took Heracleia, which joined him of its own accord, and six thousand Macedonians, who also came over to him. On his return, he gave their freedom to the Greeks on this side of Thermopylae, made the Boeotians his allies, a generation or two later, it had been carried to Rome and placed in the temple of Peace (cf. Strabo, xiv. p. 652; Pliny, N.H. xxxv. 10, 36).

καὶ Κεγχρέας εἶλε· καὶ Φυλὴν καὶ Πάνακτον, ἐπιτειχίσματα τῆς Ἀττικῆς ὑπὸ Κασάνδρου φρουρούμενα, καταστρεψόμενος ἀπέδωκε τοῖς Ἀθηναίοις. οἱ δὲ καίπερ ἐκκεχυμένοι πρότερον εἰς αὐτὸν καὶ κατακεχρημένοι πᾶσαν φιλοτιμίαν, ἐξεύρον ὁμως καὶ τότε πρόσφατοι καὶ καινοὶ ταῖς
 3 κολακείαις φανῆναι. τὸν γὰρ ὀπισθόδομον τοῦ Παρθενῶνος ἀπέδειξαν αὐτῷ κατάλυσιν· κάκει δίαιταν εἶχε, τῆς Ἀθηνᾶς λεγομένης ὑποδέχασθαι καὶ ξενίζειν αὐτόν, οὐ πάνυ κόσμιον ξένον οὐδὲ
 4 ὡς παρθένῳ πρῶως ἐπισταθμεύοντα. καίτοι τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ Φίλιππον αἰσθόμενός ποτε ὁ πατήρ ἐν οἰκίᾳ καταλύοντα τρεῖς ἐχούσῃ νέας γυναῖκας, πρὸς ἐκείνον μὲν οὐδὲν ἐφθέγγετο, παρόντος δὲ ἐκείνου, τὸν σταθμοδότην μεταπεμψάμενος, “Οὗτος,” εἶπεν, “οὐκ ἐξάξεις μου τὸν υἱὸν ἐκ τῆς στενοχωρίας;”

XXIV. Δημήτριος δέ, τὴν Ἀθηνᾶν αὐτῷ προσῆκον, εἰ δι’ ἄλλο μηδέν, ὥς γε πρεσβυτέραν ἀδελφὴν αἰσχύνεσθαι (τοῦτο γὰρ ἐβούλετο λέγεσθαι), τοσαύτην ὕβριν εἰς παῖδας ἐλευθέρους καὶ γυναῖκας ἀστὰς κατεσκέδασε τῆς ἀκροπόλεως ὥστε δοκεῖν τότε μάλιστα καθαρεύειν τὸν τόπον, ὅτε Χρυσίδι καὶ Λαμῖα καὶ Δημοῖ καὶ Ἀντικύρα, ταῖς πόρναις ἐκείναις, συνακολασταῖνοι.

Τὰ μὲν οὖν ἄλλα σαφῶς ἀπαγγέλλειν οὐ πρέπει διὰ τὴν πόλιν, τὴν δὲ Δημοκλέους ἀρετὴν καὶ σωφροσύνην ἀξιόεν ἐστι μὴ παρελθεῖν. ἐκείνος γὰρ ἦν ἔτι παῖς ἄνηβος, οὐκ ἔλαθε δὲ τὸν Δημήτριον ἔχων τῆς εὐμορφίας τὴν ἐπωνυμίαν κατή-

DEMETRIUS

and captured Ceicbreae ; he also reduced Phyle and Panactum, fortresses of Attica in which Cassander had garrisons, and gave them back to the Athenians. And they, although before this they had used up and exhausted all the honours that could be bestowed upon him, nevertheless devised a way to show themselves then also the authors of new and fresh flatteries. For instance, they assigned him the rear chamber of the Parthenon for his quarters ; and there he lived, and there it was said that Athena received and entertained him, although he was no very orderly guest and did not occupy his quarters with the decorum due to a virgin. And yet on one occasion when his father understood that his brother Philip was quartered in a house occupied by three young women, he said not a word to Philip himself, but in his presence said to the quartermaster whom he had summoned, "See here, wilt thou not remove my son from his narrow quarters?"

XXIV. But Demetrius, who ought to have revered Athena, if for no other reason, at least because she was his elder sister (for this was what he liked to have her called¹), filled the acropolis with such wanton treatment of free-born youth and native Athenian women that the place was then thought to be particularly pure when he shared his dissolute life there with Chrysis and Lamia and Demo and Anticyra, the well-known prostitutes.

Now, to give all the particulars plainly would disgrace the fair fame of the city, but I may not pass over the modesty and virtue of Democles. He was still a young boy, and it did not escape the notice of Demetrius that he had a surname which indicated

¹ Since the Athenians had made him a "Saviour-god."

γορον· ἐκαλεῖτο γὰρ Δημοκλῆς ὁ καλός. ὡς δὲ πολλὰ πειρώντων καὶ διδόντων καὶ φοβούντων ὑπ' οὐδενὸς ἠλίσκετο, τέλος δὲ φεύγων τὰς παλαιίστρας καὶ τὸ γυμνάσιον εἰς τι βαλανεῖον ἰδιωτικὸν ἐφοίτα λουσόμενος, ἐπιτηρήσας τὸν και-
 3 ρὸν ὁ Δημήτριος ἐπεισῆλθεν αὐτῷ μόνω. καὶ ὁ παῖς, ὡς συνέειδε τὴν περὶ αὐτὸν ἐρημίαν καὶ τὴν ἀνάγκην, ἀφελὼν τὸ πῶμα τοῦ χαλκώματος εἰς ζέον ὕδωρ ἐνήλατο καὶ διέφθειρεν αὐτόν, ἀνάξια μὲν παθῶν, ἄξια δὲ τῆς πατρίδος καὶ τοῦ κάλλους φρονήσας, οὐχ ὡς Κλεαίνετός ὁ Κλεομέδοντος, ὃς ὠφληκότεν τῷ πατρὶ δίκην πεντήκοντα ταλάντων ἀφεθῆναι διαπραξάμενος καὶ γράμματα παρὰ Δημητρίου κομίσας πρὸς τὸν δῆμον οὐ μόνον ἑαυτὸν κατήσχυεν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὴν πόλιν συνε-
 4 τάραξε. τὸν μὲν γὰρ Κλεομέδοντα τῆς δίκης ἀφήκαν, ἐγράφη δὲ ψήφισμα μηδένα τῶν πολιτῶν ἐπιστολὴν παρὰ Δημητρίου κομίζειν. ἐπεὶ δὲ ἀκούσας ἐκείνος οὐκ ἤνεγκε μετρίως, ἀλλ' ἠγανάκτησε, δείσαντες αὐθις οὐ μόνον τὸ ψήφισμα καθεῖλον, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν εἰσηγησαμένων καὶ συνειπόντων τοὺς μὲν ἀπέκτειναν, τοὺς δὲ ἐφυγάδευσαν, ἔτι δὲ προσεψηφίσαντο δεδόχθαι τῷ δήμῳ τῶν Ἀθηναίων πᾶν, ὃ τι ἂν ὁ βασιλεὺς Δημήτριος κελεύσῃ, τοῦτο καὶ πρὸς θεοὺς ὅσιον καὶ πρὸς
 5 ἀνθρώπους εἶναι δίκαιον. εἰπόντος δὲ τίνος τῶν καλῶν κἀγαθῶν ἀνδρῶν μαίνεσθαι τὸν Στρατοκλέα τοιαῦτα γράφοντα, Δημοχάρης ὁ Λευκονοεὺς 900
 “Μαίνοιτο μέντ' ἄν,” εἶπεν, “εἰ μὴ μαίνοιτο.”

DEMETRIUS

his comeliness; for he was called Democles the Beautiful. But he yielded to none of the many who sought to win him by prayers or gifts or threats, and finally, shunning the palaestras and the gymnasium, used to go for his bath to a private bathing-room. Here Demetrius, who had watched his opportunity, came upon him when he was alone. And the boy, when he saw that he was quite alone and in dire straits, took off the lid of the cauldron and jumped into the boiling water, thus destroying himself, and suffering a fate that was unworthy of him, but showing a spirit that was worthy of his country and of his beauty. Not so Cleaenetus the son of Cleomedon, who, in order to obtain a letter from Demetrius to the people and therewith to secure the remission of a fine of fifty talents which had been imposed upon his father, not only disgraced himself, but also got the city into trouble. For the people released Cleomedon from his sentence, but they passed an edict that no citizen should bring a letter from Demetrius before the assembly. However, when Demetrius heard of it and was beyond measure incensed thereat, they took fright again, and not only rescinded the decree, but actually put to death some of those who had introduced and spoken in favour of it, and drove others into exile; furthermore, they voted besides that it was the pleasure of the Athenian people that whatsoever King Demetrius should ordain in future, this should be held righteous towards the gods and just towards men. And when one of the better class of citizens declared that Stratocles was mad to introduce such a motion, Demochares of Leuconoë said: "He would indeed be mad not to be πολλὰ γὰρ ὁ Στρατοκλῆς ὠφελεῖτο διὰ τὴν κολακείαν. ὁ δὲ Δημοχάρης ἐπὶ τούτῳ διαβληθεὶς ἐφυγαδεύθη. τοιαῦτα ἔπραττον Ἀθηναῖοι φρουρᾶς ἀπηλλάχθαι καὶ τὴν ἐλευθερίαν ἔχειν δοκούντες.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

XXV. Δημήτριος δὲ παρελθὼν εἰς Πελοπόννησον, οὐδενὸς ὑφισταμένου τῶν ἐναντίων, ἀλλὰ φευγόντων καὶ προιεμένων τὰς πόλεις, προσηγάγετο τὴν τε καλουμένην Ἀκτὴν καὶ Ἀρκαδίαν, πλὴν Μαντινείας, καὶ Ἄργος καὶ Σικυῶνα καὶ Κόρινθον ἐλύσατο τάλαντα δούς ἑκατὸν τοῖς φρουροῦσιν. ἐν Ἄργει μὲν οὖν τῆς τῶν Ἑρραίων ἐορτῆς καθηκούσης, ἀγωνοθετῶν καὶ συμπανηγυρίζων τοῖς Ἑλλησιν, ἔγημε τὴν Αἰακίδου θυγατέρα, τοῦ Μολοττῶν βασιλέως, ἀδελφὴν δὲ Πύρρου, Δηϊδάμειαν. Σικυωνίους δὲ φήσας παρὰ τὴν πόλιν οἰκεῖν τὴν πόλιν, ἔπεισεν οὐ νῦν οἰκοῦσι μετοικίσασθαι· τῷ δὲ τόπῳ καὶ τοῦνομα τὴν πόλιν συµμεταβαλοῦσαν ἀντὶ Σικυῶνος Δημη-
3 τριάδα προσηγόρευσεν. ἐν δὲ Ἰσθμῷ κοινοῦ συνεδρίου γενομένου καὶ πολλῶν ἀνθρώπων συνελθόντων, ἡγεμὼν ἀνηγορεύθη τῆς Ἑλλάδος, ὡς πρότερον οἱ περὶ Φίλιππον καὶ Ἀλέξανδρον· ὧν ἐκεῖνος οὐ παρὰ μικρὸν ἐνόμιζεν ἑαυτὸν εἶναι βελτίονα, τῇ τύχῃ τῇ παρούσῃ καὶ τῇ δυνάμει τῶν πραγμάτων ἐπαιρόμενος. Ἀλέξανδρος γοῦν οὐδένα τῶν ἄλλων βασιλέων ἀπεστέρησε τῆς ὁμωνυμίας, οὐδὲ αὐτὸν ἀνεῖπε βασιλέων βασιλέα, mad." For Stratocles reaped much advantage from his flatteries. Demochares, however, was brought under accusation for this and sent into exile. So fared it with the Athenians, who imagined that because they were rid of their garrison they therefore had their freedom.

DEMETRIUS

XXV. And now Demetrius proceeded into Peloponnesus,¹ where not one of his enemies opposed him, but all abandoned their cities and fled. He received into allegiance Acte, as it is called, and Arcadia (except Mantinea), and freed Argos, Sicyon, and Corinth by paying their garrisons a hundred talents. At Argos, then, where there was a celebration of the festival of Hera, he presided at the games and attended the solemn assemblies with the Greeks, and married Deïdameia,² the daughter of Aeacides king of the Molossians, and the sister of Pyrrhus. As for the Sicyonians, he told them their city was in the wrong place, and persuaded them to change its site to that which it now has; moreover, with the site he also changed the name of the city, calling it Demetrius instead of Sicyon. And at the Isthmus of Corinth, where a general assembly was held and throngs of people came together, he was proclaimed Commander-in-chief of the Greeks, as Philip and Alexander had been proclaimed before him; and to these he considered himself in no slight measure superior, lifted up as he was by the good fortune and power which he then enjoyed. And certainly King Alexander never refused to bestow the royal title upon other kings, nor did he proclaim himself King of Kings, although many

¹ Early in 303 B. C.

² Although both Eurydice and Phila were still living.

καίτοι πολλοῖς τὸ καλεῖσθαι καὶ εἶναι βασιλέας 4 αὐτὸς δεδωκώς· ἐκεῖνος δὲ χλευάζων καὶ γελῶν τοὺς ἄλλον τινὰ πλὴν τοῦ πατρὸς καὶ αὐτοῦ βασιλέα προσαγορεύοντας, ἠδέως ἤκουε τῶν παρὸ πότον ἐπιχύσεις λαμβανόντων Δημητρίου βασιλέως, Σελεύκου δὲ ἐλεφαντάρχου, Πτολεμαίου δὲ ναυάρχου, Λύσιμάχου δὲ γαζοφύλακος, Ἄγαθο-5 κλέους δὲ τοῦ Σικελιώτου νησιάρχου. τούτων δὲ πρὸς τοὺς βασιλεῖς ἐκφερομένων οἱ μὲν ἄλλοι βασιλεῖς κατεγέλων, Λυσίμαχος δ' ἠγανάκτει μόνος εἰ σπάδοντα νομίζει Δημήτριος αὐτόν· ἐπεικῶς γὰρ εἰώθεισαν εὐνούχους ἔχειν γαζο-6 φύλακας. ἦν δὲ καὶ πάντων ἀπεχθέστατος ὁ Λυσίμαχος αὐτῷ, καὶ λοιδορῶν εἰς τὸν ἔρωτα τῆς Λαμίας ἔλεγε νῦν πρῶτον ἑωρακένοι πόρνην προερχομένην ἐκ τραγικῆς σκηνῆς· ὁ δὲ Δημήτριος ἔφη τὴν ἑαυτοῦ πόρνην σωφρονεστέραν εἶναι τῆς ἐκείνου Πηνελόπης.

XXVI. Τότε δ' οὖν ἀναζευγνύων εἰς τὰς Ἀθή-νας ἔγραψεν ὅτι βούλεται παραγενόμενος εὐθύς μνηθῆναι καὶ τὴν τελετὴν ἅπασαν ἀπὸ τῶν μικρῶν ἄχρι τῶν ἐποπτικῶν παραλαβεῖν. τοῦτο δὲ οὐ θεμιτὸν ἦν οὐδὲ γεγονὸς πρότερον, ἀλλὰ τὰ μικρὰ τοῦ Ἀνθεστηριῶνος ἐτελοῦντο, τὰ δὲ μεγάλα τοῦ Βοηδρομιῶνος· ἐπώπτευον δὲ τοῦ-λάχιστον ἀπὸ τῶν μεγάλων ἐνιαυτὸν διαλείποντες.
 2 ἀναγνωσθέντων δὲ τῶν γραμμάτων μόνος ἐτόλ-μησεν ἀντειπεῖν Πυθόδωρος ὁ δαδοῦχος, ἐπέρανε δὲ οὐδέν· ἀλλὰ Στρατοκλέους γνώμην εἰπόντος

DEMETRIUS

kings received their position and title from him ; whereas Demetrius used to rail and mock at those who gave the title of King to any one except his father and himself, and was well pleased to hear revellers pledge Demetrius as King, but Seleucus as Master of the Elephants, Ptolemy as Admiral, Lysimachus as Treasurer, and Agathocles as Island Governor of Sicily. When this was reported to these kings, they all laughed at Demetrius, except Lysimachus ; he was incensed that Demetrius considered him a eunuch (it was the general practice to have eunuchs for treasurers). And of all the kings Lysimachus had most hatred for Demetrius. He was once reviling the man's passion for Lamia, and said that this was the first time he had ever seen a harlot coming forward to play a great tragic part ; Demetrius, however, declared that his own harlot was more chaste than the Penelope of Lysimachus.

XXVI. But to resume the story, when Demetrius was getting ready to return to Athens, he wrote letters to the people saying that he wished to be initiated into the mysteries as soon as he arrived, and to pass through all the grades in the ceremony, from the lowest to the highest (the "epoptica"). Now, this was not lawful, and had not been done before, but the lesser rites were performed in the month Anthesterion, the great rites in Boëdromion ; and the supreme rites (the "epoptica") were celebrated after an interval of at least a year from the great rites. And yet when the letter of Demetrius was read, no one ventured to oppose the proposition except Pythodorus the Torch-bearer, and he accomplished nothing ; instead, on motion of Stratocles, it was voted to call the current month, which was

Ἄνθεστηριῶνα τὸν Μουνυχιῶνα ψηφισαμένους
καλεῖν καὶ νομίζειν, ἐτέλουν τῷ Δημητρίῳ τὰ πρὸς Ἄγραν καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα πάλιν ἐξ Ἄνθεστηριῶνος ὁ Μουνυχιῶν γενόμενος Βοηδρομιῶν ἐδέξατο τὴν λοιπὴν τελετὴν, ἅμα καὶ τὴν ἐπο-3 πτεῖαν τοῦ Δημητρίου προσεπιλαβόντος. διὸ καὶ Φιλιππίδης τὸν Στρατοκλέα λοιδορῶν ἐποίησεν·

ὁ τὸν ἐνιαυτὸν συντεμῶν εἰς μῆν' ἕνα, καὶ περὶ τῆς ἐν τῷ Παρθενῶνι κατασκηνώσεως·

ὁ τὴν ἀκρόπολιν πανδοκείον ὑπολαβὼν καὶ τὰς ἐταίρας εἰσαγαγὼν τῇ παρθένῳ.

901

XXVII. Πολλῶν δὲ γενομένων ἐν τῇ πόλει τότε πλημμελημάτων καὶ παρανομημάτων ἐκεῖνο μάλιστα λέγεται λυπῆσαι τοὺς Ἀθηναίους, ὅτι διακόσια καὶ πενήκοντα τάλαντα πορίσαι ταχὺ καὶ δοῦναι προσταχθὲν αὐτοῖς καὶ τῆς εἰσπράξεως συντόνου καὶ ἀπαραιτήτου γενομένης, ἰδὼν ἠθροισμένον τὸ ἀργύριον ἐκέλευσε Λαμία καὶ ταῖς περὶ αὐτὴν ἐταίραις εἰς σμῆγμα δοθῆναι. ἡ γὰρ αἰσχύνη τῆς ζημίας καὶ τὸ ῥῆμα τοῦ πράγματος
2 μᾶλλον ἠνώχλησε τοὺς ἀνθρώπους. ἔνιοι δὲ τοῦτο Θετταλοῖς, οὐκ Ἀθηναίοις, ὑπ' αὐτοῦ συμβῆναι λέγουσι. χωρὶς δὲ τούτων αὐτὴ καθ' ἑαυτὴν ἡ Λάμια τῷ βασιλεῖ παρασκευάζουσα δεῖπνον ἠργυρολόγησε πολλούς. καὶ τὸ δεῖπνον οὕτως

DEMETRIUS

Munychion, Anthesterion, and so to regard it, and the lesser rites at Agra were performed for Demetrius; after which Munychion was again changed and became Boëdromion instead of Anthesterion, Demetrius received the remaining rites of initiation, and at the same time was also admitted to the highest grade of "epoptos." Hence Philippides, in his abuse of Stratocles, wrote ¹ :—

"Who abridged the whole year into a single month," and with reference to the quartering of Demetrius in the Parthenon :—

"Who took the acropolis for a caravansery, And introduced to its virgin goddess his courtesans."

XXVII. But among the many lawless and shocking things done by Demetrius in the city at this time, this is said to have given the Athenians most displeasure, namely, that after he had ordered them to procure speedily two hundred and fifty talents for his use, and after they had levied the money rigorously and inexorably, when he saw the sum that had been collected, he commanded that it should be given to Lamia and her fellow courtesans to buy soap with. For the shame they felt was more intolerable to the people than their loss, and the words which accompanied it than the deed itself. But some say that those who received this treatment were Thessalians, not Athenians. Apart from this incident, however, Lamia, when she was preparing a supper for the king, exacted money on her own account from many citizens. And the costliness ἤνθησε τῇ δόξῃ διὰ τὴν πολυτέλειαν ὥστε ὑπὸ Λυγκέως τοῦ Σαμίου συγγεγράφθαι. διὸ καὶ τῶν κωμικῶν τις οὐ φαύλως τὴν Λάμιαν Ἐλέπολιν ἀληθῶς προσεῖπε. Δημοχάρης δ' ὁ Σόλιος τὸν Δημήτριον αὐτὸν ἐκάλει Μῦθον· εἶναι γὰρ αὐτῷ καὶ Λάμιαν.

¹ Part of the fragment cited at xii. 4.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- 3 Οὐ μόνον δὲ ταῖς γαμεταῖς, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοῖς φίλοις τοῦ Δημητρίου ζῆλον καὶ φθόνον εὐημεροῦσα καὶ στεργομένη παρεῖχεν. ἀφίκοντο γοῦν τινες παρ' αὐτοῦ κατὰ πρεσβείαν πρὸς Λυσίμαχον, οἷς ἐκεῖνος ἄγων σχολὴν ἐπέδειξεν ἔν τε τοῖς μηροῖς καὶ τοῖς βραχίουσιν ὠτειλὰς βαθείας ὀνύχων λεοντείων· καὶ διηγείτο τὴν γενομένην αὐτῷ μάχην πρὸς τὸ θηρίον, ὑπὸ Ἀλεξάνδρου συγκαθειρχθέντι τοῦ βασιλέως. οἱ δὲ γελῶντες ἔφασαν καὶ τὸν αὐτῶν βασιλέα δεινοῦ θηρίου
- 4 δῆγματα φέρειν ἐν τῷ τραχήλῳ, Λαμίας. ἦν δὲ θαυμαστὸν ὅτι τῆς Φίλας ἐν ἀρχῇ τὸ μὴ καθ' ἡλικίαν δυσχεραίνων, ἠττητο τῆς Λαμίας, καὶ τοσοῦτον ἦρα χρόνον, ἤδη παρηκμακυίας. Δημῶ γοῦν, ἡ ἐπικαλουμένη Μανία, παρὰ δεῖπνον ἀλούσης τῆς Λαμίας καὶ τοῦ Δημητρίου πυθομένου, “Τί σοι δοκεῖ;” “Γραῦς,” εἶπεν, “ὦ βασιλεῦ.” πάλιν δὲ τραγημάτων παρατεθέντων κἀκείνου πρὸς αὐτὴν εἰπόντος, “Ὅρᾶς ὅσα μοι Λάμια πέμπει;” “Πλείονα,” ἔφη, “πεμφθήσεται σοι παρὰ τῆς ἐμῆς μητρός, εἰάν θέλῃς καὶ μετ' αὐτῆς
- 5 καθεύδειν.” ἀπομνημονεύεται δὲ τῆς Λαμίας καὶ

DEMETRIUS

of this supper gave it so wide a renown that it was described in full by Lynceus the Samian. Hence also a comic poet not inaptly called Lamia "a veritable City-taker."¹ And Demochares of Soli called Demetrius himself "Fable," because he too, like Fable, had a Lamia.²

And not only among the wives of Demetrius, but also among his friends, did the favour and affection which he bestowed on Lamia awaken envy and jealousy. At all events, some ambassadors from him once came to Lysimachus, and Lysimachus, in an hour of leisure, showed them on his thighs and shoulders deep scars of wounds made by a lion's claws; he also told them about the battle he had fought against the beast, with which he had been caged by Alexander the king. Then they laughingly told him that their own king also carried, on his neck, the bites of a dreadful wild beast,—a Lamia. And it was astonishing that while in the beginning he was displeased at Phila's disparity in years, he was vanquished by Lamia, and loved her so long, although she was already past her prime. At all events, when Lamia was playing on the flute at a supper, and Demetrius asked Demo, surnamed Mania, what she thought of her, "O King," said Mania, "I think her an old woman." And at another time, when some sweetmeats were served up, and Demetrius said to Mania, "Dost thou see how many presents I get from Lamia?" "My mother," said Mania, "will send thee more, if thou wilt make her also thy mistress." And there is on record also Lamia's πρὸς τὴν λεγομένην Βοκχώρεως κρίσιν ἀντίρρησις. ἐπεὶ γὰρ τις ἐρῶν ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ τῆς ἐταίρας Θώνιδος ἠτείτο συχνὸν χρυσίου, εἶτα κατὰ τοὺς ὑπνους δόξας αὐτῇ συγγενέσθαι τῆς ἐπιθυμίας ἐπαύσατο, δίκην ἔλαχεν ἢ Θωνὶς αὐτῷ τοῦ μθώματος. ἀκούσας δὲ τὸν λόγον ὁ Βόκχωρις ἐκέλευσε τὸν ἄνθρωπον ὅσον ἠτήθη χρυσίου ἠριθμημένον ἐν τῷ ἀγγεῖῳ διαφέρειν δεῦρο καὶ κείσε τῇ χειρὶ, τὴν δὲ ἐταίραν ἔχεσθαι τῆς σκιᾶς, ὡς τὴν δόξαν τῆς ἀληθείας σκιὰν οὖσαν. οὐκ ᾤετο ταύτην εἶναι τὴν κρίσιν ἢ Λάμια δικαίαν· οὐ γὰρ ἀπέλυσε ἢ σκιὰ τῆς ἐπιθυμίας τοῦ ἀργυρίου τὴν ἐταίραν, τὸ δὲ ὄναρ ἔπαυσε ἐρῶντα τὸν νεανίσκον. ταῦτα μὲν οὖν περὶ Λαμίας.

¹ See chapter xx. 4.

² The name of a fabulous monster reputed to eat men's flesh.

XXVIII. Τὴν δὲ διήγησιν, ὥσπερ ἐκ κωμικῆς σκηνῆς, πάλιν εἰς τραγικὴν μετάγουσιν αἱ τύχαι καὶ αἱ πράξεις τοῦ ἀνδρὸς ὃν διηγοῦμεθα. τῶν γὰρ ἄλλων βασιλέων ἀπάντων συνισταμένων ἐπὶ τὸν Ἀντίγονον καὶ συμφερόντων εἰς ταῦτὸ τὰς δυνάμεις, ἀπῆρεν ὁ Δημήτριος ἐκ τῆς Ἑλλάδος, καὶ τῷ πατρὶ συμμίξας φιλοτιμουμένῳ παρ' ἡλικίαν πρὸς τὸν πόλεμον, ἔτι μᾶλλον αὐτὸς 2 ἐπερρώσθη. καίτοι δοκεῖ γε Ἀντίγονος, εἰ μικρῶν τινῶν ὑφεῖτο καὶ τῆς ἄγαν φιλαρχίας ἐχάλασε, μέχρι παντὸς ἂν αὐτῷ διαφυλάξαι κακείνῳ καταλιπεῖν τὸ πρῶτον εἶναι. φύσει δὲ βαρὺς ὢν καὶ ὑπερόπτης, καὶ τοῖς λόγοις οὐχ ἦττον ἢ τοῖς πράγμασι τραχύς, πολλοὺς καὶ νέους καὶ δυνατούς ἄνδρας ἐξηγρίαυε καὶ παρώξυνε· καὶ τὴν 902 comment on the famous judgment of Bocchoris. There was, namely, a certain Egyptian who was in love with Thonis the courtesan, and offered a great sum of money for her favours; then he dreamed that he enjoyed those favours, and ceased from his desires. Thereupon Thonis brought an action against him for payment due, and Bocchoris, on hearing the case, ordered the man to bring into court in its coffer the sum total demanded of him, and to move it hither and thither with his hand, and the courtesan was to grasp its shadow, since the thing imagined is a shadow of the reality. This judgment Lamia thought to be unjust; for though the dream put an end to the young man's passion, the shadow of the money did not set the courtesan free from her desire for it. So much, then, for Lamia.

DEMETRIUS

XXVIII. But the fortunes and achievements of the man whose Life I am narrating, brings my narrative back, as it were, from the comic to the tragic stage. For all the other kings leagued themselves together against Antigonus and united their forces, and so Demetrius set forth from Greece,¹ and finding his father eager beyond his years for the war, he was himself still more encouraged. And yet it would seem that if Antigonus had made some trifling concessions and had slackened his excessive passion for dominion, he might have always retained the supremacy for himself and have left it to his son. But he was naturally stern and haughty, and was harsh in what he said no less than in what he did, and therefore exasperated and incited against himself many young and powerful men; and their γε τότε σύστασιν καὶ κοινωνίαν αὐτῶν ἔλεγεν ὡσπερ ὀρνίθων σπερμολόγων συνδρομὴν ἐνὶ λίθῳ καὶ ψόφῳ συνδιαταράξειν.

¹ Late in 302 B.C.

- 3 Ἦγε δὲ πεζοὺς μὲν ἑπτακισμυρίων πλείους, ἵππεῖς δὲ μυρίους, ἐλέφαντας δὲ ἑβδομήκοντα πέντε, τῶν ἐναντίων ἐχόντων πεζοὺς μὲν ἑξακισμυρίους καὶ τετρακισχιλίους, ἵππεῖς δὲ πεντακοσίους τῶν ἐκείνου πλείονας, ἐλέφαντας δὲ τετρακοσίους, ἄρματα δὲ ἑκατὸν εἴκοσι. γενομένῳ δ' ἐγγὺς αὐτῶν τροπὴν ἔσχεν ἢ διάνοια τῆς
- 4 ἐλπίδος μᾶλλον ἢ τῆς γνώμης. ὑψηλὸς γὰρ εἶναι καὶ γαῦρος εἰώθως ἐν τοῖς ἀγῶσι καὶ χρώμενος φωνῇ τε μεγάλῃ καὶ λόγοις σοβαροῖς, πολλάκις δὲ καὶ τῷ παρασκῶψαί τι καὶ γελοῖον εἰπεῖν τῶν πολεμίων ἐν χερσὶν ὄντων ἐπίδειξάμενος εὐστάθειαν καὶ καταφρόνησιν, τότε συννοῦς ἑώρατο καὶ σιωπηλὸς τὰ πολλά, καὶ τὸν υἱὸν ἀπέδειξε τῷ πλήθει καὶ συνέστησε διάδοχον.
- 5 ὁ δὲ μάλιστα πάντες ἐθαύμασαν, ἐν τῇ σκηνῇ μόνος διελέχθη πρὸς αὐτόν, οὐκ εἰθισμένος ἔχειν οὐδὲ πρὸς ἐκείνους ἀπορρήτους κοινολογίας, ἀλλὰ ἴδιος ὢν γνώμη, εἶτα προστάττων φανερώς καὶ χρώμενος οἷς βουλευσάιτο καθ' ἑαυτόν. λέγεται γοῦν μεράκιον ἔτι ὄντα τὸν Δημήτριον αὐτοῦ πυθέσθαι πότε μέλλουσιν ἀναξευγνυεῖν τὸν δὲ εἰπεῖν πρὸς ὀργήν· “Ἀγωνιάς μὴ μόνος σὺ τῆς σάλπιγγος οὐκ ἀκούσης;”

XXIX. Τότε μέντοι καὶ σημεῖα μοχθηρὰ κατεδουλοῦτο τὴν γνώμην αὐτῶν. Δημήτριος μὲν γὰρ ἔδοξε κατὰ τοὺς ὕπνους Ἀλέξανδρον ὀπλισμένον λαμπρῶς ἐρωτᾶν ὁποῖόν τι σύνθημα διδό-combination and partnership at this time he said he would scatter asunder with a single stone and a single shout, as if they were a flock of granivorous birds.

DEMETRIUS

He took the field with more than seventy thousand infantry, ten thousand horse, and seventy-five elephants; while his adversaries had sixty-four thousand infantry, five hundred more horse than he, four hundred elephants, and a hundred and twenty chariots. After he had drawn near them, the cast of his expectations rather than of his purposes underwent a change. For he was wont to be lofty and boastful as he engaged in his conflicts, making pompous speeches in a loud voice, and many times also by the utterance of a casual jest or joke when the enemy was close at hand he would show the firmness of his own spirit and his contempt for them; but now he was observed to be thoughtful and silent for the most part, and he presented his son to the army and pronounced him his successor. But what more than anything else astonished everybody was his conversing alone in his tent with his son, although it was not his custom to have secret conferences even with him; instead, he made his own plans, followed his own counsels, and then gave his orders openly. At all events, we are told that Demetrius, when he was still a stripling, asked his father when they were going to break camp; and that Antigonus replied in anger: "Art thou in distress lest thou alone shouldst not hear the trumpet?"

XXIX. At this time, moreover, bad omens also subdued their spirits. For Demetrius dreamed that Alexander, in brilliant array of armour, asked him what watchword they were going to give for the

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- ναι πρὸς τὴν μάχην μέλλουσιν· αὐτοῦ δὲ φήσαντος, “Δία καὶ Νίκη” “Ἄπειμι τοίνυν,” φάναι,” πρὸς τοὺς ἐναντίους· ἐκείνοι γάρ με
- 2 παραλαμβάνουσιν.” Ἀντίγονος δὲ παραταττομένης ἤδη τῆς φάλαγγος ἕξιὼν προσέπταισεν, ὥστε πεσεῖν ὄλως ἐπὶ στόμα καὶ διατεθῆναι χαλεπῶς· ἀναστὰς δὲ καὶ τὰς χεῖρας ἀνατείνας πρὸς τὸν οὐρανὸν ἠτήσατο νίκην παρὰ τῶν θεῶν ἢ θάνατον ἀναίσθητον πρὸ τῆς ἥττης.
- 3 Γενομένης δὲ τῆς μάχης ἐν χερσὶ Δημήτριος ἔχων τοὺς πλείστους καὶ κρατίστους τῶν ἰππέων Ἀντιόχῳ τῷ Σελεύκου συνέπεσε, καὶ μέχρι τροπῆς τῶν πολεμίων λαμπρῶς ἀγωνισάμενος ἐν τῇ διώξει σοβαρᾷ καὶ φιλοτίμῳ παρὰ καιρὸν γενομένη τὴν νίκην διέφθειρεν. αὐτὸς μὲν γὰρ οὐκ ἔσχε πάλιν ἀναστρέψας συμμίξαι τοῖς πεζοῖς τῶν ἐλεφάντων ἐν μέσῳ γενομένων, τὴν δὲ φάλαγγα γυμνὴν ἰππέων κατιδόντες οἱ περὶ Σέλευκον οὐκ ἐνέβαλον μὲν, ὡς δὲ ἐμβαλοῦντες ἐφόβουν καὶ περιήλανον, μεταβάλλεσθαι δι-
- 4 δόντες αὐτοῖς· ὃ καὶ συνέβη. πολὺ γὰρ μέρος ἀπορραγὲν ἔκουσίως μετεχώρησε πρὸς ἐκείνους, τὸ δὲ λοιπὸν ἔτράπη. φερομένων δὲ πολλῶν ἐπὶ τὸν Ἀντίγονον καὶ τινος τῶν περὶ αὐτὸν εἰπόντος, “Ἐπὶ σὲ οὗτοι, βασιλεῦ,” “Τίνα γάρ,” εἶπε, “πλὴν ἐμοῦ σκοπὸν ἔχουσιν; ἀλλὰ Δημήτριος
- 5 ἀφίξεται βοηθῶν.” καὶ τοῦτο μέχρι παντὸς ἐλπίζων καὶ περισκοπῶν τὸν υἱὸν ἅμα πολλῶν

DEMETRIUS

battle; and when he replied, "Zeus and Victory," Alexander said: "Then I will go away and join your adversaries; they surely will receive me."¹ Moreover, Antigonus, when his phalanx was already forming and he was leaving his tent, stumbled and fell prone upon his face, injuring himself severely; but he rose to his feet, and stretching out his hands towards heaven prayed that the gods would grant him victory, or a painless death before his defeat.

After the armies had engaged,² Demetrius, with the largest and best part of the cavalry, clashed with Antiochus, the son of Seleucus; he fought brilliantly and routed his enemy, but by pursuing him too fiercely and eagerly he threw away the victory. For he himself was not able to turn back and rejoin his infantry, since the enemy's elephants were thrown in his way; and Seleucus, observing that his opponents' phalanx was unprotected by cavalry, took measures accordingly. He did not actually charge upon them, but kept them in fear of a charge by continually riding around them, thus giving them an opportunity to come over to his side. And this was what actually came to pass. For a large body of them, detached from the rest, came over to him of their own accord, and the rest were routed. Then, as throngs of his enemies bore down upon him and one of his followers said, "They are making at thee, O King," "Who else, pray," said Antigonus, "should be their mark? But Demetrius will come to my aid." This was his hope to the last, and to the last he kept watching eagerly for his son; then a whole cloud of javelins ἀκοντισμάτων εἰς αὐτὸν ἀφεθέντων ἔπεσε· καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἀπολιπόντων ὀπαδῶν καὶ φίλων μόνος παρέμεινε τῷ νεκρῷ Θώραξ ὁ Λαρισσαῖος.

¹ The watchword should have been "Alexander and Victory."

² Near the village of Ipsus, in Phrygia, 301 B.C.

XXX. Οὕτω δὲ κριθείσης τῆς μάχης, οἱ μὲν νενικηκότες βασιλεῖς τὴν ὑπ' Ἀντιγόνῳ καὶ Δημητρίῳ πᾶσαν ἀρχὴν ὥσπερ μέγα σῶμα κατακόπτοντες ἐλάμβανον μερίδας, καὶ προσδιενείμαντο τὰς ἐκείνων ἐπαρχίας αἷς εἶχον αὐτοὶ πρότερον. Δημήτριος δὲ μετὰ πεντακισχιλίων πεζῶν καὶ τετρακισχιλίων ἰππέων φεύγων καὶ συντόνως ἐλάσας εἰς Ἔφεσον, οἰομένων ἀπάντων ἀποροῦντα χρημάτων αὐτὸν οὐκ ἀφέξεσθαι τοῦ
 2 ἱεροῦ, φοβηθεὶς τοὺς στρατιώτας μὴ τοῦτο ποιήσωσιν, ἀνέστη διὰ ταχέων, καὶ τὸν πλοῦν ἐπὶ τῆς Ἑλλάδος ἐποιεῖτο, τῶν λοιπῶν ἐλπίδων ἐν Ἀθηναίοις ἔχων τὰς μεγίστας. καὶ γὰρ καὶ ναῦς¹ ἐκεῖ καὶ χρήματα καὶ γυναῖκα Δηϊδάμειαν ἐτύγχανε καταλελοιπώς, καὶ βεβαιότεραν οὐκ ἐνόμιζε καταφυγὴν εἶναι τοῖς πράγμασι τῆς
 3 Ἀθηναίων εὐνοίας. ὅθεν ἐπεὶ γενομένῳ περὶ τὰς Κυκλάδας αὐτῷ πρέσβεις Ἀθηναίων ἀπήντησαν ἀπέχεσθαι τῆς πόλεως παρακαλοῦντες, ὡς ἐψηφισμέκου τοῦ δήμου μηδένα δέχεσθαι τῇ πόλει τῶν βασιλέων, τὴν δὲ Δηϊδάμειαν εἰς Μέγαρα ἐξέπεμψαν μετὰ τιμῆς καὶ πομπῆς πρεπούσης, τοῦ καθεστηκότος ἐξέστη δι' ὀργὴν αὐτοῦ, καίπερ ἐνηνοχῶς ῥᾶστα τὴν ἄλλην ἀτυχίαν καὶ γεγονῶς ἐν τοιαύτῃ μεταβολῇ πραγμάτων οὐ
 4 ταπεινὸς οὐδ' ἀγεννής. ἀλλὰ τὸ παρ' ἐλπίδα διεψεύσθαι τῶν Ἀθηναίων καὶ τὴν δοκοῦσαν εὐνοίαν ἐξεληλέγχθαι τοῖς πράγμασι κενὴν καὶ πεπλασμένην οὖσαν ὀδυνηρὸν ἦν αὐτῷ.

¹ καὶ ναῦς Ziegler, with all the MSS. but one : ναῦς.

DEMETRIUS

were let fly at him and he fell. The rest of his friends and attendants abandoned him, and one only remained by his dead body, Thorax of Larissa.

XXX. The battle having been decided in this manner, the victorious kings carved up the entire domain which had been subject to Antigonus and Demetrius, as if it had been a great carcass, and took each his portion, adding thus to the provinces which the victors already had, those of the vanquished kings. But Demetrius, with five thousand foot and four thousand horse, came in unbroken flight to Ephesus. Here everybody thought that his lack of resources would lead him to lay hands upon the temple¹; but he, fearing lest his soldiers might do this, departed speedily, and sailed for Greece, putting his chief remaining hopes in Athens. For he had left ships there, and moneys, and his wife Deïdameia, and he thought that in his evil plight no refuge could be more secure than the goodwill of Athens. Therefore when, as he drew near the Cyclades islands, an embassy from Athens met him with a request to keep away from the city, on the ground that the people had passed a vote to admit none of the kings, and informing him that Deïdameia had been sent to Megara with fitting escort and honour, his wrath drove him beyond all proper bounds, although he had borne his other misfortunes very easily, and in so great a reversal of his situation had shown himself neither mean-spirited nor ignoble. But that the Athenians should disappoint his hopes and play him false, and that their apparent goodwill should prove on trial to be false and empty, was painful to him.

¹ The rich temple of Artemis (Diana).

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Τὸ γὰρ φαυλότατον, ὡς ἔοικεν, εὐνοίας ὄχλων βασιλεῦσι καὶ δυνάσταις τεκμήριόν ἐστιν ὑπερβολὴ τιμῶν, ἧς ἐν τῇ προαιρέσει τῶν ἀποδιδόντων ἐχούσης τὸ καλὸν ἀφαιρεῖ τὴν πίστιν ὁ φόβος· τὰ γὰρ αὐτὰ καὶ δεδιότες ψηφίζονται καὶ 5 φιλοῦντες. διόπερ οἱ νοῦν ἔχοντες οὐκ εἰς ἀνδριάντας οὐδὲ γραφὰς οὐδὲ ἀποθεώσεις, ἀλλὰ μᾶλλον εἰς τὰ ἔργα καὶ τὰς πράξεις τὰς ἑαυτῶν ἀποβλέποντες ἢ πιστεύουσιν, ὡς τιμαῖς, ἢ ἀπιστοῦσιν, ὡς ἀνάγκαις· ὡς οἷ γε δῆμοι πολλάκις ἐν αὐταῖς μάλιστα ταῖς τιμαῖς μισοῦσι τοὺς ἀμέτρως καὶ ὑπερόγκως καὶ παρ' ἀκόντων λαμβάνοντας.

XXXI. Ὁ γοῦν Δημήτριος τότε δεινὰ μὲν
 • ἠγούμενος πάσχειν, ἀδύνατος δὲ ὢν ἀμύνασθαι, προσέπεμψε τοῖς Ἀθηναίοις ἐγκαλῶν μετρίως, ἀξιῶν δὲ τὰς ναῦς ἀπολαβεῖν, ἐν αἷς ἦν καὶ ἡ τρισκαιδεκῆρης. κομισάμενος δὲ παρέπλευσεν εἰς Ἴσθμόν, καὶ τῶν πραγμάτων αὐτῷ κακῶς ἐχόντων (ἐξέπιπτον γὰρ ἕκασταχόθεν αἱ φρουραὶ καὶ μεθίστατο πάντα πρὸς τοὺς πολεμίους)
 2 ἀπολιπὼν ἐπὶ τῆς Ἑλλάδος Πύρρον αὐτὸς ἄρας ἐπὶ τὴν Χερρόνησον ἔπλευσε· καὶ κακῶς ἅμα ποιῶν Λυσίμαχον ὠφέλει καὶ συνεῖχε τὴν περὶ αὐτὸν δύναμιν, ἀρχομένην ἀναλαμβάνειν καὶ γίνεσθαι πάλιν οὐκ εὐκαταφρόνητον. ὁ δὲ Λυσίμαχος ὑπὸ τῶν ἄλλων βασιλέων ἡμελεῖτο, μηδὲν

DEMETRIUS

And verily the least cogent proof, as it would seem, of a people's goodwill towards a king or potentate is an extravagant bestowal of honours; for the beauty of such honours lies in the purpose of those who bestow them, and fear robs them of their worth (for the same decrees may be passed out of fear and out of affection). Therefore men of sense look first of all at their own acts and achievements, and then estimate the value of the statues, paintings, or dedications offered to them, putting faith in these as genuine honours, or refusing to do so on the ground that they are compulsory; since it is certainly true that a people will often, in the very act of conferring its honours, have most hatred for those who accept such honours immoderately, ostentatiously, and from unwilling givers.

XXXI. Be that as it may, in this case Demetrius thought himself grievously wronged; but since he was unable to avenge himself, he sent a message to the Athenians in which he mildly expostulated with them, and asked that his ships be given back to him, among which was also the one having thirteen banks of oars. These he obtained, and then coasted along to the Isthmus, where he found his affairs in a sorry state. For his garrisons were everywhere being expelled, and there was a general defection to his enemies. He therefore left Pyrrhus in charge of Greece, while he himself put to sea and sailed to the Chersonesus.¹ Here he ravaged the territory of Lysimachus, thereby enriching and holding together his own forces, which were beginning to recover their spirit and to show themselves formidable again. Nor did the other kings try to help Lysimachus; ἐπιεικέστερος ἐκείνου δοκῶν εἶναι, τῷ δὲ μᾶλλον ἰσχύειν καὶ φοβερώτερος.

¹ The Thracian Chersonesus, the modern Gallipoli.

- 3 Οὐ πολλῶ δὲ ὕστερον Σέλευκος ἐμνάτο πέμπων τὴν Δημητρίου καὶ Φίλας θυγατέρα Στρατουίκην, ἔχων μὲν ἐξ Ἀπάμας τῆς Περσίδος υἱὸν Ἀντίοχον, οἴομενος δὲ τὰ πράγματα καὶ διαδόχοις ἀρκεῖν πλείοσι, καὶ δεῖσθαι τῆς πρὸς ἐκείνον οἰκειότητος, ἐπεὶ καὶ Λυσίμαχον ἑώρα τῶν Πτολεμαίου θυγατέρων τὴν μὲν ἑαυτῷ, τὴν δὲ Ἀγαθοκλεῖ τῷ υἱῷ λαμβάνοντα. Δημητρίῳ δ' ἦν ἀνέλπιστος εὐτυχία κηδεῦσαι Σελεύκῳ. καὶ τὴν κόρην ἀναλαβὼν ἔπλει ταῖς ναυσὶ πάσαις εἰς Συρίαν, τῇ τε ἄλλῃ γῆ προσέχων ἀναγκαίως καὶ τῆς Κιλικίας ἀπτόμενος, ἣν Πλείσταρχος εἶχε μετὰ τὴν πρὸς Ἀντίγονον μάχην ἐξαίρετον αὐτῷ δοθεῖσαν ὑπὸ τῶν βασιλέων· ἦν δὲ Κασάνδρου
- 5 Πλείσταρχος ἀδελφός. ἀδικεῖσθαι δὲ τὴν χώραν αὐτοῦ νομίζων ὑπὸ Δημητρίου κατὰ τὰς ἀποβάσεις, καὶ μέμφασθαι βουλόμενος τὸν Σέλευκον ὅτι τῷ κοινῷ διαλλάττεται πολεμῶ δίχα τῶν ἄλλων βασιλέων, ἀνέβη πρὸς αὐτόν.

XXXII. Αἰσθόμενος δὲ τοῦτο Δημήτριος ὤρμησεν ἀπὸ θαλάσσης ἐπὶ Κυτίνδων· καὶ τῶν χρημάτων εὐρῶν ἔτι λοιπὰ χίλια καὶ διακόσια τάλαντα, ταῦτα συσκευασάμενος καὶ φθάσας ἐμβαλέσθαι διὰ ταχέων ἀνήχθη. καὶ παρουσίας ἤδη Φίλας τῆς γυναικὸς αὐτῷ περὶ Ῥωσσὸν ἀπῆν·

- 2 904 τῆσε Σέλευκος. καὶ τὴν ἔντευξιν εὐθύς ἄδουλον καὶ ἀνύποπτον καὶ βασιλικὴν ἐποιούντο, πρό-

DEMETRIUS

they thought that he was no less objectionable than Demetrius, and that because he had more power he was even more to be feared.

Not long afterwards, however, Seleucus sent and asked the hand of Stratonice, the daughter of Demetrius and Phila, in marriage. He had already, by Apama the Persian, a son Antiochus; but he thought that his realms would suffice for more successors than one, and that he needed this alliance with Demetrius, since he saw that Lysimachus also was taking one of Ptolemy's daughters for himself, and the other for Agathocles his son. Now, to Demetrius, a marriage-alliance with Seleucus was an unexpected piece of good fortune. So he took his daughter and sailed with his whole fleet to Syria. He was obliged to touch at several places along the coast, and made landings in Cilicia, which country had been allotted by the kings to Pleistarchus, after their battle with Antigonus, and was now held by him. Pleistarchus was a brother of Cassander. He thought his territories outraged by these descents of Demetrius upon them, and besides, he wished to upbraid Seleucus for making an alliance with the common enemy independently of the other kings. So he went up to see him.

XXXII. On learning of this, Demetrius set out from the sea-coast for the city of Quinda; and finding twelve hundred talents of its treasure still left, he packed them up, got them safely on board ship, and put to sea with all speed. His wife Phila was already with him, and at Rhodus he was met by Seleucus. Their intercourse was at once put on a royal footing, and knew neither guile nor

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- τερον μὲν Σέλευκος ἐστίασας ἐπὶ σκηνῆς ἐν τῷ στρατοπέδῳ Δημήτριον, αὐθις δὲ Δημήτριος ἐκείνῳ ἐν τῇ τρισκαιδεκῆρῃ δεξάμενος. ἦσαν δὲ καὶ σχολαὶ καὶ κοινολογίαι καὶ συνδιημερεύσεις ἀφρούρων καὶ ἀνόπλων, ἄχρι οὗ Σέλευκος τὴν Στρατοικήν ἀναλαβὼν λαμπρῶς εἰς Ἀντιόχειαν
- 3 ἀνέβη. Δημήτριος δὲ Κιλικίαν κατέσχε, καὶ Φίλαν τὴν γυναῖκα πρὸς Κάσανδρον ἔπεμψε τὸν ἀδελφόν, ἀπολυσομένην τὰς Πλειστάρχου κατηγορίας. ἐν δὲ τούτῳ Δηιδάμεια πλεύσασα πρὸς αὐτὸν ἀπὸ τῆς Ἑλλάδος καὶ συγγενομένη χρόνον οὐ πολλὸν ἐξ ἀρρωστίας τινὸς ἐτελεύτησε. γενομένης δὲ πρὸς Πτολεμαῖον διὰ Σελεύκου φιλίας αὐτῷ, ὠμολογήθη Πτολεμαῖδα τὴν Πτολεμαίου θυγατέρα λαβεῖν αὐτὸν γυναῖκα.
- 4 Καὶ ταῦτα μὲν ἀστεῖα τοῦ Σελεύκου. Κιλικίαν δὲ ἀξιῶν χρήματα λαβόντα παραδοῦναι Δημήτριον, ὡς οὐκ ἔπειθε, Σιδῶνα καὶ Τύρον ἀπαιτῶν πρὸς ὀργὴν ἐδόκει βίαιος εἶναι καὶ δεινὰ ποιεῖν, εἰ τὴν ἀπ' Ἰνδῶν ἄχρι τῆς κατὰ Συρίαν θαλάσσης ἅπασαν ὑφ' αὐτῷ πεποιημένος οὕτως ἐνδεής ἐστίν ἔτι πραγμάτων καὶ πτωχὸς ὡς ὑπὲρ δυεῖν πόλεων ἄνδρα κηδεστήν καὶ μεταβολῇ
- 5 τύχης κεχρημένον ἐλαύνειν, λαμπρὰν τῷ Πλάτωνι μαρτυρίαν διδοὺς διακελευομένῳ μὴ τὴν οὐσίαν πλείω, τὴν δὲ ἀπληστίαν ποιεῖν ἐλάσσω τὸν γε βουλόμενον ὡς ἀληθῶς εἶναι πλούσιον, ὡς ὁ γε μὴ παύων φιλοπλουτίαν, οὗτος οὔτε πενίας οὔτε ἀπορίας ἀπήλλακται.

DEMETRIUS

suspicion. First, Seleucus entertained Demetrius at his tent in the camp, then Demetrius in his turn received Seleucus on board the ship with thirteen banks of oars. There were also amusements, long conferences with one another and whole days spent together, all without guards or arms; until at length Seleucus took Stratonice and went up in great state to Antioch. But Demetrius took possession of Cilicia, and sent Phila his wife to Cassander, who was her brother, that she might bring to naught the denunciations of Pleistarchus. In the meantime, Deidameia came by sea from Greece to join Demetrius, and after being with him a short time, succumbed to some disease. Then, by the intervention of Seleucus, friendship was made between Demetrius and Ptolemy, and it was agreed that Demetrius should take to wife Ptolemais the daughter of Ptolemy.

So far all was courtesy on the part of Seleucus. But presently he asked Demetrius to cede Cilicia to him for a sum of money, and when Demetrius would not consent, angrily demanded Tyre and Sidon from him. It seemed a violent and outrageous proceeding that one who had possessed himself of the whole domain from India to the Syrian sea should be so needy still and so beggarly in spirit as for the sake of two cities to harass a man who was his relative by marriage and had suffered a reverse of fortune. Moreover, he bore splendid testimony to the wisdom of Plato¹ in urging the man who would be truly rich, not to make his possessions greater, but his inordinate desires fewer; since he who puts no end to his greed, this man is never rid of poverty and want.

¹ The passage cannot be determined.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

XXXIII. Οὐ μὴν ὑπέπτηξε Δημήτριος, ἀλλὰ φήσας οὐδ' ἂν μυριάκις ἠττηθῆ μάχας ἄλλας ἐν Ἰψφ γαμβρὸν ἀγαπήσειν ἐπὶ μισθῷ Σέλευκον, τὰς μὲν πόλεις ἐκρατύνατο φρουραῖς, αὐτὸς δὲ πυθόμενος Λαχάρη στασιάζουσιν Ἀθηναίοις ἐπιθέμενον τυραννεῖν, ἤλπιζε ῥαδίως ἐπιφανεῖς λήψεσθαι τὴν πόλιν. καὶ τὸ μὲν πέλαγος ἀσφαλῶς διεπεραιώθη μεγάλῳ στόλῳ, παρὰ δὲ τὴν Ἀττικὴν παραπλέων ἐχειμάσθη καὶ τὰς πλείστας ἀπέβαλε τῶν νεῶν, καὶ συνδιεφθάρη πλήθος ἀνθρώπων οὐκ ὀλίγον. αὐτὸς δὲ σωθεὶς ἤψατο μὲν τινος πολέμου πρὸς τοὺς Ἀθηναίους, ὡς δ' οὐδὲν ἐπέβαινε, πέμψας ναυτικὸν αὐθις ἀθροίσοντας αὐτὸς εἰς Πελοπόννησον παρήλθε καὶ Μεσσήνην ἐπολιόρκει. καὶ προσμαχόμενος τοῖς τείχεσιν ἐκινδύνευσε, καταπελτικῷ βέλους εἰς τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτῷ καὶ τὸ στόμα διὰ τῆς σιαγόνης ἐμπεσόντος. ἀναληφθεὶς δὲ καὶ πόλεις τινὰς ἀφεστώσας προσαγαγόμενος πάλιν εἰς τὴν Ἀττικὴν ἐνέβαλε, καὶ κρατήσας Ἐλευσίνος καὶ Ῥαμνοῦντος ἔφθειρε τὴν χώραν, καὶ ναῦν τινα λαβῶν ἔχουσιν σίτον καὶ εἰσάγουσαν τοῖς Ἀθηναίοις ἐκρέμασε τὸν ἔμπορον καὶ τὸν κυβερνήτην, ὥστε τῶν ἄλλων ἀποτρεπομένων διὰ φόβον σύντονον λιμὸν ἐν ἄστει γενέσθαι, πρὸς δὲ τῷ λιμῷ καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἀπορίαν. ἄλῶν γοῦν μέδιμνον ὠνοῦντο τετταράκοντα δραχμῶν, ὁ δὲ τῶν πυρῶν μόδιος ὄνιος ἦν τριακοσίων. μικρὰν δὲ τοῖς Ἀθηναίοις ἀναπνοὴν παρέσχον ἑκατὸν πεντή-

80

DEMETRIUS

XXXIII. Demetrius, however, was not cowed, but declared that not even if he should lose ten thousand battles like that at Ipsus would he consent to pay for the privilege of having Seleucus as a son-in-law. Then he strengthened his cities with garrisons, while he himself, learning that Lachares had usurped sovereign power over the Athenians in consequence of their dissensions, thought to appear upon the scene and make an easy capture of the city. So he crossed the sea in safety with a great fleet,¹ but as he was sailing along the coast of Attica he encountered a storm in which most of his ships were lost and a great number of men perished with them. He himself, however, escaped alive, and began a petty war against the Athenians. But since he could accomplish nothing, he sent men to collect another fleet for him, while he himself passed on into Peloponnesus and laid siege to Messene. Here, in an attack upon the walls, he came near losing his life; for a missile from a catapult struck him in the face and passed through his jaw into his mouth. But he recovered, and after restoring to their allegiance certain cities which had revolted from him, he invaded Attica again, got Eleusis and Rhamnus into his power, and ravaged the country. He also seized a ship laden with grain for Athens, and hung its supercargo and its master. All other ships were thus frightened into turning back, and famine became acute in the city, where, besides lack of food, there was dearth also of other things. At any rate, a bushel of salt sold there for forty drachmas, and a peck of wheat was worth three hundred. A slight respite was afforded the Athenians κουτα νῆες φανείσαι περὶ Αἴγιαναν, ἃς ἔπεμψεν ἐπικούρους αὐτοῖς Πτολεμαῖος. εἶτα Δημητρίῳ πολλῶν μὲν ἐκ Πελοποννήσου, πολλῶν δὲ ἀπὸ Κύπρου νεῶν παραγενομένων, ὥστε συμπάσας ἀθροισθῆναι τριακοσίας, ἔφυγον ἄραυτες οἱ Πτολεμαίου, καὶ Λαχάρης ὁ τύραννος ἀπέδρα προέμενος τὴν πόλιν.

¹ In 297 B.C.

- XXXIV. Οἱ δὲ Ἀθηναῖοι, καίπερ ψηφισάμενοι θάνατον εἰ μνησθείη τις εἰρήνης καὶ διαλλαγῆς πρὸς Δημήτριον, εὐθύς ἀνεφύγυσαν τὰς ἐγγύς πύλας καὶ πρέσβεις ἔπεμπον, οὐδὲν μὲν ἀπ' ἐκείνου χρηστὸν προσδοκῶντες, ἐκβιαζομένης
- 2 δὲ τῆς ἀπορίας, ἐν ἣ ἄσυχερῶν πολλῶν συμπεσόντων λέγεταιί τι καὶ τοιοῦτον γενέσθαι πατέρα καὶ υἱὸν ἐν οἰκῆματι καθέζεσθαι τὰ καθ' ἑαυτοὺς ἀπεγνωκότας, ἐκ δὲ τῆς ὀροφῆς μὴν νεκρὸν ἐκπεσεῖν, τοὺς δέ, ὡς εἶδον, ἀναπηδήσαντας ἀμφοτέρους διαμάχεσθαι περὶ αὐτοῦ. τότε καὶ τὸν φιλόσοφον Ἐπίκουρον ἱστοροῦσι διαθρέψαι τοὺς συνήθεις κυάμους πρὸς ἀριθμὸν μετ' αὐτῶν διανεμόμενον.
- 3 Οὕτως οὖν τῆς πόλεως ἐχούσης εἰσελθὼν ὁ Δημήτριος, καὶ κελεύσας εἰς τὸ θέατρον ἀθροισθῆναι πάντας, ὄπλοις μὲν συνέφραξε τὴν σκηνὴν καὶ δορυφόροις τὸ λογεῖον περιέλαβεν, αὐτὸς δὲ καταβάς, ὡσπερ οἱ τραγωδοί, διὰ τῶν ἄνω παρόδων, ἔτι μᾶλλον ἐκπεπληγμένων τῶν Ἀθηναίων τὴν ἀρχὴν τοῦ λόγου πέρας ἐποιήσατο τοῦ δέους
- 4 αὐτῶν. καὶ γὰρ τόνου φωνῆς καὶ ῥημάτων

DEMETRIUS

by the appearance off Aegina of a hundred and fifty ships which Ptolemy sent to assist them. Then numerous ships came to Demetrius from Peloponnesus, and many from Cyprus, so that his entire assemblage numbered three hundred, in consequence of which the ships of Ptolemy put off to sea in flight, and Lachares the tyrant abandoned the city and ran away.

XXXIV. Then the Athenians, although they had decreed death to anyone who should so much as mention peace and reconciliation with Demetrius, straightway threw open the nearest gates and sent ambassadors to him. They did not expect any kindly treatment from him, but were driven to the step by their destitution, in which, among many other grievous things, the following also is said to have occurred. A father and a son were sitting in a room and had abandoned all hope. Then a dead mouse fell from the ceiling, and the two, when they saw it, sprang up and fought with one another for it. At this time also, we are told, the philosopher Epicurus sustained the lives of his associates with beans, which he counted out and distributed among them.

Such, then, was the plight of the city when Demetrius made his entry and ordered all the people to assemble in the theatre. He fenced the stage-buildings round with armed men, and encompassed the stage itself with his body-guards, while he himself, like the tragic actors, came down into view through one of the upper side-entrances. The Athenians were more than ever frightened now; but with the first words that he uttered Demetrius put an end to their fears. For avoiding all harshness of tone and πικρίας φεισάμενος, ἐλαφρῶς δὲ καὶ φιλικῶς μεμφάμενος αὐτοὺς διηλλάσσετο, καὶ δέκα μυριάδας σίτου μεδίμνων ἐπέδωκε, καὶ κατέστησεν ἀρχὰς αἱ μάλιστα τῷ δήμῳ προσφιλεῖς ἦσαν.

 συνιδῶν δὲ Δρομοκλείδης ὁ ῥήτωρ ὑπὸ χαρᾶς τὸν δῆμον ἔν τε φωναῖς ὄντα παντοδαπαῖς καὶ τοὺς ἀπὸ τοῦ βήματος ἐπαίνους τῶν δημαγωγῶν ἀμιλλλώμενον ὑπερβαλέσθαι, γνώμην ἔγραψε Δημητρίῳ τῷ βασιλεῖ τὸν Πειραιᾶ παραδοθῆναι καὶ
 5 τὴν Μουνυχίαν. ἐπιψηφισθέντων δὲ τούτων ὁ Δημήτριος αὐτὸς ἐφ' ἑαυτοῦ προσενέβαλε φρου-ρὰν εἰς τὸ Μουσεῖον, ὡς μὴ πάλιν ἀναχαιτίσαντα τὸν δῆμον ἀσχολίας αὐτῷ πραγμάτων ἐτέρων παρασχεῖν.

XXXV. Ἐχομένων δὲ τῶν Ἀθηνῶν εὐθύς ἐπεβούλευε τῇ Λακεδαίμονι. καὶ περὶ Μαντίνειαν Ἀρχιδάμου τοῦ βασιλέως ἀπαντήσαντος αὐτῷ νικῆσας μάχῃ καὶ τρεψάμενος εἰς τὴν Λακωνικὴν ἐνέβαλε. καὶ πρὸς αὐτῇ τῇ Σπάρτῃ πάλιν ἐκ παρατάξεως ἔλὼν πεντακοσίους καὶ διαφθείρας 2 διακοσίους, ὅσον οὐπω τὴν πόλιν ἔχειν ἐδόκει ἢ τὴν τύχην περὶ οὐδένα τῶν βασιλέων ἔοικεν οὕτω τροπᾶς λαβεῖν μεγάλας καὶ ταχείας, οὐδ' ἐν ἐτέροις πράγμασι τοσαυτάκις μικρὰ καὶ πάλιν μεγάλη καὶ ταπεινὴ μὲν ἐκ λαμπρᾶς, ἰσχυρὰ δὲ αὐθις ἐκ φαύλης γενέσθαι. διὸ καὶ φασιν αὐτὸν ἐν ταῖς χείροσι μεταβολαῖς πρὸς τὴν τύχην ἀναφθέγγεσθαι τὸ Αἰσχύλειον·

σύ τοί με φυσᾶς, σύ με καταίθειν μοι¹ δοκεῖς.

¹ μοι δοκεῖς Ziegler, with some MSS.: δοκεῖς.

DEMETRIUS

bitterness of speech, he merely chided them lightly and in a friendly manner, and then declared himself reconciled, gave them besides a hundred thousand bushels of grain, and established the magistrates who were most acceptable to the people. So Dromocleides the orator, seeing that the people, in their joy, were shouting all sorts of proposals, and were eager to outdo the customary eulogies of the public speakers on the bema, brought in a motion that Piraeus and Munychia should be handed over to Demetrius the king. This was voted, and Demetrius on his own account put a garrison into the Museum¹ also, that the people might not again shake off the yoke and give him further trouble.

XXXV. And now that he was in possession of Athens, he at once laid plans against Sparta. Near Mantinea, where Archidamus the king confronted him, he conquered and routed his foe, and then invaded Laconia. And after he had fought a second pitched battle hard by Sparta itself, where he captured five hundred men and slew two hundred, it was thought that he as good as had the city in his power, although up to this time it had never been taken. But with none of the kings does Fortune appear to have taken so great and sudden turns, and in the career of no other did she so many times show herself now small and now great, now resplendent and now abased, now insignificant and now all powerful. For this reason, too, we are told that in his worst reverses Demetrius would apostrophise Fortune in the words of Aeschylus :—

“ My flame thou fannest, indeed, and thou seemest to quench me, too.”²

¹ A hill S.W. of the Acropolis.

² Nauck, Trag. Graec. Frag. ² p. 107 (μ' ἐφυσας).

- 3 Καὶ γὰρ τότε τῶν πραγμάτων οὕτως εὐπόρῳ αὐτῷ πρὸς ἀρχὴν καὶ δύναμιν ἐπιδιδόντων ἀγγέλλεται Λυσίμαχος μὲν πρῶτος ἀφηρημένος αὐτοῦ τὰς ἐν Ἀσίᾳ πόλεις, Κύπρον δὲ Πτολεμαῖος ἡρηκῶς ἄνευ μιᾶς πόλεως Σαλαμίνας, ἐν δὲ Σαλαμῖνι πολιορκῶν τοὺς παῖδας αὐτοῦ καὶ τὴν μητέρα
 4 κατειλημμένους. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ καὶ ἡ τύχη, καθάπερ ἢ παρ' Ἀρχιλόχῳ γυνὴ τῇ μὲν ὕδωρ ἐφόρει δολοφρονέουσα χειρὶ, τῇ δ' ἑτέρῃ πῦρ, δεινοῖς αὐτὸν οὕτω καὶ φοβεροῖς ἀγγέλμασιν ἀποστήσασα τῆς Λακεδαίμονος, εὐθύς ἑτέρας πραγμάτων καινῶν καὶ μεγάλων ἐπήνεγκεν ἐλπίδας ἐκ τοιαύτης αἰτίας.

XXXVI. Ἐπεὶ Κασάνδρου τελευτήσαντος ὁ πρεσβύτατος αὐτοῦ τῶν παίδων Φίλιππος οὐ πολὺν χρόνον βασιλεύσας Μακεδόνων ἀπέθανεν, οἱ λοιποὶ δύο πρὸς ἀλλήλους ἐστασίαζον, θατέρου δὲ αὐτῶν Ἀντιπάτρου τὴν μητέρα Θεσσαλονίκην φονεύσαντος, ἄτερος ἐκάλει βοηθοὺς ἐκ μὲν Ἠπείρου Πύρρον, ἐκ δὲ Πελοποννήσου Δη-
 2 μῆτριον. ἔφθασε δὲ Πύρρος ἐλθὼν, καὶ πολὺ μέρος Μακεδονίας ἀποτεμόμενος τῆς βοηθείας 906 μισθὸν φοβερὸς μὲν ἦν ἤδη παροικῶν Ἀλεξάνδρῳ Δημητρίου δέ, ὡς ἐδέξατο τὰ γράμματα, μετὰ τῆς δυνάμεως προσιόντος, ἔτι μᾶλλον ὁ νεανίας τούτον φοβηθεὶς διὰ τὸ ἀξίωμα καὶ τὴν δόξαν ἀπήντησεν αὐτῷ περὶ Δίον, ἀσπαζόμενος μὲν καὶ φιλοφρονούμενος, οὐδὲν δὲ φάσκων ἔτι τῆς ἐκείνου δεῖσθαι τὰ πράγματα παρουσίας.
 3 ἦσαν οὖν ἐκ τούτων ὑποψίαι πρὸς ἀλλήλους αὐτοῖς, καὶ βαδίζοντι Δημητρίῳ πρὸς δεῖπνον ὑπὸ τοῦ νεανίσκου παρακεκλημένῳ μνηύει τις ἐπι-

DEMETRIUS

And so at this time, when events so generously favoured the increase of his dominion and power, word was brought to him, first, that Lysimachus had deprived him of his cities in Asia, and next, that Ptolemy had taken Cyprus, with the exception of the single city of Salamis, and had shut up in Salamis under siege his children and his mother. However, even Fortune, who, like the woman in Archilochus, "in one deceitful hand bore water, and in the other fire,"¹ while by tidings so dreadful and terrifying she drew him away from Sparta, at once inspired him with other hopes of new and great achievements, and on this wise.

XXXVI. After Cassander's death, the eldest of his sons, Philip, reigned for a short time over the Macedonians and then died, and the two remaining brothers quarrelled with one another over the succession. One of them, Antipater, murdered his mother, Thessalonicé, and the other, Alexander, summoned to his help Pyrrhus from Epeirus, and Demetrius from Peloponnesus. Pyrrhus was first to answer the summons, and after cutting off a large part of Macedonia as a reward for his assistance, was already a neighbour whom Alexander feared. But Demetrius, who, when he received Alexander's letters, had set out with his forces to join him, inspired the young man with still more fear because of his high position and reputation, and he therefore met Demetrius at Diium, and gave him a friendly welcome, but declared that the situation no longer demanded his presence. Owing to these circumstances, then, the men were suspicious of one another, and besides, as Demetrius was on his way to supper at the young man's invi-

¹ Fragment 93 (Bergk, Poet. Lyr. Graeci, ii. 4 p. 410).

βουλὴν, ὡς ἐν αὐτῷ τῷ πότῳ μελλόντων αὐτὸν ἀνελεῖν. ὁ δὲ μηδὲν διαταραχθεὶς, ἀλλὰ μικρὸν ὑφείδεις τῆς πορείας, ἐκέλευσε τοὺς μὲν ἡγεμόνας ἐν τοῖς ὄπλοις τὴν στρατιὰν ἔχειν, ἀκολούθους δὲ καὶ παῖδας, ὅσοι περὶ αὐτὸν ἦσαν (ἦσαν δὲ πολὺ 4 ἀνδρῶνα καὶ παραμένειν ἄχρι ἂν ἐξαναστῆ. τοῦτο δέισαντες οἱ περὶ τὸν Ἀλέξανδρον οὐκ ἐτόλ-μησαν ἐπιχειρῆσαι. καὶ ὁ μὲν Δημήτριος οὐκ ἔχειν αὐτῷ τὸ σῶμα ποτικῶς σκηψάμενος διὰ ταχέων ἀπήλθε· τῇ δὲ ὑστεραία περὶ ἀναζυγὴν εἶχε, πράγματα νεώτερα προσπεπτωκένας φάμενος αὐτῷ, καὶ παρητέιτο συγγνώμην ἔχειν τὸν Ἀλέξανδρον, εἰ τάχιον ἀπαίρει· συνέσεσθαι γὰρ αὐτῷ μᾶλλον ἄλλοτε σχολάζων. ἔχαιρον οὖν ὁ Ἀλέξανδρος, ὡς οὐ πρὸς ἔχθραν, ἀλλ' ἐκουσίως ἐκ τῆς χώρας ἀπαίροντος αὐτοῦ, καὶ προέπεμπεν 5 ἄχρι Θετταλίας. ἐπεὶ δὲ εἰς Λάρισσαν ἦκον, αὐθις ἀλλήλοις ἐπήγγελον ἐστίασεις ἀντεπιβουλεύοντες· ὃ δὲ μάλιστα τὸν Ἀλέξανδρον ὑποχείριον ἐποίησε τῷ Δημητρίῳ. φυλάττεσθαι γὰρ ὀκνῶν, ὡς μὴ κάκεινον ἀντιφυλάττεσθαι διδάξῃ, παθῶν ἔφθασε (δρᾶν μέλλοντος αὐτοῦ μὴ διαφυγεῖν ἐκείνον) ὃ ἐμηχανᾶτο. κληθεὶς γὰρ ἐπὶ δεῖπνον ἦλθε πρὸς τὸν Δημήτριον. ὡς δὲ ἐκείνος ἐξανέστη μεταξὺ δειπνῶν, φοβηθεὶς ὁ Ἀλέξανδρος συνεξανέστη καὶ κατὰ πόδας αὐτῷ

DEMETRIUS

tation, some one told him of a plot to kill him in the very midst of the drinking. Demetrius was not at all disturbed, but delayed his coming a little, and ordered his officers to have their troops under arms, and all the attendants and servants in his train (and they were far more numerous than the retinue of Alexander) to go with him into the banqueting-hall and to remain there until he rose from the table. This frightened Alexander, and he did not venture to attempt anything. Demetrius also made the excuse that he was not in condition to take wine, and went away very soon. On the following day he busied himself with preparations for departure, telling Alexander that unexpected troubles had arisen, which demanded his attention, asking his pardon for leaving so quickly, and assuring him that he would pay him a longer visit at another time when his affairs permitted it. Alexander was therefore well pleased, convinced that Demetrius was leaving his territories, not in hostility, but of his own free will, and escorted him on his way as far as Thessaly. But when they came to Larissa, once more invitations to entertainments passed between them, and each plotted against the life of the other. This, more than anything else, put Alexander into the power of Demetrius. For he hesitated to take measures of precaution, that he might not thereby teach Demetrius also to take counter-measures, and he was forestalled by meeting the doom he was himself devising (since he delayed measures to prevent the other from escaping out of his hands).¹ And so, when Demetrius rose up from table before supper was over, Alexander, filled with fear, rose up also and followed close upon his heels

¹ The Greek of the parenthesis is hopelessly corrupt.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

6 πρὸς τὰς θύρας συνηκολούθει. γενόμενος οὖν ὁ Δημήτριος πρὸς ταῖς θύραις κατὰ τοὺς ἑαυτοῦ δορυφόρους καὶ τοῦτο μόνον εἰπὼν, “Κόπτε τὸν ἐπόμενον,” αὐτὸς μὲν ὑπεξῆλθεν, ὁ δὲ Ἀλέξανδρος ὑπ’ ἐκείνων κατεκόπη καὶ τῶν φίλων οἱ προσβοηθῶντες, ὧν ἓνα λέγουσι σφαττόμενον εἰπεῖν ὡς ἡμέρα μιᾷ φθάσειεν αὐτοὺς ὁ Δημήτριος.

XXXVII. Ἡ μὲν οὖν νύξ οἶον εἰκὸς θόρυβον ἔσχεν. ἄμα δὲ ἡμέρα ταραττομένοις τοῖς Μακεδόσι καὶ φοβουμένοις τῆμ τοῦ Δημητρίου δύναμιν, ὡς ἐπῆει μὲν οὐδεὶς φοβερὸς, ὁ δὲ Δημήτριος ἔπεμπε βουλόμενος ἐντυχεῖν καὶ περὶ τῶν πεπραγμένων ἀπολογήσασθαι, θαρρεῖν παρέστη
2 καὶ δέχεσθαι φιλανθρώπως αὐτόν. ὡς δὲ ἦλθεν, οὐ μακρῶν ἐδέησεν αὐτῷ λόγων, ἀλλὰ τῷ μισεῖν μὲν τὸν Ἀντίπατρον, φονέα μητρὸς ὄντα, βελτίονος δὲ ἀπορεῖν, ἐκείνον ἀνηγόρευσαν βασιλέα Μακεδόνων, καὶ παραλαβόντες εὐθύς κατήγον εἰς Μακεδονίαν. ἦν δὲ καὶ τοῖς οἴκοι Μακεδόσιν οὐκ ἀκούσιος ἢ μεταβολή, μεμνημένοις ἀεὶ καὶ μισοῦσιν ἃ Κάσανδρος εἰς Ἀλέξανδρον τεθνηκότα
3 παρηνόμησεν. εἰ δέ τις ἔτι μνήμη τῆς Ἀντιπάτρου τοῦ παλαιοῦ μετριότητος ὑπελείπετο, καὶ ταύτην Δημήτριος ἐκαρπούτο Φίλα συνοικῶν καὶ τὸν ἐξ ἐκείνης υἱὸν ἔχων διάδοχον τῆς ἀρχῆς, ἤδη τότε μειράκιον ὄντα καὶ τῷ πατρὶ συστρατευόμενον.

DEMETRIUS

towards the door. Demetrius, then, on reaching the door where his own body-guards stood, said merely, "Smite any one who follows me," and quietly went out himself; but Alexander was cut down by the guards, together with those of his friends who came to his aid. One of these, we are told, as he was smitten, said that Demetrius had got one day's start of them.

XXXVII. That night, then, naturally, was full of tumult. But with the day the Macedonians, who were in confusion and afraid of the forces of Demetrius, found that no enemy came against them, but that Demetrius sent to them a request for an interview and for an opportunity to explain what had been done. They therefore took heart and promised to receive him in a friendly spirit. When he came to them, there was no need of his making long speeches, but owing to their hatred of Antipater, who was a matricide, and to their lack of a better man, they proclaimed Demetrius king of the Macedonians, and at once went down with him into Macedonia.¹ Furthermore, to the Macedonians at home the change was not unwelcome, for they ever remembered with hatred the crimes which Cassander had committed against the posterity of Alexander the Great. And if there still remained any kindly memories of the elder Antipater's moderation and justice, of these also Demetrius reaped the benefit, since he was the husband of Phila, Antipater's daughter, and had a son by her to be his successor in the realm, a son who was already quite a youth, and was serving in the army under his father.

¹ In 294 B.C.

- XXXVIII. Οὕτω δὲ λαμπρᾷ κεκρημένος εὐτυχία πυνθάνεται μὲν περὶ τῶν τέκνων καὶ τῆς μητρὸς ὡς μεθεῖνται, δῶρα καὶ τιμὰς Πτολεμαίου προσθέντος αὐτοῖς, πυνθάνεται δὲ περὶ τῆς Σελεύκῳ γαμηθείσης θυγατρὸς ὡς Ἀντιόχῳ τῷ
 Σελεύκου συνοικεῖ καὶ βασίλισσα τῶν ἄνω βαρ-
 2 βάρων ἀνηγόρευται. συνέβη γάρ, ὡς ἔοικε, τὸν Ἀντιόχον ἐρασθέντα τῆς Στρατονίκης νέας οὐσης, 907 ἤδη δὲ παιδίον ἐχούσης ἐκ τοῦ Σελεύκου, διακεί-σθαι κακῶς καὶ πολλὰ ποιεῖν τῷ πάθει διαμαχόμενον, τέλος δ' ἑαυτοῦ καταγνόντα δεινῶν μὲν ἐπιθυμεῖν, ἀνήκεστα δὲ νοσεῖν, κεκρατῆσθαι δὲ τῷ λογισμῷ, τρόπον ἀπαλλαγῆς τοῦ βίου ζητεῖν καὶ παραλύειν ἀτρέμα καὶ θεραπείας ἀμελεία καὶ τροφῆς ἀποχῆ τὸ σῶμα, νοσεῖν τινα νόσον 3 σκηπτόμενον. Ἐρασίστρατον δὲ τὸν ἰατρὸν αἰσθέσθαι μὲν οὐ χαλεπῶς ἐρώντος αὐτοῦ, τὸ δὲ οὔτινος ἐρᾷ δυστόπαστον ὄν ἐξανευρεῖν βουλόμενον αἰεὶ μὲν ἐν τῷ δωματίῳ διημερεύειν, εἰ δέ τις εἰσίοι τῶν ἐν ὧρα μεираκίων ἢ γυναικῶν, ἐγκαθορᾶν τε τῷ προσώπῳ τοῦ Ἀντιόχου καὶ τὰ συμπάσχειν μάλιστα τῇ ψυχῇ τρεπομένη πεφυκότα μέρη καὶ κινήματα τοῦ σώματος ἐπισκοπεῖν.
 4 ὡς οὖν τῶν μὲν ἄλλων εἰσιόντων ὁμοίως εἶχε, τῆς δὲ Στρατονίκης καὶ καθ' ἑαυτὴν καὶ μετὰ τοῦ Σελεύκου φοιτώσης πολλάκις ἐγένετο τὰ τῆς Σαπφούς ἐκεῖνα περὶ αὐτὸν πάντα, φωνῆς ἐπίσχεσις, ἐρύθημα πυρῶδες, ὄψεων ὑπολείψεις, 92

DEMETRIUS

XXXVIII. While Demetrius was enjoying a good fortune so illustrious as this, he had tidings concerning his children and his mother, namely, that they had been set free, and that Ptolemy had given them gifts and honours besides ; he had tidings also concerning his daughter who was wedded to Seleucus, namely, that she was now the wife of Antiochus the son of Seleucus, and had the title of Queen of Upper Asia. For it came to pass, as it would seem, that Antiochus fell in love with Stratonice, who was young, and was already mother of a little boy by Seleucus. Antiochus was distressed, and resorted to many means of fighting down his passion, but at last, condemning himself for his inordinate desires, for his incurable malady, and for the subjugation of his reason, he determined to seek a way of escape from life, and to destroy himself gradually by neglecting his person and abstaining from food, under pretence of having some disease. But Erasistratus, his physician, perceived quite easily that he was in love, and wishing to discover who was the object of his passion (a matter not so easy to decide), he would spend day after day in the young man's chamber, and if any of the beauties of the court came in, male or female, he would study the countenance of Antiochus, and watch those parts and movements of his person which nature has made to sympathize most with the inclinations of the soul. Accordingly, when any one else came in, Antiochus showed no change ; but whenever Stratonice came to see him, as she often did, either alone, or with Seleucus, lo, those tell-tale signs of which Sappho sings¹ were all there in him,—stammering speech, fiery flushes, darkened vision, ¹ Fragment 2 (Bergk, Poet. Lyr. Graeci, iii.⁴ pp. 88 ff.).

ιδρώτες ὄξει, ἀταξία καὶ θόρυβος ἐν τοῖς σφυγμοῖς, τέλος δὲ τῆς ψυχῆς κατὰ κράτος ἠττημένης¹
 5 ἀπορία καὶ θάμβος καὶ ὠχρίασις, ἐπὶ τούτοις προσλογιζόμενον τὸν Ἐρασίστρατον κατὰ τὸ εἶκος ὡς οὐκ ἂν ἐτέρας ἐρῶν βασιλέως υἱὸς ἐνεκαρτέρει τῷ σιωπᾶν μέχρι θανάτου, χαλεπὸν μὲν ἠγείσθαι τὸ φράσαι ταῦτα καὶ κατεπειν, οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ πιστεύοντα τῇ πρὸς τὸν υἱὸν εὐνοίᾳ τοῦ Σελεύκου παρακινδυνεύσαι ποτε, καὶ εἰπεῖν ὡς ἔρως μὲν εἶη τοῦ νεανίσκου τὸ πάθος, ἔρως δὲ
 6 ἀδύνατος καὶ ἀνίατος. ἐκπλαγέντος δὲ ἐκείνου καὶ πυθομένου πῶς ἀνίατος, “Ὅτι νῆ Δία,” φάναι τὸν Ἐρασίστρατον, “ἐρᾶ τῆς ἐμῆς γυναικός.” “Εἶτα οὐκ ἂν,” εἰπεῖν τὸν Σέλευκον, “ἐπιδοίης, Ἐρασίστρατε, τῷ ἐμῷ παιδί φίλος ὦν τὸν γάμον, καὶ ταῦτα ὀρῶν ἡμᾶς ἐπὶ τούτῳ μόνῳ σαλεύοντας;” “Οὐδὲ γὰρ ἂν σύ,” φάναι, “τοῦτο πατὴρ ὦν ἐποίησας, εἰ Στρατονίκης Ἀντίοχος
 7 ἐπεθύμησε.” καὶ τὸν Σέλευκον “Εἶθε γάρ, ἑταίρε,” εἰπεῖν, “ταχὺ μεταστρέψαι τις ἐπὶ ταῦτα καὶ μεταβάλῃ θεῶν ἢ ἀνθρώπων τὸ πάθος· ὡς ἐμοὶ καὶ τὴν βασιλείαν ἀφεῖναι καλὸν Ἀντιόχου περιεχομένῳ.” ταῦτα ἐμπαθῶς σφόδρα τοῦ Σελεύκου μετὰ πολλῶν δακρύων λέγοντος, ἐμβαλόντα τὴν δεξιὰν αὐτῷ τὸν Ἐρασίστρατον εἰπεῖν ὡς οὐδὲν Ἐρασιστράτου δέοιτο· καὶ γὰρ πατὴρ καὶ ἀνὴρ ὦν καὶ βασιλεὺς αὐτὸς
 8 ἅμα καὶ ἰατρὸς εἶη τῆς οἰκίας ἄριστος. ἐκ τούτου τὸν Σέλευκον ἐκκλησίαν ἀθροίσαντα πάνδημον εἰπεῖν ὅτι βούλεται καὶ διέγνωκε τῶν ἄνω πάντων τόπων Ἀντίοχον ἀποδείξαι βασιλέα καὶ

¹ ἠττημένης Ziegler, with two MSS.: ἠττωμένης.

DEMETRIUS

sudden sweats, irregular palpitations of the heart, and finally, as his soul was taken by storm, helplessness, stupor, and pallor. And besides all this, Erasistratus reasoned further that in all probability the king's son, had he loved any other woman, would not have persisted to the death in refusing to speak about it. He thought it a difficult matter to explain the case fully to Seleucus, but nevertheless, relying on the father's kindly feelings towards his son, he took the risk one day, and told him that love was the young man's trouble, a love that could neither be satisfied nor cured. The king was amazed, and asked why his son's love could not be satisfied. "Because, indeed," said Erasistratus, "he is in love with my wife." "Then canst thou not, O Erasistratus," said Seleucus, "since thou art my son's friend, give him thy wife in addition to thy friendship, especially when thou seest that he is the only anchor of our storm-tossed house?" "Thou art his father," said Erasistratus, "and yet thou wouldst not have done so if Antiochus had set his affections on Stratonice." "My friend," said Seleucus, "would that someone in heaven or on earth might speedily convert and turn his passion in this direction; since I would gladly let my kingdom also go, if I might keep Antiochus." So spake Seleucus with deep emotion and many tears, whereupon Erasistratus clasped him by the hand and told him he had no need of Erasistratus; for as father, husband, and king, he was himself at the same time the best physician also for his household. Consequently Seleucus called an assembly of the entire people and declared it to be his wish and purpose to make Antiochus king of all Upper Asia, and Stratonice his queen,

Στρατονίκην βασιλίδα, ἀλλήλοις συνοικούντας· οἶεσθαι δὲ τὸν μὲν υἱὸν εἰθισμένον ἅπαντα πείθεσθαι καὶ κατήκοον ὄντα μηθὲν ἀντερεῖν αὐτῷ
 9 πρὸς τὸν γάμον· εἰ δ' ἡ γυνὴ τῷ μὴ νενομισμένῳ δυσκολαῖνοι, παρακαλεῖν τοὺς φίλους ὅπως διδάσκωσιν αὐτὴν καὶ πείθωσι καλὰ καὶ δίκαια τὰ δοκούντα βασιλεῖ μετὰ τοῦ συμφέροντος ἡγεῖσθαι. τὸν μὲν οὖν Ἀντιόχου καὶ Στρατονίκης γάμον ἐκ τοιαύτης γενέσθαι προφάσεως λέγουσι.

XXXIX. Δημήτριος δὲ μετὰ Μακεδονίαν καὶ Θετταλίαν ἦν παρειληφώς. ἔχων δὲ καὶ Πελοποννήσου τὰ πλεῖστα καὶ τῶν ἐκτὸς Ἴσθμοῦ Μέγαρα καὶ Ἀθήνας ἐπὶ Βοιωτοὺς ἐστράτευσε. καὶ πρῶτον μὲν ἐγένοντο συμβάσεις μέτραι περὶ φιλίας πρὸς αὐτόν· ἔπειτα Κλεωνύμου τοῦ Σπαρτιατοῦ παραβαλόντος εἰς Θήβας μετὰ στρατιᾶς, ἐπαρθέντες οἱ Βοιωτοί, καὶ Πίσιδος ἅμα τοῦ Θεσπιέως, ὃς ἐπρώτετε δόξη καὶ δυνάμει τότε,
 2 συμπαρορμῶντος αὐτούς, ἀπέστησαν. ὡς δὲ ταῖς Θήβαις ἐπαγαγὼν τὰς μηχανὰς ὁ Δημήτριος 908 ἐπολιόρκει καὶ φοβηθεὶς ὑπέξῃλθεν ὁ Κλεώνυμος, καταπλαγέντες οἱ Βοιωτοὶ παρέδωκαν ἑαυτούς. ὁ δὲ ταῖς πόλεσιν ἐμβαλὼν φρουρὰν καὶ πραξάμενος πολλὰ χρήματα, καὶ καταλιπὼν αὐτοῖς ἐπιμελητὴν καὶ ἄρμοστὴν Ἰερώνυμον τὸν ἱστορικόν, ἔδοξεν ἠπίως κεχρῆσθαι, καὶ μάλιστα διὰ Πίσιν. ἐλὼν γὰρ αὐτὸν οὐδὲν κακὸν ἐποίησεν, ἀλλὰ καὶ προσαγορεύσας καὶ φιλοφρονηθεὶς
 96

DEMETRIUS

the two being husband and wife; he also declared it to be his opinion that his son, accustomed as he was to be submissive and obedient in all things, would not oppose his father in this marriage; and that if his wife were reluctant to take this extraordinary step, he called upon his friends to teach and persuade her to regard as just and honourable whatever seemed good to the king and conducive to the general welfare. On this wise, then, we are told, Antiochus and Stratonice became husband and wife.

XXXIX. As for Demetrius, after Macedonia he became master of Thessaly also. And now that he had most of Peloponnesus, and, on this side the Isthmus, Megara and Athens, he turned his arms against the Boeotians. These at first made friendly agreements with him on reasonable terms; afterwards, however, when Cleonymus the Spartan made his way into Thebes with an army, the Boeotians were lifted up in spirit, and since at the same time Pisis of Thespieae, who was their leading man at this time in reputation and influence, added his instigations to the step, they revolted. But when Demetrius brought up his engines-of-war against Thebes and laid siege to the city, Cleonymus took fright and stole away, and the Boeotians, in terror, surrendered.¹ Demetrius put garrisons in their cities, exacted large sums of money from them, and left as their overseer and governor Hieronymus the historian, thereby getting a reputation for clemency, and particularly by his treatment of Pisis. For after capturing him Demetrius did him no harm, but actually greeted him, showed him kindness, and

¹ In 293 B.C.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

3 πολέμαρχον ἐν Θεσπιαῖς ἀπέδειξεν. οὐ πολλῶ δὲ ὕστερον ἀλίσκεται Λυσίμαχος ὑπὸ Δρομιχαίτου· καὶ πρὸς τοῦτο Δημητρίου κατὰ τάχος ἐξορμήσαντος ἐπὶ Θράκην, ὡσπερ ἔρημα¹ καταληψομένου, πάλιν ἀπέστησαν οἱ Βοιωτοί, καὶ Λυσίμαχος ἅμα διειμένος ἀπηγγέλλετο. ταχέως οὖν καὶ πρὸς ὄργην ἀναστρέψας ὁ Δημήτριος εὗρεν ἠττημένους ὑπὸ τοῦ παιδὸς Ἀντιγόνου μάχῃ τοὺς Βοιωτούς, καὶ τὰς Θήβας αὐθις ἐπολιόρκει.

XL. Πύρρου δὲ Θεσσαλίαν κατατρέχοντος καὶ μέχρι Θερμοπυλῶν παραφανέντος, Ἀντίγονον ἐπὶ τῆς πολιορκίας ἀπολιπὼν αὐτὸς ὤρμησεν ἐπ' ἐκείνον. ὀξέως δὲ φυγόντος, ἐν Θεσσαλίᾳ καταστήσας μυρίους ὀπίλας καὶ χιλίους ἵππεῖς, αὐθις ἐνέκειτο ταῖς Θήβαις καὶ προσήγε τὴν λεγομένην ἐλέπολιν, πολυπόνως καὶ κατὰ μικρὸν ὑπὸ βρίθους καὶ μεγέθους μοχλευομένην, ὡς μόλις
2 ἐν δυσὶ μῆσι δύο σταδίους προελθεῖν. τῶν δὲ Βοιωτῶν ἐρρωμένως ἀμυνομένων καὶ τοῦ Δημητρίου πολλάκις φιλονεικίας ἕνεκα μᾶλλον ἢ χρείας μάχεσθαι καὶ κινδυνεύειν τοὺς στρατιώτας ἀναγκάζοντος, ὁρῶν ὁ Ἀντίγονος πίπτοντας οὐκ ὀλίγους καὶ περιπαθῶν, “Τί, ὦ πάτερ,” ἔφη, “παραναλισκομένους οὐκ ἀναγκαίως τούτους περιορῶμεν;” ὁ δὲ παροξυνθείς, “Σὺ δέ,” ἔφη, “τί δυσχεραίνεις; ἢ διάμετρον ὀφείλεις τοῖς
3 ἀποθνήσκουσιν;” οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ καὶ βουλόμενός γε μὴ δοκεῖν ἐτέρων ἀφειδεῖν μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ

¹ ἔρημα Bekker adopts Reiske's correction to εἶρημα (treasure-trove).

DEMETRIUS

appointed him polemarch in Thespieae. Not long afterwards, however, Lysimachus was taken prisoner by Dromichaetes, and in view of this Demetrius set out with all speed for Thrace, thinking to occupy a region destitute of defenders. Thereupon the Boeotians revolted again, and at the same time word was brought that Lysimachus had been set free. Quickly, therefore, and in wrath, Demetrius turned back, and finding that the Boeotians had been defeated in battle by his son Antigonus, once more laid siege to Thebes.

XL. But Pyrrhus now overran Thessaly and was seen as far south as Thermopylae; Demetrius therefore left Antigonus to conduct the siege of Thebes, and himself set out against this new foe. Pyrrhus, however, made a swift retreat, whereupon Demetrius stationed ten thousand men-at-arms and a thousand horsemen in Thessaly and once more devoted himself to Thebes. Here he brought up against the city his famous City-taker,¹ but this was so laboriously and slowly propelled, owing to its weight and great size, that in the space of two months it hardly advanced two furlongs. Besides, the Boeotians made a stout resistance, and Demetrius many times, out of contumacy rather than from need, forced his soldiers to risk their lives in battle. Antigonus saw that they were falling in great numbers, and in great concern said: "Why, my father, should we suffer these lives to be squandered without any necessity for it?" But Demetrius was incensed, and said: "Why, pray, art thou disturbed at this? Are rations due from thee to the dead?" However, wishing not to be thought reckless of other lives

¹ Cf. chapter xxi. 1.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

συγκινδυνεύειν τοῖς μαχομένοις, διελαύνεται τὸν τράχηλον ὀξυβελεῖ. καὶ δεινῶς μὲν ἔσχεν, οὐ μὴν ἀνήκεν, ἀλλὰ εἶλε τὰς Θήβας πάλιν. καὶ παρελθὼν ἀνάτασιν μὲν καὶ φόβον ὡς τὰ δεινότατα πεισομένοις παρέσχεν, ἀνελὼν δὲ τρισκαίδεκα καὶ μεταστήσας τινὰς ἀφήκε τοὺς ἄλλους.

4 ταῖς μὲν οὖν Θήβαις οὐπω δέκατον οἰκουμέναις ἔτος ἀλῶναι δις ἐν τῷ χρόνῳ τούτῳ συνέπεσε.

Τῶν δὲ Πυθίων καθηκόντων πρᾶγμα καινότατον ἐπέτρεψεν αὐτῷ ποιεῖν ὁ Δημήτριος. ἐπεὶ γὰρ Αἰτωλοὶ τὰ περὶ Δελφοὺς στενὰ κατεΐχον, ἐν Ἀθήναις αὐτὸς ἤγε τὸν ἀγῶνα καὶ τὴν πανηγυριν, ὡς δὴ προσῆκον αὐτόθι μάλιστα τιμᾶσθαι τὸν θεόν, ὃς καὶ πατρῷός ἐστι καὶ λέγεται τοῦ γένους ἀρχηγός.

XLI. Ἐντεῦθεν ἐπανελθὼν εἰς Μακεδονίαν καὶ μήτε αὐτὸς ἄγειν ἡσυχίαν πεφυκῶς τοὺς τε ἄλλους ὁρῶν ἐν ταῖς στρατείαις μᾶλλον αὐτῷ προσέχοντας, οἴκοι δὲ παραχῶδεις καὶ πολυπράγμονας ὄντας, ἐστράτευσεν ἐπ' Αἰτωλοὺς· καὶ τὴν χώραν κακώσας καὶ Πάνταυχον ἐν αὐτῇ μέρος ἔχοντα τῆς δυνάμεως οὐκ ὀλίγον ἀπολιπὼν ἐπὶ Πύρρον αὐτὸς ἐχώρει καὶ Πύρρος ἐπ' ἐκείνον.

2 ἀλλήλων δὲ διαμαρτόντες, ὁ μὲν ἐπόρθει τὴν Ἥπειρον, ὁ δὲ Πανταύχῳ περιπεσὼν καὶ μάχην συνάψας αὐτὸν μὲν ἄχρι τοῦ δοῦναι καὶ λαβεῖν

¹ In 290 B.C. The siege lasted nearly a year.

DEMETRIUS

only, but also to share the perils of battle, he was pierced through the neck by a catapult-bolt. And yet, sore wounded as he was, he did not give up, but took Thebes again.¹ His entry into the city filled the citizens with acute fear; they thought they were to suffer the most dreadful punishments; but he put to death only thirteen of them, banished a few, and pardoned the rest. And so it was the fate of Thebes, which had been occupied less than ten years,² to be captured twice during this time.

Furthermore, the time for the Pythian games being now at hand, Demetrius ventured upon a most unheard of proceeding. Since, namely, the Aetolians occupied the passes about Delphi, he conducted the games and the festival in person at Athens, declaring it to be especially fitting that Apollo should be honoured there, since he was a patron deity of the Athenians and was said to have been the founder of their race.

XLI. From Athens Demetrius returned to Macedonia, and since he was himself not prone by nature to keep quiet, and since he saw that his followers were more devoted to him when they were on a campaign, but at home were turbulent and meddlesome, he made an expedition against the Aetolians. After ravaging the country, he left Pantauchus there with a large part of his forces, while he himself moved against Pyrrhus. Pyrrhus also moved against him, but they missed one another on the march. Demetrius therefore plundered Epeirus, but Pyrrhus fell upon Pantauchus, and after a battle in which the two commanders came to close quarters and

¹ Cassander began the restoration of the city (after its utter annihilation by Alexander in 335 B.C.) in 315 B.C.

πληγὴν ἐν χερσὶ χερσόμενον ἐτρέψατο, τῶν δὲ ἄλλων πολλοὺς μὲν ἀπέκτεινεν, ἐξώγησε δὲ 3 πεντακισχιλίας. καὶ τοῦτο μάλιστα Δημήτριον ἐκάκωσεν· οὐ γὰρ οὕτω μισηθεὶς ὁ Πύρρος ἀφ' ὧν ἔπραξεν ὡς θαυμασθεὶς διὰ τὸ πλείστα τῇ χειρὶ κατεργάσασθαι, μέγα τε καὶ λαμπρὸν ἔσχεν ἀπὸ τῆς μάχης ἐκείνης ὄνομα παρὰ τοῖς Μακεδόσιν· καὶ πολλοὺς ἐπήγει λέγειν τῶν Μακε- 909 δόνων ὡς ἐν μόνῳ τούτῳ τῶν βασιλέων εἰδῶλον ἐνόρητο τῆς Ἀλεξάνδρου τόλμης, οἱ δὲ ἄλλοι, καὶ μάλιστα Δημήτριος, ὡς ἐπὶ σκηνῆς τὸ βᾶρος 4 ὑποκρίνοιντο καὶ τὸν ὄγκον τοῦ ἀνδρός. ἦν δὲ ὡς ἀληθῶς τραγωδία μεγάλη περὶ τὸν Δημήτριον, οὐ μόνον ἀμπεχόμενον καὶ διαδούμενον περιττῶς καυσίαις διμίτροις καὶ χρυσοπαρύφοις ἀλουργί-σιν, ἀλλὰ καὶ περὶ τοῖς ποσὶν ἐκ πορφύρας ἀκράτου συμπεπιλημένης χρυσοβαφεῖς πεποιη-μένον ἐμβάδας. ἦν δὲ τις ὑφαινομένη χλανὶς αὐτῷ πολὺν χρόνον, ἔργον ὑπερήφανον, εἴκασμα 5 τοῦ κόσμου καὶ τῶν κατ' οὐρανὸν φαινομένων· ὃ κατελείφθη μὲν ἡμιτελὲς ἐν τῇ μεταβολῇ τῶν πραγμάτων, οὐδεὶς δὲ ἐτόλμησεν αὐτῇ χρῆσασθαι, καίπερ οὐκ ὀλίγων ὕστερον ἐν Μακεδονίᾳ σοβαρῶν γενομένων βασιλέων.

XLII. Οὐ μόνον δὲ τούτοις τοῖς θεάμασιν ἐλύ-πει τοὺς ἀνθρώπους ἀήθεις ὄντας, ἀλλὰ καὶ τρυφὴν καὶ δίαιταν ἐβαρύνοντο· καὶ μάλιστα δὴ τὸ δυσόμιλον αὐτοῦ καὶ δυσπρόσοδον. ἡ γὰρ οὐ παρεῖχε καιρὸν ἐντυχεῖν, ἢ χαλεπὸς ἦν καὶ τραχὺς ἐντυγχάνουσιν. Ἀθηναίων μὲν γάρ, περὶ οὗς ἐσπουδάκει μάλιστα τῶν Ἑλλήνων, ἔτη δύο πρε-σβείαν κατέσχεν· ἐκ Λακεδαίμονος δὲ ἐνὸς πρε-

DEMETRIUS

wounded each other, routed him, took five thousand of his men prisoners, and slew many of the rest. This wrought the greatest harm to the cause of Demetrius. For Pyrrhus, who was not so much hated for what he had done as he was admired for making most of his conquests in person, acquired from this battle a great and splendid name among the Macedonians, and many of them were moved to say that in him alone of all the kings could they see an image of the great Alexander's daring; whereas the others, and particularly Demetrius, did but assume Alexander's majesty and pomp, like actors on a stage. And there was in truth much of the theatrical about Demetrius, who not only had an extravagant array of cloakings and head-gear—double-mitred broad-brimmed hats and purple robes shot with gold, but also equipped his feet with gold-embroidered shoes of the richest purple felt. And there was one cloak which was long in the weaving for him, a magnificent work, on which was represented the world and the heavenly bodies; this was left behind half-finished when the reversal of his fortunes came, and no succeeding king of Macedonia ventured to use it, although not a few of them were given to pomp and luxury.

XLII. And not only by such displays did he vex his subjects, who were unused to them, but his luxurious ways of living were also offensive, and above all else the difficulty of getting access to him or conversing with him. For either he would give no audience at all, or he was stern and harsh with his auditors. For instance, he kept an embassy from the Athenians, for whose favour he was more solicitous than for that of any other Greeks, two years in waiting; and when a single envoy came to him from

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- σβευτοῦ παραγενομένου καταφρονεῖσθαι δοκῶν
 2 ἡγανάκτησεν. ἀστείως μέντοι καὶ Λακωνικῶς ἐκεῖνος, εἰπόντος αὐτοῦ “Τί σὺ λέγεις ; ἓνα Λακεδαιμόνιοι πρεσβευτὴν ἔπεμψαν ;” “Ναί,” εἶπεν, “ὦ βασιλεῦ, πρὸς ἓνα.” δόξαντος δὲ αὐτοῦ ποτε δημοτικώτερον ἐξελαύνειν, καὶ πρὸς ἔντευξιν ἔχειν οὐκ ἀηδῶς, συνέδραμόν τινες ἐγγράφους ἀξιῶσεις ἀναδιδόντες. δεξαμένου δὲ πάσας καὶ τῇ χλαμύδι συλλαβόντος ἤσθησαν οἱ ἄνθρωποι καὶ παρηκολούθουν· ὡς δὲ ἦλθεν ἐπὶ τὴν τοῦ Ἀξιοῦ γέ-φυραν, ἀναπτύξας τὴν χλαμύδα πάσας εἰς τὸν 3 ποταμὸν ἐξέριψε. καὶ τοῦτο δὴ δεινῶς ἠνίασε τοὺς Μακεδόνας ὑβρίζεσθαι δοκοῦντας, οὐ βασιλεύεσθαι, καὶ Φιλίππου μνημονεύοντας, ἣ τῶν μνημονευόντων ἀκούοντας, ὡς μέτριος ἦν περὶ ταῦτα καὶ κοινός. καί ποτε πρεσβυτέρου γυναιίου κόπτουτος αὐτὸν ἐν παρόδῳ τινὶ καὶ δεομένου πολλάκις ἀκουσθῆναι, φήσας μὴ σχολάζειν, ἐγκραγόντος ἐκείνου καὶ “Μὴ βασίλευε” εἰπόντος, 4 δηχθεὶς σφόδρα καὶ πρὸς τούτῳ γενόμενος ἀνέ-στρεψεν εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν, καὶ πάντα ποιησάμενος ὕστερα, τοῖς ἐντυχεῖν βουλομένοις, ἀρξάμενος ἀπὸ τῆς πρεσβύτιδος ἐκείνης, ἐπὶ πολλὰς ἡμέρας ἐσχόλασεν.
- 5 Οὐδὲν γὰρ οὕτως βασιλεῖ προσῆκον ὡς τὸ τῆς
 δίκης ἔργον. Ἄρης μὲν γὰρ τύραννος, ὡς φησι Τιμόθεος, νόμος δὲ πάντων βασιλεὺς κατὰ Πίνδαρόν ἐστι· καὶ τοὺς βασιλεῖς Ὀμηρὸς φησιν οὐχ

DEMETRIUS

Sparta, he thought himself despised, and was incensed. However, when he cried, "What meanest thou? Have the Spartans sent but one envoy?" he got the neat and laconic reply, "Yea, O king, to one man." On one occasion, when he was thought to be riding abroad in a more affable mood than usual, and seemed to encounter his subjects without displeasure, there was a large concourse of people who presented him with written petitions. He received them all and folded them away in his cloak, whereupon the people were delighted and escorted him on his way; but when he came to the bridge over the Axius, he shook out the folds of his cloak and cast all the petitions into the river. This was a great vexation to the Macedonians, who thought themselves insulted, not ruled, and they called to mind, or listened to those who called to mind, how reasonable Philip used to be in such matters, and how accessible. An old woman once assailed Demetrius as he was passing by, and demanded many times that he give her a hearing. "I have no time," said Demetrius. "Then don't be king," screamed the old woman. Demetrius was stung to the quick, and after thinking upon the matter, went back to his house, and postponing every thing else, for several days devoted himself entirely to those who wished audience of him, beginning with the old woman who had rebuked him.

And surely nothing so befits a king as the work of justice. For "Ares is tyrant," in the words of Timotheus,¹ but "Law is king of all things," according to Pindar;² and Homer speaks of kings as ἐλεπόλεις οὐδὲ ναῦς χαλκήρεις, ἀλλὰ θέμιστας παρὰ τοῦ Διὸς λαμβάνοντας ῥύεσθαι καὶ φυλάσ-σειν, καὶ τοῦ Διὸς οὐ τὸν πολεμικώτατον οὐδὲ τὸν ἀδικιώτατον καὶ φονικιώτατον τῶν βασιλέων, ἀλλὰ τὸν δικαιοτάτον ἄριστὴν καὶ μαθητὴν προσηγό-6 ρευκεν. ἀλλὰ Δημήτριος ἔχαιρε τῷ βασιλεῖ τῶν θεῶν ἀνομοιοτάτην ἐπιγραφόμενος προσωνυμίαν· ὁ μὲν γὰρ Πολιεὺς καὶ Πολιοῦχος, ὁ δὲ Πολιορκητὴς ἐπὶ κλησιν ἔσχεν. οὕτως ἐπὶ τὴν τοῦ καλοῦ χώραν τὸ αἰσχρὸν ὑπὸ δυνάμεως ἀμα-θοῦς ἐπελθὼν συνφκείωσε τῇ δόξῃ τὴν ἀδικίαν.

¹ Bergk, Poet. Lyr. Graeci, iii.⁴ p. 622. Cf. the Agésilais, xiv. 2. ² Bergk, op. cit. i.⁴ p. 439.

XLIII. Ὁ δ' οὖν Δημήτριος ἐπισφαλέστατα νοσήσας ἐν Πέλλῃ μικροῦ τότε Μακεδονίαν ἀπέ-βαλε, καταδραμόντος ὀξέως Πύρρου καὶ μέχρις Ἐδέσσης προελθόντος. ἅμα δὲ τῷ κουφότερος γενέσθαι πάνυ ῥαδίως ἐξελάσας αὐτὸν ἐποίησά το τινὰς ὁμολογίας, οὐ βουλόμενος ἐμποδῶν ὄντι συνεχῶς προσπταίων καὶ τοπομαχῶν ἦττον εἶναι 2 πρὸς οἷς διενοεῖτο. διενοεῖτο δὲ οὐθὲν ὀλίγον, 910 ἀλλὰ πᾶσαν ἀναλαμβάνειν τὴν ὑπὸ τῷ πατρὶ γενομένην ἀρχήν. καὶ τῆς ἐλπίδος ταύτης καὶ τῆς ἐπιβολῆς οὐκ ἀπελείπετο τὰ τῆς παρασκευῆς, ἀλλὰ στρατιᾶς μὲν ἤδη συνετέτακτο πεζῆς μυριά-δας δέκα δισχιλίω ἀνδρῶν ἀποδοούσας, καὶ χωρὶς ἰππέας ὀλίγῳ δισχιλίω καὶ μυρίω ἐλάτ-3 τους. στόλον δὲ νεῶν ἅμα πεντακοσίων κατα-βαλλόμενος τὰς μὲν ἐν Πειραιεῖ τρόπεις ἔθετο, τὰς δὲ ἐν Κορίνθῳ, τὰς δὲ ἐν Χαλκίδι, τὰς δὲ περὶ Πέλλαν, αὐτὸς ἐπιῶν ἑκασταχόσε καὶ διδά-σκων ἅ χρῆ καὶ συντεχνώμενος, ἐκπληττομένων ἀπάντων οὐ τὰ πλήθη μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὰ μεγέθη
 4 τῶν ἔργων. οὐδεὶς γὰρ εἶδεν ἀνθρώπων οὔτε

DEMETRIUS

receiving from Zeus for protection and safe-keeping, not city-takers nor bronze-beaked ships, but "ordinances of justice";¹ and he calls a disciple and "confidant" of Zeus, not the most warlike or unjust or murderous of kings, but the most just.² Demetrius, on the contrary, was delighted to receive a surname most unlike those given to the king of the gods; for Zeus is surnamed City-guardian, or City-protector; but Demetrius, City-besieger. Thus a power devoid of wisdom advances evil to the place of good, and makes injustice co-dweller with fame.

XLIII. But while Demetrius lay most dangerously sick at Pella, he almost lost Macedonia; for Pyrrhus swiftly overran it and advanced as far as Edessa. As soon, however, as Demetrius had somewhat recovered his strength he easily drove Pyrrhus out of the country, and then came to a kind of agreement with him, being unwilling that continual collisions and local conflicts with this opponent should defeat his set purpose. And his purpose was nothing less than the recovery of all the realm that had been subject to his father. Moreover, his preparations were fully commensurate with his hopes and undertakings. He had already gathered an army which numbered ninety-eight thousand foot, and besides, nearly twelve thousand horsemen. At the same time, moreover, he had laid the keels for a fleet of five hundred ships, some of which were in Piraeus, some at Corinth, some at Chalcis, and some at Pella. And he would visit all these places in person, showing what was to be done and aiding in the plans, while all men wondered, not only at the multitude, but also at the magnitude of the works. Up to this time no man had seen a ship of

¹ Iliad, i. 238 f.

² Minos, Odyssey, xix. 179.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

πεντεκαίδεκῆρη ναῦν πρότερον οὔτε ἑκκαίδεκῆρη, ἀλλ' ὕστερον τεσσαρακοντῆρη Πτολεμαῖος ὁ Φι-λοπάτωρ ἐναυπηγήσατο, μήκος διακοσίων ὀγδοή-κοντα πηχῶν, ὕψος δὲ ἕως ἀκροστολίου πεντή-κοντα δυεῖν δεόντων, ναύταις δὲ χωρὶς ἐρετῶν ἐξηρτυμένην τετρακοσίοις, ἐρέταις δὲ τετρακισχιλίοις, χωρὶς δὲ τούτων ὀπλίτας δεχομένην ἐπί-5 τε τῶν παρόδων καὶ τοῦ καταστρώματος ὀλίγῳ τρισχιλίων ἀποδέοντας. ἀλλὰ θεῶν μόνην ἐκείνη παρέσχε· καὶ μικρὸν ὅσον διαφέρουσα τῶν μονί-μων οἰκοδομημάτων, φανῆναι πρὸς ἐπίδειξιν, οὐ χρεῖαν, ἐπισφαλῶς καὶ δυσέργως ἐκινήθη. τῶν δὲ Δημητρίου νεῶν οὐκ ἦν τὸ καλὸν ἀναγώνιστον, οὐδὲ τῷ περιττῷ τῆς κατασκευῆς ἀπεστεροῦντο τὴν χρεῖαν, ἀλλὰ τὸ τάχος καὶ τὸ ἔργον ἀξιοθεα-τότερον τοῦ μεγέθους παρεῖχον.

XLIV. Αἰρομένης οὖν τοσαύτης δυνάμεως ἐπὶ τὴν Ἀσίαν ὄσῃ μετ' Ἀλέξανδρον οὐδεὶς ἔσχε πρότερον, οἱ τρεῖς συνέστησαν ἐπὶ τὸν Δημήτριον, Σέλευκος, Πτολεμαῖος, Λυσίμαχος· ἔπειτα κοινῇ πρὸς Πύρρον ἀποστείλαντες ἐκέλευον ἐξάπτεσθαι Μακεδονίας καὶ μὴ νομίζειν σπονδὰς αἰς Δημήτριον οὐκ ἐκείνῳ τὸ μὴ πολεμεῖσθαι δέδωκεν, ἀλλ' εἴληφεν ἑαυτῷ τὸ πολεμεῖν οἷς βούλεται πρότερον.
 2 δεξαμένου δὲ Πύρρου πολὺς περιέστη πόλεμος ἔτι μέλλοντα Δημήτριον. ἅμα γὰρ τὴν μὲν Ἑλλάδα πλεύσας στόλῳ μεγάλῳ Πτολεμαῖος ἀφίστη, Μακεδονίαν δὲ Λυσίμαχος ἐκ Θράκης, ἐκ δὲ 108

DEMETRIUS

fifteen or sixteen banks of oars. At a later time, it is true, Ptolemy Philopator built one of forty banks of oars, which had a length of two hundred and eighty cubits, and a height, to the top of her stern, of forty-eight; she was manned by four hundred sailors, who did no rowing, and by four thousand rowers, and besides these she had room, on her gangways and decks, for nearly three thousand men-at-arms. But this ship was merely for show; and since she differed little from a stationary edifice on land, being meant for exhibition and not for use, she was moved only with difficulty and danger. However, in the ships of Demetrius their beauty did not mar their fighting qualities, nor did the magnificence of their equipment rob them of their usefulness, but they had a speed and effectiveness which was more remarkable than their great size.

XLIV. Accordingly, while this great force, the like of which no man had possessed since Alexander, was getting under way against Asia, the three kings, Seleucus, Ptolemy, and Lysimachus, formed a league against Demetrius. Next, they sent a joint embassy to Pyrrhus, urging him to attack Macedonia, and not to regard a truce by which Demetrius had not given him the privilege of having no war made upon him, but had taken for himself the privilege of making war first on the enemy of his choice. Pyrrhus granted their requests, and a great war encompassed Demetrius before his preparations were completed. For at one and the same time¹ Ptolemy sailed to Greece with a great fleet and tried to bring it to revolt, while Lysimachus invaded Macedonia from Thrace, and Pyrrhus from the neighbouring

¹ In the spring of 287 B.C.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

τῆς ὁμόρου Πύρρος ἐμβαλόντες ἐλεηλάτουν. ὁ δὲ τὸν μὲν υἱὸν ἐπὶ τῆς Ἑλλάδος κατέλιπεν, αὐτὸς δὲ βοηθῶν Μακεδονία πρῶτον ὤρμησεν ἐπὶ Λυσί-μαχον. ἀγγέλλεται δὲ αὐτῷ Πύρρος ἡρηκῶς
 3 πόλιν Βέροϊαν. καὶ τοῦ λόγου ταχέως εἰς τοὺς Μακεδόνας ἐμπεσόντος οὐδὲν ἔτι τῷ Δημητρίῳ κατὰ κόσμον εἶχεν, ἀλλὰ καὶ ὀδυρμῶν καὶ δακρύων καὶ πρὸς ἐκείνον ὀργῆς καὶ βλασφημιῶν μεστὸν ἦν τὸ στρατόπεδον, καὶ συμμένειν οὐκ ἤθελον, ἀλλ' ἀπιέναι, τῷ μὲν λόγῳ πρὸς τὰ οἴκοι, 4 τῇ δὲ ἀληθείᾳ πρὸς τὸν Λυσίμαχον. ἔδοξεν οὖν τῷ Δημητρίῳ Λυσιμάχου μὲν ἀποστῆναι πορ-ρωτάτῳ, πρὸς δὲ Πύρρον τρέπεσθαι· τὸν μὲν γὰρ ὁμόφυλον εἶναι καὶ πολλοῖς συνήθη δι' Ἀλέξανδρον, ἔπηλυν δὲ καὶ ξένον ἄνδρα τὸν Πύρρον οὐκ ἂν αὐτοῦ προτιμῆσαι Μακεδόνας. τούτων μέντοι 5 πολὺ διεψεύσθη τῶν λογισμῶν· ὡς γὰρ ἐγγυὺς ἐλθὼν τῷ Πύρρῳ παρεστρατοπέδευσεν, αἰεὶ μὲν αὐτοῦ τὴν ἐν τοῖς ὄπλοις λαμπρότητα θαυμά-ζοντες, ἔκ τε τοῦ παλαιοτάτου καὶ βασιλικώτατον¹ εἰθισμένοι νομίζειν τὸν ἐν τοῖς ὄπλοις κράτιστον, τότε δὲ καὶ πράως κεχρῆσθαι τοῖς ἀλισκομένοις πυνθανόμενοι, πάντως δὲ καὶ πρὸς ἕτερον καὶ πρὸς τοῦτον ἀπαλλαγῆναι τοῦ Δημητρίου ζητοῦντες, ἀπεχώρουν λάθρα καὶ κατ' ὀλίγους τό γε πρῶτον, εἶτα φανερώς ἅπαν εἶχε κίνη-6 σιν καὶ ταραχὴν τὸ στρατόπεδον, τέλος δὲ τῷ Δημητρίῳ τολμήσαντές τινες προσελθεῖν ἐκέλευον ἀπιέναι καὶ σῶζειν αὐτόν· ἀπειρηκέναι γὰρ ἤδη

¹ καὶ βασιλικώτατον Coraës and Sintenis, with the best MSS.; Bekker omits the καί.

DEMETRIUS

Epeirus, and both plundered the land. But Demetrius left his son in charge of Greece, while he himself, hastening to the rescue of Macedonia, set out first against Lysimachus. But tidings came to him that Pyrrhus had taken Beroea. The report quickly came to the ears of the Macedonians, and then Demetrius could no longer maintain discipline, but his camp was full of lamentations and tears, coupled with wrathful execrations against himself, and the soldiers would not hold together, but insisted on going away, ostensibly to their homes, but in reality to Lysimachus. Demetrius therefore determined to put as much distance as possible between himself and Lysimachus, and to turn his arms against Pyrrhus; for Lysimachus, as he thought, was a fellow-countryman and congenial to many of the Macedonians because of Alexander; while Pyrrhus was a new-comer and a foreigner, and would not be preferred by them before himself. In these calculations, however, he was greatly deceived. For he drew nigh and pitched his camp by that of Pyrrhus; but his soldiers had always admired that leader's brilliant exploits in arms, and from of old they had been wont to consider the man who was mightiest in arms as also the most kingly; besides this, they now learned that Pyrrhus treated his prisoners of war with mildness, and since they were seeking to be rid of Demetrius whether it took them to Pyrrhus or to another, they kept deserting him, at first secretly and in small companies. Then the whole camp was in open agitation and disorder, and at last some of the soldiers ventured to go to Demetrius, bidding him to go away and save himself; for the Macedonians, they said, were tired of Μακεδόνας ὑπὲρ τῆς ἐκείνου τρυφῆς πολεμοῦντας. 911

 οὔτοι μετριώτατοι τῶν λόγων ἐφαίνονται τῷ Δημητρίῳ πρὸς τὴν τῶν ἄλλων τραχύτητα· καὶ παρελθὼν ἐπὶ σκηνὴν, ὥσπερ οὐ βασιλεύς, ἀλλ' ὑπο-κριτῆς, μεταμφιέννυται χλαμύδα φαιὰν ἀντὶ τῆς τραγικῆς ἐκείνης, καὶ διαλαθὼν ὑπεχώρησεν.
 7 ὀρμησάντων δὲ τῶν πλείστων εὐθύς ἐφ' ἄρπαγὴν καὶ πρὸς ἀλλήλους διαμαχομένων καὶ τὴν σκηνὴν διασπώντων, ἐπιφανεῖς ὁ Πύρρος ἐκράτησεν αὐτοβοεὶ καὶ κατέσχε τὸ στρατόπεδον. καὶ γίνεται πρὸς Λυσίμαχον αὐτῷ συμπάσης Μακεδονίας νέμησις, ἑπταετίαν ὑπὸ Δημητρίου βεβαίως ἀρχθείσης.

XLV. Οὕτω δὲ τοῦ Δημητρίου τῶν πραγμάτων ἐκπεσόντος καὶ καταφυγόντος εἰς Κασάνδρειαν, ἡ γυνὴ Φίλα περιπαθῆς γενομένη προσιδεῖν μὲν οὐχ ὑπέμεινεν αὐθις ἰδιώτην καὶ φυγάδα τὸν τλημονέστατον βασιλέων Δημήτριον, ἀπειπαμένη δὲ πάσαν ἐλπίδα καὶ μισήσασα τὴν τύχην αὐτοῦ βεβαιοτέραν ἐν τοῖς κακοῖς οὖσαν ἢ τοῖς ἀγαθοῖς, πιούσα φάρμακον ἀπέθανε. Δημήτριος δὲ ἔτι τῶν λοιπῶν ναυαγίων ἔχασθαι διανοηθεὶς ἀπῆρεν εἰς τὴν Ἑλλάδα καὶ τοὺς ἐκεῖ στρατηγούς καὶ φίλους συνῆγεν.

2 Ἦν οὖν ὁ Σοφοκλέους Μενέλαος εἰκόνα ταῖς αὐτοῦ τύχαις παρατίθησιν,

ἀλλ' οὐμὸς αἰεὶ πότμος ἐν πυκνῷ θεοῦ τροχῷ κυκλεῖται καὶ μεταλλάσσει φύσιν, ὥσπερ σελήνης δ' ὄψις εὐφρόνας¹ δύο στῆναι δύναται ἂν οὐποτ' ἐν μορφῇ μιᾷ,

¹ εὐφρόνας Sintenis with Nauck, after Brunck; Coraës and Bekker retain the εὐφρόναις of the MSS.

DEMETRIUS

waging war in support of his luxurious way of living. Demetrius thought this very moderate language compared with the harshness of the rest ; so he went to his tent, and, as if he had been an actor and not a real king, put on a dark cloak in place of his stage-ropes of royalty, and stole away unnoticed. Most of the soldiers at once fell to pillaging and tearing down his tent, and fought with one another for the spoils ; but Pyrrhus came up, mastered the camp without a blow, and took possession of it. And all Macedonia was divided between Pyrrhus and Lysimachus, after Demetrius had reigned over it securely for seven years.¹

XLV. When Demetrius thus lost his power and fled for refuge to Cassandreia, his wife Phila was full of grief and could not endure to see her husband, that most afflicted of kings, once more in private station and in exile ; she gave up all hope, and in hatred of his fortune, which was more secure in adversity than in prosperity, she drank poison and died. But Demetrius, determined to cling still to what was left of his wrecked fortunes, went off to Greece, and tried to assemble his friends and generals who were there.

The Menelaüs of Sophocles² applies this simile to his own fortunes :—

“ But my fate on the swiftly turning wheel of God Goes whirling round forever and ever changes shape,
Just as the moon’s appearance for two kindly nights
Could never be identical and show no change,

¹ From 394 to 287 B.C.

² Nauck, *Trag. Graec. Frag.*² p. 315.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἀλλ' ἐξ ἀδήλου πρῶτον ἔρχεται νέα πρόσωπα καλλύνουσα καὶ πληρουμένη, χῶτανπερ αὐτῆς εὐγενεστάτη φανῆ, πάλιν διαρρεῖ κεῖς τὸ μηδὲν ἔρχεται,

3 ταύτη μᾶλλον ἄν τις ἀπεικάσαι τὰ Δημητρίου
 πράγματα καὶ τὰς περὶ αὐτὸν αὐξήσεις καὶ φθίσεις καὶ ἀναπληρώσεις καὶ ταπεινότηας, οὗ γε καὶ τότε παντάπασιν ἀπολείπειν καὶ κατασβέν-νυσθαι δοκοῦντος ἀνέλαμπεν αὐθις ἢ ἀρχή, καὶ δυνάμεις τινὲς ἐπιρρέουσai κατὰ μικρὸν ἀνεπλή-ρουν τὴν ἐλπίδα. καὶ τό γε¹ πρῶτον ἰδιώτης καὶ τῶν βασιλικῶν κοσμίων ἔρημος ἐπεφοίτα ταῖς πόλεσι, καὶ τις αὐτὸν ἐν Θήβαις τοιοῦτον θεασάμενος ἐχρήσατο τοῖς Εὐριπίδου στίχοις οὐκ ἀηδῶς·

μορφὴν ἀμείψας ἐκ θεοῦ βροτησίαν πάρεστι Δίρκης νάματ' Ἴσμηνοῦ θ' ὕδωρ.

XLVI. Ἐπεὶ δὲ ἅπαξ ὥσπερ εἰς ὁδὸν βασιλικὴν τὴν ἐλπίδα κατέστη καὶ συνίστατο πάλιν σῶμα καὶ σχῆμα περὶ αὐτὸν ἀρχῆς, Θηβαίους μὲν ἀπέδωκε τὴν πολιτείαν, Ἀθηναῖοι δὲ ἀπέστησαν αὐτοῦ. καὶ τόν τε Δίφιλον, ὃς ἦν ἱερεὺς τῶν Σωτήρων ἀναγεγραμμένος, ἐκ τῶν ἐπωνύμων ἀνείλον, ἄρχοντας αἰρεῖσθαι πάλιν, ὥσπερ ἦν πάτριον, ψηφισάμενοι, τόν τε Πύρρον ἐκ Μακεδονίας μετε-

¹ τό γε Sintenis: Coraës and Bekker retain the τότε of the MSS.

DEMETRIUS

But out of darkness first she comes forth young and new,
With face that ever grows more beautiful and full,
And when she reaches largest and most generous phase,
Again she vanisheth away and comes to naught."

This simile might be better used of the fortunes of Demetrius, now waxing and now waning, now full-orbed and now diminished, since even at this time, when his power seemed to fail altogether and suffer extinction, it shot forth new rays of light, and sundry accessions of strength little by little filled out the measure of his hopes. At first he went about visiting the cities in the garb of a private man and without the insignia of a king, and one who saw him thus at Thebes applied to him, not inaptly, the verses of Euripides¹ :—

"Exchanging now the form of god for that of man,
He visits Dirce's rivulets and Ismenus' flood."

XLVI. But as soon as he had entered upon the path of hope, as upon a royal highway, and had gathered about himself a body and form of sovereignty, he restored to the Thebans their ancient form of government; the Athenians, however, revolted from him. They voted to elect archons, as had been their custom of old, and took away from Diphilus, who had been appointed priest of the Saviour-gods, the privilege of giving his name to the current year;² and when they saw that Demetrius had more strength than they expected, they sum-

¹ Bacchae, 4 f., with adaptation from the first person.

² See chapter x. 3.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- πέμποντο, μᾶλλον ἢ προσεδόκησαν ἰσχύοντα τὸν
- 2 Δημήτριον ὀρώντες. ὁ δὲ ὀργῇ μὲν ἐπήλθεν αὐ-τοῖς καὶ πολιορκίαν περὶ τὸ ἄστυ συνεστήσατο καρτεράν, Κράτητος δὲ τοῦ φιλοσόφου πεμ-φθέντος ὑπὸ τοῦ δήμου πρὸς αὐτόν, ἀνδρὸς ἐνδόξου καὶ δυνατοῦ, τὰ μὲν οἷς ὑπὲρ τῶν Ἀθηναίων ἐδεῖτο πεισθεῖς, τὰ δὲ ἐξ ὧν ἐδίδασκε περὶ τῶν ἐκείνῳ συμφερόντων νοήσας ἔλυσε τὴν πολιορ-κίαν, καὶ συναγαγὼν ὅσαι νῆες ἦσαν αὐτῷ, καὶ στρατιώτας μυρίους καὶ χιλίους σὺν ἰππεύσιν ἐμβιβάσας, ἐπὶ τὴν Ἀσίαν ἔπλει, Λυσιμάχου Καρίαν καὶ Λυδίαν ἀποστήσων.
- 3 Δέχεται δὲ αὐτὸν Εὐρυδίκη περὶ Μίλητον, ἀδελφὴ Φίλας, ἀγουσα τῶν αὐτῆς καὶ Πτολεμαίου θυγατέρων Πτολεμαῖδα καθωμολογημένην 912
ἐκείνῳ πρότερον διὰ Σελεύκου. ταύτην γαμῆ Δημήτριος Εὐρυδίκης ἐκιδούσης. καὶ μετὰ τὸν γάμον εὐθὺς ἐπὶ τὰς πόλεις τρέπεται, πολλῶν μὲν ἐκουσίως προστιθεμένων, πολλὰς δὲ καὶ βι-4 αζόμενος. ἔλαβε δὲ καὶ Σάρδεις· καὶ τινες τῶν Λυσιμάχου στρατηγῶν ἀπεχώρησαν πρὸς αὐτὸν χρήματα καὶ στρατιὰν κομίζοντες. ἐπερχομένου δὲ Ἀγαθοκλέους τοῦ Λυσιμάχου μετὰ δυνάμεως ἀνέβαινε εἰς Φρυγίαν, ἐγνωκῶς, ἄνπερ Ἀρμενίας ἐπιλάβηται, Μηδίαν κινεῖν καὶ τῶν ἄνω πραγμάτων ἔχεσθαι, πολλὰς ἐξωθουμένῳ περιφυγὰς καὶ 5 ἀναχωρήσεις ἐχόντων. ἐπομένου δὲ Ἀγαθοκλέους ἐν ταῖς συμπλοκαῖς περιῆν, ἐπισιτισμοῦ δὲ

DEMETRIUS

moned Pyrrhus to their aid from Macedonia. Demetrius came up against them in a rage, and began a strenuous siege of the city. But the people sent to him Crates the philosopher, a man of great repute and influence, and Demetrius, partly because he was induced to grant the ambassador's appeals in behalf of the Athenians, and partly because he was convinced when the philosopher showed him what would be an advantageous course, raised the siege, and after assembling all the ships he had,¹ and putting on board eleven thousand soldiers, together with his cavalry, he sailed for Asia, to wrest Caria and Lydia from Lysimachus.

He was met at Miletus by Eurydicé, a sister of Phila, who brought with her one of her daughters by Ptolemy, Ptolemaïs, who had been betrothed to Demetrius before this² through the agency of Seleucus. Demetrius married her now, and Eurydicé gave the bride away. After the marriage Demetrius at once turned his arms against the cities, many of which attached themselves to him of their own accord, and many also he forced into submission. He took Sardis also; and some of the generals of Lysimachus came over to him bringing money and troops. But when Agathocles, the son of Lysimachus, came against him with an army, Demetrius retired into Phrygia; he had determined, if once he could reach Armenia, to bring Media to revolt and attempt the upper provinces, which afforded an ejected commander many refuges and retreats. Agathocles followed him, and though Demetrius had the advantage in their engagements,

¹ See chapter xliii. 3.

² As early as 301 B.C. Cf. chapter xxxii. 3.

καὶ προνομῶν εἰργόμενος ἠπορεῖτο, καὶ τοῖς στρατιώταις δι' ὑποψίας ἦν ὡς ἐπ' Ἀρμενίαν καὶ Μηδίαν ἐκτοπίζων. ἄμα δὲ μᾶλλον ὁ λιμὸς ἐπέτεινε, καὶ διαμαρτία τις γενομένη περὶ τὴν τοῦ Λύκου διάβασιν πλῆθος ἀνθρώπων ἀρπασθὲν ὑπὸ τοῦ ρεύματος ἀπώλεσεν. ὅμως δὲ τοῦ σκώπτειν οὐκ ἀπέιχοντο· προγράφει δὲ τις αὐτοῦ πρὸ τῆς σκηνῆς τὴν τοῦ Οἰδίποδος¹ ἀρχὴν μικρὸν παραλλάξας·

τέκνον τυφλοῦ γέροντος Ἀντιγόνου· τίνας χώρους ἀφίγμεθα ;

- XLVII. Τέλος δὲ καὶ νόσου τῷ λιμῷ συνεπιτι• θεμένης, ὡς περ εἶωθεν, ἐπὶ βρώσεις ἀναγκαίας τρεπομένων, τοὺς πάντας οὐκ ἐλάσσονας ὀκτακισχιλίων ἀποβαλὼν ἀνήγειν ὀπίσω τοὺς λοιπούς· καὶ καταβάς εἰς Ταρσὸν ἐβούλετο μὲν ἀπέχεσθαι τῆς χώρας, οὔσης ὑπὸ Σελεύκῳ τότε, καὶ πρό-2 φασιν ἐκείνῳ μηδεμίαν παρασχεῖν, ὡς δὲ ἦν ἀμήχανον, ἐν ταῖς ἐσχάταις ὄντων ἀπορίαις τῶν στρατιωτῶν, καὶ τοῦ Ταύρου τὰς ὑπερβολὰς Ἀγαθοκλῆς ἀπετείχισε, γράφει πρὸς Σέλευκον ἐπιστολὴν μακρὸν τινα τῆς αὐτοῦ τύχης ὄδυρμόν, εἶτα πολλὴν ἰκεσίαν καὶ δέησιν ἔχουσαν ἀνδρὸς οἰκείου λαβεῖν οἶκτον, ἄξια καὶ πολεμίοις συναλγῆσαι πεπονθότος.

- Ἐπικλασθέντος δὲ πῶς Σελεύκου, καὶ γρά-ψαντος τοῖς ἐκεῖ στρατηγοῖς ὅπως αὐτῷ τε τῷ Δημητρίῳ χορηγίαν βασιλικὴν καὶ τῇ δυνάμει
3 τροφὴν ἀφθονον παρέχωσιν, ἐπελθὼν Πατροκλῆς,

¹ Sophocles, Oedipus Coloneus, 1 f. (Ἀντιγόνη).

DEMETRIUS

he was shut off from getting provisions and forage, and was in great straits; besides, his soldiers were suspicious that he was trying to make his way towards Armenia and Media. And not only did famine press them harder, but also some mistake was made in crossing the river Lycus, and a large number of men were carried away by the current and lost. But nevertheless they would have their pleasantries; and one of them wrote up in front of the tent of Demetrius the opening words of the "Oedipus," slightly changed:—

"O child of blind and aged Antigonus, what are These regions whither we are come?"

XLVII. But at last sickness assailed them as well as famine, which is wont to happen when men have recourse to foods which they must eat to save their lives, and after losing no less than eight thousand men in all, Demetrius retraced his steps with the rest and came down to Tarsus. Here he would gladly have spared the country, which was then under Seleucus, and so have given its ruler no ground of complaint; but this was impossible, for his soldiers were suffering extreme privations, and Agathocles had fortified the passes of the Taurus against him. He therefore wrote a very long letter to Seleucus, bewailing his own misfortunes, and then begging and beseeching him to take pity on a man who was allied to him by marriage, and had suffered enough to win sympathy even from his enemies.

Seleucus was somewhat softened by this appeal, and wrote to his generals in that province that they should furnish Demetrius himself with royal maintenance, and his troops with abundant supplies. But

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἀνὴρ συνετὸς εἶναι δοκῶν καὶ Σελεύκῳ φίλος πιστός, οὐ τὸ τῆς δαπάνης ἔφη πλείστον εἶναι τῶν Δημητρίου στρατιωτῶν τρεφομένων, ἀλλ' ἐνδιατρίβοντα τῇ χώρᾳ Δημήτριον οὐ καλῶς περιορᾶν αὐτόν, ὃς αἰεὶ βιαιότατος ὢν καὶ μεγαλοπραγμονέστατος βασιλέων νῦν ἐν τύχαις γέγονεν αἰ καὶ τοὺς φύσει μετρίους ἐξάγουσι τολμᾶν καὶ
 4 ἀδικεῖν. ἐκ τούτου παροξυνθεὶς ὁ Σέλευκος ἐξώρμησεν εἰς Κιλικίαν μετὰ πολλῆς δυνάμεως. ὁ δὲ Δημήτριος ἐκπλαγεὶς τῇ δι' ὀλίγου μεταβολῇ τοῦ Σελεύκου καὶ φοβηθεὶς, ὑπέστειλε τοῖς ὄχυρωτάτοις τοῦ Ταύρου, καὶ διαπεμπόμενος ἡξίου μάλιστα μὲν αὐτὸν περιῖδεῖν τῶν αὐτόνομων τινὰ βαρβάρων κτησάμενον ἀρχήν, ἐν ἧ καταβιώσεται πλάνης καὶ φυγῆς παυσάμενος, εἰ δὲ μὴ, τὸν χειμῶνα διαθρέψαι τὴν δύναμιν αὐτόθι, καὶ μὴ πάντων ἐνδεᾶ καὶ γυμνὸν ἐξελαύνειν καὶ προβάλλειν τοῖς πολεμίοις.

XLVIII. Ἐπεὶ δὲ Σέλευκος ταῦτα πάντα ὑποπτεύων ἐκέλευσεν αὐτόν, εἰ βούλεται, δύο μῆνας ἐν τῇ Καταονίᾳ χειμάσαι, δόντα τοὺς πρώτους τῶν φίλων ὀμήρους, ἅμα δὲ τὰς εἰς Συρίαν ἀπετείχιζεν ὑπερβολάς, ἐγκλειόμενος, ὥσπερ θηρίον, ὃ Δημήτριος κύκλῳ καὶ περιβαλλόμενος, ὑπ' ἀνάγκης τρέπεται πρὸς ἀλκὴν, καὶ τὴν τε χώραν κατέτρεχε καὶ τῷ Σελεύκῳ προσβάλλοντι συμ-
 2 πλεκόμενος αἰεὶ πλέον εἶχε. καὶ ποτε τῶν δρεπανηφόρων εἰς αὐτὸν ἀφεθέντων ὑποστάς τροπήν

DEMETRIUS

Patrocles, a man in repute for wisdom, and a trusted friend of Seleucus, came to him and told him that the expense of maintaining the soldiers of Demetrius was a very small matter, but that it was unwise for him to allow Demetrius to remain in the country, since he had always been the most violent of the kings, and the most given to grand designs, and was now in a state of fortune where even naturally moderate men are led to commit deeds of daring and injustice. Incited by this advice, Seleucus marched into Cilicia with a large force. Then Demetrius, filled with amazement and alarm at the sudden change of attitude in Seleucus, withdrew to the strongest fastnesses of the Taurus, and sending messengers to Seleucus, asked that above all things he might be permitted to acquire a petty empire among the independent Barbarians, in which he might end his days without further wanderings and flights; but if this might not be, he begged him to give his troops food for the winter there, and not to drive him forth, stripped and destitute of all things, and cast him into the hands of his enemies.

XLVIII. But Seleucus was suspicious of all this, and told Demetrius that he might, if he wished, spend two months in winter quarters in Cataonia, provided he gave the chief among his friends as hostages; and at the same time he fortified the passes into Syria against him. Then Demetrius, like a wild beast, hemmed in and attacked on all sides, was driven to defend himself; he overran the country, and when Seleucus attacked him, engaged with him and always had the advantage. Once in particular, when the scythe-bearing chariots were dashing down upon him, he avoided the charge, routed his ἐποίησατο, καὶ τῶν εἰς Συρίαν ὑπερβολῶν τοὺς ἀποτεριχίζοντας ἐξελάσας ἐκράτησε. καὶ ὄλως ἐπῆρτο τῇ γνώμῃ, καὶ τοὺς στρατιώτας ἀνατεταρρηκότας ὄρων παρεσκευάζετο διαγωνίσασθαι πρὸς τὸν Σέλευκον ἐπὶ τοῖς μεγίστοις ἄθλοις, ἡπορη-3 μένον ἤδη καὶ αὐτόν. ἀπέστρεψε μὲν γὰρ τὴν παρὰ Λυσιμάχου βοήθειαν ἀπιστῶν καὶ φοβούμενος, αὐτὸς δὲ καθ' ἑαυτὸν ὤκνει τῷ Δημητρίῳ συνάψαι, δεδιὼς τὴν ἀπόνοιαν αὐτοῦ καὶ τὴν αἰ μεταβολὴν ἐκ τῶν ἐσχάτων ἀποριῶν τὰς μεγίστας εὐτυχίας ἐπιφέρουσαν.

Νόσος μέντοι βαρεῖα τὸν Δημήτριον ἐν τούτῳ καταλαβοῦσα τό τε σῶμα δεινῶς ἐκάκωσε καὶ τὰ πράγματα παντάπασι διέφθειρεν. οἱ μὲν γὰρ ἀπεχώρησαν πρὸς τοὺς πολεμίους, οἱ δὲ διερρύ-4 ησαν αὐτοῦ τῶν στρατιωτῶν. μόλις δὲ ἐν ἡμέραις τεσσαράκοντα ῥάϊσας καὶ τοὺς ὑπολοίπους ἀναλαβόν, καὶ ὀρμήσας, ὅσον ἰδεῖν καὶ δοξάσαι τοὺς πολεμίους, ἐπὶ Κιλικίας, εἶτα νυκτὸς ἄνευ σάλπιγγος ἄρας ἐπὶ θάτερα καὶ τὸν Ἀμανὸν ὑπερβαλὼν ἐπόρθει τὴν κάτω χώραν ἄχρι τῆς Κυρρηστικῆς.

XLIX. Ἐπιφανέντος δὲ τοῦ Σελεύκου καὶ ποιουμένου τὰς καταλύσεις ἐγγύς, ἀναστήσας ὁ Δημήτριος τὸ στράτευμα νυκτὸς ἐβάδιζεν ἐπ' αὐτὸν ἀγνοοῦντα μέχρι πολλοῦ καὶ κοιμώμενον. αὐτομόλων δὲ τινων παραγενομένων καὶ φρασάντων τὸν κίνδυνον, ἐκπλαγεῖς καὶ ἀναπηδήσας ἐκέλευσε σημαίνειν, ἅμα τὰς κρηπίδας ὑποδοῦ-μένος καὶ βοῶν πρὸς τοὺς ἐταίρους ὡς θηρίῳ δεινῷ συμπέπλεκται. Δημήτριος δὲ τῷ θορύβῳ τῶν πολεμίων αἰσθόμενος ὅτι μεμήνυται, κατὰ assailants, drove away those who were fortifying the passes into Syria, and made himself master of them. And now he was completely lifted up in spirit, and seeing that his soldiers had recovered their courage, he made ready to fight to the finish with Seleucus for the supreme prizes. Seleucus himself was already in perplexity. For he had refused the assistance offered by Lysimachus, whom he distrusted and feared; and by himself he hesitated to join battle with Demetrius, fearing the man's desperation and the perpetual change which brought him from the extremest destitution to the greatest affluence.

DEMETRIUS

However, a grievous sickness seized Demetrius at this juncture; it wrought terrible harm to his body, and utterly ruined his cause. For some of his soldiers went over to the enemy, and others dispersed. But at last, after forty days, he recovered strength, and taking the soldiers that remained, set out, so far as his enemies could see or conjecture, for Cilicia; then, in the night and without signal by trumpet, he set out in the opposite direction, crossed the range of Amanus, and plundered the lower country as far as Cyrrhæstia.

XLIX. When Seleucus made his appearance there and encamped near by, Demetrius set his army in motion by night and advanced against him. Seleucus was ignorant of his approach for a long time, and lay sleeping. But when some deserters came and told him of his peril, he was astounded, and leaping up ordered the trumpets to be sounded, at the same time pulling on his boots and shouting to his companions that a terrible wild beast was upon them. But Demetrius, perceiving from the noise which his enemies made that they had been informed

- 2 τάχος ἀπήγειν. ἄμα δ' ἡμέρα προσκειμένου τοῦ Σελεύκου, πέμψας τινὰ τῶν περὶ αὐτὸν ἐπὶ θά-τερον κέρας ἐποίησέ τινα τροπὴν τῶν ἐναντίων.
 εἶτα μέντοι Σέλευκος αὐτὸς ἀφείλκε τὸν ἵππον καὶ τὸ κράνος ἀποθέμενος καὶ λαβὼν πέλτην ἀπήντα τοῖς μισθοφόροις, ἐπιδεικνύμενος αὐτὸν καὶ μετα-βαλέσθαι παρακαλῶν, ἤδη ποτὲ συμφρονήσαντας ὅτι φειδόμενος ἐκείνων, οὐ Δημητρίῳ, χρόνον 3 πολὺν διατετέλεκεν. ἐκ τούτου πάντες ἀσπαζόμενοι καὶ βασιλέα προσαγορεύοντες μεθίσταντο.

Δημήτριος δὲ πολλῶν μεταβολῶν αἰσθόμενος ἐσχάτην ἐκείνην ἤκουσαν ἐπ' αὐτὸν, ἐκκλίνας ἐπὶ τὰς Ἀμανίδας ἔφυγε πύλας, καὶ καταβαλὼν εἰς ὕλην τινὰ συνηρεφῆ μετὰ φίλων τινῶν καὶ ἀκολουθῶν ὀλίγων παντάπασιν ὄντων προσέμενε τὴν νύκτα, βουλόμενος, εἰ δύναίτο, τῆς ἐπὶ Καῦνον ὁδοῦ λαβέσθαι καὶ διεκπεσεῖν ἐπὶ τὴν θάλασ-4 σαν, οὐ τὸν ναύσταθμον εὐρήσειν ἠλπίζεν. ὡς δὲ ἔγνω μηδὲ ἐκείνης τῆς ἡμέρας ἐφόδιον ἔχοντας αὐτούς, ἐπ' ἄλλων ἐγένετο λογισμῶν. εἶτα μέν-τοι Σωσιγένης ἐπήλθεν, ἐταῖρος αὐτοῦ, χρυσοῦς τετρακοσίους ὑπεζωσμένος· καὶ ἀπὸ τούτων ἐλπί-ζοντες ἄχρι θαλάσσης διαγενήσεσθαι, πρὸς τὰς ὑπερβολὰς ἐχώρου σκοταῖοι. πυρῶν δὲ καιομένων πρὸς αὐταῖς πολεμίων ἀπογνόντες ἐκείνην τὴν ὁδὸν αὐθις ἀνεχώρησαν εἰς τὸν αὐτὸν τόπον, οὔτε πάντες (ἐνιοὶ γὰρ ἀπέδρασαν) οὔτε ὁμοίως 5 οἱ παραμένοντες πρόθυμοι· τολμήσαντος δέ τινος εἰπεῖν τι, ὡς Σελεύκῳ χρὴ τὸ σῶμα παραδοῦναι

DEMETRIUS

of his approach, drew off his troops with all speed. When day came, however, Seleucus was pressing him hard, so he sent one of his officers to the other wing, and partially routed the enemy. But at this point Seleucus himself, quitting his horse, doffing his helmet, and taking a light shield, went to meet the mercenaries of Demetrius, showing them who he was, and exhorting them to come over to him, since they must for some time have been aware that his long forbearance had them in view, and not Demetrius. Consequently they all welcomed him, hailed him as king, and went over to him.

Then Demetrius, perceiving that the last of many reversals of fortune was now come upon him, left the field and fled to the passes of Amanus, where he plunged into a dense forest along with sundry friends and followers, few all told, and waited for the night. He wished, if possible, to take the road to Caunus and make his way through to the sea, where he expected to find his fleet. But when he learned that the party had not provisions enough even for the coming day, he tried to think of other plans. At this point, however, Sosigenes came up, a companion of his, with four hundred pieces of gold in his belt; so hoping that with this money they could make their way through to the sea, the party set out towards the passes, in the darkness of night. In the passes, however, the enemy were burning fires, so the fugitives despaired of this road and once more returned to their place in the forest—not all of them, for some had run away; nor was the remnant as willing as before. And when one of them ventured to speak out boldly and say that Demetrius ought to Δημήτριον, ὥρμησε μὲν τὸ ξίφος σπασάμενος ἀνελεῖν ἑαυτὸν, οἱ δὲ φίλοι περιστάντες καὶ παραμυθούμενοι συνέπεισαν οὕτω ποιῆσαι. καὶ πέμπει πρὸς Σέλευκον ἐπιτρέπων ἐκείνῳ τὰ καθ' ἑαυτὸν.

- L. Ἀκούσας δὲ Σέλευκος οὐκ ἔφη τῇ Δημητρίου τύχῃ σώζεσθαι Δημήτριον, ἀλλὰ τῇ αὐτοῦ, μετὰ τῶν ἄλλων καλῶν αὐτῷ φιλανθρωπίας καὶ χρηστότητος ἐπίδειξιν διδούσῃ. καλέσας δὲ τοὺς ἐπιμελητὰς σκηνὴν τε πηγνύναι βασιλικὴν ἐκέλευσε, καὶ τἄλλα πάντα ποιεῖν καὶ παρασκευάζειν εἰς ὑποδοχὴν καὶ θεραπείαν μεγαλοπρεπῶς. 914
- 2 ἦν δέ τις Ἀπολλωνίδης παρὰ τῷ Σελεύκῳ, τοῦ Δημητρίου γεγωνὸς συνήθης· τοῦτον εὐθὺς ἐξέπεμψε πρὸς αὐτόν, ὅπως ἠδίων γένηται καὶ θαρρῶν ὡς πρὸς οἰκεῖον ἄνδρα καὶ κηδεστὴν ἀπαντᾶν. Φανερὰς δὲ τῆς γνώμης αὐτοῦ γενομένης ὀλίγοι τὸ πρῶτον, εἶτα οἱ πλείστοι τῶν φίλων ἐξεπήδων παρὰ τὸν Δημήτριον, ἀμιλλώμενοι καὶ φθάνοντες ἀλλήλους· ἠλπίζετο γὰρ εὐθὺς παρὰ τῷ Σελεύκῳ μέγιστος ἔσεσθαι.
- 3 Τοῦτο δὲ ἐκείνῳ μὲν εἰς φθόνον μετέβαλε τὸν ἔλεον, τοῖς δὲ κακοήθεσι καὶ βασκάνοις παρέσχεν ἀποτρέψαι καὶ διαφθεῖραι τὴν φιλανθρωπίαν τοῦ βασιλέως, ἐκφοβήσασιν αὐτόν, ὡς οὐκ εἰς ἀναβολάς, ἀλλ' ἅμα τῷ πρῶτον ὀφθῆναι τὸν ἄνδρα, μεγάλων ἐσομένων ἐν τῷ στρατοπέδῳ νεωτερισμῶν. 4 ἄρτι δὴ τοῦ Ἀπολλωνίδου πρὸς τὸν Δημήτριον ἀφιγμένου περιχαροῦς, καὶ τῶν ἄλλων surrender himself to Seleucus, Demetrius drew his sword and would have killed himself; but his friends encompassed him, and with encouraging words persuaded him to do as the man had said. So he sent to Seleucus and put himself at his disposal.

DEMETRIUS

L. When Seleucus heard of it, he declared that it was not the good fortune of Demetrius that brought him safety, but his own, which, in addition to her other blessings, gave him an opportunity to show generosity and kindness. Then he called his overseers and bade them pitch a royal tent, and to make all other arrangements and preparations for a magnificent reception and entertainment. There was also with Seleucus a certain Apollonides, who had been an intimate friend of Demetrius; this man was at once sent to him by Seleucus, to give him cheerfulness and confidence by reminders that he was coming into the presence of a man who was a friend and relative. When this purpose of Seleucus became evident, first a few of his friends, then the greater part of them, went off hot foot to Demetrius, vying with one another in their efforts to reach him first; for it was expected that he would at once be a very great personage at the court of Seleucus.

But this behaviour of his friends turned the king's pity into jealousy, and gave malicious and mischievous persons an opportunity to thwart and put an end to his generosity. They frightened him by their insinuations that without any delay, but at the first sight of Demetrius, there would be a great revolution in the camp. And so it came to pass that at the very time when Apollonides had come to Demetrius with a joyful countenance, and while the other courtiers ἐπερχομένων καὶ λόγους θαυμαστοὺς ἀπαγγελόντων περὶ τοῦ Σελεύκου, καὶ τοῦ Δημητρίου μετὰ τηλικαύτην δυστυχίαν καὶ κακοπραγίαν, εἰ καὶ πρότερον ἐδόκει τὴν παράδοσιν τοῦ σώματος αἰσχρὰν πεποιῆσθαι, τότε μετεγνωκότες διὰ τὸ θαρρεῖν καὶ πιστεύειν ταῖς ἐλπίσιν, ἦλθε Πανσανίας ἔχων στρατιώτας ὁμοῦ πεζοὺς καὶ ἵππεῖς 5 περὶ χιλίους. καὶ τούτοις περισχῶν τὸν Δημήτριον ἄφνω, τοὺς δὲ ἄλλους ἀποστήσας, Σελεύκῳ μὲν αὐτὸν εἰς ὄψιν οὐ κατέστησεν, εἰς δὲ Χερρόνησον τὴν Συριακὴν ἀπήγαγεν, ὅπου τὸ λοιπὸν ἰσχυρᾶς φυλακῆς ἐπισταθείσης θεραπεία μὲν ἦκεν ἱκανὴ παρὰ Σελεύκου καὶ χρήματα καὶ δίαίτα παρεσκευάζετο καθ' ἡμέραν οὐ μεμπτή, δρόμοι δὲ καὶ περίπατοι βασιλικοὶ καὶ παράδεισοι θήρας 6 ἔχοντες ἀπεδείχθησαν. ἦν δὲ καὶ τῶν φίλων τῶν συμφυγόντων τῷ βουλομένῳ συνεῖναι, καὶ παρ' αὐτὸν¹ τινες ὁμῶς ἐπιφοιτῶντες ἀπὸ τοῦ Σελεύκου ἦκον κομίζοντες ἐπιεικεῖς λόγους καὶ θαρρεῖν παρακαλοῦντες, ὡς, ὅταν πρῶτον Ἀντίοχος ἀφί-κηται σὺν Στρατονίκη, διεθυσόμενον.

LI. Ὁ δὲ Δημήτριος ἐν τῇ τοιαύτῃ τύχῃ γεγωνὸς ἐπέστειλε τοῖς περὶ τὸν υἱὸν καὶ τοῖς περὶ Ἀθήνας καὶ Κόρινθον ἡγεμόσι καὶ φίλοις² μήτε γράμμασιν αὐτοῦ μήτε σφραγίδι πιστεύειν, ἀλλ' ὥσπερ τεθνηκότες Ἀντιγόνῳ τὰς πόλεις καὶ 2 τὰ λοιπὰ πράγματα διαφυλάττειν. Ἀντιγόνος δὲ τὴν τοῦ πατρὸς σύλληψιν πυθόμενος καὶ βαρέ-

¹ παρ' αὐτὸν Coraës and Bekker, with the MSS.; Sintenis corrects to παρ' αὐτοῦ and deletes ἀπὸ τοῦ Σελεύκου.

² τοῖς . . . φίλοις Sintenis, with the best MSS. and Stephanus; Coraës and Bekker retain πρὸς . . . φίλους.

DEMETRIUS

were coming up and telling him wonderful tales about Seleucus and his generosity, and when Demetrius, after all his disasters and misfortunes, even if he had once thought his surrender a disgraceful act, had now changed his mind as a result of his courage and hopefulness, up came Pausanias at the head of a thousand soldiers, foot and horse together. With these he surrounded Demetrius on a sudden, and after sending off everybody else, conducted him, not into the presence of Seleucus, but away to the Syrian Chersonese. Here, for the rest of his life, a strong guard was set over him, a sufficient number of attendants came to him from Seleucus, while money and maintenance was provided for him day by day which was not to be despised, nay, royal courses for riding and walking, and parks with wild game in them, were set apart for his use; any friend also who shared his exile and wished to visit him could do so, and notwithstanding his captivity sundry people kept coming to him from Seleucus bringing kindly messages and exhorting him to be of good cheer, since as soon as Antiochus came with Stratonice, he was to be set at liberty.

LI. Demetrius, however, finding himself in this plight, sent word to his son and the friends and commanders who were at Athens and Corinth, bidding them put no trust in letters or seal purporting to be his, but to treat him as dead, and to preserve for Antigonus his cities and the rest of his power. When Antigonus learned of his father's capture, he ως ἐνεγκῶν καὶ πενθίμην ἀναλαβῶν ἐσθήτα πρὸς τε τοὺς ἄλλους βασιλεῖς ἔγραψε καὶ πρὸς αὐτὸν Σέλευκον, δεόμενος, καὶ πᾶν ὃ τι λοιπὸν ἦν αὐτοῖς παραδιδούς, καὶ πρὸ παντὸς ὀμηρεῦειν ἔτοιμος ὦν αὐτὸς ὑπὲρ τοῦ πατρός. καὶ συνεδέοντο ταῦτα πόλεις τε πολλαὶ καὶ δυνάσται πλὴν Λυσιμάχου.

- 3 Λυσιμάχος δὲ καὶ χρήματα πολλὰ πέμπων ὑπισχεῖτο Σελεύκῳ κτείναντι Δημήτριον. ὁ δὲ ἐκεῖνον μὲν καὶ ἄλλως προβαλλόμενος ἔτι μᾶλλον ἐπὶ τούτῳ μιαρὸν ἠγεῖτο καὶ βάρβαρον, Ἀντιόχῳ δὲ τῷ παιδί καὶ Στρατονίκη φυλάττων Δημήτριον, ὡς ἐκείνων ἢ χάρις γένοιτο, παρήγγε τὸν χρόνον.

LII. Ὁ δὲ Δημήτριος, ὡς ἐν ἀρχῇ τὴν τύχην προσπεσοῦσαν ὑπέμεινε, καὶ ῥᾶον ἤδη φέρειν εἰθίζετο τὰ παρόντα, πρῶτον μὲν ἀμῶς γέ πως ἐκίνει τὸ σῶμα, θήρας, ἐφ' ὅσον ἦν, καὶ δρόμων ἀπτόμενος, ἔπειτα κατὰ μικρὸν ὄκνου πρὸς αὐτὰ καὶ νωθείας ἐπίμπλατο, καὶ φέρων ἑαυτὸν εἰς πότους καὶ κύβους κατέβαλε καὶ τοῦ χρόνου τὸν πλει-

- 2 στον ἐν τούτοις διῆγεν, εἴτε τοὺς ἐν τῷ νήφειν ἀναλογισμοὺς τῶν παρόντων ἀποδιδράσκων καὶ παρακαλυπτόμενος τῇ μέθῃ τὴν διάνοιαν, εἴτε συγγνοὺς ἑαυτῷ τοῦτον εἶναι τὸν βίον, ὃν ἔκπαλαι ποθῶν καὶ διώκων ἄλλως ὑπ' ἀνοίας καὶ κενῆς δόξης ἐπλάζετο καὶ πολλὰ μὲν ἑαυτῷ, πολλὰ δὲ ἑτέροις πράγματα παρείχεν, ἐν ὅπλοις καὶ στόλοις καὶ στρατοπέδοις τὸ ἀγαθὸν ζητῶν, 915 ὃ νῦν ἐν ἀπραγμοσύνῃ καὶ σχολῇ καὶ ἀνα-

DEMETRIUS

was deeply distressed, put on mourning apparel, and wrote to the other kings and especially to Seleucus himself, supplicating him, and offering to surrender to him whatever was left of his own and his father's possessions, and above everything else volunteering to be a hostage himself for his father. Many cities also and many rulers joined in these supplications. But Lysimachus did not; he sent to Seleucus the promise of a large sum of money if he killed Demetrius. But Seleucus, who had always had a feeling of aversion for Lysimachus, all the more for this proposal thought him abominable and barbarous, and continued to keep Demetrius under watch and ward for Antiochus his son and Stratonice, that the favour of his release might come from them.

LII. But Demetrius, who in the beginning bore up under the misfortune that had come upon him, and presently grew accustomed to it and endured his situation with a better grace, at first, in one way or another, exercised his body, resorting to hunting, so far as he could, or riding; then, little by little, he came to have the greatest indifference and aversion to these sports, took eagerly to drinking and dice, and spent most of his time at these. This was either because he sought escape from the thoughts on his present condition which tormented him when he was sober, and tried to smother his reflections in drunkenness; or because he had convinced himself that this was the real life, which he had long desired and striven to attain, but had foolishly missed it through folly and empty ambition, thereby bringing many troubles upon himself, and many upon others; he had sought in arms and fleets and armies to find the highest good, but now, to his surprise, had discovered

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

3 παύσει μὴ προσδοκήσας ἀνεύρηκε. τί γὰρ ἄλλο τῶν πολέμων καὶ τῶν κινδύνων πέρασ ἐστὶ τοῖς φαύλοις βασιλεῦσι, κακῶς καὶ ἀνοήτως διακειμένοις, οὐχ ὅτι μόνον τρυφὴν καὶ ἡδονὴν ἀντὶ τῆς ἀρετῆς καὶ τοῦ καλοῦ διώκουσιν, ἀλλ' ὅτι μὴδὲ ἠδεσθαι μὴδὲ τρυφᾶν ὡς ἀληθῶς ἴσασιν;

Ὁ δ' οὖν Δημήτριος ἔτος τρίτον ἐν τῇ Χερρονήσῳ καθειργμένος ὑπ' ἀργίας καὶ πλησμονῆς καὶ οἴνου νοσήσας ἀπέθανεν, ἔτη τέσσαρα καὶ 4 πεντήκοντα βεβιωκῶς. καὶ Σέλευκος ἤκουσέ τε κακῶς καὶ μετενόησεν οὐ μετρίως ἐν ὑποψία τὸν Δημήτριον θέμενος τότε, καὶ μὴδὲ Δρομιχαίτην, ἄνδρα βάρβαρον Θράκα, μιμησάμενος οὕτω φιλανθρώπως καὶ βασιλικῶς ἀλόντι Λυσιμάχῳ χρησάμενον.

LIII. Ἔσχε μέντοι καὶ τὰ περὶ τὴν ταφὴν αὐτοῦ τραγικὴν τινα καὶ θεατρικὴν διάθεσιν. ὁ γὰρ υἱὸς Ἀντίγονος, ὡς ἦσθετο τὰ λείψανα κομιζόμενα, πάσαις ἀναχθεῖς ταῖς ναυσὶν ἐπὶ νήσων ἀπήνησεν· καὶ δεξάμενος εἰς τὴν μεγίστην τῶν ναυαρχίδων ἔθετο τὴν ὑδρίαν χρυσή- 2 λατον οὔσαν. αἱ δὲ πόλεις αἷς προσεῖχον, τοῦτο μὲν στεφάνους ἐπέφερον τῇ ὑδρίᾳ, τοῦτο δὲ ἄνδρας ἐν σχήματι πενθίμῳ συνθάψοντας καὶ συμπαραπέμψοντας ἀπέστελλον. εἰς δὲ Κόρινθον τοῦ στόλου καταπλέοντος ἢ τε κάλπις ἐκ πρύμνης περιφανῆς ἐωρᾶτο πορφύρα βασιλικῆ καὶ διαδήματι κεκοσμημένη, καὶ παρειστήκεισαν ἐν ὄπλοις νεανίσκοι δορυφοροῦντες. ὁ δὲ τῶν τότε αὐλητῶν ἔλλογιμώτατος Ξερόφαντος ἐγγυὺς καθε-

DEMETRIUS

it in idleness and leisure and repose. For what other end than this can worthless kings seek to attain by their wars and perils? Wicked and foolish indeed are they, not only because they seek after luxury and pleasure instead of virtue and honour, but also because they do not even know how to enjoy real pleasure or true luxury.

So, then, Demetrius, after an imprisonment of three years¹ in the Syrian Chersonese, through inactivity and surfeit of food and wine, fell sick and died, in the fifty-fifth year of his life. Seleucus was in ill repute for this, and repented him bitterly for having cherished such suspicions against Demetrius, and for allowing himself to be outdone even by Dromichaetes, a barbarous Thracian, who had given Lysimachus,² his captive, a treatment so humane and royal.

LIII. Moreover, there was something dramatic and theatrical even in the funeral ceremonies of Demetrius. For his son Antigonus, when he learned that his remains had been sent home, put to sea with his entire fleet and met them off the islands. They were given to him in a golden urn, and he placed them in the largest of his admiral's ships. Of the cities where the fleet touched in its passage, some brought garlands to adorn the urn, others sent men in funeral attire to assist in escorting it home and burying it. When the fleet put in at Corinth, the cinerary vase was conspicuous on the vessel's poop, adorned with royal purple and a king's diadem, and young men stood about it in arms as a body-guard. Moreover, the most celebrated flute-player then living, Xenophantus, sat near, and with the

¹ From 386 to 383 B.C.

² Cf. chapter xxxix. 3.

- 3 ζόμενος προσηύλει τῶν μελῶν τὸ ἱερώτατον· καὶ πρὸς τοῦτο τῆς εἰρεσίας ἀναφερομένης μετὰ ῥυθμοῦ τινος, ἀπῆντα ψόφος, ὥσπερ ἐν κοπετῶ, ταῖς τῶν αὐλημάτων περιόδοις· τὸν δὲ πλείστον οἰκτον καὶ ὀλοφυρμὸν αὐτὸς ὁ Ἀντίγονος τοῖς ἠθροισμένοις ἐπὶ τὴν θάλασσαν ὄφθεις ταπεινὸς καὶ δεδακρυμένος παρέσχεν. ἐπενεχθεισῶν δὲ τιμῶν καὶ στεφάνων περὶ Κόρινθον εἰς Δημητριάδα κομίσας ἔθηκε τὰ λείψανα, πόλιν ἐπώνυμον ἐκείνου, συνοικισθεῖσαν ἐκ μικρῶν τῶν περὶ τὴν Ἴωλκὸν πολιχνίων.
- 4 Ἀπέλιπε δὲ γενεὰν ὁ Δημήτριος Ἀντίγονον μὲν ἐκ Φίλας καὶ Στρατονίκην, δύο δὲ Δημητρίους, τὸν μὲν Λεπτὸν, ἐξ Ἰλλυρίδος γυναικός, τὸν δὲ ἄρξαντα Κυρήνης ἐκ Πτολεμαΐδος, ἐκ δὲ Δηϊδαμείας Ἀλέξανδρον, ὃς ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ κατεβίωσε. λέγεται δὲ καὶ Κόρραγον υἱὸν ἐξ Εὐρυδίκης αὐτῷ γενέσθαι. κατέβη δὲ ταῖς διαδοχαῖς τὸ γένος αὐτοῦ βασιλεῦον εἰς Περσέα τελευταῖον, ἐφ' οὗ Ῥωμαῖοι Μακεδονίαν ὑπηγάγοντο.

Διηγωνισμένου δὲ τοῦ Μακεδονικοῦ δράματος ὥρα τὸ Ῥωμαϊκὸν ἐπείσαγαγεῖν.

DEMETRIUS

most solemn melody upon his flute accompanied the rowers ; to this melody the oars kept perfect time, and their splashing, like funereal beatings of the breast, answered to the cadences of the flute-tones. But the most pity and lamentation among those who had come in throngs to the sea-shore was awakened by the sight of Antigonus himself, who was bowed down and in tears. After garlands and other honours had been bestowed upon the remains at Corinth, they were brought by Antigonus to Demetrias for burial, a city named after his father, who had settled it from the small villages about Iolcus.¹

The children left by Demetrius were these: Antigonus and Stratonice, by Phila; two named Demetrius, one who was surnamed the Thin, by a woman of Illyria, and one who ruled Cyrene, by Ptolemais; and, by Deidameia, Alexander, who lived and died in Egypt. It is said also that he had a son named Corrhagus, by Eurydice. His line came down in a succession of kings to Perseus, the last, in whose reign the Romans subdued Macedonia.

And now that the Macedonian play has been performed, let us introduce the Roman.

¹ Cf. chapter xxv. 2.

ANTONY

ΑΝΤΩΝΙΟΣ

I. Ἀντωνίου πάππος μὲν ἦν ὁ ῥήτωρ Ἀντώνιος, ὃν τῆς Σύλλα γενόμενον στάσεως Μάριος ἀπέκτεινε, πατὴρ δὲ ὁ Κρητικὸς ἐπικληθεὶς Ἀντώνιος, οὐχ οὕτω μὲν εὐδόκιμος ἐν τοῖς πολιτικοῖς ἀνὴρ οὐδὲ λαμπρὸς, εὐγνώμων δὲ καὶ χρηστός, ἄλλως τε καὶ πρὸς τὰς μεταδόσεις ἐλευθέριος, ὡς ἀφ' ἐνὸς ἂν τις ἔργου καταμάθοι.

2 κεκτημένος γὰρ οὐ πολλὰ καὶ διὰ τοῦτο τῇ 916
φιλανθρωπία χρῆσθαι κωλυόμενος ὑπὸ τῆς γυναικός, ἐπεὶ τις ἀφίκετο τῶν συνήθων πρὸς αὐτὸν ἀργυρίου δεόμενος, ἀργύριον μὲν οὐκ εἶχε, παιδαρίῳ δὲ προσέταξεν εἰς ἀργυροῦν σκύφον ὕδωρ ἐμβαλόντι κομίσαι· καὶ κομίσαντος, ὡς ξύρεσθαι 3 μέλλων κατέβρεχε τὰ γένεα. τοῦ δὲ παιδαρίου καθ' ἑτέραν πρόφασιν ἐκποδῶν γενομένου, τὸν μὲν σκύφον ἔδωκε τῷ φίλῳ χρῆσθαι κελεύσας, ζητήσεως δὲ πολλῆς ἐν τοῖς οἰκέταις οὔσης ὁρῶν χαλεπαίνουσαν τὴν γυναῖκα καὶ βουλομένην καθ' ἕκαστον ἐξετάζειν ὡμολόγησε, συγγνώμην ἔχειν δεηθείς.

II. Ἦν δὲ αὐτῷ γυνὴ Ἰουλία τοῦ Καισάρων οἴκου, ταῖς ἀρίσταις τότε καὶ σωφρονεστάταις ἐνάμιλλος. ὑπὸ ταύτης ὁ υἱὸς Ἀντώνιος ἐτρέφη μετὰ τὴν τοῦ πατρὸς τελευτὴν Κορνηλίῳ Λέντλῳ

ANTONY

I. ANTONY's grandfather was the orator Antonius, who joined the party of Sulla and was put to death by Marius;¹ his father was Antonius surnamed Creticus, a man of no great repute in public life, nor illustrious, but kindly and honest, and particularly a liberal giver, as one may see from a single instance. He had not much property himself, and therefore was prevented by his wife from indulging his kindly feelings. When, accordingly, one of his intimates came to him with a request for money, money he had not, but he ordered a young slave to put water into a silver bowl and bring it to him, and when it was brought, he moistened his chin, as though about to shave. The slave was then sent away on another errand improvised for the occasion, whereupon Antonius gave the bowl to his friend and bade him dispose of it. Later, when a careful search was made for it among the slaves, seeing that his wife was angry and proposed to put them to the torture one by one, Antonius confessed what he had done, and by his entreaties gained her pardon.

II. His wife was Julia, of the house of the Caesars, and she could vie with the noblest and most discreet women of her time. By this mother her son Antony was reared, after the death of whose father she married Cornelius Lentulus, whom Cicero

¹ Cf. the Marius, xliv. 1-4.

- γαμηθείσης, ὃν Κικέρων ἀπέκτεινε τῶν Κατιλίνα συνωμοτῶν γενόμενον. αὕτη δοκεῖ τῆς σφοδρᾶς 2 καὶ ἀρχῆ γενέσθαι. φησὶ γοῦν Ἀντώνιος οὐδὲ τὸν νεκρὸν αὐτοῖς ἀποδοθῆναι τοῦ Λέντλου πρότερον ἢ τῆς γυναικὸς τοῦ Κικέρωνος τὴν μητέρα δεηθῆναι. τοῦτο μὲν οὖν ὁμολογουμένως ψεῦδός ἐστιν· οὐδεὶς γὰρ εἵρχθη ταφῆς τῶν τότε 3 κολασθέντων ὑπὸ τοῦ Κικέρωνος· Ἀντωνίῳ δὲ λαμπρῶ καθ' ὥραν γενομένῳ τὴν Κουρίωνος φιλίαν καὶ συνήθειαν ὥσπερ τινα κῆρα προσπεσεῖν λέγουσιν, αὐτοῦ τε περὶ τὰς ἡδονὰς ἀπαιδεύ-του γενομένου, καὶ τὸν Ἀντώνιον, ὡς μᾶλλον εἶη χειροῦθης, εἰς πότους καὶ γύναια καὶ δαπάνας πολυτελεῖς καὶ ἀκολάστους ἐμβάλλοντος. ἐξ ὧν 4 πεντήκοντα καὶ διακοσίων ταλάντων. τοῦτο πᾶν ἐγγυησαμένου τοῦ Κουρίωνος ὁ πατὴρ αἰσθόμενος ἐξήλασε τὸν Ἀντώνιον ἐκ τῆς οἰκίας. ὁ δὲ βραχὺν μὲν τινα χρόνον τῇ Κλωδίου τοῦ θρασυ-τάτου καὶ βδελυρωτάτου τῶν τότε δημαγωγῶν φορᾷ πάντα τὰ πράγματα ταραπτούσῃ προσέ-μιξεν ἑαυτόν· ταχὺ δὲ τῆς ἐκείνου μανίας μεστὸς γενόμενος, καὶ φοβηθεὶς τοὺς συνισταμένους ἐπὶ τὸν Κλώδιον, ἀπῆρεν ἐκ τῆς Ἰταλίας εἰς τὴν Ἑλλάδα, καὶ διέτριβε τό τε σῶμα γυμνάζων πρὸς τοὺς στρατιωτικούς ἀγῶνας καὶ λέγειν μελετῶν.
 5 ἐχρήτο δὲ τῷ καλουμένῳ μὲν Ἀσιανῷ ζήλῳ τῶν λόγων, ἀνθούντι μάλιστα κατ' ἐκείνον τὸν χρόνον, ἔχοντι δὲ πολλὴν ὁμοιότητα πρὸς τὸν βίον αὐτοῦ, κομπῶδη καὶ φρναγματίαν ὄντα καὶ κενοῦ γαυ-ριάματος καὶ φιλοτιμίας ἀνωμάλου μεστόν.

ANTONY

put to death for joining the conspiracy of Catiline.¹ This would seem to have been the origin and ground of the violent hatred which Antony felt towards Cicero. At any rate, Antony says that not even the dead body of Lentulus was given up to them until his mother had begged it from the wife of Cicero. This, however, is admittedly false; for no one of those who were punished at that time by Cicero was deprived of burial. Antony gave brilliant promise in his youth, they say, until his intimate friendship with Curio fell upon him like a pest. For Curio himself was unrestrained in his pleasures, and in order to make Antony more manageable, engaged him in drinking bouts, and with women, and in immoderate and extravagant expenditures. This involved Antony in a heavy debt and one that was excessive for his years—a debt of two hundred and fifty talents.² For this whole sum Curio went surety, but his father heard of it and banished Antony from his house. Then Antony allied himself for a short time with Clodius, the most audacious and low-lived demagogue of his time, in the violent courses which were convulsing the state; but he soon became sated with that miscreant's madness, and fearing the party which was forming against him, left Italy for Greece, where he spent some time in military exercises and the study of oratory. He adopted what was called the Asiatic style of oratory, which was at the height of its popularity in those days and bore a strong resemblance to his own life, which was swashbuckling and boastful, full of empty exultation and distorted ambition.

¹ Cf. the Cicero, xxii.

² An equivalent, roughly, of £60,000, or $300,000, with four or five times the purchasing power of modern money.

III. Ἐπεὶ δὲ Γαβίνιος ἀνὴρ ὑπατικὸς εἰς Συρίαν πλέων ἀνέπειθεν αὐτὸν ὀρμηῆσαι πρὸς τὴν στρατείαν, ιδιώτης μὲν οὐκ ἂν ἔφη συνεξελθεῖν, ἀποδειχθεὶς δὲ τῶν ἰππέων ἄρχων συνεστράτευε. καὶ πρῶτον μὲν ἐπ' Ἀριστόβουλον Ἰουδαίους ἀφιστάντα πεμφθεὶς αὐτὸς μὲν ἐπέβη τοῦ μεγίστου τῶν ἐρυμάτων πρῶτος, ἐκείνουν δὲ πάντων ἐξήλασεν· εἶτα μάχην συνάψας καὶ τρεψάμενος ὀλίγοις τοῖς σὺν αὐτῷ τοὺς ἐκείνου πολλαπλασίους ὄντας ἀπέκτεινε πλὴν ὀλίγων ἅπαντας· αὐτὸς δὲ μετὰ τοῦ παιδὸς Ἀριστόβουλος ἦλω.

- 2 Μετὰ ταῦτα Γαβίνιον ἐπὶ μυρίοις ταλάντοις Πτολεμαίου πείθοντος εἰς Αἴγυπτον ἅμα συμβαλεῖν αὐτῷ καὶ τὴν βασιλείαν ἀναλαβεῖν, οἱ μὲν πλείστοι τῶν ἡγεμόνων ἠγαντιοῦντο, καὶ Γαβίνιον δὲ ὄκνος τις εἶχε τοῦ πολέμου, καίπερ ἐξηνδραποδισμένον κομιδῇ τοῖς μυρίοις ταλάντοις, Ἀντώνιος δὲ καὶ πράξεων μεγάλων ἐφιέμενος καὶ τῷ Πτολεμαίῳ χαριζόμενος δεομένῳ συνέπεισε μὲν καὶ συνεξώρμησεν ἐπὶ τὴν στρατείαν τὸν
- 3 Γαβίνιον, ἐπεὶ δὲ τοῦ πολέμου μᾶλλον ἐφοβοῦντο τὴν ἐπὶ τὸ Πηλοῦσιον ὁδόν, ἅτε δὴ διὰ ψάμμου βαθείας καὶ ἀνύδρου παρὰ τὸ Ἐκρηγμα καὶ τὰ 917 τῆς Σερβωνίδος ἔλη γινομένης αὐτοῖς τῆς πορείας, ἃς Τυφῶνος μὲν ἐκπνοᾶς Αἰγύπτιοι καλοῦσι, τῆς δ' ἐρυθρᾶς θαλάσσης ὑπονόστησις εἶναι δοκεῖ καὶ διήθησις, ἣ βραχυτάτῳ διορίζεται πρὸς τὴν
- 4 ἐντὸς θάλασσαν ἰσθμῷ, πεμφθεὶς μετὰ τῶν ἰπ-

ANTONY

III. When Gabinius, a man of consular dignity, was sailing for Syria, he tried to persuade Antony to join the expedition. Antony refused to go out with him in a private capacity, but on being appointed commander of the horse, accompanied him on the campaign.¹ And first, having been sent against Aristobulus, who was bringing the Jews to a revolt,² he was himself the first man to mount the highest of the fortifications, and drove Aristobulus from all of them; then he joined battle with him, routed his many times more numerous forces with his own small band, and slew all but a few of them. Aristobulus himself was captured, together with his son.

After this, Ptolemy tried to persuade Gabinius by a bribe of ten thousand talents to join him in an invasion of Egypt and recover the kingdom for him.³ But the greater part of the officers were opposed to the plan, and Gabinius himself felt a certain dread of the war, although he was completely captivated by the ten thousand talents. Antony, however, who was ambitious of great exploits and eager to gratify the request of Ptolemy, joined the king in persuading and inciting Gabinius to the expedition. But more than the war the march to Pelusium was feared, since their route lay through deep sand, where there was no water, as far as the Ecregma and the Serbonian marshes. These the Egyptians call the blasts of Typhon,⁴ although they appear to be a residual arm of the Red Sea, helped by infiltration, where the isthmus between them and the Mediterranean is at its narrowest. Antony was therefore

¹ In 58 B.C. ² Cf. the Pompey, xxxix. 2.

³ Cf. the Cato Minor, xxxv.; the Pompey, xlix. 5 ff.

⁴ The evil deity of the Egyptians, buried under the Serbonian marshes (Herodotus, iii. 5).

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

πέων ὁ Ἄντωνιος οὐ μόνον τὰ στενὰ κατέσχευε, ἀλλὰ καὶ Πηλοῦσιον ἐλών, πόλιν μεγάλην, καὶ τῶν ἐν αὐτῇ φρουρῶν κρατήσας, ἅμα καὶ τὴν ὁδὸν ἀσφαλῆ τῷ στρατεύματι καὶ τὴν ἐλπίδα τῆς νίκης ἐποίησε τῷ στρατηγῷ βέβαιον. ἀπέλαυσαν δὲ τῆς φιλοτιμίας αὐτοῦ καὶ οἱ πολέμιοι. Πτολεμαίου γὰρ ἅμα τῷ παρελθεῖν εἰς τὸ Πηλοῦσιον ὑπ' ὀργῆς καὶ μίσους ὠρμημένου φονεύειν 5 τοὺς Αἰγυπτίους ἐνέστη καὶ διεκώλυσεν. ἐν δὲ ταῖς μάχαις καὶ τοῖς ἀγῶσι μεγάλοις καὶ συχνοῖς γενομένοις πολλὰ καὶ τόλμης ἔργα καὶ προνοίας ἡγεμονικῆς ἀποδειξάμενος, ἐμφανέστατα δὲ τῷ κυκλώσασθαι καὶ περιβαλεῖν κατόπιν τοὺς πολέμους τὴν νίκην τοῖς κατὰ στόμα παρασχών, ἀριστεία καὶ τιμὰς ἔλαβε πρεπούσας. οὐ διέλαθε δὲ τοὺς πολλοὺς οὐδὲ ἢ πρὸς Ἀρχέλαον 6 αὐτοῦ τεθνηκότα φιλανθρωπία· γεγωνὸς γὰρ αὐτῷ συνήθης καὶ ξένος ἐπολέμει μὲν ἀναγκαίως ζῶντι, τὸ δὲ σῶμα πεσόντος ἐξευρὼν καὶ κοσμήσας βασιλικῶς ἐκήδευσεν. ἐπὶ τούτοις Ἀλεξανδρεῦσί τε πλεῖστον αὐτοῦ λόγον κατέλιπε, καὶ Ῥωμαίων τοῖς στρατευομένοις ἀνὴρ ἔδοξε λαμπρότατος εἶναι.

IV. Προσὴν δὲ καὶ μορφῆς ἐλευθέριον ἀξίωμα, καὶ πῶγων τις οὐκ ἀγεννῆς καὶ πλάτος μετώπου καὶ γρυπότης μυκτῆρος ἐδόκει τοῖς γραφομένοις καὶ πλαττομένοις Ἡρακλέους προσώποις ἐμφερὲς ἔχειν τὸ ἀρρενωπόν. ἦν δὲ καὶ λόγος παλαιὸς sent with the cavalry, and he not only occupied the narrow pass, but actually took Pelusium, a large city, and got its garrison into his power, thus rendering its march safer for the main army and giving its general assured hope of victory. And even the enemy reaped advantage from Antony's love of distinction. For Ptolemy, as soon as he entered Pelusium, was led by wrath and hatred to institute a massacre of the Egyptians; but Antony intervened and prevented him. Moreover, in the ensuing battles and contests, which were many and great, he displayed many deeds of daring and sagacious leadership, the most conspicuous of which was his rendering the van of the army victorious by outflanking the enemy and enveloping them from the rear. For all this he received rewards of valour and fitting honours. Nor did the multitude fail to observe his humane treatment of the dead Archelaüs,¹ for after waging war upon him of necessity while he was living, although he had been a comrade and friend, when he had fallen, Antony found his body and gave it royal adornment and burial. Thus he left among the people of Alexandria a very high reputation, and was thought by the Romans on the expedition to be a most illustrious man.

ANTONY

IV. He had also a noble dignity of form; and a shapely beard, a broad forehead, and an aquiline nose were thought to show the virile qualities peculiar to the portraits and statues of Heracles. Moreover, there was an ancient tradition that the ¹ The pretended son of Mithridates, who had married Berenicé, daughter of Ptolemy Auletes, and queen of Egypt after the expulsion of her father. His death occurred in 55 B.C.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Ἡρακλείδας εἶναι τοὺς Ἀντωνίους, ἀπ' Ἀντωνος,
 2 παιδὸς Ἡρακλέους, γεγονότας. καὶ τοῦτον ᾤετο τὸν λόγον τῇ τε μορφῇ τοῦ σώματος, ὥσπερ εἴρηται, καὶ τῇ στολῇ βεβαιοῦν. ἀεὶ γάρ, ὅτε μέλλοι πλείοσιν ὀρᾶσθαι, χιτῶνα εἰς μηρὸν ἔξωστο, καὶ μάχαιρα μεγάλη παρήρτητο, καὶ σάγος περιέκειτο τῶν στερεῶν. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ καὶ τὰ τοῖς ἄλλοις φορτικὰ δοκοῦντα, μεγαλαυχία καὶ σκῶμμα καὶ κῶθων ἐμφανῆς καὶ καθίσαι παρὰ τὸν ἐσθίουντα καὶ φαγεῖν ἐπιστάντα τραπέξῃ στρατιωτικῇ, θαυμαστὸν ὅσον εὐνοίας καὶ 3 πόθου πρὸς αὐτὸν ἐνεποίει τοῖς στρατιώταις. ἦν δέ πῃ καὶ τὸ ἐρωτικὸν οὐκ ἀναφρόδιτον, ἀλλὰ καὶ τούτῳ πολλοὺς ἐδημαγώγει, συμπράττων τε τοῖς ἐρῶσι καὶ σκωπτόμενος οὐκ ἀηδῶς εἰς τοὺς ἰδίους ἔρωτας.

Ἡ δ' ἐλευθεριότης καὶ τὸ μηδὲν ὀλίγη χειρὶ μηδὲ φειδομένη χαρίζεσθαι στρατιώταις καὶ φίλοις ἀρχὴν τε λαμπρὰν ἐπὶ τὸ ἰσχύειν αὐτῷ παρέσχε, καὶ μεγάλου γενομένου τὴν δύναμιν ἐπὶ πλείον ἐπήρην, ἐκ μυρίων ἄλλων ἀμαρτημάτων ἀνατρεπομένην. ἐν δέ τι τοῦ μεγαλοδώρου 4 παράδειγμα διηγήσομαι. τῶν φίλων τινὶ μυριά-δας ἐκέλευσε πέντε καὶ εἴκοσι δοθῆναι· τοῦτο Ῥωμαῖοι δεκίης καλοῦσι. τοῦ δ' ἐπιτρόπου θαυ-μάσαντος καὶ ἵνα δείξῃ τὸ πλήθος αὐτῷ κατα-βαλόντος ἐν μέσῳ τὸ ἀργύριον, ἠρώτησε παριῶν ὅ τι δὴ τοῦτο εἶη. τοῦ δ' ἐπιτρόπου φήσαντος ὡς

ANTONY

Antonii were Heracleidae, being descendants of Anton, a son of Heracles. And this tradition Antony thought that he confirmed, both by the shape of his body, as has been said, and by his attire. For whenever he was going to be seen by many people, he always wore his tunic girt up to his thigh, a large sword hung at his side, and a heavy cloak enveloped him. However, even what others thought offensive, namely, his jesting and boastfulness, his drinking-horn in evidence, his sitting by a comrade who was eating, or his standing to eat at a soldier's table,—it is astonishing how much goodwill and affection for him all this produced in his soldiers. And somehow even his conduct in the field of love was not without its charm, nay, it actually won for him the favour of many; for he assisted them in their love affairs, and submitted pleasantly to their jests upon his own amours.

Further, his liberality, and his bestowal of favours upon friends and soldiers with no scant or sparing hand, laid a splendid foundation for his growing strength, and when he had become great, lifted his power to yet greater heights, although it was hindered by countless faults besides. One illustration of his lavish giving I will relate. To one of his friends he ordered that two hundred and fifty thousand drachmas should be given (a sum which the Romans call "decies"¹). His steward was amazed, and in order to show Antony the magnitude of the sum, deposited the money in full view. Antony, passing by, asked what that was; and when ὃ κελεύσειε δοθῆναι, συμβαλὼν αὐτοῦ τὴν κακοθήθειαν ὁ Ἄντωνιος, “Ἐγὼ πλείον ὄμην,” ἔφη, “τὸ δεκίης εἶναι· τοῦτο δὲ μικρὸν ἔστιν· ὥστε ἄλλο πρόσθεσ αὐτῷ τοσοῦτον.”

¹ That is ten times 100,000 sesterces, or 250,000 denarii. For the Roman denarius Plutarch regularly uses the nearly equivalent Greek drachma (which had about the value of the French franc).

V. Ταῦτα μὲν οὖν ὕστερον· ἐπεὶ δὲ τὰ Ῥωμαίων πράγματα διέστη, τῶν μὲν ἀριστοκρατικῶν Πομπητῶ παρόντι προσθεμένων, τῶν δὲ δημοτικῶν Καίσαρα καλούντων ἐκ Γαλατίας ἐν τοῖς ὄπλοις ὄντα, Κουρίων ὁ Ἄντωνίου φίλος ἐκ μεταβολῆς θεραπεύων τὰ Καίσαρος Ἄντωνιον προσηγάγετο, καὶ μεγάλην μὲν ἀπὸ τοῦ λέγειν ἐν τοῖς πολλοῖς ἔχων ἰσχύν, χρώμενος δὲ καὶ δαπάναις ἀφειδῶς ἀφ’ ὧν Καίσαρ ἐχορήγει, δήμαρχον ἀπέδειξε τὸν Ἄντωνιον, εἶτα τῶν ἐπ’ οἰωνοῖς ἱερέων, 2 οὓς Αὔγουρας καλοῦσιν. ὁ δὲ εὐθύς εἰς τὴν ἀρχὴν παρελθὼν οὐ μικρὸν ἦν ὄφελος τοῖς πολιτευομένοις ὑπὲρ Καίσαρος. ἀλλὰ πρῶτον μὲν Μαρκέλλου τοῦ ὑπάτου Πομπητῶ τούς τε συνειλεγμένους ἤδη στρατιώτας παρεγγυῶντος καὶ καταλέγειν ἐτέρους διδόντος ἐμποδῶν ἔσται, διάταγμα γράψας ὅπως ἢ μὲν ἠθροισμένη δύναμις εἰς Συρίαν πλὴν καὶ Βύβλω βοηθῆ πολεμοῦντι Πάρθοις, οὓς δὲ Πομπητῆος καταλέγει, μὴ προσέχωσιν 3 αὐτῷ· δεύτερον δὲ τὰς Καίσαρος ἐπιστολάς οὐ προσιεμένων οὐδὲ ἐόντων ἀναγινώσκεισθαι τῶν συγκλητικῶν, αὐτὸς ἰσχύων διὰ τὸ ἀρχεῖν ἀνέγνω, καὶ πολλοὺς μετέστησε τῇ γνώμῃ, δίκαια καὶ μέτρια Καίσαρος ἀξιούν ἀφ’ ὧν ἔγραψε δόξαντος. 4 τέλος δὲ δυεῖν ἐρωτήσεων ἐν τῇ βουλῇ γενομένων, his steward told him it was the gift which he had ordered, he divined the man's malice and said: "I thought the decies was more; this is a trifle; therefore add as much more to it."

ANTONY .

V. This, however, was at a later time. But when matters at Rome came to a crisis, the aristocratic party attaching itself to Pompey, who was in the city, and the popular party summoning Caesar from Gaul, where he was in arms, then Curio, the friend of Antony, who had changed sides and was now favouring the cause of Caesar, brought Antony over to it. Curio had great influence with the multitude from his eloquence, and made lavish use of money supplied by Caesar, and so got Antony elected tribune of the people,¹ and afterwards one of the priests, called augurs, who observe the flight of birds. As soon as Antony entered upon his office he was of great assistance to those who were managing affairs in the interests of Caesar. In the first place, when Marcellus the consul proposed to put under Pompey's control the soldiers already collected, and to give him power to levy others, Antony opposed him by introducing a decree that the forces already assembled should sail for Syria and give aid to Bibulus, who was carrying on war with the Parthians, and that the troops which Pompey was then levying should not belong to him. In the second place, when the senate would not receive Caesar's letters nor allow them to be read, Antony, whose office gave him power, read them himself, and thereby changed the opinion of many, who judged from Caesar's letters that he was making only reasonable and just demands. And finally, when two questions were

¹ In 50 B.C.

τῆς μὲν εἰ δοκεῖ Πομπήϊον ἀφεῖναι τὰ στρατεύματα, τῆς δὲ εἰ Καίσαρα, καὶ Πομπήϊον μὲν ὀλίγων τὰ ὄπλα καταθέσθαι, Καίσαρα δὲ πάντων παρ' ὀλίγους κελεύντων, ἀνάστας Ἀντώνιος ἠρώτησεν εἰ δοκεῖ καὶ Πομπήϊον ὁμοῦ καὶ Καίσαρα τὰ ὄπλα καταθέσθαι καὶ τὰς δυνάμεις ἀφεῖναι. ταύτην ἐδέξαντο λαμπρῶς τὴν γνώμην ἅπαντες, καὶ μετὰ βοῆς ἐπαινοῦντες τὸν Ἀντώνιον ἠξίου ἐπιψηφίζεσθαι. μὴ βουλομένων δὲ τῶν ὑπάτων, αὐθις ἑτέρας οἱ Καίσαρος φίλοι προὔτειναν ἐπιεικεῖς εἶναι δοκούσας ἀξιώσεις, αἷς ὃ τε Κάτων ἀντέπιπτε καὶ Λέντλος ὑπατεύων ἐξέβαλε τῆς βουλῆς τὸν Ἀντώνιον. ὁ δὲ πολλὰ μὲν αὐτοῖς ἐξίων ἐπηράσατο, λαβὼν δὲ θεράποντος ἐσθήτα καὶ μισθωσάμενος μετὰ Κασσίου Κοῖντου ζεύγος, ἐξώρμησε πρὸς Καίσαρα· καὶ κατεβόων εὐθύς ὀφθέντες ὡς οὐδένα κόσμον ἔτι τῶν ἐν Ῥώμῃ πραγμάτων ἐχόντων, ὅτε μὴδὲ δημάρχους παρρησίας μέτεστιν, ἀλλ' ἐλαύνεται καὶ κινδυνεῖ πᾶς ὁ φθεγξάμενος ὑπὲρ τῶν δικαίων.

VI. Ἐκ τούτου λαβὼν τὴν στρατιὰν ὁ Καῖσαρ εἰς Ἰταλίαν ἐνέβαλε. διὸ καὶ Κικέρων ἐν τοῖς Φιλιππικοῖς ἔγραψε τοῦ μὲν Τρωϊκοῦ πολέμου τὴν Ἑλένην, τοῦ δ' ἐμφυλίου τὸν Ἀντώνιον ἀρχὴν
 2 γενέσθαι, περιφανῶς ψευδόμενος. οὐ γὰρ οὕτως εὐχερῆς ἦν οὐδὲ ῥάδιος ὑπ' ὀργῆς ἐκπεσεῖν τῶν λογισμῶν Γάιος Καῖσαρ ὥστε, εἰ μὴ ταῦτα πάλαι ἔγνωστο πράττειν, οὕτως ἂν ἐπὶ καιροῦ τὸν κατὰ

ANTONY

before the senate, one, whether Pompey should dismiss his forces, and the other, whether Caesar should do so, and only a few were for having Pompey lay down his arms, and all but a few were for having Caesar do so, then Antony rose and asked whether it was the opinion of the senate that Pompey and Caesar alike should lay down their arms and dismiss their forces. This proposal all accepted with alacrity, and with shouts of praise for Antony they demanded that the question be put to vote. But the consuls would not consent to this, and again the friends of Caesar put forward fresh demands which were thought to be reasonable. These Cato opposed, and Lentulus, in his capacity of consul, drove Antony from the senate. Antony went forth heaping many imprecations upon them, and putting on the dress of a slave, and hiring a car in company with Quintus Cassius, he set out to join Caesar. As soon as they came into Caesar's presence they cried loudly that everything was now at loose ends in Rome, since even tribunes of the people had no freedom of speech, but everyone who raised his voice in behalf of justice was persecuted and ran risk of his life.¹

VI. Upon this, Caesar took his army and invaded Italy. Therefore Cicero, in his "Philippics," wrote that as Helen was the cause of the Trojan war, so Antony was the cause of the civil war.² But this is manifestly false. For Caius Caesar was not a pliable man, nor easily led by anger to act on impulse. Therefore, had he not long ago determined upon his course, he would not thus, on the spur of the moment,

¹ For the events narrated in this chapter, cf. also the Pompey, lviii. f.; the Caesar, xxx. f.

² Phil. ii. 22, 55: ut Helena Trojanis, sic iste huic rei publicae belli causa, causa pestis atque exitii fuit.

τῆς πατρίδος ἐξενεγκεῖν πόλεμον, ὅτι φαύλως ἠμφισμένον εἶδεν Ἀντώνιον καὶ Κάσσιον ἐπὶ 3 ζεύγους μισθίου πεφευγότας πρὸς αὐτόν, ἀλλὰ ταῦτα πάλαι δεομένῳ προφάσεως σχῆμα καὶ λόγον εὐπρεπῆ τοῦ πολέμου παρέσχεν. ἦγε δὲ αὐτὸν ἐπὶ πάντα ἀνθρώπους ἃ καὶ πρότερον Ἀλέξανδρον καὶ πάλαι Κῦρον, ἔρωσ ἀπαρηγόρητος ἀρχῆς καὶ περιμανῆς ἐπιθυμία τοῦ πρῶτον εἶναι καὶ μέγιστον· ὧν τυχεῖν οὐκ ἦν μὴ Πομπηίου καταλυθέντος.

4 Ὡς δ' οὖν ἐπελθὼν ἐκράτησε τῆς Ῥώμης καὶ
 Πομπηίου ἐξήλασε τῆς Ἰταλίας καὶ πρὸς τὰς ἐν Ἰβηρία Πομπηίου δυνάμεις ἐπιστρέφειν ἔγνω πρότερον, εἶτα οὕτως παρασκευασάμενος στόλον ἐπὶ Πομπηίου διαβαίνει, Λεπίδῳ μὲν στρατηγοῦντι τὴν Ῥώμην, Ἀντωνίῳ δὲ δημαρχοῦντι τὰ 5 στρατεύματα καὶ τὴν Ἰταλίαν ἐπέτρεψεν. ὁ δὲ τοῖς μὲν στρατιώταις εὐθύς προσφιλεῖς ἦν συγγυμναζόμενος καὶ συνδιδαιτώμενος τὰ πολλὰ καὶ δωρούμενος ἐκ τῶν παρόντων, τοῖς δὲ ἄλλοις ἐπαχθής. καὶ γὰρ ἀδικουμένων ὑπὸ ῥαθυμίας ὀλιγῶρει, καὶ πρὸς ὀργὴν ἠκροῶτο τῶν ἐντυγχανόντων καὶ κακῶς ἐπὶ γυναῖξιν ἀλλοτρίαις 6 ἤκουε. καὶ ὅπως τὴν Καίσαρος ἀρχήν, πάντα μᾶλλον ἢ τυραννίδα δι' αὐτὸν ἐκείνον φανείσαν, οἱ φίλοι διέβαλλον, ὧν Ἀντώνιος ἀπ' ἐξουσίας μεγίστης ἀμαρτάνειν μέγιστα δόξας τὴν πλείστην αἰτίαν ἔλαβεν.

VII. Οὐ μὴν ἀλλ' ἐπανελθὼν ὁ Καίσαρ ἐκ τῆς Ἰβηρίας τὰ μὲν ἐγκλήματα παρείδεν αὐτοῦ, πρὸς δὲ τὸν πόλεμον ὡς ἐνεργῶ καὶ ἀνδρείῳ καὶ ἡγεμο- 919

ANTONY

have made war upon his country, just because he saw that Antony, meanly clad, with Cassius, on a hired car, had come in flight to him; nay, this merely afforded a cloak and a specious reason for war to a man who had long wanted a pretext for it. And that which led him to war against all mankind, as it had led Alexander before him, and Cyrus of old, was an insatiable love of power and a mad desire to be first and greatest; this he could not achieve if Pompey were not put down.

And so he came up against Rome and got it into his power, and drove Pompey out of Italy; and determining first to turn his efforts against the forces of Pompey which were in Spain, and afterwards, when he had got ready a fleet, to cross the sea against Pompey himself, he entrusted Rome to Lepidus, who was praetor, and Italy and the troops to Antony, who was tribune of the people. Antony at once gained the favour of the soldiers by sharing their exercises, living with them for the most part, and making them presents as generously as he could; but to everybody else he was odious. For his easy disposition led him to neglect the wronged, he listened angrily to those who consulted him, and he was in ill repute for his relations with other men's wives. In a word, Caesar's power, which proved to be anything rather than a tyranny so far as his own course was concerned, was brought into odium by his friends; and of these Antony, who had the greatest power and was thought to be the greatest transgressor, incurred the most blame.

VII. However, when Caesar came back from Spain, he ignored the charges against Antony, and since in the war he found him energetic, brave, and a νικῶ χρώμενος οὐδαμῇ διήμαρτεν. αὐτὸς μὲν οὖν μετ' ὀλίγων ἀπὸ Βρεντεσίου διαπεράσας τὸν Ἴονιον ἔπεμφεν ὀπίσω τὰ πλοῖα, Γαβινίῳ καὶ Ἀντωνίῳ τὰς δυνάμεις ἐμβιβάζειν καὶ περαιοῦν

 2 κατὰ τάχος εἰς Μακεδονίαν ἐπιστείλας. Γαβινίου δὲ πρὸς τὸν πλοῦν χαλεπὸν ὄντα χειμῶνος ὥρα καταδειλιάσαντος καὶ πεζῆ μακρὰν ὁδὸν περιάγοντος τὸν στρατόν, Ἀντώνιος ὑπὲρ Καίσαρος ἐν πολλοῖς ἀπειλημμένοι πολεμίοις φοβηθεῖς Λίβωνα μὲν ἐφορμοῦντα τῷ στόματι τοῦ λιμένος ἀπεκρούσατο, πολλὰ τῶν λεπτῶν ἀκατίων ταῖς τριήρεσιν αὐτοῦ περιστήσας, ἐμβιβάσας δὲ ταῖς ναυσὶν ἵππεῖς ὀκτακοσίους καὶ δισμυρίους
 3 ὀπλίτας ἀνήχθη. καὶ γενόμενος καταφανῆς τοῖς πολεμίοις καὶ διωκόμενος τὸν μὲν ἐκ τούτων κίνδυνον διέφυγε, λαμπροῦ νότου κύμα μέγα καὶ κοίλην θάλατταν ταῖς τριήρεσιν αὐτῶν περιστήσαντος, ἐκφερόμενος δὲ ταῖς ναυσὶ πρὸς κρημνοὺς καὶ φάραγγας ἀγχιβαθεῖς οὐδεμίαν ἐλπίδα σωτηρίας εἶχεν.
 4 ἄφνω δὲ τοῦ κόλπου πολὺν ἐκπνεύσαντος λίβα, καὶ τοῦ κλύδωνος ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς εἰς τὸ πέλαγος διαχεομένου, μεταβαλλόμενος ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς καὶ πλέων σοβαρῶς ὥρᾳ ναυαγίων περιπλεων τὸν αἰγιαλόν. ἐνταῦθα γὰρ ἐξέβαλε τὸ πνεῦμα τὰς διωκούσας αὐτὸν τριήρεις, καὶ διεφθάρησαν οὐκ ὀλίγαι καὶ σωμάτων πολλῶν καὶ χρημάτων ἐκράτησεν Ἀντώνιος, καὶ Λίσσον εἶλε, καὶ μέγα Καίσαρι παρέσχε θάρσος ἐν καιρῷ μετὰ τηλικαύτης ἀφικόμενος δυνάμεως.

VIII. Πολλῶν δὲ γινομένων καὶ συνεχῶν ἀγῶνων ἐν πᾶσι μὲν ἦν διαπρεπής, δις δὲ φεύγοντας προτροπάδην τοὺς Καίσαρος ἀπαντήσας ἀνέ-capable leader, he made no mistake. Caesar himself, then, after crossing the Ionian sea from Brundisium with a few soldiers,¹ sent back his transports with orders to Gabinius and Antony to embark their forces and come with all speed into Macedonia. But Gabinius was afraid to make the voyage, which was difficult in the winter time, and started to lead his army a long way round by land. Antony, therefore, fearing for Caesar, who was hemmed in among numerous enemies, beat off Libo, who was blockading the harbour of Brundisium, by surrounding his galleys with a great number of small skiffs, and then, embarking eight hundred horsemen and twenty thousand legionaries, put to sea. Being discovered by the enemy and pursued, he escaped the danger from them, since a violent south wind brought a heavy swell and put their galleys in the trough of the sea; but he was carried with his own ships towards a precipitous and craggy shore, and had no hope of escape. Suddenly, however, there blew from the bay a strong south-west wind, and the swell began to run from the land out to sea, so that he was able to reverse his course, and, as he sailed gallantly along, he saw the shore covered with wrecks. For there the wind had cast up the galleys which were in pursuit of him, and many of them had been destroyed. Antony took many prisoners and much booty, captured Lissus, and inspired Caesar with great confidence by arriving in the nick of time with so large a force.

ANTONY

VIII. The struggles which followed were many and continuous, and in all of them Antony distinguished himself. Twice, when Caesar's men were

¹ Early in 48 B.C. Cf. the Caesar, xxxvii. 2.

στρεψε καὶ στήναι καὶ συμβαλεῖν αὐθις τοῖς διώκουσιν ἀναγκάσας ἐνίκησεν. ἦν οὖν αὐτοῦ μετὰ
 2 Καίσαρα πλείστος ἐν τῷ στρατοπέδῳ λόγος· ἐδήλωσε δὲ Καίσαρ ἦν ἔχοι περὶ αὐτοῦ δόξαν. ἐπεὶ γὰρ ἔμελλε τὴν τελευταίαν καὶ τὰ ὄλα κρίνασαν ἐν Φαρσάλῳ μάχην μάχεσθαι, τὸ μὲν δεξιὸν αὐτὸς εἶχε κέρας, τοῦ δ' εὐωνύμου τὴν ἡγεμονίαν Ἀντωνίῳ παρέδωκεν, ὡς πολεμικωτάτῳ τῶν ὑφ' αὐτῷ.
 3 μετὰ δὲ τὴν νίκην δικτάτωρ ἀναγορευθεὶς αὐτὸς μὲν ἐδίωκε Πομπήϊον, Ἀντώνιον δὲ ἵππαρχον ἐλόμενος εἰς Ῥώμην ἔπεμψεν. ἔστι δὲ ἡ ἀρχὴ δευτέρα τοῦ δικτάτορος παρόντος· ἂν δὲ μὴ παρῆ, πρώτη καὶ μόνη σχεδόν· ἡ γὰρ δημαρχία διαμένει, τὰς δὲ ἄλλας καταλύουσι πάσας δικτάτορος αἰρεθέντος.

IX. Οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ τότε δημαρχῶν Δολοβέλλας, νέος ἀνὴρ καὶ νέων πραγμάτων ὀρεγόμενος, εἰσηγείτο χρεῶν ἀποκοπίας, καὶ τὸν Ἀντώνιον αὐτῷ τε φίλον ὄντα καὶ βουλόμενον αἰεὶ τοῖς πολλοῖς ἀρέσκειν ἔπειθε συμπράττειν καὶ κοινωνεῖν τοῦ πολιτεύματος. Ἀσινίου δὲ καὶ Τρεβελλίου τὰναντία παρακαλούντων ὑπόνοια δεινὴ κατὰ τύχην τῷ Ἀντωνίῳ προσέπεσεν ὡς ἀδικουμένῳ περὶ τὸν γάμον ὑπὸ τοῦ Δολοβέλλα. καὶ τὸ πρᾶγμα βαρέως ἐνεγκὼν τὴν τε γυναῖκα τῆς οἰκίας ἐξήλασεν ἀνεψιᾶν οὖσαν αὐτοῦ (θυγάτηρ γὰρ ἦν Γαίου Ἀντωνίου τοῦ Κικέρωνι συνυπατεύσαντος), καὶ τοὺς περὶ Ἀσίνιον δεξάμενος ἐπολέμει τῷ Δολοβέλλῳ. κατέλαβε γὰρ τὴν ἀγορὰν ἐκείνος ὡς βία κυρώσων τὸν νόμον. Ἀντώνιος δέ, καὶ τῆς βουλῆς ψηφισαμένης ὄπλων δεῖν ἐπὶ τὸν in headlong flight, he met them, turned them back, forced them to stand and engage again their pursuers, and won the victory. Accordingly, next to Caesar, he was the man most talked about in the camp. And Caesar showed plainly what opinion he had of him. For when he was about to fight the last and all-decisive battle at Pharsalus, he himself took the right wing, but he gave the command of the left to Antony, as the most capable officer under him. And after the victory, when he had been proclaimed dictator, he himself pursued Pompey, but he chose Antony as his Master of Horse and sent him to Rome. This office is second in rank when the dictator is in the city; but when he is absent, it is the first and almost the only one. For only the tribuneship continues when a dictator has been chosen; all the other offices are abolished.

ANTONY

IX. However, Dolabella, who was tribune at this time—a newcomer in politics who aimed at a new order of things, introduced a law for the abolition of debts, and tried to persuade Antony, who was his friend and always sought to please the multitude, to take common action with him in the measure. But Asinius and Trebellius advised Antony to the contrary, and, as chance would have it, a dire suspicion fell upon him that he was wronged as a husband by Dolabella. Antony took the matter much to heart, drove his wife from his house (she was his cousin, being a daughter of the Caius Antonius who was Cicero's colleague in the consulship), made common cause with Asinius and Trebellius, and waged war upon Dolabella. For Dolabella had occupied the forum in order to force the passage of his law; so Antony, after the senate had voted that arms

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Δολοβέλλαν, ἐπελθὼν καὶ μάχην συνάψας ἀπέ-κτεινέ τέ τινας τῶν ἐκείνου καὶ τῶν ιδίων ἀπέ-3 βαλε. τοῖς μὲν οὖν πολλοῖς ἐκ τούτων ἀπηχθά-νετο, τοῖς δὲ χρηστοῖς καὶ σώφροσι διὰ τὸν ἄλλον βίον οὐκ ἦν ἄρεστός, ὡς Κικέρων φησὶν, ἀλλ' ἐμισεῖτο, βδελυττομένων αὐτοῦ μέθας ἀώρους καὶ δαπάνας ἐπαχθεῖς καὶ κυλινδήσεις ἐν γυναίοις, 920 καὶ μεθ' ἡμέραν μὲν ὕπνους καὶ περιπάτους ἀλύ-οντος καὶ κραιπαλῶντος, νύκτωρ δὲ κώμους καὶ θέατρα καὶ διατριβὰς ἐν γάμοις μίμων καὶ γελω-4 τοποιῶν. λέγεται γοῦν, ὡς ἐν Ἰππίου ποτὲ τοῦ μίμου γάμοις ἐστιαθεὶς καὶ πιὼν διὰ νυκτός, εἶτα πρῶτ' τοῦ δήμου καλοῦντος εἰς ἀγορὰν προελθὼν ἔτι τροφῆς μεστὸς ἐμέσειε, τῶν φίλων τινὸς ὑποσχόντος τὸ ἱμάτιον. ἦν δὲ καὶ Σέργιος ὁ μῖμος τῶν μέγιστον παρ' αὐτῷ δυναμένων, καὶ Κυθηρὶς ἀπὸ τῆς αὐτῆς παλαίστρας γύναιον ἀγαπώμενον, ὃ δὴ καὶ τὰς πόλεις ἐπιὼν ἐν φορείῳ περιήγετο, καὶ τὸ φορεῖον οὐκ ἐλάττους ἢ τὸ τῆς μητρὸς αὐ-5 τοῦ περιέποντες ἠκολούθουν. ἐλύπουν δὲ καὶ χρυσῶν ἐκπωμάτων ὥσπερ ἐν πομπαῖς ταῖς ἀπο-δημίαις διαφερομένων ὄψεις, καὶ στάσεις ἐνόδιοι σκηνῶν, καὶ πρὸς ἄλσεσι καὶ ποταμοῖς ἀρίστων πολυτελῶν διαθέσεις, καὶ λέοντες ἄρμασιν ὑπεζευγμένοι, καὶ σωφρόνων ἀνδρῶν καὶ γυναικῶν οἰκίαι χαμαιτύπαις καὶ σαμβυκιστρίαις ἐπισταθ-6 μενόμεναι. δεινὸν γὰρ ἐποιοῦντο Καίσαρα μὲν αὐτὸν ἔξω τῆς Ἰταλίας θυραυλεῖν, τὰ περιόντα

ANTONY

must be employed against Dolabella, came up against him, joined battle, slew some of his men, and lost some of his own. This course naturally made him odious to the multitude, and to men of worth and uprightness he was not acceptable because of his life in general, as Cicero says,¹ nay, he was hated by them. They loathed his ill-timed drunkenness, his heavy expenditures, his debauches with women, his spending the days in sleep or in wandering about with crazed and aching head, the nights in revelry or at shows, or in attendance at the nuptial feasts of mimes and jesters. We are told, at any rate, that he once feasted at the nuptials of Hippias the mime, drank all night, and then, early in the morning, when the people summoned him to the forum, came before them still surfeited with food and vomited into his toga, which one of his friends held at his service. Sergius the mime also was one of those who had the greatest influence with him, and Cytheris, a woman from the same school of acting, a great favourite, whom he took about with him in a litter on his visits to the cities, and her litter was followed by as many attendants as that of his mother. Moreover, people were vexed at the sight of golden beakers borne about on his excursions from the city as in sacred processions, at the pitching of tents when he travelled, at the laying out of costly repasts near groves and rivers, at chariots drawn by lions, and at the use of honest men and women's houses as quarters for harlots and psaltery-players. For it was thought a monstrous thing that, while Caesar himself was lodging under the skies outside of Italy

¹ The second Philippic pictures Antony's excesses.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

τοῦ πολέμου μεγάλοις πόνοις καὶ κινδύνοις ἀνακαθαιρόμενον, ἑτέροισ δὲ δι' ἐκείνον τρυφᾶν τοῖς πολίταις ἐνυβρίζοντας.

- Χ. Ταῦτα καὶ τὴν στάσιν αὐξήσαι δοκεῖ καὶ τὸ στρατιωτικὸν εἰς ὕβρεις δεινὰς καὶ πλεονεξίας ἀνεῖναι. διὸ καὶ Καῖσαρ ἐπανελθὼν Δολοβέλλα τε συγγνώμην ἔδωκε, καὶ τὸ τρίτον αἰρεθεὶς ὕπατος οὐκ Ἀντώνιον, ἀλλὰ Λέπιδον εἴλετο συνάρχοντα. τὴν δὲ Πομπηίου πωλουμένην οἰκίαν ὠνήσατο μὲν Ἀντώνιος, ἀπαιτούμενος δὲ τὴν τιμὴν ἠγανάκτει· καὶ φησιν αὐτὸς διὰ τοῦτο μὴ μετασχεῖν Καίσαρι τῆς εἰς Λιβύην στρατείας, ἐπὶ τοῖς προτέροις κατορθώμασιν οὐ τυχὼν ἀμοιβῆς. ἔοικε μέντοι τὸ πολὺ τῆς ἀβελτερίας αὐτοῦ καὶ ἀσωτίας ἀφελεῖν ὁ Καῖσαρ, οὐκ ἀναισθήτως
- 3 τὰ πλημμελήματα δεξάμενος. ἀπαλλαγεῖς γὰρ ἐκείνου τοῦ βίου γάμφῳ προσέσχε, Φουλβίαν ἀγαγόμενος τὴν Κλωδίῳ τῷ δημαγωγῷ συνοικήσασαν, οὐ ταλασίαν οὐδὲ οἰκουρίαν φρονοῦν γύναιον, οὐδὲ ἀνδρὸς ἰδιώτου κρατεῖν ἀξιοῦν, ἀλλ' ἄρχοντος ἄρχειν καὶ στρατηγούντος στρατηγεῖν βουλόμενον, ὥστε Κλεοπάτραν διδασκάλια Φουλβία τῆς Ἀντωνίου γυναικοκρατίας ὀφείλειν, πάνυ χειροῦθη καὶ πεπαιδαγωγημένον ἀπ' ἀρχῆς ἀκροᾶσθαι γυναικῶν παραλαβοῦσαν αὐτόν.
- 4 Οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ κάκεινην ἐπειράτο προσπαίξων καὶ μεираκιενόμενος ἰλαρωτέραν ποιεῖν ὁ Ἀντώνιος· οἶον ὅτε, Καίσαρι πολλῶν ἀπαντῶντων μετὰ τὴν ἐν Ἰβηρίᾳ νίκην, καὶ αὐτὸς ἐξῆλθεν. εἶτα and clearing away the remnants of the war at great toil and peril, his adherents, by virtue of his efforts, should revel in luxury and mock at their fellow citizens.

ANTONY

X. These things are also thought to have augmented the discord, and to have incited the soldiery to deeds of violence and rapacity. For this reason, too, when Caesar came back, he pardoned Dolabella, and, on being chosen consul for the third time, selected Lepidus as his colleague, and not Antony. The house of Pompey, when put up for sale, was bought by Antony; but when he was asked to pay the price for it, he was indignant. And he says himself that this was the reason why he did not go with Caesar on his African campaign, since he got no recompense for his previous successes. However, it would seem that Caesar cured him of most of his prodigality and folly by not allowing his errors to pass unnoticed. For Antony put away his reprehensible way of living, and turned his thoughts to marriage, taking to wife Fulvia, the widow of Clodius the demagogue. She was a woman who took no thought for spinning or housekeeping, nor would she deign to bear sway over a man of private station, but she wished to rule a ruler and command a commander. Therefore Cleopatra was indebted to Fulvia for teaching Antony to endure a woman's sway, since she took him over quite tamed, and schooled at the outset to obey women.

However, Antony tried, by sportive ways and youthful sallies, to make even Fulvia more light-hearted. For instance, when many were going out to meet Caesar after his victory in Spain, Antony himself went forth. Then, on a sudden, a report ἄφνω φήμης εἰς τὴν Ἰταλίαν ἐμπεσούσης ὡς ἐπ-ίασιν οἱ πολέμοιοι Καίσαρος τεθνηκότος, ἀνέστρεψεν εἰς Ῥώμην. λαβὼν δὲ θεράποντος ἐσθήτα νύκτωρ ἐπὶ τὴν οἰκίαν ἦλθε, καὶ φήσας ἐπιστολὴν Φουλβία παρ' Ἀντωνίου κομίζειν εἰσήχθη πρὸς 5 αὐτὴν ἐγκεκαλυμμένος. εἶτα ἢ μὲν ἐκπαθῆς οὔσα, πρὶν ἢ τὰ γράμματα λαβεῖν ἠρώτησεν εἰ ζῆ ὁ Ἀντώνιος· ὁ δὲ τὴν ἐπιστολὴν σιωπῇ προτείνας ἀρξαμένην λύειν καὶ ἀναγινώσκειν περιβαλὼν κατεφίλησε.

Ταῦτα μὲν οὖν ὀλίγα πολλῶν ὄντων ἔνεκα δείγματος ἐξεννόχασεν.

XI. Ἐκ δὲ Ἰβηρίας ἐπανιόντι Καίσαρι πάντες μὲν οἱ πρῶτοι πολλῶν ἡμερῶν ὁδὸν ἀπῆντων, ἐτιμήθη δὲ Ἀντώνιος ἐκπρεπῶς ὑπ' αὐτοῦ. κομιζόμενος γὰρ ἐπὶ ζεύγους διὰ τῆς Ἰταλίας Ἀντώνιον εἶχε μεθ' ἑαυτοῦ συνοχούμενον, ὅπισθεν δὲ Βρούτου Ἀλβίνου καὶ τὸν τῆς ἀδελφιδῆς υἱὸν
 Ὀκταουιανόν, ὃς μετὰ ταῦτα Καίσαρ ὠνομάσθη 921
 2 καὶ Ῥωμαίων ἤρξε πλείστου χρόνου. ἐπεὶ δὲ τὸ πέμπτον ἀπεδείχθη Καίσαρ ὑπάτος, προσείλετο μὲν εὐθὺς συνάρχοντα τὸν Ἀντώνιον, ἐβούλετο δὲ τὴν ἀρχὴν ἀπειπάμενος Δολοβέλλα παρεγ-γυῆσαι· καὶ τοῦτο πρὸς τὴν σύγκλητον ἐξήνεγκεν. Ἀντωνίου δὲ τραχέως ἀντιπεσόντος καὶ πολλὰ μὲν εἰπόντος κακὰ Δολοβέλλαν, οὐκ ἐλάττονα δὲ ἀκούσαντος, τότε μὲν αἰσχυνθεὶς τὴν 3 ἀκοσμίαν ὁ Καίσαρ ἀπηλλάγη. μετὰ δὲ ταῦτα προελθὼν ἀναγορεῦσαι τὸν Δολοβέλλαν, Ἀντωνίου τοὺς οἰωνοὺς ἐναντιοῦσθαι βοῶντος, εἶξε καὶ προήκατο Δολοβέλλαν ἀχθόμενον. ἐδόκει burst upon Italy that Caesar was dead and his enemies advancing upon the country, and Antony turned back to Rome. He took the dress of a slave and came by night to his house, and on saying that he was the bearer of a letter to Fulvia from Antony, was admitted to her presence, his face all muffled. Then Fulvia, in great distress, before taking the letter, asked whether Antony was still alive; and he, after handing her the letter without a word, as she began to open and read it, threw his arms about her and kissed her.

ANTONY

These few details, then, out of many, I have adduced by way of illustration.

XI. When Caesar returned from Spain,¹ all the principal men went many days' journey to meet him, but it was Antony who was conspicuously honoured by him. For as he journeyed through Italy he had Antony in the same car with himself, but behind him Brutus Albinus, and Octavius, his niece's son, who was afterwards named Caesar and ruled Rome for a very long time. Moreover, when Caesar had for the fifth time been appointed consul, he immediately chose Antony as his colleague. It was his purpose also to resign his own office and make it over to Dolabella; and he proposed this to the senate. But since Antony vehemently opposed the plan, heaped much abuse upon Dolabella, and received as much in return, for the time being Caesar desisted, being ashamed of their unseemly conduct. And afterwards, when Caesar came before the people to proclaim Dolabella, Antony shouted that the omens were opposed. Caesar therefore yielded, and gave up Dolabella, who was much annoyed. And it

¹ In 45 B.C.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

δὲ κάκεινον οὐδὲν ἤττον τοῦ Ἀντωνίου βδελύττεσθαι. λέγεται γὰρ ὡς, ἀμφοτέρους τινὸς ὁμοῦ διαβάλλοντος πρὸς αὐτόν, εἶποι, μὴ δεδιέναι τοὺς παχείς τούτους καὶ κομήτας, ἀλλὰ τοὺς ὠχροὺς καὶ λεπτοὺς ἐκείνους; Βρούτον καὶ Κάσσιον ἀποδεικνύμενος,¹ ὑφ' ὧν ἔμελλεν ἐπιβουλευθεὶς ἀναιρεῖσθαι.

XII. Κάκεινοις δὲ τὴν εὐπρεπεστάτην πρόφασιν ἄκων παρεσχεν Ἀντώνιος. ἦν μὲν γὰρ ἡ τῶν Λυκαίων ἑορτὴ Ῥωμαίοις, ἦν Λουπερκάλια καλοῦσι, Καῖσαρ δὲ κεκοσμημένος ἐσθῆτι θριαμ-βικῇ καὶ καθήμενος ὑπὲρ βήματος ἐν ἀγορᾷ τοὺς διαθέοντας ἐθεᾶτο· διαθέουσι δὲ τῶν εὐγενῶν νέοι πολλοὶ καὶ τῶν ἀρχόντων, ἀηλιμμένοι λίπα, σκύτεσι λασίοις καθικνούμενοι μετὰ παι-2 διαῖς τῶν ἐντυγχανόντων. ἐν τούτοις ὁ Ἀντώνιος διαθέων τὰ μὲν πάτρια χαίρειν εἶασε, διάδημα δὲ δάφνης στεφάνῳ περιελίξας προσέδραμε τῷ βήματι, καὶ συνεξαρθεὶς ὑπὸ τῶν συνθέοντων ἐπέθηκε τῇ κεφαλῇ τοῦ Καίσαρος, ὡς δὴ βασιλεύειν αὐτῷ προσήκον. ἐκείνου δὲ θρυπτομένου καὶ διακλίνοντος ἤσθεις ὁ δῆμος ἀνεκρό-3 τησε· καὶ πάλιν ὁ Ἀντώνιος ἐπήγε, καὶ πάλιν ἐκείνος ἀπετρίβετο. καὶ πολὺν χρόνον οὕτω διαμαχομένων Ἀντωνίῳ μὲν ὀλίγοι τῶν φίλων βιαζομένων, Καίσαρι δὲ ἀρνούμενῳ πᾶς ὁ δῆμος ἐπεκρότει μετὰ βοῆς· ὃ καὶ θαυμαστὸν ἦν, ὅτι τοῖς ἔργοις τὰ τῶν βασιλευομένων ὑπομένοντες τοῦνομα τοῦ βασιλέως ὡς κατάλυσιν τῆς ἐλευ-

¹ ἀποδεικνύμενος Coraës and Sintenis, after the Aldine edition; Bekker omits, with the MSS. In the Morals, p. 206 F, Plutarch has δέξας.

ANTONY

would seem that Caesar abominated Dolabella also no less than he did Antony. For we are told that when a certain man was accusing both of them to him, he said he had no fear of those fat and long-haired fellows, but rather of those pale and thin ones, indicating Brutus and Cassius, by whom he was to be conspired against and slain.¹

XII. And it was Antony who also unwittingly supplied the conspirators with their most specious pretext. For at the festival of the Lycaea, which the Romans call Lupercalia, Caesar, arrayed in a triumphal robe and seated in the forum upon the rostra, was viewing the runners to and fro. Now, the runners to and fro are many noble youths and many of the magistrates, anointed with oil, and with leathern thongs they strike in sport those whom they meet. Antony was one of these runners, but he gave the ancient usages the go-by, and twining a wreath of laurel round a diadem, he ran with it to the rostra, where he was lifted on high by his fellow runners and put it on the head of Caesar, thus intimating that he ought to be king. When Caesar with affected modesty declined the diadem, the people were delighted and clapped their hands. Again Antony tried to put the diadem on Caesar's head, and again Caesar pushed it away. This contest went on for some time, a few of Antony's friends applauding his efforts to force the diadem upon Caesar, but all the people applauding with loud cries when Caesar refused it. And this was strange, too, that while the people were willing to conduct themselves like the subjects of a king, they shunned the name of king as though it meant the abolition of

¹ Cf. the Caesar, lxii. 5; the Brutus, viii. 1.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

4 θερίας ἔφευγον. ἀνέστη μὲν οὖν ὁ Καῖσαρ ἀχθεσθεὶς ἀπὸ τοῦ βήματος, καὶ τὸ ἱμάτιον ἀπάγων ἀπὸ τοῦ τραχήλου τῷ βουλομένῳ παρέχειν τὴν σφαγὴν ἐβόα. τὸν δὲ στέφανον ἐνὶ τῶν ἀνδριάντων αὐτοῦ περιτεθέντα δήμαρχοί τινες κατέσπασαν, οὓς ὁ δῆμος εὐφημῶν μετὰ κρότου παρείπετο, Καῖσαρ δὲ τῆς ἀρχῆς ἀπέστησεν.

XIII. Ταῦτα τοὺς περὶ Βροῦτον καὶ Κάσιον ἐπέρρωσε· καὶ τῶν φίλων τοὺς πιστοὺς καταλέγοντες ἐπὶ τὴν πρᾶξι ἐσκέπτοντο περὶ Ἀντωνίου. τῶν δὲ ἄλλων προσιεμένων τὸν ἄνδρα Τρεβώνιος ἀντεῖπεν· ἔφη γὰρ ὑφ' ὃν χρόνον ἀπήντων ἐξ Ἰβηρίας ἐπανίοντι Καίσαρι, τοῦ Ἀντωνίου συσκηνοῦντος αὐτῷ καὶ συνοδεύοντος, ἄψασθαι τῆς γνώμης ἀτρέμα πως καὶ μετ' εὐλαβείας, τὸν δὲ νοῆσαι μὲν, οὐ δέξασθαι δὲ τὴν πείραν, οὐ μὴν οὐδὲ πρὸς Καίσαρα κατειπεῖν, 2 ἀλλὰ πιστῶς κατασιωπῆσαι τὸν λόγον. ἐκ τούτου πάλιν ἐβουλεύοντο Καίσαρα κτείναντες ἐπισφάττειν Ἀντώνιον· ἐκώλυσε δὲ Βρούτος, ἀξιῶν τὴν ὑπὲρ τῶν νόμων καὶ τῶν δικαίων τολμωμένην πρᾶξιν εἰλικρινῆ καὶ καθαρὰν ἀδικίας εἶναι. φοβούμενοι δὲ τὴν τε ρώμην τοῦ Ἀντωνίου καὶ τὸ τῆς ἀρχῆς ἀξίωμα, τάττουσιν ἐπ' αὐτὸν ἐνίους τῶν ἐκ τῆς συνωμοσίας, ὅπως, ὅταν εἰσὶν Καῖσαρ εἰς τὴν βουλὴν καὶ μέλλῃ δράσθαι τὸ ἔργον, ἔξω διαλεγόμενοί τι καὶ σπουδάζοντες κατέχωσιν αὐτόν.

ANTONY

their freedom. At last Caesar rose from the rostra in displeasure, and pulling back the toga from his throat cried out that any one who pleased might smite him there. The wreath, which had been hung upon one of his statues, certain tribunes of the people tore down. These men the people greeted with favouring cries and clapping of hands; but Caesar deprived them of their office.¹

XIII. This incident strengthened the party of Brutus and Cassius; and when they were taking count of the friends whom they could trust for their enterprise, they raised a question about Antony. The rest were for making him one of them, but Trebonius opposed it. For, he said, while people were going out to meet Caesar on his return from Spain, Antony had travelled with him and shared his tent, and he had sounded him quietly and cautiously; Antony had understood him, he said, but had not responded to his advances; Antony had not, however, reported the conversation to Caesar, but had faithfully kept silence about it. Upon this, the conspirators again took counsel to kill Antony after they had slain Caesar; but Brutus prevented this, urging that the deed adventured in behalf of law and justice must be pure and free from injustice. But the conspirators were afraid of Antony's strength, and of the consideration which his office gave him, and therefore appointed some of their number to look out for him, in order that, when Caesar entered the senate-chamber and their deed was about to be done, they might engage Antony outside in conversation about some urgent matter and detain him there.

¹ Cf. the Caesar, chapter lxi.

- XIV. Τούτων δὲ πραττομένων ὡς συνετέθη, καὶ πεσόντος ἐν τῇ βουλῇ τοῦ Καίσαρος, εὐθύς μὲν ὁ Ἀντώνιος ἐσθήτα θεράποντος μεταλαβὼν ἔκρυψεν αὐτόν. ὡς δ' ἔγνω τοὺς ἄνδρας ἐπιχειροῦντας μὲν οὐδενί, συνηθροισμένους δὲ εἰς τὸ Καπιτώλιον, ἔπεισε καταβῆναι λαβόντας ὄμηρον παρ' αὐτοῦ τὸν υἱόν· καὶ Κάσσιον μὲν αὐτὸς 2 ἐδείπνισε, Βρούτου δὲ Λέπιδος. συναγαγὼν δὲ 922 βουλὴν αὐτὸς μὲν ὑπὲρ ἀμνηστίας εἶπε καὶ διανομῆς ἐπαρχιῶν τοῖς περὶ Κάσσιον καὶ Βρούτου, ἡ δὲ σύγκλητος ἐκύρωσε ταῦτα καὶ τῶν ὑπὸ Καίσαρος γεγονότων ἐψηφίσαντο μηδὲν ἀλλάττειν. ἐξῆι δὲ τῆς βουλῆς λαμπρότατος ἀνθρώπων ὁ Ἀντώνιος, ἀνηρηκέαι δοκῶν ἐμφύλιον πόλεμον καὶ πράγμασι δυσκολίας ἔχουσι καὶ ταραχὰς οὐ τὰς τυχοῦσας ἐμφρονέστατα κεχρηῆσθαι καὶ πολιτικώτατα.
- 3 Τούτων μέντοι ταχὺ τῶν λογισμῶν ἐξέσεισεν αὐτόν ἢ παρὰ τῶν ὄχλων δόξα, πρῶτον ἐλπίσαντα βεβαίως ἔσεσθαι Βρούτου καταλυθέντος. ἔτυχε μὲν οὖν ἐκκομιζομένου Καίσαρος, ὥσπερ ἔθος ἦν, ἐν ἀγορᾷ διεξιὼν ἐγκώμιον· ὁρῶν δὲ τὸν δῆμον ὑπερφυῶς ἀγόμενον καὶ κηλούμενον ἐνέμιξε τοῖς ἐπαίνοις οἶκτον ἅμα καὶ δεινῶσιν ἐπὶ τῷ πάθει, καὶ τῷ λόγῳ τελευτῶντι¹ τοὺς τε χιτωνίσκους τοῦ τεθνηκότος ἤμαγμένους καὶ διακεκομ- 4 μένους τοῖς ξίφεσιν ἀνασειῶν, καὶ τοὺς εἰργασμένους ταῦτα καλῶν παλαμναίους καὶ ἀνδροφόνους, τοσοῦτον ὀργῆς ἐνέβαλε τοῖς ἀνθρώποις ὥστε τὸ

¹ τῷ λόγῳ τελευτῶντι Sintenis, after Bryan; τελευτῶν Bekker, with the MSS., bracketing τῷ λόγῳ; καὶ τῶν λόγων τελευτῶν Coraës; καὶ τῷ λόγῳ. Τελευτῶν τε τοὺς χιτωνίσκους κτλ. Stephanus.

ANTONY

XIV. This was done as planned, and Caesar fell in the senate-chamber. At once, then, Antony put on the dress of a slave and hid himself. But when he learned that the conspirators were laying hands upon nobody, but were merely assembled together on the Capitol, he persuaded them to come down by giving them his son as hostage; moreover, he himself entertained Cassius, and Lepidus entertained Brutus. Besides, he called the senate together and spoke in favour of amnesty and a distribution of provinces among Brutus and Cassius and their partisans, and the senate ratified this proposal, and voted that no change should be made in what Caesar had done.¹ So Antony went out of the senate the most illustrious of men; for he was thought to have put an end to civil war, and to have handled matters involving great difficulty and extraordinary confusion in a most prudent and statesmanlike manner.

From such considerations as these, however, he was soon shaken by the repute in which he stood with the multitude, and he had hopes that he would surely be first in the state if Brutus were overthrown. Now, it happened that when Caesar's body was carried forth for burial, Antony pronounced the customary eulogy over it in the forum. And when he saw that the people were mightily swayed and charmed by his words, he mingled with his praises sorrow and indignation over the dreadful deed, and at the close of his speech shook on high the garments of the dead, all bloody and tattered by the swords as they were, called those who had wrought such work villains and murderers, and inspired his hearers with μὲν σῶμα τοῦ Καίσαρος ἐν ἀγορᾷ καθαγίσαι, συνενεγκαμένους τὰ βάθρα καὶ τὰς τραπέζας, ἀρπάζοντας δὲ τοὺς ἀπὸ τῆς πυρᾶς δαλοὺς ἐπὶ τὰς οἰκίας θεῖν τῶν ἀπεκτονότων καὶ προσμάχεσθαι.

¹ Cf. the Caesar, lxvii, 4; the Brutus, xix, 3.

XV. Διὰ ταῦτα τῶν περὶ Βρούτου ἐκ τῆς πόλεως ἀπελθόντων οἳ τε φίλοι τοῦ Καίσαρος συνίσταντο πρὸς τὸν Ἀντώνιον, ἧ τε γυνὴ Καλπουρνία πιστεύασα τῶν χρημάτων τὰ πλείστα κατέθετο πρὸς αὐτὸν ἐκ τῆς οἰκίας, εἰς λόγον τὰ σύμπαντα τετρακισχιλίων τάλαντων.
 2 ἔλαβε δὲ καὶ τὰ βιβλία τοῦ Καίσαρος, ἐν οἷς ὑπομνήματα τῶν κεκριμένων καὶ δεδογμένων ἦν ἀναγεγραμμένα· καὶ τούτοις παρεγγράφων οὐς ἐβούλετο, πολλοὺς μὲν ἄρχοντας ἀπεδείκνυε, πολλοὺς δὲ βουλευτάς, ἐνίους δὲ καὶ κατήγηε πεφύγαδευμένους καὶ καθειργμένους ἔλυνε, ὡς
 3 δὴ ταῦτα τῷ Καίσαρι δόξαντα. διὸ τούτους ἅπαντας ἐπισκώπτοντες οἱ Ῥωμαῖοι Χαρωνίτας ἐκάλουν· ἐλεγχόμενοι γὰρ εἰς τοὺς τοῦ νεκροῦ κατέφευγον ὑπομνηματισμούς. καὶ τᾶλλα δὲ ἔπραττεν αὐτοκρατορικῶς ὁ Ἀντώνιος, αὐτὸς μὲν ὑπατεύων, τοὺς δὲ ἀδελφούς ἔχων συνάρχοντας, Γάϊον μὲν στρατηγόν, Λεύκιον δὲ δήμαρχον.

XVI. Ἐνταῦθα δὲ τῶν πραγμάτων ὄντων ὁ νέος ἀφικνεῖται Καῖσαρ εἰς Ῥώμην, ἀδελφιδῆς μὲν ὦν τοῦ τεθνηκότος υἱός, ὡς εἴρηται, κληρονόμος δὲ τῆς οὐσίας ἀπολελειμμένος, ἐν Ἀπολλωνίᾳ δὲ διατρίβων ὑφ' ὃν χρόνον ἀνήρητο Καῖσαρ. οὗτος εὐθύς Ἀντώνιον, ὡς δὴ πατρῶον φίλον, ἀσπασάμενος τῶν παρακαταθηκῶν ἐμέμνητο. καὶ γὰρ ὠφείλε Ῥωμαίων ἐκάστῳ δραχμὰς such rage that they heaped together benches and tables and burned Caesar's body in the forum, and then, snatching the blazing faggots from the pyre, ran to the houses of the assassins and assaulted them.¹

ANTONY

XV. On account of these things Brutus and his associates left the city, the friends of Caesar united in support of Antony, and Caesar's wife, Calpurnia, putting confidence in Antony, took most of the treasure from Caesar's house and put it in his charge; it amounted in all to four thousand talents. Antony received also the papers of Caesar, in which there were written memoranda of his decisions and decrees; and making insertions in these, he appointed many magistrates and many senators according to his own wishes. He also brought some men back from exile, and released others from prison, as though Caesar had decided upon all this. Wherefore the Romans in mockery called all such men Charonitæ; ² for when put to the test they appealed to the memoranda of the dead. And Antony managed everything else in autocratic fashion, being consul himself, and having his brothers in office at the same time, Caius as praetor, and Lucius as tribune of the people.

XVI. At this state of affairs the young Caesar came to Rome, a son of the dead Caesar's niece, as has been said,³ who had been left heir to his property. He had been staying at Apollonia when Caesar was assassinated. The young man greeted Antony as his father's friend, and reminded him of the moneys deposited with him. For he was under obligation to

¹ Cf. the Cicero, xlii. 2 ff.; the Brutus, xx. 3.

² In Latin, Orcini, from Orcus, the god of the lower world, to whom the Greek Charon is made to correspond.

³ Chapter xi. 1.

ἑβδομήκοντα πέντε δοῦναι, Καίσαρος ἐν ταῖς
 2 διαθήκαις γράψαντος. Ἀντώνιος δὲ τὸ μὲν πρῶτον ὡς μεираκίου καταφρονῶν ἔλεγεν οὐχ ὑγιαίνειν αὐτόν, ἀλλὰ καὶ φρενῶν ἀγαθῶν καὶ φίλων ἔρημον ὄντα φορτίον ἀβάστακτον αἰρεσθαι τὴν Καίσαρος διαδοχὴν· μὴ πειθομένου δὲ τούτοις, ἀλλ' ἀπαιτοῦντος τὰ χρήματα, πολλὰ καὶ λέγων πρὸς ὕβριν αὐτοῦ καὶ πράττων διετελεῖ.
 δημαρχίαν τε γὰρ ἐνέστη μετιόντι, καὶ δίφρον χρυσοῦν τοῦ πατρός, ὥσπερ ἐψήφιστο, τιθέντος ἠπείλησεν εἰς φυλακὴν ἀπάξειν, εἰ μὴ παύσαιτο 3 δημαγωγῶν. ἐπεὶ μέντοι Κικέρωνι δούς ἑαυτὸν ὁ νεανίας καὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις ὅσοι τὸν Ἀντώνιον ἐμίσουν, δι' ἐκείνων μὲν ᾠκειοῦτο τὴν βουλὴν, αὐτὸς δὲ τὸν δῆμον ἀνελάμβανε καὶ τοὺς στρατιώτας ἀπὸ τῶν κατοικιῶν συνήγε, δείσας ὁ Ἀντώνιος εἰς λόγους αὐτῷ συνήλθεν ἐν Καπι-τωλίῳ, καὶ διηλλάγησαν.

Εἶτα κοιμώμενος ἐκείνης τῆς νυκτὸς ὄψιν εἶδεν ἄτοπον ὁ Ἀντώνιος. ἐδόκει γὰρ αὐτοῦ τὴν δεξιὰν 4 χεῖρα βεβλήσθαι κεραυνῷ. καὶ μεθ' ἡμέρας ὀλίγας ἐνέπεσε λόγος ὡς ἐπιβουλευοὶ Καίσαρ 923 αὐτῷ. Καίσαρ δὲ ἀπελογεῖτο μὲν, οὐκ ἔπειθε δέ· καὶ πάλιν ἦν ἐνεργὸς ἢ ἔχθρα, καὶ περιθέοντες ἀμφότεροι τὴν Ἰταλίαν τὸ μὲν ἰδρυμένον ἐν ταῖς κατοικίαις ἤδη τοῦ στρατιωτικοῦ μεγάλοις ἀνίστασαν μισθοῖς, τὸ δ' ἐν ὄπλοις ἔτι τεταγμένον ὑποφθάνοντες ἀλλήλους προσήγοντο.

ANTONY

give every Roman seventy-five drachmas, according to the terms of Caesar's will. But Antony, at first despising him as a mere stripling, told him he was out of his senses, and that in his utter lack of good judgment and of friends he was taking up a crushing burden in the succession of Caesar. And when the young man refused to listen to this, and demanded the moneys, Antony kept saying and doing many things to insult him. For instance, he opposed him in his canvass for a tribuneship, and when he attempted to dedicate a golden chair in honour of his father by adoption, according to a decree of the senate, Antony threatened to hale him off to prison unless he stopped trying to win popular favour. When, however, the young man made common cause with Cicero and all the other haters of Antony, and with their aid won the support of the senate, while he himself got the goodwill of the people and assembled the soldiers of Caesar from their colonies, then Antony was struck with fear and came to a conference with him on the Capitol, and they were reconciled.

Afterwards, as he lay asleep that night, Antony had a strange vision. He thought, namely, that his right hand was smitten by a thunder-bolt. And after a few days a report fell upon his ears that the young Caesar was plotting against him. Caesar tried to make explanations, but did not succeed in convincing Antony. So once more their hatred was in full career, and both were hurrying about Italy trying to bring into the field by large pay that part of the soldiery which was already settled in their colonies, and to get the start of one another in winning the support of that part which was still arrayed in arms.

- XVII. Τῶν δ' ἐν τῇ πόλει Κικέρων μέγιστον δυνάμενος, καὶ παροξύνων ἐπὶ τὸν Ἀντώνιον ἅπαντας ἀνθρώπους, τέλος ἔπεισε τὴν βουλήν ἐκείνον μὲν πολέμιον ψηφίσασθαι, Καίσαρι δὲ ραβδουχίαν πέμψαι καὶ στρατηγικὰ κόσμια, Πάνσαν δὲ καὶ Ἴρτιον ἀποστέλλειν ἐξελῶντας Ἀντώνιον ἐκ τῆς Ἰταλίας. οὗτοι δὲ ἦσαν ὑπατοὶ τότε· καὶ συμβαλόντες Ἀντωνίῳ περὶ πόλιν Μυτίνην, Καίσαρος παρόντος καὶ συμμαχομένου, τοὺς μὲν πολεμίους ἐνίκων, αὐτοὶ δὲ ἀπέθανον.
- 2 φεύγοντι δὲ Ἀντωνίῳ πολλὰ συνέπιπτε τῶν ἀπόρων, ὁ δὲ λιμὸς ἀπορώτατον. ἀλλὰ φύσει παρὰ τὰς κακοπραγίας ἐγένετο βέλτιστος ἑαυτοῦ καὶ δυστυχῶν ὁμοιότατος ἦν ἀγαθῷ, κοινῷ μὲν ὄντος τοῦ αἰσθάνεσθαι τῆς ἀρετῆς τοῖς δι' ἀπορίαν τινὰ σφαλλομένοις, οὐ μὴν ἀπάντων ἀζηλοῦσι μιμεῖσθαι καὶ φεύγειν ἢ δυσχεραίνουσιν ἐρρωμένων ἐν ταῖς μεταβολαῖς, ἀλλὰ καὶ μᾶλλον ἐνίων τοῖς ἔθεσιν ἐνδιδόντων ὑπὸ ἀσθενείας καὶ
- 3 θραυνομένων τὸν λογισμόν. ὁ δ' οὖν Ἀντώνιος τότε θαυμαστὸν ἦν παράδειγμα τοῖς στρατιώταις, ἀπὸ τρυφῆς τοσαύτης καὶ πολυτελείας ὕδωρ τε πίνων διεφθαρμένον εὐκόλως, καὶ καρποὺς ἀγρίου καὶ ρίζας προσφερόμενος. ἐβρώθη δὲ καὶ φλοιός, ὡς λέγεται, καὶ ζῶν ἀγεύστων πρότερον ἤψαντο τὰς Ἄλπεις ὑπερβάλλοντες.
- XVIII. Ἦν δὲ ὀρμῇ τοῖς ἐπέκεινα στρατεύμασι ἐντυχεῖν, ὧν Λέπιδος ἦρχε, φίλος εἶναι δοκῶν Ἀντωνίου καὶ πολλὰ τῆς Καίσαρος φιλίας ἀπολελαυκέναι δι' αὐτόν. ἐλθὼν δὲ καὶ παραστρατοπεδεύσας πλησίον, ὡς οὐθὲν ἀπήντα

ANTONY

XVII. But Cicero, who was the most influential man in the city, and was trying to incite everybody against Antony, persuaded the senate to vote him a public enemy, to send to Caesar the fasces and other insignia of a praetor, and to dispatch Pansa and Hirtius to drive Antony out of Italy. These men were consuls at that time, and in an engagement with Antony near the city of Mutina, at which Octavius Caesar was present and fought on their side, they conquered the enemy, but fell themselves.¹ Many difficulties befell Antony in his flight, the greatest of which was famine. But it was his nature to rise to his highest level when in an evil plight, and he was most like a good and true man when he was unfortunate. For it is a common trait in those whom some difficulty has laid low, that they perceive plainly what virtue is, but all have not the strength amid reverses to imitate what they admire and shun what they hate, nay, some are then even more prone to yield to their habits through weakness, and to let their judgment be shattered. Antony, however, was at this time an amazing example to his soldiers, after such a life of luxury and extravagance as he had led drinking foul water contentedly and eating wild fruits and roots. Bark also was eaten, we are told, and animals never tasted before were food for them as they crossed the Alps.

XVIII. They were eager to fall in with the troops in those parts which Lepidus commanded, for he was thought to be a friend of Antony, and through him had reaped much advantage from Caesar's friendship. But when Antony came and encamped near by, he met with no tokens of friendliness, and therefore de-

¹ In 43 B.C. Cf. the Cicero, xlv. 3.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- φιλόανθρωπον, ἔγνω παραβαλέσθαι. καὶ κόμη μὲν ἀτημελής καὶ βαθὺς πώγων μετὰ τὴν ἡτταν εὐθύς ἦν αὐτῷ καθειμένος, λαβὼν δὲ φαιδὸν ἱμάτιον ἐγγὺς προσῆγε τῷ χάρακι τοῦ Λεπίδου
- 2 καὶ λέγειν ἤρξατο. πολλῶν δὲ καὶ πρὸς τὴν ὄψιν ἐπικλωμένων καὶ τοῖς λόγοις ἀγομένων, δείσας ὁ Λέπιδος τὰς σάλπιγγας ἐκέλευσε συνηχούσας ἀφελέσθαι τὸ κατακούεσθαι τὸν Ἀντώνιον. οἱ δὲ στρατιῶται μᾶλλον ὤκτειραν καὶ διελέγοντο κρύφα, Λαίλιον καὶ Κλώδιον ἀποστείλαντες πρὸς αὐτόν, ἐσθήτας λαβόντας ἐταιρευομένων γυναικῶν, οἱ τὸν Ἀντώνιον ἐκέλευον ἐπιχειρεῖν θαρροῦντα τῷ χάρακι· πολλοὺς γὰρ εἶναι δεξομένους¹ καὶ τὸν Λέπιδον, εἰ βούλοιο, κτενοῦντας.
- 3 Ἀντώνιος δὲ Λεπίδου μὲν οὐκ εἶασεν ἄψασθαι, μεθ' ἡμέραν δὲ τὸν στρατὸν ἔχων ἀπεπειράτο τοῦ ποταμοῦ. καὶ πρῶτος αὐτὸς ἐμβὰς ἐπορεύετο πρὸς τὴν ἀντιπέρας ὄχθην, ὁρῶν ἤδη πολλοὺς τῶν Λεπίδου στρατιωτῶν τὰς τε χεῖρας ὀρέγοντας αὐτῷ καὶ τὸν χάρακα διασπῶντας. εἰσελθὼν δὲ καὶ κρατήσας ἀπάντων ἡμερώτατα Λεπίδῳ προσήνεχθη. πατέρα γὰρ προσηγόρευσε αὐτὸν ἀσπασάμενος· καὶ τῷ μὲν ἔργῳ πάντων αὐτὸς ἦν κύριος, ἐκείνῳ δ' ὄνομα καὶ τιμὴν αὐτοκράτορος
- 4 διετέλει φυλάττων. τοῦτο καὶ Πλάγκον αὐτῷ Μουνάτιον ἐποίησε προσθέσθαι, καθήμενον οὐ πρόσω μετὰ συχνῆς δυνάμεως. οὕτω δὲ μέγας ἀρθεὶς αὐθις ὑπερέβαλε τὰς Ἄλπεις, εἰς τὴν Ἰταλίαν ἄγων ἑπτακαίδεκα τέλη πεζῶν σὺν αὐτῷ καὶ μυρίους ἵππεῖς· χωρὶς δὲ φρουρὰν Γαλατίας

¹ τοὺς δεξομένους Cornäs and Bekker, after Reiske: δεξομένους with the MSS.

ANTONY

terminated upon a bold stroke. His hair was unkempt, and his beard had been allowed to grow long ever since his defeat, and putting on a dark garment he came up to the camp of Lepidus and began to speak. Many of the soldiers were melted at his appearance and moved by his words, so that Lepidus was alarmed and ordered the trumpets to sound all at once in order to prevent Antony from being heard. But the soldiers felt all the more pity for Antony, and held a secret parley with him, sending Laelius and Clodius to him in the garb of women of the camp. These urged Antony to attack their camp boldly; for there were many, they said, who would welcome him and kill Lepidus, if he wished. But Antony would not permit them to lay hands on Lepidus, and next day began to cross the river with his army. He himself was first to plunge in, and made his way towards the opposite bank, seeing already that many of the soldiers of Lepidus were stretching out their hands to him and tearing down their ramparts. After entering the camp and making himself master of everything, he treated Lepidus with the greatest kindness. Indeed, he embraced him and called him father; and though in fact he was in full control himself, still he did not cease to preserve for Lepidus the name and the honour of imperator. This induced Munacius Plancus also to join him, who was encamped at no great distance with a considerable force. Thus raised again to great power, he crossed the Alps and led into Italy with him seventeen legions of infantry and ten thousand horse. And besides these, he left to ἕξ τάγματα λελοίπει μετὰ Οὐαρίου τινὸς τῶν συνήθων καὶ συμποτῶν, ὃν Κοτύλωνα προσ-ηγόρευον.

XIX. Καῖσαρ δὲ Κικέρωνι μὲν οὐκέτι προσεῖχε, τῆς ἐλευθερίας ὄρων περιεχόμενον, Ἄντωνιον δὲ προὔκαλεῖτο διὰ τῶν φίλων εἰς διαλύσεις. καὶ 924 συνελθόντες οἱ τρεῖς εἰς νησίδα ποταμῷ περιρρο-μένην ἐπὶ τρεῖς ἡμέρας συνήδρυσαν. καὶ τὰλλα μὲν ἐπιεικῶς ὠμολογεῖτο, καὶ διενείμαντο τὴν σύμπασαν ἀρχὴν ὥσπερ οὐσίαν πατρώαν ἀλλήλοις, ἣ δὲ περὶ τῶν ἀπολουμέων ἀνδρῶν ἀμφισβήτησις αὐτοῖς πλεῖστα πράγματα παρέσχε, τοὺς μὲν ἐχθροὺς ἀνελεῖν ἐκάστου, σῶσαι 2 δὲ τοὺς προσήκοντας ἀξιούτους. τέλος δὲ τῆ πρὸς τοὺς μισουμένους ὀργῇ καὶ συγγενῶν τιμῇ καὶ φίλων εὐνοίαν προέμενοι, Κικέρωνος μὲν Ἄντωνίῳ Καῖσαρ ἐξέστη, τούτῳ δὲ Ἄντωνίος Λευκίου Καίσαρος, ὃς ἦν θεῖος αὐτῷ πρὸς μητρός· ἐδόθη δὲ καὶ Λεπίδῳ Παῦλον ἀνελεῖν τὸν ἀδελφόν· οἱ δὲ φασιν ἐκστήναι τοῦ Παύλου τὸν Λέπιδον ἐκείνοις ἀποθανεῖν αὐτὸν αἰτησαμένοις.
3 οὐδὲν ὠμότερον οὐδὲ ἀγριώτερον τῆς διαμείψεως ταύτης δοκῶ γενέσθαι. φόνων γὰρ ἀντικαταλλασσόμενοι φόνους ὁμοίως μὲν οἷς ἐλάμβανον ἀνήρουν οὓς ἐδίδουσαν, ἀδικώτεροι δὲ περὶ τοὺς φίλους ἦσαν, οὓς ἀπεκτίνυσσαν μηδὲ μισοῦντες.

XX. Ἐπὶ δ' οὖν ταῖς διαλλαγαῖς ταύταις οἱ στρατιῶται περιστάντες ἠξίουσι καὶ γάμψιν τινὴ guard Gaul six legions with Varius, one of his intimates and boon companions, who was surnamed Cotylon.

ANTONY

XIX. Now, Octavius Caesar no longer held with Cicero, because he saw that Cicero was devoted to liberty, and he sent his friends to Antony with an invitation to come to terms. So the three men came together on a small island in the midst of a river,¹ and there held conference for three days. All other matters were easily agreed upon, and they divided up the whole empire among themselves as though it were an ancestral inheritance; but the dispute about the men who were to be put to death gave them the greatest trouble. Each demanded the privilege of slaying his enemies and saving his kinsmen. But at last their wrath against those whom they hated led them to abandon both the honour due to their kinsmen and the goodwill due to their friends, and Caesar gave up Cicero to Antony, while Antony gave up to him Lucius Caesar, who was Antony's uncle on the mother's side. Lepidus also was permitted to put to death Paulus his brother; although some say that Lepidus gave up Paulus to Antony and Caesar, who demanded his death. Nothing, in my opinion, could be more savage or cruel than this exchange. For by this barter of murder for murder they put to death those whom they surrendered just as truly as those whom they seized; but their injustice was greater towards their friends, whom they slew without so much as hating them.

XX. To complete this reconciliation, then, the soldiers surrounded them and demanded that Caesar

¹ Cf. the Cicero, xlvi. 3.

τὴν φίλιαν συνάψαι Καίσαρα, λαβόντα τὴν Φουλβίας τῆς Ἀντωνίου γυναικὸς θυγατέρα Κλωδίαν. ὁμολογηθέντος δὲ καὶ τούτου τριακόσιοι μὲν ἐκ προγραφῆς ἐθανατώθησαν ὑπὸ αὐτῶν· Κικέρωνος δὲ σφαγέντος ἐκέλευσεν Ἀντώνιος τὴν τε κεφαλὴν ἀποκοπῆναι καὶ τὴν χεῖρα τὴν δεξιάν, ἣ τούς κατ' αὐτοῦ λόγους ἔγραψε. καὶ κομισθέντων ἐθεῶτο γεγηθῶς καὶ ἀνακαγχάζων ὑπὸ χαρᾶς πολλάκις· εἶτα ἐμπλησθεὶς ἐκέλευσεν ὑπὲρ τοῦ βήματος ἐν ἀγορᾷ τεθῆναι, καθάπερ εἰς τὸν νεκρὸν ὑβρίζων, οὐχ αὐτὸν ἐνουβρίζοντα τῇ τύχῃ καὶ καταισχύνοντα τὴν ἐξουσίαν ἐπιδεικνύμενος. ὁ δὲ θεῖος αὐτοῦ Καίσαρ ζητούμενος καὶ διωκόμενος κατέφυγε πρὸς τὴν ἀδελφὴν. ἡ δέ, τῶν σφαγέων ἐπιστάντων καὶ βιαζομένων εἰς τὸ δωμάτιον αὐτῆς, ἐν ταῖς θύραις στᾶσα καὶ διασχοῦσα τὰς χεῖρας ἐβόα πολλάκις· “Οὐκ ἀποκτενεῖτε Καίσαρα Λεύκιον, εἰ μὴ πρότερον ἐμὲ ἀποκτείνητε τὴν τὸν αὐτοκράτορα τεκοῦσαν.” ἐκείνη μὲν οὖν τοιαύτη γενομένη διέκλεψε καὶ διέσωσε τὸν ἀδελφόν.

XXI. Ἦν δὲ καὶ τὰ πολλὰ Ῥωμαίοις ἐπαχθῆς ἡ τῶν τριῶν ἀρχή· καὶ τὸ πλεῖστον ὁ Ἀντώνιος τῆς αἰτίας εἶχε, πρεσβύτερος μὲν ὢν Καίσαρος, Λεπίδου δὲ δυνατώτερος, εἰς δὲ τὸν βίον ἐκείνου αὐθις τὸν ἡδυπαθῆ καὶ ἀκόλαστον, ὡς πρῶτον ἀνεχαίτισε τῶν πραγμάτων, ἐκκεχυμένος. προσῆν δὲ τῇ κοινῇ κακοδοξία τὸ διὰ τὴν οἰκίαν οὐ μικρὸν μῖσος, ἦν ᾧκει, Πομπηίου τοῦ Μεγάλου γενομένην, ἀνδρὸς οὐχ ἡττον ἐπὶ σωφροσύνῃ καὶ τῷ τεταγμένως καὶ δημοτικῶς διαιτᾶσθαι θαν-should also cement the friendship by a marriage, and should take to wife Clodia, a daughter of Antony's wife Fulvia. After this also had been agreed upon, three hundred men were proscribed and put to death by them; moreover, after Cicero had been butchered, Antony ordered his head to be cut off, and that right hand with which Cicero had written the speeches against him.¹ When they were brought to him, he gazed upon them exultantly, laughing aloud for joy many times; then, when he was sated, he ordered them to be placed on the rostra in the forum, just as though he were putting insult upon the dead, and not rather making a display of his own insolence in good fortune and abuse of power. His uncle, Lucius Caesar, being sought for and pursued, took refuge with his sister. She, when the executioners were at hand and trying to force their way into her chamber, stood in the doorway, spread out her arms, and cried repeatedly: "Ye shall not slay Lucius Caesar unless ye first slay me, the mother of your imperator." By such behaviour, then, she got her brother out of the way and saved his life.

ANTONY

XXI. Now, for the most part, the government of the triumvirate was odious to the Romans; and Antony bore most of the blame, since he was older than Caesar, more powerful than Lepidus, and threw himself once more into his old life of pleasure and dissipation as soon as he had shaken off some of his troubles. And to his general ill-repute there was added the great hatred caused by the house in which he dwelt. It had been that of Pompey the Great, a man no less admired for sobriety and for the orderly and democratic disposition of his life than because of

¹ Cf. the Cicero, xlvi. 4.

μασθέντος ἢ διὰ τοὺς τρεῖς θριάμβους. ἤχθοντο γὰρ ὀρώντες αὐτὴν τὰ πολλὰ κεκλεισμένην μὲν ἡγεμόσι καὶ στρατηγοῖς καὶ πρέσβεσιν, ὠθουμένοις πρὸς ὕβριν ἀπὸ τῶν θυρῶν, μεστὴν δὲ μίμων καὶ θαυματοποιῶν καὶ κολάκων κραιπαλῶντων, εἰς οὗς τὰ πλεῖστα κατανηλίσκετο τῶν χρημάτων τῷ βιαιοτάτῳ καὶ χαλεπωτάτῳ τρόπῳ
 3 ποριζομένων. οὐ γὰρ μόνον ἐπώλουν οὐσίας τῶν φονευομένων, ἐπισυκοφαντοῦντες οἰκείους καὶ γυναῖκας αὐτῶν, οὐδὲ τελῶν πᾶν ἐκίνησαν γένος, ἀλλὰ καὶ παρὰ ταῖς Ἑστιάσι πυθόμενοι παρθένους παρακαταθήκας τινὰς κείσθαι καὶ ξένων
 4 καὶ πολιτῶν ἔλαβον ἐπελθόντες. ὡς δὲ οὐδὲν ἦν ἰκανὸν Ἀντωνίῳ, Καίσαρ ἠξίωσε νείμασθαι τὰ χρήματα πρὸς αὐτόν. ἐνείμαντο δὲ καὶ τὸν στρατόν, ἐπὶ Βρούτου καὶ Κάσσιον εἰς Μακεδονίαν στρατεύοντες ἀμφότεροι, Λεπίδῳ δὲ τὴν Ῥώμην ἐπέτρεψαν. 925

XXII. Ὡς μέντοι διαβάντες ἤψαντο πολέμου καὶ παρεστρατοπέδευσαν τοῖς πολεμίοις, Ἀντωνίου μὲν ἀντιτεταγμένου Κασσίῳ, Βρούτῳ δὲ Καίσαρος, οὐθὲν ἔργον ἐφάνη μέγα τοῦ Καίσαρος, ἀλλ' Ἀντώνιος ἦν ὁ νικῶν πάντα καὶ κατορθῶν.
 2 τῇ μὲν γε προτέρα μάχῃ Καίσαρ ὑπὸ Βρούτου κατὰ κράτος ἠττηθεὶς ἀπέβαλε τὸ στρατόπεδον, καὶ μικρὸν ἔφθη τοὺς διώκοντας ὑπεκφυγῶν ὡς δὲ αὐτὸς ἐν τοῖς ὑπομνήμασι γέγραφε, τῶν φίλων τινὸς ὄναρ ἰδόντος ἀνεχώρησε πρὸ τῆς μάχης.
 3 Ἀντώνιος δὲ Κάσσιον ἐνίκησε· καίτοι γεγράφασιν ἔνιοι μὴ παραγενέσθαι τῇ μάχῃ τὸν Ἀντώνιον, ἀλλὰ προσγενέσθαι μετὰ τὴν μάχην ἤδη διώ-

ANTONY

his three triumphs. Men were distressed, therefore, to see the house closed for the most part against commanders, magistrates, and ambassadors, who were thrust with insolence from its doors, and filled instead with mimes, jugglers, and drunken flatterers, on whom were squandered the greater part of the moneys got in the most violent and cruel manner. For the triumvirate not only sold the properties of those whom they slew, bringing false charges against their wives and kindred, while they set on foot every kind of taxation, but learning that there were deposits with the Vestal Virgins made by both strangers and citizens, they went and took them. And since nothing was sufficient for Antony, Caesar demanded to share the moneys with him. They shared the army also, and both led their forces into Macedonia against Brutus and Cassius, entrusting Rome to Lepidus.

XXII. However, after they had crossed the sea, taken up war, and encamped near the enemy, Antony being opposed to Cassius, and Caesar to Brutus, no great achievements were performed by Caesar, but it was Antony who was everywhere victorious and successful. In the first battle, at least, Caesar was overwhelmingly defeated by Brutus, lost his camp, and narrowly escaped his pursuers by secret flight; although he himself says in his Memoirs that he withdrew before the battle in consequence of a friend's dream. But Antony conquered Cassius; although some write that Antony was not present in the battle; but came up after the battle when his κουσι. Κάσσιον δὲ Πίνδαρος τῶν πιστῶν τις ἀπελευθέρων αὐτοῦ δεομένου καὶ κελεύοντος ἔσφαξεν· οὐ γὰρ ἔγνω νενικηκότα Βρούτου. ὀλίγων δὲ ἡμερῶν διαγενομένων πάλιν ἐμαχέσαντο· καὶ Βρούτος μὲν ἠττηθεὶς ἑαυτὸν ἀνεΐλεν, Ἀντώνιος δὲ τῆς νίκης ἠνέγκατο τῇ δόξῃ τὸ πλείστον, ἅτε δὴ καὶ νοσοῦντος τοῦ Καίσαρος. ἐπιστὰς δὲ τῷ Βρούτου νεκρῷ μικρὰ μὲν ὠνεΐδισεν ὑπὲρ τῆς Γαίου τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ τελευτῆς (ἀνηρήκει γὰρ ἐκεῖνον ὁ Βρούτος ἐν Μακεδονίᾳ Κικέρωνι τιμωρῶν), φήσας δὲ μᾶλλον Ὀρτήσιον ἢ Βρούτου αἰτιάσθαι τῆς τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ σφαγῆς Ὀρτήσιον μὲν ἐκέλευσεν ἐπισφάξαι τῷ μνήματι, Βρούτῳ δὲ τὴν αὐτοῦ φοινικίδα πολλῶν χρημάτων ἀξίαν οὖσαν ἐπέριριψε, καὶ τῶν ἀπελευθέρων τινὶ τῶν ἑαυτοῦ προσέταξε τῆς ταφῆς ἐπιμεληθῆναι. τοῦτον ὕστερον γνοὺς οὐ συγκατακαύσαντα τὴν φοινικίδα τῷ νεκρῷ καὶ πολλὰ τῆς εἰς τὴν ταφὴν δαπάνης ὑφηρεημένον ἀπέκτεινεν.

XXIII. Ἐκ τούτου Καῖσαρ μὲν εἰς Ῥώμην ἐκομίζετο, δοκῶν οὐ περιέσεσθαι πολὺν χρόνον ἐκ τῆς ἀρρωστίας, Ἀντώνιος δὲ τὰς πρὸς ἑῷ πάσας ἐπαρχίας ἀργυρολογήσων διέβαινεν εἰς τὴν Ἑλλάδα, πολλὴν στρατιὰν ἄγων ὑπεσχημένοι γὰρ ἐκάστῳ στρατιώτῃ δραχμὰς πεντακισχιλίας ἐδέοντο συντονωτέρου χρηματισμοῦ καὶ δασμολογίας. τοῖς μὲν οὖν Ἑλλησιν οὐκ ἄτοπος οὐδὲ φορτικὸς συνηέχθη τό γε πρῶτον, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸ παίζον αὐτοῦ πρὸς ἀκροάσεις φιλολόγων καὶ θεὰς ἀγώνων καὶ μῦθους ἔτρεπε, καὶ περὶ τὰς κρίσεις ἦν ἐπιεικής, καὶ φιλέλλην ἀκούων ἔχαιρεν, ἔτι δὲ men were already in pursuit. Cassius, at his own request and command, was killed by Pindar, one of his trusty freedmen; for Cassius was not aware that Brutus was victorious. After a few days had intervened, a second battle was fought, and Brutus, being defeated, slew himself; but Antony won the greater credit for the victory, since, indeed, Caesar was sick. And as he stood beside the dead body of Brutus, Antony chided him a little for the death of his brother Caius, whom Brutus had executed in Macedonia to avenge Cicero, and declaring that Hortensius was more to blame than Brutus for his brother's murder, he ordered Hortensius to be slaughtered on his brother's tomb; but over Brutus he cast his own purple cloak, which was of great value, and ordered one of his own freedmen to see to the burial of the body. And learning afterwards that this fellow had not burned the purple cloak with the body of Brutus, and had purloined much of what had been devoted to the burial, he put him to death.

ANTONY

XXIII. After this, Caesar repaired to Rome, since it was thought that he would not live long in consequence of his illness; but Antony, that he might levy money in all the eastern provinces, made his way into Greece with a large army; for since the triumvirate had promised every one of their soldiers five hundred drachmas, they required a more vigorous policy in raising money and collecting tributes. Toward the Greeks, then, Antony conducted himself without rudeness or offence, at least in the beginning, nay, he indulged his fondness for amusement by listening to literary discussions and by witnessing games and religious rites. In his judicial decisions also he was reasonable, and delighted to be called a

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

μᾶλλον φιλαθῆναιος προσαγορευόμενος, καὶ τῇ 3 πόλει πλείστας δωρεὰς ἔδωκε. βουλομένων δέ τι καὶ Μεγαρέων καλὸν ἀντεπιδείξασθαι ταῖς Ἀθήναις καὶ τὸ βουλευτήριον ἰδεῖν αὐτὸν ἀξιωσάντων ἀναβὰς καὶ θεασάμενος, ὡς ἐπυθάνοντο τί δοκοίη, “Μικρὸν μὲν,” ἔφη, “σαπρὸν δέ.” καὶ τὸν τοῦ Πυθίου νεῶν κατεμέτρησεν ὡς συντελέσων· τοῦτο γὰρ ὑπέσχετο πρὸς τὴν σύγκλητον.

XXIV. Ἐπεὶ δὲ Λεύκιον Κηνσωρίνον ἐπὶ τῆς Ἑλλάδος καταλιπὼν εἰς Ἀσίαν διέβη καὶ τῶν ἐκεῖ πλούτων ἤψατο, καὶ βασιλεῖς ἐπὶ θύρας ἐφοίτων καὶ βασιλέων γυναῖκες ἀμιλλώμεναι δωρεαῖς πρὸς ἀλλήλας καὶ κάλλεσιν ἐφθείροντο πρὸς αὐτόν, ἐν Ῥώμῃ δὲ Καίσαρος στάσεσι καὶ πολέμοις ἀποτρυχομένου πολλὴν αὐτὸς ἄγων σχο-λὴν καὶ εἰρήνην ἀνεκुकλεῖτο τοῖς πάθεσιν εἰς τὸν 2 συνήθη βίον, Ἀναξήνορες δὲ κιθαρῳδοὶ καὶ Ξουθοὶ χοραῦλαι καὶ Μητρόδωρός τις ὀρχηστῆς καὶ τοιοῦτος ἄλλος Ἀσιανῶν ἀκροαμάτων θίασος, ὑπερβαλλομένων λαμυρία καὶ βωμολοχία τὰς ἀπὸ τῆς Ἰταλίας κῆρας, εἰσερρῦη καὶ διώκει τὴν αὐ-λήν, οὐδὲν ἦν ἀνεκτόν, εἰς ταῦτα φορουμένων 3 ἀπάντων. ἢ γὰρ Ἀσία πᾶσα, καθάπερ ἢ Σοφό- 926 κλειος ἐκείνη πόλις, ὁμοῦ μὲν θυμιαμάτων ἔγεμεν, ὁμοῦ δὲ παιάνων τε καὶ στεναγμάτων.

εἰς γοῦν Ἐφεσον εἰσιόντος αὐτοῦ γυναῖκες μὲν εἰς Βάκχας, ἄνδρες δὲ καὶ παῖδες εἰς Σατύρους καὶ

ANTONY

Philhellene, and still more to be addressed as Philathenian, and he gave the city very many gifts. But when the Megarians wished to show him something fine to rival Athens, and thought that he ought to see their senate-house, he went up and took a view of it; and when they asked him what he thought of it, "It is small," he said, "but rotten." He also had measurements taken of the temple of Pythian Apollo, with the purpose of completing it; indeed, he promised as much to the senate.

XXIV. But presently he left Lucius Censorinus in charge of Greece, and crossing over into Asia¹ laid hands on the wealth that was there. Kings would come often to his doors, and wives of kings, vying with one another in their gifts and their beauty, would yield up their honour for his pleasure; and while at Rome Caesar was wearing himself out in civil strifes and wars, Antony himself was enjoying abundant peace and leisure, and was swept back by his passions into his wonted mode of life. Lute-players like Anaxenor, flute-players like Xanthus, one Metrodorus, a dancer, and such other rabble of Asiatic performers, who surpassed in impudence and effrontery the pests from Italy, poured like a flood into his quarters and held sway there. It was past all endurance that everything was devoted to these extravagances. For all Asia, like the famous city of Sophocles,² "was filled alike with incense-offerings, Alike with paeans, too, and voice of heavy groans."

At any rate, when Antony made his entry into Ephesus, women arrayed like Bacchus, and men and

¹ In 41 B.C. ² Thebes, in the Oedipus Rex, 4.

Πάντας ἡγοῦντο διεσκευασμένοι, κιττοῦ δὲ καὶ θύρσων καὶ ψαλτηρίων καὶ συρίγγων καὶ αὐλῶν ἢ πόλις ἦν πλέα, Διόνυσον αὐτὸν ἀνακαλουμένων 4 χαριδότην καὶ μειλίχιον. ἦν γὰρ ἀμέλει τοιοῦτος ἐνίοις, τοῖς δὲ πολλοῖς ὤμηστῆς καὶ ἀγριώνιος.
 ἀφηρεῖτο γὰρ εὐγενεῖς ἀνθρώπους τὰ ὄντα μαστιγίαις καὶ κόλαξι χαριζόμενος. πολλῶν δὲ καὶ ζώντων ὡς τεθνηκότων αἰτησάμενοί τινες οὐσίας ἔλαβον. ἀνδρὸς δὲ Μάγνητος οἶκον ἐδωρήσατο μαγείρῳ περὶ ἓν, ὡς λέγεται, δεῖπνον εὐδοκιμή-5 σαντι. τέλος δέ, ταῖς πόλεσι δεῦτερον ἐπιβάλλοντος φόρον, ἐτόλμησεν Ἑβρέας ὑπὲρ τῆς Ἀσίας λέγων εἰπεῖν ἀγοραίως μὲν ἐκεῖνα καὶ πρὸς τὸν Ἀντωνίου ζῆλον οὐκ ἀηδῶς, “Εἰ δύνασαι δις λαβεῖν ἐνὸς ἐνιαυτοῦ φόρον, δύνασαι καὶ δις ἡμῖν ποιήσασθαι θέρος καὶ δις ὀπώραν,” πρακτικῶς δὲ καὶ παραβόλως συναγαγὼν ὅτι μυριάδας εἴκοσι ταλάντων ἢ Ἀσία δέδωκε, “ταῦτα,” εἶπεν, “εἰ μὲν οὐκ εἴληφας, ἀπαίτει παρὰ τῶν λαβόντων· εἰ 6 δὲ λαβὼν οὐκ ἔχεις, ἀπολώλαμεν.” ἐτρέψατο τούτῳ δεινῶς τὸν Ἀντωνίου· ἡγνόει γὰρ τὰ πολλὰ τῶν γιγνομένων, οὐχ οὕτω ῥάθυμος ὢν, ὡς δι’ ἀπλότητα πιστεύων τοῖς περὶ αὐτόν.

Ἐνὴν γὰρ ἀπλότης τῷ ἦθει καὶ βραδείᾳ μὲν αἰσθησις, αἰσθανομένῳ δὲ τῶν ἀμαρτανομένων ἰσχυρὰ μετάνοια καὶ πρὸς αὐτοὺς ἐξομολόγησις τοὺς ἀγνωμονηθέντας, μέγεθος δὲ καὶ περὶ τὰς

ANTONY

boys like Satyrs and Pans, led the way before him, and the city was full of ivy and thyrsus-wands and harps and pipes and flutes, the people hailing him as Dionysus Giver of Joy and Beneficent. For he was such, undoubtedly, to some; but to the greater part he was Dionysus Carnivorous and Savage. For he took their property from well-born men and bestowed it on flatterers and scoundrels. From many, too, who were actually alive, men got their property by asking him for it on the plea that the owners were dead. The house of a man of Magnesia he gave to a cook, who, as we are told, had won reputation by a single supper. But finally, when he was imposing a second contribution on the cities, Hybreas, speaking in behalf of Asia, plucked up courage to say this: "If thou canst take a contribution twice in one year, thou hast power also to make summer for us twice, and harvest-time twice." These words were rhetorical, it is true, and not unpleasant for the high spirit of Antony; but the speaker added in plain and bold words that Asia had given him two hundred thousand talents; "If," said he, "thou hast not received this money, demand it from those who took it; but if thou didst receive it, and hast it not, we are undone." This speech made a powerful impression upon Antony; for he was ignorant of most that was going on, not so much because he was of an easy disposition, as because he was simple enough to trust those about him.

For there was simplicity in his nature, and slowness of perception, though when he did perceive his errors he showed keen repentance, and made full acknowledgement to the very men who had been unfairly dealt with, and there was largeness both in

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἀμοιβὰς καὶ περὶ τὰς τιμωρίας. μᾶλλον γε μὴν ἐδόκει χαριζόμενος ἢ κολάζων ὑπερβάλλειν τὸ μέ-7 τριον. ἢ δὲ περὶ τὰς παιδιὰς καὶ τὰς ἐπισκώψεις ὕβρις ἐν αὐτῇ τὸ φάρμακον εἶχεν. ἀντισκῶψαι γὰρ ἐξῆν καὶ ἀνθυβρίσαι, καὶ γελώμενος οὐχ ἤτ-τον ἢ γελῶν ἔχαιρε. καὶ τοῦτο διελυμήνατο τὰ πολλὰ τῶν πραγμάτων. τοὺς γὰρ ἐν τῷ παίζειν παρρησιαζομένους οὐκ ἂν οἰηθείς σπουδάζοντας 8 κολακεύειν αὐτὸν ἠλίσκετο ῥαδίως ὑπὸ τῶν ἐπαίνων, ἀγνοῶν ὅτι τὴν παρρησίαν τινὲς ὡς ὑποστῦφον ἡδυσμα τῇ κολακείᾳ παραμιγνύντες ἀφήρουν τὸ πλήσμιον, τῇ παρὰ τὴν κύλικα θρασύτητι καὶ λαλιᾷ διαμηχανώμενοι τὴν ἐπὶ τῶν πραγμάτων ὕφεισιν καὶ συγκατάθεσιν μὴ πρὸς χάριν ὁμιλούντων, ἀλλὰ τῷ φρονεῖν ἡττωμένων φαίνεσθαι.

XXV. Τοιοῦτφ δ' οὖν ὄντι τὴν φύσιν Ἀντωνίφ τελευταῖον κακὸν ὁ Κλεοπάτρας ἔρωσ ἐπιγενό-μενος, καὶ πολλὰ τῶν ἔτι κρυπτομένων ἐν αὐτῷ καὶ ἀτρεμούντων παθῶν ἐγείρας καὶ ἀναβακχεύσασ, εἴ τι χρηστὸν ἢ σωτήριον ὅμως ἀντεῖχεν, ἠφάνισε καὶ προσδιέφθειρεν. ἀλίσκεται δὲ τοῦ-τον τὸν τρόπον. ἀπτόμενος τοῦ Παρθικοῦ πολέ-μου ἔπεμψε πρὸς αὐτήν, κελεύων εἰς Κιλικίαν ἀπαντῆσαι λόγον ὑφέξουσάν ὧν ἐνεκαλείτο τοῖς 2 πρὸς τὸν πόλεμον. ὁ δὲ πεμφθεὶς Δέλλιος, ὡς εἶδε τὴν ὄψιν καὶ κατέμαθε τὴν ἐν τοῖς λόγοις δεινότητα καὶ πανουργίαν, εὐθὺς αἰσθόμενος ὅτι

ANTONY

his restitution to the wronged and in his punishment of the wrong-doers. Yet he was thought to exceed due bounds more in conferring favours than in inflicting punishments. And his wantonness in mirth and jest carried its own remedy with it. For a man might pay back his jests and insolence, and he delighted in being laughed at no less than in laughing at others. And this vitiated most of his undertakings. For he could not believe that those who used bold speech in jest could flatter him in earnest, and so was easily captivated by their praises, not knowing that some men would mingle bold speech, like a piquant sauce, with flattery, and thus would take away from flattery its cloying character. Such men would use their bold babbling over the cups to make their submissive yielding in matters of business seem to be the way, not of those who associate with a man merely to please him, but of those who are vanquished by superior wisdom.

XXV. Such, then, was the nature of Antony, where now as a crowning evil his love for Cleopatra supervened, roused and drove to frenzy many of the passions that were still hidden and quiescent in him, and dissipated and destroyed whatever good and saving qualities still offered resistance. And he was taken captive in this manner. As he was getting ready for the Parthian war, he sent to Cleopatra, ordering her to meet him in Cilicia in order to make answer to the charges made against her of raising and giving to Cassius much money for the war. But Dellius, Antony's messenger, when he saw how Cleopatra looked, and noticed her subtlety and cleverness in conversation, at once κακὸν μὲν οὐδὲ μελλήσει τι ποιεῖν γυναῖκα τοιαύτην Ἀντώνιος, ἔσται δὲ μεγίστη παρ' αὐτῷ, τρέπεται πρὸς τὸ θεραπεύειν καὶ προτρέπεσθαι τὴν Αἴγυπτίαν, τοῦτο δὴ τὸ Ὀμηρικόν, ἐλθεῖν εἰς Κιλικίαν εὐ ἐντύνασαν ἔ αὐτὴν καὶ μὴ φοβεῖσθαι τὸν Ἀντώνιον, ἡδιστον ἡγεμόνων ὄντα καὶ φιλο-

 3 ανθρωπότατον. ἡ δὲ καὶ Δελλίῳ πεισθεῖσα, καὶ τοῖς πρὸς Καίσαρα καὶ Γναῖον τὸν Πομπηίου παῖδα πρότερον αὐτῇ γενομένοις ἀφ' ὧρας συμβολαίοις τεκμαιρομένη, ῥᾶον ἠλπιζεν ὑπάξεσθαι τὸν Ἀντώνιον. ἐκείνοι μὲν γὰρ αὐτὴν ἔτι κόρην καὶ πραγμάτων ἄπειρον ἔγνωσαν, πρὸς δὲ τοῦτον 927 ἔμελλε φοιτήσῃ ἐν ᾧ μάλιστα καιροῦ γυναῖκες ὦραν τε λαμπροτάτην ἔχουσι καὶ τὸ φρονεῖν
 4 ἀκμάζουσι. διὸ πολλὰ μὲν συνεσκευάσατο δῶρα καὶ χρήματα καὶ κόσμον οἷον εἰκὸς ἦν ἀπὸ πραγμάτων μεγάλων καὶ βασιλείας εὐδαίμονος κομίζειν, τὰς δὲ πλείστας ἐν ἑαυτῇ καὶ τοῖς περὶ αὐτὴν μαγγανεύμασι καὶ φίλτροις ἐλπίδας θεμένη παρεγένετο.

XXVI. Πολλὰ δὲ καὶ παρ' αὐτοῦ καὶ παρὰ τῶν φίλων δεχομένη γράμματα καλούντων, οὕτω κατεφρόνησε καὶ κατεγέλασε τοῦ ἀνδρὸς ὥστε πλεῖν ἀνὰ τὸν Κύδνον ποταμὸν ἐν πορθμείῳ χρυσοπρύμνῳ, τῶν μὲν ἰστίων ἀλουργῶν ἐκπεπετασμένων, τῆς δὲ εἰρεσίας ἀργυραῖς κώπαις ἀναφερομένης πρὸς αὐλὸν ἅμα σύριγξι καὶ κιθάραις συν-
 2 ηρμοσμένον. αὐτὴ δὲ κατέκειτο μὲν ὑπὸ σκιαδί χρυσοπάστῳ κεκοσμημένη γραφικῶς ὥσπερ Ἀφροδίτῃ, παῖδες δὲ τοῖς γραφικοῖς Ἔρωσιν εἰκασμένοι παρ' ἐκάτερον ἐστῶτες ἐρρίπιζον. ὁμοίως perceived that Antony would not so much as think of doing such a woman any harm, but that she would have the greatest influence with him. He therefore resorted to flattery and tried to induce the Egyptian to go to Cilicia "decked out in fine array"¹ (as Homer would say), and not to be afraid of Antony, who was the most agreeable and humane of commanders. She was persuaded by Dellius, and judging by the proofs which she had had before this of the effect of her beauty upon Caius Caesar and Gnaeus the son of Pompey, she had hopes that she would more easily bring Antony to her feet. For Caesar and Pompey had known her when she was still a girl and inexperienced in affairs, but she was going to visit Antony at the very time when women have most brilliant beauty and are at the acme of intellectual power. Therefore she provided herself with many gifts, much money, and such ornaments as her high position and prosperous kingdom made it natural for her to take; but she went putting her greatest confidence in herself, and in the charms and sorceries of her own person.

ANTONY

XXVI. Though she received many letters of summons both from Antony himself and from his friends, she so despised and laughed the man to scorn as to sail up the river Cydnus in a barge with gilded poop, its sails spread purple, its rowers urging it on with silver oars to the sound of the flute blended with pipes and lutes. She herself reclined beneath a canopy spangled with gold, adorned like Venus in a painting, while boys like Loves in paintings stood on either side and fanned her. Likewise also the

¹ Iliad, xiv. 162, of Hera, decking herself for a meeting with Zeus.

δὲ καὶ θεραπευαίνιδες αἱ καλλιστεύουσαι Νηρηίδων ἔχουσαι καὶ Χαρίτων στολάς, αἱ μὲν πρὸς οἶαξι, αἱ δὲ πρὸς κάλοις ἦσαν. ὄδμαί δὲ θαυμασταὶ τὰς ὄχθας ἀπὸ θυμαμάτων πολλῶν κατεῖχον.
 3 τῶν δὲ ἀνθρώπων οἱ μὲν εὐθύς ἀπὸ τοῦ ποταμοῦ παρωμάρτουν ἐκατέρωθεν, οἱ δὲ ἀπὸ τῆς πόλεως κατέβαινον ἐπὶ τὴν θέαν. ἐκχεομένου δὲ τοῦ κατὰ τὴν ὑγορὰν ὄχλου τέλος αὐτὸς ὁ Ἄντωνιος ἐπὶ βήματος καθεζόμενος ἀπελείφθη μόνος. καὶ τις λόγος ἔχῳρει διὰ πάντων ὡς ἡ Ἄφροδίτη κωμάζοι παρὰ τὸν Διόνυσον ἐπ' ἀγαθῶ τῆς Ἀσίας.

Ἐπεμψε μὲν οὖν καλῶν αὐτὴν ἐπὶ τὸ δεῖπνον·
 ἡ δὲ μᾶλλον ἐκείνον ἠξίου πρὸς ἑαυτὴν ἦκειν.
 4 εὐθύς οὖν τινὰ βουλόμενος εὐκολίαν ἐπιδείκνυ-σθαι καὶ φιλοφροσύνην ὑπήκουσε καὶ ἦλθεν. ἐντυχῶν δὲ παρασκευῇ λόγου κρείττονι μάλιστα τῶν φώτων τὸ πλῆθος ἐξεπλάγη. τοσαῦτα γὰρ λέ-γεται καθίεσθαι καὶ ἀναφαίνεσθαι πανταχόθεν ἅμα, καὶ τοιαύταις πρὸς ἄλληλα κλίσεσι καὶ θέσεσι διακεκοσμημένα καὶ συντεταγμένα παι-σίων καὶ περιφερῶν τρόπῳ, ὥστε τῶν ἐν ὀλίγοις ἀξιοθεάτων καὶ καλῶν ἐκείνην γενέσθαι τὴν ὄψιν.

XXVII. Τῇ δ' ὑστεραία πάλιν ἀνθεστιῶν αὐ-τὴν ἐφιλοτιμήθη μὲν ὑπερβαλέσθαι τὴν λαμπρό-τητα καὶ τὴν ἐμμέλειαν, ἀμφοῖν δὲ λειπόμενος, καὶ κρατούμενος ἐν αὐτοῖς ἐκείνοις, πρῶτος ἔσκω-πτεν εἰς αὐχμὸν καὶ ἀγροικίαν τὰ παρ' αὐτῶ.
 πολὺν δὲ ἡ Κλεοπάτρα καὶ τοῖς σκώμμασι τοῦ Ἄντωνίου τὸν στρατιώτην ἐνορῶσα καὶ βάνανυσον, ἐχρήτο καὶ τούτῳ πρὸς αὐτὸν ἀνειμένως ἤδη καὶ
 2 κατατεθαρρηκότως. καὶ γὰρ ἦν, ὡς λέγουσιν,

ANTONY

fairest of her serving-maidens, attired like Nereïds and Graces, were stationed, some at the rudder-sweeps, and others at the reefing-ropes. Wondrous odours from countless incense-offerings diffused themselves along the river-banks. Of the inhabitants, some accompanied her on either bank of the river from its very mouth, while others went down from the city to behold the sight. The throng in the market-place gradually streamed away, until at last Antony himself, seated on his tribunal, was left alone. And a rumour spread on every hand that Venus was come to revel with Bacchus for the good of Asia.

Antony sent, therefore, and invited her to supper ; but she thought it meet that he should rather come to her. At once, then, wishing to display his complacency and friendly feelings, Antony obeyed and went. He found there a preparation that beggared description, but was most amazed at the multitude of lights. For, as we are told, so many of these were let down and displayed on all sides at once, and they were arranged and ordered with so many inclinations and adjustments to each other in the form of rectangles and circles, that few sights were so beautiful or so worthy to be seen as this.

XXVII. On the following day Antony feasted her in his turn, and was ambitious to surpass her splendour and elegance, but in both regards he was left behind, and vanquished in these very points, and was first to rail at the meagreness and rusticity of his own arrangements. Cleopatra observed in the jests of Antony much of the soldier and the common man, and adopted this manner also towards him, without restraint now, and boldly. For her beauty, as we are

αὐτὸ μὲν καθ' αὐτὸ τὸ κάλλος αὐτῆς οὐ πάνυ δυσπαράβλητον, οὐδὲ οἶον ἐκπλήξαι τοὺς ἰδόντας, ἀφῆν δ' εἶχεν ἢ συνδιαίτησις ἄφυκτον, ἢ τε μορφή μετὰ τῆς ἐν τῷ διαλέγεσθαι πιθανότητος καὶ τοῦ περιθέοντος ἅμα πως περὶ τὴν ὀμιλίαν ἤθους ἀνέ-3 φερέ τι κέντρον. ἡδονὴ δὲ καὶ φθεγγομένης ἐπῆν τῷ ἤχῳ· καὶ τὴν γλώτταν, ὥσπερ ὄργανόν τι πολύχορδον, εὐπετῶς τρέπουσα καθ' ἣν βούλοιο διάλεκτον ὀλίγοις παντάπασι δι' ἔρμηνέως ἐνετύγχανε βαρβάροις, τοῖς δὲ πλείστοις αὐτῇ δι' αὐτῆς ἀπεδίδου τὰς ἀποκρίσεις, οἶον Αἰθίοψι, Τρωγλοδύταις, Ἑβραίοις, Ἀραψι, Σύροις, Μή-
 4 δοις, Παρθυαίοις. πολλῶν δὲ λέγεται καὶ ἄλλων ἐκμαθεῖν γλώττας, τῶν πρὸ αὐτῆς βασιλέων οὐδὲ τὴν Αἴγυπτίαν ἀνασχομένων παραλαβεῖν διάλεκτον, ἐνίων δὲ καὶ τὸ μακεδονίζειν ἐκλι-πόντων.

XXVIII. Οὕτω δ' οὖν τὸν Ἀντώνιον ἤρπασεν ὥστε, πολεμούσης μὲν ἐν Ῥώμῃ Καίσαρι Φουλβίας τῆς γυναικὸς ὑπὲρ τῶν ἐκείνου πραγμάτων, αἰωρουμένης δὲ Παρθικῆς στρατιᾶς περὶ τὴν Μεσοποταμίαν, ἧς Λαβιηνὸν οἱ βασιλέως στρατηγὸς Παρθικὸν ἀναγορεύσαντες αὐτοκράτορα Συρίας 928 ἐπιβατεύσειν ἔμελλον, οἴχεσθαι φερόμενον ὑπ' αὐτῆς εἰς Ἀλεξάνδρειαν, ἐκεῖ δὲ μεираκίου σχολὴν ἄγοντος διατριβαῖς καὶ παιδιαῖς χρώμενον ἀνα-λίσκειν καὶ καθηδυπαθεῖν τὸ πολυτελέστατον, ὡς 2 Ἀντιφῶν εἶπεν, ἀνάλωμα, τὸν χρόνον. ἦν γάρ τις αὐτοῖς σύνοδος ἀμιμητοβίων λεγομένη· καὶ καθ' ἡμέραν εἰστίων ἀλλήλους, ἄπιστόν τινα ποιούμενοι τῶν ἀναλισκομένων ἀμετρίαν. διη-

ANTONY

told, was in itself not altogether incomparable, nor such as to strike those who saw her; but converse with her had an irresistible charm, and her presence, combined with the persuasiveness of her discourse and the character which was somehow diffused about her behaviour towards others, had something stimulating about it. There was sweetness also in the tones of her voice; and her tongue, like an instrument of many strings, she could readily turn to whatever language she pleased, so that in her interviews with Barbarians she very seldom had need of an interpreter, but made her replies to most of them herself and unassisted, whether they were Ethiopians, Troglodytes, Hebrews, Arabians, Syrians, Medes or Parthians. Nay, it is said that she knew the speech of many other peoples also, although the kings of Egypt before her had not even made an effort to learn the native language, and some actually gave up their Macedonian dialect.

XXVIII. Accordingly, she made such booty of Antony that, while Fulvia his wife was carrying on war at Rome with Caesar in defence of her husband's interests, and while a Parthian army was hovering about Mesopotamia (over this country the generals of the king had appointed Labienus Parthian commander-in-chief, and were about to invade Syria), he suffered her to hurry him off to Alexandria. There, indulging in the sports and diversions of a young man of leisure, he squandered and spent upon pleasures that which Antiphon calls the most costly outlay, namely, time. For they had an association called The Inimitable Livers, and every day they feasted one another, making their expenditures of incredible profusion. At any rate, Philotas, the

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

γείτο γοῦν ἡμῶν τῷ πάππῳ Λαμπρία Φιλώτας ὁ Ἄμφισσεὺς ἰατρὸς εἶναι μὲν ἐν Ἀλεξανδρείᾳ τότε, μανθάνων τὴν τέχνην, γενόμενος δέ τιμι τῶν βασιλικῶν ὀψοποιῶν συνήθης ἀναπεισθῆναι νέος ὢν ὑπ' αὐτοῦ τὴν πολυτέλειαν καὶ τὴν παρα-3 σκευὴν τοῦ δείπνου θεάσασθαι. παρειαχθεὶς οὖν εἰς τοῦπτανεῖον, ὡς τά τε ἄλλα πάμπολλα ἐώρα καὶ σὺς ἀγρίους ὀπτωμένους ὀκτώ, θαυμάσαι τὸ πλήθος τῶν δειπνούντων. τὸν δὲ ὀψοποιὸν γελάσαι καὶ εἰπεῖν ὅτι πολλοὶ μὲν οὐκ εἰσὶν οἱ δειπνούντες, ἀλλὰ περὶ δώδεκα· δεῖ δ' ἀκμὴν ἔχειν τῶν παρατιθεμένων ἕκαστον, ἣν ἀκαρὲς ὥρας μαραίνει. καὶ γὰρ αὐτίκα γένοιτ' ἂν Ἀντωνίου δείπνου δεηθῆναι καὶ μετὰ μικρόν, ἂν δὲ οὕτω τύχη, παραγαγεῖν αἰτήσαντα ποτήριον ἢ λόγου 4 τινὸς ἐμπεσόντος. ὅθεν οὐχ ἓν, ἀλλὰ πολλά, φάναι, δείπνα συντέτακται· δυσστόχαστος γὰρ ὁ καιρὸς. ταῦτα οὖν ὁ Φιλώτας ἔλεγε, καὶ χρόνου προϊόντος ἐν τοῖς θεραπεύουσι γενέσθαι τὸν πρε-σβύτατον τῶν Ἀντωνίου παίδων, ὃν ἐκ Φουλβίας εἶχε, καὶ συνδειπνεῖν παρ' αὐτῷ μετὰ τῶν ἄλλων ἐταίρων ἐπεικῶς, ὅποτε μὴ δειπνοίῃ μετὰ τοῦ 5 πατρός. ἰατρὸν οὖν ποτε θρασυνόμενον καὶ πράγματα πολλὰ παρέχοντα δειπνοῦσιν αὐτοῖς ἐπιστομίσαι τοιοῦτῳ σοφίσματι· “Τῷ πως πυρεττουτι δοτέον ψυχρόν· πᾶς δὲ ὁ πυρέττων πως πυρέττει· παντὶ ἄρα πυρέττουτι δοτέον ψυχρόν.”
 πληγέντος δὲ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου καὶ σιωπήσαντος,

ANTONY

physician of Amphisssa, used to tell my grandfather, Lamprias, that he was in Alexandria at this time, studying his profession, and that having got well acquainted with one of the royal cooks, he was easily persuaded by him (young man that he was) to take a view of the extravagant preparations for a royal supper. Accordingly, he was introduced into the kitchen, and when he saw all the other provisions in great abundance, and eight wild boars a-roasting, he expressed his amazement at what must be the number of the guests. But the cook burst out laughing and said: "The guests are not many, only about twelve; but everything that is set before them must be at perfection, and this an instant of time reduces. For it might happen that Antony would ask for supper immediately, and after a little while, perhaps, would postpone it and call for a cup of wine, or engage in conversation with some one. Wherefore," he said, "not one, but many suppers are arranged; for the precise time is hard to hit." This tale, then, Philotas used to tell; and he said also that as time went on he became one of the medical attendants of Antony's oldest son, whom he had of Fulvia, and that he usually supped with him at his house in company with the rest of his comrades, when the young man did not sup with his father. Accordingly, on one occasion, as a physician was making too bold and giving much annoyance to them as they supped, Philotas stopped his mouth with some such sophism as this: "To the patient who is somewhat feverish cold water must be given; but everyone who has a fever is somewhat feverish; therefore to everyone who has a fever cold water should be given." The fellow was confounded and put to silence, whereat ἡσθέντα τὸν παῖδα γελάσαι καὶ εἰπεῖν, “ Ταῦτα, ὦ Φιλῶτα, χαρίζομαι πάντα σοι,” δείξαντα πολλῶν τινῶν καὶ μεγάλων ἐκπωμάτων μεστήν τρά-6 πεζαν. αὐτοῦ δὲ τὴν μὲν προθυμίαν ἀποδεξα-μένου, πόρρω δ’ ὄντος τοῦ νομίζειν ἐξουσίαν εἶναι παιδὶ τηλικούτῳ δωρεῖσθαι τοσαῦτα, μετὰ μικρὸν ἀψάμενόν τινα τῶν παίδων ἐν ἀγγεῖῳ τὰ ἐκπώ-ματα προσφέρειν καὶ σημήνασθαι κελεύειν. ἀφο-σιουμένου δὲ αὐτοῦ καὶ δεδοικότος λαβεῖν, “ Τί, ὦ πόνηρε,” φάναι τὸν ἄνθρωπον, “ ὀκνεῖς; οὐκ οἶδας ὡς ὁ διδοὺς Ἄντωνίου παῖς ἐστίν, ᾧ τοσαῦ-7 τα πάρεστι χρυσᾶ χαρίσασθαι; ἐμοὶ μέντοι πειθόμενος πάντα διάμειψαι πρὸς ἀργύριον ἡμῖν ἴσως γὰρ ἂν καὶ ποθήσειεν ὁ πατήρ ἕνια τῶν παλαιῶν ὄντα καὶ σπουδαζομένων κατὰ τὴν τέχνην ἔργων.” ταῦτα μὲν οὖν ἡμῖν ἔλεγεν ὁ πάππος ἐκάστοτε διηγείσθαι τὸν Φιλῶταν.

XXIX. Ἡ δὲ Κλεοπάτρα τὴν κολακείαν οὐχ, ὥσπερ ὁ Πλάτων φησί, τετραχῆ, πολλαχῆ δὲ διελοῦσα, καὶ σπουδῆς ἀπτομένῳ καὶ παιδιᾷς αἰεὶ τινα καινὴν ἡδονὴν ἐπιφέρουσα καὶ χάριν, διε-παιδαγώγει τὸν Ἄντωνιον οὔτε νυκτὸς οὔτε ἡμέρας ἀνιείσα. καὶ γὰρ συνεκύβευε καὶ συνέπιπε καὶ συνεθήρευε καὶ γυμναζόμενον ἐν ὄπλοις ἐθεᾶ-το, καὶ νύκτωρ προσισταμένῳ θύραις καὶ θυρίσι δημοτῶν καὶ σκώπτοντι τοὺς ἔνδον συνεπλανᾶτο καὶ συνήλυε θεραπαινιδίου στολὴν λαμβάνουσα.
 2 καὶ γὰρ ἐκεῖνος οὕτως ἐπειρᾶτο σκευάζειν ἑαυτόν.
 ὅθεν αἰεὶ σκωμμάτων, πολλάκις δὲ καὶ πληγῶν

ANTONY

Antony's son was delighted and said with a laugh : " All this I bestow upon thee, Philotas," pointing to a table covered with a great many large beakers. Philotas acknowledged his good intentions, but was far from supposing that a boy so young had the power to give away so much. After a little while, however, one of the slaves brought the beakers to him in a sack, and bade him put his seal upon it. And when Philotas protested and was afraid to take them, " You miserable man," said the fellow, " why hesitate? Don't you know that the giver is the son of Antony, and that he has the right to bestow so many golden vessels? However, take my advice and exchange them all with us for money ; since perchance the boy's father might miss some of the vessels, which are of ancient workmanship and highly valued for their art." Such details, then, my grandfather used to tell me, Philotas would recount at every opportunity.

XXIX. But Cleopatra, distributing her flattery, not into the four forms of which Plato speaks,¹ but into many, and ever contributing some fresh delight and charm to Antony's hours of seriousness or mirth, kept him in constant tutelage, and released him neither night nor day. She played at dice with him, drank with him, hunted with him, and watched him as he exercised himself in arms ; and when by night he would station himself at the doors or windows of the common folk and scoff at those within, she would go with him on his round of mad follies, wearing the garb of a serving maiden. For Antony also would try to array himself like a servant. Therefore he always reaped a harvest of abuse, and often of blows, before coming back

¹ Gorgias, p. 464.

ἀπολαύσας ἐπανήρχετο· τοῖς δὲ πλείστοις ἦν δι' ὑπονοίας. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ προσέχαιρον αὐτοῦ τῇ βωμολοχίᾳ καὶ συνέπαιζον οὐκ ἀρρῦθμως οὐδὲ ἀμούσως οἱ Ἀλεξανδρεῖς, ἀγαπῶντες καὶ λέγοντες ὡς τῷ τραγικῷ πρὸς τοὺς Ῥωμαίους χρῆται προσώπῳ, τῷ δὲ κωμικῷ πρὸς αὐτούς.

- 3 Τὰ μὲν οὖν πολλὰ τῶν ὑπ' αὐτοῦ παιζομένων 929 διηγείσθαι πολὺς ἂν εἶη φλύαρος· ἐπεὶ δὲ ἀλιεύων ποτὲ καὶ δυσαγρῶν ἤχθετο παρούσης τῆς Κλεοπάτρας, ἐκέλευσε τοὺς ἀλιεῖς ὑπονηξαμένους κρύφα τῷ ἀγκίστρῳ περικαθάπτειν ἰχθύς τῶν προεαλωκότων, καὶ δις ἢ τρὶς ἀνασπάσας οὐκ ἔλαθε τὴν Αἴγυπτίαν. προσποιουμένη δὲ θαυμάζειν τοῖς φίλοις διηγείτο, καὶ παρεκάλει τῇ ὑστεραία γενέσθαι θεατάς. ἐμβάντων δὲ πολλῶν εἰς τὰς ἀλιάδας καὶ τοῦ Ἀντωνίου τὴν ὄρμιαν καθέντος, ἐκέλευσέ τινα τῶν αὐτῆς ὑποφθάσαντα καὶ προσνηξάμενον τῷ ἀγκίστρῳ περιπεῖραι Ποντικὸν τάριχος. ὡς δὲ ἔχειν πεισθεὶς ὁ Ἀντώνιος ἀνεῖλκε, γέλωτος, οἶον εἰκός, γενομένου, “Παράδος ἡμῖν,” ἔφη, “τὸν κάλαμον, αὐτόκρατορ, τοῖς Φαρίταις καὶ Κανωβίταις ἀλιεύσιν.¹ ἢ δὲ σὴ θήρα πόλεις εἰσὶ καὶ βασιλεῖαι καὶ ἡπειροί.”

XXX. Τοιαῦτα ληροῦντα καὶ μειρακιευόμενον τὸν Ἀντώνιον ἀγγελίαι δύο καταλαμβάνουσιν, ἡ μὲν ἀπὸ Ῥώμης, Λεύκιον τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ καὶ Φουλβίαν τὴν γυναῖκα πρῶτον ἀλλήλοις στασιάζαντας, εἶτα Καίσαρι πολεμήσαντας, ἀποβεβλη-home ; though most people suspected who he was. However, the Alexandrians took delight in his coarse wit, and joined in his amusements in their graceful and cultivated way ; they liked him, and said that he used the tragic mask with the Romans, but the comic mask with them.

¹ ἀλιεῦσιν Bekker, after Hüllman : βασιλεῦσιν.

ANTONY

Now, to recount the greater part of his boyish pranks would be great nonsense. One instance will suffice. He was fishing once, and had bad luck, and was vexed at it because Cleopatra was there to see. He therefore ordered his fishermen to dive down and secretly fasten to his hook some fish that had been previously caught, and pulled up two or three of them. But the Egyptian saw through the trick, and pretending to admire her lover's skill, told her friends about it, and invited them to be spectators of it on the following day. So great numbers of them got into the fishing boats, and when Antony had let down his line, she ordered one of her own attendants to get the start of him by swimming to his hook and fastening on it a salted Pontic herring. Antony thought he had caught something, and pulled it up, whereupon there was great laughter, as was natural, and Cleopatra said : " Imperator, hand over thy fishing-rod to the fishermen of Pharos and Canopus ; thy sport is the hunting of cities, realms, and continents."

XXX. While Antony was indulging in such trifles and youthful follies, he was surprised by reports from two quarters: one from Rome, that Lucius his brother and Fulvia his wife had first quarrelled with one another, and then had waged war with Octavius Caesar, but had lost their cause κέναι τὰ πράγματα καὶ φεύγειν ἐξ Ἰταλίας, ἐτέρα δὲ ταύτης οὐδὲν ἐπιεικεστέρα, Λαβιητὸν ἐπάγοντα Πάρθους τὴν ἀπ' Εὐφράτου καὶ Συρίας ἄχρι Λυδίας καὶ Ἰωνίας Ἀσίαν κατα-

 2 στρέφουσαι. μόλις οὖν ὥσπερ ἐξυπνισθεὶς καὶ ἀποκραιπαλήσας ὥρμησε μὲν Πάρθοις ἐνίστασθαι καὶ μέχρι Φοινίκης προῆλθε, Φουλβίας δὲ γράμματα θρήνων μεστὰ πεμπούσης ἐπέστρεψεν εἰς τὴν Ἰταλίαν, ἄγων ναῦς διακοσίας. ἀναλαβὼν δὲ κατὰ πλοῦν τῶν φίλων τοὺς πεφευγότας ἐπυνθάνετο τοῦ πολέμου τὴν Φουλβίαν αἰτίαν γεγονέαι, φύσει μὲν οὖσαν πολυπράγμονα καὶ θρασεῖαν, ἐλπίζουσαν δὲ τῆς Κλεοπάτρας ἀπάξειν τὸν Ἀντωνίου εἴ τι γένοιτο
 3 κίνημα περὶ τὴν Ἰταλίαν. συμβαίνει δὲ ἀπὸ τύχης καὶ Φουλβίαν πλέουσαν πρὸς αὐτὸν ἐν Σικυῶνι νόσφ' τελευτήσαι· διὸ καὶ μᾶλλον αἰ πρὸς Καίσαρα διαλλαγῆαι καιρὸν ἔσχον. ὡς γὰρ προσέμιξε τῇ Ἰταλίᾳ καὶ Καίσαρ ἦν φανερὸς ἐκείνῳ μὲν οὐθὲν ἐγκαλῶν, αὐτὸς δ' ὧν ἐνεκαλεῖτο τὰς αἰτίας τῇ Φουλβίᾳ προστριβόμενος, οὐκ εἶων
 4 ἐξελέγχειν οἱ φίλοι τὴν πρόφασιν, ἀλλὰ διέλυνον ἀμφοτέρους καὶ διήρουν τὴν ἡγεμονίαν, ὄρον ποιούμενοι τὸν Ἴόνιον, καὶ τὰ μὲν ἑῷα νέμοντες Ἀντωνίῳ, τὰ δ' ἐσπέρια Καίσαρι, Λέπιδον δὲ Λιβύην ἔχειν ἑῶντες, ὑπατεύειν δὲ τάξαντες, ὅτε μὴ δόξειεν αὐτοῖς, φίλους ἑκατέρων παρὰ μέρος.

XXXI. Ταῦτα ἔχειν καλῶς δοκοῦντα πίστει εὐδεῖτο σφοδροτέρας, ἦν ἡ τύχη παρέσχευεν. Ὀκταουία γὰρ ἦν ἀδελφὴ πρεσβυτέρα μὲν, οὐχ ὁμο-and were in flight from Italy; and another, not a whit more agreeable than this, that Labienus at the head of the Parthians was subduing Asia from the Euphrates and Syria as far as Lydia and Ionia. At last, then, like a man roused from sleep after a deep debauch, he set out to oppose the Parthians, and advanced as far as Phoenicia;¹ but on receiving from Fulvia a letter full of lamentations, he turned his course towards Italy, at the head of two hundred ships. On the voyage, however, he picked up his friends who were in flight from Italy, and learned from them that Fulvia had been to blame for the war, being naturally a meddling and headstrong woman, and hoping to draw Antony away from Cleopatra in case there should be a disturbance in Italy. It happened, too, that Fulvia, who was sailing to meet him, fell sick and died at Sicyon. Therefore there was even more opportunity for a reconciliation with Caesar. For when Antony reached Italy, and Caesar manifestly intended to make no charges against him, and Antony himself was ready to put upon Fulvia the blame for whatever was charged against himself, the friends of the two men would not permit any examination of the proffered excuse, but reconciled them, and divided up the empire, making the Ionian sea a boundary, and assigning the East to Antony, and the West to Caesar; they also permitted Lepidus to have Africa, and arranged that, when they did not wish for the office themselves, the friends of each should have the consulship by turns.

ANTONY

XXXI. These arrangements were thought to be fair, but they needed a stronger security, and this security Fortune offered. Octavia was a sister of Caesar, older than he, though not by the same

¹ Towards the end of the year 40 B. C.

μητρία δὲ Καίσαρι· ἐγεγόνει γὰρ ἐξ Ἀγχαρίας, ὃ δὲ ὕστερον ἐξ Ἀτίας. ἔστεργε δ' ὑπερφυῶς τὴν ἀδελφὴν, χρῆμα θαυμαστόν, ὡς λέγεται, γυναικὸς 2 γενομένην. αὕτη, Γαίου Μαρκέλλου τοῦ γήμαντος αὐτὴν οὐ πάλαι τεθνηκότος, ἐχίρευεν. ἐδόκει δὲ καὶ Φουλβίας ἀποιχομένης χηρεύειν Ἀντώνιος, ἔχειν μὲν οὐκ ἀρνούμενος Κλεοπάτραν, γάμφ δὲ οὐχ ὁμολογῶν, ἀλλ' ἔτι τῷ λόγῳ περὶ γε τούτου πρὸς τὸν ἔρωτα τῆς Αἰγυπτίας μαχόμενος. 3 τοῦτον ἅπαντες εἰσηγοῦντο τὸν γάμον, ἐλπίζοντες τὴν Ὀκταουίαν ἐπὶ κάλλει τοσοῦτῳ σεμνότητι καὶ νοῦν ἔχουσαν, εἰς ταῦτον τῷ Ἀντωνίῳ παραγενομένην καὶ στερχθεῖσαν, ὡς εἰκὸς τοιαύτην γυναῖκα, πάντων πραγμάτων αὐτοῖς σωτηρίαν 3 ἔσεσθαι καὶ σύγκρασιν. ὡς οὖν ἔδοξεν ἀμφοτέροις, ἀναβάντες εἰς Ῥώμην ἐπετέλουν τὸν Ὀκταουίας γάμον, οὐκ ἐῶντος μὲν νόμου πρὸ δέκα μηνῶν ἀνδρὸς τελευτήσαντος γαμείσθαι, τῆς 930 δὲ συγκλήτου δόγματι τὸν χρόνον ἐκείνοις ἀνείσης.

XXXII. Σέξτου δὲ Πομπηίου Σικελίαν μὲν ἔχοντος, Ἰταλίαν δὲ πορθοῦντος, ληστρίσι δὲ ναυσὶ πολλαῖς, ὧν Μηνᾶς ὁ πειρατὴς καὶ Μενεκράτης ἦρχον, ἄπλουν τὴν θάλασσαν πεποιηκότος, Ἀντωνίῳ δὲ κεχρηῆσθαι δοκοῦντος φιλανθρώπως (ὑπεδέξατο γὰρ αὐτοῦ τὴν μητέρα τῇ Φουλβίᾳ 2 συνεκπεσοῦσαν), ἔδοξε καὶ πρὸς τοῦτον διαλυθῆναι. καὶ συνήλθον εἰς ταῦτον κατὰ τὴν ἐν Μισηνοῖς ἄκραν καὶ τὸ χῶμα, Πομπηίῳ μὲν τοῦ στόλου παρορμοῦντος, Ἀντωνίῳ δὲ καὶ Καίσαρι τῶν πεζῶν παρακεκριμένων. ἐπεὶ δὲ συνέθετο Πομπηίου ἔχοντα Σαρδόνα καὶ Σικελίαν καθαρὰν 206 mother; for she was the child of Ancharia, but he, by a later marriage, of Atia. Caesar was exceedingly fond of his sister, who was, as the saying is, a wonder of a woman. Her husband, Caius Marcellus, had died a short time before, and she was a widow. Antony, too, now that Fulvia was gone, was held to be a widower, although he did not deny his relations with Cleopatra; he would not admit, however, that she was his wife, and in this matter his reason was still battling with his love for the Egyptian. Everybody tried to bring about this marriage. For they hoped that Octavia, who, besides her great beauty, had intelligence and dignity, when united to Antony and beloved by him, as such a woman naturally must be, would restore harmony and be their complete salvation. Accordingly, when both men were agreed, they went up to Rome and celebrated Octavia's marriage, although the law did not permit a woman to marry before her husband had been dead ten months. In this case, however, the senate passed a decree remitting the restriction in time.

ANTONY

XXXII. Now, Sextus Pompeius was holding Sicily, was ravaging Italy, and, with his numerous piratical ships under the command of Menas the corsair and Menecrates, had made the sea unsafe for sailors. But he was thought to be kindly disposed towards Antony, since he had given refuge to Antony's mother when she fled from Rome with Fulvia, and so it was decided to make terms with him. The men met at the promontory and mole of Misenum, near which Pompey's fleet lay at anchor and the forces of Antony and Caesar were drawn up. After it had been agreed that Pompey should have τε ληστηρίων παρέχειν τὴν θάλατταν καὶ σίτου τι τεταγμένον ἀποστέλλειν εἰς Ῥώμην, ἐκάλουν 3 ἐπὶ δεῖπνον ἀλλήλους. κληρουμένων δὲ πρώτος ἐστὶαν αὐτοὺς ἔλαχε Πομπηῖος. ἐρομένου δὲ αὐτὸν Ἀντωνίου, ποῦ δειπνήσουσιν, “Ἐνταῦθα,” ἔφη, δείξας τὴν στρατηγίδα ναῦν οὖσαν ἐξήρη “πατρῶος γὰρ οἶκος αὕτη Πομπηῖῳ λέλειπται.”

 ταῦτα δὲ εἰς τὸν Ἀντώνιον ὄνειδίζων ἔλεγεν, ἐπεὶ τὴν Πομπηῖου τοῦ πατρὸς γενομένην οἰκίαν ἐκεῖ-νος εἶχεν. ὀρμίσας δὲ τὴν ναῦν ἐπ’ ἀγκυρῶν καὶ διάβασίν τινα γεφυρώσας ἀπὸ τῆς ἄκρας ἀνελάμ-4 βανεν αὐτοὺς προθύμως. ἀκμαζούσης δὲ τῆς συνουσίας καὶ τῶν εἰς Κλεοπάτραν καὶ Ἀντώνιον ἀνθούτων σκωμμάτων, Μηνᾶς ὁ πειρατῆς τῷ Πομπηῖῳ προσελθὼν ὡς μὴ κατακούειν ἐκείνους, “Βούλει,” φησί, “τὰς ἀγκύρας τῆς νεὸς ὑποτέμω καὶ ποιήσω σε μὴ Σικελίας καὶ Σαρδόνος, ἀλλὰ 5 τῆς Ῥωμαίων κύριον ἡγεμονίας;” ὁ δὲ Πομπηῖος ἀκούσας καὶ πρὸς αὐτῷ γενόμενος βραχὺν χρόνον, “Ἐδει σε,” φησὶν, “ὦ Μηνᾶ, τοῦτο ἐμοὶ μὴ προειπόντα ποιῆσαι· νυνὶ δὲ τὰ παρόντα στέρ-γωμεν· ἐπιорκεῖν γὰρ οὐκ ἐμόν.” οὗτος μὲν οὖν πάλιν ἀνθεστιαθεὶς ὑπ’ ἀμφοτέρων εἰς τὴν Σικελίαν ἀπέπλευσεν.

XXXIII. Ἀντώνιος δὲ μετὰ τὰς διαλύσεις Οὐεντίδιον μὲν εἰς Ἀσίαν προὔπεμπε Πάρθοις ἐμποδῶν ἐσόμενον τοῦ πρόσω χωρεῖν, αὐτὸς δὲ Καίσαρι χαριζόμενος ἱερεὺς ἀπεδείχθη τοῦ προτέρου Καίσαρος· καὶ τὰλλα κοινῶς καὶ φιλικῶς ἐν τοῖς πολιτικοῖς καὶ μεγίστοις ἔπραττον. αἱ δὲ περὶ τὰς παιδιὰς ἄμλλαι τὸν Ἀντώνιον ἐλύπουν

ANTONY

Sardinia and Sicily, should keep the sea clear of robbers, and should send up to Rome a stipulated amount of grain, they invited one another to supper. Lots were cast, and it was the lot of Pompey to entertain the others first. And when Antony asked him where the supper would be held, "There," said he, pointing to his admiral's ship with its six banks of oars, "for this is the ancestral house that is left to Pompey." This he said by way of reproach to Antony, who was now occupying the house which had belonged to the elder Pompey. So he brought his ship to anchor, made a sort of bridge on which to cross to it from the headland, and gave his guests a hearty welcome on board. When their good fellowship was at its height and the jokes about Antony and Cleopatra were in full career, Menas the pirate came up to Pompey and said, so that the others could not hear, "Shall I cut the ship's cables and make thee master, not of Sicily and Sardinia, but of the whole Roman empire?" Pompey, on hearing this, communed with himself a little while, and then said: "Menas, you ought to have done this without speaking to me about it beforehand; but now let us be satisfied with things as they are; for perjury is not my way." Pompey, then, after being feasted in his turn by Antony and Caesar, sailed back to Sicily.

XXXIII. After this settlement, Antony sent Ventidius on ahead into Asia to oppose the further progress of the Parthians, while he himself, as a favour to Caesar, was appointed to the priesthood of the elder Caesar;¹ everything else also of the most important political nature they transacted together and in a friendly spirit. But their competitive diversions gave ¹ That is, he was made Pontifex Maximus.

2 αὐτὸ τοῦ Καίσαρος ἔλαττον φερόμενον. ἦν γάρ τις ἀνὴρ σὺν αὐτῷ μαντικὸς ἀπ' Αἰγύπτου τῶν τὰς γενέσεις ἐπισκοποῦντων, ὃς εἶτε Κλεοπάτρα χαριζόμενος εἶτε χρώμενος ἀληθείᾳ πρὸς τὸν Ἀντώνιον ἐπαρρησιάζετο, λέγων τὴν τύχην αὐτοῦ λαμπροτάτην οὔσαν καὶ μεγίστην ὑπὸ τῆς Καίσαρος ἀμαυροῦσθαι, καὶ συνεβούλευε πορρωτάτω τοῦ νεανίσκου ποιεῖν ἑαυτόν. “Ὁ γὰρ σός,” ἔφη, “δαίμων τὸν τούτου φοβεῖται· καὶ γαῦρος ὢν καὶ ὑψηλὸς ὅταν ἦ καθ' ἑαυτόν, ὑπ' ἐκείνου γίνεται ταπεινότερος ἐγγίσαντος καὶ ἀγεννέστερος.”

3 καὶ μέντοι τὰ γινόμενα τῷ Αἰγυπτίῳ μαρτυρεῖν ἐδόκει. λέγεται γὰρ ὅτι κληρουμένων μετὰ παιδιᾶς ἐφ' ὅτῳ τύχοιεν ἐκάστοτε καὶ κυβευόντων ἔλαττον ἔχων ὁ Ἀντώνιος ἀπῆε. πολλάκις δὲ συμβαλόντων ἀλεκτρυόνας, πολλάκις δὲ μαχίμους ὄρνυγας, ἐνίκων οἱ Καίσαρος.

Ἐφ' οἷς ἀνιῶμενος ἀδήλως ὁ Ἀντώνιος καὶ μᾶλλον τι τῷ Αἰγυπτίῳ προσέχων, ἀπῆρεν ἐκ τῆς Ἰταλίας, ἐγχειρίσας Καίσαρι τὰ οἰκεία· τὴν δὲ Ὀκταουίαν ἄχρι τῆς Ἑλλάδος ἐπήγετο θυ-

4 γατρίου γεγονότος αὐτοῖς. διαχειμᾶζοντι δὲ αὐτῷ περὶ Ἀθήνας ἀπαγγέλλεται τὰ πρῶτα τῶν Οὐεντιδίου κατορθωμάτων, ὅτι μάχῃ τοὺς Πάρθους κρατήσας Λαβιηνὸν ἀπεκτόνοι καὶ Φαρναπάτην ἡγεμονικώτατον τῶν Ἰσθμοῦ βασιλέως στρατηγῶν. ἐπὶ τούτοις εἰστία τοὺς Ἕλληνας, ἐγυμνασιάρχει δὲ Ἀθηναίους, καὶ τὰ τῆς ἡγεμονίας παράσημα καταλιπὼν οἶκοι μετὰ τῶν γυμνασιαρχικῶν ῥάβδων ἐν ἱματίῳ καὶ φαίκασις προήει καὶ διαλαμβάνων τοὺς νεανίσκους ἐτραχήλιζεν.

931

ANTONY

Antony annoyance, because he always came off with less than Caesar. Now, there was with him a seer from Egypt, one of those who cast nativities. This man, either as a favour to Cleopatra, or dealing truly with Antony, used frank language with him, saying that his fortune, though most great and splendid, was obscured by that of Caesar; and he advised Antony to put as much distance as possible between himself and that young man. "For thy guardian genius," said he, "is afraid of his; and though it has a spirited and lofty mien when it is by itself, when his comes near, thine is cowed and humbled by it." And indeed events seemed to testify in favour of the Egyptian. For we are told that whenever, by way of diversion, lots were cast or dice thrown to decide matters in which they were engaged, Antony came off worsted. They would often match cocks, and often fighting quails, and Caesar's would always be victorious.

At all this Antony was annoyed, though he did not show it, and giving rather more heed now to the Egyptian, he departed from Italy, after putting his private affairs in the hands of Caesar; and he took Octavia with him as far as Greece (she had borne him a daughter). It was while he was spending the winter at Athens that word was brought to him of the first successes of Ventidius, who had conquered the Parthians in battle and slain Labienus, as well as Pharnapates, the most capable general of King Hyrodes. To celebrate this victory Antony feasted the Greeks, and acted as gymnasiarch for the Athenians. He left at home the insignia of his command, and went forth carrying the wands of a gymnasiarch, in a Greek robe and white shoes, and he would take the young combatants by the neck and part them.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- XXXIV. Ἐξίεναι δὲ μέλλων ἐπὶ τὸν πόλεμον ἀπὸ τῆς ἱερᾶς ἐλαίας στέφανον ἔλαβε, καὶ κατὰ τι λόγιον ἀπὸ τῆς Κλεψύδρας ὕδατος ἐμπλησάμενος ἀγγεῖον ἐκόμιζεν. ἐν τούτῳ δὲ Πάκορον τὸν βασιλέως παῖδα, μεγάλῳ στρατῷ Πάρθων αὐθις ἐπὶ Συρίαν ἐλαύνοντα, συμπεσὼν Οὐεντίδιος ἐν τῇ Κυρρηστικῇ τρέπεται, καὶ διαφθείρει παμπόλλους, ἐν πρώτοις Πακόρου πεσόντος.
- 2 τοῦτο τὸ ἔργον ἐν τοῖς ἀοιδιμωτάτοις γενόμενον Ῥωμαίοις τε τῶν κατὰ Κράσσον ἀτυχημάτων ἔκπλεω ποινὴν παρέσχε, καὶ Πάρθους αὐθις εἰσω Μηδίας καὶ Μεσοποταμίας συνέστειλε, τρισὶ μάχαις ἐφεξῆς κατὰ κράτος ἠττημένους. Οὐεντίδιος δὲ Πάρθους μὲν προσωτέρω διώκειν ἀπέγνω, φθόνον Ἀντωνίου δείσας, τοὺς δὲ ἀφεστῶτας ἐπιῶν κατεστρέφετο καὶ τὸν Κομμαγηνὸν Ἀντί-
- 3 οχον ἐν πόλει Σαμοσάτοις ἐπολιόρκει. δεόμενου δὲ χίλια τάλαντα δοῦναι καὶ ποιεῖν Ἀντωνίῳ τὸ προσταττόμενον, ἐκέλευε πέμπειν πρὸς Ἀντώνιον. ἤδη γὰρ ἐγγὺς ἦν ἐπιῶν, καὶ τὸν Οὐεντίδιον οὐκ εἶα σπένδεσθαι τῷ Ἀντιόχῳ, βουλόμενος ἔν γε τοῦτο τῶν ἔργων ἐπώνυμον αὐτοῦ γενέσθαι καὶ μὴ
- 4 πάντα διὰ Οὐεντιδίου κατορθοῦσθαι. τῆς δὲ πολιορκίας μῆκος λαμβανούσης καὶ τῶν ἔνδον, ὡς ἀπέγνωσαν τὰς διαλύσεις, πρὸς ἀλκὴν τραπομένων, πρᾶττων οὐδέν, ἐν αἰσχύνῃ δὲ καὶ μεταγνώσει γενόμενος, ἀγαπητῶς ἐπὶ τριακοσίοις σπένδε-

ANTONY

XXXIV. When he was about to go forth to the war, he took a wreath from the sacred olive-tree,¹ and, in obedience to a certain oracle, filled a vessel with water from the Clepsydra² and carried it with him. In the meantime Pacorus, the king's son, advanced again with a large army of Parthians against Syria; but Ventidius engaged and routed him in Cyrrhestica, and slew great numbers of his men.³ Pacorus fell among the first. This exploit, which became one of the most celebrated, gave the Romans full satisfaction for the disaster under Crassus, and shut the Parthians up again within the bounds of Media and Mesopotamia, after they had been utterly defeated in three successive battles. Ventidius, however, decided not to pursue the Parthians further, because he feared the jealousy of Antony; but he attacked and subdued the peoples which had revolted from Rome, and besieged Antiochus of Commagené in the city of Samosata. When Antiochus proposed to pay a thousand talents and obey the behests of Antony, Ventidius ordered him to send his proposal to Antony, who had now advanced into the neighbourhood, and would not permit Ventidius to make peace with Antiochus. He insisted that this one exploit at least should bear his own name, and that not all the successes should be due to Ventidius. But the siege was protracted, and the besieged, since they despaired of coming to terms, betook themselves to a vigorous defence. Antony could therefore accomplish nothing, and feeling ashamed and repentant, was glad to make peace with

¹ In the Erechtheum, on the Acropolis.

² A sacred spring just below the ancient portal of the Acropolis (Pausanias, i. 28, 4).

³ In 38 B.C. See the Crassus, xxxiii. 5, with the note.

ται ταλάντοις πρὸς τὸν Ἀντίοχον· καὶ μικρὰ τῶν ἐν Συρία καταστησάμενος εἰς Ἀθήνας ἐπανήλθε, καὶ τὸν Οὐεντίδιον οἷς ἔπρεπε τιμῆσας ἔπεμψεν ἐπὶ τὸν θρίαμβον.

- 5 Οὗτος ἀπὸ Πάρθων ἄχρι δεῦρο τεθριάμβευκε μόνος, ἀνὴρ γένει μὲν ἀφανής, ἀπολαύσας δὲ τῆς Ἀντωνίου φιλίας τὸ λαβεῖν ἀφορμὰς πράξεων μεγάλων, αἷς κάλλιστα χρησάμενος ἐβεβαίωσε τὸν περὶ Ἀντωνίου λεγόμενον καὶ Καίσαρος λόγον, ὡς εὐτυχέστεροι δι' ἐτέρων ἦσαν ἢ δι' αὐτῶν
- 6 στρατηγεῖν. καὶ γὰρ Σόσσιος Ἀντωνίου στρατηγὸς ἐν Συρία πολλὰ διεπράττετο, καὶ Κανίδιος ἀπολειφθεὶς ὑπ' αὐτοῦ περὶ Ἀρμενίαν τούτους τε νικῶν καὶ τοὺς Ἰβήρων καὶ Ἀλβανῶν βασιλέας ἄχρι τοῦ Καυκάσου προῆλθεν. ἀφ' ὧν ἐν τοῖς βαρβάροις ὄνομα καὶ κλέος ἠϋξέτο τῆς Ἀντωνίου δυνάμεως.

- XXXV. Αὐτὸς δὲ πάλιν ἔκ τινων διαβολῶν παροξυνθεὶς πρὸς Καίσαρα ναυσὶ τριακοσίαις ἔπλει πρὸς τὴν Ἰταλίαν· οὐ δεξαμένων δὲ τῶν Βρεντεσινῶν τὸν στόλον εἰς Τάραντα περιώρμισεν. ἐνταῦθα τὴν Ὀκταουίαν (συνέπλει γὰρ ἀπὸ τῆς Ἑλλάδος αὐτῷ) δεηθεῖσαν ἀποπέμπει πρὸς τὸν ἀδελφόν, ἔγκυον μὲν οὖσαν, ἤδη δὲ καὶ δεῦτερον
- 2 ἐξ αὐτοῦ θυγάτριον ἔχουσαν. ἡ δὲ ἀπαντήσασα καθ' ὁδὸν Καίσαρι, καὶ παραλαβοῦσα τῶν ἐκείνου φίλων Ἀγρίππαν καὶ Μαικῆναν, ἐνετύγχανε πολλὰ ποτνωμένη καὶ πολλὰ δεομένη μὴ περιιδεῖν αὐτὴν ἐκ μακαριωτάτης γυναικὸς ἀθλιωτάτην γενομένην. νῦν μὲν γὰρ ἅπαντας ἀνθρώπους εἰς αὐτὴν ἀποβλέπειν αὐτοκρατόρων δυεῖν, τοῦ
- 3 μὲν γυναῖκα, τοῦ δὲ ἀδελφὴν οὖσαν· “ εἰ δὲ τὰ

ANTONY

Antiochus on his payment of three hundred talents. After settling some trivial matters in Syria, he returned to Athens, and sent Ventidius home, with becoming honours, to enjoy his triumph.

Ventidius is the only man up to the present time who ever celebrated a triumph over the Parthians. He was a man of lowly birth, but his friendship with Antony bore fruit for him in opportunities to perform great deeds. Of these opportunities he made the best use, and so confirmed what was generally said of Antony and Caesar, namely, that they were more successful in campaigns conducted by others than by themselves. For Sossius, Antony's general, effected much in Syria, and Canidius, who was left by Antony in Armenia, conquered that people, as well as the kings of the Iberians and Albanians, and advanced as far as the Caucasus. Consequently the name and fame of Antony's power waxed great among the Barbarians.

XXXV. But Antony himself, once more irritated against Caesar by certain calumnies, sailed with three hundred ships for Italy; and when the people of Brundisium would not receive his armament, he coasted along to Tarentum. Here he sent Octavia, who had sailed with him from Greece, at her own request, to her brother. She was with child, and had already borne Antony two daughters. Octavia met Caesar on the way, and after winning over his friends Agrippa and Maecenas, urged him with many prayers and many entreaties not to permit her, after being a most happy, to become a most wretched woman. For now, she said, the eyes of all men were drawn to her as the wife of one imperator and the sister of another: "But if," she said, "the worse χείρω κρατήσειεν," ἔφη, " καὶ γένοιτο πόλεμος, ὑμῶν μὲν ἄδηλον ὅτῳ κρατεῖν ἢ κρατεῖσθαι πέπρωται, τὰ ἑμὰ δ' ἀμφοτέρως ἄθλια." τούτοις ἐπικλασθεῖς ὁ Καῖσαρ ἤκεν εἰρηρικῶς εἰς Τάραντα, καὶ θέαμα κύλλιστον οἱ παρόντες ἐθεῶντο, πολὺν μὲν ἐκ γῆς στρατὸν ἡσυχάζοντα, πολλὰς δὲ ναῦς ἀτρέμα πρὸς τοῖς αἰγιαλοῖς ἐχούσας, αὐτῶν δὲ καὶ φίλων ἀπαντήσεις καὶ φιλοφροσύνας.

4 εἰστία δὲ Ἀντώνιος πρότερος, καὶ τοῦτο τῇ ἀδελφῇ Καίσαρος δόντος. ἐπεὶ δὲ ὠμολόγητο Καίσαρα μὲν Ἀντωνίῳ δοῦναι δύο τάγματα πρὸς τὸν 932 Παρθικὸν πόλεμον, Ἀντώνιον δὲ Καίσαρι χαλκεμβόλους ἑκατόν, Ὀκταουία τῶν ὠμολογημένων χωρὶς ἠτήσατο τῷ μὲν ἀδελφῷ παρὰ τοῦ ἀνδρὸς εἴκοσι μυοπάρωνας, τῷ δ' ἀνδρὶ παρὰ τοῦ ἀδελφου

5 στρατιώτας χιλίους. οὕτω δὲ ἀλλήλων διακριθέντες ὁ μὲν εὐθύς εἶχετο τοῦ πρὸς Πομπηίου πολέμου, Σικελίας ἐφιέμενος, Ἀντώνιος δὲ Ὀκταουίαν μετὰ τῶν ἕξ ἐκείνης καὶ τοὺς ἐκ Φουλβίας παῖδας αὐτῷ παρακαταθέμενος εἰς τὴν Ἀσίαν ἀπεπέρασεν.

XXXVI. Εὐδουσα δ' ἡ δεινὴ συμφορὰ χρόνον πολὺν, ὁ Κλεοπάτρας ἔρωσ, δοκῶν κατευνάσθαι καὶ κατακεκληῆσθαι τοῖς βελτίοσι λογισμοῖς, αὐθις ἀνέλαμπε καὶ ἀνεθάρρει Συρία πλησιάζοντος αὐτοῦ. καὶ τέλος, ὥσπερ φησὶν ὁ Πλάτων τὸ δυσπειθὲς καὶ ἀκόλαστον τῆς ψυχῆς ὑποζύγιον, ἀπολακτίσας τὰ καλὰ καὶ σωτήρια πάντα Καπίτωνα Φοντήιον ἔπεμψεν ἄξοντα Κλεοπάτραν 2 εἰς Συρίαν. ἐλθούσῃ δὲ χαρίζεται καὶ προστίθησι μικρὸν οὐδὲν οὐδ' ὀλίγον, ἀλλὰ Φοινίκην, should prevail and there should be war between you, one of you, it is uncertain which, is destined to conquer, and one to be conquered, but my lot in either case will be one of misery." Caesar was overcome by these words, and came in a peaceful manner to Tarentum. Then the inhabitants beheld a most noble spectacle—a large army on land inactive, and many ships lying quietly off shore, while the commanders and their friends met one another with friendly greetings. Antony entertained Caesar first, who consented to it for his sister's sake. And after it had been agreed that Caesar should give to Antony two legions for his Parthian war, and Antony to Caesar one hundred bronze-beaked galleys, Octavia, independently of this agreement, obtained twenty light sailing craft from her husband for her brother, and one thousand soldiers from her brother for her husband. Thus they separated, and Caesar at once engaged in the war against Pompey, being ambitious to get Sicily, while Antony, after putting Octavia in Caesar's charge, together with his children by her and Fulvia, crossed over into Asia.

ANTONY

XXXVI. But the dire evil which had been slumbering for a long time, namely, his passion for Cleopatra, which men thought had been charmed away and lulled to rest by better considerations, blazed up again with renewed power as he drew near to Syria. And finally, like the stubborn and unmanageable beast of the soul, of which Plato speaks,¹ he spurned away all saving and noble counsels and sent Fontèius Capito to bring Cleopatra to Syria. And when she was come, he made her a present of no slight or insignificant addition to her dominions, namely,

¹ Cf. Phaedrus, 254 A.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

κοίλην Συρίαν, Κύπρον, Κιλικίας πολλήν· ἔτι δὲ τῆς τε Ἰουδαίων τὴν τὸ βάλσαμον φέρουσαν καὶ τῆς Ναβαταίων Ἀραβίας ὄση πρὸς τὴν ἐκτὸς ἀποκλίνει θάλασσαν. αὐταὶ μάλιστα Ῥωμαίους ἠνίασαν αἱ δωρεαί. καίτοι πολλοὺς ἐχαρίζετο τετραρχίας καὶ βασιλείας ἐθνῶν μεγάλων, ιδιώταις οὖσι, πολλοὺς δ' ἀφηρεῖτο βασιλείας, ὡς Ἀντίγονον τὸν Ἰουδαῖον, ὃν καὶ προαγαγὼν ἐπελέκισεν, οὐδενὸς πρότερον ἐτέρου βασιλεως

3 οὕτω κολασθέντος. ἀλλὰ τὸ αἰσχρὸν ἦν τῶν Κλεοπάτρας τιμῶν ἀνιαρότατον. ἠύξησε δὲ τὴν διαβολὴν παῖδας ἐξ αὐτῆς διδύμους ἀνελόμενος, καὶ προσαγορεύσας τὸν μὲν Ἀλέξανδρον, τὴν δὲ Κλεοπάτραν, ἐπέκλησιν δὲ τὸν μὲν Ἥλιον, τὴν δὲ Σελήνην. οὐ μὴν ἄλλ' ἀγαθὸς ὢν ἐγκαλλωπίσασθαι τοῖς αἰσχροῖς ἔλεγε τῆς μὲν Ῥωμαίων ἡγεμονίας οὐ δι' ὧν λαμβάνουσιν, ἀλλ' ἐν οἷς χαρίζονται φαίνεσθαι τὸ μέγεθος· διαδοχαῖς δὲ καὶ τεκνώσει πολλῶν βασιλέων πλατύνεσθαι

4 τὰς εὐγενείας. οὕτω γοῦν ὑφ' Ἡρακλέους τεκνωθῆναι τὸν αὐτοῦ πρόγονον, οὐκ ἐν μιᾷ γαστρὶ θεμένου τὴν διαδοχὴν οὐδὲ νόμους Σολωνεῖους καὶ κυήσεως εὐθύνας δεδοκίκοτος, ἀλλὰ τῇ φύσει πολλὰς γενῶν ἀρχὰς καὶ καταβολὰς ἀπολιπεῖν ἐφίμεντος.

XXXVII. Ἐπεὶ δὲ Φραάτου κτείναντος Ἰρώδην τὸν πατέρα καὶ τὴν βασιλείαν κατασχόντος ἄλλοι τε Πάρθων ἀπεδίδρασκον οὐκ ὀλίγοι, καὶ Μοναΐσης, ἀνὴρ ἐπιφανῆς καὶ δυνατός, ἦκε φεύ-

ANTONY

Phoenicia, Coele Syria, Cyprus, and a large part of Cilicia; and still further, the balsam-producing part of Judaea, and all that part of Arabia Nabataea which slopes toward the outer sea. These gifts particularly annoyed the Romans. And yet he made presents to many private persons of tetrarchies and realms of great peoples, and he deprived many monarchs of their kingdoms, as, for instance, Antigonus the Jew, whom he brought forth and beheaded, though no other king before him had been so punished. But the shamefulness of the honours conferred upon Cleopatra gave most offence. And he heightened the scandal by acknowledging his two children by her, and calling one Alexander and the other Cleopatra, with the surname for the first of Sun, and for the other of Moon. However, since he was an adept at putting a good face upon shameful deeds, he used to say that the greatness of the Roman empire was made manifest, not by what the Romans received, but by what they bestowed; and that noble families were extended by the successive begettings of many kings. In this way, at any rate, he said, his own progenitor was begotten by Heracles, who did not confine his succession to a single womb, nor stand in awe of laws like Solon's for the regulation of conception, but gave free course to nature, and left behind him the beginnings and foundations of many families.

XXXVII. And now Phraates put Hyrodes his father to death and took possession of his kingdom,¹ other Parthians ran away in great numbers, and particularly Monaeses, a man of distinction and power,

¹ In 36 B.C. Cf. the Crasseus, xxxiii. 5.

- γων πρὸς Ἀντώνιον, τὰς μὲν ἐκείνου τύχας ταῖς Θεμιστοκλέους εἰκάσας, περιουσίαν δὲ τὴν ἑαυτοῦ καὶ μεγαλοφροσύνην τοῖς Περσῶν βασιλεῦσι παραβαλὼν, ἔδωρήσατο τρεῖς πόλεις αὐτῷ, Λάρισσαν καὶ Ἀρέθουσαν καὶ Ἱερὰν πόλιν, ἣν
- 2 Βαμβύκην πρότερον ἐκάλουν. τοῦ δὲ Πάρθων βασιλέως τῷ Μοναίση δεξιὰν καταπέμψαντος, ἄσμενος αὐτὸν ἀπέστειλεν ὁ Ἀντώνιος, ἕξαπατᾶν μὲν ἐγνωκῶς τὸν Φραάτην, ὡς εἰρήνης ἔσομένης, ἀξιῶν δὲ τὰς ἀλούσας ἐπὶ Κράσσου σημαίας καὶ τῶν ἀνδρῶν ὑπολαβεῖν τοὺς περιόντας. αὐτὸς δὲ Κλεοπάτραν εἰς Αἴγυπτον ἀποπέμψας ἐχώρει δι'
- 3 Ἀραβίας καὶ Ἀρμενίας, ὅπου συνελθούσης αὐτῷ τῆς δυνάμεως καὶ τῶν συμμάχων βασιλέων (πάμπολλοι δὲ ἦσαν οὗτοι, μέγιστος δὲ πάντων ὁ τῆς Ἀρμενίας Ἀρταουάσδης, ἕξακισχιλίουσ. ἰππεῖς καὶ πεζοὺς ἑπτακισχιλίους παρέχων) ἐξήτασε τὸν στρατόν. ἦσαν δὲ Ῥωμαίων μὲν αὐτῶν ἕξακισμύριοι πεζοὶ καὶ τὸ Ῥωμαίοις συντεταγμένον ἰππικόν, Ἰβήρων καὶ Κελτῶν μύριοι, τῶν δὲ ἄλλων ἔθνῶν ἐγένοντο τρεῖς μυριάδες σὺν ἰππεῦσιν ὁμοῦ καὶ ψιλοῖς.
- 4 Τοσαύτην μέντοι παρασκευὴν καὶ δύναμιν, ἣ καὶ τοὺς πέραν Βάκτρων Ἰνδοὺς ἐφόβησε καὶ πᾶσαν ἐκράδαε τὴν Ἀσίαν, ἀνόνητον αὐτῷ διὰ 933 Κλεοπάτραν γενέσθαι λέγουσι. σπεύδοντα γὰρ ἐκείνη συνδιαχειμάσαι, τὸν πόλεμον ἐξενεγκεῖν πρὸ καιροῦ καὶ πᾶσι χρήσασθαι τεταραγμένως, οὐκ ὄντα τῶν ἑαυτοῦ λογισμῶν, ἀλλ' ὡς ὑπὸ¹ φαρμάκων τινῶν ἢ γοητείας παπταίνοντα πρὸς

¹ ὡς ὑπὸ Naber : ὑπό.

ANTONY

who came in flight to Antony. Antony likened the fortunes of the fugitive to those of Themistocles,¹ compared his own abundant resources and magnanimity to those of the Persian kings, and gave him three cities, Larissa, Arethusa, and Hierapolis, which used to be called Bambycé. But when the Parthian king made an offer of friendship to Monaeses, Antony gladly sent Monaeses back to him, determined to deceive Phraates with a prospect of peace, and demanding back the standards captured in the campaign of Crassus, together with such of his men as still survived. Antony himself, however, after sending Cleopatra back to Egypt, proceeded through Arabia and Armenia to the place where his forces were assembled, together with those of the allied kings. These kings were very many in number, but the greatest of them all was Artavasdes, king of Armenia, who furnished six thousand horse and seven thousand foot. Here Antony reviewed his army. There were, of the Romans themselves, sixty thousand foot-soldiers, together with the cavalry classed as Roman, namely, ten thousand Iberians and Celts; of the other nations there were thirty thousand, counting alike horsemen and light-armed troops.

And yet we are told that all this preparation and power, which terrified even the Indians beyond Bactria and made all Asia quiver, was made of no avail to Antony by reason of Cleopatra. For so eager was he to spend the winter with her that he began the war before the proper time, and managed everything confusedly. He was not master of his own faculties, but, as if he were under the influence of certain drugs or of magic rites, was ever looking ἐκείνην αἰεί, καὶ πρὸς τὸ τάχιον ἐπανελθεῖν μᾶλλον ἢ πρὸς τὸ κρατῆσαι τῶν πολεμίων γενόμενον.

¹ See the Themistocles, xxix. 7.

XXXVIII. Πρῶτον μὲν οὖν αὐτοῦ δέον ἐν Ἀρμενίᾳ διαχειμάσαι καὶ διαναπαύσαι τὸν στρατόν, ὀκτακισχιλίων σταδίων ἀποτετρυμένον πορείᾳ, καὶ πρὶν ἢ κινεῖν ἐκ τῶν χειμαδίων Πάρθους ἕαρος ἀρχῇ Μηδίαν καταλαβεῖν, οὐκ ἠέσχετο τὸν χρόνον, ἀλλ' εὐθύς ἦγεν ἐν ἀριστερᾷ λαβὼν Ἀρμενίαν, καὶ τῆς Ἀτροπατηνῆς ἀψά-
 2 μενος ἐπόρθει τὴν χώραν. ἔπειτα μηχανημάτων αὐτῷ πρὸς πολιορκίαν ἀναγκαίων τριακοσίαις ἀμάξαις παραπεμπομένων, ἐν οἷς καὶ κριὸς ἦν ὀγδοήκοντα ποδῶν μῆκος, ὧν οὐδὲν ἐνεχώρει διαφθαρὲν ἐπὶ καιροῦ πάλιν γενέσθαι διὰ τὸ τὴν ἄνω χώραν πᾶν ξύλον ἀγεννὲς εἰς μῆκος καὶ μαλθακὸν ἐκφέρειν, ἐπειγόμενος ὡς ἐμπόδια τοῦ ταχύνειν ἀπέλιπε, φυλακὴν τινα καὶ Στατιανὸν ἡγεμόνα τῶν ἀμαξῶν ἐπιστήσας, αὐτὸς δὲ
 3 Φραάτα μεγάλην πόλιν, ἐν ἣ καὶ τέκνα καὶ γυναῖκες ἦσαν τοῦ τῆς Μηδίας βασιλέως, ἐπολιόρκει. τῆς δὲ χρείας εὐθύς ὅσον ἡμαρτε τὰς μηχανὰς ἀπολιπῶν ἐξελεγχούσης, ὁμόσε χωρῶν ἔχου πρὸς τὴν πόλιν χῶμα σχολῇ καὶ πολυπόνως ἀνιστάμενον. ἐν τούτῳ δὲ καταβαίνων στρατιᾷ μεγάλη Φραάτης, ὡς ἤκουσε τὴν ἀπόλειψιν τῶν μηχανοφόρων ἀμαξῶν, ἔπεμψε τῶν ἰππέων πολλοὺς ἐπ' αὐτάς, ὑφ' ὧν περιληφθεὶς ὁ Στατιανὸς ἀποθνήσκει μὲν αὐτός, ἀποθνήσκουσι δὲ μύριοι τῶν μετ' αὐτοῦ. τὰς δὲ μηχανὰς ἐλόντες οἱ eagerly towards her, and thinking more of his speedy return than of conquering the enemy.

ANTONY

XXXVIII. In the first place, then, though he ought to have spent the winter in Armenia and to have given his army rest, worn out as it was by a march of eight thousand furlongs, and to have occupied Media at the opening of spring, before the Parthians had left their winter quarters, he could not hold out that length of time, but led his army on, taking Armenia on his left, and skirting Atropatené, which country he ravaged. Secondly, his engines necessary for siege operations were carried along on three hundred waggons, and among them was a battering ram eighty feet long. Not one of these, if destroyed, could be replaced in time to be of use, because the upper country produced only wood of insufficient length and hardness. Nevertheless, in his haste, he left these behind him, on the ground that they retarded his speed, setting a considerable guard under the command of Statianus over the waggons, while he himself laid siege to Phraata, a large city, in which were the wives and children of the king of Media. But the exigencies of the case at once proved what a mistake he had made in leaving behind him his engines, and coming to close quarters he began to build a mound against the city, which rose slowly and with much labour. In the meantime, however, Phraates came down with a great army, and when he heard that the waggons carrying the engines had been left behind, he sent a large number of his horsemen against them. By these Statianus was surrounded and slain himself, and ten thousand of his men were slain with him. Moreover, the Barbarians captured the engines and βάρβαροι διέφθειραν. εἶλον δὲ παμπόλλους, ἐν οἷς καὶ Πολέμων ἦν ὁ βασιλεύς.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

XXXIX. Τοῦτο πάντα μὲν, ὡς εἰκός, ἠνίασε τοὺς περὶ Ἀντώνιον ἀνελπίστως ἐν ἀρχῇ πληγέντας· ὁ δὲ Ἀρμένιος Ἀρταουάσδης ἀπογνοὺς τὰ Ῥωμαίων ᾤχετο τὴν αὐτοῦ στρατιὰν ἀναλαβών, καίπερ αἰτιώτατος τοῦ πολέμου γενόμενος.

2 ἐπιφανέντων δὲ λαμπρῶς τοῖς πολιορκουσί τῶν Πάρθων καὶ χρωμένων ἀπειλαῖς πρὸς ὕβριν, οὐ βουλόμενος Ἀντώνιος ἡσυχάζοντι τῷ στρατῷ τὸ δυσθυμοῦν καὶ καταπεπληγμένον ἐμμένειν καὶ αὔξεσθαι, δέκα τάγματα λαβὼν καὶ τρεῖς στρατηγίδας σπέρας ὀπλιτῶν, τοὺς δ' ἰππεῖς ἅπαντας, ἐξήγαγε πρὸς σιτολογίαν, οἴομενος οὕτως ἂν ἐπισπασθέντων μάλιστα τῶν πολεμίων

3 ἐκ παρατάξεως μάχην γενέσθαι. προελθὼν δὲ μιᾶς ὁδὸν ἡμέρας, ὡς ἑώρα τοὺς Πάρθους κύκλω περιχεομένους καὶ προσπεσεῖν καθ' ὁδὸν αὐτῷ ζητούντας, ἐξέθηκε μὲν τὸ τῆς μάχης σύμβολον ἐν τῷ στρατοπέδῳ, καθελὼν δὲ τὰς σκηναὺς ὡς οὐ μαχησόμενος, ἀλλ' ἀπάξων, παρημείβετο τῶν βαρβάρων τὴν τάξιν οὖσαν μνηοειδῆ, κελεύσας, ὅταν οἱ πρῶτοι τοῖς ὀπλίταις ἐν ἐφικτῷ δοκῶσιν

4 εἶναι, τοὺς ἰππεῖς ἐναντίους εἰσελαύνειν. τοῖς δὲ Πάρθοις παρακεκριμένοις λόγου κρείττων ἢ τάξις ἐφαίνετο τῶν Ῥωμαίων, καὶ κατεθεῶντο παρεξίοντας ἐν διαστήμασιν ἴσοις ἀθορύβως καὶ σιωπῇ τοὺς ὕσσοὺς κραδαίνοντας. ὡς δὲ τὸ σημεῖον ἦρθη καὶ προσεφέροντο μετὰ κραυγῆς destroyed them. They also took a great number of prisoners, among whom was Polemon the king.

ANTONY

XXXIX. This calamity naturally distressed all the followers of Antony, for they had received an unexpected blow at the outset; besides, Artavasdes, the king of Armenia, despairing of the Roman cause, took his own forces and went off, although he had been the chief cause of the war. And now the Parthians presented themselves to the besiegers in brilliant array, and threatened them insultingly. Antony, therefore, not wishing that the inactivity of his army should confirm and increase among them consternation and dejection, took ten legions and three praetorian cohorts of men-at-arms, together with all his cavalry, and led them out to forage, thinking that in this way the enemy would best be drawn into a pitched battle. After advancing a single day's march, he saw that the Parthians were enveloping him and seeking to attack him on the march. He therefore displayed the signal for battle in his camp, and after taking down his tents, as though his purpose was not to fight but to withdraw, he marched along past the line of the Barbarians, which was crescent-shaped. But he had given orders that when the first ranks of the enemy should appear to be within reach of his legionaries, the cavalry should charge upon them. To the Parthians in their parallel array, the discipline of the Romans seemed to beggar description, and they watched them marching past at equal distances from one another, without confusion, and in silence, brandishing their javelins. But when the signal was given, and the Roman horsemen wheeled about and rode down ἐπιστρέψαντες οἱ ἵππεῖς, τούτους μὲν ἡμύνοντο δεξάμενοι, καίπερ εὐθὺς ἐντὸς τοξεύματος γενομένους, τῶν δὲ ὀπλιτῶν συναπτόντων ἅμα βοῆ καὶ πατάγῳ τῶν ὄπλων, οἳ τε ἵπποι τοῖς Πάρθοις ἐξίσταντο ταρβοῦντες καὶ αὐτοὶ πρὶν εἰς χεῖρας ἐλθεῖν ἔφευγον.

- 5 Ὁ δὲ Ἀντώνιος ἐνέκειτο τῇ διώξει, καὶ 934 μεγάλας εἶχεν ἐλπίδας ὡς τοῦ πολέμου τὸ σύμπαν ἢ τὸ πλείστον ἐκείνῃ τῇ μάχῃ διαπεπραγ-μένος. ἐπεὶ δὲ τῆς διώξεως γενομένης τοῖς μὲν πεζοῖς ἐπὶ πεντήκοντα στάδια, τοῖς δὲ ἵππεῦσιν ἐπὶ τρεῖς τοσαῦτα, τοὺς πεπτωκότας τῶν πολεμίων καὶ τοὺς ἠλωκότας ἐπισκοποῦντες εὗρον αἰχ-μαλώτους μὲν τριάκοντα, νεκροὺς δὲ ὀγδοήκοντα μόνους, ἀπορία καὶ δυσθυμία πᾶσι παρέστη, δεινὸν εἶναι λογιζομένοις εἰ νικῶντες μὲν οὕτως ὀλίγους κτείνουσιν, ἠττώμενοι δὲ στερήσονται τοσούτων ὅσους ἀπέβαλον περὶ ταῖς ἀμάξαις.
- 6 τῇ δ' ὑστεραία συσκευασάμενοι τὴν ἐπὶ Φραάτων
 καὶ τοῦ στρατοπέδου προῆγον. ἐντυχόντες δὲ κατὰ τὴν ὁδὸν πρῶτον μὲν ὀλίγοις τῶν πολεμίων, ἔπειτα πλείοσι, τέλος δὲ πᾶσιν ὥσπερ ἀηττήτοις καὶ νεαλέσι προκαλουμένοις καὶ προσβάλλουσι πανταχόθεν, μοχθηρῶς καὶ πολυπόνως ἀπε-
- 7 σώθησαν εἰς τὸ στρατόπεδον. τῶν δὲ Μήδων ἐκδρομὴν τινα ποιησαμένων ἐπὶ τὸ χῶμα καὶ τοὺς προμαχομένους φοβησάντων, ὀργισθεὶς ὁ Ἀντώνιος ἐχρήσατο τῇ λεγομένῃ δεκατεία πρὸς τοὺς ἀποδειλιάσαντας. διελὼν γὰρ εἰς δεκάδας τὸ πλῆθος ἀφ' ἐκάστης ἓνα τὸν λαχόντα κλήρω διέφθειρε, τοῖς δὲ ἄλλοις ἀντὶ πυρῶν ἐκέλευε κριθὰς μετρεῖσθαι.

ANTONY

upon them with loud shouts, they did indeed receive their onset and repel them, although their foes were at once too close for them to use their arrows; when, however, the legionaries joined in the charge, with shouts and clashing of weapons, the horses of the Parthians took fright and gave way, and the Parthians fled without coming to close quarters.

Antony pressed hard upon them in pursuit, and had great hopes that he had finished the whole war, or the greater part of it, in that one battle. His infantry kept up the pursuit for fifty furlongs, and his cavalry for thrice that distance; and yet when he took count of those of the enemy who had fallen or had been captured, he found only thirty prisoners and eighty dead bodies. Despondency and despair therefore fell upon all; they thought it a terrible thing that when victorious they had killed so few, and when vanquished they were to be robbed of so many men as they had lost at the waggons. On the following day they packed up and started on the road to Phraata and their camp. As they marched they met, first a few of the enemy, then more of them, and finally the whole body, which, as though unconquered and fresh, challenged and attacked them from every side; but at last, with difficulty and much labour, they got safely to their camp. Then the Medes made a sally against their mound and put its defenders to flight. At this Antony was enraged, and visited those who had played the coward with what is called decimation. That is, he divided the whole number of them into tens, and put to death that one from each ten upon whom the lot fell.¹ For the rest he ordered rations of barley instead of wheat.

¹ See the Crassus, x. 2.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

XL. Χαλεπὸς δὲ ἀμφοτέροις ἦν ὁ πόλεμος, καὶ τὰ μέλλον αὐτοῦ φοβερώτερον, Ἀντωνίῳ μὲν προσδοκῶντι λιμὸν· οὐκέτι γὰρ ἦν ἄνευ τραυμάτων καὶ νεκρῶν πολλῶν ἐπισιτίσασθαι· Φραάτης δὲ τοὺς Πάρθους ἐπιστάμενος πάντα μᾶλλον ἢ χειμῶνος ἔξω προσταλαιπωρεῖν καὶ θυραυλεῖν δυναμένους, ἐφοβεῖτο μὴ τῶν Ῥωμαίων ἐγκαρτερούντων καὶ παραμενόντων ἀπολίπωσιν αὐτόν, ἤδη τοῦ ἀέρος συνισταμένου μετὰ φθινοπωρινῆν

2 ἰσημερίαν. δόλον οὖν συντίθησι τοιούδε. Πάρθων οἱ γνωριμώτατοι περὶ τὰς σιτολογίας καὶ τὰς ἄλλας ἀπαντήσεις μαλακώτερον τοῖς Ῥωμαίοις προσεφέροντο, λαμβάνειν τε παριέντες αὐτοῖς ἔνια καὶ τὴν ἀρετὴν ἐπαινοῦντες ὡς πολεμικωτάτων ἀνδρῶν καὶ θαυμαζομένων ὑπὸ τοῦ

3 σφετέρου βασιλέως δικαίως. ἐκ δὲ τούτου προσελαύνοντες ἐγγυτέρω καὶ τοὺς ἵππους ἀτρέμα παραβάλλοντες ἐλοιδόρουν τὸν Ἀντώνιον, ὅτι βουλομένῳ Φραάτῃ διαλλαγῆναι καὶ φείσασθαι τοιούτων ἀνδρῶν καὶ τοσοῦτων ἀφορμῆν οὐ δίδωσιν, ἀλλὰ τοὺς χαλεποὺς καὶ μεγάλους κάθηται πολεμίους ἀναμένων, λιμὸν καὶ χειμῶνα, δι' ὧν ἔργον ἐστὶ καὶ προπεμπομένους ὑπὸ Πάρθων ἀποφεύγειν. πολλῶν δὲ ταῦτα πρὸς τὸν Ἀντώνιον ἀναφερόντων, μαλασσόμενος ὑπὸ τῆς ἐλπίδος ὅμως οὐ πρότερον ἐπεκηρυκεύσατο πρὸς τὸν Πάρθον ἢ πυθέσθαι τῶν φιλοφρονουμένων ἐκείνων βαρβάρων εἰ τοῦ βασιλέως ταῦτα φρο

4 νούντος διαλέγοιντο. φασκόντων δὲ καὶ παρακαλούντων μὴ δεδιέναι μηδὲ ἀπιστεῖν, ἔπεμψέ τινας τῶν ἐταίρων πάλιν τὰς σημαίας ἀξίων

ANTONY

XL. The war was full of hardship for both sides, and its future course was still more to be dreaded. Antony expected a famine; for it was no longer possible to get provisions without having many men wounded and killed. Phraates, too, knew that his Parthians were able to do anything rather than to undergo hardships and encamp in the open during winter, and he was afraid that if the Romans persisted and remained, his men would desert him, since already the air was getting sharp after the summer equinox. He therefore contrived the following stratagem. Those of the Parthians who were most acquainted with the Romans attacked them less vigorously in their forays for provisions and other encounters, allowing them to take some things, praising their valour, and declaring that they were capital fighting men and justly admired by their own king. After this, they would ride up nearer, and quietly putting their horses alongside the Romans, would revile Antony because, when Phraates wished to come to terms and spare so many and such excellent men, Antony would not give him an opportunity, but sat there awaiting those grievous and powerful enemies, famine and winter, which would make it difficult for them to escape even though the Parthians should escort them on their way. Many persons reported this to Antony, but though his hope inclined him to yield, he did not send heralds to the Parthians until he had inquired of the Barbarians who were showing such kindness whether what they said represented the mind of their king. They assured him that it did, and urged him to have no fear or distrust, whereupon he sent some of his companions with a renewed demand for the return of the standards ἀπολαβεῖν καὶ τοὺς αἰχμαλώτους, ὡς δὴ μὴ παντάπασιν ἀγαπᾶν τὸ σωθῆναι καὶ διαφυγεῖν νομισθεῖη. τοῦ δὲ Πάρθου ταῦτα μὲν ἔαν κελεύοντος, ἀπιόντι δὲ εὐθύς εἰρήνην καὶ ἀσφάλειαν εἶναι φήσαντος, ὀλίγαις ἡμέραις συσκευασάμενος ἀνεξεύγνυεν. ὦν δὲ καὶ δῆμῳ πιθανὸς ἐντυχεῖν καὶ στρατὸν ἄγειν διὰ λόγου παρ' ὄντινόν τῶν τότε πεφυκῶς, ἐξέλιπεν αὐτὸς αἰσχύνῃ καὶ κατηφεία τὸ παραθαρρῦναι τὸ πλήθος, Δομίτιον δὲ Ἀηνόβαρβον ἐκέλευε τοῦτο ποιῆσαι. καὶ τινες μὲν ἠγανάκτησαν ὡς ὑπερορώμενοι, τὸ δὲ πλεῖστον ἐπεκλάσθη καὶ συνεφρόνησε τὴν αἰτίαν· διὸ καὶ μᾶλλον ᾤοντο δεῖν ἀνταιδεῖσθαι καὶ πείθεσθαι τῷ στρατηγῷ.

XLI. Μέλλοντος δὲ αὐτοῦ τὴν αὐτὴν ὁδὸν ἄγειν ὀπίσω πεδινὴν καὶ ἄδενδρον οὖσαν, ἀνὴρ τῷ γένει Μάρδος, πολλὰ τοῖς Πάρθων ἤθεσιν ἐνωμιληκῶς, ἤδη δὲ Ῥωμαίοις πιστὸς ἐν τῇ μάχῃ τῇ περὶ τὰς μηχανὰς γεγονῶς, Ἀντωνίῳ προσελθὼν ἐκέλευε φεύγειν ἐν δεξιᾷ τῶν ὀρῶν ἐπιλαβόμενον, καὶ μὴ στρατὸν ὀπλίτην καὶ βαρὺν ἐν δρόμοις γυμνοῖς καὶ ἀναπεπταμένοις ὑποβαλεῖν ἵππῳ τοσαύτῃ καὶ τοξεύμασιν, ὃ δὴ τεχνώμενον τὸν Φραάτην ἀναστῆσαι τῆς πολιορκίας αὐτὸν ὁμολογίαις φιλανθρώποις· ἔσεσθαι δὲ αὐτὸς ἠγεμῶν ὁδοῦ βραχυτέρας καὶ μᾶλλον εὐπορίαν τῶν ἐπιτηδείων ἐχούσης.

ANTONY

and the captives,¹ that he might not be thought altogether satisfied with an escape in safety. But the Parthian told him not to urge this matter, and assured him of peace and safety as soon as he started to go away; whereupon, within a few days Antony packed up his baggage and broke camp. But though he was persuasive in addressing a popular audience and was better endowed by nature than any man of his time for leading an army by force of eloquence, he could not prevail upon himself, for shame and dejection of spirits, to make the usual speech of encouragement to the army, but ordered Domitius Ahenobarbus to do it. Some of the soldiers were incensed at this, and felt that he had held them in contempt; but the majority of them were moved to the heart as they comprehended the reason. Therefore they thought they ought to show all the more respect and obedience to their commander.

XLI. As he was about to lead his army back by the road over which it had come, which ran through a level country without trees, a man of the Mardian race, who had great familiarity with the Parthian habits, and had already shown himself faithful to the Romans in the battle over the engines of war,² came to Antony and urged him in his flight to keep close to the hills upon his right, and not to expose an encumbered army of legionaries to so large a force of mounted archers, in bare and extended tracts; this was the very thing, he said, which Phraates had designed when he induced him by friendly conferences to raise the siege; he himself, he said, would conduct the army by a way that was shorter and furnished a greater abundance of provisions.

¹ See chapter xxxvii. 2.

² See chapter xxxviii. 3.

Ταῦτα ἀκούσας ὁ Ἀντώνιος ἐβουλεύετο, καὶ Πάρθοις μὲν οὐκ ἐβούλετο δοκεῖν ἀπιστεῖν μετὰ σπουδᾶς, τὴν δὲ συντομίαν τῆς ὁδοῦ καὶ τὸ παρὰ κώμας οἰκουμένας ἔσσεσθαι τὴν πορείαν ἐπαινῶν
 3 πίστιν ἦται τὸν Μάρδον. ὁ δὲ δῆσαι παρείχεν αὐτὸν ἄχρι οὗ καταστήσῃ τὸν στρατὸν εἰς Ἀρμενίαν, καὶ δεθεὶς ἠγείτο δύο ἡμέρας καθ' ἡσυχίαν. τῇ δὲ τρίτῃ παντάπασι τοὺς Πάρθους ἀπεγνωκότος Ἀντωνίου καὶ βαδίζοντος ἀνειμένως διὰ τὸ θαρρεῖν, ἰδὼν ὁ Μάρδος ἀπόχωσιν ἐμβολῆς ποταμοῦ νεωστὶ διεσπασμένην καὶ τὸ ρεῦμα πολὺ
 4 πρὸς τὴν ὁδόν, ἣ πορευτέον ἦν, ἐκχεόμενον, συνῆκεν ὅτι τῶν Πάρθων ἔργον εἴη τοῦτο δυσκολίας ἕνεκα καὶ διατριβῆς ἐμποδῶν αὐτοῖς τὸν ποταμὸν τιθεμένων, καὶ τὸν Ἀντώνιον ὀρᾶν ἐκέλευε καὶ προσέχειν, ὡς τῶν πολεμίων ἐγγὺς ὄντων. ἄρτι δὲ αὐτοῦ καθιστάντος εἰς τάξιν τὰ ὄπλα καὶ δι' αὐτῶν τοῖς ἀκοντισταῖς καὶ σφενδονήταις ἐκδρομὴν ἐπὶ τοὺς πολεμίους παρασκευάζοντος, ἐπεφάνησαν οἱ Πάρθοι καὶ περιήλαυνον ὡς κυκλωσόμενοι καὶ συνταράζοντες πανταχόθεν τὸν στρατόν.
 5 ἐκδραμόντων δὲ τῶν ψιλῶν ἐπ' αὐτούς, πολλὰς μὲν διδόντες ἀπὸ τόξων, οὐκ ἐλάττονας δὲ ταῖς μολυβδίσι καὶ τοῖς ἀκοντίοις πληγὰς λαμβάνοντες ἀνεχώρουν· εἶτα ἐπήγον αὐθις, ἄχρι οὗ συστρέψαντες οἱ Κελτοὶ τοὺς ἵππους ἐνέβαλον καὶ διεσκέδασαν αὐτοὺς οὐκέτι τῆς ἡμέρας ἐκείνης ὑπόδειγμα γενομένους.

ANTONY

On hearing this, Antony took counsel with himself. He did not wish to have the appearance of distrusting the Parthians, now that a truce had been made, but since he approved of the shorter road and of having their march take them past inhabited villages, he asked the Mardian for a pledge of his good faith. The Mardian offered to let himself be put in fetters until he should bring the army safely into Armenia, and he was put in fetters, and led them for two days without their encountering trouble. But on the third day, when Antony had put the Parthians entirely out of his thoughts, and was marching along in loose order because of his confidence, the Mardian noticed that a dike of the river had been recently torn away, and that the stream was flowing out in great volume towards the road over which their march must be made. He comprehended that this was the work of the Parthians, throwing the river in their way to obstruct and delay the Roman march, and urged Antony to look out and be on his guard, as the enemy were near. And just as Antony was setting his legionaries in array and arranging to have his javelineers and slingers make a sally through them against the enemy, the Parthians came into view and began to ride around the army in order to envelope and throw it into confusion on all sides. Whenever the Roman light-armed troops sallied out against them, the Parthians would inflict many wounds with their arrows, but sustain yet more from the leaden bullets and javelins of the Romans, and therefore withdraw. Then they would come up again, until the Celts, massing their horses together, made a charge upon them and scattered them, so that they showed themselves no more that day.

XLII. Ἐκ τούτου μαθὼν ὁ Ἀντώνιος ὁ ποιεῖν ἔδει, πολλοῖς ἀκοντισταῖς καὶ σφενδονήταις οὐ μόνον τὴν οὐραγίαν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὰς πλευρὰς ἑκατέρας στομώσας ἐν πλαισίῳ τὸν στρατὸν ἤγε, καὶ τοῖς ἱππότηταις εἶρητο προσβάλλοντας τρέπεσθαι, τρεψαμένους δὲ μὴ πόρρω διώκειν, ὥστε τοὺς Πάρθους τὰς ἐφεξῆς τέσσαρας ἡμέρας οὐθὲν πλέον δράσαντας ἢ παθόντας ἀμβλυτέρους γεγονέναι καὶ τὸν χειμῶνα ποιουμένους πρόφασιν ἀπιέναι διανοεῖσθαι.

- 2 Τῇ δὲ πέμπτῃ Φλαούιος Γάλλος, ἀνὴρ πολεμικὸς καὶ δραστήριος ἐφ' ἡγεμονίας τεταγμένος, ἤτησεν Ἀντώνιον προσελθὼν πλείονας ψιλούς ἀπ' οὐράς, καὶ τῶν ἀπὸ τοῦ στόματος ἱππέων τινὰς ὡς μέγα κατόρθωμα ποιήσων. δόντος δὲ προσβάλλοντας ἀνέκοπτε τοὺς πολεμίους, οὐχ, ὡς πρότερον, ὑπάγων ἅμα πρὸς τοὺς ὀπίστας καὶ ἀναχωρῶν, ἀλλὰ ὑφιστάμενος καὶ συμπλεκόμενος
- 3 παραβολώτερον. ὁρῶντες δὲ αὐτὸν οἱ τῆς οὐραγίας ἡγεμόνες ἀπορρηγνύμενον ἐκάλουν πέμποντες· ὁ δὲ οὐκ ἐπέιθετο. Τίτιον δὲ φασὶ τὸν ταμίαν καὶ τῶν σημαιῶν ἐπιλαβόμενον στρέφειν ὀπίσω καὶ λαιδορεῖν τὸν Γάλλον ὡς ἀπολλύντα πολλοὺς καὶ ἀγαθοὺς ἄνδρας. ἀντιλοιδοροῦντος δὲ ἐκείνου καὶ διακελευομένου τοῖς περὶ αὐτὸν μένειν, ὁ μὲν Τίτιος ἀπεχώρει· τὸν δὲ Γάλλον ὠθούμενον εἰς τοὺς κατὰ στόμα λαυθάνουσι πολλοὶ
- 4 περισχόντες ἐκ τῶν ὀπισθεν. βαλλόμενος δὲ πανταχόθεν ἐκάλει πέμπων ἀρωγὴν. οἱ δὲ τοὺς ὀπίστας ἄγοντες, ὧν καὶ Κανίδιος ἦν, ἀνὴρ παρὰ Ἀντωνίῳ δυνάμενος μέγιστον, οὐ μικρὰ δοκοῦσι διαμαρτεῖν. δέον γὰρ ἀθρόαν ἐπιστρέψαι τὴν

ANTONY

XLII. Having thus learned what he ought to do, Antony covered not only his rear, but also both his flanks, with numerous javelineers and slingers, led his army in the form of a hollow square, and gave orders to his horsemen to rout the enemy when they attacked, but after routing them not to pursue them further. Consequently the Parthians, during four successive days, suffered greater loss than they inflicted, became less eager, and made the winter an excuse for thoughts of going away.

On the fifth day, however, Flavius Gallus, an efficient and able soldier in high command, came to Antony and asked him for more light-armed troops from the rear, and for some of the horsemen from the van, confident that he would achieve a great success. Antony gave him the troops, and when the enemy attacked, Gallus beat them back, not withdrawing and leading them on towards the legionaries, as before, but resisting and engaging them more hazardously. The leaders of the rear guard, seeing that he was being cut off from them, sent and called him back; but he would not listen to them. Then, they say, Titius the quaestor laid hold of his standards and tried to turn them back, abusing Gallus for throwing away the lives of so many brave men. But Gallus gave back the abuse and exhorted his men to stand firm, whereupon Titius withdrew. Then Gallus forced his way among the enemy in front of him, without noticing that great numbers of them were enveloping him in the rear. But when missiles began to fall upon him from all sides, he sent and asked for help. Then the leaders of the legionaries, among whom was Canidius, a man of the greatest influence with Antony, are thought to have made no slight mistake. For when φάλαγγα, πέμποντες κατ' ὀλίγους ἐπιβοηθούντας, καὶ πάλιν ἠττωμένων τούτων ἐτέρους ἀποστέλλοντες, ἔλαθον ὀλίγου δεῖν ἠττης καὶ φυγῆς ὅλον ἀναπλήσαντες τὸ στρατόπεδον, εἰ μὴ ταχὺ μὲν αὐτὸς Ἀντώνιος μετὰ τῶν ὄπλων ἀπὸ τοῦ στόματος ἦκεν ὑπαντιάζων, ταχὺ δὲ τὸ τρίτον τάγμα διὰ τῶν φευγόντων ἐπὶ τοὺς πολεμίους ὡσάμενον ἔσχε τοῦ πρόσω διώκειν.

XLIII. Ἀπέθανον δὲ τρισχιλίων οὐκ ἐλάττους, ἐκομίσθησαν δὲ ἐπὶ σκηνὰς τραυματαίαι πεντακισχίλιοι· καὶ Γάλλος ἦν ἐν τούτοις, τέτταρσιν ἐναντίοις διαπεπαρμένος τοξεύμασιν. ἀλλ' οὗτος μὲν ἐκ τῶν τραυμάτων οὐκ ἀνήνεγκε, τοὺς δ' ἄλλους περιῖων ὁ Ἀντώνιος ἐπεσκόπει καὶ παρεθάρρυνε δεδακρυμένος καὶ περιπαθῶν. οἱ δὲ φαιδροὶ τῆς δεξιᾶς αὐτοῦ λαμβανόμενοι παρεκάλουν ἀπιόντα θεραπεύειν αὐτὸν καὶ μὴ κακοπαθεῖν, αὐτοκράτορα καλοῦντες, καὶ σῶζεσθαι λέγοντες ἂν ἐκεῖνος ὑγιαίνη. καθόλου μὲν γὰρ οὔτ' ἀλκαῖς οὔτε ὑπομοναῖς οὔτε ἡλικία λαμπρότερον ἄλλος αὐτοκράτωρ στρατὸν ἐκείνου δοκεῖ συναγαγεῖν ἐν τοῖς τότε χρόνοις· ἢ δὲ πρὸς αὐτὸν αἰδῶς τὸν ἡγεμόνα καὶ πειθαρχία μετ' εὐνοίας, καὶ τὸ πάντας ὁμαλῶς, ἐνδόξους, ἀδόξους, ἄρχοντας, ἰδιώτας, τὴν παρὰ Ἀντωνίου τιμὴν τε καὶ χάρι μᾶλλον αἰρεῖσθαι τῆς σωτηρίας καὶ τῆς ἀσφαλείας, οὐδὲ τοῖς πάλαι Ῥωμαίοις ἀπέλιπεν ὑπερβολήν. τούτου δὲ αἰτίαι πλείονες ἦσαν, ὡς προειρήκαμεν· εὐγένεια, λόγου δύναμις, ἀπλότης, they ought to have wheeled their entire line against the enemy, they sent only a few men at a time to help Gallus, and again, when one detachment had been overcome, sent out others, and so, before they were aware of it, they came near plunging the whole army into defeat and flight. But Antony himself speedily came with his legionaries from the van to confront the fugitives, and the third legion speedily pushed its way through them against the enemy and checked his further pursuit.

ANTONY

XLIII. There fell no fewer than three thousand, and there were carried to their tents five thousand wounded men, among whom was Gallus, who was pierced in front by four arrows. Gallus, indeed, did not recover from his wounds, but Antony went to see all the others and tried to encourage them, with tears of sympathy in his eyes. The wounded men, however, with cheerful faces, seized his hand and exhorted him to go away and take care of himself, and not to be distressed. They called him Emperor, and said that they were safe if only he were unharmed. For, to put it briefly, no other emperor of that day appears to have assembled an army more conspicuous for prowess, endurance, or youthful vigour. Nay, the respect which his soldiers felt for him as their leader, their obedience and goodwill, and the degree to which all of them alike—men of good repute or men of no repute, commanders or private soldiers—preferred honour and favour from Antony to life and safety, left even the ancient Romans nothing to surpass. And the reasons for this were many, as I have said before: his high birth, his eloquence, his simplicity of manners, his love of

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

τὸ φιλόδωρον καὶ μεγαλόδωρον, ἢ περὶ τὰς παι-διὰς καὶ τὰς ὀμιλίας εὐτραπελία. τότε δὲ καὶ συμπονῶν καὶ συναλγῶν τοῖς κακοπαθοῦσι, καὶ μεταδιδούς οὐ τις δεηθείη, προθυμοτέρους τῶν ἔρρωμένων τοὺς νοσοῦντας καὶ τετρωμένους ἐποίησε.

XLIV. Τοὺς μέντοι πολεμίους ἀπαγορεύοντας ἤδη καὶ κάμνοντας οὕτως ἐπῆρεν ἡ νίκη καὶ τοσοῦτον τῶν Ῥωμαίων κατεφρόνησαν ὥστε καὶ νυκτὸς ἐπαυλίσασθαι τῷ στρατοπέδῳ, προσδοκῶντας αὐτίκα μάλα σκηναὺς ἐρήμους καὶ χρή-2 ματα διαρπάσειν ἀποδιδρασκόντων. ἅμα δ' ἡμέρα πολὺ πλείονες ἐπηθροίζοντο, καὶ λέγονται τετρακισμυρίων οὐκ ἐλάττορες ἰππῶται γενέσθαι, βασιλέως καὶ τοὺς περὶ αὐτὸν αἰεὶ τεταγμένους ὡς ἐπὶ σαφεῖ καὶ βεβαίῳ κατορθώματι πέμψαντος· αὐτὸς μὲν γὰρ οὐδεμιᾷ μάχῃ παρέτυχεν.
 Ἄντωνιος δὲ βουλόμενος προσαγορεύσαι τοὺς στρατιώτας ἤτησε φαιδὸν ἰμάτιον, ὡς οἰκτρότερος ὀφθείη. τῶν δὲ φίλων ἐναντιωθέντων ἐν τῇ στρατηγικῇ φοινικίδι προελθὼν ἐδημηγόρησε, τοὺς μὲν νενικηκότας ἐπαινῶν, ὄνειδίζων δὲ τοὺς φυγ-3 ὄντας. τῶν δὲ οἱ μὲν παρεκελεύοντο θαρρεῖν, οἱ δὲ ἀπολογούμενοι σφᾶς αὐτοὺς παρῆχον, εἴτε βούλοιο δεκατεύειν, εἴτε ἄλλῳ τρόπῳ κολάζειν· μόνον παύσασθαι δυσφοροῦντα καὶ λυπούμενον ἐδέοντο. πρὸς ταῦτα τὰς χεῖρας ἀνατείνας ἐπέυξατο τοῖς θεοῖς, εἴ τις ἄρα νέμεσις τὰς πρόσθεν εὐτυχίας αὐτοῦ μέτεισιν, εἰς αὐτὸν ἐλθεῖν, τῷ δ' ἄλλῳ στρατῷ σωτηρίαν δίδοναι καὶ νίκην.

ANTONY

giving and the largeness of his giving, his complaisance in affairs of pleasure or social intercourse. And so at this time, by sharing in the toils and distresses of the unfortunate and bestowing upon them whatever they wanted, he made the sick and wounded more eager in his service than the well and strong.

XLIV. The enemy, however, who had been already worn out and inclined to abandon their task, were so elated by their victory, and so despised the Romans, that they even bivouacked for the night near their camp, expecting very soon to be plundering the empty tents and the baggage of runaways. At day-break, too, they gathered for attack in far greater numbers, and there are said to have been no fewer than forty thousand horsemen, since their king had sent even those who were always arrayed about his person, assured that it was to manifest and assured success; for the king himself was never present at a battle. Then Antony, wishing to harangue his soldiers, called for a dark robe, that he might be more pitiful in their eyes. But his friends opposed him in this, and he therefore came forward in the purple robe of a general and made his harangue, praising those who had been victorious, and reproaching those who had fled. The former exhorted him to be of good courage, and the latter, by way of apology for their conduct, offered themselves to him for decimation,¹ if he wished, or for any other kind of punishment; only they begged him to cease being distressed and vexed. In reply, Antony lifted up his hands and prayed the gods that if, then, any retribution were to follow his former successes, it might fall upon him alone, and that the rest of the army might be granted victory and safety.

¹ See chapter xxxix. 7.

- XLV. Τῇ δὲ ὑστεραία φραξάμενοι βέλτιον προῆγον· καὶ τοῖς Πάρθοις ἐπιχειροῦσι πολλὴ ἀπήντα παράλογος. οἰόμενοι γὰρ ἐφ' ἀρπαγὴν καὶ λεηλασίαν, οὐ μάχην, ἐλαύνειν, εἶτα πολλοὶς βέλεσιν ἐντυγχάνοντες, ἐρρωμένους δὲ καὶ νεαλεῖς
- 2 ταῖς προθυμίαις ὀρώντες, αὐθις ἐξέκαμνον. ἐπεὶ δὲ καταβαίνουσιν αὐτοῖς ἀπὸ λόφων τινῶν ἐπικλινῶν ἐπέθεντο καὶ βραδέως ὑπεξάγοντας ἔβαλλον, ἐπιστρέψαντες οἱ θυρεοφόροι συνέκλεισαν εἴσω τῶν ὄπλων τοὺς ψιλούς, αὐτοὶ δὲ καθέντες εἰς γόνυ προὔβαλον τοὺς θυρεούς· οἱ δὲ ὀπισθεν ὑπερέσχον αὐτῶν τὰ ὄπλα κακείνων ὁμοίως ἕτεροι. τὸ δὲ σχῆμα παραπλήσιον ἐρέψει γινόμενον ὄψιν 937
- 3 τε θεατρικὴν παρέχει, καὶ τῶν προβλημάτων στεγανώτατόν ἐστι πρὸς τοὺς οἴστοὺς ἀπολισθαίνοντας. οἱ μέντοι Πάρθοι τὴν εἰς γόνυ κλίσιν τῶν Ῥωμαίων ἀπαγόρευσιν ἠγούμενοι καὶ κάματον εἶναι, τὰ μὲν τόξα κατέθεντο, τοὺς δὲ κοντοὺς διαλαβόντες ἐγγὺς προσέμιξαν. οἱ δὲ Ῥωμαῖοι συναλαλάξαντες ἐξαίφνης ἀνέθορον, καὶ τοῖς ὕσσοις παίοντες ἐκ χειρὸς ἔκτεινάν τε τοὺς πρώτους καὶ τροπὴν ἔθεντο τῶν ἄλλων ἀπάντων. ἐγένετο δὲ ταῦτα καὶ ταῖς ἄλλαις ἡμέραις ἐπὶ μικρὸν ἀννόντων τῆς ὁδοῦ.
- 4 Καὶ λιμὸς ἤπτετο τοῦ στρατοῦ σῆτόν τε βραχύν καὶ διὰ μάχης ποριζομένου καὶ τῶν πρὸς ἄλετον σκευῶν οὐκ εὐποροῦντος. τὰ γὰρ πολλὰ κατελείπετο, τῶν μὲν ἀποθνησκόντων ὑποζυγίων, τῶν δὲ τοὺς νοσοῦντας καὶ τραυματίας φερόντων.

ANTONY

XLV. On the following day they went forward under better protection ; and the Parthians met with a great surprise when they attacked them. For they thought they were riding up for plunder and booty, not battle, and when they encountered many missiles and saw that the Romans were fresh and vigorous and eager for the fray, they were once more tired of the struggle. However, as the Romans were descending some steep hills, the Parthians attacked them and shot at them as they slowly moved along. Then the shield-bearers wheeled about, enclosing the lighter armed troops within their ranks, while they themselves dropped on one knee and held their shields out before them. The second rank held their shields out over the heads of the first, and the next rank likewise. The resulting appearance is very like that of a roof,¹ affords a striking spectacle, and is the most effective of protections against arrows, which glide off from it. The Parthians, however, thinking that the Romans dropping on one knee was a sign of fatigue and exhaustion, laid aside their bows, grasped their spears by the middle and came to close quarters. But the Romans, with a full battle cry, suddenly sprang up, and thrusting with their javelins slew the foremost of the Parthians and put all the rest to rout. This happened also on the following days as the Romans, little by little, proceeded on their way.

Famine also attacked the army, which could provide itself with little grain even by fighting, and was not well furnished with implements for grinding. These had been abandoned, for the most part, since some of the beasts of burden died, and the others

¹ It was the testudo, described in Dio Cassius, xlix. 3.

λέγεται δὲ χοῖνιξ Ἀττικὴ πυρῶν πεντήκοντα δραχμῶν ὄνιος γενέσθαι· τοὺς δὲ κριθίνους ἄρ-5 τοὺς πρὸς ἀργύριον ἰστάντες ἀπεδίδοντο. τραπόμενοι δὲ πρὸς λάχανα καὶ ρίζας ὀλίγοις μὲν ἐνετύγχανον τῶν συνήθων, ἀναγκαζόμενοι δὲ πει-ρᾶσθαι καὶ τῶν ἀγεύστων πρότερον ἤψαντό τινος πόας ἐπὶ θάνατον διὰ μανίας ἀγούσης. ὁ γὰρ φαγὼν οὐδὲν ἐμέμνητο τῶν ἄλλων οὐδὲ ἐγίνωσκεν, ἐν δ' ἔργον εἶχε, κινεῖν καὶ στρέφειν πάντα λίθον,
 ὡς τι μεγάλης σπουδῆς ἄξιον διαπραττόμενος.
 6 ἦν δὲ μεστὸν τὸ πεδῖον κεκυφῶτων χαμᾶζε καὶ τοὺς λίθους περιορυττόντων καὶ μεθιστάντων· τέλος δὲ χολὴν ἐμοῦντες ἔθνησκον, ἐπεὶ καὶ τὸ μόνον ἀντιπαθές, οἶνος, ἐξέλιπε. φθειρομένων δὲ πολλῶν καὶ τῶν Πάρθων οὐκ ἀφισταμένων πολλάκις ἀναφθέγξασθαι τὸν Ἀντώνιον ἱστοροῦσιν, “ὦ μύριοι,” θαυμάζοντα τοὺς μετὰ Ξενοφῶντος, ὅτι καὶ πλείονα καταβαίνοντες ὁδὸν ἐκ τῆς Βαβυ-λωνίας καὶ πολλαπλασίοις μαχόμενοι πολεμίοις ἀπεσώθησαν.

XLVI. Οἱ δὲ Πάρθοι διαπλέξαι μὲν οὐ δυνάμενοι τὸν στρατὸν οὐδὲ διασπάσαι τὴν τάξιν, ἤδη δὲ πολλάκις ἠττημένοι καὶ πεφευγότες, αὐθις εἰρηνικῶς ἀνემίγνυντο τοῖς ἐπὶ χιλὸν ἢ σῖτον προερχομένοις, καὶ τῶν τόξων τὰς νευρὰς ἐπιδει-κνύντες ἀνειμένας, ἔλεγον ὡς αὐτοὶ μὲν ἀπίασιν ὀπίσω καὶ τοῦτο ποιοῦνται πέρασ ἀμύνης, ὀλίγοι δὲ Μήδων ἀκολουθήσουσιν ἔτι μιᾶς ἢ δευτέρας 2 ἁπωτέρω κώμας φυλάττοντες. τούτοις τοῖς λό-γοις ἀσπασμοί τε καὶ φιλοφροσύνη προσῆσαν,

ANTONY

had to carry the sick and wounded. It is said that one attic choenix¹ of wheat brought fifty drachmas; and loaves of barley bread were sold for their weight in silver. Resorting, therefore, to vegetables and roots, they could find few to which they were accustomed, and were compelled to make trial of some never tasted before. Thus it was that they partook of an herb which produced madness, and then death. He who ate of it had no memory, and no thought for anything else than the one task of moving or turning every stone, as if he were accomplishing something of great importance. The plain was full of men stooping to the ground and digging around the stones or removing them; and finally they would vomit bile and die, since the only remedy, wine, was not to be had. Many perished thus, and the Parthians would not desist, and Antony, as we are told, would often cry: "O the Ten Thousand!" thereby expressing his admiration of Xenophon's army, which made an even longer march to the sea from Babylon, and fought with many times as many enemies, and yet came off safe.

XLVI. And now the Parthians, unable to throw the army into confusion or break up its array, but many times already defeated and put to flight, began once more to mingle peaceably with the men who went out in search of fodder or grain, and pointing to their unstrung bows would say that they themselves were going back, and that this was the end of their retaliation, although a few Medes would still follow the Romans one or two days' march, not molesting them at all, but merely protecting the more outlying villages. To these words they added greetings and acts of friendliness, so that once more

¹ About a quart.

ὥστε πάλιν τοὺς Ῥωμαίους εὐθαρσεῖς γενέσθαι καὶ τὸν Ἄντωνιον ἀκούσαντα τῶν πεδίων ἐφίεσθαι μᾶλλον, ἀνύδρου λεγομένης εἶναι τῆς διὰ τῶν ὄρων. οὕτω δὲ ποιεῖν μέλλοντος ἤκεν ἀνὴρ ἐπὶ τὸ στρατόπεδον ἐκ τῶν πολεμίων ὄνομα Μιθριδάτης, ἀνεψιὸς Μοναίσου τοῦ παρ' Ἀντωνίῳ γενομένου καὶ τὰς τρεῖς πόλεις δωρεὰν λαβόντος. ἡξίου δὲ αὐτῷ προσελθεῖν τινα τῶν Παρθιστῶν 3 διαλεχθῆναι δυναμένων ἢ Συριστί. καὶ προσελθόντος Ἀλεξάνδρου τοῦ Ἀντιοχέως, ὃς ἦν Ἀντωνίῳ συνήθης, ὑπειπὼν ὃς εἶη, καὶ Μοναίση τὴν χάριν ἀνάπτων, ἠρώτησε τὸν Ἀλέξανδρον εἰ λόφους συνεχεῖς καὶ ὑψηλοὺς ὄρα πρόσωθεν. φήσαντος δὲ ὄραν, “Ἵπ' ἐκείνοις,” ἔφη “πανστρα- 4 τιᾷ Πάρθοι λοχῶσιν ὑμᾶς. τὰ γὰρ μεγάλα πεδία τῶν λόφων τούτων ἐξήρτηται, καὶ προσδοκῶσιν ὑμᾶς ἐξηπατημένους ὑπ' αὐτῶν ἐνταῦθα τρέψεσθαι, τὴν διὰ τῶν ὄρων ἀπολιπόντας. ἐκείνη μὲν οὖν ἔχει δίψος καὶ πόνον ὑμῖν συνήθη, ταύτη δὲ χωρῶν Ἀντώνιος ἴστω τὰς Κράσσου τύχας αὐτὸν ἐκδεχομένης.”

XLVII. Ὁ μὲν οὕτω φράσας ἀπήλθεν Ἀντώνιος δὲ ἀκούσας καὶ διαταραχθεὶς συνεκάλει τοὺς φίλους καὶ τὸν ἡγεμόνα τῆς ὁδοῦ Μάρδον οὐδὲ αὐτὸν ἄλλως φρονοῦντα. καὶ γὰρ ἄνευ πολεμίων 938 ἐγίνωσκε τὰς διὰ τῶν πεδίων ἀνοδίας καὶ πλάνας χαλεπὰς καὶ δυστεκμάρτους οὔσας, τὴν δὲ τραχείαν ἀπέφαινε οὐδὲν ἄλλο δυσχ εἰς ἢ μίαν

ANTONY

the Romans became full of courage, and Antony, when he heard about it, was more inclined to seek the plains, since the way through the mountains was said to be waterless. But as he was about to do this, there came a man to the camp from the enemy, Mithridates by name, a cousin of the Monaeses who had been with Antony and had received the three cities as a gift.¹ Mithridates asked that someone should come to him who could speak the Parthian or Syrian language. So Alexander of Antioch came to him, being a close friend of Antony, whereupon Mithridates, after explaining who he was, and attributing to Monaeses the favour now to be shown, asked Alexander if he saw a range of lofty hills on beyond. Alexander said he did see them. "Under those hills," said Mithridates, "the Parthians with all their forces are lying in ambush for you. For the great plains adjoin these hills, and they expect that you will be beguiled by them into turning in that direction and leaving the road through the mountains. That road, it is true, involves thirst and hard labour, to which you are now accustomed; but if Antony proceeds by way of the plains, let him know that the fate of Crassus awaits him."

XLVII. After giving this information the man went away, and Antony, who was much troubled by what he now heard, called together his friends and his Mardian guide, who was himself of the same opinion as their visitor. For he knew that even were there no enemy the lack of roads through the plains would involve them in blind and grievous wanderings, and he showed them that the rough road through the mountains had no other annoyance

¹ Cf. chapter xxxvii. l.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

2 ἡμέρας ἀνδρίαν ἔχουσαν. οὕτω δὴ τραπόμενος ταύτην ἦγε νυκτός, ὕδωρ ἐπιφέρεσθαι κελεύσας. ἀγγείων δὲ ἦν ἀπορία τοῖς πολλοῖς· διὸ καὶ τὰ κράνη πιμπλάντες ὕδατος ἐκόμιζον, οἱ δὲ διφθέραις ὑπολαμβάνοντες.

- Ἦδη δὲ προχωρῶν ἀγγέλλεται τοῖς Πάρθοις καὶ παρὰ τὸ εἰωθὸς ἔτι νυκτὸς ἐδίωκον. ἡλίου δὲ ἀνίσχοντος ἤπτοντο τῶν ἐσχάτων ἀγρυπνία καὶ πόνῳ κακῶς διακειμένων· τεσσαράκοντα γὰρ καὶ διακοσίους ἐν τῇ νυκτὶ σταδίου κατηνύκεισαν· καὶ τὸ μὴ προσδοκῶσιν οὕτω ταχέως ἐπελθεῖν
- 3 τοὺς πολεμίους ἀθυμίαν παρεῖχε. καὶ τὸ δίψος ἐπέτεινεν ὁ ἀγὼν· ἀμυνόμενοι γὰρ ἅμα προῆγον. οἱ δὲ πρῶτοι βαδίζοντες ἐντυγχάνουσι ποταμῷ ψυχρὸν μὲν ἔχοντι καὶ διαυγές, ἄλμυρδὸν δὲ καὶ φαρμακῶδες ὕδωρ, ὃ ποθὲν εὐθύς ὀδύνας ἐλκομένης τῆς κοιλίας καὶ τοῦ δίψους ἀναφλεγόμενου παρ ἤ. καὶ ταῦτα τοῦ Μάρδου προλέγοντος οὐδὲν ἤττον ἐκβιαζόμενοι τοὺς ἀνείργοντας ἔπινον.
- 4 Ἀντώνιος δὲ περιῶν ἐδεῖτο βραχὺν ἐγκαρτερῆσαι χρόνον· ἕτερον γὰρ οὐ πόρρω ποταμὸν εἶναι πότιμον, εἶτα τὴν λοιπὴν ἄφιππον καὶ τραχεῖαν, ὥστε παντάπασιν ἀποστρέψασθαι τοὺς πολεμίους. ἅμα δὲ καὶ τοὺς μαχομένους ἀνεκαλεῖτο καὶ κατάζευξιν ἐσήμαινεν, ὡς σκιᾶς γοῦν μεταλάβοιεν οἱ στρατιῶται.

ANTONY

than lack of water for a single day. Accordingly, Antony took this route and led his army along by night, after ordering his men to carry water with them. The greater part of them, however, had no vessels, and therefore some actually filled their helmets with water and carried them, while others took it in skins.

But word was at once brought to the Parthians that Antony was advancing, and contrary to their custom they set out in pursuit while it was yet night. Just as the sun was rising they came up with the rear-guard of the Romans, which was foredone with sleeplessness and toil; for they had accomplished two hundred and forty furlongs in the night. Moreover, they did not expect that the enemy would come upon them so quickly, and were therefore disheartened. Besides, their contest intensified their thirst; for they had to ward off the enemy and make their way forward at the same time. Those who marched in the van came to a river, the water of which was clear and cold, but had a salty taste and was poisonous. This water, as soon as one drank it, caused pains, accompanied by cramping of the bowels and an inflammation of one's thirst. Of this too the Mardian had warned them, but none the less the soldiers forced aside those who tried to turn them back, and drank. Antony went round and begged the men to hold out a little while; for not far ahead, he said, there was another river which was potable, and then the rest of the way was too rough for cavalry, so that the enemy must certainly turn back. At the same time, too, he called his men back from fighting and gave the signal for pitching the tents, that the soldiers might at least enjoy the shade a little.

XLVIII. Πηγνυμένων οὖν τῶν σκηνῶν, καὶ τῶν Πάρθων εὐθύς, ὥσπερ εἰώθεισαν, ἀπαλλαττομένων, ἦκεν αὐθις ὁ Μιθριδάτης, καὶ τοῦ Ἀλεξάνδρου προσελθόντος παρήνει μικρὸν ἡσυχάσαντα τὸν στρατὸν ἀνιστάναι καὶ σπεύδειν ἐπὶ τὸν ποταμόν, ὡς οὐ διαβησομένων Πάρθων, ἄχρι δὲ ἐκείνου διωξόντων. ταῦτα ἀπαγγείλας πρὸς Ἀντώνιον Ἀλέξανδρος ἐκφέρει παρ' αὐτοῦ χρυσᾶ ποτήρια πάμπολλα καὶ φιάλας, ὧν ἐκεῖνος, ὅσα τῇ ἐσθῆτι κατακρύψαι δυνατὸς ἦν, λαβὼν ἀπή-
 2 λαινευ. ἔτι δὲ ἡμέρας οὔσης ἀναζεύξαντες ἐπορεύοντο, τῶν πολεμίων οὐ παρενοχλούντων, αὐτοὶ δὲ ἑαυτοῖς νύκτα χαλεπωτάτην πασῶν ἐκείνην καὶ φοβερωτάτην ἀπεργασάμενοι. τοὺς γὰρ ἔχοντας ἀργύριον ἢ χρυσίου ἀποκτινύντες ἐσύλων καὶ τὰ χρήματα τῶν ὑποζυγίων ἀφήρπαζον· τέλος δὲ τοῖς Ἀντωνίου σκευοφόροις ἐπιχειρήσαντες ἐκπώματα καὶ τραπέζας πολυτελεῖς κατέκοπτον καὶ διενέμοντο.

3 Θορύβου δὲ πολλοῦ καὶ πλάνου τὸ στράτευμα πᾶν ἐπέχοντος (ᾤοντο γὰρ ἐπιπεπτωκότων τῶν πολεμίων τροπὴν γεγονέναι καὶ διασπασμόν) Ἀντώνιος ἕνα καλέσας τῶν δορυφορούντων αὐτὸν ἀπελευθέρων, ὄνομα Ῥάμνον, ὥρκωσεν, ὅταν κελεύσῃ, τὸ ξίφος αὐτοῦ διεῖναι καὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν ἀποτεμεῖν, ὡς μήτε ἀλόφῃ ζῶν ὑπὸ τῶν πολεμίων
 4 μήτε γνωσθεῖη τεθνηκώς. ἐκδακρυσάντων δὲ τῶν φίλων ὁ Μάρδος ἐθάρρυνε τὸν Ἀντώνιον, ὡς ἐγγὺς ὄντος τοῦ ποταμοῦ· καὶ γὰρ αὔρα τις

ANTONY

XLVIII. Accordingly, the Romans went to pitching their tents, and the Parthians, as their custom was, at once began to withdraw. At this point Mithridates came again, and after Alexander had joined him he advised Antony to let the army rest only a little while, and then to get it under way and hasten to the river, assuring him that the Parthians would not cross it, but would continue the pursuit until they reached it. This message was carried to Antony by Alexander, who then brought out from Antony golden drinking-cups in great numbers, as well as bowls. Mithridates took as many of these as he could hide in his garments and rode off. Then, while it was still day, they broke camp and proceeded on their march. The enemy did not molest them, but they themselves made that night of all other nights the most grievous and fearful for themselves. For those who had gold or silver were slain and robbed of it, and the goods were plundered from the beasts of burden; and finally the baggage-carriers of Antony were attacked, and beakers and costly tables were cut to pieces or distributed about.

And now, since there was great confusion and straggling throughout the whole army (for they thought that the enemy had fallen upon them and routed and dispersed them), Antony called one of the freedmen in his body-guard, Rhamnus by name, and made him take oath that, at the word of command, he would thrust his sword through him and cut off his head, that he might neither be taken alive by the enemy nor recognized when he was dead. Antony's friends burst into tears, but the Mardian tried to encourage him, declaring that the river was near;

ἀπορρέουσα νοτερὰ καὶ ψυχρότερος ἀῆρ ἀπαντῶν ἠδίω τὴν ἀναπνοὴν ἐποίει, καὶ τὸν χρόνον ἔφη τῆς πορείας οὕτω συμπεραίνειν τὸ μέτρον· οὐκ ἐτι 5 γὰρ ἦν πολὺ τὸ λειπόμενον τῆς νυκτός. ἅμα δ' ἀπήγγελλον ἕτεροι τὸν θόρυβον ἐκ τῆς πρὸς αὐτοὺς ἀδικίας καὶ πλεονεξίας εἶναι. διὸ καὶ κατα-στησαὶ τὸ πλῆθος εἰς τάξιν ἐκ τῆς πλάνης καὶ τοῦ διασπασμοῦ βουλόμενος ἐκέλευσε σημαίνειν κατὰ ζευξιν.

XLIX. Ἦδη δ' ὑπέλαμπεν ἡμέρα, καὶ τοῦ στρατοῦ κόσμον ἀρχομένου τινὰ λαμβάνειν καὶ ἡσυχίαν προσέπιπτε τοῖς τελευταίοις τὰ τῶν Πάρθων τοξεύματα, καὶ μάχης σημεῖον ἐδόθη 939 τοῖς ψιλοῖς. οἱ δὲ ὀπλῖται πάλιν ὁμοίως κατε-ρέψαντες ἀλλήλους τοῖς θυρεοῖς ὑπέμενον τοὺς βάλλοντας ἐγγὺς οὐ τολμῶντας συνελθεῖν.
 2 ὑπαγόντων δὲ κατὰ μικρὸν οὕτως τῶν πρώτων ὁ ποταμὸς ἐφάνη καὶ τοὺς ἰππεῖς ἐπ' αὐτῷ παρατάξας Ἀντώνιος ἐναντίους τοῖς πολεμίοις διεβίβαζε τοὺς ἀσθενεῖς πρότους. ἤδη δὲ καὶ τοῖς μαχομένοις ἄδεια καὶ ῥαστώνη τοῦ πιεῖν ἦν.
 ὥς γὰρ εἶδον οἱ Πάρθοι τὸν ποταμὸν, τὰς τε νευρὰς ἀνήκαν καὶ θαρροῦντας ἐκέλευον διαπερᾶν τοὺς Ῥωμαίους, πολλὰ τὴν ἀρετὴν αὐτῶν ἐγκω-3 μιάζοντες. διαβάντες οὖν καθ' ἡσυχίαν αὐτοὺς ἀνελάμβανον, εἶτα ὤδενον, οὐ πάνυ τι τοῖς Πάρθοις πιστεύοντες. ἕκτη δ' ἡμέρα μετὰ τὴν τελευταίαν μάχην ἐπὶ τὸν Ἀράξην ποταμὸν ἤκον, ὀρίζοντα Μηδίαν καὶ Ἀρμενίαν. ἐφάνη δὲ καὶ

ANTONY

for a breeze blowing from it was moist, and a cooler air in their faces made their breathing pleasanter. He said also that the time during which they had been marching made his estimate of the distance conclusive; for little of the night was now left. At the same time, too, others brought word that the tumult was a result of their own iniquitous and rapacious treatment of one another. Therefore, wishing to bring the throng into order after their wandering and distraction, Antony ordered the signal to be given for encampment.

XLIX. Day was already dawning, and the army was beginning to assume a certain order and tranquillity, when the arrows of the Parthians fell upon the rear ranks, and the light-armed troops were ordered by signal to engage. The men-at-arms, too, again covered each other over with their shields, as they had done before, and so withstood their assailants, who did not venture to come to close quarters. The front ranks advanced little by little in this manner, and the river came in sight. On its bank Antony drew up his horsemen to confront the enemy, and set his sick and disabled soldiers across first. And presently even those who were fighting had a chance to drink at their ease; for when the Parthians saw the river, they unstrung their bows and bade the Romans cross over with good courage, bestowing much praise also upon their valour. So they crossed without being disturbed and recruited themselves, and then resumed their march, putting no confidence at all in the Parthians. And on the sixth day after their last battle with them they came to the river Araxes, which forms the boundary between Media and Armenia. Its depth and violence

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

βάθει καὶ τραχύτητι χαλεπός· καὶ λόγος διήλθεν ἐνεδρεύοντας αὐτόθι τοὺς πολεμίους ἐπιθήσεσθαι 4 διαβαίνουσιν αὐτοῖς. ἐπεὶ δὲ ἀσφαλῶς διαπεράσαντες ἐπέβησαν τῆς Ἀρμενίας, ὥσπερ ἄρτι γῆν ἐκείνην ἰδόντες ἐκ πελάγους, προσεκύνουσι καὶ πρὸς δάκρυα καὶ περιβολὰς ἀλλήλων ὑπὸ χαρᾶς ἐτρέποντο. προϊόντες δὲ διὰ χώρας εὐδαίμονος καὶ χρώμενοι πᾶσιν ἀνέδην ἐκ πολλῆς ἀπορίας, ὑδερικοῖς καὶ κοιλιακοῖς περιέπιπτον ἀρρωστήμασιν.

L. Ἐνταῦθα ποιησάμενος ἐξέτασιν αὐτῶν Ἀντώνιος εὔρε δισμυρίους πεζοὺς καὶ τετρακισχιλίους ἵππεῖς ἀπολωλότας, οὐ πάντας ὑπὸ τῶν πολεμίων, ἀλλ' ὑπὲρ ἡμίσεις νοσήσαντας. ὤδευσαν μὲν οὖν ἀπὸ Φραάτων ἡμέρας ἑπτὰ καὶ εἴκοσι, μάχαις δὲ ὀκτὼ καὶ δέκα Πάρθους ἐνίκησαν, αἱ δὲ νῖκαι κράτος οὐκ εἶχον οὐδὲ βεβαιότητα μικρὰς ποιουμένων καὶ ἀτελεῖς τὰς
 2 διώξεις. ᾧ καὶ μάλιστα κατάδηλος ἦν Ἀρταουάσδης ὁ Ἀρμένιος Ἀντώνιον ἐκείνου τοῦ πολέμου τὸ τέλος ἀφελόμενος. εἰ γὰρ οὐς ἀπήγαγεν ἐκ Μηδίας ἵππεῖς ἑξακισχιλίους καὶ μυρίους παρήσαν, ἐσκευασμένοι παραπλησίως Πάρθοις καὶ συνήθεις μάχεσθαι πρὸς αὐτούς, Ῥωμαίων μὲν τοὺς μαχομένους τρεπομένων, ἐκείνων δὲ τοὺς φεύγοντας αἰρούντων, οὐκ ἂν ὑπῆρξεν αὐτοῖς ἥττωμένοις ἀναφέρειν καὶ ἀνατολμᾶν τοσαυτάκις.
 3 ἅπαντες οὖν ὀργῇ παρώξυνον ἐπὶ τὴν τιμωρίαν τοῦ Ἀρμενίου τὸν Ἀντώνιον. ὁ δὲ λογισμῷ χρησάμενος οὔτε ἐμέμψατο τὴν προδοσίαν οὔτε ἀφεῖλε τῆς συνήθους φιλοφροσύνης καὶ τιμῆς made it seem difficult of passage ; and a report was rife that the enemy were lying in ambush there and would attack them as they tried to cross. But after they were safely on the other side and had set foot in Armenia, as if they had just caught sight of that land from the sea, they saluted it and fell to weeping and embracing one another for joy. But as they advanced through the country, which was prosperous, and enjoyed all things in abundance after great scarcity, they fell sick with dropsies and dysenteries.

ANTONY

L. There Antony held a review of his troops and found that twenty thousand of the infantry and four thousand of the cavalry had perished, not all at the hands of the enemy, but more than half by disease. They had, indeed, marched twenty-seven days from Phraata, and had defeated the Parthians in eighteen battles, but their victories were not complete or lasting because the pursuits which they made were short and ineffectual. And this more than all else made it plain that it was Artavasdes the Armenian who had robbed Antony of the power to bring that war to an end. For if the sixteen thousand horsemen who were led back from Media by him had been on hand, equipped as they were like the Parthians and accustomed to fighting with them, and if they, when the Romans routed the fighting enemy, had taken off the fugitives, it would not have been in the enemy's power to recover themselves from defeat and to venture again so often. Accordingly, all the army, in their anger, tried to incite Antony to take vengeance on the Armenian. But Antony, as a measure of prudence, neither reproached him with his treachery nor abated the friendliness and respect usually shown to him,

πρὸς αὐτόν, ἀσθενῆς τῷ στρατῷ καὶ ἄπορος
 4 γεγονώς. ὕστερον μέντοι πάλιν ἐμβαλὼν εἰς Ἀρμενίαν, καὶ πολλαῖς ὑποσχέσεσι καὶ προ-κλήσεσι πείσας αὐτὸν ἐλθεῖν εἰς χεῖρας, συνέλαβε, καὶ δέσμιον καταγαγὼν εἰς Ἀλεξάν-δρειαν, ἐθριάμβευσεν. ᾧ μάλιστα Ῥωμαίους ἐλύπησεν, ὡς τὰ καλὰ καὶ σεμνὰ τῆς πατρίδος Αἰγυπτίοις διὰ Κλεοπάτραν χαριζόμενος. ταῦτα μὲν οὖν ὕστερον ἐπράχθη.

LI. Τότε δὲ διὰ πολλοῦ χειμῶνος ἤδη καὶ νιφετῶν ἀπαύστων ἐπειγόμενος ὀκτακισχιλίους ἀπέβαλε καθ' ὁδόν. αὐτὸς δὲ καταβάς ὀλιγοστός ἐπὶ θάλασσαν ἐν χωρίῳ τινὶ μεταξύ Βηρυτοῦ κειμένῳ καὶ Σιδῶνος, Λευκὴ κώμη καλεῖται, Κλεοπάτραν περιέμενε· καὶ βραδυνοῦσης ἀδημονῶν ἤλυε, ταχὺ μὲν εἰς τὸ πίνειν καὶ μεθύ-2 σκεσθαι διδοὺς ἑαυτόν, οὐ καρτερῶν δὲ κατακείμενος, ἀλλὰ μεταξύ πινόντων ἀνιστάμενος καὶ ἀναπηδῶν πολλακίς ἐπισκοπεῖν, ἕως ἐκείνη κατέπλευσεν, ἐσθῆτα πολλὴν καὶ χρήματα κομίζουσα τοῖς στρατιώταις. εἰσὶ δὲ οἱ λέγοντες ὅτι τὴν μὲν ἐσθῆτα παρ' ἐκείνης λαβῶν, τὸ δὲ ἀργύριον ἐκ τῶν ἰδίων ἑαυτοῦ, διένειμεν ὡς ἐκείνης διδούσης.

LII. Τῷ δὲ βασιλεῖ τῶν Μήδων γίνεται διαφορὰ πρὸς Φραόρτην τὸν Πάρθον, ἀρξαμένη 940 μὲν, ὡς φασιν, ὑπὲρ τῶν Ῥωμαϊκῶν λαφύρων, ὑπόνοιαν δὲ τῷ Μήδῳ καὶ φόβον ἀφαιρέσεως τῆς ἀρχῆς παρασχοῦσα. διὸ καὶ πέμπων ἐκάλει τὸν Ἀντώνιον, ἐπαγγελλόμενος συμπολεμήσειν μετὰ
 2 τῆς ἑαυτοῦ δυνάμεως. γενόμενος οὖν ἐπ' ἐλπίδος

ANTONY

being now weak in numbers and in want of supplies. But afterwards, when he once more invaded Armenia,¹ and by many invitations and promises induced Artavasdes to come to him, Antony seized him, and took him in chains down to Alexandria, where he celebrated a triumph. And herein particularly did he give offence to the Romans, since he bestowed the honourable and solemn rites of his native country upon the Egyptians for Cleopatra's sake. This, however, took place at a later time.

LI. But now, hastening on through much wintry weather, which was already at hand, and incessant snow-storms, he lost eight thousand men on the march. He himself, however, went down with a small company to the sea, and in a little place between Berytus and Sidon, called White Village, he waited for Cleopatra to come; and since she was slow in coming he was beside himself with distress, promptly resorting to drinking and intoxication, although he could not hold out long at table, but in the midst of the drinking would often rise or spring up to look out, until she put into port, bringing an abundance of clothing and money for the soldiers. There are some, however, who say that he received the clothing from Cleopatra, but took the money from his own private funds, and distributed it as a gift from her.

LII. And now the king of the Medes had a quarrel with Phraortes the Parthian; it arose, as they say, over the Roman spoils, but it made the Mede suspicious and fearful that his dominion would be taken away from him. For this reason he sent and invited Antony to come, promising to join him in the war with his own forces. Antony, accordingly,

¹ In 34 B.C. Cf. chapter liii. 6.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

μεγάλης ὁ Ἀντώνιος (ὃ γὰρ ἐδόκει μόνῳ τοῦ κατειργάσθαι Πάρθους ἀπολιπεῖν, ἰππέων πολλῶν καὶ τοξοτῶν ἐνδεῆς ἐλθῶν, τοῦτο ἑώρα προσγιγνώμενον αὐτῷ χαριζομένῳ μᾶλλον ἢ δεομένῳ) παρεσκευάζετο δι' Ἀρμενίας αὐθις ἀναβαίνειν καὶ συγγενόμενος τῷ Μήδῳ περὶ ποταμὸν Ἀράξην οὕτω κινεῖν τὸν πόλεμον.

LIII. Ἐν δὲ Ῥώμῃ βουλομένης Ὀκταουίας πλεῦσαι πρὸς Ἀντώνιον, ἐπέτρεψε Καῖσαρ, ὡς οἱ πλείους λέγουσιν, οὐκ ἐκείνη χαριζόμενος, ἀλλ' ὅπως περιυβρισθεῖσα καὶ καταμεληθεῖσα πρὸς τὸν πόλεμον αἰτίαν εὐπρεπῆ παράσχοι. γενομένη δὲ ἐν Ἀθήναις ἐδέξατο γράμματα παρὰ Ἀντωνίου κελεύοντος αὐτόθι προσμένειν καὶ τὰ

2 περὶ τὴν ἀνάβασιν δηλοῦντος. ἡ δέ, καίπερ ἀχθομένη καὶ νοῦσα τὴν πρόφασιν, ὅμως ἔγραψε πυνθανομένη ποῖ κελεύει πεμφθῆναι τὰ κομιζόμενα πρὸς αὐτόν. ἐκόμιζε δὲ πολλὴν μὲν ἐσθήτα στρατιωτικὴν, πολλὰ δὲ ὑποζύγια καὶ χρήματα καὶ δῶρα τοῖς περὶ αὐτὸν ἡγεμόσι καὶ φίλοις· ἐκτὸς δὲ τούτων στρατιώτας ἐπιλέκτους δισχιλίους εἰς στρατηγικὰς σπεύρας κεκοσμημένους ἐκπρεπέσι πανοπλίαις. ταῦτα Νίγρος τις Ἀντωνίου φίλος ἀποσταλεὶς παρ' αὐτῆς ἔφραζε, καὶ προσετίθει τοὺς ἀξίους καὶ πρέποντας ἐπαίνους.

3 Αἰσθομένη δὲ ἡ Κλεοπάτρα τὴν Ὀκταουίαν ὁμόσε χωροῦσαν αὐτῇ, καὶ φοβηθεῖσα μὴ τοῦ τρόπου τῇ σεμνότητι καὶ τῇ Καίσαρος δυνάμει προσκτησαμένη τὸ καθ' ἡδονὴν ὀμιλεῖν καὶ was in high hopes. For the one thing which he thought had prevented his subjugation of the Parthians, namely, his lack of a large number of horsemen and archers on his expedition, this he now saw supplied for him, and he would be granting and not asking a favour. He therefore made preparations to go up again through Armenia, effect a junction with the Mede at the river Araxes, and then prosecute the war.

ANTONY

LIII. But at Rome Octavia was desirous of sailing to Antony, and Caesar gave her permission to do so, as the majority say, not as a favour to her, but in order that, in case she were neglected and treated with scorn, he might have plausible ground for war. When Octavia arrived at Athens,¹ she received letters from Antony in which he bade her remain there and told her of his expedition. Octavia, although she saw through the pretext and was distressed, nevertheless wrote to Antony asking whither he would have the things sent which she was bringing to him. For she was bringing a great quantity of clothing for his soldiers, many beasts of burden, and money and gifts for the officers and friends about him; and besides this, two thousand picked soldiers equipped as praetorian cohorts with splendid armour. These things were announced to Antony by a certain Niger, a friend of his who had been sent from Octavia, and he added such praises of her as was fitting and deserved.

But Cleopatra perceived that Octavia was coming into a contest at close quarters with her, and feared lest, if she added to the dignity of her character and the power of Caesar her pleasurable society and

¹ In 35 B. C.

θεραπεύειν Ἀντώνιον ἄμαχος γένηται καὶ κρατήση παντάπασι τοῦ ἀνδρός, ἔραν αὐτὴ προσεποιεῖτο τοῦ Ἀντωνίου, καὶ τὸ σῶμα λεπταῖς καθήρει διαίταις· τὸ δὲ βλέμμα προσιόντος ἐκπεπληγμένον, ἀπερχομένου δὲ τηκόμενον καὶ 4 ταπεινούμενον ὑπεφαίνεται. πραγματευομένη δὲ πολλάκις ὀφθῆναι δακρύουσα ταχὺ τῶν δακρῶν ἀφήρει καὶ ἀπέκρυπτεν, ὡς δὴ βουλομένη λανθάνειν ἐκείνον. ἐπράττετο δὲ ταῦτα μέλλοντος τοῦ ἀνδρός ἐκ Συρίας ἀναβαίνειν πρὸς τὸν Μῆδον.
 οἱ δὲ κόλακες σπουδάζοντες ὑπὲρ αὐτῆς ἐλοι-δόρουν τὸν Ἀντώνιον ὡς σκληρὸν καὶ ἀπαθῆ καὶ παραπολλύντα γυναῖον εἰς ἓνα καὶ μόνον ἐκείνον 5 ἀνητημένον. Ὀκταουίαν μὲν γὰρ πραγμάτων ἕνεκα διὰ τὸν ἀδελφὸν συνελθεῖν καὶ τὸ τῆς γαμετῆς ὄνομα καρποῦσθαι· Κλεοπάτραν δὲ τοσοῦτων ἀνθρώπων βασιλεύουσαν ἐρωμένην Ἀντωνίου καλεῖσθαι, καὶ τοῦνομα τοῦτο μὴ φεύγειν μῆδ' ἀπαξιοῦν, ἕως ὅραν ἐκείνον ἕξεστι καὶ συζῆν· ἀπελαυνομένην δὲ τούτου μὴ περι-6 βιώσεσθαι. τέλος δ' οὖν οὕτω τὸν ἄνθρωπον ἐξέτηξαν καὶ ἀπεθήλυναν, ὥστε δείσαντα μὴ Κλεοπάτρα πρόηται τὸν βίον, εἰς Ἀλεξάνδρειαν ἐπανελθεῖν, τὸν δὲ Μῆδον εἰς ὦραν ἔτους ἀνα-βαλέσθαι, καίπερ ἐν στάσει τῶν Παρθικῶν εἶναι λεγομένων. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ τοῦτον μὲν ἀναβάς αὐθις εἰς φιλίαν προσηγάγετο, καὶ λαβὼν ἐνὶ τῶν ἐκ Κλεοπάτρας υἱῶν γυναῖκα μίαν αὐτοῦ τῶν θυγατέρων ἔτι μικρὰν οὔσαν ἐγγυήσας ἐπανῆλθεν, ἤδη πρὸς τὸν ἐμφύλιον πόλεμον τετραμμένος.

ANTONY

her assiduous attentions to Antony, she would become invincible and get complete control over her husband. She therefore pretended to be passionately in love with Antony herself, and reduced her body by slender diet; she put on a look of rapture when Antony drew near, and one of faintness and melancholy when he went away. She would contrive to be often seen in tears, and then would quickly wipe the tears away and try to hide them, as if she would not have Antony notice them. And she practised these arts while Antony was intending to go up from Syria to join the Mede. Her flatterers, too, were industrious in her behalf, and used to revile Antony as hard-hearted and unfeeling, and as the destroyer of a mistress who was devoted to him and him alone. For Octavia, they said, had married him as a matter of public policy and for the sake of her brother, and enjoyed the name of wedded wife; but Cleopatra, who was queen of so many people, was called Antony's beloved, and she did not shun this name nor disdain it, as long as she could see him and live with him; but if she were driven away from him she would not survive it. At last, then, they so melted and enervated the man that he became fearful lest Cleopatra should throw away her life, and went back to Alexandria, putting off the Mede until the summer season, although Parthia was said to be suffering from internal dissensions. However, he went up and brought the king once more into friendly relations, and after betrothing to one of his sons by Cleopatra one of the king's daughters who was still small, he returned, his thoughts being now directed towards the civil war.

LIV. Ὀκταουίαν δὲ Καίσαρ ὑβρίσθαι δοκοῦσαν, ὡς ἐπανήλθεν ἐξ Ἀθηνῶν, ἐκέλευσε καθ' αὐτὴν οἰκεῖν. ἡ δὲ οὐκ ἔφη τὸν οἶκον ἀπολείψειν τοῦ ἀνδρός, ἀλλὰ κάκεινον αὐτόν, εἰ μὴ δι' ἑτέρας αἰτίας ἔγνωκε πολεμεῖν Ἀντωνίῳ, παρεκάλει τὰ καθ' αὐτὴν ἔαν, ὡς οὐδὲ ἀκοῦσαι καλόν, εἰ τῶν μεγίστων αὐτοκρατόρων ὁ μὲν δι' ἔρωτα γυναικός, ὁ δὲ διὰ ζηλοτυπίαν εἰς ἐμφύλιον πόλεμον Ῥωμαίους κατέστησε. ταῦτα δὲ λέγουσα μᾶλλον 941 ἐβεβαίον δι' ἔργων. καὶ γὰρ ᾤκει τὴν οἰκίαν, ὥσπερ αὐτοῦ παρόντος ἐκείνου, καὶ τῶν τέκνων οὐ μόνον τῶν ἐξ αὐτῆς, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν ἐκ Φουλβίας γεγονότων, καλῶς καὶ μεγαλοπρεπῶς ἐπεμελεῖτο· καὶ τοὺς πεμπομένους ἐπὶ ἀρχάς τινας ἢ πράγματα τῶν Ἀντωνίου φίλων ὑποδεχομένη συνέπραττεν ὧν παρὰ Καίσαρος δεηθεῖεν. ἄκουσα δὲ ἔβλαπτε διὰ τούτων Ἀντώνιον· ἐμισεῖτο γὰρ 3 ἀδικῶν γυναῖκα τοιαύτην. ἐμισήθη δὲ καὶ διὰ τὴν διανέμησιν ἣν ἐποίησατο τοῖς τέκνοις ἐν Ἀλεξανδρείᾳ, τραγικὴν καὶ ὑπερήφανον καὶ μισορρώμειον φανείσαν. ἐμπλήσας γὰρ ὄχλου τὸ γυμνάσιον καὶ θέμενος ἐπὶ βήματος ἀργυροῦ δύο θρόνους χρυσοῦς, τὸν μὲν ἑαυτῷ, τὸν δὲ Κλεοπάτρα, καὶ τοῖς παισὶν ἑτέρους ταπεινότερους, πρῶτον μὲν ἀπέφηνε Κλεοπάτραν 4 βασιλίτισσαν Αἰγύπτου καὶ Κύπρου καὶ Λιβύης καὶ κοίλης Συρίας, συμβασιλεύοντος αὐτῇ Καισαρίωνος, ὃς ἐκ Καίσαρος ἐδόκει τοῦ προτέρου γεγονέναι Κλεοπάτραν ἔγκυον καταλιπόντος·

260

ANTONY

LIV. As for Octavia, she was thought to have been treated with scorn, and when she came back from Athens Caesar ordered her to dwell in her own house. But she refused to leave the house of her husband, nay, she even entreated Caesar himself, unless on other grounds he had determined to make war upon Antony, to ignore Antony's treatment of her, since it was an infamous thing even to have it said that the two greatest imperators in the world plunged the Romans into civil war, the one out of passion for, and the other out of resentment in behalf of, a woman. These were her words, and she confirmed them by her deeds. For she dwelt in her husband's house, just as if he were at home, and she cared for his children, not only those whom she herself, but also those whom Fulvia had borne him, in a noble and magnificent manner; she also received such friends of Antony as were sent to Rome in quest of office or on business, and helped them to obtain from Caesar what they wanted. Without meaning it, however, she was damaging Antony by this conduct of hers; for he was hated for wronging such a woman. He was hated, too, for the distribution which he made to his children in Alexandria; it was seen to be theatrical and arrogant, and to evince hatred of Rome. For after filling the gymnasium with a throng and placing on a tribunal of silver two thrones of gold, one for himself and the other for Cleopatra, and other lower thrones for his sons, in the first place he declared Cleopatra Queen of Egypt, Cyprus, Libya, and Coele Syria, and she was to share her throne with Caesarion. Caesarion was believed to be a son of the former Caesar, by whom Cleopatra was left

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

δεύτερον δὲ τοὺς ἐξ αὐτοῦ καὶ Κλεοπάτρας υἱοὺς βασιλεῖς βασιλέων ἀναγορεύσας Ἀλεξάνδρῳ μὲν Ἀρμενίαν ἀπένειμε καὶ Μηδίαν καὶ τὰ Πάρθων, ὅταν ὑπαγάγηται, Πτολεμαίῳ δὲ Φοινίκην καὶ 5 Συρίαν καὶ Κιλικίαν. ἅμα δὲ καὶ προήγαγε τῶν παίδων Ἀλέξανδρον μὲν ἐσθήτη Μηδικῇ τιάραν καὶ κίταριν ὀρθὴν ἐχούσῃ, Πτολεμαίου δὲ κρηπίσι καὶ χλανίδι καὶ καυσία διαδηματοφόρῳ κεκοσμημένον. αὕτη γὰρ ἦν σκευὴ τῶν ἀπ' Ἀλεξάνδρου βασιλέων, ἐκείνη δὲ Μήδων καὶ Ἀρμενίων.
 6 ἀσπασαμένων δὲ τῶν παίδων τοὺς γονεῖς, τὸν μὲν
 Ἀρμενίων φυλακὴν περιῖστατο, τὸν δὲ Μακεδόνων.
 Κλεοπάτρα μὲν γὰρ καὶ τότε καὶ τὸν ἄλλον χρόνον εἰς πλήθος ἐξιούσα στολὴν ἱερὰν Ἰσιδος ἐλάμβανε καὶ νέα Ἴσις ἐχρημάτιζε.

LV. Ταῦτα δὲ εἰς σύγκλητον ἐκφέρων Καῖσαρ καὶ πολλάκις ἐν τῷ δήμῳ κατηγορῶν παρώξυνε τὸ πλήθος ἐπ' Ἀντώνιον. ἔπεμπε δὲ καὶ Ἀντώνιος ἀντεγκαλῶν ἐκείνῳ. μέγιστα δ' ἦν ὧν ἐνεκάλει, πρῶτον μὲν, ὅτι Πομπηίου Σικελίαν ἀφελόμενος οὐκ ἔνειμε μέρος αὐτῷ τῆς νήσου· δεύτερον, ὅτι χρυσάμενος ναῦς παρ' αὐτοῦ πρὸς τὸν πόλεμον ἀπεστέρησε· τρίτον, ὅτι τὸν συνάρ-χοντα Λέπιδον ἐκβαλὼν τῆς ἀρχῆς καὶ ποιήσας ἄτιμον αὐτὸς ἔχει στρατὸν καὶ χώραν καὶ προσό-2 δους τὰς ἐκείνῳ προσνεμηθείσας· ἐπὶ πᾶσιν, ὅτι τοῖς αὐτοῦ στρατιώταις ἅπασαν ὀλίγου δεῖν Ἰταλίαν κατακεκληρούχηκε, μηδὲν λιπῶν τοῖς ἐκείνου. πρὸς ταῦτα Καῖσαρ ἀπελογεῖτο Λέπιδου pregnant. In the second place, he proclaimed his own sons by Cleopatra Kings of Kings, and to Alexander he allotted Armenia, Media and Parthia (when he should have subdued it), to Ptolemy Phoenicia, Syria, and Cilicia. At the same time he also produced his sons, Alexander arrayed in Median garb, which included a tiara and upright head-dress, Ptolemy in boots, short cloak, and broad-brimmed hat surmounted by a diadem. For the latter was the dress of the kings who followed Alexander, the former that of Medes and Armenians. And when the boys had embraced their parents, one was given a bodyguard of Armenians, the other of Macedonians. Cleopatra, indeed, both then and at other times when she appeared in public, assumed a robe sacred to Isis, and was addressed as the New Isis.

ANTONY

LV. By reporting these things to the senate and by frequent denunciations before the people Caesar tried to inflame the multitude against Antony. Antony, too, kept sending counter-accusations against Caesar. The chief accusations which he made were, in the first place, that after taking Sicily away from Pompey, Caesar had not assigned a part of the island to him; in the second place, that after borrowing ships from him for the war he had kept them for himself; thirdly, that after ejecting his colleague Lepidus from office and degrading him, he was keeping for himself the army, the territory, and the revenues which had been assigned to Lepidus: finally that he had distributed almost all Italy in allotments, to his own soldiers, and had left nothing for the soldiers of Antony. To these charges Caesar replied by saying that he had deposed Lepidus from office

μὲν ὑβρίζοντα καταπαύσαι τῆς ἀρχῆς, ἃ δὲ ἔσχηκε πολεμήσας, νεμήσεσθαι πρὸς Ἀντώνιον ὅταν κάκεινος Ἀρμενίαν πρὸς αὐτόν· τοῖς δὲ στρατιώταις Ἰταλίας μὴ μετεῖναι· Μηδίαν γὰρ ἔχειν καὶ Παρθίαν αὐτούς, ἃς προσεκτήσαντο Ῥωμαίοις καλῶς ἀγωνισάμενοι μετὰ τοῦ αὐτοκράτορος.

LVI. Ταῦτα ἐν Ἀρμενία διατρίβων Ἀντώνιος ἤκουσε· καὶ Κανίδιον εὐθύς ἐκέλευσεν ἐκκαίδεκα τέλη λαβόντα καταβαίνειν ἐπὶ θάλατταν. αὐτὸς δὲ Κλεοπάτραν ἀναλαβὼν εἰς Ἔφεσον ἦκε. καὶ τὸ ναυτικὸν ἐκεῖ συνῆει πανταχόθεν, ὀκτακόσρια σὺν ὀλκάσι νῆες, ὧν Κλεοπάτρα παρεῖχε διακοσίας καὶ τάλαντα δισμύρια καὶ τροφήν τῷ
 2 στρατῷ παντὶ πρὸς τὸν πόλεμον. Ἀντώνιος δὲ πεισθεὶς ὑπὸ Δομιτίου καὶ τινων ἄλλων ἐκέλευε Κλεοπάτραν πλεῖν ἐπ' Αἰγύπτου κάκει διακαρδοκεῖν τὸν πόλεμον. ἣ δὲ φοβουμένη τὰς δι' Ὀκταουίας πάλιν αὐτοῦ διαλύσεις ἔπεισε πολλοῖς Κανίδιον χρήμασιν Ἀντωνίῳ διαλεχθῆναι περὶ αὐτῆς, ὡς οὔτε δίκαιον ἀπελαίνεσθαι τοῦ πολέμου γυναῖκα συμβολὰς τηλικαύτας διδοῦσαν,
 3 οὔτε συμφέρον ἀθυμοτέρους ποιεῖν τοὺς Αἰγυπτίους μέγα μέρος τῆς ναυτικῆς δυνάμεως ὄντας· 942 ἄλλως δὲ μηδὲ ὄραν οὔτινος τῶν συστρατευόντων βασιλέων ἀπολείποιο τὸ φρονεῖν Κλεοπάτρα, πολὺν μὲν χρόνον δι' αὐτῆς κυβερνώσα βασιλείαν τοσαύτην, πολὺν δὲ ἐκείνῳ συνοῦσα καὶ μανθάνουσα χρῆσθαι πράγμασι μεγάλοις. ταῦτα (ἔδει γὰρ εἰς Καίσαρα πάντα περιελθεῖν) ἐνῆκα καὶ συνιουσῶν τῶν δυνάμεων πλεύσαντες εἰς because he was abusing it, and as for what he had acquired in war, he would share it with Antony whenever Antony, on his part, should share Armenia with him; and Antony's soldiers had no claim upon Italy, since they had Media and Parthia, which countries they had added to the Roman dominion by their noble struggles under their imperator.

ANTONY

LVI. Antony heard of this while he was tarrying in Armenia; and at once he ordered Canidius to take sixteen legions and go down to the sea. But he himself took Cleopatra with him and came to Ephesus. It was there that his naval force was coming together from all quarters, eight hundred ships of war with merchant vessels, of which Cleopatra furnished two hundred, besides twenty thousand talents, and supplies for the whole army during the war. But Antony, listening to the advice of Domitius and sundry others, ordered Cleopatra to sail to Egypt and there await the result of the war. Cleopatra, however, fearing that Octavia would again succeed in putting a stop to the war, persuaded Canidius by large bribes to plead her cause with Antony, and to say that it was neither just to drive away from the war a woman whose contributions to it were so large, nor was it for the interest of Antony to dispirit the Egyptians, who formed a large part of his naval force; and besides, it was not easy to see how Cleopatra was inferior in intelligence to anyone of the princes who took part in the expedition, she who for a long time had governed so large a kingdom by herself, and by long association with Antony had learned to manage large affairs. These arguments (since it was destined that everything should come into Caesar's hands) prevailed; and with united forces

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- 4 Σάμον ἐν εὐπαθείαις ἦσαν. ὥσπερ γὰρ βασιλεῦσι καὶ δυνάσταις καὶ τετράρχαις ἔθνεσι τε καὶ πόλεσι πάσαις ταῖς μεταξύ Συρίας καὶ Μαιώτιδος καὶ Ἀρμενίας καὶ Ἰλλυριῶν προεῖρητο πέμπειν καὶ κομίζειν τὰς εἰς τὸν πόλεμον παρασκευὰς, οὕτω πᾶσι τοῖς περὶ τὸν Διόνυσον τεχνίταις ἐπάναγκες ἦν εἰς Σάμον ἀπαντᾶν· καὶ τῆς ἐν κύκλῳ σχεδὸν ἀπάσης οἰκουμένης περιθρηνουμένης καὶ περιστεναζομένης, μία νῆσος ἐφ' ἡμέρας πολλὰς κατηυλείτο καὶ κατεψάλλετο πληρουμένων θεάτρων καὶ χορῶν ἀγωνιζομένων.
- 5 συνέθνε δὲ καὶ πόλις πᾶσα βούν πέμπουσα, καὶ βασιλεῖς διημιλλῶντο ταῖς ὑποδοχαῖς καὶ δωρεαῖς πρὸς ἀλλήλους. ὥστε καὶ λόγος διήκει, τίνες ἔσονται κρατήσαντες ἐν τοῖς ἐπινικίοις οἱ τοῦ πολέμου τὰς παρασκευὰς οὕτω πολυτελῶς ἑορτάζοντες.

LVII. Γενόμενος δὲ ἀπὸ τούτων τοῖς μὲν περὶ τὸν Διόνυσον τεχνίταις Πριήνην ἔδωκεν οἰκητήριον, αὐτὸς δὲ πλεύσας εἰς Ἀθήνας πάλιν ἐν παιδιαῖς ἦν καὶ θεάτροις. ζηλοτυπούσα δὲ Κλεοπάτρα τὰς Ὀκταουίας ἐν τῇ πόλει τιμὰς (ἠγαπήθη γὰρ ὑπὸ τῶν Ἀθηναίων ἡ Ὀκταουία μάλιστα) πολλαῖς ἀνελάμβανε φιλοτιμίαις τὸν δῆμον.

2 οἱ δὲ τιμὰς αὐτῇ ψηφισάμενοι πρέσβεις ἐπεμψαν ἐπὶ τὴν οἰκίαν τὸ ψήφισμα κομίζοντας, ὧν εἷς ἦν Ἀντώνιος, ὡς δὴ πολίτης Ἀθηναίων· καὶ δὴ καταστὰς ἐπ' αὐτῆς λόγον ὑπὲρ τῆς πόλεως διεξῆλθεν. εἰς δὲ Ῥώμην ἐπεμψε τοὺς

3 Ὀκταουίαν ἐκ τῆς οἰκίας ἐκβαλοῦντας. ἀπελθεῖν δὲ φασιν αὐτὴν τὰ μὲν τέκνα πάντα Ἀντωνίου μεθ' ἑαυτῆς ἔχουσαν ἄνευ τοῦ πρεσβυτάτου τῶν

ANTONY

they sailed to Samos and there made merry. For just as all the kings, dynasts, tetrarchs, nations, and cities between Syria, the Maeotic Lake, Armenia, and Illyria had been ordered to send or bring their equipment for the war, so all the dramatic artists were compelled to put in an appearance at Samos; and while almost all the world around was filled with groans and lamentations, a single island for many days resounded with flutes and stringed instruments; theatres there were filled, and choral bands were competing with one another. Every city also sent an ox for the general sacrifice, and kings vied with one another in their mutual entertainments and gifts. And so men everywhere began to ask: "How will the conquerors celebrate their victories if their preparations for the war are marked by festivals so costly?"

LVII. When these festivities were over, Antony gave the dramatic artists Priene as a place for them to dwell, and sailed himself to Athens, where sports and theatres again engaged him. Cleopatra, too, jealous of Octavia's honours in the city (for Octavia was especially beloved by the Athenians), tried by many splendid gifts to win the favour of the people. So the people voted honours to her, and sent a deputation to her house carrying the vote, of whom Antony was one, for was he not a citizen of Athens? And standing in her presence he delivered a speech in behalf of the city. To Rome, however, he sent men who had orders to eject Octavia from his house. And we are told that she left it taking all his children with her except his eldest son by Fulvia, who ἐκ Φουλβίας (ἐκείνος γὰρ ἦν παρὰ τῷ πατρὶ), κλαίουσαν δὲ καὶ δυσφοροῦσαν εἰ δόξει μία τῶν αἰτιῶν τοῦ πολέμου καὶ αὐτὴ γεγονέναι. Ῥωμαῖοι δὲ ὄκτειρον οὐκ ἐκείνην, ἀλλ' Ἀντώνιον, καὶ μᾶλλον οἱ Κλεοπάτραν ἑωρακότες οὔτε κάλλει τῆς Ὀκταουίας οὔτε ὥρα διαφέρουσαν.

LVIII. Καίσαρ δὲ τὸ τάχος καὶ τὸ μέγεθος τῆς παρασκευῆς ἀκούσας ἐθορυβήθη, μὴ τοῦ θέρους ἐκείνου διαπολεμῆν ἀναγκασθῆ. καὶ γὰρ ἐνέδει πολλά, καὶ τοὺς ἀνθρώπους ἐλύπουν αἱ τῶν χρημάτων εἰσπράξεις· ἀναγκαζόμενοι γὰρ οἱ μὲν ἄλλοι τὰ τέταρτα τῶν καρπῶν, οἱ δὲ ἐξελευθερικοὶ τῶν κτημάτων αὐτῶν τὰς ὀγδόας ἀποφέρειν κατεβῶων αὐτοῦ, καὶ ταραχαὶ κατεῖχον
 2 ἐκ τούτων ἅπασαν τὴν Ἰταλίαν. ὅθεν ἐν τοῖς μεγίστοις ἀμαρτήμασιν Ἀντωνίου τὴν ἀναβολὴν τοῦ πολέμου τίθενται. καὶ γὰρ παρασκευάσασθαι χρόνον ἔδωκε Καίσαρι καὶ τὰς ταραχὰς τῶν ἀνθρώπων ἐξέλυσε. πραττόμενοι γὰρ ἡγριαίνοντο, πραχθέντες δὲ καὶ δόντες ἡσύχαζον. Τίτιος δὲ καὶ Πλάγκος, Ἀντωνίου φίλοι τῶν ὑπατικῶν, ὑπὸ Κλεοπάτρας προπηλακιζόμενοι (πλείστα γὰρ ἠναντιώθησαν αὐτῇ περὶ τοῦ συστρατεύειν) ἀποδράντες ὄχοντο πρὸς Καίσαρα, καὶ περὶ τῶν Ἀντωνίου διαθηκῶν ἐγένοντο μηνυταί,
 3 τὰ γεγραμμένα συνειδότες. ἀπέκειντο δ' αὐταὶ παρὰ ταῖς Ἑστιάσι παρθένοις, καὶ Καίσαρος αἰτοῦντος οὐκ ἔδωκαν· εἰ δὲ βούλοιο λαμβάνειν, ἐλθεῖν αὐτὸν ἐκέλευον. ἔλαβεν οὖν ἐλθῶν· καὶ πρῶτον μὲν αὐτὸς ἰδίᾳ τὰ γεγραμμένα διῆλθε, καὶ παρεσημῆματο τόπους τινὰς εὐκατηγορήτους· 943 was with his father; she was in tears of distress that she herself also would be regarded as one of the causes of the war. But the Romans felt pity for Antony, not for her, and especially those who had seen Cleopatra and knew that neither in youthfulness nor beauty was she superior to Octavia.

ANTONY

LVIII. When Caesar heard of the rapidity and extent of Antony's preparations, he was much disturbed, fearing lest he should be forced to settle the issue of the war during that summer.¹ For he was lacking in many things, and people were vexed by the exactions of taxes. The citizens generally were compelled to pay one fourth of their income, and the freedmen one eighth of their property, and both classes cried out against Caesar, and disturbances arising from these causes prevailed throughout all Italy. Wherefore, among the greatest mistakes of Antony men reckon his postponement of the war. For it gave Caesar time to make preparations and put an end to the disturbances among the people. For while money was being exacted from them, they were angry, but when it had been exacted and they had paid it, they were calm. Moreover, Titius and Plancus, friends of Antony and men of consular rank, being abused by Cleopatra (for they had been most opposed to her accompanying the expedition) ran away to Caesar, and they gave him information about Antony's will, the contents of which they knew. This will was on deposit with the Vestal Virgins, and when Caesar asked for it, they would not give it to him; but if he wanted to take it, they told him to come and do so. So he went and took it; and to begin with, he read its contents through by himself, and marked certain reprehensible passages; then ¹ The summer of 32 B.C.

- ἔπειτα τὴν βουλήν ἀθροίσας ἀνεγίνωσκε, τῶν 4 πλείστων ἀηδῶς ἔχόντων. ἀλλόκοτον γὰρ ἔδοξεν εἶναι καὶ δεινόν, εὐθύνας τινὰ διδόναι ζῶντα περὶ ὧν ἐβουλήθη γενέσθαι μετὰ τὴν τελευτήν. ἐπεφύετο δὲ τῶν γεγραμμένων μάλιστα τῷ περὶ τῆς ταφῆς. ἐκέλευε γὰρ αὐτοῦ τὸ σῶμα, κὰν ἐν
 Ῥώμῃ τελευτήσῃ, δι' ἀγορᾶς πομπευθὲν εἰς
 Ἀλεξάνδρειαν ὡς Κλεοπάτραν ἀποσταλῆναι.
 5 Καλουτίσιος δὲ Καίσαρος ἐταῖρος ἔτι καὶ ταῦτα τῶν εἰς Κλεοπάτραν ἐγκλημάτων Ἀντωνίῳ προῦφερε· χαρίσασθαι μὲν αὐτῇ τὰς ἐκ Περγάμου βιβλιοθήκας, ἐν αἷς εἴκοσι μυριάδες βιβλίων ἀπλῶν ἦσαν· ἐν δὲ συνδείπνῳ πολλῶν παρόντων ἀναστάντα τρίβειν αὐτῆς τοὺς πόδας ἐκ τινος ὀρισμοῦ καὶ συνθήκης γενομένης· Ἐφεσίους δὲ ἀνασχέσθαι παρόντος αὐτοῦ κυρίαν τὴν 6 Κλεοπάτραν ἀσπασαμένους· δικάζοντα δὲ πολλάκις τετράρχαις καὶ βασιλεῦσιν ἐπὶ βήματος δελτάρια τῶν ἐρωτικῶν ὀνύχια καὶ κρυστάλλινα δέχεσθαι παρ' αὐτῆς καὶ ἀναγινώσκειν· Φουρ-νίου δὲ λέγοντος, ὃς ἦν ἀξιώματος μεγάλου καὶ δεινότατος εἰπεῖν Ῥωμαίων, τὴν μὲν Κλεοπάτραν ἐν φορείῳ διὰ τῆς ἀγορᾶς κομίζεσθαι, τὸν δὲ Ἀντωνιον, ὡς εἶδεν, ἀναπηδήσαντα τὴν μὲν δίκην ἀπολιπεῖν, ἐκκρεμαννύμενον δὲ τοῦ φορείου παραπέμπειν ἐκείνην.

LIX. Ἀλλὰ τούτων μὲν ἔδοκει τὰ πλείεστα καταψεύδεσθαι Καλουτίσιος· οἱ δὲ φίλοι τοῦ Ἀντωνίου περιϊόντες ἐν Ῥώμῃ τὸν δῆμον ἰκέτευον, ἕνα δὲ ἐξ αὐτῶν ἔπεμψαν Γεμίνιον δεόμενοι τοῦ Ἀντωνίου μὴ περιιδεῖν αὐτὸν ἀποψηφισθέντα

ANTONY

he assembled the senate and read it aloud to them, although most of them were displeased to hear him do so. For they thought it a strange and grievous matter that a man should be called to account while alive for what he wished to have done after his death. Caesar laid most stress on the clause in the will relating to Antony's burial. For it directed that Antony's body, even if he should die in Rome, should be borne in state through the forum and then sent away to Cleopatra in Egypt. Again, Calvisius, who was a companion of Caesar, brought forward against Antony the following charges also regarding his behaviour towards Cleopatra: he had bestowed upon her the libraries from Pergamum in which there were two hundred thousand volumes; at a banquet where there were many guests he had stood up and rubbed her feet, in compliance with some agreement and compact which they had made; he had consented to have the Ephesians in his presence salute Cleopatra as mistress; many times, while he was seated on his tribunal and dispensing justice to tetrarchs and kings, he would receive love-billets from her in tablets of onyx or crystal, and read them; and once when Furnius was speaking, a man of great worth and the ablest orator in Rome, Cleopatra was carried through the forum on a litter, and Antony, when he saw her, sprang up from his tribunal and forsook the trial, and hanging on to Cleopatra's litter escorted her on her way.

LIX. However, most of the charges thus brought by Calvisius were thought to be falsehoods; but the friends of Antony went about in Rome beseeching the people in his behalf, and they sent one of their number, Geminius, with entreaties that Antony

- τῆς ἀρχῆς καὶ πολέμιον Ῥωμαίων ἀναγορευθέντα.
- 2 Γεμίσιος δὲ πλεύσας εἰς τὴν Ἑλλάδα Κλεοπάτρα μὲν ἦν ὑποπτος, ὡς ὑπὲρ Ὀκταουίας πράττων, σκωπτόμενος δὲ παρὰ δεῖπνον αἰεὶ καὶ κλισίαις ἀτίμοις προπηλακιζόμενος ἠνείχετο καιρὸν ἐντεύξεως ἀναμένων· κελευσθεὶς δὲ λέγειν ἐφ' οἷς ἦκει παρὰ τὸ δεῖπνον, τὴν μὲν ἄλλην ἔφη νήφοντος εἶναι διάλεξι, ἐν δὲ καὶ νήφων ἐπίστασθαι καὶ μεθύων, ὅτι καλῶς ἔξει πάντα Κλεοπάτρας εἰς
- 3 Αἴγυπτον ἀπαλλαγείσης. πρὸς τοῦτο τοῦ Ἀντωνίου χαλεπήναντος ἢ Κλεοπάτρα “Καλῶς,” ἔφη, “πεποίηκας, ὦ Γεμίσιε, τὴν ἀλήθειαν ἀνευ βασάνων ἐξομολογησάμενος.” Γεμίσιος μὲν οὖν μετ' ὀλίγας ἡμέρας ἀποδρὰς εἰς Ῥώμην ἔρχετο. πολλοὺς δὲ καὶ τῶν ἄλλων φίλων οἱ Κλεοπάτρας κόλακες ἐξέβαλον τὰς παροιίας καὶ βωμολοχίας
- 4 οὐχ ὑπομένοντας, ὧν καὶ Μάρκος ἦν Σιλανὸς καὶ Δέλλιος ὁ ἱστορικός. οὗτος δὲ καὶ δεῖσαί φησιν ἐπιβουλὴν ἐκ Κλεοπάτρας, Γλαύκου τοῦ ἱατροῦ φράσαντος αὐτῷ. προσέκρουσε δὲ Κλεοπάτρα παρὰ δεῖπνον εἰπὼν αὐτοῖς μὲν ὀξύνην ἐγχεῖσθαι, Σάρμεντον δὲ πίνειν ἐν Ῥώμῃ Φαλερίνον. ὁ δὲ Σάρμεντος ἦν τῶν Καίσαρος παιγνίων παιδάριον, ἃ δηλίκια Ῥωμαῖοι καλοῦσιν.

LX. Ἐπεὶ δὲ παρεσκευάστο Καῖσαρ ἱκανῶς, ψηφίζεται Κλεοπάτρα πολεμεῖν, ἀφελῆσθαι δὲ τῆς ἀρχῆς Ἀντώνιον ἧς ἐξέστη γυναικί. καὶ προσεπέειπε Καῖσαρ ὡς Ἀντώνιος μὲν ὑπὸ φαρμάκων οὐδὲ αὐτοῦ κρατοίη, πολεμοῦσι δ' αὐτοῖς would not suffer himself to be voted out of his office and proclaimed an enemy of Rome. But Geminius, after his voyage to Greece, was an object of suspicion to Cleopatra, who thought that he was acting in the interests of Octavia; he was always put upon with jokes at supper and insulted with places of no honour at table, but he endured all this and waited for an opportunity to confer with Antony. Once, however, at a supper, being bidden to tell the reasons for his coming, he replied that the rest of his communication required a sober head, but one thing he knew, whether he was drunk or sober, and that was that all would be well if Cleopatra was sent off to Egypt. At this, Antony was wroth, and Cleopatra said: "Thou hast done well, Geminius, to confess the truth without being put to the torture." Geminius, accordingly, after a few days, ran away to Rome. And Cleopatra's flatterers drove away many of the other friends of Antony also who could not endure their drunken tricks and scurrilities. Among these were Marcus Silanus and Dellius the historian. And Dellius says that he was also afraid of a plot against him by Cleopatra, of which Glaucus the physician had told him. For he had offended Cleopatra at supper by saying that while sour wine was served to them, Sarmenus, at Rome, was drinking Falernian. Now, Sarmenus was one of the youthful favourites of Caesar, such as the Romans call "deliciae."

ANTONY

LX. When Caesar had made sufficient preparations, a vote was passed to wage war against Cleopatra, and to take away from Antony the authority which he had surrendered to a woman. And Caesar said in addition that Antony had been drugged and was not even master of himself, and that the Romans

Μαρδίων ὁ εὐνούχος καὶ Ποθεινὸς καὶ Εἰρὰς ἢ Κλεοπάτρας κουρεύτρια καὶ Χάρμιον, ὑφ' ὧν τὰ μέγιστα διοικεῖται τῆς ἡγεμονίας.

- 2 Σημεῖα δὲ πρὸ τοῦ πολέμου τάδε γενέσθαι λέγεται. Πείσαυρα μὲν, Ἀντωνίου πόλις κληρουχία, ὠκισμένη παρὰ τὸν Ἀδρίαν, χασμάτων ὑπορραγόντων κατεπόθη. τῶν δὲ περὶ Ἄλβαν Ἀντωνίου λιθίνων ἀνδριάντων ἑνὸς ἰδρῶς ἀνεπίδυσεν ἡμέρας πολλὰς, ἀποματτόντων τινῶν οὐ πανόμενος. ἐν δὲ Πάτραις διατρίβοντος αὐτοῦ κεραυνοῖς ἐνεπρήσθη τὸ Ἡράκλειον· καὶ τῆς 944 Ἀθήνησι γιγαντομαχίας ὑπὸ πνευμάτων ὁ Διόνυσος ἐκσεισθεὶς εἰς τὸ θέατρον κατηνέχθη.
- 3 προσφκειῖον δὲ ἑαυτὸν Ἀντώνιος Ἡρακλεῖ κατὰ γένος καὶ Διονύσῳ κατὰ τὸν τοῦ βίου ζῆλον, ὥσπερ εἴρηται, Διόνυσος νέος προσαγορευόμενος. ἡ δὲ αὐτῇ θύελλα καὶ τοὺς Εὐμενοῦς καὶ Ἀττάλου κολοσσοὺς ἐπιγεγραμμένους Ἀντωνίου Ἀθήνησιν ἐμπεσοῦσα μόνους ἐκ πολλῶν ἀνέτρεψε. ἡ δὲ Κλεοπάτρας ναυαρχὸς ἐκαλεῖτο μὲν Ἀντωνιάς, σημεῖον δὲ περὶ αὐτὴν δεινὸν ἐφάνη· χελιδόνες γὰρ ὑπὸ τὴν πρύμναν ἐνεόττευσαν· ἕτεραι δὲ ἐπελθοῦσαι καὶ ταύτας ἐξήλασαν καὶ τὰ νεόττια διέφθειραν.

LXI. Συνιόντων δὲ πρὸς τὸν πόλεμον Ἀντωνίῳ μὲν ἦσαν αἱ μάχιμοι νῆες οὐκ ἐλάττους πεντακοσίων, ἐν αἷς ὀκτῆρεις πολλαὶ καὶ δεκῆρεις κεκοσμημέναι σοβαρῶς καὶ πανηγυρικῶς, στρατοῦ were carrying on war with Mardion the eunuch, and Potheinus, and Iras, and the tire-woman of Cleopatra, and Charmion, by whom the principal affairs of the government were managed.

ANTONY

The following signs are said to have been given before the war. Pisaurum, a city colonized by Antony situated near the Adriatic, was swallowed up by chasms in the earth. From one of the marble statues of Antony near Alba sweat oozed for many days, and though it was wiped away it did not cease. In Patrae, while Antony was staying there, the Heraclium was destroyed by lightning; and at Athens the Dionysus in the Battle of the Giants¹ was dislodged by the winds and carried down into the theatre. Now, Antony associated himself with Hercules in lineage, and with Dionysus in the mode of life which he adopted, as I have said,² and he was called the New Dionysus.³ The same tempest fell upon the colossal figures of Eumenes and Attalus at Athens, on which the name of Antony had been inscribed, and prostrated them, and them alone out of many. Moreover the admiral's ship of Cleopatra was called Antonius, and a dire sign was given with regard to it. Some swallows, namely, made their nest under its stern; but other swallows attacked these, drove them out and destroyed their nestlings.

LXI. When the forces came together for the war, Antony had no fewer than five hundred fighting ships, among which were many vessels of eight and ten banks of oars, arrayed in pompous and δὲ μυριάδες δέκα, δισχίλιοι δ' ἰππεῖς ἐπὶ μυρίοις. βασιλεῖς δὲ ὑπήκοοι συνεμάχουν Βόκχος ὁ Λιβύων καὶ Ταρκόνδημος ὁ τῆς ἄνω Κιλικίας, καὶ Καππαδοκίας μὲν Ἀρχέλαος, Παφλαγονίας δὲ Φιλάδελφος, Κομμαγενῆς δὲ Μιθριδάτης, 2 Σαδάλας δὲ Θράκης. οὗτοι μὲν αὐτοὶ παρήσαν, ἐκ δὲ Πόντου Πολέμων στρατὸν ἔπεμπε, καὶ Μάλχος ἐξ Ἀραβίας καὶ Ἡρώδης ὁ Ἰουδαῖος, ἔτι δὲ Ἀμύντας ὁ Λυκαόνων καὶ Γαλατῶν βασιλεύς· ἦν δὲ καὶ παρὰ τοῦ Μήδων βασιλέως ἀπεσταλμένη βοήθεια. Καίσαρι δὲ νῆες ἦσαν πρὸς ἄλκην πεντήκοντα καὶ διακόσιαι, στρατοῦ δὲ ὀκτὼ μυριάδες, ἰππεῖς δὲ παραπλήσιοι τὸ 3 πλήθος τοῖς πολεμίοις. ἤρχον δὲ Ἀντώνιος μὲν τῆς ἀπ' Εὐφράτου καὶ Ἀρμενίας μέχρι πρὸς τὸν Ἴόνιον καὶ Ἰλλυριούς, Καίσαρ δὲ ἀπ' Ἰλλυριῶν τῆς ἐπὶ τὸν ἑσπέριον ὠκεανὸν καθηκούσης καὶ τῆς ἀπ' ὠκεανοῦ πάλιν ἐπὶ τὸ Τυρρηνικὸν καὶ Σικελικὸν πέλαγος. Λιβύης δὲ τὴν Ἰταλία καὶ Γαλατία καὶ Ἰβηρία μέχρι στηλῶν Ἡρακλείων ἀντιπαρήκουσαν εἶχε Καίσαρ· τὰ δὲ ὑπὸ Κυρήνης μέχρις Αἰθιοπίας Ἀντώνιος.

¹ One of the groups of figures at the south wall of the Acropolis dedicated by Attalus I. of Pergamum. See Pausanias, i. 25, 2, with Frazer's notes.

² Chapters iv. 1 f. and xxiv. 3.

³ As Cleopatra was called the New Isis (liv. 6).

LXII. Οὕτω δὲ ἄρα προσθήκη τῆς γυναικὸς ἦν ὥστε τῷ πεζῷ πολὺ διαφέρων ἐβούλετο τοῦ ναυτικοῦ τὸ κράτος εἶναι διὰ Κλεοπάτραν, καὶ ταῦτα πληρωμάτων ἀπορία συναρπαζομένους ὀρῶν ὑπὸ τῶν τριηραρχῶν ἐκ τῆς πολλὰ δὴ τλάσης Ἑλλάδος ὀδοιπόρους, ὀνηλάτας, θεριστάς, ἐφήβους, καὶ οὐδὲ οὕτω πληρουμένας τὰς ναῦς, ἀλλὰ τὰς πλείστας ἀποδεεῖς καὶ μοχθηρῶς πλεούσας. 2 Καίσαρ δὲ οὐ πρὸς ὕψος οὐδὲ ὄγκον ἐπίδεικτικῶς festal fashion; he also had one hundred thousand infantry soldiers and twelve thousand horsemen. Of subject kings who fought with him, there were Bocchus the king of Libya, Tarcondemus the king of Upper Cilicia, Archelaüs of Cappadocia, Philadelphus of Paphlagonia, Mithridates of Commagene, and Sadalas of Thrace. These were with him, while from Pontus Polemon sent an army, and Malchus from Arabia, and Herod the Jew, besides Amyntas the king of Lycaonia and Galatia; the king of the Medes also sent an auxiliary force. Caesar had two hundred and fifty ships of war, eighty thousand infantry, and about as many horsemen as his enemies. Antony's authority extended over the country from the Euphrates and Armenia to the Ionian sea and Illyria; Caesar's over the country reaching from Illyria to the Western Ocean and from the ocean back to the Tuscan and Sicilian seas. Of Libya, the part extending opposite to Italy, Gaul, and Iberia as far as the pillars of Hercules, belonged to Caesar; the part extending from Cyrene as far as Armenia, to Antony.

ANTONY

LXII. But to such an extent, now, was Antony an appendage of the woman that although he was far superior on land, he wished the decision to rest with his navy, to please Cleopatra, and that too when he saw that for lack of crews his trierarchs were haling together out of long-suffering Greece wayfarers, mule-drivers, harvesters, and ephebi,¹ and that even then their ships were not fully manned, but most of them were deficient and sailed wretchedly. Caesar's fleet, on the other hand, was perfectly equipped, and πεπηγυίαις ναυσίν, εὐστρόφοις δὲ καὶ ταχείαις καὶ πεπληρωμέναις ἀκριβῶς ἐξηρτυμένον ἐν Τάραντι καὶ Βρεντεσίῳ συνεχῶν τὸ ναυτικόν, ἔπεμπε πρὸς Ἀντώνιον ἀξιῶν μὴ διατρίβειν τὸν χρόνον, ἀλλ' ἔρχεσθαι μετὰ τῶν δυνάμεων· αὐτὸς δὲ τῷ μὲν στόλῳ παρέξειν ὄρμους ἀκωλύτους καὶ λιμένας, ὑποχωρήσειν δὲ τῷ πεζῷ τῆς παραλίας¹ ἵππου δρόμον ἀπὸ θαλάττης, μέχρι 3 ἀν ἀσφαλῶς ἀποβῆ καὶ στρατοπεδεύσεται. τούτοις ἀντικομπάζων Ἀντώνιος αὐτὸν μὲν εἰς μονομαχίαν προὔκαλεῖτο, καίπερ ὢν πρεσβύ-τερος· εἰ δὲ φεύγοι τοῦτο, περὶ Φάρσαλον ἠξίου τοῖς στρατεύμασιν, ὡς πάλαι Καῖσαρ καὶ Πομπήσιος, διαγωνίσασθαι. φθάνει δὲ Καῖσαρ, Ἀντωνίου περὶ τὸ Ἄκτιον ὄρμουόντος, ἐν ᾧ τόπῳ νῦν ἡ Νικόπολις ἴδρυται, διαβαλὼν τὸν Ἰόνιον καὶ τῆς Ἠπείρου χωρίον ὃ Τορύνη καλεῖται κατα-σχῶν· θορυβουμένων δὲ τῶν περὶ τὸν Ἀντώνιον (ὑστέρει γὰρ ὁ πεζὸς αὐτοῖς) ἡ μὲν Κλεοπάτρα σκώπτουσα, “Τί δεινόν,” ἔλεγεν, “εἰ Καῖσαρ ἐπὶ τορύνῃ κάθηται;”

¹ Young men approaching full military age, enrolled for preliminary training and service.

LXIII. Ἀντώνιος δέ, ἅμα ἡμέρα τῶν πολεμίων ἐπιπλεόντων, φοβηθεὶς μὴ τῶν ἐπιβατῶν ἐρήμους ἔλωσι τὰς ναῦς, τοὺς μὲν ἐρέτας ὀπλίσας ἐπὶ τῶν καταστρωμάτων παρέταξεν ὄψεως ἕνεκα, τοὺς δὲ 945 ταρσοὺς τῶν νεῶν ἐγείρας καὶ πτερώσας ἐκατέ-ρωθεν ἐν τῷ στόματι περὶ τὸ Ἄκτιον ἀντιπρώρους συνεῖχεν, ὡς ἐνήρεις καὶ παρεσκευασμένας ἀμύ-2 νεσθαι. καὶ Καῖσαρ μὲν οὕτω καταστρατηγηθεὶς ἀπεχώρησεν. ἔδοξε δὲ καὶ τὸ ὕδωρ εὐμηχάνως

¹ παραλίας Xylander's correction of the MSS. Ἰταλίας, adopted by both Sintenis and Bekker.

ANTONY

consisted of ships which had not been built for a display of height or mass, but were easily steered, swift, and fully manned. This fleet Caesar kept assembled at Tarentum and Brundisium, and he sent to Antony a demand to waste no time, but to come with his forces; Caesar himself would furnish his armament with unobstructed roadsteads and harbours, and would withdraw with his land forces a day's journey for a horseman from the sea-shore, until Antony should have safely landed and fixed his camp. This boastful language Antony matched by challenging Caesar to single combat, although he was an older man than Caesar; and if Caesar declined this, Antony demanded that they should fight out the issue at Pharsalus, as Caesar and Pompey had once done. But while Antony was lying at anchor off Actium, where now Nicopolis stands, Caesar got the start of him by crossing the Ionian sea and occupying a place in Epeirus called Toruné (that is, ladle); and when Antony and his friends were disturbed by this, since their infantry forces were belated, Cleopatra, jesting, said: "What is there dreadful in Caesar's sitting at a ladle?"

LXIII. But Antony, when the enemy sailed against him at daybreak, was afraid lest they should capture his ships while they had no fighting crews, and therefore armed the rowers and drew them up on the decks so as to make a show; then he grouped his ships at the mouth of the gulf near Actium, their ranks of oars on either side lifted and poised for the stroke, and their prows towards the enemy, as if they were fully manned and prepared to fight. Caesar, thus outwitted and deceived, withdrew. Antony was also thought to have shown great skill in enclosing ἐρύμασί τισιν ἐμπεριλαβὼν ἀφελέσθαι τοὺς πολεμίους, τῶν ἐν κύκλῳ χωρίων ὀλίγον καὶ πονηρὸν ἔχοντων. εὐγνωμόνως δὲ καὶ Δομίτιῳ προσηνέχθη παρὰ τὴν Κλεοπάτρας γνώμην. ἐπεὶ γὰρ ἐκεῖνος ἤδη πυρέττων εἰς μικρὸν ἐμβὰς ἀκάτιον πρὸς Καίσαρα μετέστη, βαρέως ἐνεγκὼν ὁ Ἀυτώνιος ὁμως πᾶσαν αὐτῷ τὴν ἀποσκευὴν μετὰ τῶν φίλων καὶ τῶν θεραπόντων ἀπέπεμψε.

3 καὶ Δομίτιος μὲν, ὥσπερ ἐπὶ τῷ μὴ λαθεῖν τὴν ἀπιστίαν αὐτοῦ καὶ προδοσίαν μεταβαλλόμενος, εὐθύς ἐτελεύτησεν.

Ἐγένοντο δὲ καὶ βασιλεῶν ἀποστασεις, Ἀμύντου καὶ Δηϊοτάρου, πρὸς Καίσαρα. τὸ δὲ ναυτικὸν ἐν παντὶ δυσπραγοῦν καὶ πρὸς ἅπασαν ὑστερίζον βοήθειαν αὐθις ἠνάγκαζε τῷ πεζῷ προσέχειν τὸν Ἀυτώνιον. ἔσχε δὲ καὶ Κανίδιον τὸν ἄρχοντα τοῦ πεζοῦ μεταβολὴ γνώμης παρὰ τὰ δεινά· καὶ συνεβούλευε Κλεοπάτραν μὲν ἀποπέμπειν, ἀναχωρήσαντα δὲ εἰς Θράκην ἢ

4 Μακεδονίαν πεζομαχίᾳ κρῖναι. καὶ γὰρ Δικόμης ὁ Γετῶν βασιλεὺς ὑπισχνεῖτο πολλῇ στρατιᾷ βοηθήσειν· οὐκ εἶναι δὲ αἰσχρὸν εἰ Καίσαρι γεγυμνασμένῳ περὶ τὸν Σικελικὸν πόλεμον ἐκστήσονται τῆς θαλάσσης, ἀλλὰ δεινὸν εἰ τῶν πεζῶν ἀγώνων ἐμπειρότατος ὢν Ἀυτώνιος οὐ χρήσεται ῥώμῃ καὶ παρασκευῇ τοσοῦτων ὀπιτῶν, εἰς ναῦς διανεμῶν καὶ καταναλίσκων τὴν δύναμιν.

5 Οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ ἐξενίκησε Κλεοπάτρα διὰ τῶν νεῶν κριθῆναι τὸν πόλεμον, ἤδη πρὸς φυγὴν ὀρώσα, καὶ τιθεμένη τὰ καθ' ἑαυτήν, οὐχ ὅπου πρὸς

ANTONY

the potable water within certain barriers and thus depriving the enemy of it, since the places round about afforded little, and that of bad quality. He also behaved with magnanimity towards Domitius, contrary to the judgment of Cleopatra. For when Domitius, who was already in a fever, got into a small boat and went over to Caesar, Antony, though deeply chagrined, nevertheless, sent off to him all his baggage, together with his friends and servants. And Domitius, as if repenting when his faithlessness and treachery became known, straightway died.

There were also defections among the kings, and Amyntas and Deiotarus went over to Caesar. Besides, since his navy was unlucky in everything and always too late to be of any assistance, Antony was again compelled to turn his attention to his land forces. Canidius also, the commander of the land forces, changed his mind in presence of the danger, and advised Antony to send Cleopatra away, to withdraw into Thrace or Macedonia, and there to decide the issue by a land battle. For Dicomus the king of the Getae promised to come to their aid with a large force; and it would be no disgrace, Canidius urged, for them to give up the sea to Caesar, who had practised himself there in the Sicilian war; but it would be a strange thing for Antony, who was most experienced in land conflicts, not to avail himself of the strength and equipment of his numerous legionary soldiers, but to distribute his forces among ships and so fritter them away.

However, Cleopatra prevailed with her opinion that the war should be decided by the ships, although she was already contemplating flight, and was disposing her own forces, not where they would be τὸ νικᾶν ἔσται χρήσιμος, ἀλλ' ὅθεν ἄπεισι ῥᾶστα τῶν πραγμάτων ἀπολλυμένων. ἦν δὲ μακρὰ σκέλη κατατείνοντα πρὸς τὸν ναύσταθμον τῆς στρατοπεδείας, δι' ὧν ὁ Ἀντώνιος εἰώθει παριέναι 6 μηδὲν ὑφορώμενος. οἰκέτου δὲ Καίσαρι φράσαντος ὡς δυνατὸν εἶη κατιόντα διὰ τῶν σκελῶν συλλαβεῖν αὐτόν, ἔπεμψε τοὺς ἐνεδρεύσοντας. οἱ δὲ παρὰ τοσοῦτον ἦλθον ὥστε συναρπάσαι τὸν προηγούμενον αὐτοῦ προεξαναστάντες· αὐτὸς δὲ δρόμῳ μόλις ὑπεξέφυγεν.

LXIV. Ὡς δὲ ναυμαχεῖν ἐδέδοκτο, τὰς μὲν ἄλλας ἐνέπρησε ναῦς πλὴν ἐξήκοντα τῶν Αἰγυπτίων, τὰς δὲ ἀρίστας καὶ μεγίστας ἀπὸ τριήρους μέχρι δεκῆρους ἐπλήρου, δισμυρίου ἐμβιβάζων ὀπλίτας καὶ δισχιλίους τοξότας. ἔνθα πεζομάχον ἄνδρα τῶν ταξιαρχῶν λέγουσι, παμπόλλους ἠγωνισμένον ἀγῶνας Ἀντωνίῳ καὶ κατατετριμμένον τὸ σῶμα, τοῦ Ἀντωνίου περι-
 2 ὄντος ἀνακλαύσασθαι καὶ εἰπεῖν· “ὦ αὐτόκρατορ, τί τῶν τραυμάτων τούτων ἢ τοῦ ξίφους καταγνοὺς ἐν ξύλοις πονηροῖς ἔχεις τὰς ἐλπίδας; Αἰγύπτιοι καὶ Φοίνικες ἐν θαλάσῃ μαχέσθωσαν, ἡμῖν δὲ γῆν δός, ἐφ' ἧς εἰώθαμεν ἐστῶτες ἀποθνήσκειν ἢ νικᾶν τοὺς πολεμίους.” πρὸς ταῦτα μηδὲν ἀποκρινάμενος, ἀλλὰ τῇ χειρὶ καὶ τῷ προσώπῳ μόνον οἶον ἐγκελευσάμενος τὸν ἄνδρα θαρρεῖν, παρῆλθεν, οὐ χρηστὰς ἔχων ἐλπίδας, ὅς γε καὶ τοὺς κυβερνήτας τὰ ἰστία βουλομένους ἀπολιπεῖν ἠνάγκασεν ἐμβαλέσθαι καὶ κομίζειν, λέγων ὅτι δεῖ μηδένα φεύγοντα τῶν πολεμίων διαφυγεῖν.

ANTONY

helpful in winning the victory, but where they could most easily get away if the cause was lost. Moreover, there were two long walls extending down to the naval station from the camp, and between these Antony was wont to pass without suspecting any danger. But a slave told Caesar that it was possible to seize Antony as he went down between the walls, and Caesar sent men to lie in ambush for him. These men came near accomplishing their purpose, but seized only the man who was advancing in front of Antony, since they sprang up too soon; Antony himself escaped with difficulty by running.

LXIV. When it had been decided to deliver a sea battle, Antony burned all the Egyptian ships except sixty; but the largest and best, from those having three to those having ten banks of oars, he manned, putting on board twenty thousand heavy-armed soldiers and two thousand archers. It was on this occasion, we are told, that an infantry centurion, a man who had fought many a battle for Antony and was covered with scars, burst into laments as Antony was passing by, and said: "Imperator, why dost thou distrust these wounds and this sword and put thy hopes in miserable logs of wood? Let Egyptians and Phoenicians do their fighting at sea, but give us land, on which we are accustomed to stand and either conquer our enemies or die." To this Antony made no reply, but merely encouraged the man by a gesture and a look to be of good heart, and passed on. And he had no good hopes himself, since, when the masters of his ships wished to leave their sails behind, he compelled them to put them on board and carry them, saying that not one fugitive of the enemy should be allowed to make his escape.

LXV. Ἐκείνην μὲν οὖν τὴν ἡμέραν καὶ τρεῖς τὰς ἐφεξῆς μεγάλῳ πνεύματι κυμανθέν τὸ πέλαγος τὴν μάχην ἐπέσχε, πέμπτη δὲ νηνεμίας καὶ γαλήνης ἀκλύστου γενομένης συνήεσαν, Ἀντώνιος μὲν τὸ δεξιὸν κέρας ἔχων καὶ Ποπλικόλας, Κοίλιος δὲ τὸ εὐώνυμον, ἐν μέσῳ δὲ Μάρκος 2 Ὀκτάβιος καὶ Μάρκος Ἰνστήιος. Καίσαρ δ' 946 ἐπὶ τοῦ εὐωνύμου τάξας Ἀγρίππαν αὐτῷ τὸ δεξιὸν κατέλιπε. τῶν δὲ πεζῶν τὸν μὲν Ἀντωνίου Κανίδιος, τὸν δὲ Καίσαρος Ταῦρος ἐπὶ τῆς θαλάττης παρατάξαντες ἠσύχαζον. αὐτῶν δὲ τῶν ἡγεμόνων Ἀντώνιος μὲν ἐπεφοίτα πανταχόσε κοπήρει, τοὺς στρατιώτας παρακαλῶν ὑπὸ βρίθους τῶν νεῶν ὥσπερ ἐκ γῆς ἐδραίους μάχεσθαι, τοῖς δὲ κυβερνήταις διακελευόμενος ὥσπερ 3 ὀρμούσαις ἀτρέμα ταῖς ναυσὶ δέχεσθαι τὰς ἐμβολὰς τῶν πολεμίων, τὴν περὶ τὸ στόμα δυσχωρίαν φυλάττοντας. Καίσαρι δὲ λέγεται μὲν ἔτι σκότους ἀπὸ τῆς σκηνῆς κύκλῳ περιϊόντι πρὸς τὰς ναῦς ἄνθρωπος ἐλαύνων ὄνον ἀπαντῆσαι, πυθομένῳ δὲ τοῦνομα γνωρίσας αὐτὸν εἰπεῖν. “Ἐμοὶ μὲν Εὐτυχὸς ὄνομα, τῷ δὲ ὄνῳ Νίκων.” διὸ καὶ τοῖς ἐμβόλοις τὸν τόπον κοσμῶν ὕστερον 4 ἔστησε χαλκοῦν ὄνον καὶ ἄνθρωπον. ἐπιδὼν δὲ τὴν ἄλλην παράταξιν, ἐν πλοίῳ πρὸς τὸ δεξιὸν κομισθεὶς ἐθαύμασεν ἀτρεμοῦντας ἐν τοῖς στενοῖς τοὺς πολεμίους· ἢ γὰρ ὄψις ἦν τῶν νεῶν ἐπ’ ἀγκύραις ὀρμουσῶν. καὶ τοῦτο μέχρι πολλοῦ πεπεισμένος ἀνεῖχε τὰς ἑαυτοῦ περὶ ὀκτῶ στάδια

ANTONY

LXV. During that day, then, and the three following days the sea was tossed up by a strong wind and prevented the battle ; but on the fifth,¹ the weather becoming fine and the sea calm, they came to an engagement. Antony had the right wing, with Publicola, Coelius the left, and in the centre were Marcus Octavius and Marcus Insteius. Caesar posted Agrippa on the left, and reserved the right wing for himself. Of the land forces, that of Antony was commanded by Canidius, that of Caesar by Taurus, who drew them up along the sea and remained quiet. As for the leaders themselves, Antony visited all his ships in a row-boat, exhorting the soldiers, owing to the weight of their ships, to fight without changing their position, as if they were on land ; he also ordered the masters of the ships to receive the attacks of the enemy as if their ships were lying quietly at anchor, and to maintain their position at the mouth of the gulf, which was narrow and difficult. Caesar, we are told, who had left his tent while it was yet dark and was going round to visit his ships, was met by a man driving an ass. Caesar asked the man his name, and he, recognizing Caesar, replied : “ My name is Prosper, and my ass’s name is Victor.” Therefore, when Caesar afterwards decorated the place with the beaks of ships, he set up bronze figures of an ass and a man. After surveying the rest of his line of battle, he was carried in a small boat to his right wing, and there was astonished to see the enemy lying motionless in the narrows ; indeed, their ships had the appearance of riding at anchor. For a long time he was convinced that this was really the case, and kept his own ships at a distance of about eight furlongs from the

¹ Sept. 2, 31 B.C.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

τῶν ἐναντίων ἀφεστῶσας. ἕκτη δὲ ἦν ὥρα, καὶ πνεύματος αἰρομένου πελαγίου δυσανασχετοῦντες οἱ Ἄντωνίου πρὸς τὴν διατριβήν, καὶ τοῖς ὕψεσι καὶ μεγέθεσι τῶν οἰκείων νεῶν πεποιοῦτες ὡς 5 ἀπροσμάχοις, τὸ εὐώνυμον ἐκίνησαν· ἰδὼν δὲ Καῖσαρ ἦσθη καὶ πρῦμναν ἐκρούσατο τῷ δεξιῷ, βουλόμενος ἔτι μᾶλλον ἐκ τοῦ κόλπου καὶ τῶν στευνῶν ἔξω τοὺς πολεμίους ἐπισπάσασθαι, καὶ περιπλέων εὐήρεσι σκάφεσι τοῖς ἑαυτοῦ συμπλέκεσθαι πρὸς ναῦς ὑπ' ὄγκου καὶ πληρωμάτων ὀλιγότητος ἀργὰς καὶ βραδείας.

LXVI. Ἀρχομένου δὲ τοῦ ἀγῶνος ἐν χερσὶν εἶναι, ἐμβολαὶ μὲν οὐκ ἦσαν οὐδὲ ἀναρρήξεις νεῶν, τῶν μὲν Ἄντωνίου διὰ βάρος ῥύμην οὐκ ἔχουσῶν, ἢ μάλιστα ποιεῖ τὰς τῶν ἐμβόλων πληγὰς ἐνεργούς, τῶν δὲ Καίσαρος οὐ μόνον ἀντιπρώρων συμφέρεσθαι πρὸς χαλκῶματα στέρεά καὶ τραχέα φυλασσομένων, ἀλλὰ μηδὲ κατὰ
 2 πλευρὰν ἐμβολὰς διδόναι θαρρουσῶν. ἀπεθραύοντο γὰρ τὰ ἐμβολα ῥαδίως ἢ προσπέσοιε σκάφεσι τετραγώνων ξύλων μεγάλων σιδήρῳ συνηρμοσμένων πρὸς ἀλληλα δεδεμένοις. ἦν οὖν πεζομαχία προσφερῆς ὁ ἀγών· τὸ δὲ ἀληθέστερον εἰπεῖν, τειχομαχία. τρεῖς γὰρ ἄμα καὶ τέσσαρες περὶ μίαν τῶν Ἄντωνίου συνέχοντο, γέρροις καὶ δόρασι καὶ κοντοῖς χρωμένων καὶ πυροβολοῖς· οἱ δὲ Ἄντωνίου καὶ καταπέλταις ἀπὸ ξυλίνων πύργων ἔβαλλον.

3 Ἀγρίππου δὲ θάτερον κέρας εἰς κύκλωσιν ἐκτείνοντος, ἀντανάγειν Ποπλικόλας ἀναγκαζόμενος ἀπερρήγνυτο τῶν μέσων. θορυβουμένων δὲ enemy. But it was now the sixth hour, and since a wind was rising from the sea, the soldiers of Antony became impatient at the delay, and, relying on the height and size of their own ships as making them unassailable, they put their left wing in motion. When Caesar saw this he was delighted, and ordered his right wing to row backwards, wishing to draw the enemy still farther out from the gulf and the narrows, and then to surround them with his own agile vessels and come to close quarters with ships which, owing to their great size and the smallness of their crews, were slow and ineffective.

ANTONY

LXVI. Though the struggle was beginning to be at close range, the ships did not ram or crush one another at all, since Antony's, owing to their weight, had no impetus, which chiefly gives effect to the blows of the beaks, while Caesar's not only avoided dashing front to front against rough and hard bronze armour, but did not even venture to ram the enemy's ships in the side. For their beaks would easily have been broken off by impact against vessels constructed of huge square timbers fastened together with iron. The struggle was therefore like a land battle; or, to speak more truly, like the storming of a walled town. For three or four of Caesar's vessels were engaged at the same time about one of Antony's, and the crews fought with wicker shields and spears and punting-poles and fiery missiles; the soldiers of Antony also shot with catapults from wooden towers.

And now, as Agrippa was extending the left wing with a view to encircling the enemy, Publicola was forced to advance against him, and so was separated from the centre. The centre falling into confusion τούτων καὶ συμπλεκομένων τοῖς περὶ τὸν Ἀρρού-τιον, ἀκρίτου δὲ καὶ κοινῆς ἔτι τῆς ναυμαχίας συνε-στώσης, αἰφνίδιον αἱ Κλεοπάτρας ἐξήκοντα νῆες ὤφθησαν αἰρόμεναι πρὸς ἀπόπλουν τὰ ἰστία καὶ διὰ μέσου φεύγουσαι τῶν μαχομένων· ἦσαν γὰρ 4 οπίσω τεταγμένοι τῶν μεγάλων, καὶ διεκπίπζοντες ἐθεῶντο, τῷ πνεύματι χρωμένας ὀρώντες καὶ ἐπεχούσας πρὸς τὴν Πελοπόννησον. ἔνθα δὴ φανερόν αὐτὸν Ἀντώνιος ἐποίησεν οὔτε ἄρχοντος οὔτε ἀνδρὸς οὔτε ὅλως ἰδίους λογισμοῖς διοικουμενον, ἀλλ' ὅπερ τις παίζων εἶπε, τὴν ψυχὴν τοῦ ἐρώντος ἐν ἀλλοτρίῳ σώματι ζῆν, ἐλκόμενος 5 ὑπὸ τῆς γυναικὸς ὡσπερ συμπεφυκῶς καὶ συμ-μεταφερόμενος. οὐ γὰρ ἔφθη τὴν ἐκείνης ἰδὼν ναῦν ἀποπλέουσαν, καὶ πάντων ἐκλαθόμενος καὶ προδοὺς καὶ ἀποδρὰς τοὺς ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ μαχομένους καὶ θνήσκοντας, εἰς πεντήρη μετεμβάς, Ἀλεξᾶ 947 τοῦ Σύρου καὶ Σκελλίου μόνων αὐτῷ συνεμβάντων, ἐδίωκε τὴν ἀπολωλεκυῖαν ἤδη καὶ προσαπολούσαν αὐτόν.

LXVII. Ἐκείνη δὲ γνωρίσασα σημεῖον ἀπὸ τῆς νεῶς ἀνέσχε· καὶ προσενεχθεὶς οὕτω καὶ ἀναληφθεὶς ἐκείνην μὲν οὔτε εἶδεν οὔτε ὤφθη, παρελθὼν δὲ μόνος εἰς πρῶραν ἐφ' ἑαυτοῦ καθήστο 2 σιωπῇ, ταῖς χερσὶν ἀμφοτέραις ἐχόμενος τῆς κεφαλῆς. ἐν τούτῳ δὲ λιβυρινίδες ὤφθησαν διώκουσαι παρὰ Καίσαρος· ὁ δὲ ἀντίπρῳρον ἐπιστρέφειν τὴν ναῦν κελεύσας τὰς μὲν ἄλλας ἀνέστειλεν, Εὐρυκλῆς δ' ὁ Λάκων ἐνέκειτο σοβαρῶς, λόγῃην τινὰ κρδαίνων ἀπὸ τοῦ κατα-

ANTONY

and engaging with Arruntius,¹ although the sea-fight was still undecided and equally favourable to both sides, suddenly the sixty ships of Cleopatra were seen hoisting their sails for flight and making off through the midst of the combatants; for they had been posted in the rear of the large vessels, and threw them into confusion as they plunged through. The enemy looked on with amazement, seeing that they took advantage of the wind and made for Peloponnesus. Here, indeed, Antony made it clear to all the world that he was swayed by the sentiments neither of a commander nor of a brave man, nor even by his own, but, as someone in pleasantry said that the soul of the lover dwells in another's body, he was dragged along by the woman as if he had become incorporate with her and must go where she did. For no sooner did he see her ship sailing off than he forgot everything else, betrayed and ran away from those who were fighting and dying in his cause, got into a five-oared galley, where Alexas the Syrian and Scellius were his only companions, and hastened after the woman who had already ruined him and would make his ruin still more complete.

LXVII. Cleopatra recognized him and raised a signal on her ship; so Antony came up and was taken on board, but he neither saw her nor was seen by her. Instead, he went forward alone to the prow and sat down by himself in silence, holding his head in both hands. At this point, Liburnian ships were seen pursuing them from Caesar's fleet; but Antony ordered the ship's prow turned to face them, and so kept them all off, except the ship of Eurycles the Laconian, who attacked vigorously, and brandished a ¹ The commander of Caesar's centre, as Plutarch should have stated at lxxv. 1.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

στρώματος ὡς ἀφήσων ἐπ' αὐτόν. ἐπιστάντος δὲ τῇ πρώρᾳ τοῦ Ἀντωνίου καὶ “Τίς οὗτος,” εἰπόντος, “ὁ διώκων Ἀντώνιον;” “Ἐγώ,” εἶπεν, “Εὐρυκλῆς ὁ Λαχάρους, τῇ Καίσαρος

3 τύχῃ τὸν τοῦ πατρὸς ἐκδικῶν θάνατον.” ὁ δὲ Λαχάρης ὑπ' Ἀντωνίου ληστείας αἰτία περιπεσὼν ἐπελεκίσθη. πλὴν οὐκ ἐνέβαλεν ὁ Εὐρυκλῆς εἰς τὴν Ἀντωνίου ναῦν, ἀλλὰ τὴν ἑτέραν τῶν ναυαρχίδων (δύο γὰρ ἦσαν) τῷ χαλκῳματι πατάξας περιερρόμβησε, καὶ ταύτην τε πλαγίαν περιπεσοῦσαν εἶλε καὶ τῶν ἄλλων μίαν, ἐν ἣ

4 πολυτελεῖς σκευαὶ τῶν περὶ δίαιταν ἦσαν. ἀπαλλαγέντος δὲ τούτου πάλιν ὁ Ἀντώνιος εἰς τὸ αὐτὸ σχῆμα καθεὶς ἑαυτὸν ἡσυχίαν ἤγε· καὶ τρεῖς ἡμέρας καθ' ἑαυτὸν ἐν πρώρᾳ διαιτηθεὶς, εἶθ' ὑπ' ὀργῆς, εἶτ' αἰδούμενος ἐκείνην, Ταινάρῳ προσέσχεν. ἐνταῦθα δ' αὐτοὺς αἱ συνήθεις γυναῖκες πρῶτον μὲν εἰς λόγους ἀλλήλοις συνήγαγον, εἶτα συνδειπνεῖν καὶ συγκαθεύδειν ἔπεισαν.

5 Ἦδη δὲ καὶ τῶν στρογγύλων πλοίων οὐκ ὀλίγα καὶ τῶν φίλων τινὲς ἐκ τῆς τροπῆς ἠθροίζοντο πρὸς αὐτούς, ἀγγέλλοντες ἀπολωλέναι τὸ ναυτικόν, οἶεσθαι δὲ τὸ πεζὸν συνεστάναι. Ἀντώνιος δὲ πρὸς μὲν Κανίδιον ἀγγέλους ἔπεμπεν, ἀναχωρεῖν διὰ Μακεδονίας εἰς Ἀσίαν τῷ στρατῷ

6 κατὰ τάχος κελεύων, αὐτὸς δὲ μέλλων ἀπὸ Ταινάρου πρὸς τὴν Λιβύην διαίρειν, ὀλκάδα μίαν, πολὺ μὲν νόμισμα, πολλοῦ δὲ ἀξίας ἐν ἀργύρῳ καὶ χρυσῷ κατασκευὰς τῶν βασιλικῶν κομίζουσαν, ἐξελόμενος τοῖς φίλοις ἐπέδωκε κοινῇ, νείμασθαι καὶ σώζειν ἑαυτοὺς κελεύσας. ἀρνούμενους δὲ καὶ κλαίοντας εὐμενῶς πάνυ

ANTONY

spear on the deck as though he would cast it at Antony. And when Antony, standing at the prow, asked, "Who is this that pursues Antony?" the answer was, "I am Eurycles the son of Lachares, whom the fortune of Caesar enables to avenge the death of his father." Now, Lachares had been beheaded by Antony because he was involved in a charge of robbery. However, Eurycles did not hit Antony's ship, but smote the other admiral's ship (for there were two of them) with his bronze beak and whirled her round, and as she swung round sideways he captured her, and one of the other ships also, which contained costly equipment for household use. When Eurycles was gone, Antony threw himself down again in the same posture and did not stir. He spent three days by himself at the prow, either because he was angry with Cleopatra, or ashamed to see her, and then put in at Taenarum. Here the women in Cleopatra's company at first brought them into a parley, and then persuaded them to eat and sleep together.

Presently not a few of their heavy transport ships and some of their friends began to gather about them after the defeat, bringing word that the fleet was destroyed, but that, in their opinion, the land forces still held together. So Antony sent messengers to Canidius, ordering him to retire with his army as fast as he could through Macedonia into Asia; he himself, however, since he purposed to cross from Taenarum to Libya, selected one of the transport ships which carried much coined money and very valuable royal utensils in silver and gold, and made a present of it to his friends, bidding them divide up the treasure and look out for their own safety. They refused his gift καὶ φιλοφρόνως παραμυθησάμενος καὶ δε-

 7 θεὶς ἀπέστειλε, γράψας πρὸς Θεόφιλον τὸν ἐν Κορίνθῳ διοικητὴν ὅπως ἀσφάλειαν ἐκπορίσῃ καὶ ἀποκρύψῃ τοὺς ἄνδρας ἄχρι ἂν ἰλάσασθαι Καίσαρα δυνηθῶσιν. οὗτος ἦν Θεόφιλος Ἰππάρχου πατὴρ τοῦ πλείστου παρὰ Ἄντωνίῳ δυνηθέντος, πρώτου δὲ πρὸς Καίσαρα τῶν ἀπε-λευθέρων μεταβαλομένου καὶ κατοικήσαντος ὕστερον ἐν Κορίνθῳ.

LXVIII. Ταῦτα μὲν οὖν τὰ κατὰ τὸν Ἄντων-νιον. ἐν Ἀκτίῳ δὲ πολὺν ὁ στόλος ἀντισχῶν Καίσαρι χρόνον, καὶ μέγιστον βλαβεὶς ὑπὸ τοῦ κλύδωνος ὑψηλοῦ κατὰ πρῶραν ἰσταμένου, μόλις ὥρας δεκάτης ἀπέειπε. καὶ νεκροὶ μὲν οὐ πλείους ἐγένοντο πεντακισχιλίων, ἐάλωσαν δὲ τριακόσια 2 νῆες, ὡς αὐτὸς ἀνέγραψε Καίσαρ. ἤσθοντο δὲ οὐ πολλοὶ πεφευγότες Ἄντωνίου, καὶ τοῖς πυθομένοις τὸ πρῶτον ἄπιστος ἦν ὁ λόγος, εἰ δέκα καὶ ἑννέα τάγματα πεζῶν ἀηττήτων καὶ δισχιλίους ἐπὶ μυρίοις ἵππεις ἀπολιπὼν οἴχεται, καθάπερ οὐ πολλάκις ἐπ' ἀμφότερα τῇ τύχῃ κεχρημένος οὐδὲ μυρίων ἀγώνων καὶ πολέμων μεταβολαῖς 3 ἐγγεγυμνασμένος. οἱ δὲ στρατιῶται καὶ πόθον τινὰ καὶ προσδοκίαν εἶχον ὡς αὐτίκα ποθὲν ἐπιφανησομένου· καὶ τοσαύτην ἐπεδείξαντο πίστιν καὶ ἀρετὴν ὥστε καὶ τῆς φυγῆς αὐτοῦ φανερᾶς γενομένης ἡμέρας ἑπτὰ συμμεῖναι, περιο-ρῶντες ἐπιπρεσβευόμενον αὐτοῖς Καίσαρα. τέλος 948 δέ, τοῦ στρατηγοῦ Κανιδίου νύκτωρ ἀποδράντος καὶ καταλιπόντος τὸ στρατόπεδον, γενόμενοι πάντων ἔρημοι καὶ προδοθέντες ὑπὸ τῶν ἀρχόντων, τῷ κρατοῦντι προσεχώρησαν.

ANTONY

and were in tears, but he comforted them and besought them with great kindness and affection, and finally sent them away, after writing to Theophilus, his steward in Corinth, that he should keep the men in safe hiding until they could make their peace with Caesar. This Theophilus was the father of Hipparchus, who had the greatest influence with Antony, was the first of Antony's freedmen to go over to Caesar, and afterwards lived in Corinth.

LXVIII. This, then, was the situation of Antony. But at Actium his fleet held out for a long time against Caesar, and only after it had been most severely damaged by the high sea which rose against it did it reluctantly, and at the tenth hour, give up the struggle. There were not more than five thousand dead, but three hundred ships were captured, as Caesar himself has written. Only a few were aware that Antony had fled, and to those who heard of it the story was at first an incredible one, that he had gone off and left nineteen legions of undefeated men-at-arms and twelve thousand horsemen, as if he had not many times experienced both kinds of fortune and were not exercised by the reverses of countless wars and fightings. His soldiers, too, had a great longing for him, and expected that he would presently make his appearance from some quarter or other; and they displayed so much fidelity and bravery that even after his flight had become evident they held together for seven days, paying no heed to the messages which Caesar sent them. But at last, after Canidius their general had run away by night and forsaken the camp, being now destitute of all things and betrayed by their commanders, they went over to the conqueror.

- 4 Ἐκ τούτου Καῖσαρ μὲν ἐπ' Ἀθήνας ἔπλευσε, καὶ διαλλαγῆς τοῖς Ἑλλησι τὸν περιόντα σίτου ἐκ τοῦ πολέμου διένειμε ταῖς πόλεσι πραττούσαις ἀθλίως καὶ περικεκομμέναις χρημάτων, ἀνδραπόδων, ὑπόζυγιων. ὁ γοῦν πρόπαππος ἡμῶν Νίκαρχος διηγεῖτο τοὺς πολίτας ἅπαντας ἀναγκάζεσθαι τοῖς ὤμοις καταφέρειν μέτρομα πυρῶν τεταγμένον ἐπὶ τὴν πρὸς Ἀντίκυραν θάλασσαν,
- 5 ὑπὸ μαστίγων ἐπιταχυνομένους· καὶ μίαν μὲν οὕτω φορὰν ἐνεγκεῖν, τὴν δὲ δευτέραν ἤδη μεμετρημένοις καὶ μέλλουσιν αἵρεσθαι νευικημένον Ἀντώνιον ἀγγεληῆναι, καὶ τοῦτο διασῶσαι τὴν πόλιν· εὐθὺς γὰρ τῶν Ἀντωνίου διοικητῶν καὶ στρατιωτῶν φυγόντων διανείμασθαι τὸν σίτον αὐτούς.

- LXIX. Ἀντώνιος δὲ Λιβύης ἀψάμενος καὶ Κλεοπάτραν εἰς Αἴγυπτον ἐκ Παραιτονίου προπέμψας αὐτὸς ἀπέλαυεν ἐρημίας ἀφθόνου, σὺν δυσὶ φίλοις ἀλύων καὶ πλανώμενος, Ἑλληνι μὲν Ἀριστοκράτει ῥητορικῶ, Ῥωμαίῳ δὲ Λουκιλλίῳ, περὶ οὗ δι' ἐτέρων γεγράφαμεν ὡς ἐν Φιλίπποις, ὑπὲρ τοῦ διαφυγεῖν Βροῦτον, αὐτὸς αὐτόν, ὡς δὴ Βροῦτος ὢν, ἐνεχείρισε τοῖς διώκουσι, καὶ διασωθεὶς ὑπ' Ἀντωνίου διὰ τοῦτο, πιστὸς αὐτῷ καὶ βέβαιος ἄχρι τῶν ἐσχάτων καιρῶν παρέμεινε.
- 2 ἐπεὶ δὲ καὶ τὴν ἐν Λιβύῃ δύναμιν ὁ πεπιστευμένος ἀπέστησεν, ὀρμήσας ἑαυτὸν ἀνελεῖν καὶ διακωλυθεὶς ὑπὸ τῶν φίλων καὶ κομισθεὶς εἰς Ἀλεξάνδρειαν εὔρε Κλεοπάτραν ἐπιτολμῶσαν

ANTONY

In consequence of this, Caesar sailed to Athens, and after making a settlement with the Greeks, he distributed the grain which remained over after the war among their cities; these were in a wretched plight, and had been stripped of money, slaves, and beasts of burden. At any rate, my great-grandfather Nicarchus used to tell how all his fellow-citizens were compelled to carry on their shoulders a stipulated measure of wheat down to the sea at Anticyra, and how their pace was quickened by the whip; they had carried one load in this way, he said, the second was already measured out, and they were just about to set forth, when word was brought that Antony had been defeated, and this was the salvation of the city; for immediately the stewards and soldiers of Antony took to flight, and the citizens divided the grain among themselves.

LXIX. After Antony had reached the coast of Libya and sent Cleopatra forward into Egypt from Paraetium, he had the benefit of solitude without end, roaming and wandering about with two friends, one a Greek, Aristocrates a rhetorician, and the other a Roman, Lucilius, about whom I have told a story elsewhere.¹ He was at Philippi, and in order that Brutus might make his escape, pretended to be Brutus and surrendered himself to his pursuers. His life was spared by Antony on this account, and he remained faithful to him and steadfast up to the last crucial times. When the general to whom his forces in Libya had been entrusted brought about their defection, Antony tried to kill himself, but was prevented by his friends and brought to Alexandria. Here he found Cleopatra venturing upon a hazardous

¹ See the Brutus, chapter 1.

ἔργῳ παραβόλῳ καὶ μεγάλῳ. τοῦ γὰρ εἵργοντος ἰσθμοῦ τὴν ἐρυθρὰν ἀπὸ τῆς κατ' Αἴγυπτον θαλάσσης καὶ δοκοῦντος Ἀσίαν καὶ Λιβύην ὀρίζειν, ἣ σφίγγεται μάλιστα τοῖς πελάγεσι καὶ βραχύτατος εὐρὸς ἔστι, τριακοσίων σταδίων ὄντων, 3 ἐνεχείρησεν ἄρασα τὸν στόλον ὑπερνεωλκῆσαι, καὶ καθεῖσα τὰς ναῦς εἰς τὸν Ἀραβικὸν κόλπον μετὰ χρημάτων πολλῶν καὶ δυνάμεως ἔξω κατοικεῖν, ἀποφυγοῦσα δουλείαν καὶ πόλεμον. ἐπεὶ δὲ τὰς πρώτας ἀνελκομένας τῶν νεῶν οἱ περὶ τὴν Πέτραν Ἀραβες κατέκαυσαν, ἔτι δὲ Ἀντώνιος τὸν ἐν Ἀκτίῳ στρατὸν ᾤετο συμμένειν, ἐπαύσατο,
 4 καὶ τὰς ἐμβολὰς ἐφύλαττεν. Ἀντώνιος δὲ τὴν πόλιν ἐκλιπὼν καὶ τὰς μετὰ τῶν φίλων διατριβάς, οἴκησιν ἕναλον κατεσκεύαζεν αὐτῷ περὶ τὴν Φάρον, εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν χῶμα προβαλὼν· καὶ διῆγεν αὐτόθι φυγὰς ἀνθρώπων, καὶ τὸν Τίμωνος ἀγαπᾶν καὶ ζηλοῦν βίον ἔφασκεν, ὡς δὴ πεπουθῶς ὅμοια· καὶ γὰρ αὐτὸς ἀδικηθεὶς ὑπὸ φίλων καὶ ἀχαριστηθεὶς, διὰ τοῦτο καὶ πᾶσιν ἀνθρώποις ἀπιστεῖν καὶ δυσχεραίνειν.

LXX. Ὁ δὲ Τίμων ἦν Ἀθηναῖος, καὶ γέγονεν ἡλικία μάλιστα κατὰ τὸν Πελοποννησιακὸν πόλεμον, ὡς ἐκ τῶν Ἀριστοφάνους καὶ Πλάτωνος δραμάτων λαβεῖν ἔστι. κωμωδεῖται γὰρ ἐν ἐκείνοις ὡς δυσμενῆς καὶ μισάνθρωπος· ἐκκλίνων δὲ καὶ διωθούμενος ἅπασαν ἔντευξιν, Ἀλκιβιάδην, νέον ὄντα καὶ θρασύν, ἠσπάζετο καὶ κατεφίλει προθύμως. Ἀπημάντου δὲ θαυμάσαντος καὶ πυ-and great undertaking. The isthmus, namely, which separates the Red Sea¹ from the Mediterranean Sea off Egypt and is considered to be the boundary between Asia and Libya, in the part where it is most constricted by the two seas and has the least width, measures three hundred furlongs. Here Cleopatra undertook to raise her fleet out of water and drag the ships across, and after launching them in the Arabian Gulf¹ with much money and a large force, to settle in parts outside of Egypt, thus escaping war and servitude. But since the Arabians about Petra burned the first ships that were drawn up, and Antony still thought that his land forces at Actium were holding together, she desisted, and guarded the approaches to the country. And now Antony forsook the city and the society of his friends, and built for himself a dwelling in the sea at Pharos, by throwing a mole out into the water. Here he lived an exile from men, and declared that he was contentedly imitating the life of Timon, since, indeed, his experiences had been like Timon's; for he himself also had been wronged and treated with ingratitude by his friends, and therefore hated and distrusted all mankind.

ANTONY

LXX. Now, Timon was an Athenian, and lived about the time of the Peloponnesian War, as may be gathered from the plays of Aristophanes and Plato. For he is represented in their comedies as peevish and misanthropical; but though he avoided and repelled all intercourse with men, he was glad to see Alcibiades, who was then young and headstrong, and showered kisses upon him. And when Apemantus

¹ By Red Sea Plutarch here means the upper part of the Arabian Gulf.

- θομένου τὴν αἰτίαν, φιλεῖν ἔφη τὸν νεανίσκον εἰδὼς ὅτι πολλῶν Ἀθηναίοις κακῶν αἴτιος ἔσοιτο.
- 2 τὸν δὲ Ἀπήμαντον μόνον ὡς ὅμοιον αὐτῷ καὶ ζηλοῦντα τὴν δίαιταν ἔστιν ὅτε προσίετο· καὶ ποτε τῆς τῶν Χοῶν οὔσης ἑορτῆς εἰστιῶντο καθ' αὐτοὺς οἱ δύο, τοῦ δ' Ἀπημάντου φήσαντος, “Ὡς καλόν, ὦ Τίμων, τὸ συμπόσιον ἡμῶν,” “Εἶγε σύ,” ἔφη, “μὴ παρῆς.” λέγεται δὲ Ἀθηναίων ἐκκλησιαζόντων ἀναβὰς ἐπὶ τὸ βῆμα ποιῆσαι σιωπὴν καὶ προσδοκίαν μεγάλην διὰ τὸ παρά-
- 3 δοξόν· εἶτα εἰπεῖν· “Ἔστι μοι μικρὸν οἰκόπεδον, 949 ὃ ἄνδρες Ἀθηναῖοι, καὶ συκῆ τις ἐν αὐτῷ πέφυκεν, ἐξ ἧς ἤδη συχοὶ τῶν πολιτῶν ἀπήγξαντο. μέλλων οὖν οἰκοδομεῖν τὸν τόπον ἐβουλήθην δημοσίᾳ προειπεῖν, ἵνα, ἂν ἄρα τινὲς ἐθέλωσιν ὑμῶν, πρὶν ἐκκοπῆναι τὴν συκῆν, ἀπάγξωνται.” τελευτήσαντος δὲ αὐτοῦ καὶ ταφέντος Ἀλῆσι παρὰ τὴν θάλασσαν ὤλισθε τὰ προὔχοντα τοῦ αἰγιαλοῦ, καὶ τὸ κῦμα περιελθὸν ἄβατον καὶ ἀπροσπέλαστον ἄνθρώπῳ πεποίηκε τὸν τάφον.
- 4 ἦν δ' ἐπιγεγραμμένον·

ἐνθάδ' ἀπορρήξας ψυχὴν βαρυνδαίμονα κείμαι.
τοῦνομα δ' οὐ πεύσεσθε, κακοὶ δὲ κακῶς ἀπόλοισθε.

καὶ τοῦτο μὲν αὐτὸν ἔτι ζῶντα πεποιηκέναι

ANTONY

was amazed at this and asked the reason for it, Timon said he loved the youth because he knew that he would be a cause of many ills to Athens. This Apemantus alone of all men Timon would sometimes admit into his company, since Apemantus was like him and tried sometimes to imitate his mode of life; and once, at the festival of The Pitchers,¹ the two were feasting by themselves, and Apemantus said: "Timon, what a fine symposium ours is!" "It would be," said Timon, "if thou wert not here." We are told also that once when the Athenians were holding an assembly, he ascended the bema, and the strangeness of the thing caused deep silence and great expectancy; then he said: "I have a small building lot, men of Athens, and a fig-tree is growing in it, from which many of my fellow citizens have already hanged themselves. Accordingly, as I intend to build a house there, I wanted to give public notice to that effect, in order that all of you who desire to do so may hang yourselves before the fig-tree is cut down." After he had died and been buried at Halae near the sea, the shore in front of the tomb slipped away, and the water surrounded it and made it completely inaccessible to man. The inscription on the tomb was:

"Here, after snapping the thread of a wretched life,
I lie.

Ye shall not learn my name, but my curses shall follow you."

This inscription he is said to have composed

¹ Choes-day, the second day of the great festival in honour of Dionysus called Anthesteria. It was a day of libations to the dead.

λέγουσι, τὸ δὲ περιφερόμενον Καλλιμάχειόν ἐστι·

Τίμων μισάνθρωπος ἐνοικέω. ἀλλὰ παρέλθε, οἰμώζειν εἶπας πολλά παρέλθε μόνον.

LXXI. Ταῦτα μὲν περὶ Τίμωνος ἀπὸ πολλῶν ὀλίγα. τῷ δὲ Ἀντωνίῳ Κανιδίῳ τε τῆς ἀποβολῆς τῶν ἐν Ἀκτίῳ δυνάμεων αὐτάγγελος ἦλθε, καὶ τὸν Ἰουδαίου Ἡρώδην ἔχοντά τινα τάγματα καὶ σπείρας ἤκουσε Καίσαρι προσκεχωρηκέναι, καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους ὁμοίως δυνάστας ἀφίστασθαι καὶ 2 μὴδὲν ἔτι συμμένειν τῶν ἐκτός. οὐ μὴν διετάρραξέ τι τούτων αὐτόν, ἀλλὰ ὥσπερ ἄσμενος τὸ ἐλπίζειν ἀποτεθειμένος, ἵνα καὶ τὸ φροντίζειν, τὴν μὲν ἔναλον ἐκείνην δίαιταν, ἣν Τιμώνειον ὠνόμαζεν, ἐξέλιπεν, ἀναληφθεὶς δὲ ὑπὸ τῆς Κλεοπάτρας εἰς τὰ βασίλεια πρὸς δεῖπνα καὶ πότους καὶ διανομὰς ἔτρεψε τὴν πόλιν, ἐγγράφῳ μὲν εἰς ἐφήβους τὸν Κλεοπάτρας παῖδα καὶ Καίσαρος, 3 τὸ δὲ ἀπόρφυρον καὶ τέλειον ἱμάτιον Ἀντύλλῳ τῷ ἐκ Φουλβίας περιτιθείς, ἐφ' οἷς ἡμέρας πολλὰς συμπόσια καὶ κῶμοι καὶ θαλῖαι τὴν Ἀλεξάνδρειαν κατεῖχον. αὐτοὶ δὲ τὴν μὲν τῶν ἀμιμητοβίων ἐκείνην σύνοδον κατέλυσαν, ἐτέραν δὲ συνέταξαν οὐδὲν τι λειπομένην ἐκείνης ἀβρότητι καὶ τρυφαίῃς καὶ πολυτελείαις, ἣν συναποθανομένων ἐκάλουν. ἀπεγράφοντο γὰρ οἱ φίλοι συναποθανομένους ἑαυτοὺς, καὶ διῆγον εὐπαθοῦντες 4 ἐν δεῖπνων περιόδοις. Κλεοπάτρα δὲ φαρhimself, but that in general circulation, is by Callimachus :

ANTONY

“ Timon, hater of men, dwells here ; so pass along ;
Heap many curses on me, if thou wilt, only pass along.”

LXXI. These are a few things out of many concerning Timon. As for Antony, Canidius in person brought him word of the loss of his forces at Actium, and he heard that Herod the Jew, with sundry legions and cohorts, had gone over to Caesar, and that the other dynasts in like manner were deserting him and nothing longer remained of his power outside of Egypt. However, none of these things greatly disturbed him, but, as if he gladly laid aside his hopes, that so he might lay aside his anxieties also, he forsook that dwelling of his in the sea, which he called Timoneum, and after he had been received into the palace by Cleopatra, turned the city to the enjoyment of suppers and drinking-bouts and distributions of gifts, inscribing in the list of ephēbi¹ the son of Cleopatra and Caesar, and bestowing upon Antyllus the son of Fulvia the toga virilis without purple hem, in celebration of which, for many days, banquets and revels and feastings occupied Alexandria. Cleopatra and Antony now dissolved their famous society of Inimitable Livers,² and founded another, not at all inferior to that in daintiness and luxury and extravagant outlay, which they called the society of Partners in Death. For their friends enrolled themselves as those who would die together, and passed the time delightfully in a round of suppers. Moreover, Cleopatra was getting together collections

¹ See the note on lxii. 1. Caesarion was to be educated as a Greek, Antyllus as a Roman. ² Cf. chapter xxviii. 2.

μάκων θανασίμων συνήγε παντοδαπὰς δυνάμεις, ὧν ἐκάστης τὸ ἀνώδυνον ἐλέγχουσα προὔβαλλε τοῖς ἐπὶ θανάτῳ φρουρουμένοις. ἐπεὶ δὲ ἑώρα τὰς μὲν ὠκυμόρους τὴν ὀξύτητα τοῦ θανάτου δι' ὀδύνης ἐπιφερούσας, τὰς δὲ πραοτέρας τάχος οὐκ ἐχούσας, τῶν θηρίων ἀπεπειρᾶτο, θεωμένης αὐτῆς 5 ἕτερον ἐτέρῳ προσφερόντων. ἐποίει δὲ τοῦτο καθ' ἡμέραν· καὶ σχεδὸν ἐν πᾶσι μόνον εὔρισκε τὸ δῆγμα τῆς ἀσπίδος ἄνευ σπασμοῦ καὶ στεναγμοῦ κάρων ὑπνώδη καὶ καταφορὰν ἐφελκόμενον, ἰδρῶτι μαλακῷ τοῦ προσώπου, καὶ τῶν αἰσθητηρίων ἀμαυρώσει παραλυομένων ῥαδίως καὶ δυσχεραίνοντων πρὸς τὰς ἐξεγέρσεις καὶ ἀνακλίσεις, ὥσπερ οἱ βαθέως καθεύδοντες.

LXXII. Ἄμα δὲ καὶ πρὸς Καίσαρα πρέσβεις ἔπεμπον εἰς Ἀσίαν, ἣ μὲν αἰτουμένη τὴν ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ τοῖς παισὶν ἀρχήν, ὃ δὲ ἀξιῶν Ἀθήνησιν, εἰ μὴ δοκοίη περὶ Αἰγυπτῶν, ἰδιώτης καταβιῶναι. φίλων δὲ ἀπορία καὶ ἀπιστία διὰ τὰς αὐτομολίας ὃ τῶν παιδῶν διδάσκαλος ἐπέμφθη πρεσβεύων
 2 Εὐφρόνιος. καὶ γὰρ Ἀλεξᾶς ὁ Λαοδικεύς, γνωρισθεὶς μὲν ἐν Ῥώμῃ διὰ Τιμαγένους καὶ πλείστον Ἑλλήνων δυνηθεὶς, γενόμενος δὲ τῶν Κλεοπάτρας ἐπ' Ἀντώνιον ὀργάνων τὸ βιαιότατον καὶ τῶν ὑπὲρ Ὀκταουίας ἰσταμένων ἐν αὐτῷ λογισμῶν ἀνατροπεύς, ἐπέμφθη μὲν Ἡρώδην τὸν βασιλέα
 3 τῆς μεταβολῆς ἐφέξων, αὐτοῦ δὲ καταμείνας καὶ προδοὺς Ἀντώνιον ἐτόλμησεν εἰς ὄψιν ἔλθειν Καίσαρος, Ἡρώδην πεποιθώς. ὤνησε δὲ αὐτὸν οὐδὲν Ἡρώδης, ἀλλ' εὐθύς εἰρχθεὶς καὶ κομισθεὶς 950

ANTONY

of all sorts of deadly poisons, and she tested the painless working of each of them by giving them to prisoners under sentence of death. But when she saw that the speedy poisons enhanced the sharpness of death by the pain they caused, while the milder poisons were not quick, she made trial of venomous animals, watching with her own eyes as they were set one upon another. She did this daily, and tried them almost all ; and she found that the bite of the asp alone induced a sleepy torpor and sinking, where there was no spasm or groan, but a gentle perspiration on the face, while the perceptive faculties were easily relaxed and dimmed, and resisted all attempts to rouse and restore them, as is the case with those who are soundly asleep.

LXXII. At the same time they also sent an embassy to Caesar in Asia, Cleopatra asking the realm of Egypt for her children, and Antony requesting that he might live as a private person at Athens, if he could not do so in Egypt. But owing to their lack of friends and the distrust which they felt on account of desertions, Euphronius, the teacher of the children, was sent on the embassy. For Alexas the Laodicean, who had been made known to Antony in Rome through Timagenes and had more influence with him than any other Greek, who had also been Cleopatra's most effective instrument against Antony and had overthrown the considerations arising in his mind in favour of Octavia, had been sent to keep Herod the king from apostasy ; but after remaining there and betraying Antony he had the audacity to come into Caesar's presence, relying on Herod. Herod, however, could not help him, but the traitor was at once confined and carried in fetters to his own

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

εἰς τὴν ἑαυτοῦ πατρίδα δέσμιος ἐκεῖ Καίσαρος κελεύσαντος ἀνηρέθη. τοιαύτην μὲν Ἀλεξᾶς ἐτι ζῶντι δίκην Ἀντωνίῳ τῆς ἀπιστίας ἐξέτισε.

- LXXIII. Καίσαρ δὲ τοὺς μὲν ὑπὲρ Ἀντωνίου λόγους οὐκ ἠνέσχετο, Κλεοπάτραν δὲ ἀπεκρίνατο μηδενὸς ἀμαρτήσεσθαι τῶν ἐπιεικῶν ἀνελοῦσαν Ἀντώνιον ἢ ἐκβαλοῦσαν. συνέπεμψε δὲ καὶ παρ' αὐτοῦ τινα τῶν ἀπελευθέρων Θύρσον, οὐκ ἀνόητον ἄνθρωπον οὐδὲ ἀπιθάνως ἂν ἀφ' ἡγεμόνος νέου διαλεχθέντα πρὸς γυναῖκα σοβαρὰν καὶ θαυμαστὸν ὅσον ἐπὶ κάλλει φρονοῦσαν.
- 2 οὗτος ἐντυγχάνων αὐτῇ μακρότερα τῶν ἄλλων καὶ τιμώμενος διαφερόντως ὑπόνοιαν τῷ Ἀντωνίῳ παρέσχε, καὶ συλλαβὼν αὐτὸν ἐμαστίγωσεν, εἶτα ἀφήκε πρὸς Καίσαρα γράψας ὡς ἐντρυφῶν καὶ περιφρονῶν παροξύνειεν αὐτόν, εὐπαρόξυντον ὑπὸ κακῶν ὄντα. “Σὺ δὲ εἰ μὴ φέρεις τὸ πρᾶγμα,” ἔφη, “μετρίως, ἔχεις ἐμὸν ἀπελεύθερον Ἰππαρχον. τοῦτον κρεμάσας μαστίγωσον, ἵνα ἴσον ἔχωμεν.”
- 3 ἐκ τούτου Κλεοπάτρα μὲν ἀπολυομένη τὰς αἰτίας καὶ ὑπονοίας ἐθεράπευεν αὐτὸν περιττῶς· καὶ τὴν ἑαυτῆς γενέθλιον ταπεινῶς διαγαγοῦσα καὶ ταῖς τύχαις πρεπόντως, τὴν ἐκείνου πᾶσαν ὑπερβαλλομένη λαμπρότητα καὶ πολυτέλειαν ἐώρτασεν, ὥστε πολλοὺς τῶν κεκλημένων ἐπὶ τὸ δεῖπνον πένητας ἐλθόντας ἀπελθεῖν πλουσίους. Καίσαρα δὲ Ἀγρίππας ἀνεκαλεῖτο πολλάκις ἀπὸ Ῥώμης γράφων ὡς τῶν ἐκεῖ πραγμάτων τὴν παρουσίαν αὐτοῦ ποθοῦντων.

ANTONY

country, where he was put to death by Caesar's orders. Such was the penalty for his treachery which Alexas paid to Antony while Antony was yet alive.

LXXIII. Caesar would not listen to the proposals for Antony, but he sent back word to Cleopatra that she would receive all reasonable treatment if she either put Antony to death or cast him out. He also sent with the messengers one of his own freedmen, Thyrsus, a man of no mean parts, and one who would persuasively convey messages from a young general to a woman who was haughty and astonishingly proud in the matter of beauty. This man had longer interviews with Cleopatra than the rest, and was conspicuously honoured by her, so that he roused suspicion in Antony, who seized him and gave him a flogging, and then sent him back to Caesar with a written message stating that Thyrsus, by his insolent and haughty airs, had irritated him, at a time when misfortunes made him easily irritated. "But if thou dost not like the thing," he said, "thou hast my freedman Hipparchus¹; hang him up and give him a flogging, and we shall be quits." After this, Cleopatra tried to dissipate his causes of complaint and his suspicions by paying extravagant court to him; her own birthday she kept modestly and in a manner becoming to her circumstances, but she celebrated his with an excess of all kinds of splendour and costliness, so that many of those who were bidden to the supper came poor and went away rich. Meanwhile Caesar was being called home by Agrippa, who frequently wrote him from Rome that matters there greatly needed his presence.

¹ See chapter lxvii. 7.

LXXIV. Ἔσχεν οὖν ἀναβολὴν ὁ πόλεμος τότε τοῦ δὲ χειμῶνος παρελθόντος αὐθις ἐπήει διὰ Συρίας, οἱ δὲ στρατηγοὶ διὰ Λιβύης. ἀλόντος δὲ Πηλουσίου λόγος ἦν ἐνδοῦναι Σέλευκον οὐκ ἀκούσης τῆς Κλεοπάτρας. ἡ δὲ ἐκείνου μὲν γυναῖκα καὶ παῖδας Ἀντωνίῳ κτεῖναι παρείχεν, αὐτὴ δὲ θήκας ἔχουσα καὶ μνήματα κατεσκευασμένα περιπτῶς εἰς τε κάλλος καὶ ὕψος, ἃ
 2 προσφοκοδόμησε τῷ ναῶ τῆς Ἰσιδος, ἐνταῦθα τῶν βασιλικῶν συνεφέρει τὰ πλείστης ἄξια σπουδῆς, χρυσόν, ἄργυρον, σμάραγδον, μαργαρίτην, ἔβενον, ἐλέφαντα, κινάμωνμον· ἐπὶ πᾶσι δὲ δᾶδα πολλὴν καὶ στυππεῖον, ὥστε δεῖσαντα περὶ τῶν χρημάτων Καίσαρα, μὴ τραπομένη πρὸς ἀπόγνωσιν ἢ γυνὴ διαφθειρῆ καὶ καταφλέξῃ τὸν πλοῦτον, αἰεὶ τινὰς ἐλπίδας αὐτῇ φιλανθρώπους προσπέμπειν ἅμα τῷ στρατῷ πορευόμενον ἐπὶ τὴν
 3 πόλιν. ἰδρυθέντος δὲ αὐτοῦ περὶ τὸν ἵππόδρομον, Ἀντώνιος ἐπέξελθὼν ἠγωνίσαστο λαμπρῶς καὶ τροπὴν τῶν Καίσαρος ἵππέων ἐποίησε, καὶ κατεδίωξεν ἄχρι τοῦ στρατοπέδου. μεγαλυνόμενος δὲ τῇ νίκῃ παρήλθεν εἰς τὰ βασίλεια, καὶ τὴν Κλεοπάτραν κατεφίλησεν ἐν τοῖς ὄπλοις, καὶ τὸν ἠγωνισμένον προθυμότατα τῶν στρατιωτῶν συνέστησεν. ἡ δὲ ἀριστεῖον αὐτῷ θώρακα χρυσοῦν καὶ κράνος ἔδωκεν. ἐκείνος μὲν οὖν ὁ ἄνθρωπος λαβὼν ταῦτα διὰ νυκτὸς ἠὲ τομόλησε πρὸς Καίσαρα.

LXXV. Πάλιν δὲ Ἀντώνιος ἔπεμπε Καίσαρα μονομαχῆσαι προκαλούμενος. ἀποκριναμένου δὲ ἐκείνου πολλὰς ὁδοὺς Ἀντωνίῳ παρεῖναι θανάτων,

ANTONY

LXXIV. Accordingly, the war was suspended for the time being; but when the winter was over, Caesar again marched against his enemy through Syria, and his generals through Libya. When Pelusium was taken there was a rumour that Seleucus had given it up, and not without the consent of Cleopatra; but Cleopatra allowed Antony to put to death the wife and children of Seleucus, and she herself, now that she had a tomb and monument built surpassingly lofty and beautiful, which she had erected near the temple of Isis, collected there the most valuable of the royal treasures, gold, silver, emeralds, pearls, ebony, ivory, and cinnamon; and besides all this she put there great quantities of torch-wood and tow, so that Caesar was anxious about the treasure, and fearing lest the woman might become desperate and burn up and destroy this wealth, kept sending on to her vague hopes of kindly treatment from him, at the same time that he advanced with his army against the city. But when Caesar had taken up position near the hippodrome, Antony sallied forth against him and fought brilliantly and routed his cavalry, and pursued them as far as their camp. Then, exalted by his victory, he went into the palace, kissed Cleopatra, all armed as he was, and presented to her the one of his soldiers who had fought most spiritedly. Cleopatra gave the man as a reward of valour a golden breastplate and a helmet. The man took them, of course,—and in the night deserted to Caesar.

LXXV. And now Antony once more sent Caesar a challenge to single combat.¹ But Caesar answered that Antony had many ways of dying. Then Antony,

¹ Cf. chapter lxii. 3.

συμφρονήσας ὅτι τοῦ διὰ μάχης οὐκ ἔστιν αὐτῷ βελτίων θάνατος, ἔγνω καὶ κατὰ γῆν ἄμα καὶ θάλατταν ἐπιχειρεῖν. καὶ παρὰ δεῖπνον, ὡς λέγεται, τοὺς οἰκέτας ἐκέλευσεν ὑποχεῖν καὶ

2 προθυμότερον εὐωχεῖν αὐτόν· ἄδηλον γάρ, εἰ τοῦτο ποιήσουσιν αὖριον ἢ δεσπόταις ἑτέροις ὑπηρετήσουσιν, αὐτὸς δὲ κείσεται σκελετὸς καὶ τὸ μηδὲν γενόμενος. τοὺς δὲ φίλους ἐπὶ τούτοις δακρύνοντας ὄρων ἔφη μὴ προύξειν ἐπὶ τὴν μάχην, ἐξ ἧς αὐτῷ θάνατον εὐκλεᾶ μᾶλλον ἢ σωτηρίαν ζητεῖν καὶ νίκην.

3 Ἐν ταύτῃ τῇ νυκτὶ λέγεται, μεσοῦσης σχεδόν, 951 ἐν ἡσυχίᾳ καὶ κατηφείᾳ τῆς πόλεως διὰ φόβον καὶ προσδοκίαν τοῦ μέλλοντος οὔσης, αἰφνίδιον ὀργάνων τε παντοδαπῶν ἐμμελεῖς τινας φωνὰς ἀκουσθῆναι καὶ βοῆν ὄχλου μετὰ εὐασμῶν καὶ πηδήσεων σατυρικῶν, ὥσπερ θιάσου τινὸς οὐκ

4 ἀθορύβως ἐξελαύνοντος· εἶναι δὲ τὴν ὄρμην ὁμοῦ τι διὰ τῆς πόλεως μέσης ἐπὶ τὴν πύλην ἔξω τὴν τετραμμένην πρὸς τοὺς πολεμίους, καὶ ταύτῃ τὸν θόρυβον ἐκπεσεῖν πλείστον γενόμενον. ἐδόκει δὲ τοῖς ἀναλογιζομένοις τὸ σημεῖον ἀπολείπειν ὁ θεὸς Ἀντώνιον, ᾧ μάλιστα συνεξομοιῶν καὶ συνοικειῶν ἑαυτὸν διετέλεσεν.

LXXVI. Ἄμα δὲ ἡμέρα τὸν πεζὸν αὐτὸς ἐπὶ τῶν πρὸ τῆς πόλεως λόφων ἰδρύσας ἐθεᾶτο τὰς ναῦς ἀνηγμένας καὶ ταῖς τῶν πολεμίων προσφερομένας· καὶ περιμένων ἔργον τι παρ' ἐκείνων ἰδεῖν ἡσύχαζεν. οἱ δὲ ὡς ἐγγὺς ἐγένοντο, ταῖς κώπαις conscious that there was no better death for him than that by battle, determined to attack by land and sea at once. And at supper, we are told, he bade the slaves pour out for him and feast him more generously; for it was uncertain, he said, whether they would be doing this on the morrow, or whether they would be serving other masters, while he himself would be lying dead, a mummy and a nothing. Then, seeing that his friends were weeping at these words, he declared that he would not lead them out to battle, since from it he sought an honourable death for himself rather than safety and victory.

ANTONY

During this night, it is said, about the middle of it, while the city was quiet and depressed through fear and expectation of what was coming, suddenly certain harmonious sounds from all sorts of instruments were heard, and the shouting of a throng, accompanied by cries of Bacchic revelry and satyric leapings, as if a troop of revellers, making a great tumult, were going forth from the city; and their course seemed to lie about through the middle of the city toward the outer gate which faced the enemy, at which point the tumult became loudest and then dashed out. Those who sought the meaning of the sign were of the opinion that the god to whom Antony always most likened and attached himself was now deserting him.

LXXVI. At daybreak,¹ Antony in person posted his infantry on the hills in front of the city, and watched his ships as they put out and attacked those of the enemy; and as he expected to see something great accomplished by them, he remained quiet. But the crews of his ships, as soon as they were near,

¹ Aug. 1, 30 B.C.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- ἠσπάσαντο τοὺς Καίσαρος, ἐκείνων τε ἀντασπασμένων μετεβάλλοντο, καὶ πάσαις ἅμα ταῖς ναυσὶν ὁ στόλος εἰς γενόμενος ἐπέπλει πρὸς τὴν
- 2 πόλιν ἀντίπρωρος. τοῦτο Ἀντώνιος ἰδὼν ἀπελείφθη μὲν εὐθύς ὑπὸ τῶν ἰππέων μεταβαλομένων, ἠττηθεὶς δὲ τοῖς πεζοῖς ἀνεχώρησεν εἰς τὴν πόλιν, ὑπὸ Κλεοπάτρας προδεδόσθαι βοῶν οἷς δι' ἐκείνην ἐπολέμησεν. ἡ δὲ τὴν ὄργην αὐτοῦ φοβηθεῖσα καὶ τὴν ἀπόνοιαν εἰς τὸν τάφον κατέφυγε καὶ τοὺς καταρράκτας ἀφήκε κλείθροις καὶ μοχλοῖς καρτεροὺς ὄντας· πρὸς δὲ Ἀντώνιον ἔπεμψε τοὺς
- 3 ἀπαγγελοῦντας ὅτι τέθνηκε. πιστεύσας δὲ ἐκείνος καὶ εἰπὼν πρὸς αὐτόν, “Τί ἔτι μέλλεις, Ἀντώνιε; τὴν μόνην ἢ τύχην καὶ λοιπὴν ἀφήρηκε τοῦ φιλοψυχεῖν πρόφασιν,” εἰσῆλθεν εἰς τὸ δωμάτιον, καὶ τὸν θώρακα παραλύων καὶ διαστέλλων, “ὦ Κλεοπάτρα,” εἶπεν, “οὐκ ἄχθομαί σου στερούμενος· αὐτίκα γὰρ εἰς ταῦτόν ἀφίξομαι· ἀλλ' ὅτι γυναικὸς ὁ τηλικούτος αὐτοκράτωρ εὐψυχία πεφώραμαι λειπόμενος.”
- 4 Ἦν δὲ τις οἰκέτης αὐτοῦ πιστὸς Ἔρωσ ὄνομα. τοῦτον ἐκ πολλοῦ παρακεκληκῶς, εἰ δεήσειεν, ἀνελεῖν αὐτόν, ἀπήτει τὴν ὑπόσχεσιν. ὁ δὲ σπασάμενος τὸ ξίφος ἀνέσχε μὲν ὡς παίσων ἐκείνον, ἀποστρέψας δὲ τὸ πρόσωπον ἑαυτὸν ἀπέκτεινε. πεσόντος δὲ αὐτοῦ πρὸς τοὺς πόδας ὁ Ἀντώνιος “Εὖγε,” εἶπεν, “ὦ Ἔρωσ, ὅτι μὴ δυνηθεὶς αὐτὸς ἐμὲ ποιεῖν ὃ δεῖ διδάσκεις.” καὶ παίσας διὰ τῆς
- 5 κοιλίας ἑαυτὸν ἀφήκεν εἰς τὸ κλινίδιον. ἦν δὲ οὐκ εὐθυθάνατος ἢ πληγῇ. διὸ καὶ τῆς φορᾶς τοῦ αἵματος, ἐπεὶ κατεκλίθη, παυσαμένης, saluted Caesar's crews with their oars, and on their returning the salute changed sides, and so all the ships, now united into one fleet, sailed up towards the city prows on. No sooner had Antony seen this than he was deserted by his cavalry, which went over to the enemy, and after being defeated with his infantry he retired into the city, crying out that he had been betrayed by Cleopatra to those with whom he waged war for her sake. But she, fearing his anger and his madness, fled for refuge into her tomb and let fall the drop-doors, which were made strong with bolts and bars; then she sent messengers to tell Antony that she was dead. Antony believed the message, and saying to himself, "Why dost thou longer delay, Antony? Fortune has taken away thy sole remaining excuse for clinging to life," he went into his chamber. Here, as he unfastened his breast-plate and laid it aside, he said; "O Cleopatra, I am not grieved to be bereft of thee, for I shall straight-way join thee; but I am grieved that such an imperator as I am has been found to be inferior to a woman in courage."

ANTONY

Now, Antony had a trusty slave named Eros. Him Antony had long before engaged, in case of need, to kill him, and now demanded the fulfilment of his promise. So Eros drew his sword and held it up as though he would smite his master, but then turned his face away and slew himself. And as he fell at his master's feet Antony said: "Well done, Eros! though thou wast not able to do it thyself, thou teachest me what I must do"; and running himself through the belly he dropped upon the couch. But the wound did not bring a speedy death. Therefore, as the blood ceased flowing after he had lain down, he ἀναλαβὼν ἐδεῖτο τῶν παρόντων ἐπισφάττειν αὐτόν. οἱ δὲ ἔφευγον ἐκ τοῦ δωματίου βοῶντος καὶ σφαδάζοντος, ἄχρι οὗ παρὰ Κλεοπάτρας ἤκε Διομήδης ὁ γραμματεὺς, κομίζειν αὐτὸν ὡς ἐκείνη εἰς τὸν τάφον κελευσθεῖς.

LXXVII. Γνοὺς οὖν ὅτι ζῆ, προθύμως ἐκέλευσεν ἄρασθαι τοῖς ὑπηρέταις τὸ σῶμα, καὶ διὰ χειρῶν προσεκομίσθη ταῖς θύραις τοῦ οἰκήματος. ἡ δὲ Κλεοπάτρα τὰς μὲν θύρας οὐκ ἀνέφξεν, ἐκ δὲ θυρίδων τινῶν φανείσα σειρὰς καὶ καλώδια καθίει. καὶ τούτοις ἐναψάντων τὸν Ἄντωνιον ἀνεῖλκεν αὐτὴ καὶ δύο γυναῖκες, ἃς μόνας ἐδέξατο
 2 μεθ' αὐτῆς εἰς τὸν τάφον. οὐδὲν ἐκείνου λέγουσιν οἰκτρότερον γενέσθαι οἱ παραγερόμενοι θέαμα. πεφυρμένος γὰρ αἵματι καὶ δυσθανατῶν εἶλκετο, τὰς χεῖρας ὀρέγων εἰς ἐκείνην καὶ παραιωρούμενος. οὐ γὰρ ἦν γυναιξὶ ῥάδιον τὸ ἔργον, ἀλλὰ μόλις ἡ Κλεοπάτρα ταῖν χεροῖν ἐμπεφυκυῖα καὶ κατατεινομένη τῷ προσώπῳ τὸν δεσμὸν ἀνελάμβανεν, ἐπικελευομένων τῶν κάτωθεν αὐτῇ καὶ
 3 συναγωνιῶντων. δεξαμένη δὲ αὐτὸν οὕτως καὶ κατακλίνασα περιερρήξατο τε τοὺς πέπλους ἐπ' 952 αὐτῷ, καὶ τὰ στέρνα τυπτομένη καὶ σπαράττουσα ταῖς χερσί, καὶ τῷ προσώπῳ τοῦ αἵματος ἀναματτομένη, δεσπότην ἐκάλει καὶ ἄνδρα καὶ αὐτοκράτορα· καὶ μικροῦ δεῖν ἐπιλέληστο τῶν αὐτῆς κακῶν οἴκτῳ τῶν ἐκείνου. καταπαύσας δὲ τὸν θρήνον αὐτῆς Ἄντωνιος ἤτησε πιεῖν οἶνον, εἴτε διψῶν,
 4 εἴτε συντομώτερον ἐλπίζων ἀπολυθῆσεσθαι. πῶν δὲ παρήνεσεν αὐτῇ τὰ μὲν ἑαυτῆς, ἂν ἡ μὴ μετ' αἰσχύνης, σωτήρια τίθεσθαι, μάλιστα τῶν Καίσαρος ἐταίρων Προκλήτῳ πιστεύουσιν, αὐτὸν came to himself and besought the bystanders to give him the finishing stroke. But they fled from the chamber, and he lay writhing and crying out, until Diomedes the secretary came from Cleopatra with orders to bring him to her in the tomb.

ANTONY

LXXVII. Having learned, then, that Cleopatra was alive, Antony eagerly ordered his servants to raise him up, and he was carried in their arms to the doors of her tomb. Cleopatra, however, would not open the doors, but showed herself at a window, from which she let down ropes and cords. To these Antony was fastened, and she drew him up herself, with the aid of the two women whom alone she had admitted with her into the tomb. Never, as those who were present tell us, was there a more piteous sight. Smearred with blood and struggling with death he was drawn up, stretching out his hands to her even as he dangled in the air. For the task was not an easy one for women, and scarcely could Cleopatra, with clinging hands and strained face, pull up the rope, while those below called out encouragement to her and shared her agony. And when she had thus got him in and laid him down, she rent her garments over him, beat and tore her breasts with her hands, wiped off some of his blood upon her face, and called him master, husband, and imperator; indeed, she almost forgot her own ills in her pity for his. But Antony stopped her lamentations and asked for a drink of wine, either because he was thirsty, or in the hope of a speedier release. When he had drunk, he advised her to consult her own safety, if she could do it without disgrace, and among all the companions of Caesar to put most confidence in δὲ μὴ θρηνεῖν ἐπὶ ταῖς ὑστάταις μεταβολαῖς, ἀλλὰ μακαρίζειν ὧν ἔτυχε καλῶν, ἐπιφανέστατος ἀνθρώπων γενόμενος καὶ πλεῖστον ἰσχύσας καὶ νῦν οὐκ ἀγεννῶς Ῥωμαῖος ὑπὸ Ῥωμαίου κρατηθείς.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

LXXVIII. Ὅσον δὲ ἀπολιπόντος αὐτοῦ Προκλήϊος ἦκε παρὰ Καίσαρος. ἐπεὶ γὰρ ἑαυτὸν πατάξας ὁ Ἄντωνιος ὄχθετο πρὸς Κλεοπάτραν κομιζόμενος, Δερκεταῖός τις τῶν δορυφόρων λαβὼν τὸ ἐγχειρίδιον αὐτοῦ καὶ ἀποκρύψας ὑπεξήλθε, καὶ δραμῶν πρὸς Καίσαρα πρῶτος ἤγγειλε τὴν Ἄντωνίου τελευτήν, καὶ τὸ ξίφος ἔδειξεν ἡμαγ-

2 μένον. ὁ δὲ ὡς ἤκουσεν, ἐνδοτέρω τῆς σκηνῆς ἀποστάς ἀπεδάκρυσεν ἄνδρα κηδεστὴν γενόμενον καὶ συνάρχοντα καὶ πολλῶν ἀγῶνων καὶ πραγμάτων κοινωνόν. εἶτα τὰς ἐπιστολάς λαβὼν καὶ τοὺς φίλους καλέσας ἀνεγίνωσκεν ὡς εὐγνώμονα

3 ὑπερήφανος αἰεὶ περὶ τὰς ἀποκρίσεις ἐκείνος. ἐκ δὲ τούτου τὸν Προκλήϊον ἔπεμψε κελεύσας, ἣν δύνηται, μάλιστα τῆς Κλεοπάτρας ζώσης κρατῆσαι· καὶ γὰρ ἐφοβεῖτο περὶ τῶν χρημάτων, καὶ μέγα πρὸς δόξαν ἠγεῖτο τοῦ θριάμβου καταγαγεῖν ἐκείνην. εἰς μὲν οὖν χεῖρας τῷ Προκλήϊῳ

4 συνελθεῖν οὐκ ἠθέλησεν· ἐγίνοντο δὲ λόγοι τῷ οἰκῆματι προσελθόντος ἔξωθεν αὐτοῦ κατὰ θύρας ἐπιπέδους, ἀποκεκλειμένας μὲν ὀχυρῶς, φωνῇ δὲ διεξοδὸν ἐχούσας. καὶ διελέχθησαν ἢ μὲν αἰτου-

ANTONY

Proculeius, and not to lament him for his last reverses, but to count him happy for the good things that had been his, since he had become most illustrious of men, had won greatest power, and now had been not ignobly conquered, a Roman by a Roman.

LXXVIII. Scarcely was he dead, when Proculeius came from Caesar. For after Antony had smitten himself and while he was being carried to Cleopatra, Dercetaeus, one of his body-guard, seized Antony's sword, concealed it, and stole away with it; and running to Caesar, he was the first to tell him of Antony's death, and showed him the sword all smeared with blood. When Caesar heard these tidings, he retired within his tent and wept for a man who had been his relation by marriage, his colleague in office and command, and his partner in many undertakings and struggles. Then he took the letters which had passed between them, called in his friends, and read the letters aloud, showing how reasonably and justly he had written, and how rude and overbearing Antony had always been in his replies. After this, he sent Proculeius, bidding him, if possible, above all things to get Cleopatra into his power alive; for he was fearful about the treasures in her funeral pyre, and he thought it would add greatly to the glory of his triumph if she were led in the procession. Into the hands of Proculeius, however, Cleopatra would not put herself; but she conferred with him after he had come close to the tomb and stationed himself outside at a door which was on a level with the ground. The door was strongly fastened with bolts and bars, but allowed a passage for the voice. So they conversed, Cleopatra μένη τοῖς παισὶ τὴν βασιλείαν, ὁ δὲ θαρρεῖν καὶ πάντα πιστεύειν Καίσαρι κελεύων.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

LXXIX. Ὡς δὲ κατιδὼν τὸν τόπον ἀπήγγειλε Καίσαρι, Γάλλος μὲν ἐπέμφθη πάλιν ἐντευξόμενος αὐτῇ καὶ πρὸς τὰς θύρας ἐλθὼν ἐπίτηδες ἐμήκυνε τὸν λόγον. ἐν τούτῳ δὲ Προκλήϊος κλίμακος προστεθείσης διὰ τῆς θυρίδος εἰσήλθεν ἢ τὸν Ἀντώνιον αἱ γυναῖκες ἐδέξαντο. καὶ πρὸς τὰς θύρας αὐτὰς¹ εὐθύς, αἷς ἢ Κλεοπάτρα παρειστήκει προσέχουσα τῷ Γάλλῳ, κατέβαινε ὑπὲρ-
 2 τας ἔχων δύο μεθ' αὐτοῦ. τῶν δὲ συγκαθειργμένων τῇ Κλεοπάτρᾳ γυναικῶν τῆς ἑτέρας ἀνακραγούσης, “Τάλαινά Κλεοπάτρα, ζωγρεῖ,” μεταστραφείσα καὶ θεασαμένη τὸν Προκλήϊον ὤρμησε μὲν αὐτὴν πατάξαι· παρεξωσμένη γὰρ ἐτύγχανέ τι τῶν ληστρικῶν ξιφιδίων· προσδραμῶν δὲ ταχὺ καὶ περισχῶν αὐτὴν ταῖς χερσὶν ἀμφοτέραις ὁ Προκλήϊος, “Ἄδικεῖς,” εἶπεν, “ὦ Κλεοπάτρα, καὶ σεαυτὴν καὶ Καίσαρα, μεγάλην ἀφαιρουμένη χρηστότητος ἐπίδειξιν αὐτοῦ, καὶ διαβάλλουσα
 3 τὸν πραότατον ἡγεμόνων ὡς ἄπιστον καὶ ἀδιάλλακτον.” ἄμα δὲ καὶ τὸ ξίφος αὐτῆς παρείλετο, καὶ τὴν ἐσθῆτα, μὴ κρύπτοι τι φάρμακον, ἐξέσεισεν. ἐπέμφθη δὲ καὶ παρὰ Καίσαρος τῶν ἀπελευθέρων Ἐπαφρόδιτος, ᾧ προσετέτακτο ζῶσαν αὐτὴν φυλάττειν ἰσχυρῶς ἐπιμελόμενον, τᾶλλα δὲ² πρὸς τὸ ῥᾶστον ἐνδιδόναι καὶ ἥδιστον.

LXXX. Αὐτὸς δὲ Καίσαρ εἰσήλανε εἰς τὴν πόλιν, Ἀρείῳ τῷ φιλοσόφῳ προσδιαλεγόμενος καὶ τὴν δεξιὰν ἐνδεδωκώς, ἵνα εὐθύς ἐν τοῖς πολί-

¹ αὐτὰς bracketed by Bekker.

² τᾶλλα δὲ Bekker, after Solanus : τᾶλλα.

ANTONY

asking that her children might have her kingdom, and Proculeius bidding her be of good cheer and trust Caesar in everything.

LXXIX. After Proculeius had surveyed the place, he brought back word to Caesar, and Gallus was sent to have another interview with the queen; and coming up to the door he purposely prolonged the conversation. Meanwhile Proculeius applied a ladder and went in through the window by which the women had taken Antony inside. Then he went down at once to the very door at which Cleopatra was standing and listening to Gallus, and he had two servants with him. One of the women imprisoned with Cleopatra cried out, "Wretched Cleopatra, thou art taken alive," whereupon the queen turned about, saw Proculeius, and tried to stab herself; for she had at her girdle a dagger such as robbers wear. But Proculeius ran swiftly to her, threw both his arms about her, and said: "O Cleopatra, thou art wronging both thyself and Caesar, by trying to rob him of an opportunity to show great kindness, and by fixing upon the gentlest of commanders the stigma of faithlessness and implacability." At the same time he took away her weapon, and shook out her clothing, to see whether she was concealing any poison. And there was also sent from Caesar one of his freedmen, Epaphroditus, with injunctions to keep the queen alive by the strictest vigilance, but otherwise to make any concession that would promote her ease and pleasure.

LXXX. And now Caesar himself drove into the city, and he was conversing with Areius the philosopher, to whom he had given his right hand, in order that Areius might at once be conspicuous among the citizens, and ταις περίβλεπτος εἶη καὶ θαυμάζοιτο τιμώμενος ὑπ' αὐτοῦ διαπρεπῶς. εἰς δὲ τὸ γυμνάσιον εἰσελθὼν καὶ ἀναβάς ἐπὶ βῆμά τι πεποιημένον, ἐκ πεπληγμένων ὑπὸ δέους τῶν ἀνθρώπων καὶ προσπιπτόντων, ἀναστήναι κελεύσας ἔφη πάσης αἰτίας τὸν δῆμον ἀφιέναι, πρῶτον μὲν διὰ τὸν κτίστην Ἀλέξανδρον· δεύτερον δὲ τῆς πόλεως θαυμάζων τὸ κάλλος καὶ τὸ μέγεθος· τρίτον δὲ 953

 2 Ἀρείῳ τῷ ἐταίρῳ χαριζόμενος. ταύτης δὴ τῆς τιμῆς ἔτυχε παρὰ Καῖσαρος Ἄρειος, καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἐξητήσατο συχνούς· ὧν ἦν καὶ Φιλόστρατος, ἀνὴρ εἰπεῖν μὲν ἐξ ἐπιδρομῆς τῶν πώποτε σοφιστῶν ἰκανώτατος, εἰσποίων δὲ μὴ προσηκόντως ἑαυτὸν τῇ Ἀκαδημείᾳ. διὸ καὶ Καῖσαρ αὐτοῦ βδελυττόμενος τὸν τρόπον οὐ προσίετο τὰς
 3 δεήσεις. ὁ δὲ πώγωνα πολλὸν καθεῖς καὶ φαῖον ἰμάτιον περιβαλόμενος ἐξόπισθεν Ἀρείῳ παρηκολούθει, τοῦτον αἰεὶ τὸν στίχον ἀναφθεγγόμενος· σοφοὶ σοφοὺς σώζουσιν, ἂν ὦσιν σοφοί.

πυθόμενος δὲ Καῖσαρ, καὶ τοῦ φθόνου μᾶλλον Ἄρειον ἢ τοῦ δέους Φιλόστρατον ἀπαλλάξαι βουλόμενος, διήκε.

LXXXI. Τῶν δὲ Ἀντωνίου παίδων ὁ μὲν ἐκ Φουλβίας Ἀντυλλος ὑπὸ Θεοδώρου τοῦ παιδαγωγοῦ παραδοθεὶς ἀπέθανε· καὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν αὐτοῦ τῶν στρατιωτῶν ἀποτεμόντων, ὁ παιδαγωγὸς ἀφελὼν ὃν ἐφόρει περὶ τῷ τραχήλῳ πολυτιμώτατον λίθον εἰς τὴν ζώνην κατέρραψεν· ἀρνησάμενος δὲ καὶ φωραθεὶς ἀνεσταυρώθη. τὰ δὲ Κλεοπάτρας παιδία φρουρούμενα μετὰ τῶν τρεφόντων ἐλευθέριον εἶχε δίαιταν. Καισαρίωνα δὲ be admired because of the marked honour shown him by Caesar. After he had entered the gymnasium and ascended a tribunal there made for him, the people were beside themselves with fear and prostrated themselves before him, but he bade them rise up, and said that he acquitted the people of all blame, first, because of Alexander, their founder; second, because he admired the great size and beauty of the city; and third, to gratify his companion, Areius. This honour Caesar bestowed upon Areius, and pardoned many other persons also at his request. Among these was Philostratus, a man more competent to speak extempore than any sophist that ever lived, but he improperly represented himself as belonging to the school of the Academy. Therefore Caesar, abominating his ways, would not listen to his entreaties. So Philostratus, having a long white beard and wearing a dark robe, would follow behind Areius, ever declaiming this verse:—

ANTONY

“A wise man will a wise man save, if wise he be.”¹

When Caesar learned of this, he pardoned him, wishing rather to free Areius from odium than Philostratus from fear.

LXXXI. As for the children of Antony, Antyllus, his son by Fulvia, was betrayed by Theodorus his tutor and put to death; and after the soldiers had cut off his head, his tutor took away the exceeding precious stone which the boy wore about his neck and sewed it into his own girdle; and though he denied the deed, he was convicted of it and crucified. Cleopatra's children, together with their attendants, were kept under guard and had generous treatment.

¹ An iambic trimeter from an unknown poet (Nauck, *Trag. Graec. Frag.*² p. 921).

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

τὸν ἐκ Καίσαρος γεγονέναι λεγόμενον ἢ μὲν μήτηρ ἐξέπεμψε μετὰ χρημάτων πολλῶν εἰς τὴν Ἰνδικὴν δι' Αἰθιοπίας, ἕτερος δὲ παιδαγωγὸς ὁμοῖος Θεοδώρῳ Ῥόδῳ ἀνέπεισεν ἐπανελθεῖν, ὡς Καίσαρος αὐτὸν ἐπὶ βασιλείαν καλοῦντος. βουλευομένου δὲ Καίσαρος Ἄρειον εἰπεῖν λέγουσιν·

οὐκ ἀγαθὸν πολυκαισαρήν.¹

LXXXII. Τοῦτον μὲν οὖν ὕστερον ἀπέκτεινε μετὰ τὴν Κλεοπάτρας τελευτήν. Ἀντώνιον δὲ πολλῶν αἰτουμένων θάψαι καὶ βασιλέων καὶ στρατηγῶν, οὐκ ἀφείλετο Κλεοπάτρας τὸ σῶμα Καίσαρ, ἀλλὰ ἐθάπτετο ταῖς ἐκείνης χερσὶ πολυτελῶς καὶ βασιλικῶς, πᾶσιν ὡς ἐβούλετο χρῆσθαι λαβούσης. ἐκ δὲ λύπης ἄμα τοσαύτης καὶ ὀδύνης (ἀνεφλέγμηνε γὰρ αὐτῆς τὰ στέρνα τυπτομένης καὶ ἤλκωτο) πυρετῶν ἐπιλαβόντων ἠγάπησε τὴν πρόφασιν, ὡς ἀφεξομένη τροφῆς διὰ τοῦτο καὶ παραλύσουσα ² τοῦ ζῆν ἀκωλύτως ἑαυτήν. ἦν δὲ ἰατρὸς αὐτῇ συνήθης Ὀλυμπος, ᾧ φράσασα τάληθές ἐχρήτη συμβούλῳ καὶ συνεργῶ τῆς καθαιρέσεως, ὡς αὐτὸς ὁ Ὀλυμπος εἶρηκεν ἱστορίαν τινὰ τῶν πραγμάτων τούτων ἐκδεδωκῶς. ὑπονοήσας δὲ Καίσαρ ἀπειλὰς μὲν τινὰς αὐτῇ καὶ φόβους περὶ τῶν τέκνων προσέβαλλεν, οἷς ἐκείνη καθάπερ μηχανήμασιν ὑπηρείπετο καὶ παρεδίδου τὸ σῶμα θεραπεύειν καὶ τρέφειν τοῖς χρήζουσιν.

LXXXIII. Ἦκε δὲ καὶ αὐτὸς ἡμέρας ὀλίγας διαλιπὼν ἐντευξόμενος αὐτῇ καὶ παρηγορήσων. ἦ δὲ ἔτυχε μὲν ἐν στιβάδι κατακειμένη ταπεινῶς, ¹ An adaptation of οὐκ ἀγαθὸν πολυκαισαρήν (the rule of many), Iliad, ii. 204.

ANTONY

But Caesarion, who was said to be Cléopatra's son by Julius Caesar, was sent by his mother, with much treasure, into India, by way of Ethiopia. There Rhodon, another tutor like Theodorus, persuaded him to go back, on the ground that Caesar invited him to take the kingdom. But while Caesar was deliberating on the matter, we are told that Areius said :—

“ Not a good thing were a Caesar too many.”

LXXXII. As for Caesarion, then, he was afterwards put to death by Caesar,—after the death of Cleopatra ; but as for Antony, though many generals and kings asked for his body that they might give it burial, Caesar would not take it away from Cleopatra, and it was buried by her hands in sumptuous and royal fashion, such things being granted her for the purpose as she desired. But in consequence of so much grief as well as pain (for her breasts were wounded and inflamed by the blows she gave them) a fever assailed her, and she welcomed it as an excuse for abstaining from food and so releasing herself from life without hindrance. Moreover, there was a physician in her company of intimates, Olympos, to whom she told the truth, and she had his counsel and assistance in compassing her death, as Olympos himself testifies in a history of these events which he published. But Caesar was suspicious, and plied her with threats and fears regarding her children, by which she was laid low, as by engines of war, and surrendered her body for such care and nourishment as was desired.

LXXXIII. After a few days Caesar himself came to talk with her and give her comfort. She was lying on a mean pallet-bed, clad only in her tunic,

- εἰσιόντι δ' αὐτῷ μονοχίτων ἀναπηδήσασα προσπίπτει, δεινῶς μὲν ἐξηγριωμένη κεφαλὴν καὶ πρόσωπον, ὑπότρομος δὲ τῇ φωνῇ καὶ συντετηκυῖα ταῖς ὄψεσιν. ἦν δὲ πολλὰ καὶ τῆς περὶ τὸ στέρνον αἰκίας καταφανῆ· καὶ ὅλως οὐθὲν
- 2 ἐδόκει τὸ σῶμα τῆς ψυχῆς ἔχειν βέλτιον. ἡ μέντοι χάρις ἐκείνη καὶ τὸ τῆς ὥρας ἰταμὸν οὐ κατέσβεστο παντάπασιν, ἀλλὰ καίπερ οὕτως διακειμένης ἔνδοθεν ποθεν ἐξέλαμπε καὶ συνεπεφαίνετο τοῖς κινήμασι τοῦ προσώπου. κελύσαντος δὲ τοῦ Καίσαρος αὐτὴν κατακλιθῆναι καὶ πλησίον αὐτοῦ καθίσαντος, ἠψάτο μὲν τινος δικαιολογίας εἰς ἀνάγκην καὶ φόβον Ἀντωνίου τὰ πεπραγμένα τρεπούσης, ἐνισταμένου δὲ πρὸς ἕκαστον αὐτῇ τοῦ Καίσαρος ἐξελεγχομένη ταχὺ πρὸς οἶκτον μεθηρμόσατο καὶ δέησιν, ὡς δὴ τις ἂν
- 3 μάλιστα τοῦ ζῆν περιεχομένη. τέλος δὲ τοῦ πλήθους τῶν χρημάτων ἀναγραφὴν ἔχουσα προσέδωκεν αὐτῷ· Σελεύκου δὲ τινος τῶν ἐπιτρόπων ἐλέγχοντος ὡς ἔνια κρύπτουσαν καὶ διακλέπτουσαν, ἀναπηδήσασα καὶ τῶν τριχῶν αὐτοῦ λαβο-
- 4 μένη πολλὰς ἐνεφόρει τῷ προσώπῳ πληγὰς. τοῦ δὲ Καίσαρος μειδιῶντος καὶ καταπαύοντος αὐτὴν, 954 “Ἄλλ' οὐ δεινόν,” εἶπεν, “ὦ Καίσαρ, εἰ σὺ μὲν ἠξίωσας ἀφικέσθαι πρὸς ἐμὲ καὶ προσειπεῖν οὕτω πράττουσαν, οἱ δὲ δούλοι μου κατηγοροῦσιν εἴ τι τῶν γυναικείων ἀπεθέμην, οὐκ ἑμαυτῇ δῆπουθεν, ἢ τάλαινα, κόσμον, ἀλλ' ὅπως Ὀκταουῖα καὶ Λιβία τῇ σῆ μικρὰ δοῦσα δι' ἐκείνων ἴλεώ σου
- 5 τύχοιμι καὶ πραοτέρου;” τούτοις ὁ Καίσαρ ἤδετο, παντάπασιν αὐτὴν φιλοψυχεῖν οἰόμενος. εἰπὼν οὖν ὅτι καὶ ταῦτα ἐπιτρέπει καὶ τὰλλα πάσης

ANTONY

but sprang up as he entered and threw herself at his feet; her hair and face were in terrible disarray, her voice trembled, and her eyes were sunken. There were also visible many marks of the cruel blows upon her bosom; in a word, her body seemed to be no better off than her spirit. Nevertheless, the charm for which she was famous and the boldness of her beauty were not altogether extinguished, but, although she was in such a sorry plight, they shone forth from within and made themselves manifest in the play of her features. After Caesar had bidden her to lie down and had seated himself near her, she began a sort of justification of her course, ascribing it to necessity and fear of Antony; but as Caesar opposed and refuted her on every point, she quickly changed her tone and sought to move his pity by prayers, as one who above all things clung to life. And finally she gave him a list which she had of all her treasures; and when Seleucus, one of her stewards, showed conclusively that she was stealing away and hiding some of them, she sprang up, seized him by the hair, and showered blows upon his face. And when Caesar, with a smile, stopped her, she said: "But is it not a monstrous thing, O Caesar, that when thou hast deigned to come to me and speak to me though I am in this wretched plight, my slaves denounce me for reserving some women's adornments, —not for myself, indeed, unhappy woman that I am, —but that I may make trifling gifts to Octavia and thy Livia, and through their intercession find thee merciful and more gentle?" Caesar was pleased with this speech, being altogether of the opinion that she desired to live. He told her, therefore, that he left these matters for her to manage, and that in all ἐλπίδος αὐτῇ χρήσεται λαμπρότερον, ὄχρετο ἀπιών, ἐξηπατηκέναι μὲν οἰόμενος, ἐξηπατημένος δὲ μᾶλλον.

- LXXXIV. Ἦν δὲ Κορνήλιος Δολοβέλλας ἐπιφανῆς νεανίσκος ἐν τοῖς Καίσαρος ἐταίροις. οὗτος εἶχε πρὸς τὴν Κλεοπάτραν οὐκ ἀηδῶς· καὶ τότε χαριζόμενος αὐτῇ δεηθείση κρύφα πέμψας ἐξηγγειλεν ὡς αὐτὸς μὲν ὁ Καῖσαρ ἀναζεύγνυσι πεζῇ διὰ Συρίας, ἐκείνην δὲ μετὰ τῶν τέκνων
- 2 ἀποστέλλειν εἰς τρίτην ἡμέραν ἔγνωκεν. ἡ δὲ ἀκούσασα ταῦτα πρῶτον μὲν ἐδεήθη Καίσαρος ὅπως αὐτὴν εὐση χοᾶς ἐπενεγκεῖν Ἀντωνίῳ· καὶ συγχωρήσαντος ἐπὶ τὸν τάφον κομισθεῖσα καὶ περιπεσοῦσα τῇ σορῶ μετὰ τῶν συνήθων γυναικῶν, “ὦ φίλε Ἀντώνιε,” εἶπεν, “ἔθαπτον μὲν σε πρῶην ἔτι χερσὶν ἐλευθέραις, σπένδω δὲ νῦν αἰχμάλωτος οὔσα, καὶ φρουρουμένη μῆτε κοπετοῖς μῆτε θρήνοις αἰκίσασθαι τὸ δούλον τοῦτο σῶμα καὶ τηρούμενον ἐπὶ τοὺς κατὰ σοῦ θριάμβους.
- 3 ἄλλας δὲ μὴ προσδέχου τιμὰς ἢ χοᾶς· ἀλλ’ αὐταί σοι τελευταῖαι Κλεοπάτρας ἀγομένης. ζῶντας μὲν γὰρ ἡμᾶς οὐθὲν ἀλλήλων διέστησε, κινδυνεύομεν δὲ τῷ θανάτῳ διαμείψασθαι τοὺς τόπους· σὺ μὲν ὁ Ῥωμαῖος ἐνταῦθα κείμενος, ἐγὼ δ’ ἡ δύστηνος ἐν Ἰταλίᾳ, τοσοῦτο τῆς σῆς
- 4 μεταλαβοῦσα χώρας μόνον. ἀλλ’ εἰ δὴ τις τῶν ἐκεῖ θεῶν ἀλκὴ καὶ δύναμις (οἱ γὰρ ἐνταῦθα προὔδωκαν ἡμᾶς), μὴ πρῶη ζῶσαν τὴν σεαυτοῦ γυναῖκα, μηδ’ ἐν ἐμοὶ περιτῆς θριαμβευόμενον other ways he would give her more splendid treatment than she could possibly expect. Then he went off, supposing that he had deceived her, but the rather deceived by her.

ANTONY

LXXXIV. Now, there was a young man of rank among Caesar's companions, named Cornelius Dolabella. This man was not without a certain tenderness for Cleopatra; and so now, in response to her request, he secretly sent word to her that Caesar himself was preparing to march with his land forces through Syria, and had resolved to send off her and her children within three days. After Cleopatra had heard this, in the first place, she begged Caesar that she might be permitted to pour libations for Antony; and when the request was granted, she had herself carried to the tomb, and embracing the urn which held his ashes, in company with the women usually about her, she said: "Dear Antony, I buried thee but lately with hands still free; now, however, I pour libations for thee as a captive, and so carefully guarded that I cannot either with blows or tears disfigure this body of mine, which is a slave's body, and closely watched that it may grace the triumph over thee. Do not expect other honours or libations; these are the last that Cleopatra can bring thee. For though in life nothing could part us from each other, in death we are likely to change places; thou, the Roman, lying buried here, while I, the hapless woman, lie in Italy, and get only so much of thy country as my portion. But if indeed there is any might or power in the gods of that country (for the gods of this country have betrayed us), do not abandon thine own wife while she lives, nor permit a σεαυτόν, ἀλλ' ἐνταῦθά με κρύψον μετὰ σεαυτοῦ καὶ σύνθαψον, ὡς ἐμοὶ μυρίων κακῶν ὄντων οὐδὲν οὔτω μέγα καὶ δεινόν ἐστιν ὡς ὁ βραχὺς οὗτος χρόνος ὄν σου χωρὶς ἔζηκα.”

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

LXXXV. Τοιαῦτα ὀλοφυραμένη καὶ στέψασα καὶ κατασπασαμένη τὴν σορὸν ἐκέλευσεν αὐτῇ λουτρὸν γενέσθαι. λουσαμένη δὲ καὶ κατακλιθεῖσα λαμπρὸν ἄριστον ἤριστα. καὶ τις ἦκεν ἀπ' ἀγροῦ κίστην τινὰ κομίζων· τῶν δὲ φυλάκων ὃ τι φέροι πυνθανομένων ἀνοίξας καὶ ἀφελὼν τὰ
2 θρία σύκων ἐπίπλεων τὸ ἀγγεῖον ἔδειξε. θαυμασάντων δὲ τὸ κάλλος καὶ τὸ μέγεθος μειδιάσας παρεκάλει λαβεῖν· οἱ δὲ πιστεύσαντες ἐκέλευον εἰσενεγκεῖν. μετὰ δὲ τὸ ἄριστον ἢ Κλεοπάτρα δέλτον ἔχουσα γεγραμμένην καὶ κατασεσημασμένην ἀπέστειλε πρὸς Καίσαρα, καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους ἐκποδῶν ποιησαμένη πλὴν τῶν δυεῖν ἐκείνων γυναικῶν τὰς θύρας ἔκλεισε.

3 Καῖσαρ δὲ λύσας τὴν δέλτον, ὡς ἐνέτυχε λιταῖς καὶ ὀλοφυρμοῖς δεομένης αὐτὴν σὺν Ἀντωνίῳ θάψαι, ταχὺ συνῆκε τὸ πεπραγμένον. καὶ πρῶτον μὲν αὐτὸς ὤρμησε βοηθεῖν, ἔπειτα τοὺς σκεψομένους κατὰ τάχος ἔπεμψεν. ἐγεγόνει δ' ὄξυ· τὸ πάθος. δρόμῳ γὰρ ἐλθόντες καὶ τοὺς μὲν φυλάττοντας οὐδὲν ἠσθημένους καταλαβόντες, τὰς δὲ θύρας ἀνοίξαντες, εὗρον αὐτὴν τεθνηκυῖαν ἐν χρυσῇ κατακειμένην κλίνῃ, κεκοσμημένην βασιλικῶς.
4 τῶν δὲ γυναικῶν ἢ μὲν Εἰράς λεγομένη πρὸς τοῖς ποσὶν ἀπέθνησκεν, ἢ δὲ Χάρμιον ἤδη σφαλλομένη triumph to be celebrated over thyself in my person, but hide and bury me here with thyself, since out of all my innumerable ills not one is so great and dreadful as this short time that I have lived apart from thee."

ANTONY

LXXXV. After such lamentations, she wreathed and kissed the urn, and then ordered a bath to be prepared for herself. After her bath, she reclined at table and was making a sumptuous meal. And there came a man from the country carrying a basket; and when the guards asked him what he was bringing there, he opened the basket, took away the leaves, and showed them that the dish inside was full of figs. The guards were amazed at the great size and beauty of the figs, whereupon the man smiled and asked them to take some; so they felt no mistrust and bade him take them in. After her meal, however, Cleopatra took a tablet which was already written upon and sealed, and sent it to Caesar, and then, sending away all the rest of the company except her two faithful women, she closed the doors.

But Caesar opened the tablet, and when he found there lamentations and supplications of one who begged that he would bury her with Antony, he quickly knew what had happened. At first he was minded to go himself and give aid; then he ordered messengers to go with all speed and investigate. But the mischief had been swift. For though his messengers came on the run and found the guards as yet aware of nothing, when they opened the doors they found Cleopatra lying dead upon a golden couch, arrayed in royal state. And of her two women, the one called Iras was dying at her feet, while Charmion, already tottering and heavy-headed, was

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

καὶ κερηβαροῦσα κατεκόσμει τὸ διάδημα τὸ περὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν αὐτῆς. εἰπόντος δέ τινος ὀργῆ· “Καλὰ ταῦτα, Χάρμιον.” “Κάλλιστα μὲν οὖν,” ἔφη, “καὶ πρέποντα τῇ τοσοῦτων ἀπογόνῳ βασιλέων.” πλέον δὲ οὐδὲν εἶπεν, ἀλλ’ αὐτοῦ παρὰ τὴν κλίνην ἔπεσε.

LXXXVI. Λέγεται δὲ τὴν ἀσπίδα κομισθῆναι σὺν τοῖς σύκοις ἐκείνοις καὶ τοῖς θρίοις ἄνωθεν 955 ἐπικαλυφθεῖσαν, οὕτω γὰρ τὴν Κλεοπάτραν κελεῦσαι, μηδὲ αὐτῆς ἐπισταμένης τῷ σώματι προσπεσεῖν τὸ θηρίον· ὡς δὲ ἀφαιροῦσα τῶν σύκων εἶδεν, εἰπεῖν· “Ἐνταῦθα ἦν ἄρα τοῦτο.”
καὶ τὸν βραχίονα παρασχεῖν τῷ δῆγματι 2 γυμνώσασαν. οἱ δὲ τηρεῖσθαι μὲν ἐν ὑδρίᾳ τὴν ἀσπίδα καθειργμένην φάσκουσιν, ἡλακότη δέ τινι χρυσῇ τῆς Κλεοπάτρας ἐκκαλουμένης αὐτὴν καὶ διαγριαίνουσης ὀρμήσασαν ἐμφῦναι τῷ βραχίονι. τὸ δὲ ἀληθές οὐδεὶς οἶδεν· ἐπεὶ καὶ φάρμακον αὐτὴν ἐλέχθη φορεῖν ἐν κνηστίδι κοίλῃ, τὴν δὲ κνηστίδα κρύπτειν τῇ κόμῃ· πλὴν οὔτε 3 κηλὶς ἐξήνθησε τοῦ σώματος οὔτε ἄλλο φαρμάκου σημεῖον. οὐ μὴν οὐδὲ τὸ θηρίον ἐντὸς ὤφθη, συρμὸν δέ τινος αὐτοῦ παρὰ θάλασσαν, ἢ τὸ δωμάτιον ἀφεώρα καὶ θυρίδες ἦσαν, ἰδεῖν ἔφασκον.
ἔνιοι δὲ καὶ τὸν βραχίονα τῆς Κλεοπάτρας ὀφθῆναι δύο νυγμὰς ἔχοντα λεπτὰς καὶ ἀμυδράς· οἷς ἔοικε πιστεῦσαι καὶ ὁ Καῖσαρ. ἐν γὰρ τῷ θριάμβῳ τῆς Κλεοπάτρας αὐτῆς εἶδωλον ἐκομίζετο καὶ τῆς ἀσπίδος ἐμπεφυκυίας. ταῦτα μὲν οὖν οὕτω λέγεται γενέσθαι.

4 Καῖσαρ δέ, καίπερ ἀχθεσθεῖς ἐπὶ τῇ τελευτῇ τῆς γυναικός, ἐθαύμασε τὴν εὐγένειαν αὐτῆς·

ANTONY

trying to arrange the diadem which encircled the queen's brow. Then somebody said in anger: "A fine deed, this, Charmion!" "It is indeed most fine," she said, "and befitting the descendant of so many kings." Not a word more did she speak, but fell there by the side of the couch.

LXXXVI. It is said that the asp was brought with those figs and leaves and lay hidden beneath them, for thus Cleopatra had given orders, that the reptile might fasten itself upon her body without her being aware of it. But when she took away some of the figs and saw it, she said: "There it is, you see," and baring her arm she held it out for the bite. But others say that the asp was kept carefully shut up in a water jar, and that while Cleopatra was stirring it up and irritating it with a golden distaff it sprang and fastened itself upon her arm. But the truth of the matter no one knows; for it was also said that she carried about poison in a hollow comb and kept the comb hidden in her hair; and yet neither spot nor other sign of poison broke out upon her body. Moreover, not even was the reptile seen within the chamber, though people said they saw some traces of it near the sea, where the chamber looked out upon it with its windows. And some also say that Cleopatra's arm was seen to have two slight and indistinct punctures; and this Caesar also seems to have believed. For in his triumph an image of Cleopatra herself with the asp clinging to her was carried in the procession. These, then, are the various accounts of what happened.

But Caesar, although vexed at the death of the woman, admired her lofty spirit; and he gave orders

καὶ ταφῆναι τὸ σῶμα σὺν Ἀντωνίῳ λαμπρῶς καὶ βασιλικῶς ἐκέλευσεν. ἐντίμου δὲ καὶ τὰ γύναια κηδείας ἔτυχεν αὐτοῦ προστάξαντος.
ἐτελεύτησε δὲ Κλεοπάτρα μὲν ἐνὸς δέοντα τεσσαράκοντα ἔτη βιώσασα, καὶ τούτων δύο καὶ 5 πλείω τῶν δεκατεσσάρων. Ἀντώνιον δὲ οἱ μὲν ἕξ, οἱ δὲ τρισὶ τὰ πενήκοντα ὑπερβαλεῖν φασιν.
αἱ μὲν οὖν Ἀντωνίου καθηρέθησαν εἰκόνες, αἱ δὲ Κλεοπάτρας κατὰ χώραν ἔμειναν, Ἀρχιβίου τινὸς τῶν φίλων αὐτῆς δισχίλια τάλαντα Καίσαρι δόντος, ἵνα μὴ τὸ αὐτὸ ταῖς Ἀντωνίου πάθωσιν.

LXXXVII. Ἀντωνίου δὲ γενεὰν ἀπολιπόντος
ἐκ τριῶν γυναικῶν ἑπτὰ παῖδας, ὁ πρεσβύτατος Ἄντυλλος ὑπὸ Καίσαρος ἀνηρέθη μόνος· τοὺς λοιποὺς δὲ Ὀκταουία παραλαβοῦσα μετὰ τῶν ἕξ ἑαυτῆς ἔθρεψε. καὶ Κλεοπάτραν μὲν τὴν ἐκ Κλεοπάτρας Ἰόβα τῷ χαριεστάτῳ βασιλέων συνώκισεν, Ἀντώνιον δὲ τὸν ἐκ Φουλβίας οὕτω μέγαν ἐποίησεν ὥστε τὴν πρώτην παρὰ Καίσαρι τιμὴν Ἀγρίππου, τὴν δὲ δευτέραν τῶν Λιβίας παίδων ἔχόντων, τρίτον εἶναι καὶ δοκεῖν 2 Ἀντώνιον. ἐκ δὲ Μαρκέλλου δευεῖν αὐτῇ θυγατέρων οὐσῶν, ἐνὸς δὲ υἱοῦ Μαρκέλλου, τοῦτον μὲν ἅμα παῖδα καὶ γαμβρὸν ἐποίησατο Καίσαρ, τῶν δὲ θυγατέρων Ἀγρίππα τὴν ἑτέραν ἔδωκεν.
ἐπεὶ δὲ Μάρκελλος ἐτελεύτησε κομιδῆ νεόγαμος καὶ Καίσαρι γαμβρὸν ἔχοντα πίστιν οὐκ εὐπορον ἦν ἐκ τῶν ἄλλων φίλων ἐλέσθαι, λόγον ἢ Ὀκταουία προσήνεγκεν ὡς χρὴ τὴν Καίσαρος θυγατέρα λαβεῖν Ἀγρίππαν, ἀφέντα τὴν ἑαυτῆς.
3 πεισθέντος δὲ Καίσαρος πρώτου, εἶτα Ἀγρίππου, that her body should be buried with that of Antony in splendid and regal fashion. Her women also received honourable interment by his orders. When Cleopatra died she was forty years of age save one, had been queen for two and twenty of these, and had shared her power with Antony more than fourteen. Antony was fifty-six years of age, according to some, according to others, fifty-three. Now, the statues of Antony were torn down, but those of Cleopatra were left standing, because Archibius, one of her friends, gave Caesar two thousand talents, in order that they might not suffer the same fate as Antony's.

ANTONY

LXXXVII. Antony left seven children by his three wives, of whom Antyllus, the eldest, was the only one who was put to death by Caesar; the rest were taken up by Octavia and reared with her own children. Cleopatra, the daughter of Cleopatra, Octavia gave in marriage to Juba, the most accomplished of kings, and Antony, the son of Fulvia, she raised so high that, while Agrippa held the first place in Caesar's estimation, and the sons of Livia the second, Antony was thought to be and really was third. By Marcellus Octavia had two daughters, and one son, Marcellus, whom Caesar made both his son and his son-in-law, and he gave one of the daughters to Agrippa. But since Marcellus died very soon after his marriage and it was not easy for Caesar to select from among his other friends a son-in-law whom he could trust, Octavia proposed that Agrippa should take Caesar's daughter to wife, and put away her own. First Caesar was persuaded by her, then Agrippa, where-

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

τὴν μὲν αὐτῆς ἀπολαβοῦσα συνώκισεν Ἀντωνίῳ, τὴν δὲ Καίσαρος Ἀγρίππας ἔγημεν. ἀπολειπομένων δὲ τῶν Ἀντωνίου καὶ Ὀκταουίας δυεῖν θυγατέρων τὴν μὲν Δομίτιος Ἀηνόβαρβος ἔλαβε, τὴν δὲ σωφροσύνη καὶ κάλλει περιβόητον Ἀντωνίαν Δροῦσος, ὁ Λιβίας υἱός, πρόγονος δὲ Καίσαρος. ἐκ τούτων ἐγένετο Γερμανικὸς καὶ 4 Κλαύδιος· ὃν Κλαύδιος μὲν ὕστερον ἤρξε, τῶν δὲ Γερμανικοῦ παίδων Γαῖος μὲν ἄρξας ἐπιφανῶς οὐ πολὺν χρόνον ἀνηρέθη μετὰ τέκνου καὶ θυναικός, Ἀγριππίνα δὲ υἱὸν ἐξ Ἀηνοβάμβου Λεύκιον Δομίτιον ἔχουσα Κλαυδίῳ Καίσαρι συνώκησε. καὶ θέμενος τὸν υἱὸν αὐτῆς Κλαύδιος Νέρωνα Γερμανικὸν προσωνόμασεν. οὗτος ἄρξας ἐφ' ἡμῶν ἀπέκτεινε τὴν μητέρα καὶ μικρὸν ἐδέησεν ὑπὸ ἐμπληξίας καὶ παραφροσύνης ἀνατρέψαι τὴν Ῥωμαίων ἡγεμονίαν, πέμπτος ἀπὸ Ἀντωνίου κατ' ἀριθμὸν διαδοχῆς γενόμενος.

ΔΗΜΗΤΡΙΟΥ ΚΑΙ ΑΝΤΩΝΙΟΥ ΣΥΓΚΡΙΣΙΣ

I. Ἐπεὶ τοίνυν μεγάλαι περὶ ἀμφοτέρους γεγόνασι μεταβολαί, πρῶτον τὰ τῆς δυνάμεως καὶ τῆς ἐπιφανείας σκοπῶμεν, ὅτι τῷ μὲν ἦν πατρῷα καὶ προκατειργασμένα, μέγιστον ἰσχύσαντος Ἀντιγόνου τῶν διαδόχων καὶ πρὸ τοῦ Δημήτριου ἐν ἡλικίᾳ γενέσθαι τὰ πλεῖστα τῆς Ἀσίας ἐπελ-
 2 θόντος καὶ κρατήσαντος· Ἀντώνιος δὲ χαρίεντος μὲν ἄλλως, ἀπολέμου δὲ καὶ μέγα μῆδὲν εἰς δόξαν αὐτῷ καταλιπόντος γενόμενος πατρός, ἐπὶ τὴν

COMPARISON OF DEMETRIUS AND ANTONY

upon she took back her own daughter and married her to young Antony, while Agrippa married Caesar's daughter. Antony left two daughters by Octavia, of whom one was taken to wife by Domitius Ahenobarbus, and the other, Antonia, famous for her beauty and discretion, was married to Drusus, who was the son of Livia and the step-son of Caesar. From this marriage sprang Germanicus and Claudius; of these, Claudius afterwards came to the throne, and of the children of Germanicus, Caius reigned with distinction, but for a short time only, and was then put to death with his wife and child, and Agrippina, who had a son by Ahenobarbus, Lucius Domitius, became the wife of Claudius Caesar. And Claudius, having adopted Agrippina's son, gave him the name of Nero Germanicus. This Nero came to the throne in my time. He killed his mother, and by his folly and madness came near subverting the Roman empire. He was the fifth in descent from Antony.

COMPARISON OF DEMETRIUS AND ANTONY

I. SINCE, then, both these men experienced great reversals of fortune, let us first observe, with regard to their power and fame, that in the one case these were acquired for him by his father and inherited, since Antigonus became the strongest of Alexander's successors, and before Demetrius came of age had attacked and mastered the greater part of Asia; Antony, on the contrary, was the son of a man who, though otherwise gifted, was yet no warrior, and could leave him no great legacy of reputation; and

Καίσαρος ἐτόλμησεν ἀρχήν, οὐδὲν αὐτῷ κατὰ γένος προσήκουσαν, ἐλθεῖν, καὶ τοῖς ἐκείνῳ προπονημένοις αὐτὸς ἑαυτὸν εἰσεποίησε διάδοχον. καὶ τοσοῦτον ἰσχυσεν, ἐκ μόνων τῶν περὶ αὐτὸν ὑπαρχόντων ὀρμώμενος, ὥστε δύο μοίρας τὰ σύμπαντα ποιησάμενος τὴν ἑτέραν ἐλέσθαι καὶ λαβεῖν τὴν ἐπιφανεστέραν, ἀπὼν δὲ αὐτὸς ὑπηρέταις τε καὶ ὑποστρατήγοις Πάρθους τε νικῆσαι πολλάκις καὶ τὰ περὶ Καύκασον ἔθνη βάρβαρα
 3 μέχρι τῆς Κασπίας ὄσασθαι θαλάσσης. μαρτύρια δὲ τοῦ μεγέθους αὐτῷ καὶ δι' ἃ κακῶς ἀκούει. Δημητρίῳ μὲν γὰρ ὁ πατήρ ἠγάπησε τὴν Ἀντιπάτρου Φίλαν ὡς κρείττονα συνοικῆσαι παρ' ἠλικίαν, Ἀντωνίῳ δὲ ὁ Κλεοπάτρας γάμος ὄνειδος ἦν, γυναικὸς ὑπερβαλομένης δυνάμει καὶ λαμπρότητι πάντας πλὴν Ἀρσάκου τοὺς καθ' αὐτὴν βασιλεῖς. ἀλλ' οὕτως ἐποίησε μέγαν ἑαυτὸν ὥστε τοῖς ἄλλοις μειζόνων ἢ ἐβούλετο δοκεῖν ἄξιος.

II. Ἡ μέντοι προαίρεσις, ἀφ' ἧς ἐκτήσαντο τὴν ἀρχήν, ἄμεμπτος ἐπὶ¹ τοῦ Δημητρίου, κρατεῖν καὶ βασιλεύειν ἀνθρώπων εἰθισμένων κρατεῖσθαι καὶ βασιλεύεσθαι ζητούντος, ἢ δ' Ἀντωνίου χαλεπή καὶ τυραννική, καταδουλουμένου τὸν Ῥωμαίων δῆμον ἄρτι διαφυγόντα τὴν ὑπὸ Καίσαρι μοναρχίαν.
 2 ὁ δ' οὖν μέγιστον αὐτῷ καὶ λαμπρότατόν ἐστι τῶν εἰργασμένων, ὁ πρὸς Κάσσιον καὶ Βρούτου πόλεμος, ἐπὶ τῷ τὴν πατρίδα καὶ τοὺς πολίτας ἀφελέσθαι τὴν ἐλευθερίαν ἐπολεμήθη. Δημήτριος δέ, καὶ² πρὶν εἰς τύχας ἐλθεῖν ἀναγ-

¹ ἐπὶ Bekker reads ἢ, with a single MS.

² καὶ deleted by Bekker, after Schaefer.

COMPARISON OF DEMETRIUS AND ANTONY

yet Antony had the courage to seek the power of Caesar, to which his birth gave him no claim, and to all that Caesar had wrought out before him he made himself the rightful successor. And so great strength did he attain, in reliance upon his own resources alone, that, after forcing a division of the empire into two parts, he chose one, and took the more splendid one of the two; and though absent himself, through his assistants and lieutenant-generals he defeated the Parthians many times, and drove the barbarous tribes about the Caucasus as far as the Caspian Sea. Moreover, even the things that brought him ill-repute bear witness to his greatness. For Antigonus was well pleased to have his son Demetrius marry Phila, the daughter of Antipater, in spite of her disparity in years, because he thought her a greater personage; whereas Antony's marriage to Cleopatra was a disgrace to him, although she was a woman who surpassed in power and splendour all the royalties of her time except Arsaces. But he made himself so great that men thought him worthy of greater things than he desired.

II. As regards their resolution to win empire, this was blameless in the case of Demetrius, who sought to subdue and reign as king over men who were accustomed to subjection and kings; but in the case of Antony it was harsh and tyrannical, since he tried to enslave the Roman people when it had just escaped from the sole rule of Caesar. Moreover, as regards the greatest and most brilliant of his achievements, namely, the war against Cassius and Brutus, it was to deprive his country and his fellow citizens of their liberty that the war was waged. But Demetrius, even before he felt the constraints of adversity, kept on καίας, ἐλευθερῶν τὴν Ἑλλάδα καὶ τῶν πόλεων ἐξελαίνων τὰς φρουρὰς διέτελεσεν, οὐχ ὥσπερ Ἄντωνιος, ὅτι τοὺς ἐλευθερώσαντας τὴν Ῥώμην ἀπέκτεινεν ἐν Μακεδονίᾳ, σεμννύμενος. ἐν τοίνυν ἐστὶ τῶν ἐπαινουμένων Ἀντωνίου, τὸ φιλόδωρον καὶ μεγαλόδωρον, ἐν ᾧ τοσοῦτον ὑπεραίρει Δημήτριος ὥστε χαρίσασθαι τοῖς πολεμίοις ὅσα τοῖς φίλοις οὐκ ἔδωκεν Ἄντωνιος. καίτοι ταφήναι γε καὶ περισταλήναι κελεύσας Βρούτων ἐκείνος εὐδοκίμησεν· οὗτος δὲ καὶ τοὺς ἀποθανόντας τῶν πολεμίων πάντας ἐκήδευσεν καὶ τοὺς ἀλόντας Πτολεμαίῳ μετὰ χρημάτων καὶ δωρεῶν ἀπέπεμψεν.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

III. Ὑβρισταὶ μὲν εὐτυχοῦντες ἀμφότεροι, καὶ πρὸς τρυφᾶς ἀνειμένοι καὶ ἀπολαύσεις. οὐκ ἂν εἴποι δέ τις ὡς Δημήτριον ἐν εὐπαθείαις καὶ συνουσίαις ὄντα πράξεων καιρὸς ἐξέφυγεν, ἀλλὰ τῇ περιουσίᾳ τῆς σχολῆς ἐπεισῆγε τὰς ἡδονάς, καὶ τὴν Λάμιαν ὥσπερ τὴν μυθικὴν ἀτεχνῶς παίζων καὶ νυστάζων ἐποιεῖτο διαγωγὴν. ἐν δὲ ταῖς τοῦ πολέμου παρασκευαῖς οὐκ εἶχεν αὐτοῦ τὸ δόρυ κιττόν, οὐδὲ μύρων ὠδῶδει τὸ κράνος, οὐδὲ γεγανωμένος καὶ ἀνθηρὸς ἐπὶ τὰς μάχας ἐκ τῆς γυναικωνίτιδος προήει, κοιμίζων δὲ τοὺς θιάσους καὶ τὰ βακχεῖα καταπαύων ἀμφίπολος Ἄρεος ἀνιέρου, κατὰ τὸν Εὐριπίδην, ἐγίνετο, καὶ δι' ἡδονὴν ἢ ῥαθυμίαν οὐθὲν ἀπλῶς ἔπταισεν.

3 Ἄντωνιον δέ, ὥσπερ ἐν ταῖς γραφαῖς ὀρώμεν τοῦ Ἡρακλέους τὴν Ὀμφάλην ὑφαιρούσαν τὸ ῥόπαλον καὶ τὴν λεοντὴν ἀποδύουσαν, οὕτω πολλάκις Κλεοπάτρα παροπλίσασα καὶ κατα-

COMPARISON OF DEMETRIUS AND ANTONY

liberating Greece and expelling their garrisons from her cities, unlike Antony, whose boast was that he had slain in Macedonia the men who had given liberty to Rome. And besides, as regards their love of giving and the largeness of their gifts, one of the things for which Antony is lauded, Demetrius far surpassed in this, and bestowed more upon his enemies than Antony ever gave to his friends. It is true that for ordering the body of Brutus to be robbed and buried Antony won a good name; but Demetrius gave obsequies to all his enemy's dead, and sent his prisoners back to Ptolemy with money and gifts.¹

III. Both were insolent in prosperity, and abandoned themselves to luxury and enjoyment. But it cannot be said that Demetrius, for all his pleasures and amours, ever let slip the time for action, nay, it was only when his leisure was abundant that he introduced his pleasures; and his Lamia, like the creature of fable, he made his pastime only when he was sportive or drowsy. But when he got ready for war, his spear was not tipped with ivy, nor did his helmet smell of myrrh, nor did he go forth to his battles from the women's chamber, sleek and blooming, but quieting down and stopping the revels and orgies of Bacchus, he became, in the words of Euripides,² a "minister of unhallowed Ares," and got not a single slip or fall because of his indolence or pleasures.

Antony, on the contrary, like Heracles in paintings where Omphalé is seen taking away his club and stripping off his lion's skin, was often disarmed by Cleopatra, subdued by her spells, and persuaded to

¹ See the Demetrius, xvii. 1.

² Nauck, *Trag. Graec. Frag.*² p. 679.

θέλξασα συνέπεισεν ἀφέντα μεγάλας πράξεις ἐκ τῶν χειρῶν καὶ στρατείας ἀναγκαίας ἐν ταῖς περὶ Κάνωβον καὶ Ταφόσιριν ἀκταῖς ἀλύειν καὶ παίζειν μετ' αὐτῆς. τέλος δέ, ὡς ὁ Πάρις, ἐκ τῆς μάχης ἀποδράς εἰς τοὺς ἐκείνης κατεδύετο κόλπους· μᾶλλον δὲ ὁ μὲν Πάρις ἠττηθεὶς ἔφυγεν εἰς τὸν θάλαμον, Ἀντώνιος δὲ Κλεοπάτραν διώκων ἔφυγε καὶ προήκατο τὴν νίκην. 957

IV. Ἔτι Δημήτριος μὲν, οὐ κεκωλυμένον, ἀλλ' ἀπὸ Φιλίππου καὶ Ἀλεξάνδρου γεγονὸς ἐν ἔθει τοῖς Μακεδόνων βασιλεῦσιν, ἐγάμει γάμους πλείονας, ὥσπερ Λυσίμαχος καὶ Πτολεμαῖος, ἔσχε δὲ διὰ τιμῆς ὅσας ἔγημεν· Ἀντώνιος δὲ πρῶτον μὲν ὁμοῦ δύο γυναῖκας ἠγάγετο, πρᾶγμα μηδενὶ Ῥωμαίῳ τετολμημένον, ἔπειτα τὴν ἀστὴν καὶ δικαίως γαμηθεῖσαν ἐξήλασε τῇ ξένῃ καὶ μὴ κατὰ νόμους συνούση χαριζόμενος· ὅθεν ἐκ γάμου τῷ μὲν οὐθέν, τῷ δὲ τὰ μέγιστα τῶν κακῶν ἀπήνητησεν.

2 Ἀσέβημα μέντοι τοσοῦτον δι' ἀσέλγειαν οὐθέν ταῖς Ἀντωνίου πράξεσιν ὅσον ταῖς Δημητρίου πρόσεστιν. οἱ μὲν γὰρ ἱστορικοὶ φασὶ καὶ τῆς ἀκροπόλεως ὅλης εἶργεσθαι τὰς κύνας, διὰ τὸ τὴν μῖξιν ἐμφανῆ μάλιστα τοῦτο ποιεῖσθαι τὸ ζῶον· ὁ δὲ ἐν αὐτῷ τῷ Παρθενῶνι ταῖς τε πόρναις 3 συνῆν καὶ τῶν ἀστῶν κατεπόρνευσε πολλὰς· καὶ οὐ τις ἂν ἦκιστα τὰς τοιαύτας τρυφὰς καὶ ἀπολαύσεις οἶοιτο μετέχειν κακοῦ, τῆς ὠμότητος, τοῦτο ἔνεστι τῇ Δημητρίου φιληδονία, περιιδόντος, μᾶλλον δὲ ἀναγκάσαντος, οἰκτρῶς ἀποθανεῖν τὸν κάλλιστον καὶ σωφρονέστατον Ἀθηναίων, φεύγοντα τὸ καθυβρισθῆναι. συνελόντι δὲ εἰπεῖν,

COMPARISON OF DEMETRIUS AND ANTONY

drop from his hands great undertakings and necessary campaigns, only to roam about and play with her on the sea-shores by Canopus and Taphosiris. And at last, like Paris, he ran away from the battle and sank upon her bosom; although, more truly stated, Paris ran away to Helen's chamber after he had been defeated; but Antony ran away in chase of Cleopatra, and thereby threw away the victory.

IV. Further, Demetrius, in making several marriages, did not do what was prohibited, but what had been made customary for the kings of Macedonia by Philip and Alexander; he did just what Lysimachus and Ptolemy did, and held all his wives in honour. Antony, on the contrary, in marrying two wives at once, in the first place did what no Roman had ever dared to do; and in the second place, he drove away his Roman and lawfully wedded wife, in order to gratify the foreigner, with whom he was living contrary to law. Hence marriage brought no harm to Demetrius, but to Antony the greatest of his evils.

On the other hand, the lascivious practices of Antony are marked by no such sacrilege as are those of Demetrius. For historians tell us that dogs are excluded from the entire acropolis, because these animals couple without the least concealment; but the very Parthenon itself saw Demetrius cohabiting with harlots and debauching many Athenian women. And that vice which one would think least associated with such wanton enjoyments, namely, the vice of cruelty, this enters into Demetrius' pursuit of pleasure, since he suffered, or rather compelled, the lamentable death of the most beautiful and the most chaste of Athenians, who thus sought to escape his shameful treatment. In a word, Antony wronged Ἄντωνιος μὲν ἑαυτὸν διὰ τὴν ἀκρασίαν, Δημήτριος δὲ ἄλλους ἠδίκησε.

V. Πρὸς μέντοι γονεῖς ἄμεμπτον ἑαυτὸν εἰς ἅπαντα παρέσχεν ὁ Δημήτριος. Ἄντωνιος δὲ τὸν ἀδελφὸν τῆς μητρὸς ἐξέδωκεν ἐπὶ τῷ Κικέρωνᾳ ἀποκτεῖναι, πρᾶγμα καὶ καθ' ἑαυτὸ μιαρὸν καὶ ὠμόν, ὡς μόλις ἂν Ἄντωνιον ἐπ' αὐτῷ συγγνώμης τυχεῖν, εἰ σωτηρίας τοῦ θεοῦ μισθὸς ἦν ὁ Κικέρωνος θάνατος.

- 2 Ἄ τοῖνυν ἐπιώρκησαν ἀμφότεροι καὶ παρεσπόνδησαν, ὁ μὲν Ἀρτάβαζον συλλαβὼν, ὁ δὲ Ἀλέξανδρον ἀποκτεῖνας, Ἀντωνίῳ μὲν ἔχει τὴν πρόφασιν ὁμολογουμένην· ἀπελείφθη γὰρ ἐν Μήδοις ὑπὸ Ἀρταβάζου καὶ προεδόθη· Δημήτριον δὲ πολλοὶ λέγουσι ψευδεῖς αἰτίας, ἐφ' οἷς ἔδρασε, πλασάμενον κατηγορεῖν ἀδικηθέντα, οὐκ ἀδικήσαντα ἀμύνασθαι.

Πάλιν δὲ τῶν μὲν κατορθωμάτων αὐτουργὸς ὁ Δημήτριος γέγονε· καὶ τοῦναντίον ὁ Ἄντωνιος, ἐν οἷς οὐ παρῆν, καλλίστας καὶ μεγίστας διὰ τῶν στρατηγῶν ἀνῆρείτο νίκας.

VI. Ἐξέπεσον δὲ τῶν πραγμάτων ἀμφότεροι μὲν δι' αὐτούς, οὐ μὴν ὁμοίως, ἀλλ' ὁ μὲν ἐγκαταλειφθεὶς, ἀπέστησαν γὰρ αὐτοῦ Μακεδόνες, ὁ δὲ ἐγκαταλιπὼν, ἔφυγε γὰρ τοὺς ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ κινδυνεύοντας· ὥστε τοῦ μὲν ἔγκλημα εἶναι τὸ δυσμενεῖς οὕτω πρὸς αὐτὸν ἀπεργάσασθαι τοὺς μαχομένους, τοῦ δὲ τὸ παρεσκευασμένην εὐνοίαν τοιαύτην καὶ πίστιν ἐγκαταλιπεῖν.

- 2 Τὸν δὲ θάνατον οὐδετέρου μὲν ἔστιν ἐπαινέσαι, ψεκτὸς δὲ ὁ Δημητρίου μᾶλλον. αἰχμάλωτός τε γὰρ ὑπέμεινε γενέσθαι, καὶ καθειρχθεὶς ἠγάπησεν himself by his excesses, while Demetrius wronged others.

COMPARISON OF DEMETRIUS AND ANTONY

V. Again, towards his parents Demetrius was in all respects blameless; whereas Antony surrendered his mother's brother for the privilege of killing Cicero, a deed in itself so abominable and cruel that Antony would hardly have been forgiven had Cicero's death been the price of his uncle's safety.

Further, as regards violations of oaths and treaties by both, in the seizure of Artabazus by the one, and the killing of Alexander by the other, for Antony there is the excuse which men admit to be valid, namely, that he had been deserted in Media by Artabazus and betrayed; but Demetrius, as many say, invented false accusations, upon which he acted, and denounced one who had been wronged by him; the murder was not retaliation for wrongs done to him.

And again, Demetrius was himself the author of his successes; Antony, on the contrary, won his greatest and fairest victories through his generals, on fields where he was not present.

VI. But the downfall of both was due to themselves, though the manner of it differed. Demetrius was deserted by others, for the Macedonians went away from him; whereas Antony deserted others, for he ran away from those who were risking their lives for him. Demetrius may therefore be blamed for making his soldiers so hostile to him, and Antony for abandoning a goodwill and confidence which was so much in evidence.

As for their deaths, neither is to be commended, but that of Demetrius is the more to be censured. For he suffered himself to be taken prisoner, and

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἐπικερδᾶναι τριετίαν, οἴνῳ καὶ γαστρὶ καθάπερ τὰ ζῶα χειροήθης γενόμενος. Ἄντωνιος δὲ δειλῶς μὲν καὶ οἰκτρῶς καὶ ἀτίμως, οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ πρό γε τοῦ κύριον γενέσθαι τὸν πολέμιον τοῦ σώματος ἑαυτὸν ἐξήγαγεν.

COMPARISON OF DEMETRIUS AND ANTONY

was well content to add to his life three years of imprisonment. He was tamed, like a wild beast, by way of his belly and by wine. Whereas Antony took himself off,—in a cowardly, pitiful, and ignoble way, it is true, but at least before his enemy became master of his person.

PYRRHUS

ΠΥΡΡΟΣ

I. Θεσπρωτῶν καὶ Μολοσσῶν μετὰ τὸν κατα- 383 κλυσμὸν ἱστοροῦσι Φαέθοντα βασιλεύσαι πρῶ-τον, ἓνα τῶν μετὰ Πελασγοῦ παραγενομένων εἰς τὴν Ἑπειρον· ἔτιοι δὲ Δευκαλίωνα καὶ Πύρραν εἰσαμένους τὸ περὶ Δωδώνην ἱερὸν αὐτόθι κατοι-2 κεῖν ἐν Μολοσσοῖς. χρόνῳ δὲ ὕστερον Νεοπτόλεμος ὁ Ἀχιλλέως λαὸν ἀγαγὼν αὐτὸς τε τὴν χώραν κατέσχε καὶ διαδοχὴν βασιλέων ἀφ' αὐτοῦ κατέλιπε, Πυρρίδας ἐπικαλουμένους· καὶ γὰρ αὐτῷ Πύρρος ἦν παιδικὸν ἐπωνύμιον, καὶ τῶν γνησίων παιδῶν ἐκ Λανάσσης τῆς Κλεοδαίου τοῦ Ἑλλου γενομένων ἓνα Πύρρον ὠνόμασεν. ἐκ τούτου δὲ καὶ Ἀχιλλεὺς ἐν Ἑπείρῳ τιμὰς ἰσοθέ-ους ἔσχεν, Ἄσπετος ἐπιχωρίῳ φωνῇ προσα-3 γορευόμενος. μετὰ δὲ τοὺς πρώτους, τῶν διὰ μέσου βασιλέων ἐκβαρβαρωθέντων καὶ γενομένων τῇ τε δυνάμει καὶ τοῖς βίοις ἀμαυροτέρων, Θαρρῦπαν πρῶτον ἱστοροῦσιν Ἑλληνικοῖς ἔθεσι καὶ γράμμασι καὶ νόμοις φιλανθρώποις διακόσ-μήσαντα τὰς πόλεις ὀνομαστὸν γενέσθαι. Θαρρῦ-που δὲ Ἀλκέτας υἱὸς ἦν, Ἀλκέτα δ' Ἀρύβας, 4 Ἀρύβου δὲ καὶ Τρωάδος Αἰακίδης. οὗτος ἔγημε τὴν Μένωνος τοῦ Θεσσαλοῦ θυγατέρα Φθίαν, ἀνδρὸς εὐδοκίμου περὶ τὸν Λαμιακὸν πόλεμον γενομένου καὶ μέγιστον ἀξίωμα τῶν συμμάχων

PYRRHUS

I. HISTORIANS tell us that the first king of the Thesprotians and Molossians after the flood was Phaethon, one of those who came into Epeirus with Pelasgus ; but some say that Deucalion and Pyrrha established the sanctuary at Dodona and dwelt there among the Molossians. In after time, however, Neoptolemus the son of Achilles, bringing a people with him, got possession of the country for himself, and left a line of kings descending from him. These were called after him Pyrrhidæ ; for he had the surname of Pyrrhus in his boyhood, and of his legitimate children by Lanassa, the daughter of Cleodæus the son of Hyllus, one was named by him Pyrrhus. Consequently Achilles also obtained divine honours in Epeirus, under the native name of Aspetus. But the kings who followed in this line soon lapsed into barbarism and became quite obscure, both in their power and in their lives, and it was Tharrhyphas, historians say, who first introduced Greek customs and letters and regulated his cities by humane laws, thereby acquiring for himself a name. Alcetas was a son of Tharrhyphas, Arybas of Alcetas, and of Arybas and Troas, Aeacides. He married Phthia, the daughter of Menon the Thesalian, a man who won high repute at the time of the Lamian war¹ and acquired the highest authority

¹ 323-322 B.C. See the Demosthenes, xxvii. 1.

μετὰ Λεωσθένην λαβόντος. ἐκ δὲ τῆς Φθίας τῷ Αἰακίδῃ γίνονται θυγατέρες Δηιδάμεια καὶ Τρωάς, υἱὸς δὲ Πύρρος.

- II. Ἐπεὶ δὲ στασιάσαντες οἱ Μολοσσοὶ καὶ τὸν Αἰακίδην ἐκβαλόντες ἐπηγάγοντο τοὺς Νεοπτολέμου παῖδας, οἱ μὲν φίλοι τοῦ Αἰακίδου διεφθάρησαν καταληφθέντες, τὸν δὲ Πύρρον ἔτι νήπιον ὄντα καὶ ζητούμενον ὑπὸ τῶν πολεμίων ἐκκλέψαντες οἱ περὶ Ἄνδροκλείδην καὶ Ἀγγελὸν ἔφευγον, οἰκέτας ὀλίγους καὶ γυναῖα τιθηνούμενα
- 2 τὸ παιδίον ἀναγκαίως ἐφελκόμενοι. καὶ διὰ τοῦτο τῆς φυγῆς αὐτοῖς γινομένης δυσέργου καὶ βραδείας καταλαμβανόμενοι τὸ μὲν παιδίον ἐγχειρίζουσιν Ἄνδροκλείῳ καὶ Ἰππία καὶ Νεάνδρῳ, νεανίσκοις οὔσι πιστοῖς καὶ ῥωμαλέοις, ἀνὰ κράτος φεύγειν καὶ Μεγάρων ἔχεσθαι χωρίου Μακεδονικοῦ προστάξαντες, αὐτοὶ δὲ τὰ μὲν δεόμενοι, τὰ δὲ ἀπομαχόμενοι τοῖς διώκουσιν
- 3 ἐμποδῶν ἦσαν ἄχρι δειλῆς ὀψίας. ἀποτραπομένων δὲ μόλις ἐκείνων μετέθεον τοὺς τὸν Πύρρον κομίζοντας. ἤδη δὲ τοῦ ἡλίου καταδεδυκότος ἐγγὺς γενόμενοι τῆς ἐλπίδος ἐξαίφνης ἀπεκόπησαν, ἐντυχόντες τῷ παρὰ τὴν πόλιν παραρρέοντι ποταμῷ, χαλεπῷ μὲν ὀφθῆναι καὶ ἀγρίῳ, πειρωμένοις δὲ διαβαίνειν παντάπασιν ἀπορωτάτῳ. πολὺ τε γὰρ ἐξέπιπτε ρεῦμα καὶ θολερὸν ὄμβρων ἐπιγενομένων, καὶ τὸ σκότος ἐποίει πάντα
- 4 φοβερώτερα. καθ' αὐτοὺς μὲν οὖν ἀπέγνωσαν ἐπιχειρεῖν παιδίον φερόμενοι καὶ γυναῖα τὰ τρέφοντα τὸ παιδίον, αἰσθόμενοι δὲ τῶν ἐπιχωρίων τινὰς ἐν τῷ πέραν ἐστῶτας ἐδέοντο συλλαβέσθαι

PYRRHUS

among the confederates after Leosthenes. Phthia bore to Aeacides two daughters, Deïdameia and Troas, and a son, Pyrrhus.

II. But factions arose among the Molossians, and expelling Aeacides they brought into power the sons of Neoptolemus.¹ The friends of Aeacides were then seized and put to death, but Pyrrhus, who was still a babe and was sought for by the enemy, was stolen away by Androcleides and Angelus, who took to flight. However, they were obliged to take along with them a few servants, and women for the nursing of the child, and on this account their flight was laborious and slow and they were overtaken. They therefore entrusted the child to Androcleion, Hippias, and Neander, sturdy and trusty young men, with orders to fly with all their might and make for Megara, a Macedonian town; while they themselves, partly by entreaties and partly by fighting, stayed the course of the pursuers until late in the evening. After these had at last been driven back, they hastened to join the men who were carrying Pyrrhus. The sun had already set and they were near their hoped-for refuge, when suddenly they found themselves cut off from it by the river which flowed past the city. This had a forbidding and savage look, and when they tried to cross it, proved altogether impassable. For its current was greatly swollen and violent from rains that had fallen, and the darkness made everything more formidable. Accordingly, they gave up trying to cross unaided, since they were carrying the child and the women who cared for the child; and perceiving some of the people of the country standing on the further bank, they

A brother of Arybas, and therefore uncle of Aeacides.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

πρὸς τὴν διάβασιν, καὶ τὸν Πύρρον ἀνεδείκνυσαν βοῶντες καὶ ἰκετεύοντες. οἱ δὲ οὐ κατήκουον διὰ 5 τραχύτητα καὶ πάταγον τοῦ ρεύματος, ἀλλ' ἦν διατριβὴ τῶν μὲν βοῶντων, τῶν δὲ μὴ συνιέντων, ἄχρι τις ἐννοήσας καὶ περιελὼν δρυὸς φλοιὸν ἐνέγραψε πόρπη γράμματα φράζοντα τὴν τε χρεῖαν καὶ τὴν τύχην τοῦ παιδός, εἶτα λίθῳ τὸν φλοιὸν περιελίξας καὶ χρησάμενος οἶον ἔρματι τῆς βολῆς ἀφήκεν εἰς τὸ πέραν· ἔνιοι δὲ φασι 6 σαυνίῳ περιπήξαντας ἀκουτίσαι τὸν φλοιόν. ὡς δ' οὖν ἀνέγνωσαν οἱ πέραν τὰ γράμματα καὶ συνεῖδον τὴν ὀξύτητα τοῦ καιροῦ, κόπτοντες ξύλα καὶ πρὸς ἄλληλα συνδέοντες ἐπείραιοῦντο. καὶ κατὰ τύχην ὁ πρῶτος αὐτῶν περαιωθείς Ἀχιλλεὺς τοῦνομα τὸν Πύρρον ἐδέξατο· τοὺς δὲ ἄλλους ὡς ἔτυχον ἄλλοι διεκόμιζον.

III. Οὕτω δὲ σωθέντες καὶ φθάσαντες τὴν δίωξιν εἰς Ἰλλυριοὺς παρεγένοντο πρὸς Γλαυκίαν τὸν βασιλέα· καὶ καθεζόμενον εὐρόντες οἴκοι μετὰ τῆς γυναικὸς ἐν μέσῳ τὸ παιδίον ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς κατέθεσαν. ὁ δὲ ἦν ἐπὶ γνῶμης, Κάσανδρον δεδοικῶς ἐχθρὸν ὄντα τοῦ Αἰακίδου, καὶ σιωπῆν 2 εἶχε πολὺν χρόνον βουλευόμενος. ἐν τούτῳ δὲ ὁ Πύρρος ἀπ' αὐτομάτου προσερπύσας καὶ λαβόμενος τοῦ ἱματίου ταῖς χερσὶ καὶ προσεξαναστάς πρὸς τὰ γόνατα τοῦ Γλαυκίου γέλωτα πρῶτον, εἶτα οἰκτον παρέσχεν, ὥσπερ τις ἰκέτης ἐχό-350

PYRRHUS

besought their help in crossing, and showed them Pyrrhus, with loud cries and supplications. But the people on the other side could not hear them for the turbulence and splashing of the stream, and so there was delay, one party shouting what the other could not understand, until some one bethought himself of a better way. He stripped off a piece of bark from a tree and wrote thereon with a buckle-pin a message telling their need and the fortune of the child; then he wrapped the bark about a stone, which he used to give force to his cast, and threw it to the other side. Some say, however, that it was a javelin about which he wrapped the bark, and that he shot it across. Accordingly, when those on the other side had read the message and saw that no time was to be lost, they cut down trees, lashed them together, and made their way across. As chance would have it, the first of them to make his way across was named Achilles; he took Pyrrhus in his arms, and the rest of the fugitives were conveyed across by others in one way or another.

III. Having thus outstripped their pursuers and reached a place of safety, the fugitives betook themselves to Glaucias the king of the Illyrians; and finding him sitting at home with his wife, they put the little child down on the floor before them. Then the king began to reflect. He was in fear of Cassander, who was an enemy of Aeacides, and held his peace a long time as he took counsel with himself. Meanwhile Pyrrhus, of his own accord, crept along the floor, clutched the king's robe, and pulled himself on to his feet at the knees of Glaucias, who was moved at first to laughter, then to pity, as he saw the child clinging to his knees and weeping like a formal

- μενος καὶ δακρύων. ἔνιοι δὲ φασιν οὐ τῷ Γλαυκίᾳ προσπεσεῖν αὐτόν, ἀλλὰ βωμοῦ θεῶν προσαψάμενον ἐστάναι πρὸς αὐτὸν περιβαλόντα τὰς χεῖρας, καὶ τὸ πρᾶγμα τῷ Γλαυκίᾳ θεῖον 3 φανῆναι. διὸ καὶ παραυτίκα τὸν Πύρρον ἐνεχείρισε τῇ γυναικί, κελεύσας ἅμα τοῖς τέκνοις τρέφεσθαι, καὶ μικρὸν ὕστερον ἐξαιτουμένων τῶν πολεμίων, Κασάνδρου δὲ καὶ διακόσια τάλαντα δίδοντας, οὐκ ἐξέδωκεν, ἀλλὰ καὶ γενόμενον δυο-καίδεκα ἐτῶν καταγαγὼν εἰς τὴν Ἑπειρον μετὰ δυνάμεως βασιλέα κατέστησεν.
- 4 Ἦν δὲ ὁ Πύρρος τῇ μὲν ἰδέᾳ τοῦ προσώπου φοβερώτερον ἔχων ἢ σεμνότερον τὸ βασιλικόν, πολλοὺς δὲ ὀδόντας οὐκ εἶχεν, ἀλλ' ἐν ὀστέον συνεχῆς ἦν ἄνωθεν, οἶον λεπταῖς ἀμυχαῖς τὰς διαφύας ὑπογεγραμμένον τῶν ὀδόντων. τοῖς δὲ σπληνιῶσιν ἐδόκει βοηθεῖν, ἀλεκτρυόνα θύων λευκόν, ὑπτίῳν τε κατακειμένων τῷ δεξιῷ ποδὶ πιέζων ἀτρέμα τὸ σπλάγχχνον. οὐδεὶς δὲ ἦν πένης οὐδὲ ἄδοξος οὕτως ὥστε μὴ τυχεῖν τῆς 5 ἰατρείας δεηθεῖς. ἐλάμβανε δὲ καὶ τὸν ἀλε-κτρυόνα θύσας, καὶ τὸ γέρας τοῦτο ἥδιστον ἦν αὐτῷ. λέγεται δὲ τοῦ ποδὸς ἐκείνου τὸν μείζονα δάκτυλον ἔχειν δύναμιν θεῖαν, ὥστε μετὰ τὴν τελευτὴν τοῦ λοιποῦ σώματος κατακαέντος ἀπαθῆ καὶ ἄθικτον ὑπὸ τοῦ πυρὸς εὔρεθῆναι.
 ταῦτα μὲν οὖν ὕστερον.

IV. Γενομένῳ δὲ περὶ ἑπτακαίδεκα ἔτη καὶ δοκοῦντι τὴν ἀρχὴν ἔχειν βεβαίως ἀποδημία τις

PYRRHUS

suppliant. Some say, however, that the child did not supplicate Glaucias, but caught hold of an altar of the gods and stood there with his arms thrown round it, and that Glaucias thought this a sign from Heaven. Therefore he at once put Pyrrhus in the arms of his wife, bidding her rear him along with their children; and a little while after, when the child's enemies demanded his surrender, and Cassander offered two hundred talents for him, Glaucias would not give him up, but after he had reached the age of twelve years, actually conducted him back into Epeirus with an armed force and set him upon the throne there.

In the aspect of his countenance Pyrrhus had more of the terror than of the majesty of kingly power. He had not many teeth, but his upper jaw was one continuous bone, on which the usual intervals between the teeth were indicated by slight depressions. People of a splenetic habit believed that he cured their ailment; he would sacrifice a white cock, and, while the patient lay flat upon his back, would press gently with his right foot against the spleen. Nor was any one so obscure or poor as not to get this healing service from him if he asked it. The king would also accept the cock after he had sacrificed it, and this honorarium was most pleasing to him. It is said, further, that the great toe of his right foot had a divine virtue, so that after the rest of his body had been consumed, this was found to be untouched and unharmed by the fire. These things, however, belong to a later period.

IV. When he had reached the age of seventeen years¹ and was thought to be firmly seated on his

¹ In 302 B.C.

συνέτυχε, τῶν Γλαυκίου παίδων ἑνός, οἷς συνετέ-θραπτο, γυναῖκα λαμβάνοντος. πάλιν οὖν οἱ Μολοττοὶ συστάντες ἐξέβαλον τοὺς φίλους αὐτοῦ καὶ τὰ χρήματα διήρπασαν καὶ Νεοπτολέμω 2 παρέδωκαν ἑαυτούς. ὁ δὲ Πύρρος οὕτω τὴν ἀρχὴν ἀποβαλὼν καὶ γενόμενος πάντων ἔρημος Δημητρίῳ τῷ Ἀντιγόνου προσέμιξεν ἑαυτόν, ἔχοντι τὴν ἀδελφὴν αὐτοῦ Δηϊδάμειαν, ἣν ἔτι
 μὲν οὖσαν κόρην ὠνόμαζον Ἀλεξάνδρου τοῦ Ῥωξάνης γυναῖκα, τῶν δὲ κατ' ἐκείνους δυστυχη-θέντων ὄραν ἔχουσαν αὐτὴν ἔγχευεν ὁ Δημήτριος.
 3 τῆς δὲ μεγάλης μάχης ἦν ἐν Ἰψῷ πάντες οἱ βασιλεῖς ἠγωνίσαντο, παρῶν ὁ Πύρρος τοῖς περὶ Δημήτριον συμμετείχε μειράκιον ὧν ἔτι, καὶ τοὺς καθ' ἑαυτὸν ἐτρέψατο, καὶ διεφάνη λαμπρὸς ἐν 385 τοῖς μαχομένοις. πταίσαντα δὲ Δημήτριον οὐκ ἐγκατέλιπεν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὰς ἐν τῇ Ἑλλάδι πόλεις πιστευθεὶς διεφύλαξε, καὶ συμβάσεων αὐτῷ γενομένων πρὸς Πτολεμαῖον ἔπλευσεν εἰς Αἴγυ-4 πτον ὀμηρεύσων. καὶ Πτολεμαῖω μὲν ἐν τε θήραις καὶ γυμνασίοις ἐπίδειξιν ἀλκῆς καὶ καρ-τερίας παρείχε, τὴν δὲ Βερενίκην ὀρῶν μέγιστον δυναμένην καὶ πρωτεύουσαν ἀρετῇ καὶ φρονήσει τῶν Πτολεμαίου γυναικῶν, ἐθεράπευε μάλιστα· καὶ δεινὸς ὧν ὑπελθεῖν ἐπ' ὠφελεία τοὺς κρείτ-τουνας, ὥσπερ ὑπερόπτης τῶν ταπεινοτέρων, κόσμιος δὲ καὶ σώφρων περὶ δίαιταν, ἐκ πολλῶν throne, it came to pass that he went on a journey, when one of the sons of Glaucias, with whom he had been reared, was married. Once more, then, the Molossians banded together, drove out his friends, plundered his property, and put themselves under Neoptolemus.¹ Pyrrhus, thus stripped of his realm and rendered destitute of all things, joined himself to Demetrius the son of Antigonus, who had his sister Deïdameia to wife. She, while she was still a girl, had been nominally given in marriage to Alexander, Roxana's son; but their affairs miscarried, and when she was of age Demetrius married her.² In the great battle which all the kings fought at Ipsus³ Pyrrhus was present, and took part with Demetrius, though still a stripling. He routed the enemy opposed to him, and made a brilliant display of valour among the combatants. Moreover, though Demetrius lost the day, Pyrrhus did not abandon him, but kept guard over his cities in Greece which were entrusted to him,⁴ and when Demetrius made peace with Ptolemy, sailed to Egypt as hostage for him. Here, both in hunting and in bodily exercises, he gave Ptolemy proof of his prowess and endurance, and seeing that among the wives of Ptolemy it was Berenicé who had the greatest influence and was foremost in virtue and understanding, he paid especial court to her. He was adept at turning to his own advantage the favour of his superiors, just as he was inclined to look down upon his inferiors, and since he was orderly and restrained in his ways of living, he was selected from among many young

PYRRHUS

¹ A grandson of the Neoptolemus mentioned in chapter ii. 1.

² See the Demetrius, xxv. 2.

³ In 301 B.C. - Cf. the Demetrius, chapters xxviii. f.

⁴ Cf. the Demetrius, xxxi. 2.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

νέων ἡγεμονικῶν προεκρίθη λαβεῖν Ἀντιγόνην γυναῖκα τῶν Βερενίκης θυγατέρων, ἣν ἔσχευ ἕκ Φιλίππου πρὶν ἢ Πτολεμαίῳ συνοικεῖν.

V. Μετὰ δὲ τὸν γάμον τοῦτον ἔτι μᾶλλον εὐδοκιμῶν, καὶ γυναικὸς ἀγαθῆς τῆς Ἀντιγόνης περὶ αὐτὸν οὐσης, διεπράξατο χρήματα λαβῶν καὶ δύναμιν εἰς Ἡπειρον ἐπὶ τὴν βασιλείαν ἀποσταλῆναι. καὶ παρῆν οὐκ ἄκουσι τοῖς πολλοῖς¹ διὰ τὴν ἀπέχθειαν τοῦ Νεοπτολέμου χαλεπῶς καὶ βιαίως ἄρχοντος. πλὴν ἀλλὰ δείσας μὴ πρὸς τινα τῶν ἄλλων βασιλέων ὁ Νεοπτόλεμος τράπηται, διαλύσεις ἔθετο καὶ φιλίαν πρὸς αὐτὸν ἐπὶ κοινωνία τῆς ἀρχῆς.

2 χρόνου δὲ προϊόντος ἦσαν οἱ παροξύνοντες αὐτοὺς κρύφα καὶ κατ' ἀλλήλων ἐμποιοῦντες ὑποψίας. ἡ μέντοι μάλιστα κινήσασα τὸν Πύρρον αἰτία λέγεται τοιαύτην ἀρχὴν λαβεῖν.

Εἰώθεισαν οἱ βασιλεῖς ἐν Πασσαρῶνι, χωρὶς τῆς Μολοττίδος, Ἀρείῳ Διὶ θύσαντες ὀρκωμοτεῖν τοῖς Ἡπειρώταις καὶ ὀρκίζειν, αὐτοὶ μὲν ἄρξειν κατὰ τοὺς νόμους, ἐκείνους δὲ τὴν βασιλείαν

3 διαφυλάξειν κατὰ τοὺς νόμους. ταῦτ' οὖν ἐδράτο ἀμφοτέρων τῶν βασιλέων παρόντων, καὶ συνῆσαν ἀλλήλοισι μετὰ τῶν φίλων, δῶρα πολλὰ τὰ μὲν δίδόντες, τὰ δὲ λαμβάνοντες. ἐνταῦθα δὴ Γέλων, ἀνὴρ πιστὸς Νεοπτολέμῳ, δεξιωσάμενος φιλοφρόνως τὸν Πύρρον ἐδωρήσατο βοῶν ἀροτήρων δυσὶ ζεύγεσι. ταῦτα Μυρτίλος ὁ ἐπὶ τοῦ οἴνου παρὼν ἤτει τὸν Πύρρον· ἐκείνου δὲ μὴ δίδόντος, ἀλλ' ἐτέρῳ, χαλεπῶς ἐνεγκῶν ὁ Μυρτίλος οὐκ

4 ἔλαθε τὸν Γέλωνα. καλέσας οὖν αὐτὸν ἐπὶ

¹ τοῖς πολλοῖς with Coraës and Blass : πολλοῖς.

PYRRHUS

princes as a husband for Antigone, one of the daughters of Berenicé, whom she had by Philip¹ before her marriage with Ptolemy.

V. After this marriage he was held in still greater esteem, and since Antigone was an excellent wife to him, he brought it to pass that he was sent into Epeirus with money and an army to regain his kingdom. Most people there were glad to see him come, owing to their hatred of Neoptolemus, who was a stern and arbitrary ruler. However, fearing lest Neoptolemus should have recourse to one of the other kings, he came to terms and made friendship with him on the basis of a joint exercise of the royal power. But as time went on there were people who secretly exasperated them against one another and filled them with mutual suspicions. The chief ground, however, for action on the part of Pyrrhus is said to have had its origin as follows.

It was customary for the kings, after sacrificing to Zeus Areius at Passaro, a place in the Molossian land, to exchange solemn oaths with the Epeirots, the kings swearing to rule according to the laws, and the people to maintain the kingdom according to the laws. Accordingly, this was now done; both the kings were present, and associated with one another, together with their friends, and many gifts were interchanged. Here Gelon, a man devoted to Neoptolemus, greeted Pyrrhus in a friendly manner and made him a present of two yoke of oxen for ploughing. Pyrrhus was asked for these by Myrtilus, his cup-bearer; and when Pyrrhus would not give them to him, but gave them to another, Myrtilus was deeply resentful. This did not escape the notice of δείπνον, ὡς δέ φασιν ἔνιοι, καὶ χρησάμενος παρ' οἴκων ὄραν ἔχοντι, λόγους προσήνεγκε παρακαλῶν ἐλέσθαι τὰ τοῦ Νεοπτολέμου καὶ φαρμάκοις διαφθεῖραι τὸν Πύρρον. ὁ δὲ Μυρτίλος ἐδέξατο μὲν τὴν πείραν ὡς ἐπαινῶν καὶ συμπεπεισμένος, ἐμήνυσε δὲ τῷ Πύρρῳ· καὶ κελεύσαντος ἐκείνου τὸν ἀρχιοινοχόον Ἀλεξικράτην τῷ Γέλωνι συνέστησεν, ὡς δὴ μεθέξοντα τῆς πράξεως αὐτοῖς· ἐβούλετο γὰρ ἐν πλείοσιν ὁ Πύρρος τὸν ἔλεγχον γενέσθαι τοῦ ἀδικήματος.

¹ An obscure Macedonian.

5 οὕτω δὲ τοῦ Γέλωνος ἐξαπατωμένου συνεξαπατώμενος ὁ Νεοπτόλεμος, καὶ τὴν ἐπιβουλὴν ὁδῶ βαδίζειν οἴομενος οὐ κατείχεν, ἀλλ' ὑπὸ χαρᾶς ἐξέφερε πρὸς τοὺς φίλους. καὶ ποτε κωμάσας παρὰ τὴν ἀδελφὴν Καδμείαν ἐχρήτο λαλιᾷ περὶ τούτων, οὐδένα συνακούειν οἴομενος· οὐδεὶς γὰρ ἦν πλησίον ἄλλος ἢ Φαιναρέτη γυνὴ Σάμωνος τοῦ τὰ ποίμνια καὶ τὰ βουκόλια τῷ Νεοπτολέμῳ διοικούντος, αὕτη δὲ ἀπεστραμμένη πρὸς τὸν τοῖ-

6 χον¹ ἐπὶ κλίνης τινὸς ἐδόκει καθεύδειν. συνήκοος δὲ πάντων γενομένη καὶ λαθοῦσα μεθ' ἡμέραν ἦκε πρὸς Ἀντιγόνην τὴν Πύρρου γυναῖκα, καὶ πάντα κατείπεν ὅσα τοῦ Νεοπτολέμου πρὸς τὴν ἀδελφὴν ἤκουσε λέγοντος. πυθόμενος δὲ ὁ Πύρρος ἐκεῖ μὲν ἡσυχίαν ἤγειν, ἐν δὲ θυσίᾳ καλέσας ἐπὶ

7 δείπνον τὸν Νεοπτόλεμον ἀπέκτεινεν, αἰσθόμενος τῶν Ἡπειρωτῶν τοὺς κρατίστους προσέχοντας αὐτῷ, καὶ παρακελευομένους ἀπαλλαγῆναι τοῦ Νεοπτολέμου, καὶ μὴ μερίδα μικρὰν ἔχοντα 386 βασιλείας ἀγαπᾶν, ἀλλὰ τῇ φύσει χρήσασθαι

¹ τὸν τοῖχον with Coraës, Blass, and C: τοῖχον.

PYRRHUS

Gelon, who therefore invited Myrtilus to supper, and even, as some say, enjoyed his youthful beauty as they drank ; then he reasoned with him and urged him to become an adherent of Neoptolemus and to destroy Pyrrhus by poison. Myrtilus accepted the proposal, pretending to approve of it and to be persuaded, but informed Pyrrhus. He also, by the king's orders, presented Alexicrates, the king's chief cup-bearer, to Gelon, assuring him that he would take part in their enterprise; for Pyrrhus wished to have several persons who could testify to the intended crime. Thus Gelon was thoroughly deceived, and Neoptolemus as well, and as thoroughly, who, supposing that the plot was duly progressing, could not keep it to himself, but in his joy would talk about it to his friends. Once, in particular, after a revel at the house of his sister Cadmeia, he fell to prattling about the matter, supposing that no one would hear the conversation but themselves; for no one else was near except Phaenarete, the wife of Samon, a man who managed the flocks and herds of Neoptolemus, and Phaenarete was lying on a couch with her face to the wall and seemed to be asleep. But she heard everything, and next day went unobserved to Antigone the wife of Pyrrhus, and told her all that she had heard Neoptolemus say to his sister. When Pyrrhus learned of it, he kept quiet for a time, but on a day of sacrifice invited Neoptolemus to supper and killed him. For he was aware that the chief men among the Epeirots were devoted to himself and were eager to see him rid himself of Neoptolemus; also that they wished him not to content himself with having a small share of the kingdom, but to follow his natural bent and μειζόνων πραγμάτων ἀντιλαμβανόμενον, καὶ τινος ὑποψίας ἅμα προσγενομένης τὸν Νεοπτόλεμον φθίαςας¹ ἀνελεῖν.

VI. Μεμνημένος δὲ Βερενίκης καὶ Πτολεμαίου παιδίον μὲν αὐτῷ γενόμενον ἐξ Ἀντιγόνης Πτολεμαῖον ὠνόμασεν, οἰκίσας δὲ πόλιν ἐν τῇ χερρονήσῳ τῆς Ἠπείρου Βερονικίδα προσηγόρευσεν. ἐκ δὲ τούτου πολλὰ μὲν περινοῶν καὶ μεγάλα τῇ γνώμῃ, ταῖς δὲ ἐλπίσι μάλιστα καὶ πρῶτον ἀντιλαμβανόμενος τῶν πλησίον, εὗρεν ἐμφῦναι τοῖς Μακεδόνων πράγμασιν ἐκ τοιαῦσδέ τινος προφάσεως.

- 2 Τῶν Κασάνδρου παίδων ὁ πρεσβύτερος Ἀντίπατρος τὴν τε μητέρα Θεσσαλονίκην ἀνείλε καὶ τὸν ἀδελφὸν Ἀλέξανδρον ἤλαυνεν. ὁ δὲ πρὸς τε Δημήτριον ἔπεμψε δεόμενος βοηθεῖν καὶ Πύρρον ἐκάλει. Δημητρίου δὲ ὑπὸ ἀσχολιῶν βραδύνοντος ἐπελθὼν ὁ Πύρρος ἤτησε μισθὸν τῆς συμμαχίας τὴν τε Στυμφαίαν καὶ τὴν Παραναίαν τῆς Μακεδονίας, καὶ τῶν ἐπικτήτων ἐθνῶν Ἀμβρακίαν, Ἀκαρνανίαν, Ἀμφιλοχίαν.
- 3 προεμένου δὲ τοῦ νεανίσκου ταῦτα μὲν αὐτὸς εἶχε φρουραῖς καταλαβὼν, τὰ δὲ λοιπὰ κτώμενος ἐκείνῳ περιέκοπτε τὸν Ἀντίπατρον. Λυσίμαχος δὲ ὁ βασιλεὺς αὐτὸς μὲν ἦν ἐν ἀσχολίαις προθυμύμενος Ἀντιπάτρῳ βοηθεῖν, εἰδὼς δὲ τὸν Πύρρον οὐδὲν ἀχαριστεῖν οὐδὲ ἀρνεῖσθαι Πτολεμαίῳ βουλούμενον ἔπεμψε πλαστὰ γράμματα πρὸς αὐτόν, ὡς Πτολεμαίου κελεύοντος ἀπαλλάττεσθαι τῆς στρατείας τριακόσια τάλαντα παρὰ τοῦ
- 4 Ἀντιπάτρου λαβόντα. λύσας δὲ τὴν ἐπιστολὴν

¹ φθίαςας Coraës and Blass, with most MSS.: φθάσαι.

PYRRHUS

attempt greater things, and, now that some suspicion had added its weight to other motives for the deed, to anticipate Neoptolemus by taking him off first.

VI. And now, in honour of Berenicé and Ptolemy, he gave the name of Ptolemy to his infant son by Antigone, and called the city which he had built on the peninsula of Epeirus, Berenicis. After this, he began to revolve many large projects in his mind; but his hopes were fixed first and more especially on undertakings close at hand, and he found a way to take direct part in Macedonian affairs, on grounds something like the following.

Of Cassander's sons, the elder, Antipater, killed his mother Thessalonicé and drove away his brother Alexander.¹ Alexander sent to Demetrius begging for help, and also called upon Pyrrhus. Demetrius was delayed by matters that he had in hand; but Pyrrhus came, and demanded as a reward for his alliance Stymphaea and Parauaea in Macedonia, and, of the countries won by the allies, Ambracia, Acarnania, and Amphilochia. The youthful Alexander gave way to his demands, and Pyrrhus took possession of these countries and held them for himself with garrisons; he also proceeded to strip from Antipater the remaining parts of his kingdom and turn them over to Alexander. Now Lysimachus the king, who was eager to give aid to Antipater, was fully occupied himself and could not come in person; but knowing that Pyrrhus was desirous to do Ptolemy every favour and refuse him nothing, he sent a forged letter to him which stated that Ptolemy urged him to give up his expedition on payment of three hundred talents from Antipater. As soon as Pyrrhus opened the

¹ Cf. the Demetrius, xxxvi. 1 f.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ὁ Πύρρος εὐθύς τὸ ραδιούργημα τοῦ Λυσιμάχου συνείδεν· οὐδὲ γὰρ ἦν ἡ συνήθης γεγραμμένη προσαγόρευσις, “Ὁ πατὴρ τῷ υἱῷ χαίρειν” ἀλλὰ, “Βασιλεὺς Πτολεμαῖος βασιλεῖ Πύρρῳ χαίρειν.” λαιδορήσας δὲ τὸν Λυσίμαχον ὅμως ἐποιεῖτο τὴν εἰρήνην, καὶ συνέσταν ὡς κατὰ 5 σφαγίων ὀρκωμοτήσονται. ἐπεὶ δὲ ταύρου καὶ κάπρου καὶ κριοῦ προσαχθέντος ὁ κριὸς αὐτομάτως ἀπέθανε, τοῖς μὲν ἄλλοις γελᾶν ἐπήει, τὸν δὲ Πύρρον ὁ μάντις Θεόδοτος ὁμόσαι διεκώλυσε, φήσας τὸ δαιμόνιον ἐνὶ προσημαίνειν τῶν τριῶν βασιλέων θάνατον. ὁ μὲν οὖν Πύρρος οὕτως ἀπέστη τῆς εἰρήνης.

VII. Τῷ δὲ Ἀλεξάνδρῳ τῶν πραγμάτων ἤδη κατάστασιν ἐχόντων ὅμως ὁ Δημήτριος ἀφίκετο· καὶ δῆλος μὲν ἦν εὐθύς ἦκων μὴ δεομένῳ, καὶ φόβον παρεῖχεν, ὀλίγας δ' ἡμέρας συγγενόμενοι δι' ἀπιστίας ἐπεβούλευσαν ἀλλήλοισι ἀμφοτέροι. καιρῷ δὲ χρησάμενος καὶ φθάσας ἀποκτίνουσιν ὁ Δημήτριος τὸ μεράκιον, καὶ βασιλεὺς ἀνηγορεύθη
 2 Μακεδονίας. ἦν μὲν οὖν καὶ πρότερον αὐτῷ πρὸς τὸν Πύρρον ἐγκλήματα, καὶ καταδρομαὶ τῆς Θεσσαλίας ἐγεγόνεισαν ὑπ' ἐκείνου, καὶ τὸ σύμφυτον νόσημα ταῖς δυναστείαις, ἡ πλεονεξία, τὴν γειτνίασιν αὐτοῖς ἐπίφοβον καὶ ἄπιστον παρεῖχε, καὶ μᾶλλον ἔτι μετὰ τὴν τῆς Δηϊδαμείας τελευτήν. ἐπεὶ δὲ καὶ κατασχόντες ἀμφοτέροι
 3 ἐλάμβανε προφάσεις ἢ διαφορά, Δημήτριος μὲν letter he perceived the fraud of Lysimachus; for the letter did not have the customary address, "The father, to the son, health and happiness," but instead, "King Ptolemy, to King Pyrrhus, health and happiness." Pyrrhus reviled Lysimachus for the fraud, but nevertheless made the desired peace, and they all met to ratify it with sacrificial oaths. However, after a bull, a boar, and a ram had been brought up for sacrifice, of its own accord the ram fell down dead. The rest of the spectators were moved to laughter, but Theodotus the seer prevented Pyrrhus from taking the oath by declaring that Heaven thus betokened in advance the death of one of the three kings. In this way, then, Pyrrhus was led to renounce the peace.

PYRRHUS

VII. Thus Alexander's affairs were already settled with the help of Pyrrhus, but nevertheless Demetrius came to him; and as soon as he arrived it was plain that he was not wanted, and he inspired only fear; and after they had been together a few days their mutual distrust led them to plot against each other. But Demetrius, taking advantage of his opportunity, got beforehand with the young prince and slew him, and was proclaimed king of Macedonia.¹ Now, even before this there had been differences between him and Pyrrhus, and Pyrrhus had overrun Thessaly;² and greed for power, the natural disease of dynasties, made them formidable and suspicious neighbours, and all the more after the death of Deidameia. And now that both of them had occupied part of Macedonia, they came into collision, and their quarrel was furnished with stronger grounds. Demetrius there-

¹ Cf. the Demetrius, xxxvi. 2-6, xxxvii.

² Cf. the Demetrius, xl. i ἐπ' Αἰτωλοὺς στρατευσάμενος καὶ κρατήσας, Πάνταυχον αὐτόθι μετὰ πολλῆς δυνάμεως καταλιπὼν αὐτὸς ἐβάδιζεν ἐπὶ Πύρρον, καὶ Πύρρος ἐπ' ἐκείνον, ὡς ἦσθετο. γενομένης δὲ διαμαρτίας καθ' ὁδὸν ἀλλήλους παρήλλαξαν· καὶ Δημήτριος μὲν ἐμβαλὼν εἰς Ἑπειρον ἐλεηλάτει, Πύρρος δὲ

4 Πανταύχῳ περιπεσῶν εἰς μάχην κατέστη. καὶ τῶν στρατιωτῶν συμπεσόντων δεινὸς ἦν καὶ μέγας ἀγὼν, μάλιστα κατὰ τοὺς ἡγεμόνας. ὃ τε γὰρ Πάνταυχος ἀνδρεία καὶ χειρὶ καὶ ῥώμῃ σώματος ἄριστος ὢν ὁμολογουμένως τῶν περὶ Δημήτριον στρατηγῶν, καὶ θάρσος ἔχων καὶ φρόνημα, προῦκαλεῖτο τὸν Πύρρον εἰς χεῖρας, ὃ

5 Πάνταυχον. ἦν δὲ δορατισμὸς τὸ πρῶτον, εἶτα 387 ἐν χεροῖν γενομένοι μετὰ τέχνης ἅμα καὶ βίας ἐχρῶντο τοῖς ξίφεσι. λαβὼν δὲ ὁ Πύρρος ἐν τραῦμα, δούς δὲ δύο, τὸ μὲν εἰς τὸν μηρὸν, τὸ δὲ παρὰ τὸν τράχηλον, ἐτρέψατο καὶ κατέβαλε τὸν Πάνταυχον· οὐ μὴν ἀνείλεν, ἀνηρπάγη γὰρ ὑπὸ τῶν φίλων. οἱ δὲ Ἑπειῶται τῇ νικῇ τοῦ βασιλέως ἐπαρθέντες καὶ θαυμάσαντες τὴν ἀρετὴν ἐβιάσαντο καὶ διέκοψαν τὴν φάλαγγα τῶν Μακεδόνων, καὶ φεύγοντας διώκοντες ἀπέκτεινάν τε πολλοὺς καὶ πεντακισχιλίους ζῶντας εἶλον.

VIII. Ὁ δὲ ἀγὼν οὗτος οὐ τοσοῦτον ὀργῆς ὢν ἔπαθον οὐδὲ μίσους ἐνέπλησε τοὺς Μακεδόνας πρὸς τὸν Πύρρον, ὅσην δόξαν αὐτοῦ καὶ θαῦμα fore made an expedition against the Aetolians and conquered them, and then, leaving Pantauchus there with a large force, he himself moved against Pyrrhus, and Pyrrhus, when he heard of it, against him. Owing to a mistake in the way, however, they passed by one another, and Demetrius, throwing his forces into Epeirus, plundered the country, while Pyrrhus, encountering Pantauchus, joined battle with him.¹ There was a sharp and terrible conflict between the soldiers who engaged, and especially also between the leaders. For Pantauchus, who was confessedly the best of the generals of Demetrius for bravery, dexterity, and vigour of body, and had both courage and a lofty spirit, challenged Pyrrhus to a hand-to-hand combat; and Pyrrhus, who yielded to none of the kings in daring and prowess, and wished that the glory of Achilles should belong to him by right of valour rather than of blood alone, advanced through the foremost fighters to confront Pantauchus. At first they hurled their spears, then, coming to close quarters, they plied their swords with might and skill. Pyrrhus got one wound, but gave Pantauchus two, one in the thigh, and one along the neck, and put him to flight and overthrew him; he did not kill him, however, for his friends haled him away. Then the Epeirots, exalted by the victory of their king and admiring his valour, overwhelmed and cut to pieces the phalanx of the Macedonians, pursued them as they fled, slew many of them, and took five thousand of them alive.²

PYRRHUS

VIII. This conflict did not fill the Macedonians with wrath and hate towards Pyrrhus for their losses, rather it led those who beheld his exploits

¹ Cf. the Demetrius, xli. 1 f. ² Cf. the Demetrius, xli. 2.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

τῆς ἀρετῆς καὶ λόγον ἐνειργάσατο τοῖς ἰδοῦσι τὰ ἔργα καὶ συνενεχθεῖσι κατὰ τὴν μάχην. καὶ γὰρ ὄψιν ᾤοντο καὶ τάχος εἰκέναι καὶ κίνημα τοῖς Ἀλεξάνδρου, καὶ τῆς φορᾶς ἐκείνου καὶ βίας παρὰ τοὺς ἀγῶνας ἐν τούτῳ σκιάς τινας ὁρᾶσθαι καὶ μιμήματα, τῶν μὲν ἄλλων βασιλέων ἐν πορφύραις καὶ δορυφόροις καὶ κλίσει τραχήλου καὶ τῷ μείζον διαλέγεσθαι, μόνου δὲ Πύρρου τοῖς ὅπλοις καὶ ταῖς χερσὶν ἐπιδεικνυμένου τὸν Ἀλέξανδρον.

- 2 Τῆς δὲ περὶ τάξεις καὶ στρατηγίας ἐπιστήμης αὐτοῦ καὶ δεινότητος ἔνεστι δείγματα λαβεῖν ἐκ τῶν γραμμάτων ἃ περὶ τούτων ἀπόδελοιπε. λέγεται δὲ καὶ Ἀντίγονος ἐρωτηθεὶς τίς ἄριστος τῶν στρατηγῶν, φάναι, “ Πύρρος, ἂν γηράσῃ,” περὶ τῶν καθ’ αὐτὸν οὕτως ἀποφηνάμενος μόνου. Ἀννίβας δὲ συμπάντων ἀπέφηνε τῶν στρατηγῶν πρῶτον μὲν ἐμπειρία καὶ δεινότητι Πύρρον, Σκηπίωνα δὲ δεύτερον, ἑαυτὸν δὲ τρίτον, ὡς ἐν
- 3 τοῖς περὶ Σκηπίωνος γέγραπται. καὶ ὅλως τοῦτο μελετῶν ἔοικε καὶ φιλοσοφῶν αἰεὶ διατελεῖν ὁ Πύρρος, ὡς μαθημάτων βασιλικώτατον, τὰς δὲ ἄλλας γλαφυρίας ἐν οὐδενὶ λόγῳ τίθεσθαι. λέγεται γὰρ ὡς ἐρωτηθεὶς ἐν τινι πότῳ, πότερον αὐτῷ φαίνεται Πύθων ἀυλητῆς ἀμείνων ἢ Καφισίας, εἰπεῖν ὅτι Πολυσπέρχων στρατηγός, ὡς ταῦτα τῷ βασιλεῖ ζητεῖν υἴονα καὶ γινώσκειν προσήκον.

PYRRHUS

and engaged him in the battle to esteem him highly and admire his bravery and talk much about him. For they likened his aspect and his swiftness and all his motions to those of the great Alexander, and thought they saw in him shadows, as it were, and imitations of that leader's impetuosity and might in conflicts.¹ The other kings, they said, represented Alexander with their purple robes, their body-guards, the inclination of their necks,² and their louder tones in conversation; but Pyrrhus, and Pyrrhus alone, in arms and action.

Of his knowledge and ability in the field of military tactics and leadership one may get proofs from the writings on these subjects which he left. It is said also that Antigonus, when asked who was the best general, replied, "Pyrrhus, if he lives to be old." This verdict of Antigonus applied only to his contemporaries. Hannibal, however, declared that the foremost of all generals in experience and ability was Pyrrhus, that Scipio was second, and he himself third, as I have written in my Life of Scipio.³ And in a word, Pyrrhus would seem to have been always and continually studying and meditating upon this one subject, regarding it as the most kingly branch of learning; the rest he regarded as mere accomplishments and held them in no esteem. For instance, we are told that when he was asked at a drinking-party whether he thought Python or Caphisias the better flute-player, he replied that Polysperchon was a good general, implying that it became a king to investigate and understand such matters only.

¹ Cf. the Demetrius, xli. 3. ² See the Alexander, iv. 1.

³ The "book" containing the Lives of Epaminondas and Scipio Africanus the Elder has been lost.

- 4 Ἦν δὲ καὶ πρὸς τοὺς συνήθεις ἐπιεικῆς καὶ πρᾶος ὀργῆν, σφοδρὸς δὲ καὶ πρόθυμος ἐν ταῖς χάρισιν. Ἀερόπου γοῦν ἀποθανόντος οὐκ ἤνεγκε μετρίως, ἐκείνῳ μὲν ἀνθρώπινα πεπονθέναι φάσκων, ἑαυτὸν δὲ μεμφόμενος καὶ κακίζων ὅτι μέλλων αἰεὶ καὶ βραδύνων χάριν οὐκ ἀπέδωκεν αὐτῷ. τὰ μὲν γὰρ χρέα καὶ κληρονόμοις ἐστὶν ἀποδοῦναι τῶν δανεισάντων, αἱ δὲ τῶν χαρίτων ἀμοιβαὶ μὴ γενόμεναι πρὸς αἰσθανομένους ἀνιῶσι
- 5 τὸν χρηστὸν καὶ δίκαιον. ἐν δὲ Ἀμβρακίᾳ κακολόγον τινὰ καὶ βλάσφημον ἄνθρωπον οἰομένων δεῖν μεταστῆσαι τὸν Πύρρον “Αὐτοῦ μένων,” ἔφη, “μᾶλλον ἡμᾶς ἐν ὀλίγοις ἢ περιῶν πρὸς ἅπαντας ἀνθρώπους κακῶς λεγέτω.” καὶ τοὺς παρ’ οἶνον αὐτὸν λοιδορήσαντας, εἶτα ἐλεγχομένους ἠρώτησεν εἰ ταῦτα εἶπον· ἀποκριναμένου δὲ τῶν νεανίσκων ἐνός, “Ταῦτα, ὦ βασιλεῦ· πλείονα δ’ ἂν ἔτι τούτων εἰρήκειμεν, εἰ πλείον παρῆν οἶνος ἡμῖν,” γελάσας ἀφῆκε.

IX. Γυναῖκας δὲ πραγμάτων ἕνεκα καὶ δυνάμειως πλείονας ἔγημε μετὰ τὴν Ἀντιγόνης τελευτήν. καὶ γὰρ Αὐτολέοντος τοῦ Παιῶνων βασιλέως ἔλαβε θυγατέρα, καὶ Βιρκένναν τὴν Βαρδύλλιος τοῦ Ἰλλυριῶν, καὶ Λάνασσαν τὴν Ἀγαθοκλέους τοῦ Συρακουσίου, προῖκα προσφερομένην αὐτῷ τὴν Κερκυραίων πόλιν ἠλωκυῖαν ὑπὸ Ἀγαθοκλέους. ἐκ μὲν οὖν Ἀντιγόνης

PYRRHUS

He was also kind towards his familiar friends, and mild in temper, but eager and impetuous in returning favours. At any rate, when Aeropus died, he was distressed beyond measure, declaring that Aeropus had indeed only suffered what was common to humanity, but that he blamed and reviled himself because he had always delayed and moved slowly in the matter and so had not returned his friend's favour. For the debts due to one's creditors can be paid back to their heirs; but if the favours received from friends are not returned while those friends can be sensible of the act, it is an affliction to a just and good man. Again, in Ambracia there was a fellow who denounced and reviled him, and people thought that Pyrrhus ought to banish him. "Let him remain here," said Pyrrhus, "and speak ill of us among a few, rather than carry his slanders round to all mankind." And again, some young fellows indulged in abuse of him over their cups, and were brought to task for it. Pyrrhus asked them if they had said such things, and when one of them replied, "We did, O King; and we should have said still more than this if we had had more wine." Pyrrhus laughed and dismissed them.¹

IX. In order to enlarge his interests and power he married several wives after the death of Antigone. He took to wife, namely, a daughter of Autoleon, king of the Paeonians; Bircenna, the daughter of Bardyllis the Illyrian; and Lanassa, the daughter of Agathocles of Syracuse, who brought him as her dowry the city of Corcyra, which had been captured by Agathocles. By Antigone he had a son Ptolemy,

¹ The story is found also in Plutarch's Morals, p. 184 d, and in Val. Max. 5, 1, ext. 3.

Πτολεμαῖον υἱὸν ἔσχευ, ἐκ δὲ Λανάσσης Ἄλεξανδρον, Ἐλενον δὲ τὸν νεώτατον ἐκ Βιρκέννης. 2 καὶ πάντα ἀγαθοὺς ἐν τοῖς ὄπλοις ἐβρέψατο καὶ διαπύρους, εὐθύς ἐκ γενετῆς ἐπὶ τοῦτο θηγομένους ὑπ' αὐτοῦ. λέγεται γὰρ ὡς ἐρωτηθεὶς ὑφ' ἐνὸς αὐτῶν ἔτι παιδὸς ὄντος, τίνι καταλείψει τὴν βασιλείαν, εἶπεῖν, “Ὅς ἂν ὑμῶν τὴν μάχαιραν ἠξυτάτην¹ ἔχη.” τοῦτο δὲ οὐδὲν ἀποδεῖ τῆς τραγικῆς ἀρᾶς ἐκείνης. “Θηκτῶ σιδῆρῳ δῶμα διαλαχεῖν” τοὺς ἀδελφούς. οὕτως ἄμικτός ἐστι καὶ θηριώδης ἢ τῆς πλεονεξίας ὑπόθεσις.

X. Μετὰ δὲ τὴν μάχην ταύτην ὁ Πύρρος ἐπανελθὼν οἴκαδε λαμπρὸς ὑπὸ δόξης καὶ φρονήματος ἔχαιρε· καὶ Ἄετός ὑπὸ τῶν Ἡπειρωτῶν προσαγορευόμενος, “Δι' ὑμᾶς,” ἔλεγεν, “ἀετός εἰμι· πῶς γὰρ οὐ μέλλω, τοῖς ὑμετέροις ὄπλοις ὡσπερ ὠκυπτέροις ἐπαιρόμενος;” ὀλίγῳ δὲ ὕστερον πυθόμενος νοσεῖν τὸν Δημήτριον ἐπισηφαλῶς ἐνέβαλε μὲν ἐξαίφνης εἰς Μακεδονίαν ὡς ἐπιδρομὴν τινα καὶ λεηλασίαν ποιησόμενος, 2 παρ' ὀλίγον δὲ ἦλθε πάντων ὁμοῦ κρατῆσαι καὶ λαβεῖν ἀμαχεὶ τὴν βασιλείαν, ἐλάσας ἄχρι Ἐδέσσης μηδενὸς ἀμυνομένου, πολλῶν δὲ καὶ προστιθεμένων καὶ συστρατευόντων. αὐτὸν τε δὴ τὸν Δημήτριον ὁ κίνδυνος ἐξανέστησε παρὰ δύναμιν, οἳ τε φίλοι καὶ ἡγεμόνες ὀλίγῳ χρόνῳ πολλοὺς ἀθροίσαντες ἐρρωμένως καὶ προθύμως ἐπὶ τὸν Πύρρον ὤρμησαν. ὁ δὲ ληστρικώτερον ἀφιγμένος οὐκ ἔμεινε, ἀλλὰ φεύγων μέρος τι τῆς στρατιᾶς ἀπέβαλε καθ' ὁδὸν ἐπιθεμένων τῶν Μακεδόνων.

¹ ἠξυτάτην with Blass : ἠξυτέραν.

PYRRHUS

Alexander by Lanassa, and Helenus, his youngest son, by Bircenna. He brought them all up to be brave in arms and fiery, and he whetted them for this from their very birth. It is said, for instance, that when he was asked by one of them, who was still a boy, to whom he would leave his kingdom, he replied: "To that one of you who keeps his sword the sharpest." This, however, meant nothing less than the famous curse of Oedipus in the tragedy;¹ that "with whetted sword," and not by lot, the brothers should "divide the house." So savage and ferocious is the nature of rapacity.

X. After this battle Pyrrhus returned to his home rejoicing in the splendour which his fame and lofty spirit had brought him; and when he was given the surname of "Eagle" by the Epeirots, "Through you," he said, "am I an eagle; why, pray, should I not be? It is by your arms that I am borne aloft as by swift pinions." But a little while after, learning that Demetrius was dangerously sick, he suddenly threw an army into Macedonia, intending merely to overrun and plunder some parts of it. Yet he came within a little of mastering the whole country and getting the kingdom without a battle; for he marched on as far as Edessa without opposition from anyone, and many actually joined his forces and shared his expedition. And now Demetrius himself was roused by the peril to act beyond his strength, while his friends and commanders in a short time collected many soldiers and set out with zeal and vigour against Pyrrhus. Pyrrhus, however, had come more for plunder than anything else, and would not stand his ground, but fled, losing a part of his army on the march, under the attacks of the Macedonians.

¹ Euripides, Phoenissae, 68.

- 3 Οὐ μὴν ὅτι ῥαδίως καὶ ταχὺ τὸν Πύρρον ἐξέβαλε τῆς χώρας ὁ Δημήτριος ἠμέλησεν, ἐγνωκῶς δὲ μεγάλων πραγμάτων ἀντιλαμβά- νεσθαι καὶ τὴν πατρίαν ἀρχὴν ἀνακτᾶσθαι δέκα μυριάσι στρατοῦ καὶ ναυσὶ πεντακοσίαις οὐκ ἐβούλετο τῷ Πύρρῳ προσπταῖσαι, οὐδὲ ἀπο- λιπεῖν Μακεδόσι πάροικον ἐργώδη καὶ χαλεπόν, ἀλλ', ἐπεὶ μὴ ἐσχόλαζε πολεμεῖν πρὸς αὐτόν, διαλυθεὶς καὶ θέμενος εἰρήνην οὕτως ἐπὶ τοὺς
- 4 ἄλλους βασιλεῖς τραπέσθαι. γενομένων δὲ διὰ ταῦτα τῶν ὁμολογιῶν, καὶ τῆς γνώμης ἅμα τῷ μεγέθει τῆς παρασκευῆς ἐκφανείσης τοῦ Δημη- τρίου, φοβηθέντες οἱ βασιλεῖς διεπέμποντο πρὸς τὸν Πύρρον ἀγγέλους καὶ γράμματα, θαυμάζειν φάσκοντες εἰ τὸν αὐτοῦ προέμενος καιρόν, ἐν τῷ Δημητρίου πολεμῆσαι περιμένει, καὶ δυνάμενος Μακεδονίας ἐκβαλεῖν αὐτὸν πολλὰ πράττοντα καὶ ταραττόμενον, ἐκδέχεται καὶ σχολάζοντι καὶ μεγάλῳ γενομένῳ περὶ τῶν ἐν Μολοσσοῖς ἱερῶν καὶ τάφων διαγωνίσασθαι, καὶ ταῦτα Κέρκυραν ἔναγχος ἀφηρημένος ὑπ' αὐτοῦ μετὰ τῆς γυναι-
- 5 κός. ἡ γὰρ Λάνασσα μεμφαμένη τὸν Πύρρον ὡς μᾶλλον προσέχοντα ταῖς βαρβάροις γυναιξὶν εἰς Κέρκυραν ἀπεχώρησε, καὶ δεομένη γάμων βασιλικῶν ἐκάλει Δημήτριον, ἐπισταμένη μά- λιστα τῶν βασιλέων εὐκόλως ἔχοντα πρὸς γάμους γυναικῶν. ἐκεῖνος δὲ πλεύσας τῇ τε Λανάσῃ συνῆλθε καὶ φρουρὰν ἐν τῇ πόλει κατέλιπε.

PYRRHUS

However, because Demetrius had easily and speedily driven Pyrrhus out of the country, he did not leave him to his own devices, but now that he had determined to undertake a great enterprise and to recover his father's realm with a hundred thousand soldiers and five hundred ships, he did not wish to have collisions with Pyrrhus, nor yet to leave behind in him an enterprising and troublesome neighbour for the Macedonians. He wished, rather, since he had no time to wage war against Pyrrhus, to come to terms and make peace with him, and then turn his arms against the other kings. But after an agreement had been made between them for these reasons, the purpose of Demetrius became apparent, as well as the magnitude of his preparations, and the kings, in alarm, kept sending to Pyrrhus messengers and letters,¹ expressing their amazement that he should let slip his own opportunity for making war and wait for Demetrius to seize his; and that when he was able to drive Demetrius out of Macedonia, since he was now much occupied and disturbed, he should await the time when his adversary, at his leisure and after he had become great, could wage a decisive struggle with him for the sanctuaries and tombs of the Molossian land, an adversary who had just robbed him of Corcyra, and his wife besides. For Lanassa, who found fault with Pyrrhus for being more devoted to his barbarian wives than to her, had retired to Corcyra, whither, since she desired a royal marriage, she invited Demetrius, understanding that he, of all the kings, was most readily disposed to marry wives. So Demetrius sailed thither, married Lanassa, and left a garrison in the city.

¹ Cf. the Demetrius, xliv. 1.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- XI. Ταῦτα πρὸς τὸν Πύρρον οἱ βασιλεῖς γρά-φοντες ἅμα καὶ δι' ἑαυτῶν ἔτι μέλλοντα καὶ παρασκευαζόμενον τὸν Δημήτριον ἐκίνουν. Πτο-λεμαῖος μὲν γὰρ ἐπιπλεύσας μεγάλῳ στόλῳ τὰς Ἑλληνίδας ἀφίστη πόλεις, Λυσίμαχος δὲ τὴν ἄνω Μακεδονίαν ἐκ Θράκης ἐμβαλὼν ἐπόρθει.
 Πύρρος δὲ τούτοις ἅμα συνεξαναστὰς ἐπὶ Βέροιαν ἤλαυνε, προσδοκῶν, ὅπερ συνέβη, Δημήτριον ὑπαντιάζοντα Λυσιμάχῳ τὴν κάτω χώραν ἀπο-2 λείψειν ἔρημον. ἐκείνης δὲ τῆς νυκτὸς ἔδοξε κατὰ τοὺς ὕπνους ὑπὸ Ἀλεξάνδρου καλεῖσθαι τοῦ μεγάλου, καὶ παραγενόμενος κλιθήρη μὲν αὐτὸν ἰδεῖν, λόγων δὲ χρηστῶν τυχεῖν καὶ φιλοφροσύ-νης ἐπαγγελιομένου προθύμως βοηθήσειν. αὐτοῦ δὲ τολμήσαντος εἰπεῖν, “Καὶ πῶς ἂν, ὦ βασιλεῦ, νοσῶν δυνατὸς εἴης ἐμοὶ βοηθεῖν;” αὐτῷ φάναί τῳ 389
 ὀνόματι, καὶ περιβάντα Νισαῖον ἵππον ἠγεῖσθαι.
- 3 Ταύτην ἰδὼν τὴν ὄψιν ἐπερρώσθη· τάχει δὲ χρησάμενος καὶ διαδραμῶν τὰ μεταξὺ καταλαμβάνει τὴν Βέροϊαν· καὶ τὸ πλεῖστον αὐτόθι τῆς στρατιᾶς ἰδρύσας τὰ λοιπὰ προσήγετο διὰ τῶν στρατηγῶν. ὁ δὲ Δημήτριος ἐπεὶ ταῦτα ἤκουσε καὶ πονηρὸν ἐν τῷ στρατοπέδῳ θόρυβον ᾗσθητο τῶν Μακεδόνων, ἔδεισε πορρωτέρω προαγαγεῖν, μὴ πλησίον γενόμενοι βασιλέως Μακεδόνος καὶ δόξαν ἔχοντος μεταβάλλονται πρὸς αὐτόν.
- 4 ὅθεν ἐπιστρέψας ἐπὶ τὸν Πύρρον ἤγεεν ὡς ξένον καὶ μισούμενον ὑπὸ τῶν Μακεδόνων. ἐπεὶ δὲ παρεστρατοπέδευεν αὐτόθι, πολλοὶ τῶν ἐκ τῆς

PYRRHUS

XI. Such letters the kings kept sending to Pyrrhus, and at the same time on their own part they assailed Demetrius while he was still waiting to complete his preparations. Ptolemy sailed up with a great fleet and tried to bring the Greek cities to revolt, while Lysimachus invaded upper Macedonia from Thrace and ravaged the country. So Pyrrhus, taking the field at the same time with these, marched against Beroea, expecting, as proved to be the case, that Demetrius would go to confront Lysimachus, and thus leave the lower country unprotected. That night Pyrrhus dreamed that he was called by Alexander the Great, and that when he answered the call he found the king lying on a couch, but met with kindly speech and friendly treatment from him, and received a promise of his ready aid and help. "And how, O King," Pyrrhus ventured to ask, "when thou art sick, canst thou give me aid and help?" "My name itself will give it," said the king, and mounting a Nisaeon horse he led the way.

This vision gave Pyrrhus great assurance, and leading his army with all speed through the intervening districts he took possession of Beroea; then, stationing the greater part of his forces there, he proceeded to subdue the rest of the country through his generals. When Demetrius heard of this, and became aware of a pernicious uproar in his camp on the part of the Macedonians, he was afraid to lead them farther on, lest on coming into the neighbourhood of a Macedonian king of great renown they should go over to him. Therefore he turned back and led them against Pyrrhus, with the idea that he was a foreigner and hated by the Macedonians. But after he had pitched his camp over against Pyrrhus, many

Βεροίας ἀφικνούμενοι τὸν Πύρρον ἐνεκωμίαζον, ὡς ἄμαχον μὲν ἐν τοῖς ὄπλοις καὶ λαμπρὸν ἄνδρα, πρῶως δὲ καὶ φιλανθρώπως τοῖς ἠλωκόσι χρώμενον. ἦσαν δὲ τινες οὓς αὐτὸς ὁ Πύρρος ἐγκαθίει προσποιουμένους εἶναι Μακεδόνας, καὶ λέγοντας ὅτι νῦν καιρὸς ἐστὶ τῆς Δημητρίου βαρύτητος ἀπαλλαγῆναι, πρὸς ἄνδρα δημοτικὸν καὶ φιλοστρατιώτην μεταβαλομένους τὸν Πύρρον.

5 ἐκ τούτου τὸ πλεῖστον ἀνηρέθιστο τῆς στρατιᾶς, καὶ τὸν Πύρρον ἐζήτουν περισκοποῦντες. ἔτυχε γὰρ ἀφηρημένος τὸ κράνος, ἄχρι οὗ συμφρονήσας καὶ πάλιν¹ περιθέμενος ἐγνώσθη τῷ τε λόφῳ διαπρέποντι καὶ τοῖς τραγικοῖς κέρασιν, ὥστε τοὺς Μακεδόνας σύνθημα προστρέχοντας αἰτεῖν, ἄλλους δὲ κλάδους δρυὸς ἀναστέφεισθαι διὰ τὸ

6 καὶ τοὺς περὶ ἐκείνον ἐστεφανωμένους ὄρᾶν· ἤδη δὲ καὶ πρὸς αὐτὸν τινες ἐτόλμων λέγειν τὸν Δημήτριον ὡς ὑπεκστὰς καὶ προέμενος τὰ πράγματα καλῶς δόξει βεβουλεῦσθαι. τούτοις τοῖς λόγοις ὅμοιον ὄρῶν τὸ κίνημα τοῦ στρατοπέδου καὶ φοβηθεῖς κρύφα διεξέπεσε, καυσία τιλὶ καὶ λιτῷ χλαμυδίῳ περιστείλας ἑαυτόν. ἐπελθὼν δὲ ὁ Πύρρος ἀμαχεὶ παρέλαβε τὸ στρατόπεδον καὶ βασιλεὺς ἀνηγορεύθη Μακεδόνων.

XII. Ἐπιφανέντος δὲ Λυσιμάχου καὶ κοινὸν ἔργον ἀμφοῖν ποιουμένου τὴν Δημητρίου κατάλυσιν καὶ νέμεσθαι τὴν βασιλείαν ἀξιούντος, οὐπω πάνυ βεβαίως τοῖς Μακεδόσι πιστεύων ὁ Πύρρος, ἀλλ' ἀμφίβολος ὢν ἐν αὐτοῖς ἐδέξατο τοῦ Λυσιμάχου τὴν πρόκλησιν, καὶ διενείμαντο

¹ Before περιθέμενος, with Blass: πάλιν συμφρονήσας.

PYRRHUS

Beroeans came thither with loud praises of Pyrrhus ; they said he was invincible in arms and a brilliant hero, and treated his captives with mildness and humanity. There were some also whom Pyrrhus himself sent into the camp ; they pretended to be Macedonians, and said that now was the favourable time to rid themselves of Demetrius and his severity, by going over to Pyrrhus, a man who was gracious to the common folk and fond of his soldiers. In consequence of this, the greater part of the army was all excitement, and went about looking for Pyrrhus ; for it chanced that he had taken off his helmet, and he was not recognised until he bethought himself and put it on again, when its towering crest and its goat's horns made him known to all. Some of the Macedonians therefore ran to him and asked him for his watchword, and others put garlands of oaken boughs about their heads because they saw the soldiers about him garlanded. And presently even to Demetrius himself certain persons ventured to say that if he quietly withdrew and renounced his undertakings men would think that he had taken wise counsel. He saw that this advice tallied with the agitation in the camp, and was frightened, and secretly stole away, after putting on a broad-brimmed hat and a simple soldier's cloak. So Pyrrhus came up, took the camp without a blow, and was proclaimed king of Macedonia.

XII. But now Lysimachus made his appearance, claimed that the overthrow of Demetrius had been the joint work of both, and demanded a division of the kingdom. So Pyrrhus, who did not yet feel entire confidence in the Macedonians, but was still doubtful about them, accepted the proposition of

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- τὰς πόλεις καὶ τὴν χώραν πρὸς ἀλλήλους.
- 2 τοῦτο δὲ ὤνησε μὲν ἐν τῷ παρόντι καὶ κατέπαυσε τὸν πόλεμον αὐτοῖς, ὀλίγῳ δὲ ὕστερον ἔγνωσαν οὐκ ἀπαλλαγὴν ἔχθρας, ἀλλ' ἐγκλημάτων καὶ διαφορᾶς ἀρχὴν πεποιημένοι τὴν νέμησιν. οἷς γὰρ οὐ πέλαγος, οὐκ ὄρος, οὐκ ἀοίκητος ἐρημία πέρας ἐστὶ πλεονεξίας, οὐδ' οἱ διαιροῦντες Εὐρώπην καὶ Ἀσίαν τέρμονες ὀρίζουσι τὰς ἐπιθυμίας,
- 3 πῶς ἂν ἀπτόμενοι καὶ ψαύοντες ἀλλήλων ἀτρεμοῖεν ἐν τοῖς παροῦσι μὴ ἀδικοῦντες, οὐκ ἔστιν εἰπεῖν, ἀλλὰ πολεμοῦσι μὲν αἰεὶ, τὸ ἐπιβουλεύειν καὶ φθονεῖν ἔμφυτον ἔχοντες, δυεῖν δὲ ὀνομάτων, ὥσπερ νομισμάτων, πόλεμον καὶ εἰρήνης, τῷ παρατυχόντι χρῶνται πρὸς τὸ συμφέρον, οὐ πρὸς τὸ δίκαιον, ἐπεὶ βελτίους γε πολεμεῖν ὁμολογοῦντές εἰσιν ἢ τῆς ἀδικίας τὸ ἀργοῦν καὶ σχολάζον
- 4 δικαιοσύνην καὶ φιλίαν ὀνομάζοντες. ἐδήλωσε δὲ ὁ Πύρρος· ἐμποδῶν γὰρ αὐξομένῳ τῷ Δημητρίῳ πάλιν ἰστάμενος, καὶ κωλύων τὴν δύναμιν ὥσπερ ἐξ ἀρρωστίας μεγάλης ἀναλαμβάνουσαν, ἐβοήθει τοῖς Ἕλλησι καὶ παρήλθεν εἰς τὰς Ἀθήνας. ἀναβὰς δὲ εἰς τὴν ἀκρόπολιν καὶ θύσας τῇ θεῷ καὶ καταβὰς αὐθημερὸν ἀγαπᾶν μὲν ἔφησε τοῦ δήμου τὴν πρὸς αὐτὸν εὐνοίαν καὶ πίστιν, ἂν μέντοι σωφρονῶσι μηδένα τῶν βασιλέων ἔτι παρήσειν αὐτοὺς εἰς τὴν πόλιν μηδὲ τὰς πύλας
- 5 ἀνοίξειν· ἐκ τούτου καὶ πρὸς Δημήτριον εἰρήνην ἐποιήσατο, καὶ μετ' ὀλίγον χρόνον, εἰς Ἀσίαν 390

PYRRHUS

Lysimachus, and they divided the cities and the territory with one another. This availed for the present, and prevented war between them, but shortly afterward they perceived that the distribution which they had made did not put an end to their enmity, but gave occasion for complaints and quarrels. "For how men to whose rapacity neither sea nor mountain nor uninhabitable desert sets a limit, men to whose inordinate desires the boundaries which separate Europe and Asia put no stop, can remain content with what they have and do one another no wrong when they are in close touch, it is impossible to say." Nay, they are perpetually at war, because plots and jealousies are parts of their natures, and they treat the two words, war and peace, like current coins, using whichever happens to be for their advantage, regardless of justice; for surely they are better men when they wage war openly than when they give the names of justice and friendship to the times of inactivity and leisure which interrupt their work of injustice. And Pyrrhus made this plain; for, setting himself to hinder the growing power of Demetrius, and trying to prevent its recovery, so to speak, from a serious illness, he went to the help of the Greeks and entered Athens. Here he went up to the acropolis and sacrificed to the goddess, then came down again on the same day, and told the people he was well pleased with the confidence and goodwill which they had shown him, but that in future, if they were wise, they would not admit any one of the kings into their city nor open their gates to him. After this, he actually made peace with Demetrius, but in a little while, when Demetrius had ἀπάραντος αὐτοῦ, πάλιν πεισθεῖς ὑπὸ Λυσιμάχου Θετταλίαν ἀφίστη καὶ ταῖς Ἑλληνικαῖς φρουραῖς προσεπολέμει, βελτίοσι χρώμενος τοῖς Μακεδόσι στρατευομένοις ἢ σχολάζουσι, καὶ ὅλως αὐτὸς οὐκ εὖ πρὸς ἡσυχίαν πεφυκώς.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Τέλος δὲ Δημητρίου καταπολεμηθέντος ἐν Συρίᾳ Λυσιμάχος ἐπ' ἀδείας γενόμενος καὶ σχολάζων εὐθύς ἐπὶ τὸν Πύρρον ὤρμησε. καὶ 6 καθημένου περὶ τὴν Ἐδεσσαν αὐτοῦ ταῖς ἀγοραῖς κομιζομέναις ἐπιπεσὼν καὶ κρατήσας ἀπορίαν πρῶτον αὐτῷ περιέστησεν, εἶτα γράμμασι καὶ λόγοις διέφθειρε τοὺς πρῶτους τῶν Μακεδόνων, ὀνειδίζων εἰ ξένον ἄνδρα καὶ προγόνων αἰεὶ δεδουλευκότων Μακεδόσι δεσπότην ἐλόμενοι τοὺς Ἄλεξάνδρου φίλους καὶ συνήθεις ἀπωθοῦσι 7 Μακεδονίας. ἀναπειθομένων δὲ πολλῶν δέισας ὁ Πύρρος ἀπηλλάγη μετὰ τῆς Ἡπειρωτικῆς καὶ συμμαχικῆς δυνάμεως, ἀποβαλὼν Μακεδονίαν ὧ τρόπῳ παρέλαβεν. ὅθεν οὐδ' αἰτιᾶσθαι τοὺς πολλοὺς ἔχουσιν οἱ βασιλεῖς μετατιθεμένους πρὸς τὸ συμφέρον. ἐκείνους γὰρ αὐτοὺς ταῦτα μιμῶνται ποιῶντες, ἀπιστίας καὶ προδοσίας διδασκάλους ὄντας, καὶ πλείστα νομίζοντας ὠφελεῖσθαι τὸν ἐλάχιστα τῷ δικαίῳ χρώμενον.

XIII. Τότε δ' οὖν εἰς Ἡπειρον ἐκπεσόντι τῷ Πύρρῳ καὶ προεμένῳ Μακεδονίαν ἢ μὲν τύχη παρείχε χρῆσθαι τοῖς παροῦσιν ἀπραγμόνως καὶ set out for Asia, he once more took the advice of Lysimachus and tried to bring Thessaly to revolt, besides waging war upon the garrisons of Demetrius in the Greek cities. For he found that the Macedonians were better disposed when they were on a campaign than when they were unoccupied, and he himself was by nature entirely averse to keeping quiet.

PYRRHUS

But at last, after Demetrius had been wholly overthrown in Syria,¹ Lysimachus, who now felt himself secure, and had nothing on his hands, at once set out against Pyrrhus. Pyrrhus was in camp at Edessa, where Lysimachus fell upon his provision trains and mastered them, thus bringing him to straits; then, by letters and conferences he corrupted the leading Macedonians, upbraiding them because they had chosen as lord and master a man who was a foreigner, whose ancestors had always been subject to Macedonia, and were thrusting the friends and familiars of Alexander out of the country. After many had thus been won over, Pyrrhus took alarm and departed with his Epeirots and allied forces, thus losing Macedonia precisely as he got it.² Whence we see that kings have no reason to find fault with popular bodies for changing sides as suits their interests; for in doing this they are but imitating the kings themselves, who are their teachers in unfaithfulness and treachery, and think him most advantaged who least observes justice.

XIII. At this time, then, when Pyrrhus had been driven back into Epeirus and had given up Macedonia, Fortune put it into his power to enjoy what he had without molestation, to live in peace, and to

¹ At the battle of Ipsus, 301 B.C. Cf. the Demetrius, chapter xlv. ² Cf. chapter xi.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ζῆν ἐν εἰρήνῃ βασιλεύοντα τῶν οἰκείων· ὁ δὲ τὸ μὴ παρέχειν ἑτέροις κακὰ μηδὲ ἔχειν ὑφ' ἑτέρων ἄλλυν τινὰ ναυτιώδη νομίζων, ὥσπερ ὁ Ἀχιλλεὺς οὐκ ἔφερε τὴν σχολήν,

ἀλλὰ φθινύθεσκε φίλον κῆρ
αὐθι μένων, ποθέεσκε δ' αὐτὴν τε πτόλεμόν τε.

δεόμενος δ' οὖν ἔλαβε πραγμάτων καινῶν τοιαύ-2 τὴν ὑπόθεσιν. Ῥωμαῖοι Ταραντίνοις ἐπολέμου-οἱ δὲ μήτε φέρειν τὸν πόλεμον δυνάμενοι μήτε θέσθαι θρασύτητι καὶ μοχθηρίᾳ δημαγωγῶν, ἐβουλεύοντο ποιεῖσθαι Πύρρον ἡγεμόνα καὶ καλεῖν ἐπὶ τὸν πόλεμον ὡς σχολὴν ἄγοντα πλείστην τῶν βασιλέων καὶ στρατηγῶν ὄντα δεινότατον. τῶν δὲ πρεσβυτέρων καὶ νοῦν ἐχόντων πολιτῶν οἱ μὲν ἀντικρυς ἐνιστάμενοι πρὸς τὴν γνώμην ἐξέπιπτον ὑπὸ κραυγῆς καὶ βίας τῶν πολεμοποιῶν, οἱ δὲ ταῦτα ὀρώντες 3 ἀπέλειπον τὰς ἐκκλησίας. εἰς δὲ τις ἀνὴρ ἐπιεικής, Μέτων ὄνομα, τῆς ἡμέρας ἐκείνης ἐν ἧ τὸ δόγμα κυροῦν ἔμελλον ἐνστάσης καὶ τοῦ δήμου καθεζομένου, λαβὼν στέφανον τῶν ἐώλων καὶ λαμπάδιον, ὥσπερ οἱ μεθύοντες, αὐλητρίδος ὑψηγουμένης αὐτῷ πρὸς τὴν ἐκκλησίαν ἐκώμαζεν.
οἷα δὲ ἐν ὄχλῳ δημοκρατίας κόσμον οὐκ ἐχούσης οἱ μὲν ἐκρότουν ἰδόντες, οἱ δὲ ἐγέλων, ἐκώλυε δὲ οὔδεις, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸ γύναιον αὐλεῖν κἀκείνου ἄδειν ἐκέλευον εἰς μέσον¹ προελθόντα·² καὶ τοῦτο
4 ποιήσων ἐπίδοξος ἦν. γενομένης δὲ σιωπῆς

¹ εἰς μέσον with Blass and most MSS : μέσον.
προελθόντα Blass, after Reiske : προσελθόντα.

PYRRHUS

reign over his own people. But he thought it tedious to the point of nausea if he were not inflicting mischief on others or suffering it at others' hands, and like Achilles could not endure idleness,

"but ate his heart away Remaining there, and pined for war-cry and battle." ¹

Filled with such desires, then, he found ground for fresh undertakings in the following circumstances. The Romans were at war with the people of Tarentum, who, being able neither to carry on the war, nor yet, owing to the rashness and villainy of their popular leaders, to put an end to it, wished to make Pyrrhus their leader and summon him to the war, believing him to be most at leisure of all the kings, and a most formidable general. Of the elderly and sensible citizens, some who were directly opposed to this plan were overborne by the clamour and violence of the war party, and others, seeing this, absented themselves from the assembly. But there was a certain worthy man, Meton by name, who, when the day on which the decree was to be ratified was at hand and the people were taking their seats in the assembly, took a withered garland and a torch, after the way of revellers, and came dancing in behind a flute-girl who led the way for him. Then, as will happen in a throng of free people not given to decorum, some clapped their hands at sight of him, and others laughed, but none tried to stop him; nay, they bade the woman play on her flute and called upon Meton to come forward and give them a song; and it was expected that he would do so. But when silence had been made,

¹ Iliad, i. 491 f.

“Ἄνδρες,” ἔφη, “Ταραντῖνοι, καλῶς ποιεῖτε παίζειν καὶ κωμάζειν, ἕως ἕξεστι, τοῖς βουλομένοις μὴ φθονοῦντες. ἂν δὲ σωφρονῆτε, καὶ πάντες ἀπολαύσετε ἔτι τῆς ἐλευθερίας, ὡς ἕτερα πράγματα καὶ βίον καὶ δίαιταν ἔχοντες ὅταν Πύρρος εἰς τὴν πόλιν παραγένηται.” ταῦτα ῥηθέντα τοὺς πολλοὺς ἔπεισε τῶν Ταραντίνων, καὶ θροῦς διέδραμε τῆς ἐκκλησίας ὡς εὖ λεγο-
 5 μένων. οἱ δὲ τοὺς Ῥωμαίους δεδιότες, μὴ γενομένης εἰρήνης ἐκδοθῶσι, τὸν τε δῆμον ἐλοιδόρουν εἰ φέρει πράως ἐπικωμαζόμενος οὕτως ἀσελγῶς καὶ παροινούμενος, τὸν τε Μέτωνα συστραφέντες ἐξέβαλον.

Οὕτω δὲ τοῦ δόγματος κυρίου γενομένου πρέσβεις ἔπεμψαν εἰς Ἥπειρον, οὐχ αὐτῶν μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν Ἰταλιωτῶν, δῶρα τῷ Πύρρῳ κομίζοντας καὶ λέγοντας ὡς ἡγεμόνος ἔμφρονος
 6 δέονται καὶ δόξαν ἔχοντος, δυνάμεις δὲ αὐτόθεν ὑπάρξουσι μεγάλαι παρά τε Λευκανῶν καὶ Μεσσαπίων καὶ Σαννιτῶν καὶ Ταραντίνων εἰς δισμυρίους ἰππεῖς, πεζῶν δὲ ὁμοῦ πέντε καὶ τριάκοντα μυριάδας. ταῦτα οὐ μόνον αὐτὸν ἐπῆρε τὸν Πύρρον, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοῖς Ἥπειρώταις προθυμίαν ἐνέβαλε καὶ ὄρμην τῆς στρατείας.

XIV. Ἦν δέ τις Κινέας, Θεσσαλὸς ἀνὴρ, τῷ μὲν φρονεῖν δοκῶν ἰκανὸς εἶναι, Δημοσθένους δὲ τοῦ ῥήτορος ἀκηκῶς ἐδόκει μόνος εὖ μάλιστα¹ τῶν τότε λεγόντων οἶον ἐν εἰκόνι τῆς ἐκείνου δυνάμεως καὶ δεινότητος ἀναμιμνήσκειν τοὺς

¹ μόνος εὖ μάλιστα Sintenis, with Sg; Bekker corrects εἰς to ἢ (alone or most), after Bryan and Reiske, and is followed by Blass; AC have μάλιστα εὖ μόνος.

PYRRHUS

he said: "Men of Tarentum, ye do well not to frown upon those who wish to sport and revel, while they can. And if ye are wise, ye will all also get some enjoyment still out of your freedom, assured that ye will have other business and a different life and diet when Pyrrhus has come into the city." These words brought conviction to most of the Tarentines, and a murmur of applause ran through the assembly. But those who were afraid that if peace were made they would be given up to the Romans, reviled the people for tamely submitting to such shameless treatment from a drunken reveller, and banding together they cast Meton out:¹

And so the decree was ratified, and the people sent ambassadors to Pyrrhus,² not only from their own number, but also from the Italian Greeks. These brought gifts to Pyrrhus, and told him they wanted a leader of reputation and prudence, and that he would find there large forces gathered from Lucania, Messapia, Samnium, and Tarentum, amounting to twenty thousand horse and three hundred and fifty thousand foot all told. This not only exalted Pyrrhus himself, but also inspired the Epeirots with eagerness to undertake the expedition.

XIV. Now, there was a certain Cineas, a man of Thessaly, with a reputation for great wisdom, who had been a pupil of Demosthenes the orator, and was quite the only public speaker of his day who was thought to remind his hearers, as a statue might, of that great orator's power and ability. Associating

¹ Cf. Dionysius Hal., Excerpta ex lib. xix., 8.

² In the summer of 281 B.C.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἀκούοντας. συνὼν δὲ τῷ Πύρρῳ καὶ πεμπόμενος ἐπὶ τὰς πόλεις ἐβεβαίον τὸ Εὐριπίδειον,¹ ὅτι “πᾶν ἐξαιρεῖ λόγος

ὃ καὶ σίδηρος πολεμίων δράσειεν ἄν.”

- 2 ὁ γοῦν Πύρρος ἔλεγε πλείονας πόλεις ὑπὸ Κινέου τοῖς λόγοις ἢ τοῖς ὅπλοις ὑφ’ ἑαυτοῦ προσῆχθαι· καὶ διετελεῖ τὸν ἄνδρα τιμῶν ἐν τοῖς μάλιστα καὶ χρώμενος. οὗτος οὖν τὸν Πύρρον ὠρμημένον τότε ὀρώων ἐπὶ τὴν Ἰταλίαν εἰς λόγους ἐπηγάγετο τοιούτους, ἰδὼν σχολάζοντα. “Πολεμισταὶ μὲν, ὦ Πύρρε, Ῥωμαῖοι λέγονται καὶ πολλῶν ἐθνῶν μαχίμων ἄρχοντες· εἰ δὲ δοίη θεὸς περιγενέσθαι
- 3 τῶν ἀνδρῶν, τί χρησόμεθα τῇ νίκῃ;” καὶ ὁ Πύρρος, “Ἐρωτᾶς,” εἶπεν, “ὦ Κινέα, πρᾶγμα φαινόμενον· οὔτε βάρβαρος ἡμῖν ἐκεῖ πόλις οὔτε Ἑλληνὶς ἀξιόμαχος Ῥωμαίων κρατηθέντων, ἀλλ’ ἔχομεν εὐθύς Ἰταλίαν ἅπασαν, ἧς μέγεθος καὶ ἀρετὴν καὶ δύναμιν ἄλλῳ πού τινι μᾶλλον ἀγνοεῖν ἢ σοὶ προσήκει.” μικρὸν οὖν ἐπισχῶν ὁ Κινέας, “Ἰταλίαν δέ,” εἶπεν, “ὦ βασιλεῦ, λαβόντες, τί
- 4 ποιήσομεν;” καὶ ὁ Πύρρος οὕτω τὴν διάνοιαν αὐτοῦ καθορῶν, “Ἐγγύς,” εἶπεν, “ἡ Σικελία χεῖρας ὀρέγει, νῆσος εὐδαίμων καὶ πολυάνθρωπος, ἀλῶναι δὲ ῥάστη· στάσις γάρ, ὦ Κινέα, πάντα νῦν ἐκεῖνα καὶ ἀναρχία πόλεων καὶ δημαγωγῶν ὀξύτης Ἀγαθοκλέους ἐκλελοιπότης.” “Εἰκότα,” ἔφη, “λέγεις,” ὁ Κινέας· “ἀλλ’ ἢ τοῦτο πέρασ
- 5 ἡμῖν τῆς στρατείας, λαβεῖν Σικελίαν;” “Θεός,”

1

πᾶν γὰρ ἐξαιρεῖ λόγος

ὃ καὶ σίδηρος πολεμίων δράσειεν ἄν.

(Phoenissae, 517 f., Kirrhoff.)

PYRRHUS

himself with Pyrrhus, and sent by him as ambassador to the cities, he confirmed the saying of Euripides, to wit, "all can be won by eloquence

That even the sword of warring enemies might gain."

At any rate, Pyrrhus used to say that more cities had been won for him by the eloquence of Cineas than by his own arms; and he continued to hold Cineas in especial honour and to demand his services. It was this Cineas, then, who, seeing that Pyrrhus was eagerly preparing an expedition at this time to Italy, and finding him at leisure for the moment, drew him into the following discourse. "The Romans, O Pyrrhus, are said to be good fighters, and to be rulers of many warlike nations; if, then, Heaven should permit us to conquer these men, how should we use our victory?" And Pyrrhus said: "Thy question, O Cineas, really needs no answer; the Romans once conquered, there is neither barbarian nor Greek city there which is a match for us, but we shall at once possess all Italy, the great size and richness and importance of which no man should know better than thyself." After a little pause, then, Cineas said: "And after taking Italy, O King, what are we to do?" And Pyrrhus, not yet perceiving his intention, replied: "Sicily is near, and holds out her hands to us, an island abounding in wealth and men, and very easy to capture, for all is faction there, her cities have no government, and demagogues are rampant now that Agathocles is gone." "What thou sayest," replied Cineas, "is probably true; but will our expedition stop with the taking of Sicily?" "Heaven grant us," said Pyrrhus,

- ἔφη ὁ Πύρρος, “νικᾶν διδώῃ καὶ κατορθοῦν· τούτοις δὲ προάγωσι χρησόμεθα πραγμάτων μεγάλων. τίς γὰρ ἂν ἀπόσχοιτο Λιβύης καὶ Καρχηδόνας ἐν ἐφικτῷ γενομένης, ἦν Ἀγαθοκλῆς ἀποδρᾶς ἐκ Συρακουσῶν κρύφα καὶ περάσας ναυσὶν ὀλίγαις λαβεῖν παρ’ οὐδὲν ἦλθεν; ὅτι δὲ τουτων κρατήσασιν ἡμῖν οὐδεὶς ἀντιστήσεται τῶν νῦν ὑβριζόντων πολεμίων, τί ἂν λέγοι τις;”
- 6 “Οὐδέν,” ὁ Κινέας εἶπε· “δῆλον γὰρ ὅτι καὶ Μακεδονίαν ἀναλαβεῖν καὶ τῆς Ἑλλάδος ἄρχειν ὑπάρξει βεβαίως ἀπὸ τηλικαύτης δυνάμεως.
γενομένων δὲ πάντων ὑφ’ ἡμῖν, τί ποιήσομεν;”
καὶ ὁ Πύρρος ἐπιγελάσας, “Σχολήν,” ἔφη, “ἄξομεν πολλήν, καὶ κώθων, ὧ μακάριε, καθημερινὸς ἔσται, καὶ διὰ λόγων συνόντες ἀλλήλους
- 7 εὐφρανοῦμεν.” ἐνταῦθα δὲ τῶν λόγων καταστήσας τὸν Πύρρον ὁ Κινέας, “Εἶτα,” ἔφη, “τί νῦν ἐμποδῶν ἔστιν ἡμῖν βουλομένοις κώθωνι χρῆσθαι καὶ σχολάζειν μετ’ ἀλλήλων, εἰ ταῦτα ἔχομεν ἤδη καὶ πάρεστιν ἀπραγμόνως ἐφ’ ἃ δι’ αἵματος καὶ πόνων μεγάλων καὶ κινδύνων μέλλομεν ἀφί-ξεσθαι, πολλὰ καὶ δράσαντες ἑτέρους κακὰ καὶ παθόντες;”
- 8 Τούτοις τοῖς λόγοις ἠνίασε μᾶλλον ἢ μετέθηκε τὸν Πύρρον ὁ Κινέας, νοήσαντα μὲν ὅσῃν ἀπέλειπεν εὐδαιμονίαν, ὧν δὲ ὠρέγετο τὰς ἐλπίδας ἀφείναι μὴ δυνάμενον.

XV. Πρῶτον μὲν οὖν ἀπέστειλε τὸν Κινεάν τοῖς Ταραντίνοις στρατιώτας ἄγοντα τρισχιλίους·

PYRRHUS

“victory and success so far; and we will make these contests but the preliminaries of great enterprises. For who could keep his hands off Libya, or Carthage, when that city got within his reach, a city which Agathocles, slipping stealthily out of Syracuse and crossing the sea with a few ships, narrowly missed taking? And when we have become masters here, no one of the enemies who now treat us with scorn will offer further resistance; there is no need of saying that.” “None whatever,” said Cineas, “for it is plain that with so great a power we shall be able to recover Macedonia and rule Greece securely. But when we have got everything subject to us, what are we going to do?” Then Pyrrhus smiled upon him and said: “We shall be much at ease, and we’ll drink bumpers, my good man, every day, and we’ll gladden one another’s hearts with confidential talks.” And now that Cineas had brought Pyrrhus to this point in the argument, he said: “Then what stands in our way now if we want to drink bumpers and while away the time with one another? Surely this privilege is ours already, and we have at hand, without taking any trouble, those things to which we hope to attain by bloodshed and great toils and perils, after doing much harm to others and suffering much ourselves.”

By this reasoning of Cineas Pyrrhus was more troubled than he was converted; he saw plainly what great happiness he was leaving behind him, but was unable to renounce his hopes of what he eagerly desired.

XV. First, then, he sent Cineas to Tarentum with three thousand soldiers; next, after numerous ἔπειτα πολλῶν ἰππηγῶν καὶ καταφράκτων καὶ πορθμείων παντοδαπῶν ἐκ Τάραντος κομισθέντων ἐνεβίβαζεν ἐλέφαντας εἴκοσι καὶ τρισχιλίους ἰππεῖς, πεζοὺς δὲ δισμυρίους καὶ δισχιλίους τοξότας καὶ σφενδονήτας πεντακοσίους. γενομένων δὲ πάντων ἐτοιμῶν ἀναχθεῖς ἔπλει καὶ μέσον ἔχων τὸν Ἴόνιον ἀρπάζεται βορέα ἀνέμῳ

 2 παρ' ὧραν ἐκραγέντι. καὶ βιασθεῖς αὐτὸς μὲν ἀρετῇ καὶ προθυμίᾳ ναυτῶν καὶ κυβερνητῶν ἐξανέφερε καὶ προσανῆγε τῇ γῇ πολυπόνως καὶ παραβόλως, τοῦ δὲ ἄλλου στόλου συγχυθέντος καὶ τῶν νεῶν σκεδασθεισῶν αἱ μὲν ἀποσφαλεῖσαι τῆς Ἰταλίας ἐξεώσθησαν εἰς τὸ Λιβυκὸν καὶ Σικελικὸν πέλαγος, τὰς δὲ ὑπερβαλεῖν μὴ δυνηθείσας ἄκραν Ἰαπυγίαν νύξ τε κατελάμβανε, καὶ πολλὴ καὶ χαλεπὴ θάλασσα παίουσα πρὸς χωρία δύσσορμα καὶ τυφλὰ πάσας διέφθειρε πλὴν
 3 τῆς βασιλικῆς. αὕτη δὲ πλαγίου¹ μὲν ἔτι ὄντος τοῦ κύματος ἠμύνετο καὶ διέφευγε μεγέθει καὶ ῥώμῃ τὰς ἐπιβολὰς τῆς θαλάσσης· ἐπεὶ δὲ περιελθὼν ἀπὸ γῆς ἀπήντα τὸ πνεῦμα καὶ κίνδυνον εἶχεν ἢ ναῦς ἀντίπρωρος ἰσταμένη πρὸς κλύδωνα πολλὴν διαρραγῆναι, τὸ δὲ ἐφέντας αὐθις ἠγριωμένῳ πελάγει καὶ πνεύματι τροπὰς λαμβάνοντι παντοδαπὰς φέρεσθαι φοβερώτερον ἐφαίνετο τῶν παρόντων κακῶν, ἄρας ὁ Πύρρος αὐτὸν
 4 ἀφῆκεν εἰς θάλασσαν, καὶ τῶν φίλων καὶ τῶν δορυφόρων εὐθύς ἦν ἄμιλλα καὶ προθυμία περὶ αὐτόν. ἢ δὲ νύξ καὶ τὸ κύμα μετὰ ψόφου μεγάλου καὶ τραχείας ἀνακοπῆς χαλεπὴν ἐποίησε τὴν βοήθειαν, ὥστε μόλις ἡμέρας ἧδη

¹ πλαγίου with Sintenis¹, Blass, and the MSS.: πελαγίου.

PYRRHUS

cavalry-transports, decked vessels, and passage-boats of every sort had been brought over from Tarentum, he put on board of them twenty elephants and three thousand horse, twenty thousand foot, two thousand archers, and five hundred slingers. When all was ready, he put out and set sail ; but when he was half way across the Ionian sea he was swept away by a north wind that burst forth out of all season. In spite of its violence he himself, through the bravery and ardour of his seamen and captains, held out and made the land, though with great toil and danger ; but the rest of the fleet was thrown into confusion and the ships were scattered. Some of them missed Italy and were driven off into the Libyan and Sicilian sea ; others, unable to round the Iapygian promontory, were overtaken by night, and a heavy and violent sea, which drove them upon harbourless and uncertain shores, and destroyed them all except the royal galley. She, as long as the waves drove upon her side, held her own, and was saved by her great size and strength from the blows of the water ; but soon the wind veered round and met her from the shore, and the ship was in danger of being crushed by the heavy surges if she stood prow on against them. However, to allow her again to be tossed about by an angry open sea and by blasts of wind that came from all directions, was thought to be more fearful than their present straits. Pyrrhus therefore sprang up and threw himself into the sea, and his friends and bodyguards were at once emulously eager to help him. But night and the billows with their heavy crashing and violent recoil made assistance difficult, so that it was not until day μαραιομένου τοῦ πνεύματος ἐκπεσεῖν αὐτὸν ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν, τῷ μὲν σώματι παντάπασιν ἀδυνάτως ἔχοντα, τόλμη δὲ καὶ ῥώμη τῆς ψυχῆς ἀνταίρουτα 5 πρὸς τὴν ἀπορίαν. ἅμα δὲ οἳ τε Μεσσάπιοι, καθ' οὓς ἐξεβράσθη, συνέθεον βοηθοῦντες ἐκ τῶν παρόντων προθύμως, καὶ προσεφέροντο τῶν σωζομένων ἔνιαι νεῶν, ἐν αἷς ἦσαν ἵππεῖς μὲν ὀλίγοι παντάπασι, πεζοὶ δὲ δισχιλίων ἐλάττους, ἐλέφαντες δὲ δύο.

XVI. Τούτους ἀναλαβὼν ὁ Πύρρος ἐβάδιζεν εἰς Τάραντα. καὶ τοῦ Κινέου προαγαγόντος εἰς ἀπάντησιν, ὡς ἦσθετο, τοὺς στρατιώτας, παρελθὼν οὐδὲν ἀκόντων οὐδὲ πρὸς βίαν ἔπραττε τῶν Ταραντίνων, ἕως ἀνεσώθησαν αἱ νῆες ἐκ τῆς θαλάττης καὶ συνῆλθεν ἡ πλείστη τῆς δυνάμεως.
 2 τηνικαῦτα δὲ ὁρῶν τὸ πλῆθος ἄνευ μεγάλης ἀνάγκης μήτε σώζεσθαι δυνάμενον μήτε σώζειν, ἀλλ' οἷον ἐκείνου προπολεμοῦντος οἴκοι καθῆσθαι περὶ λουτρὰ καὶ συνουσίας γενόμενον, ἀπέκλεισε μὲν τὰ γυμνάσια καὶ τοὺς περιπάτους, ἐν οἷς ἀλύοντες ὑπὲρ τῶν πραγμάτων λόγῳ διεστρατήγουν, πότους δὲ καὶ κώμους καὶ θαλίας ἀκαίρους ἀνεῖλεν, ἐκάλει δὲ πρὸς τὰ ὄπλα, καὶ περὶ τοὺς καταλόγους τῶν στρατευομένων ἀπαραίτητος ἦν καὶ λυπηρός, ὥστε πολλοὺς ἐκ τῆς πόλεως ἀπελθεῖν ἀθηεῖα τοῦ ἄρχεσθαι δουλείαν τὸ μὴ πρὸς ἡδονὴν ζῆν καλοῦντας.

3 Ἐπεὶ δὲ Λαιβίνος ὁ τῶν Ῥωμαίων ὑπατος ἠγγέλλετο πολλῇ στρατιᾷ χωρεῖν ἐπ' αὐτὸν ἅμα had already come and the wind was dying away that he succeeded in gaining the shore, in body altogether powerless, but with boldness and strength of spirit still making head against his distress. The Messapians, among whom he had been cast forth, ran together with eager offers to assist as well as they could, and at the same time some of his ships that had escaped the storm came up; in these there were but a few horsemen all told, less than two thousand footmen, and two elephants.

PYRRHUS

XVI. With these Pyrrhus set out for Tarentum, where Cineas, on learning of his approach, led out his soldiers to meet him. Entering the city, he did nothing that was against the wishes of the Tarentines, nor did he put any compulsion upon them, until his ships came back in safety from the sea and the greater part of his forces were assembled. Then, however, seeing that the multitude were incapable, unless under strong constraint, of either saving themselves or saving others, but were inclined to let him do their fighting for them while they remained at home in the enjoyment of their baths and social festivities, he closed up the gymnasia and the public walks, where, as they strolled about, they fought out their country's battles in talk; he also put a stop to drinking-bouts, revels, and festivals, as unseasonable, called the men to arms, and was stern and inexorable in his enrolment of them for military service. Many therefore left the city, since they were not accustomed to being under orders, and called it servitude not to live as they pleased.

And now word was brought to Pyrrhus that Laevinus the Roman consul was coming against him

τὴν Λευκανίαν διαπορθῶν, οὐδέπω μὲν οἱ σύμ-μαχοι παρήσαν αὐτῷ, δεινὸν δὲ ποιούμενος ἀνασχέσθαι καὶ περιιδεῖν τοὺς πολεμίους ἐγγυ-τέρω προϊόντας ἐξήλθε μετὰ τῆς δυνάμεως, προπέμψας κήρυκα πρὸς τοὺς Ῥωμαίους, εἰ φίλον ἐστὶν αὐτοῖς πρὸ πολέμου δίκας λαβεῖν παρὰ τῶν Ἰταλιωτῶν, αὐτῷ δικαστῇ καὶ διαλλακτῇ χρησα-4 μένους. ἀποκριναμένου δὲ τοῦ Λαιβίνου μήτε διαλλακτὴν Πύρρον αἰρεῖσθαι Ῥωμαίους μήτε δεδοικέναι πολέμιον, προελθὼν κατεστρατο-πέδευσε ἐν τῷ μεταξὺ πεδίῳ Πανδοσίας πόλεως καὶ Ἡρακλείας. πυθόμενος δὲ τοὺς Ῥωμαίους ἐγγὺς εἶναι καὶ πέραν τοῦ Σίριος ποταμοῦ καταστρατοπεδεύειν, προσίππευσε τῷ ποταμῷ θέας ἔνεκα· καὶ κατιδὼν τάξιν τε καὶ φυλακὰς καὶ 393 κόσμον αὐτῶν καὶ τὸ σχῆμα τῆς στρατοπεδείας 5 ἐθαύμασε, καὶ τῶν φίλων προσαγορεύσας τὸν ἐγγυτάτω, “Τάξις μὲν,” εἶπεν, “ὦ Μεγάκλεις, αὕτη τῶν βαρβάρων οὐ βάρβαρος, τὸ δὲ ἔργον εἰσόμεθα.” καὶ διὰ φροντίδος ἔχων ἤδη τὸ μέλλον ἔγνω τοὺς συμμάχους ἀναμένειν, τοῖς δὲ Ῥωμαίοις, ἂν πρότερον ἐπιχειρῶσι διαβαίνειν, ἐπέστησε φυλακὴν ὑπὲρ τοῦ ποταμοῦ τὴν 6 εἴρξουσιν. οἱ δὲ, ἅπερ ἐκείνος ἔγνω περιμένειν, φθῆναι σπεύδοντες, ἐνεχείρουν τῇ διαβάσει, κατὰ πόρον μὲν οἱ πεζοί, πολλαχόθεν δὲ οἱ ἰππεῖς διεξελαύνοντες τὸν ποταμόν, ὥστε δείσαντας τὴν κύκλωσιν ἀναχωρεῖν τοὺς Ἕλληνας, αἰσθόμενον δὲ τὸν Πύρρον καὶ διαταραχθέντα τοῖς μὲν ἡγεμόσι τοῦ πεζοῦ παρεγγυᾶν εὐθὺς εἰς τάξιν καθίστασθαι καὶ περιμένειν ἐν τοῖς ὅπλοις, αὐτὸν

PYRRHUS

with a large army and plundering Lucania as he came. Pyrrhus had not yet been joined by his allies, but thinking it an intolerable thing to hold back and suffer his enemies to advance any nearer, he took the field with his forces, having first sent a herald to the Romans with the enquiry whether it was their pleasure, before waging war, to receive satisfaction from the Italian Greeks, employing him as arbiter and mediator. But Laevinus made answer that the Romans neither chose Pyrrhus as a mediator nor feared him as a foe. Pyrrhus therefore went forward and pitched his camp in the plain between the cities of Pandosia and Heracleia. When he learned that the Romans were near and lay encamped on the further side of the river Siris, he rode up to the river to get a view of them; and when he had observed their discipline, the appointment of their watches, their order, and the general arrangement of their camp, he was amazed, and said to the friend who was nearest him: "The discipline of these Barbarians is not barbarous; but the result will show us what it amounts to." He was now less confident of the issue, and determined to wait for his allies; but he stationed a guard on the bank of the river to check the Romans if, in the meantime, they should attempt to cross it. The Romans, however, anxious to anticipate the coming of the forces which Pyrrhus had decided to await, attempted the passage, their infantry crossing the river by a ford, and their cavalry dashing through the water at many points, so that the Greeks on guard, fearing that they would be surrounded, withdrew. When Pyrrhus saw this, he was greatly disturbed, and charging his infantry officers to form in line of battle at once and stand

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

δὲ τοῖς ἵππεῦσι παρεξελάσαι τρισχιλίοις οὔσιν, ἐλπίζοντα διαβαίνοντας ἔτι καὶ διεσπασμένους 7 ἀτάκτους λήψεσθαι τοὺς Ῥωμαίους· ἐπεὶ δ' ἑώρα θυρεοῦς τε πολλοὺς ὑπερφαινομένους τοῦ ποταμοῦ καὶ τοὺς ἵππεῖς ἐπελαύνοντας ἐν τάξει, συστρέψας ἐνέβαλε πρῶτος, αὐτόθεν τε περίοπτος ὦν ὄπλων κάλλει καὶ λαμπρότητι κεκοσμημένων περιττῶς, καὶ τὴν δόξαν ἐπιδεικνύμενος ἔργοις οὐκ ἀποδέουσαν αὐτοῦ τῆς ἀρετῆς· μάλιστα δὲ ὅτι τὰς χεῖρας καὶ τὸ σῶμα παρέχων τῷ ἀγῶνι καὶ τοὺς καθ' αὐτὸν ἀμυνόμενος ἐρωμένως οὐ συνεχεῖτο 8 τὸν λογισμὸν οὐδὲ τοῦ φρονεῖν ἐξέπιπτεν, ἀλλ' ὥσπερ ἔξωθεν ἐφορῶν διεκυβέρνα τὸν πόλεμον, αὐτὸς μεταθέων ἑκασταχόσε καὶ παραβοηθῶν
 τοῖς ἐκβιάζεσθαι δοκοῦσιν.

Ἐνθα δὴ Λεοννάτος ὁ Μακεδῶν ἄνδρα κατιδὼν Ἴταλὸν ἐπέχοντα τῷ Πύρρῳ καὶ τὸν ἵππον ἀντιπαρεξάγοντα καὶ συμμεθιστάμενον αἰεὶ καὶ συγκινούμενον, “Ὁρᾶς,” εἶπεν, “ὦ βασιλεῦ, τὸν βάρβαρον ἐκείνου, ὃν ὁ μέλας ἵππος ὁ λευκόπους φέρει; μέγα τι βουλευομένῳ καὶ δεινὸν ὁμοίος 9 ἔστι. σοὶ γὰρ ἐνορᾷ καὶ πρὸς σὲ τέταται πνεύματος μεστὸς ὦν καὶ θυμοῦ, τοὺς δὲ ἄλλους ἑᾶ χαίρειν. ἀλλὰ σὺ φυλάττου τὸν ἄνδρα.”
 καὶ ὁ Πύρρος ἀπεκρίνατο, “Τὸ μὲν εἰμαρμένον, ὦ Λεοννάτε, διαφυγεῖν ἀδύνατον· χαίρων δὲ οὔτε οὔτος οὔτ' ἄλλος τις Ἴταλῶν εἰς χεῖρας ἡμῖν σύνεισιν.” ἔτι ταῦτα προσδιαλεγόμενων ὁ Ἴταλὸς διαλαβὼν τὸ δόρυ καὶ συστρέψας τὸν under arms, he himself rode out with his three thousand horsemen, hoping to come upon the Romans while they were still crossing, and to find them scattered and in disorder. But when he saw a multitude of shields gleaming on the bank of the river and the cavalry advancing upon him in good order, he formed his men in close array and led them to the attack. He was conspicuous at once for the beauty and splendour of his richly ornamented armour, and showed by his deeds that his valour did not belie his fame; and this most of all because, while actively participating in the fight and vigorously repelling his assailants, he did not become confused in his calculations nor lose his presence of mind, but directed the battle as if he were surveying it from a distance, darting hither and thither himself and bringing aid to those whom he thought to be overwhelmed.

PYRRHUS

Here Leonnatus the Macedonian, observing that an Italian was intent upon Pyrrhus, and was riding out against him and following him in every movement from place to place, said: "Seest thou, O King, that Barbarian yonder, riding the black horse with white feet? He looks like a man who has some great and terrible design in mind. For he keeps his eyes fixed upon thee, and is intent to reach thee with all his might and main, and pays no heed to anybody else. So be on thy guard against the man." To him Pyrrhus made reply: "What is fated, O Leonnatus, it is impossible to escape; but with impunity neither he nor any other Italian shall come to close quarters with me." While they were still conversing thus, the Italian levelled his spear, wheeled his horse, and 10 ἵππον ὄρμησεν ἐπὶ τὸν Πύρρον. εἶτα ἅμα παίει μὲν αὐτὸς τῷ δόρατι τοῦ βασιλέως τὸν ἵππον, παίει δὲ τὸν ἐκείνου παραβαλὼν ὁ Λεοννάτος. ἀμφοτέρων δὲ τῶν ἵππων πεσόντων τὸν μὲν Πύρρον οἱ φίλοι περισχόντες ἀνήρπασαν, τὸν δὲ Ἴταλὸν μαχόμενον διέφθειραν. ἦν δὲ τῷ γένει Φρεντανός, Ἰλῆς ἡγεμών, Ὀπλακος ὄνομα.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

XVII. Τοῦτο δὲ ἐδίδαξε τὸν Πύρρον μάλλον φυλάττεσθαι καὶ τοὺς ἵππεῖς ὁρῶν ἐνδιδόντας μετεπέμπετο τὴν φάλαγγα καὶ παρέταττεν, αὐτὸς δὲ τὴν χλαμύδα καὶ τὰ ὄπλα παραδούς ἐνὶ τῶν ἐταίρων Μεγακλεῖ, τοῖς δὲ ἐκείνου τρόπον τινὰ κατακρύψας ἑαυτὸν ἐπήγε τοῖς Ῥωμαίοις. δεξαμένων δὲ ἐκείνων καὶ συμβαλόντων χρόνου τε πολὺν εἰστήκει τὰ τῆς μάχης ἄκριτα, καὶ τροπὰς ἐπτὰ λέγεται φευγόντων ἀνάπαλιν καὶ
 2 διωκόντων γενέσθαι. καὶ γὰρ ἡ διάμειψις τῶν ὄπλων ἐν καιρῷ πρὸς σωτηρίαν αὐτοῦ γεγонуῖα τοῦ βασιλέως ὀλίγον ἐδέησεν ἀνατρέψαι τὰ πράγματα καὶ διαφθεῖραι τὴν νίκην. πολλῶν γὰρ ἐφιεμένων τοῦ Μεγακλέους, ὁ πρῶτος πατάξας καὶ καταβαλὼν αὐτόν, ὄνομα Δεξόος, ἀφάρπασας τὸ κράνος καὶ τὴν χλαμύδα τῷ Λαιβίνῳ προσίπευσεν ἀναδεικνύων ἅμα καὶ βοῶν ἀνήρη-
 3 κέναι τὸν Πύρρον. ἦν οὖν παρὰ τὰς τάξεις τῶν λαφύρων παραφερομένων καὶ ἀναδεικνυμένων τοῖς τε Ῥωμαίοις χαρὰ μετ' ἀλαλαγμοῦ καὶ τοῖς Ἑλλησιν ἀθυμία καὶ κατάπληξις, ἄχρι οὐ μαθὼν ὁ Πύρρος τὸ γινόμενον παρήλαυε γυμνῷ τῷ προσώπῳ τὴν τε δεξιὰν ὀρέγων τοῖς μαχομένοις καὶ τῇ φωνῇ σημαίνων ἑαυτόν. τέλος δὲ τῶν

394

PYRRHUS

charged upon Pyrrhus. Then at the same instant the Barbarian's spear smote the king's horse, and his own horse was smitten by the spear of Leonnatus. Both horses fell, but while Pyrrhus was seized and rescued by his friends, the Italian, fighting to the last, was killed. He was a Frentanian by race, captain of a troop of horse, Oplax by name.¹

XVII. This taught Pyrrhus to be more on his guard; and seeing that his cavalry were giving way, he called up his phalanx and put it in array, while he himself, after giving his cloak and armour to one of his companions, Megacles, and hiding himself after a fashion behind his men, charged with them upon the Romans. But they received and engaged him, and for a long time the issue of the battle remained undecided; it is said that there were seven turns of fortune, as each side either fled back or pursued. And indeed the exchange of armour which the king had made, although it was opportune for the safety of his person, came near overthrowing his cause and losing him the victory. For many of the enemy assailed Megacles, and the foremost of them, Dexoüs by name, smote him and laid him low, and then, snatching away his helmet and cloak, rode up to Laevinus, displaying them, and shouting as he did so that he had killed Pyrrhus. Accordingly, as the spoils were carried along the ranks and displayed, there was joy and shouting among the Romans, and among the Greeks consternation and dejection, until Pyrrhus, learning what was the matter, rode along his line with his face bare, stretching out his hand to the combatants and giving them to know him by his voice. At last, when the Romans were more than θηρίων ἐκβιαζομένων μάλιστα τοὺς Ῥωμαίους, καὶ τῶν ἵππων, πρὶν ἐγγὺς γενέσθαι, δυσανασχετούτων καὶ παραφερόντων τοὺς ἐπιβάτας, ἐπαγαγὼν τὴν Θετταλικὴν ἵππον αὐτοῖς ταρασσομένοις ἐτρέψατο πολλῷ φόνῳ.

¹ Cf. Dionysius Hal., Excerpta ex lib. xix., 12.

- 4 Διονύσιος μὲν οὖν ὀλίγῳ τῶν πεντακισχιλίων καὶ μυρίων ἐλάσσονας πεσεῖν ἱστορεῖ Ῥωμαίων, Ἰερώνυμος δὲ μόνους ἑπτακισχιλίους, τῶν δὲ περὶ Πύρρον ὁ μὲν Διονύσιος μυρίους καὶ τρισχιλίους, ὁ δὲ Ἰερώνυμος ἐλάττονας τῶν τετρακισχιλίων· κράτιστοι δὲ ἦσαν οὗτοι· καὶ τῶν φίλων ὁ Πύρρος καὶ τῶν στρατηγῶν οἷς μάλιστα χρώμενος διετέλει καὶ πιστεύων ἀπέβαλεν. οὐ μὴν
- 5 ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸ στρατόπεδον ἔλαβε τῶν Ῥωμαίων ἐκλιπόντων, καὶ πόλεις συμμαχίδας αὐτῶν προσηγάγετο, καὶ χώραν πολλὴν διεπόρθησε, καὶ προῆλθεν ὅσον μὴ πλέον σταδίων τριακοσίων ἀποσχεῖν τῆς Ῥώμης. ἀφίκοντο δὲ αὐτῷ Λευκανῶν τε πολλοὶ καὶ Σαννιτῶν μετὰ τὴν μάχην, οὓς ἐμέμψατο μὲν ὑστερήσαντας, ἦν δὲ δῆλος ἠδόμενος καὶ μέγα φρονῶν ὅτι μόνους τοῖς μετ' αὐτοῦ καὶ Ταραντινοῖς ἐκράτησε τῆς μεγάλης Ῥωμαίων δυνάμεως.

XVIII. Ῥωμαῖοι δὲ Λαιβῖνον μὲν οὐκ ἀπήλλαξαν τῆς ἀρχῆς. καίτοι λέγεται Γάϊον Φαβρίκιον εἰπεῖν ὡς οὐκ Ἠπειρώται Ῥωμαίους, ἀλλὰ Πύρρος νενικήκοι Λαιβῖνον, οἰόμενον οὐ τῆς δυνάμεως, ἀλλὰ τῆς στρατηγίας γεγονέναι τὴν ἠτταν· ἀναπληροῦντες δὲ τὰς τάξεις καὶ συντάττοντες ἑτέρας προθύμως, καὶ λόγους ἀδεεῖς καὶ σοβαροὺς περὶ τοῦ πολέμου λέγοντες, ἐκπληξιν τῷ Πύρρῳ

2 παρείχον. ἔδοξεν οὖν αὐτῷ πέμψαντι πρότερον

PYRRHUS

ever crowded back by the elephants, and their horses, before they got near the animals, were terrified and ran away with their riders, Pyrrhus brought his Thessalian cavalry upon them while they were in confusion and routed them with great slaughter.

Dionysius states that nearly fifteen thousand of the Romans fell, but Hieronymus says only seven thousand; on the side of Pyrrhus, thirteen thousand fell, according to Dionysius, but according to Hieronymus less than four thousand. These, however, were his best troops; and besides, Pyrrhus lost the friends and generals whom he always used and trusted most. However, he took the camp of the Romans after they had abandoned it, and won over to his side some of their allied cities; he also wasted much territory, and advanced until he was within three hundred furlongs' distance from Rome. And now, after the battle, there came to him many of the Lucanians and Samnites. These he censured for being late, but it was clear that he was pleased and proud because with his own troops and the Tarantines alone he had conquered the great force of the Romans.

XVIII. The Romans did not depose Laevinus from his consular office; and yet we are told that Caius Fabricius declared that it was not the Epeirots who had conquered the Romans, but Pyrrhus who had conquered Laevinus, Fabricius being of the opinion that the Roman defeat was not due to their army, but to its general; but they lost no time in filling up their depleted legions and raising others, used fearless and vehement language about the war, and thus filled Pyrrhus with consternation. He decided, therefore, to send to them first and find out whether they were

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- διάπειραν λαβεῖν τῶν ἀνδρῶν, εἰ συμβατικῶς ἔχοιεν, ἡγουμένῳ τὸ μὲν ἐλεῖν τὴν πόλιν καὶ κρατῆσαι παντάπασιν οὐ μικρὸν ἔργον οὐδὲ τῆς παρούσης δυνάμεως εἶναι, τὴν δὲ φιλίαν καὶ τὰς διαλύσεις κάλλιστα ἔχειν πρὸς δόξαν αὐτῷ μετὰ νίκην. πεμφθεὶς οὖν ὁ Κινέας ἐνετύγχανε τοῖς δυνατοῖς, καὶ δῶρα παισὶν αὐτῶν καὶ γυναιξίν
- 3 ἔπεμψε παρὰ τοῦ βασιλέως. ἔλαβε δὲ οὐδεὶς, ἀλλ' ἀπεκρίναντο πάντες καὶ πᾶσαι ὅτι δημοσίᾳ σπονδῶν γενομένων καὶ τὰ παρ' αὐτῶν ὑπάρξει πρόθυμα τῷ βασιλεῖ καὶ κεχαρισμένα. πρὸς δὲ τὴν σύγκλητον ἐπαγωγὰ τοῦ Κινέου πολλὰ καὶ φιλάνθρωπα διαλεχθέντος, ἄσμενοι μὲν οὐδὲν οὐδὲ ἐτοίμως ἐδέχοντο, καίπερ ἄνδρας τε τοὺς ἠλωκότας ἐν τῇ μάχῃ δίχα λύτρων ἀφιέντος αὐτοῖς τοῦ Πύρρου καὶ συγκατεργάσασθαι τὴν
- 4 Ἰταλίαν ἐπαγγελλομένου, φιλίαν δὲ ἀντὶ τούτων ἑαυτῷ καὶ τοῖς Ταραντίνοις ἄδειαν, ἕτερον δὲ μηδὲν αἰτουμένου. δῆλοί γε μὴν ἦσαν ἐνδιδόντες οἱ πολλοὶ πρὸς τὴν εἰρήνην, ἠττημένοι τε μεγάλη μάχῃ καὶ προσδοκῶντες ἕτεραν ἀπὸ μείζονος δυνάμεως, τῶν Ἰταλικῶν τῷ Πύρρῳ προσγεγονό-
- 5 των. ἔνθα δὲ Κλαύδιος Ἀππίος, ἀνὴρ ἐπιφανής, ὑπὸ δὲ γήρως ἅμα καὶ πηρώσεως ὀμμάτων ἀπειρηκῶς πρὸς τὴν πολιτείαν καὶ πεπαυμένος, ἀπαγγελλομένων τότε τῶν παρὰ τοῦ βασιλέως καὶ λόγου κατασχόντος ὡς μέλλει ψηφίζεσθαι τὰς διαλύσεις ἢ σύγκλητος, οὐκ ἐκαρτέρησεν, ἀλλὰ τοὺς θεράποντας ἄρασθαι κελεύσας αὐτὸν ἐκομίζετο πρὸς τὸ βουλευτήριον ἐν φορείῳ δι' ἀγορᾶς.
- 6 γενόμενον δὲ πρὸς ταῖς θύραις οἱ μὲν παῖδες ἅμα τοῖς γαμβροῖς ὑπολαβόντες καὶ περισχόντες disposed to come to terms, for he regarded the capture of their city and their complete conquest as a large task and one that was beyond his present force, whereas a friendly settlement with them after a victory would greatly enhance his reputation. Accordingly, Cineas was sent to Rome, where he had conferences with the men in authority, and sent their wives and children gifts in the name of his king. No one, however, would accept the gifts, but all replied, men and women alike, that if a peace were publicly concluded they also, on their part, would show goodwill and kindness to the king. Moreover, though Cineas made many kind and alluring proposals to the senate, not one of them was received there with alacrity or pleasure, although Pyrrhus offered to restore without a ransom their men who had been captured in the battle, and promised to assist them in the subjugation of Italy, and in return for these favours asked only friendship for himself, immunity for the Tarentines, and nothing else. Nevertheless, most of the senators were plainly inclined towards peace, since they had been defeated in one great battle, and expected another with a larger army, now that the Italian Greeks had joined Pyrrhus. At this point Appius Claudius, a man of distinction, but one whom old age and blindness had forced to give up all public activities, now that the message from the king had come and a report was rife that the senate was going to vote for the proposed cessation of hostilities, could not restrain himself, but ordered his attendants to take him up and had himself carried on a litter through the forum to the senate-house. When he had reached the door, his sons and sons-in-law took him up in their arms and brought εἰσηγόν, ἡ δὲ βουλὴ σιωπὴν αἰδουμένη τὸν ἄνδρα μετὰ τιμῆς ἔσχευ.

PYRRHUS

XIX. Ὁ δὲ αὐτόθεν καταστάς, “Πρότερον μὲν,” ἔφη, “τὴν περὶ τὰ ὄμματα τύχην ἀνιαρῶς ἔφερον, ὧ Ῥωμαῖοι, νῦν δὲ ἄχθομαι πρὸς τῷ τυφλὸς εἶναι μὴ καὶ κωφὸς ὢν, ἀλλ’ ἀκούων αἰσχυρὰ βουλευμάτων καὶ δόγματα ὑμῶν ἀνατρέποντα τῆς Ῥώμης τὸ κλέος. ποῦ γὰρ ὑμῶν ὁ πρὸς ἅπαντας ἀνθρώπους θρυλούμενος αἰεὶ λόγος, 395 ὡς, εἰ παρῆν ἐκεῖνος εἰς Ἰταλίαν ὁ μέγας Ἀλέξανδρος καὶ συνηνέχθη νέοις ἡμῖν καὶ τοῖς πατράσιν ἡμῶν ἀκμάζουσιν, οὐκ ἂν ὑμνεῖτο νῦν ἀνίκητος, ἀλλ’ ἡ φυγὼν ἂν ἢ που πεσὼν ἐνταῦθα 2 τὴν Ῥώμην ἐνδοξοτέραν ἀπέλιπε; ταῦτα μέντοι κενὴν ἀλαζονείαν καὶ κόμπου ἀποδείκνυτε, Χάονας καὶ Μολοσσούς, τὴν αἰεὶ Μακεδόνων λείαν, δεδιότες, καὶ τρέμοντες Πύρρον, ὃς τῶν Ἀλεξάνδρου δορυφόρων ἓνα γοῦν αἰεὶ περιέπων καὶ θεραπεύων διατετέλεκε, καὶ νῦν οὐ βοηθῶν τοῖς ἐνταῦθα μᾶλλον ἢ Ἐλλησιν ἢ φεύγων τοὺς ἐκεῖ πολεμίους πλανᾶται περὶ τὴν Ἰταλίαν, ἐπαγγελ- 3 λόμενος ἡμῖν τὴν ἡγεμονίαν ἀπὸ ταύτης τῆς δυνάμεως ἢ μέρος μικρὸν αὐτῷ Μακεδονίας οὐκ ἤρκεσε διαφυλάξαι. μὴ τοῦτον οὖν ἀπαλλάξειν νομίζετε ποιησάμενοι φίλον, ἀλλὰ ἐκείνους ἐπάξασθαι καταφρονήσαντας ὑμῶν ὡς πᾶσιν εὐκατεργάστων, εἰ Πύρρος ἄπεισι μὴ δούς δίκην ὢν him inside, and the senators, out of regard for the man, kept respectful silence.

PYRRHUS

XIX. Then Appius raised himself up where he was and said: "Up to this time, O Romans, I have regarded the misfortune to my eyes as an affliction, but it now distresses me that I am not deaf as well as blind, that I might not hear the shameful resolutions and decrees of yours which bring low the glory of Rome. For what becomes of the words that ye are ever reiterating to all the world, namely, that if the great Alexander of renown had come to Italy and had come into conflict with us, when we were young men, and with our fathers, when they were in their prime, he would not now be celebrated as invincible, but would either have fled, or, perhaps, have fallen there, and so have left Rome more glorious still? Surely ye are proving that this was boasting and empty bluster, since ye are afraid of Chaonians and Molossians, who were ever the prey of the Macedonians, and ye tremble before Pyrrhus, who has ever been a minister and servitor to one at least of Alexander's bodyguards,¹ and now comes wandering over Italy, not so much to help the Greeks who dwell here, as to escape his enemies at home, promising to win for us the supremacy here with that army which could not avail to preserve for him a small portion of Macedonia. Do not suppose that ye will rid yourselves of this fellow by making him your friend; nay, ye will bring against you others, and they will despise you as men whom anybody can easily subdue, if Pyrrhus goes away without having been punished for his insults, but ὑβρισεν, ἀλλὰ καὶ προσλαβὼν μισθὸν τὸ¹ ἐπεγγελάσαι Ῥωμαίοις Ταραντίνους καὶ Σαννίτας.”

¹ Referring sarcastically to his relations with Ptolemy and Demetrius.

Τοιαῦτα τοῦ Ἀππίου διαλεχθέντος ὁρμὴ παρέστη πρὸς τὸν πόλεμον αὐτοῖς, καὶ τὸν Κινέαν ἀποπέμπουσιν ἀποκρινάμενοι Πύρρον ἐξελθόντα
 4 τῆς Ἰταλίας, οὕτως, εἰ δέοιτο, περὶ φιλίας καὶ συμμαχίας διαλέγεσθαι, μέχρι δὲ οὐ πάρεστιν ἐν ὄπλοις, πολεμήσειν αὐτῷ Ῥωμαίους κατὰ κράτος, κὰν μυρίους ἔτι Λαιβίνους τρέψῃται μαχόμενος. λέγεται δὲ Κινέαν, ἐν ᾧ ταῦτα ἔπραττεν, ἅμα ποιησάμενον ἔργον καὶ σπουδάσαντα τῶν τε βίων γενέσθαι θεατὴν καὶ τῆς πολιτείας τὴν ἀρετὴν
 5 κατανοῆσαι, καὶ διὰ λόγων ἐλθόντα τοῖς ἀρίστοις τά τε ἄλλα τῷ Πύρρῳ φράσαι, καὶ εἰπεῖν ὡς ἡ σύγκλητος αὐτῷ βασιλέων πολλῶν συνέδριον φανείη, περὶ δὲ τοῦ πλήθους δεδιέναι, μὴ πρὸς τινα φανῶσι Λερναίαν ὕδραν μαχόμενοι· διπλασίους γὰρ ἤδη τῷ ὑπάτῳ τῶν παρατεταγμένων πρότερον ἠθροῖσθαι, καὶ πολλάκις εἶναι τοσούτους ἔτι τῶν Ῥωμαίων ὄπλα φέρειν δυναμένους.

XX. Ἐκ τούτου πρέσβεις ἀφίκοντο περὶ τῶν αἰχμαλώτων οἱ περὶ Γάϊον Φαβρίκιον, οὐ πλείστον ἔφη Ῥωμαίους λόγον ἔχειν ὁ Κινέας ὡς ἀνδρὸς ἀγαθοῦ καὶ πολεμικοῦ, πένητος δὲ ἰσχυρῶς. τούτον οὖν ὁ Πύρρος ἰδίᾳ φιλοφρονούμενος ἔπειθε λαβεῖν χρυσίον, ἐπ' οὐδενὶ δῆθεν αἰσχυρῶ, φιλίας δέ τι καὶ ξενίας ἐπονομάζων τοῦτο σύμ-
 2 βολον. ἀπωσαμένου δὲ τοῦ Φαβρικίου τότε μὲν

¹ τὸ with Blass : τοῦ.

PYRRHUS

actually rewarded for them in having enabled Tarantines and Samnites to mock at Romans."

After Appius had thus spoken, his hearers were seized with eagerness to prosecute the war, and Cineas was sent back with the reply that Pyrrhus must first depart out of Italy, and then, if he wished, the Romans would talk about friendship and alliance; but as long as he was there in arms, they would fight him with all their might, even though he should rout in battle ten thousand men like Laevinus. It is said, too, that Cineas, while he was on this mission, made it his earnest business at the same time to observe the life and manners of the Romans, and to understand the excellences of their form of government; he also conversed with their best men, and had many things to tell Pyrrhus, among which was the declaration that the senate impressed him as a council of many kings, and that, as for the people, he was afraid it might prove to be a Lernaean hydra for them to fight against, since the consul already had twice as many soldiers collected as those who faced their enemies before, and there were many times as many Romans still who were capable of bearing arms.

XX. After this, an embassy came from the Romans to treat about the prisoners that had been taken. The embassy was headed by Caius Fabricius, who, as Cineas reported, was held in highest esteem at Rome as an honourable man and good soldier, but was inordinately poor. To this man, then, Pyrrhus privately showed kindness and tried to induce him to accept gold, not for any base purpose, indeed, but calling it a mark of friendship and hospitality. But Fabricius rejected the gold, and for that day Pyrrhus ἠσύχασε, τῇ δ' ὑστεραία βουλόμενος αὐτὸν ἐκπλήξαι μήπω θεατὴν ἐλέφαντος γεγεννημένον, ἐκέλευσε τῶν θηρίων τὸ μέγιστον ἐξόπισθεν αὐτοῖς παραστήσαι κοινολογουμένοις, αὐλαίαν παρατείναντας. ἐγένετο δὴ ταῦτα· καὶ σημεῖον δοθέντος ἢ μὲν αὐλαία παρήχθη, τὸ δὲ θηρίον ἄφνω τὴν τε προνομαίαν ἀράμενον ὑπερέσχε τῆς κεφαλῆς τοῦ Φαβρικίου καὶ φωνὴν ἀφήκε φοβερὰν 3 καὶ τραχεῖαν. ὁ δὲ ἡρέμα μεταστραφεὶς καὶ διαμειδιάσας πρὸς τὸν Πύρρον εἶπεν· “Οὔτε χθές με τὸ χρυσίον ἐκίνησεν οὔτε σήμερον τὸ θηρίον.”

 ἐν δὲ τῷ δείπνῳ λόγων παντοδαπῶν γενομένων, πλείστων δὲ περὶ τῆς Ἑλλάδος καὶ τῶν φιλοσοφούντων, ἔτυχέ πως ὁ Κινέας ἐπιμνησθεὶς τοῦ Ἐπικούρου, καὶ διήλθεν ἃ λέγουσι περὶ θεῶν καὶ πολιτείας καὶ τέλους, τὸ μὲν ἐν ἡδονῇ τιθέμενοι, πολιτείαν δὲ φεύγοντες ὡς βλάβην καὶ σύγχυσιν τοῦ μακαρίου, τὸ δὲ θεῖον ἀπωτάτω χάριτος καὶ ὀργῆς καὶ τοῦ μέλειν ἡμῶν εἰς ἀπράγμονα 4 βίον καὶ μεστὸν εὐπαθειῶν ἀποικίζοντες. ἔτι δὲ αὐτοῦ λέγοντος ἀνακραγῶν ὁ Φαβρικός, “ὦ Ἡράκλεις,” εἶπε, “Πύρρῳ τὰ δόγματα μέλοι ταῦτα καὶ Σαυνίταις, ἕως πολεμοῦσι πρὸς ἡμᾶς.”

Οὕτω δὴ θαυμάσας τὸ φρόνημα τοῦ ἀνδρὸς καὶ τὸ ἦθος ὁ Πύρρος ἔτι μᾶλλον ὠρέγετο φιλίαν ἀντὶ πολέμου πρὸς τὴν πόλιν αὐτῷ γενέσθαι· 396 κακεῖνον ἰδίᾳ παρεκάλει ποιησάμενον τὰς διαλύσεις ἔπεσθαι καὶ συζῆν μετ' αὐτοῦ, πρῶτον ὄντα πάντων τῶν ἐταίρων καὶ τῶν στρατηγῶν. ὁ δὲ ἠσυχῆ λέγεται πρὸς αὐτὸν εἰπεῖν, “Ἄλλ' οὐδὲ

PYRRHUS

let him alone; on the following day, however, wishing to frighten a man who had not yet seen an elephant, he ordered the largest of these animals to be stationed behind a hanging in front of which they stood conversing together. This was done; and at a given signal the hanging was drawn aside, and the animal suddenly raised his trunk, held it over the head of Fabricius, and emitted a harsh and frightful cry. But Fabricius calmly turned and said with a smile to Pyrrhus: "Your gold made no impression on me yesterday, neither does your beast to-day." Again, at supper, where all sorts of topics were discussed, and particularly that of Greece and her philosophers, Cineas happened somehow to mention Epicurus, and set forth the doctrines of that school concerning the gods, civil government, and the highest good, explaining that they made pleasure the highest good, but would have nothing to do with civil government on the ground that it was injurious and the ruin of felicity, and that they removed the Deity as far as possible from feelings of kindness or anger or concern for us, into a life that knew no care and was filled with ease and comfort. But before Cineas was done, Fabricius cried out and said: "O Hercules, may Pyrrhus and the Samnites cherish these doctrines, as long as they are at war with us."

Thus Pyrrhus was led to admire the high spirit and character of the man, and was all the more eager to have friendship with his city instead of waging war against it; he even privately invited him, in case he brought about the settlement, to follow his fortunes and share his life as the first and foremost of all his companions and generals. But Fabricius, as we are told, said quietly to him: "Nay, O King, this σοὶ τοῦτο, βασιλεῦ, λυσιτελές ἐστίν· αὐτοὶ γὰρ οἱ νῦν σε τιμῶντες καὶ θαυμάζοντες, ἂν ἐμοῦ πείραν λάβωσιν, ὑπ' ἐμοῦ μᾶλλον ἐθελήσουσιν ἢ 5 σοῦ βασιλεύεσθαι” τοιοῦτος μὲν ὁ Φαβρίκιος. ὁ δὲ Πύρρος οὐ πρὸς ὀργὴν οὐδὲ τυραννικῶς ἐδέξατο τὸν λόγον, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοῖς φίλοις ἀπήγγειλε τοῦ Φαβρικίου τὴν μεγαλοφροσύνην, καὶ τοὺς αἰχμαλώτους ἐκείνῳ μόνῳ διεπίστευσε, ὅπως, εἰ μὴ ψηφίσαιτο τὴν εἰρήνην ἢ σύγκλητος, ἀσπασάμενοι τοὺς προσήκοντας καὶ τὰ Κρόνια διεορτάσαντες ἀποπεμφθεῖεν πάλιν πρὸς αὐτόν. καὶ ἀπεπέμφθησαν μετὰ τὴν ἑορτὴν, τῷ ὑπολειφθέντι τῆς βουλῆς ζημίαν θάνατον ψηφισαμένης.

XXI. Μετὰ ταῦτα τοῦ Φαβρικίου τὴν ἀρχὴν παραλαβόντος ἤκεν ἀνὴρ εἰς τὸ στρατόπεδον πρὸς αὐτὸν ἐπιστολὴν κομίζων, ἣν ἔγραψεν ὁ τοῦ βασιλέως ἰατρὸς ἐπαγγελλόμενος φαρμάκοις ἀναιρήσειν τὸν Πύρρον, εἰ χάρις αὐτῷ παρ' ἐκείνων ὁμολογηθεῖ ἴσως τὸν πόλεμον ἀκινδύνως. ὁ δὲ Φαβρίκιος δυσχεράνας πρὸς τὴν ἀδικίαν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, καὶ τὸν συνάρχοντα διαθεῖς ὁμοίως, ἔπεμψε γράμματα πρὸς τὸν Πύρρον κατὰ τάχος 2 φυλάττεσθαι τὴν ἐπιβουλὴν κελεύων. εἶχε δὲ οὕτως τὰ γεγραμμένα· “Γάϊος Φαβρίκιος καὶ Κόϊντος Αἰμίλιος ὑπατοὶ Ῥωμαίων Πύρρῳ βασιλεῖ χαίρειν. οὔτε φίλων εὐτυχῆς ἕοικας εἶναι κριτῆς οὔτε πολεμίων. γνῶση δὲ τὴν πεμφθεῖσαν ἡμῖν ἐπιστολὴν ἀναγνοῦς, ὅτι χρηστοῖς would not be to thy advantage; for the very men who now admire and honour thee, if they should become acquainted with me, would prefer to have me as their king rather than thee." Such a man was Fabricius. And Pyrrhus did not receive the speech with anger or like a tyrant, but actually reported to his friends the magnanimity of Fabricius, and entrusted his prisoners of war to him alone, on condition that, in case the senate should not vote for the peace, they should be sent back again to him, though they might first greet their relatives and celebrate the festival of Saturn. And they were so sent back after the festival, the senate having voted a penalty of death for any that stayed behind.

PYRRHUS

XXI. After this, and when Fabricius had assumed the consulship,¹ a man came into his camp with a letter for him. The letter had been written by the physician of Pyrrhus, who promised that he would take the king off by poison, provided that the Romans would agree to reward him for putting an end to the war without further hazard on their part. But Fabricius, who was indignant at the iniquity of the man, and had disposed his colleague to feel likewise, sent a letter to Pyrrhus with all speed urging him to be on his guard against the plot. The letter ran as follows: "Caius Fabricius and Quintus Aemilius, consuls of Rome, to King Pyrrhus, health and happiness. It would appear that thou art a good judge neither of friends nor of enemies. Thou wilt see, when thou hast read the letter which we send, that the men with whom thou art at war are ¹ The chronology of the story is at fault here. Fabricius and Aemilius were consuls in 278, the year after the battle at Asculum described in §§ 5 ff.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- καὶ δίκαιοις ἀνδράσι πολεμεῖς, ἀδίκους δὲ καὶ 3 κακοῖς πιστεύεις. οὐδὲ γὰρ ταῦτα σὴ χάριτι μνηύομεν, ἀλλ' ὅπως μὴ τὸ σὸν πάθος ἡμῖν διαβολὴν ἐνέγκῃ καὶ δόλῳ δόξωμεν, ὡς ἀρετῇ μὴ δυνάμενοι, κατεργάσασθαι τὸν πόλεμον.” ἐντυχῶν τούτοις τοῖς γράμμασιν ὁ Πύρρος καὶ τὴν ἐπιβουλήν ἐξελέγξας τὸν μὲν ἰατρὸν ἐκόλασε, Φαβρικήφ δὲ καὶ Ῥωμαίοις ἀμοιβὴν ἐδώρειτο προῖκα τοὺς αἰχμαλώτους, καὶ πάλιν ἔπεμψε τὸν
 4 Κινέαν διαπραξόμενον αὐτῷ τὴν εἰρήνην. οἱ δὲ Ῥωμαῖοι, μήτε εἰ χάρις ἐστὶ παρὰ πολεμίου, μήτε εἰ μισθὸς τοῦ μὴ ἀδικηθῆναι, λαβεῖν προῖκα τοὺς ἄνδρας ἀξιώσαντες ἴσους ἀπέλυσαν αὐτῷ Ταραντίνων καὶ Σαυνιτῶν, περὶ δὲ φιλίας καὶ εἰρήνης οὐδὲν εἶων διαλέγεσθαι πρὶν ἀράμενος τὰ ὅπλα καὶ τὸν στρατὸν ἐξ Ἰταλίας αἰς ἦλθε ναυσὶν ἀποπλεύσῃ πάλιν εἰς Ἡπειρον.
- 5 Ἐκ τούτου μάχης ἄλλης τῶν πραγμάτων αὐτῷ δεομένων ἀναλαβὼν τὴν στρατιὰν ἐχώρει, καὶ περὶ Ἄσκλον πόλιν τοῖς Ῥωμαίοις συνάψας καὶ βιαζόμενος πρὸς χωρία δύσιππα καὶ ποταμὸν ὑλώδη καὶ τραχύν, ἔφοδον τῶν θηρίων οὐ λαβόντων ὥστε προσμίξαι τῇ φάλαγγι, τραυμάτων πολλῶν γενομένων καὶ νεκρῶν πεσόντων, τότε 6 μὲν διεκρίθη μέχρι νυκτὸς ἀγωνισάμενος. τῇ δ' ὑστεραία στρατηγῶν δι' ὀμαλοῦ τὴν μάχην θέσθαι καὶ τοὺς ἐλέφαντας ἐν τοῖς ὅπλοις γενέσθαι τῶν

PYRRHUS

honourable and just, but that those whom thou trustest are unjust and base. And indeed we do not give thee this information out of regard for thee, but in order that thy ruin may not bring infamy upon us, and that men may not say of us that we brought the war to an end by treachery because we were unable to do so by valour." When Pyrrhus had read this letter and got proof of the plot against his life, he punished the physician, and as a requital to Fabricius and the Romans made them a present of his prisoners of war, and once more sent Cineas to negotiate a peace for him. But the Romans would not consent to receive the men for nothing, either as a favour from an enemy, or as a reward for not committing iniquity against him, and therefore released for Pyrrhus an equal number of Tarentines and Samnites whom they had taken; on the subject of friendship and peace, however, they declared they would allow nothing to be said until Pyrrhus had taken his arms and his army out of Italy and sailed back to Epeirus on the ships that brought him.

Consequently, Pyrrhus found himself obliged to fight another battle, and after recuperating his army he marched to the city of Asculum, where he engaged the Romans. Here, however, he was forced into regions where his cavalry could not operate, and upon a river with swift current and wooded banks, so that his elephants could not charge and engage the enemy's phalanx. Therefore, after many had been wounded and slain, for the time being the struggle was ended by the coming of night. But on the next day, designing to fight the battle on level ground, and to bring his elephants to bear upon the ranks of the enemy, Pyrrhus occupied betimes the

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- πολεμίῳν, προέλαβε τὰς δυσχωρίας φυλακῆ, καὶ πολλὰ καταμίξας ἀκοντίσματα καὶ τοξεύματα τοῖς θηρίοις ἐπήγγε μετὰ ῥώμης καὶ βίας πυκνὴν καὶ συντεταγμένην τὴν δύναμιν. οἱ δὲ Ῥωμαῖοι τὰς διακλίσεις καὶ τὰς ἀντιπαραγωγὰς τὰς πρότερον οὐκ ἔχοντες, ἐξ ἐπιπέδου συνεφέροντο κατὰ στόμα· καὶ σπεύδοντες ὤσασθαι τοὺς ὀπλίτας πρὶν ἐπιβῆναι τὰ θηρία, δεινούς περὶ τὰς σαρίσας τῶν ξιφῶν ἀγῶνας εἶχον, ἀφειδοῦντες ἑαυτῶν καὶ τὸ τρῶσαι καὶ καταβαλεῖν ὀρῶντες, τὸ δὲ παθεῖν
- 7 εἰς οὐδὲν τιθέμενοι. χρόνῳ δὲ πολλῷ λέγεται μὲν 397 ἀρχὴ τροπῆς κατ' αὐτὸν γενέσθαι τὸν Πύρρον ἐπερείσαντα τοῖς ἀντιτεταγμένοις, τὸ δὲ πλεῖστον ἀλκῆ καὶ βία τῶν ἐλεφάντων κατειργάσατο, χρῆσασθαι τῇ ἀρετῇ πρὸς τὴν μάχην τῶν Ῥωμαίων μὴ δυναμένων, ἀλλ' οἷον ἐφόδῳ κύματος ἢ σεισμῷ κατερείποντος οἰομένων δεῖν ἐξίστασθαι, μὴδὲ ὑπομένειν ἀπράκτους ἀποθνήσκειν, ἐν τῷ μὴδὲν ὠφελεῖν πάντα πάσχοντας τὰ χαλεπώτατα.
- 8 Τῆς δὲ φυγῆς οὐ μακρᾶς εἰς τὸ στρατόπεδον γενομένης ἑξακισχιλίους ἀποθανεῖν φησι τῶν Ῥωμαίων Ἰερώνυμος, τῶν δὲ περὶ Πύρρον ἐν τοῖς βασιλικοῖς ὑπομνήμασιν ἀνενεχθῆναι τρισχιλίους
- 9 πεντακοσίους καὶ πέντε τεθνηκότας. ὁ μὲντοι Διονύσιος οὔτε δύο περὶ Ἄσκλον μάχας οὔτε ὁμολογουμένην ἤτταν ἰστορεῖ γενέσθαι Ῥωμαίων, ἀπαξ δὲ μέχρι δυσμῶν ἡλίου μαχεσαμένους μόλις ἀπαλλαγῆναι, τοῦ Πύρρου τρωθέντος ὑσσῶ τὸν βραχίονα καὶ τὴν ἀποσκευὴν ἄμα Δαυνίων¹

¹ Δαυνίων with Blass, in agreement with Dionys. Hal. xx. 3: Σαμνιτῶν.

PYRRHUS

unfavourable parts of the field with a detachment of his troops; then he put great numbers of slingers and archers in the spaces between the elephants and led his forces to the attack in dense array and with a mighty impetus. So the Romans, having no opportunity for sidelong shifts and counter-movements, as on the previous day, were obliged to engage on level ground and front to front; and being anxious to repulse the enemy's men-at-arms before their elephants came up, they fought fiercely with their swords against the Macedonian spears, reckless of their lives and thinking only of wounding and slaying, while caring naught for what they suffered. After a long time, however, as we are told, they began to be driven back at the point where Pyrrhus himself was pressing hard upon his opponents; but the greatest havoc was wrought by the furious strength of the elephants, since the valour of the Romans was of no avail in fighting them, but they felt that they must yield before them as before an onrushing billow or a crashing earthquake, and not stand their ground only to die in vain, or suffer all that is most grievous without doing any good at all.

After a short flight the Romans reached their camp, with a loss of six thousand men, according to Hieronymus, who also says that on the side of Pyrrhus, according to the king's own commentaries, thirty-five hundred and five were killed. Dionysius, however, makes no mention of two battles at Asculum, nor of an admitted defeat of the Romans, but says that the two armies fought once for all until sunset and then at last separated; Pyrrhus, he says, was wounded in the arm by a javelin, and also had his baggage διαρπασάντων, ἀποθανεῖν δὲ καὶ Πύρρου καὶ Ῥωμαίων ἄνδρας ὑπὲρ μυρίους πεντακισχιλίους ἑκατέρων.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Διελύθησαν δὲ ἀμφότεροι· καὶ λέγεται τὸν Πύρρον εἰπεῖν πρὸς τινα τῶν συνηδομένων αὐτῷ, “Ἄν ἔτι μίαν μάχην Ῥωμαίους νικήσωμεν, ἀπο-10 λούμεθα παντελῶς.” πολὺ μὲν γὰρ ἀπωλώλει μέρος ἧς ἄγων ἦκε δυνάμεως, φίλοι δὲ καὶ στρατηγοὶ πλὴν ὀλίγων ἅπαντες, μεταπέμπεσθαι δὲ οὐκ ἦσαν ἕτεροι, καὶ τοὺς αὐτόθι συμμάχους ἀμβλυτέρους ἑώρα, τοῖς δὲ Ῥωμαίοις ὥσπερ ἐκ πηγῆς οἴκοθεν ἐπιρρεοῦσης ἀναπληρούμενον εὐπό-15 ρως καὶ ταχὺ τὸ στρατόπεδον, καὶ ταῖς ἡτταῖς οὐκ ἀποβάλλοντας τὸ θαρρεῖν, ἀλλὰ καὶ ῥώμην καὶ φιλονεικίαν ὑπ’ ὀργῆς ἐπὶ τὸν πόλεμον προσλαμβάνοντας.

XXII. Ἐν τοιαύταις δὲ ὧν ἀπορίαις εἰς ἐλπίδας αὐτὸν πάλιν καινὰς ἐνέπεσε καὶ πράγματα διχοστασίαν ἔχοντα τῆς γνώμης. ἅμα γὰρ ἦκον ἐκ μὲν Σικελίας ἄνδρες Ἀκράγαντα καὶ Συρακούσας καὶ Λεοντίνους ἐγχειρίζοντες αὐτῷ, καὶ δεόμενοι Καρχηδονίους τε συνεκβαλεῖν καὶ τῶν τυράννων ἀπαλλάξαι τὴν νῆσον, ἐκ δὲ τῆς Ἑλλάδος ἀγγέλλοντες ὡς Πτολεμαῖος ὁ Κεραυνὸς ἀπόλωλε 2 συμπεσὼν Γαλάταις μετὰ τῆς δυνάμεως, καὶ νῦν ἂν ἐν καιρῷ μάλιστα δεομένοις βασιλέως Μακεδόσι παραγένοιτο. πολλὰ δὲ τὴν τύχην μεμφά-μενος ὅτι πράξεων μεγάλων ὑποθέσεις εἰς ἓνα

PYRRHUS

plundered by the Daunians;¹ and there fell, on the side of Pyrrhus and on that of the Romans, over fifteen thousand men.

The two armies separated; and we are told that Pyrrhus said to one who was congratulating him on his victory, "If we are victorious in one more battle with the Romans, we shall be utterly ruined." For he had lost a great part of the forces with which he came, and all his friends and generals except a few; moreover, he had no others whom he could summon from home, and he saw that his allies in Italy were becoming indifferent, while the army of the Romans, as if from a fountain gushing forth indoors, was easily and speedily filled up again, and they did not lose courage in defeat, nay, their wrath gave them all the more vigour and determination for the war.

XXII. But while he was involved in such perplexities, new hopes once more inspired him, and projects which divided his purposes. For at one and the same time there came to him from Sicily men who offered to put into his hands the cities of Agrigentum, Syracuse, and Leontini, and begged him to help them to drive out the Carthaginians and rid the island of its tyrants; and from Greece, men with tidings that Ptolemy Ceraunus² with his army had perished at the hands of the Gauls, and that now was the time of all times for him to be in Macedonia, where they wanted a king. Pyrrhus rated Fortune soundly because occasions for two great undertakings had come to him at one time,

¹ Auxiliaries of the Romans from Arpinum in Apulia.

² The son of Ptolemy I. of Egypt. In 280 B.C. he had basely assassinated Seleucus, and made himself king of Macedonia.

- καιρὸν αὐτῷ συνήνεγκε, καὶ νομίζων ὡς ἀμφοτέρων ὑπαρχόντων ἀπολλύναι θάτερον, διηνέχθη τοῖς λογισμοῖς πολὺν χρόνον. εἶτα τοῖς Σικελικοῖς μειζόνων ὑποκείσθαι πραγμάτων δοκούντων, Λι-3 βύης ἐγγυὲς εἶναι δοκούσης, ἐπὶ ταῦτα τρέψας Κινέαν μὲν εὐθύς ἐξέπεμψε προδιαλεξόμενον, ὥσπερ εἰώθει, ταῖς πόλεσιν, αὐτὸς δὲ τοῖς Ταραντίνοις δυσανασχετοῦσιν ἐμβαλὼν φρουράν, καὶ ἀξιούσιν ἢ παρέχειν ἐφ' οἷς ἦκε, συμπολεμοῦντα Ῥωμαίοις, ἢ τὴν χώραν προέμενον αὐτῶν ἀπολιπεῖν τὴν πόλιν οἷαν παρέλαβε, μηδὲν ἐπιεικὲς ἀποκρινάμενος, ἀλλὰ προστάξας ἡσυχίαν ἄγειν καὶ περιμένειν τὸν ἑαυτοῦ καιρὸν, ἐξέπλευσεν.
 4 Ἀψαμένῳ δὲ αὐτῷ Σικελίας ἃ μὲν ἠλπισεν εὐθύς ἀπήντα βέβαια, καὶ παρείχον αἱ πόλεις ἑαυτὰς προθύμως, τῶν δὲ ἀγῶνος καὶ βίας δεηθέντων οὐδὲν ἀντεῖχε τὸ πρῶτον, ἀλλὰ τρισμυρίους πεζοῖς καὶ δισχιλίους πεντακοσίοις ἰππεῦσι καὶ διακοσίαις ναυσὶν ἐπιῶν τούς τε Φοῖνικας ἐξήρει καὶ κατεστρέφετο τὴν ἐπικράτειαν αὐτῶν. τοῦ δ' Ἐρुकος ἐχυρωτάτου τῶν χωρίων ὄντος καὶ πολ-5 λούς ἀμυνομένους ἔχοντος ἔγνω βιάζεσθαι πρὸς τὰ τείχη. καὶ τῆς στρατιᾶς γενομένης ἐτοίμης ἐνεδύσατο τὴν πανοπλίαν, καὶ προελθῶν¹ εὗξατο τῷ Ἡρακλεῖ ποιήσειν ἀγῶνα καὶ θυσίαν ἀριστεῖον, 398
 ἂν τοῦ γένους καὶ τῶν ὑπαρχόντων ἄξιον ἀγωνιστὴν αὐτὸν ἀποδείξῃ τοῖς Σικελίαν οἰκοῦσιν Ἑλλησι· τῇ δὲ σάλπιγγι σημήνας καὶ τοῖς βέλεσι τοὺς βαρβάρους ἀνασκεδάσας καὶ τὰς κλίμακας 6 προσαγαγὼν πρῶτος ἐπέβη τοῦ τείχους. ἀντι-

¹ προελθῶν with Blass: προσελθῶν.

PYRRHUS

and thinking that the presence of both meant the loss of one, he wavered in his calculations for a long time. Then Sicily appeared to offer opportunities for greater achievements, since Libya was felt to be near, and he turned in this direction, and forthwith sent out Cineas to hold preliminary conferences with the cities, as was his wont, while he himself threw a garrison into Tarentum. The Tarentines were much displeased at this, and demanded that he either apply himself to the task for which he had come, namely to help them in their war with Rome, or else abandon their territory and leave them their city as he had found it. To this demand he made no very gracious reply, but ordering them to keep quiet and await his convenience, he sailed off.

On reaching Sicily,¹ his hopes were at once realized securely; the cities readily gave themselves up to him, and wherever force and conflict were necessary nothing held out against him at first, but advancing with thirty thousand foot, twenty-five hundred horse, and two hundred ships, he put the Phoenicians to rout and subdued the territory under their control. Then he determined to storm the walls of Eryx, which was the strongest of their fortresses and had numerous defenders. So when his army was ready, he put on his armour, went out to battle, and made a vow to Heracles that he would institute games and a sacrifice in his honour, if the god would render him in the sight of the Sicilian Greeks an antagonist worthy of his lineage and resources; then he ordered the trumpets to sound, scattered the Barbarians with his missiles, brought up his scaling-ladders, and was the first to mount στάντων δὲ πολλῶν ἀμυνόμενος τοὺς μὲν ἐξέωσε τοῦ τείχους ἐπ' ἀμφότερα καὶ κατέβαλε, πλείστους δὲ περὶ αὐτὸν τῷ ξίφει χρώμενος ἐσώρευσε νεκρούς. ἔπαθε δὲ αὐτὸς οὐδέν, ἀλλὰ καὶ προσιδεῖν δεινὸς ἐφάνη τοῖς πολεμίοις, καὶ τὸν Ὅμηρον ἔδειξεν ὀρθῶς καὶ μετὰ ἐμπειρίας ἀποφαίνοντα τῶν ἀρετῶν μόνην τὴν ἀνδρείαν φορὰς πολλάκις ἐνθουσιώδεις καὶ μανικὰς φερομένην. ἀλούσης δὲ τῆς πόλεως ἔθυσέ τε τῷ θεῷ μεγαλοπρεπῶς καὶ θέας ἀγώνων παντοδαπῶν παρέσχε.

¹ Early in the year 278 B.C.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

XXIII. Τῶν δὲ περὶ Μεσσηνὴν βαρβάρων, Μαμερτίνων δὲ καλουμένων, πολλὰ τοῖς Ἕλλησιν ἐνοχλούντων, ἐνίους δὲ καὶ φόρου πεποιημένων ὑποτελεῖς, πολλῶν δὲ καὶ μαχίμων ὄντων, διὸ καὶ προσηγορεύθησαν Ἀρήϊοι γλώσση τῇ Λατίνων, τοὺς μὲν φορολόγους συλλαβὼν ἀπέκτεινεν, αὐτοὺς δὲ νικήσας μάχῃ πολλὰ τῶν φρουρίων ἐξέκοψε. Καρχηδουνοῖς δὲ συμβατικῶς ἔχουσι, καὶ χρήματα βουλομένοις τελεῖν, εἰ γένοιτο φιλία, καὶ ναῦς ἀποστέλλειν, ἀπεκρίνατο πλειόνων ἐφιέμενος μίαν εἶναι διάλυσιν καὶ φιλίαν πρὸς αὐτούς, εἰ πᾶσαν ἐκλιπόντες Σικελίαν ὄρω χρωῶντο τῇ Λιβυκῇ θαλάσῃ πρὸς τοὺς Ἕλληνας. εὐτυχία δὲ καὶ ῥώμη τῶν παρόντων ἐπαιρόμενος, καὶ διώκων τὰς ἐλπίδας ἐφ' αἷς ἀπ' ἀρχῆς ἔπλευσε, πρώτης δὲ Λιβύης ἐφιέμενος καὶ ναῦς ἔχων πολλὰς πλη-

PYRRHUS

the wall. Many were the foes against whom he strove ; some of them he pushed from the wall on either side and hurled them to the ground, but most he laid dead in heaps about him with the strokes of his sword. He himself suffered no harm, but was a terrible sight for his enemies to look upon, and proved that Homer was right and fully justified in saying that valour, alone of the virtues, often displays transports due to divine possession and frenzy. After the capture of the city, he sacrificed to the god in magnificent fashion and furnished spectacles of all sorts of contests.

XXIII. The Barbarians about Messana, called Mamertines, were giving much annoyance to the Greeks, and had even laid some of them under contribution. They were numerous and warlike, and therefore had been given a name which, in the Latin tongue, signifies martial. Pyrrhus seized their collectors of tribute and put them to death, then conquered the people themselves in battle and destroyed many of their strongholds. Moreover, when the Carthaginians were inclined to come to terms and were willing to pay him money and send him ships in case friendly relations were established, he replied to them (his heart being set upon greater things) that there could be no settlement or friendship between himself and them unless they abandoned all Sicily and made the Libyan Sea a boundary between themselves and the Greeks. But now, lifted up by his good fortune and by the strength of his resources, and pursuing the hopes with which he had sailed from home in the beginning, he set his heart upon Libya first ; and since many of the ships ρωμάτων ἐπιδεεῖς ἤγειρεν ἐρέτας, οὐκ ἐπιεικῶς ἐντυγχάνων οὐδὲ πράως ταῖς πόλεσιν, ἀλλὰ δεσποτικῶς καὶ πρὸς ὀργὴν βιαζόμενος καὶ κολλάζων, οὐκ εὐθύς ὦν οὐδὲ ἐν ἀρχῇ τοιοῦτος, ἀλλὰ καὶ μᾶλλον ἐτέρων τῷ πρὸς χάριν ὀμιλεῖν καὶ πάντα πιστεύειν καὶ μηδὲν ἔροχλεῖν ὑπαγόμενος, εἶτα γινόμενος ἐκ δημαγωγοῦ τύραννος ἀχαριστίας τῇ χαλεπότητι καὶ ἀπιστίας προσωφλίσκανε δόξαν.

¹ As in Iliad, v. 185 ; vi. 101 ; ix. 238.

- 4 Οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ ταῦτα μὲν ὡς ἀναγκαῖα συνεχώρουσαν, καίπερ δυσφοροῦντες· ἐπεὶ δὲ Θοίνωνα καὶ Σωσίστρατον, ἄνδρας ἡγεμονικούς ἐν Συρακούσαις, οἱ πρῶτοι μὲν αὐτὸν ἐλθεῖν ἔπεισαν εἰς Σικελίαν, ἐλθόντι δὲ τὴν πόλιν εὐθύς ἐνεχείρισαν καὶ πλείστα συγκατειργάσαντο τῶν Σικελικῶν, μήτε ἄγειν σὺν αὐτῷ μήτε ἀπολείπειν βουλόμενος ἐν ὑποψίαις εἶχε, καὶ Σωσίστρατος μὲν ἀπέστη
- 5 φοβηθεὶς, Θοίνωνα δὲ τὰ αὐτὰ φρονεῖν αἰτιασάμενος ἀπέκτεινεν, οὐ κατὰ μικρὸν οὐδὲ καθ' ἐν αὐτῷ μεθίστατο τῶν πραγμάτων, ἀλλὰ δεινοῦ τινος μίσους ἐγγενομένου ταῖς πόλεσι πρὸς αὐτὸν αἱ μὲν προσετίθεντο Καρχηδουνοῖς, αἱ δὲ ἐπήγοντο Μαμερτίνοις. ἀποστάσεις δὲ ὄρων ἅπαντα καὶ νεωτερισμοὺς καὶ σύστασιν ἰσχυρὰν ἐφ' αὐτόν, ἐδέξατο γράμματα Σαινιτῶν καὶ Ταραντίνων μόλις ἀντεχόντων ταῖς πόλεσιν αὐταῖς πρὸς τὸν

PYRRHUS

that he had were insufficiently manned, he began to collect oarsmen, not dealing with the cities in an acceptable or gentle manner, but in a lordly way, angrily putting compulsion and penalties upon them. He had not behaved in this way at the very beginning, but had even gone beyond others in trying to win men's hearts by gracious intercourse with them, by trusting everybody, and by doing nobody any harm. But now he ceased to be a popular leader and became a tyrant, and added to his name for severity a name for ingratitude and faithlessness.

Nevertheless the Sicilians put up with these things as necessary, although they were exasperated; but then came his dealings with Thoenon and Sosistratus. These were leading men in Syracuse, and had been first to persuade Pyrrhus to come into Sicily. Moreover, after he had come, they immediately put their city into his hands and assisted him in most of what he had accomplished in Sicily. And yet he was willing neither to take them with him nor to leave them behind, and held them in suspicion. Sosistratus took the alarm and withdrew; but Thoenon was accused by Pyrrhus of complicity with Sosistratus and put to death.¹ With this, the situation of Pyrrhus was suddenly and entirely changed. A terrible hatred arose against him in the cities, some of which joined the Carthaginians, while others called in the Mamertines. And now, as he saw everywhere secessions and revolutionary designs and a strong faction opposed to him, he received letters from the Samnites and Tarentines, who had been excluded from all their territories, could with difficulty maintain the war

¹ Cf. Dionysius Hal., Excerpta ex lib. xx., 8.

πόλεμον, εἰργομένων δὲ τῆς χώρας ἀπάσης καὶ 6 δεομένων βοηθεῖν. τοῦτο δὲ ἦν εὐπρέπεια μὴ φυγὴν εἶναι μηδὲ ἀπόγνωσιν τὸν ἀπόπλουον τῶν αὐτόθι πραγμάτων· τὸ δὲ ἀληθὲς οὐ δυνάμενος κρατεῖν Σικελίας ὥσπερ νεὼς ταραχθείσης, ἀλλ' ἔκβασιν ζητῶν, αὐθις ἔρριψεν ἑαυτὸν εἰς Ἰταλίαν.
 λέγεται δ' ἀπαλλαττόμενος ἤδη πρὸς τὴν νῆσον ἀπιδὼν εἰπεῖν τοῖς περὶ αὐτόν· “Οἷαν ἀπολείπομεν, ὦ φίλοι, Καρχηδονίοις καὶ Ῥωμαίοις παλαίστραν.” καὶ τοῦτο μὲν, ὥσπερ εἰκάσθη, μετ' οὐ πολὺν χρόνον ἐγένετο.

XXIV. Τῶν δὲ βαρβάρων συστάντων ἐπ' αὐτὸν ἀποπλέοντα, Καρχηδονίοις μὲν ἐν τῷ πορθμῷ ναυμαχήσας ἀπέβαλε τῶν νεῶν πολλάς, ταῖς δ' 399 ἄλλαις κατέφυγε πρὸς τὴν Ἰταλίαν, Μαμερτῖνοι δὲ μυρίων οὐκ ἐλάττους προδιαβάντες ἀντιτάξασθαι μὲν ἐφοβήθησαν, ἐν δὲ ταῖς δυσχωρίαις ἐπιτιθέμενοι καὶ προσπίπτοντες ἅπαν τὸ στρατευμα συνετάραξαν. ἔπεσε δὲ δύο θηρία καὶ συχροὶ τῶν ὀπισθοφυλακούντων ἀπέθνησκον.
 2 αὐτὸς οὖν ἀπὸ τοῦ στόματος παρελάσας ἡμύνετο καὶ διεκινδύνευε πρὸς ἄνδρας ἡσκημένους μάχεσ-θαι καὶ θυμοειδεῖς. πληγεῖς δὲ τὴν κεφαλὴν ξίφει καὶ μικρὸν ἐκ τῶν μαχομένων ἀποστὰς ἔτι μᾶλλον ἐπῆρε τοὺς πολεμίους. εἰς δὲ καὶ πολὺ πρὸ τῶν ἄλλων ἐπιδραμών, ἀνὴρ τῷ τε σώματι μέγας καὶ τοῖς ὅπλοις λαμπρὸς, ἐχρήτο τῇ φωνῇ θρασυτέρᾳ 3 καὶ προελθεῖν ἐκέλευεν αὐτόν, εἰ ζῆ. παροξυνθεὶς δὲ ὁ Πύρρος ἐπέστρεψε βία τῶν ὑπασπιστῶν, καὶ

PYRRHUS

even in their cities, and begged for his assistance. This gave him a fair pretext for his sailing away, without its being called a flight or despair of his cause in the island; but in truth it was because he could not master Sicily, which was like a storm-tossed ship, but desired to get out of her, that he once more threw himself into Italy. And it is said that at the time of his departure he looked back at the island and said to those about him: "My friends, what a wrestling ground for Carthaginians and Romans we are leaving behind us!" And this conjecture of his was soon afterwards confirmed.

XXIV. But the Barbarians combined against him as he was setting sail. With the Carthaginians he fought a sea-fight in the strait and lost many of his ships, but escaped with the rest to Italy; and here the Mamertines, more than ten thousand of whom had crossed in advance of him, though they were afraid to match forces with him, yet threw his whole army into confusion by setting upon him and assailing him in difficult regions. Two of his elephants fell, and great numbers of his rearguard were slain. Accordingly, riding up in person from the van, he sought to ward off the enemy, and ran great risks in contending with men who were trained to fight and were inspired with high courage. And when he was wounded on the head with a sword and withdrew a little from the combatants, the enemy were all the more elated. One of them ran forth far in advance of the rest, a man who was huge in body and resplendent in armour, and in a bold voice challenged Pyrrhus to come out, if he were still alive. This angered Pyrrhus, and wheeling round in spite of his guards, he pushed

μετ' ὀργῆς αἵματι πεφυρμένος καὶ δεινὸς ὀφθῆναι τὸ πρόσωπον ὡσάμενος δι' αὐτῶν καὶ φθάσας τὸν βάρβαρον ἔπληξε κατὰ τῆς κεφαλῆς τῷ ξίφει πληγὴν ῥώμη τε τῆς χειρὸς ἅμα καὶ βαφῆς ἀρετῆ τοῦ σιδήρου μέχρι τῶν κάτω διαδραμοῦσαν, ὥστε ἐνὶ χρόνῳ περιπεσεῖν ἑκατέρωσε τὰ μέρη τοῦ
 4 σώματος διχοτομηθέντος. τοῦτο τοὺς βαρβάρους ἐπέσχε τοῦ πρόσω χωρεῖν, ὡς τινα τῶν κρειπτόνων θαυμάσαντας καὶ καταπλαγέντας τὸν Πύρρον. ὁ δὲ τὴν ἄλλην ὁδὸν ἀδεῶς διεξελθὼν ἦκεν εἰς Τάραντα, δισμυρίους πεζοὺς καὶ τρισχιλίους ἵππεις κομίζων. ἀναλαβὼν δὲ τῶν Ταραντίνων τοὺς κρατίστους, εὐθύς ἐπὶ Ῥωμαίους ἦγεν ἐν τῇ Σαυνίτιδι στρατοπεδεύοντας.

XXV. Τῶν δὲ Σαυνιτῶν τά τε πράγματα διέφθαρτο, καὶ τοῦ φρονήματος ὑφεῖντο, κεκρατημένοι μάχαις πολλαῖς ὑπὸ τῶν Ῥωμαίων. ἐνῆν δέ τι καὶ πρὸς τὸν Πύρρον ὀργῆς διὰ τὸν εἰς Σικελίαν πλοῦν· ὅθεν οὐ πολλοὶ τούτων αὐτῷ συνῆλθον. πάντας δὲ νείμας δίχα τοὺς μὲν εἰς τὴν Λευκανίαν ἔπεμψεν ἀντιληψομένους τοῦ ἐτέ-
 2 ρου τῶν ὑπάτων, ὡς μὴ βοηθοίη, τοὺς δὲ ἦγεν αὐτὸς ἐπὶ Μάνιον Κούριον περὶ πόλιν Βενεουεντὸν ἰδρυμένον ἐν ἀσφαλεῖ καὶ περιμένοντα τὴν ἐκ τῆς Λευκανίας βοήθειαν· ἔστι δ' ὅτε καὶ μάντεων αὐτὸν οἰωνοῖς καὶ ἱεροῖς ἀποτρεπόντων ἠσύχαζε. σπεύδων οὖν ὁ Πύρρος ἐπιθέσθαι τούτοις, πρὶν ἐκείνους ἐπελθεῖν, ἄνδρας τε τοὺς κρατίστους καὶ
 426

PYRRHUS

his way through them—full of wrath, smeared with blood, and with a countenance terrible to look upon, and before the Barbarian could strike dealt him such a blow on the head with his sword that, what with the might of his arm and the excellent temper of his steel, it cleaved its way down through, so that at one instant the parts of the sundered body fell to either side. This checked the Barbarians from any further advance, for they were amazed and confounded at Pyrrhus, and thought him some superior being. So he accomplished the rest of his march unmolested and came to Tarentum,¹ bringing twenty thousand foot and three thousand horse. Then, adding to his force the best troops of the Tarentines, he forthwith led them against the Romans, who were encamped in the country of the Samnites.

XXV. But the power of the Samnites had been shattered, and their spirits were broken, in consequence of many defeats at the hands of the Romans. They also cherished considerable resentment against Pyrrhus because of his expedition to Sicily; hence not many of them came to join him. Pyrrhus, however, divided his army into two parts, sent one of them into Lucania to attack the other consul, that he might not come to the help of his colleague, and led the other part himself against Manius Curius, who was safely encamped near the city of Beneventum and was awaiting assistance from Lucania; in part also it was because his soothsayers had dissuaded him with unfavourable omens and sacrifices that he kept quiet. Pyrrhus, accordingly, hastening to attack this consul before the other one came up, took his best men and his most

¹ In the autumn of 276 B.C.

τῶν θηρίων τὰ μαχιμώτατα λαβὼν νυκτὸς ὄρμη-3 σεν ἐπὶ τὸ στρατόπεδον. περιϊόντι δὲ αὐτῷ μακ-ρὰν καὶ δασεΐαν ὕλαις ὁδὸν οὐκ ἀντέσχε τὰ φῶτα, καὶ πλάναι τοῖς στρατιώταις συνέτυχον· καὶ περὶ ταῦτα γινομένης διατριβῆς ἢ τε νύξ ἐπέλιπε καὶ καταφανῆς ἦν ἅμ' ἡμέρᾳ τοῖς πολεμίοις ἐπερχό-μενος ἀπὸ τῶν ἄκρων, ὥστε θόρυβον πολὺν καὶ κίνησιν παρασχεῖν.

Οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ τῶν ἱερῶν τῷ Μανίῳ γενομένων, καὶ τοῦ καιροῦ βοηθεῖν ἀναγκάζοντος, ἐξελθὼν ἐνέβαλε τοῖς πρώτοις καὶ τρεψάμενος ἐφόβησε πάντας, ὥστε καὶ πεσεῖν οὐκ ὀλίγους καὶ τῶν 4 ἐλεφάντων τινὰς ἀλῶναι καταλειφθέντας. αὕτη τὸν Μάνιον ἢ νίκη κατήγαγε μαχοῦμενον εἰς τὸ πεδίον· καὶ συμβαλὼν ἐκ προδήλου τὸ μὲν ἐτρέψατο τῶν πολεμίων, ἔστι δ' ἢ βιασθεῖς ὑπὸ τῶν θηρίων καὶ συσταεῖς πρὸς τὸ στρατόπεδον τοὺς φύλακας ἐκάλει συχνοὺς ἐφεστῶτας τῷ χάρακι 5 μετὰ τῶν ὀπλῶν καὶ ἀκμῆτας. οἱ δὲ ἐπιφανέντες ἐκ τόπων ὀχυρῶν καὶ τὰ θηρία βάλλοντες ἠνάγ-κασαν ἀποστρέφεσθαι καὶ φυγῇ χωροῦντα διὰ τῶν συμμάχων ὀπίσω ταραχὴν ἀπεργάσασθαι καὶ σύγχυσιν, ἣ τὸ νίκημα παρέδωκε τοῖς Ῥωμαίοις, ἅμα δὲ καὶ τὸ κράτος τῆς ἡγεμονίας. καὶ γὰρ φρόνημα καὶ δύναμιν καὶ δόξαν ὡς ἅμαχοι προσλαβόντες ἐκ τῆς ἀρετῆς ἐκείνης καὶ τῶν ἀγώνων Ἰταλίαν μὲν εὐθύς, ὀλίγῳ δὲ ὕστερον Σικελίαν κατέσχον.

XXVI. Οὕτω μὲν ἐξέπεσε τῶν Ἰταλικῶν καὶ 400
 Σικελικῶν ὁ Πύρρος ἐλπίδων, ἐξαετῆ χρόνον ἀνα-λώσας περὶ τοὺς ἐκεῖ πολέμους, καὶ τοῖς¹ πράγ-

¹ τοῖς Coraë's and Bekker have τοῖς μὲν, after Muretus.

PYRRHUS

warlike elephants and set out by night against his camp. But since he took a long circuit through a densely wooded country, his lights did not hold out, and his soldiers lost their way and straggled. This caused delay, so that the night passed, and at day-break he was in full view of the enemy as he advanced upon them from the heights, and caused much tumult and agitation among them.

Manius, however, since the sacrifices were propitious and the crisis forced action upon him, led his forces out and attacked the foremost of the enemy, and after routing these, put their whole army to flight, so that many of them fell and some of their elephants were left behind and captured. This victory brought Manius down into the plain to give battle; here, after an engagement in the open, he routed the enemy at some points, but at one was overwhelmed by the elephants and driven back upon his camp, where he was obliged to call upon the guards, who were standing on the parapets in great numbers, all in arms, and full of fresh vigour. Down they came from their strong places, and hurling their javelins at the elephants compelled them to wheel about and run back through the ranks of their own men, thus causing disorder and confusion there. This gave the victory to the Romans, and at the same time the advantage also in the struggle for supremacy. For having acquired high courage and power and a reputation for invincibility from their valour in these struggles, they at once got control of Italy, and soon afterwards of Sicily.

XXVI. Thus Pyrrhus was excluded from his hopes of Italy and Sicily, after squandering six years' time in his wars there, and after being worsted in his

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

μασιν ἐλαττωθείς, τὸ δὲ ἀνδρεῖον ἀνίκητον ἐν ταῖς ἡτταῖς διαφυλάξας· καὶ νομισθεὶς ἐμπειρία μὲν πολεμικῇ καὶ χειρὶ καὶ τόλμῃ πολὺ πρῶτος εἶναι τῶν καθ' αὐτὸν βασιλέων, ἃ δὲ ταῖς πράξεσιν ἐκτᾶτο ταῖς ἐλπίσιν ἀπολλύναι, δι' ἔρωτα τῶν ἀπόντων οὐδὲν εἰς ὃ δεῖ θέσθαι τῶν ὑπαρχόντων 2 φθάσας. ὅθεν ἀπείκαζεν αὐτὸν ὁ Ἀντίγονος κυβευτῇ πολλὰ βάλλοντι καὶ καλὰ, χρῆσθαι δὲ οὐκ ἐπισταμένῳ τοῖς πεσοῦσι.

Κομίσας δὲ εἰς Ἡπειρον ὀκτακισχιλίους πεζοὺς καὶ πεντακοσίους ἵππεῖς, χρήματα δὴ οὐκ ἔχων ἐζήτηε πόλεμον ᾧ θρέψει τὸ στράτευμα. καὶ τινων Γαλατῶν αὐτῷ προσγενομένων ἐνέβαλεν εἰς Μακεδονίαν Ἀντιγόῃου τοῦ Δημητρίου βασιλεύ-
 3 οντος ὡς ἄρπαγῇ καὶ λεηλασίᾳ χρῆσόμενος. ἐπεὶ δὲ καὶ πόλεις ἐλάμβανε συχνὰς καὶ στρατιῶται δισχιλίοι μετέστησαν ὡς αὐτόν, ἐλπίσας τι πλεονῶρμησεν ἐπὶ τὸν Ἀντίγονον καὶ περὶ τὰ στενὰ προσπεσὼν συνετάραξε τὴν στρατιὰν ἅπασαν. οἱ δὲ ἐπὶ τῆς οὐραγίας τοῦ Ἀντιγόῃου τεταγμένοι Γαλάται, συχνοὶ τὸ πλῆθος ὄντες, ὑπέστησαν εὐρώστως· καὶ καρτερᾶς μάχης γενομένης τούτων μὲν οἱ πλείστοι κατεκόπησαν, οἱ δὲ τῶν ἐλεφάντων ἡγεμόνες ἐγκαταλαμβανόμενοι παρέδωκαν
 4 ἑαυτοὺς καὶ τὰ θηρία πάντα. προσλαβὼν δὲ ὁ Πύρρος τηλικαῦτα, καὶ τῇ τύχῃ μᾶλλον ἢ τοῖς λογισμοῖς χρώμενος, ἐπήγε τῇ φάλαγγι τῶν Μακεδόνων ἀναπεπλησμένη ταραχῆς καὶ φόβου διὰ τὴν ἡτταν. ὅθεν ἐμβολῆς μὲν ἔσχοντο καὶ undertakings, but he kept his brave spirit unconquered in the midst of his defeats; and men believed that in military experience, personal prowess, and daring, he was by far the first of the kings of his time, but that what he won by his exploits he lost by indulging in vain hopes, since through passionate desire for what he had not he always failed to establish securely what he had. For this reason Antigonus used to liken him to a player with dice who makes many fine throws but does not understand how to use them when they are made.

PYRRHUS

He returned to Epeirus¹ with eight thousand foot and five hundred horse, and since he had no money he sought for a war by which he could maintain his army. Some Gauls joined him, and he thereupon made an incursion into Macedonia, where Antigonus the son of Demetrius was reigning, designing to strip and plunder the country. But after he had taken a great number of cities and two thousand Macedonian soldiers had come over to him, he began to hope for greater things, and set out to attack Antigonus, and falling upon him in a narrow pass, threw his whole army into confusion. The Gauls who formed the rearguard of Antigonus, a numerous body, made a sturdy resistance; but after a fierce battle most of these were cut to pieces, while those who had charge of the elephants were hemmed in and surrendered themselves and all their animals. Then Pyrrhus, thus greatly strengthened, and consulting his good fortune rather than his judgment, advanced upon the phalanx of the Macedonians, which was filled with confusion and fear because of their previous defeat. For this

¹ Late in the year 274 B.C.

μάχης πρὸς αὐτόν, τὴν δὲ δεξιὰν προτείνων καὶ στρατηγούς καὶ ταξιάρχους ἀνακαλούμενος, ἅπαντας ὁμαλῶς ἀπέστησε τοὺς πῆξους τοῦ Ἀντιγόνου.
 5 ~~κακείνος~~ μὲν ὑποφεύγων ἅμα τῶν ἰππέων ὀλίγοις¹ τῶν παραλίων τινὰς πόλεων κατέσχευε, ὁ δὲ Πύρρος ἐν εὐτυχήμασι τοσοῦτοις μέγιστον αὐτῷ πρὸς δόξαν οἰόμενος διαπεπραχθαι τὸ περὶ τοὺς Γαλάτας, τὰ κάλλιστα καὶ λαμπρότατα τῶν λαφύρων ἀνέθηκεν εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν τῆς Ἰτωνίδος Ἀθηνᾶς, τότε τὸ ἐλεγεῖον ἐπιγράψας·

Τοὺς θυρεοὺς ὁ Μολοσσὸς Ἰτωνίδι δῶρον Ἀθᾶνα Πύρρος ἀπὸ θρασέων ἐκρέμασεν Γαλατᾶν, πάντα τὸν Ἀντιγόνου καθελὼν στρατόν· οὐ μέγα θαῦμα·

● χμηταὶ καὶ νῦν καὶ πάρος Αἰακίδαι.

6 μετὰ τὴν μάχην δὲ εὐθύς ἀνελάμβανε τὰς πόλεις. τῶν δὲ Αἰγαίων κρατήσας τά τε ἄλλα χαλεπῶς ἐχρήσατο τοῖς ἀνθρώποις, καὶ φρουρὰν Γαλατικὴν ἐν τῇ πόλει κατέλιπε τῶν μετ' αὐτοῦ στρατευομένων. οἱ δὲ Γαλάται γένος ἀπληστότατον χρημάτων ὄντες ἐπέθεντο τῶν βασιλέων αὐτόθι κεκηδευμένων τοὺς τάφους ὀρύττειν, καὶ τὰ μὲν χρήματα διήρπασαν, τὰ δὲ ὅσα πρὸς ὕβριν διέριψαν.
 7 τοῦτο κούφως ἔδοξε καὶ ὀλιγῶρως ἐνεγκεῖν ὁ Πύρρος, ἢ δι' ἀσχολίας τινὰς ὑπερθέμενος ἢ παρῆς ὄλως διὰ φόβον τὸ κολάσαι τοὺς βαρβάρους· ὅθεν ἤκουσε κακῶς ὑπὸ τῶν Μακεδόνων. οὐπω δὲ τῶν πραγμάτων αὐτῷ βεβαιότητα καὶ σύστασιν ἐχόντων μόνιμον, ἠωρεῖτο τῇ γνώμῃ

¹ τῶν ἰππέων ὀλίγοις supplied by Blass, in conformity with the translation of Amyot : ἅμα τῶν παραλίων.

PYRRHUS

reason they refrained from engagement or battle with him, whereupon Pyrrhus, stretching out his right hand and calling upon the generals and captains, brought over to him all the infantry of Antigonus in a body. So Antigonus took to flight with a few of his horsemen, and occupied some of the seaboard cities; while Pyrrhus, thinking that amid so many successes his achievement against the Gauls conduced most to his glory, dedicated the most beautiful and splendid of the spoils in the temple of Athena Itonis, with the following elegiac inscription :

“These shields, now suspended here as a gift to Athena Itonis, Pyrrhus the Molossian took from valiant Gauls, after defeating the entire army of Antigonus; which is no great wonder; for now, as well as in olden time, the Aeacidae are brave spearmen.”

After the battle, however, he at once proceeded to occupy the cities. And after getting Aegae into his power, besides other severities exercised upon its inhabitants he left as a garrison in the city some of the Gauls who were making the campaign with him. But the Gauls, a race insatiable of wealth, set themselves to digging up the tombs of the kings who had been buried there; the treasure they plundered, the bones they insolently cast to the four winds. This outrage Pyrrhus treated with lightness and indifference, as it was thought; he either postponed punishment because he had some business on hand, or remitted it altogether because he was afraid to chastise the Barbarians; and on this account he was censured by the Macedonians. Moreover, before his affairs were securely and firmly established, his thoughts swung παλιν πρὸς ἑτέρας ἐλπίδας. καὶ τὸν μὲν Ἀντίγονον ἐφυβρίζων ἀναίσχυντον ἐκάλει μὴ λαμβάνοντα θοιμάτιον, ἀλλ' ἔτι τὴν πορφύραν φοροῦντα. Κλεωνύμου δὲ τοῦ Σπαρτιάτου παραγενομένου καὶ καλοῦντος αὐτὸν ἐπὶ τὴν Λακεδαίμονα προθύμως ὑπήκουσεν.

- 8 Ὁ δὲ Κλεώνυμος ἦν μὲν γένους βασιλικοῦ, δοκῶν δὲ βίαιος εἶναι καὶ μοναρχικὸς οὔτ' εὐνοίαν οὔτε πίστιν εἶχεν, ἀλλ' Ἄρεως ἐβασίλευε. καὶ τοῦτο μὲν ἐν ἦν κοινὸν ἔγκλημα καὶ πρεσβύτερον αὐτῷ πρὸς τοὺς πολίτας· γυναῖκα δὲ καλὴν καὶ 401 γένους βασιλικοῦ Χιλωνίδα τὴν Λεωτυχίδου πρεσβύτερος ὦν ἔγημεν ὁ Κλεώνυμος. ἡ δὲ Ἀκροτάτῳ τῷ Ἄρεως ἐπιμανεῖσα, μεираκίῳ καθ' ὦραν ἀκμάζοντι, λυπηρὸν ἐρώντι τῷ Κλεωνύμῳ καὶ ἄδοξον ὁμοῦ παρεῖχε τὸν γάμον· οὐδένα γὰρ ἐλάνθανε Σπαρτιατῶν καταφρονούμενος ὑπὸ τῆς
- 9 γυναικός. οὕτω δὲ τῶν κατ' οἶκον ἀνιαρῶν τοῖς πολιτικοῖς προσγενομένων ὑπ' ὀργῆς καὶ βαρυθυμίας ἐπήγε τῇ Σπάρτῃ τὸν Πύρρον, ἔχοντα δισμυρίους καὶ πεντακισχιλίους πεζοὺς, δισχιλίους δ' ἵππεῖς, ἐλέφαντας δὲ εἰκοσιτέσσαρας, ὥστε τῷ μεγέθει τῆς παρασκευῆς εὐθὺς εἶναι κατάδηλον οὐ Κλεωνύμῳ τὴν Σπάρτην, ἀλλὰ τὴν Πελοπόννησον ἑαυτῷ κτώμενον, ἐπεὶ τῷ γε λόγῳ καὶ πρὸς αὐτοὺς ἕξαρνος ἦν τοὺς Λακεδαιμονίους πρεσβεύ-
- 10 σαντας εἰς Μεγάλην πόλιν. ἔφη γὰρ ἐλευθερώσων τὰς ὑπ' Ἀντιγόνῳ πόλεις ἀφίχθαι, καὶ νῆ Δία again towards new hopes. He railed at Antigonus and called him a shameless man for not laying aside the purple and wearing a common robe ; and when Cleonymus the Spartan came and invited him to come to Lacedaemon, he readily listened to him.

PYRRHUS

Now, Cleonymus was of royal lineage, but because he was thought to be of a violent and arbitrary temper, he enjoyed neither goodwill nor confidence at home, but Areus was king there. This was one general ground of complaint which he had against his fellow citizens, and it was of long standing. Besides, Cleonymus in his later years had married Chilonis the daughter of Leotychides, a beautiful woman of royal lineage ; but she had fallen desperately in love with Acrotatus the son of Areus, a young man in the flower of his age, and thus rendered his marriage distressing to Cleonymus, since he loved her, and at the same time disgraceful ; for every Spartan was well aware that the husband was despised by his wife. Thus his domestic vexations added themselves to his political disappointment, and in indignation and wrath he brought Pyrrhus against Sparta.¹ Pyrrhus had twenty-five thousand foot and two thousand horse, besides twenty-four elephants, so that the magnitude of his preparations made it clear at once that he was not aiming to acquire Sparta for Cleonymus, but the Peloponnesus for himself. And yet his professions were all to the contrary, and particularly those which he made to the Lacedaemonian ambassadors themselves when they met him at Megalopolis. He told them he had come to set free the cities which were subject to Antigonus, yes, and that he was going to

¹ In 272 B.C.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

τοὺς νεωτέρους παῖδας εἰς Σπάρτην, εἰ μὴ τι κωλύει, πέμψων ἐντραφησομένους τοῖς Λακωνικοῖς ἔθεσιν, ὡς τούτῳ πλέον ἔχοιεν ἤδη τῶν πάντων βασιλέων. ταῦτα πλαττόμενος καὶ παράγων τοὺς ἐντυγχάνοντας αὐτῷ καθ' ὁδόν, ὡς πρῶτον ἤψατο τῆς Λακωνικῆς ἀρπαγὴν ἐποιεῖτο καὶ λεηλασιαν·

- 11 ἐγκαλούντων δὲ τῶν πρέσβειων, ὅτι μὴ καταγείλας πόλεμον ἐξενήνοχε πρὸς αὐτούς, “ Ἄλλ' οὐδ' ὑμᾶς,” ἔφη, “ τοὺς Σπαρτιάτας ἴσμεν ὅ τι ἂν μέλλητε ποιεῖν ἐτέροις προλέγοντας.” εἰς δὲ τῶν παρόντων, ὄνομα Μανδροκλείδας, εἶπε τῇ φωνῇ λακωνίζων· “ Αἰ μὲν ἐσσι τὺ γε θεός, οὐδὲν μὴ πάθωμεν· οὐ γὰρ ἀδικεῦμεν· αἰ δ' ἄνθρωπος, ἔσσεται καὶ τεῦ κάρρων ἄλλος.”

- XXVII. Ἐκ τούτου κατέβαινον ἐπὶ τὴν Λακεδαίμονα· καὶ τοῦ Κλεωνύμου κελεύοντος ἐξ ἐφόδου προσβαλεῖν φοβηθεῖς ὁ Πύρρος, ὡς λέγεται, μὴ διαρπάσωσιν οἱ στρατιῶται τὴν πόλιν ἐν νυκτὶ προσπεσόντες, ἐπέσχεν, εἰπὼν ὅτι ταῦτὸ ποιήσουσι μεθ' ἡμέραν. αὐτοὶ τε γὰρ ἦσαν ὀλίγοι καὶ ἀπαράσκευοι διὰ τὸ αἰφνίδιον, ὃ τε Ἄρεως οὐκ ἐτύγχανε παρών, ἀλλ' ἐν Κρήτῃ Γορτυνίοις πολεμουμένοις βοηθῶν· καὶ τοῦτο δὴ μάλιστα τὴν πόλιν ἔσωσε δι' ἐρημίαν καὶ ἀσθένειαν κατα-
- 2 φρονηθεῖσαν. ὁ μὲν γὰρ Πύρρος οὐδένα μαχεῖσθαι νομίζων κατηλύσατο, τοῦ δὲ Κλεωνύμου τὴν οἰκίαν οἳ τε φίλοι καὶ εἰλωτες οὕτως ἐκόσμησαν
- 436

PYRRHUS

send his younger sons to Sparta, if nothing prevented, to be brought up in the Lacedaemonian customs, that so they might presently have the advantage over all other princes. With these fictions he beguiled those who came to meet him on his march, but as soon as he reached Laconian territory he began to ravage and plunder it. And when the Spartan ambassadors upbraided him for making war upon them without previous declaration, he said: "Yet we know that you Spartans also do not tell others beforehand what you are going to do." Whereupon one of those who were present, Mandrocleidas by name, said to him in the broad Spartan dialect: "If thou art a god, we shall suffer no harm at thy hands; for we have done thee no wrong; but if a man, another will be found who is even stronger than thou."

XXVII. After this, he marched down against the city of Sparta. Cleonymus urged him to make the assault as soon as he arrived, but Pyrrhus was afraid, as we are told, that his soldiers would plunder the city if they fell upon it at night, and therefore restrained them, saying that they would accomplish just as much by day. For there were but few men in the city, and they were unprepared, owing to the suddenness of the peril; and Areus was not at home, but in Crete, whither he was bringing military aid for the Gortynians. And this, indeed, more than anything else, proved the salvation of the city, which its weakness and lack of defenders caused to be despised. For Pyrrhus, thinking that no one would give him battle, bivouacked for the night, and the friends and Helot slaves of Cleonymus adorned and furnished his house in the expectation

καὶ παρεσκεύασαν ὡς δειπνήσοντος τοῦ Πύρρου παρ' αὐτῷ.

Γενομένης δὲ νυκτὸς οἱ Λακεδαιμόνιοι πρῶτον μὲν ἐβουλεύσαντο τὰς γυναῖκας εἰς Κρήτην ἀποστέλλειν, αἱ δὲ ἀντέστησαν. Ἀρχιδαμία δὲ καὶ ξίφος ἔχουσα πρὸς τὴν γερουσίαν ἦλθεν ἐγκαλοῦσα τοῖς ἀνδράσιν ὑπὲρ τῶν γυναικῶν, εἰ ζῆν αὐτὰς
 3 ἀξιούσι τῆς Σπάρτης ἀπολομένης. ἔπειτα τῷ στρατοπέδῳ τῶν πολεμίων παράλληλον ἐγνώσαν ἐμβαλόντες τάφρον ἔνθεν καὶ ἔνθεν αὐτῆς στήσαι τὰς ἀμάξας, μέχρι τοῦ μέσου τῶν τροχῶν καταχώσαντες, ὅπως ἔδραν ἔχουσαι δυσεκβίαστον ἐμποδῶν ὡς τοῖς θηρίοις. ἀρχομένοις δὲ ταῦτα πράττειν ἤκου αὐτοῖς τῶν παρθένων καὶ γυναικῶν αἱ μὲν ἐν ἱματίοις, καταζωσάμεναι τοὺς χιτωνίσκους, αἱ δὲ μονοχίτωνες, συνεργασόμεναι τοῖς
 4 πρεσβυτέροις. τοὺς δὲ μάχεσθαι μέλλοντας ἐκέλευον ἡσυχάζειν, καὶ λαβοῦσαι μέτρον αὐταὶ καθ' αὐτὰς ἐξεργάσαντο τῆς τάφρου τὸ τρίτον μέρος. ἦν δὲ τὸ μὲν πλάτος αὐτῆς πήχεων ἕξ, τὸ δὲ βάθος τεττάρων, τὸ δὲ μῆκος ὀκτάπλεθρον, ὡς ἱστορεῖ Φύλαρχος, ὡς δ' Ἱερώνυμος, ἔλαττον.
 5 ἅμα δ' ἡμέρα κινουμένων τῶν πολεμίων τὰ ὄπλα τοῖς νέοις ὀρέγουσαι καὶ παραδιδούσαι τὴν τάφρον ἀμύνειν καὶ φυλάττειν ἐκέλευον, ὡς ἡδὺ μὲν νικᾶν ἐν ὀφθαλμοῖς τῆς πατρίδος, εὐκλεῆς δὲ θνήσκειν ἐν χερσὶ μητέρων καὶ γυναικῶν ἀξίως 402 τῆς Σπάρτης πεσόντας. ἡ δὲ Χιλωνίς, ἐκποδῶν οὔσα καθ' ἑαυτήν, βρόχον εἶχεν ἐνημμένον, ὅπως ἐπὶ τῷ Κλεωνύμῳ μὴ γένοιτο τῆς πόλεως ἀλούσης.

PYRRHUS

that Pyrrhus would take supper there with its owner.

When night had come, the Lacedaemonians at first took counsel to send their women off to Crete, but the women were opposed to this; and Archidamia came with a sword in her hand to the senators and upbraided them in behalf of the women for thinking it meet that they should live after Sparta had perished. Next, it was decided to run a trench parallel with the camp of the enemy, and at either end of it to set their waggons, sinking them to the wheel-hubs in the ground, in order that, thus firmly planted, they might impede the advance of the elephants. When they began to carry out this project, there came to them the women and maidens, some of them in their robes, with tunics girt close, and others in their tunics only, to help the elderly men in the work. The men who were going to do the fighting the women ordered to keep quiet, and assuming their share of the task they completed with their own hands a third of the trench. The width of the trench was six cubits, its depth four, and its length eight hundred feet, according to Phylarchus; according to Hieronymus, less than this. When day came and the enemy were putting themselves in motion, these women handed the young men their armour, put the trench in their charge, and told them to guard and defend it, assured that it was sweet to conquer before the eyes of their fatherland, and glorious to die in the arms of their mothers and wives, after a fall that was worthy of Sparta. As for Chilonis, she withdrew from the rest, and kept a halter about her neck, that she might not come into the power of Cleonymus if the city were taken.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- XXVIII. Αὐτὸς μὲν οὖν ὁ Πύρρος ἐβιάζετο κατὰ στόμα τοῖς ὀπλίταις πρὸς ἀσπίδας πολλὰς τῶν Σπαρτιατῶν ἀντιπαρατεταγμένας, καὶ τάφρον οὐ περατὴν οὐδὲ βάσιν ἀσφαλῆ τοῖς μαχομένοις παρέχουσαν ὑπὸ χαννότητος. ὁ δὲ παῖς Πτολεμαῖος, ἔχων δισχιλίους Γαλάτας καὶ Χαόνων λογάδας, ἐξελίξας τὴν τάφρον ἐπειράτο κατὰ τὰς ἀμάξας ὑπερβαίνειν. αἱ δὲ ὑπὸ βάθους καὶ πυκνότητος οὐ μόνον τούτοις τὴν ἔφοδον, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοῖς Λακεδαιμονίοις δύσεργον ἐποιοῦν τὴν βοήθειαν.
- 2 ἀνασπώντων δὲ τῶν Γαλατῶν τοὺς τροχοὺς καὶ ὑποσυρόντων τὰς ἀμάξας εἰς τὸν ποταμὸν, κατιδὼν τὸν κίνδυνον ὁ νεανίας Ἀκρότατος καὶ τὴν πόλιν διαδραμὼν μετὰ τριακοσίων περιῆλθε τὸν Πτολεμαῖον, οὐ συνορώμενος ὑπ' αὐτοῦ διὰ τινὰς συγκλινίας, ἕως προσέβαλε τοῖς ἐσχάτοις καὶ μεταβαλόντας ἠνάγκασε μάχεσθαι πρὸς ἑαυτὸν, ὠθουμένους ὑπ' ἀλλήλων εἰς τε τὴν τάφρον καὶ περὶ ταῖς ἀμάξαις πίπτοντας, ἄχρι οὗ φόνῳ πολ-
- 3 λῶ μόλις ἀνεκόπησαν. ἐθεῶντο δὲ οἳ τε πρεσβύτεροι καὶ τῶν γυναικῶν τὸ πλῆθος ἀριστεύοντα τὸν Ἀκρότατον. ἐπεὶ δὲ ἀπῆει πάλιν διὰ τῆς πόλεως ἐπὶ τὴν αὐτοῦ τάξιν, αἵματος κατάπλεως καὶ γαῦρος, ὑπὸ τῆς νίκης ἐπηρμένος, καὶ μείζων ἔδοξε γεγονέναι καὶ καλλίων ταῖς Λακαίνοις, καὶ τὴν Χιλωνίδα τοῦ ἔρωτος ἐξήλουν. τῶν δὲ πρεσβυτέρων τινὲς ἐπηκολούθουν βοῶντες. “Οἶχε, Ἀκρότατε, καὶ οἶφε τὰν Χιλωνίδα· μόνον παῖδας ἀγαθοὺς τῇ Σπάρτᾳ ποίει.”
- 4 Κατὰ δὲ τὸν Πύρρον αὐτὸν ἰσχυρᾶς μάχης συνεστῶσης ἄλλοι τε λαμπρῶς ἠγωνίζοντο, καὶ

PYRRHUS

XXVIII. Pyrrhus himself, then, with his men-at-arms, tried to force his way directly against the many shields of the Spartans which confronted him, and over a trench which was impassable and afforded his soldiers no firm footing owing to the freshly turned earth. But his son Ptolemy, with two thousand Gauls and picked Chaonians, went round the trench and tried to force a passage where the waggons were. These, however, being so deeply planted in the earth and so close together, made not only his onset, but also the counter-efforts of the Lacedaemonians, a difficult matter. The Gauls pulled the wheels up and were dragging the waggons down into the river; but the young Acrotatus saw the danger, and running through the city with three hundred men got round behind Ptolemy without being seen by him, owing to some depressions in the ground, and at last fell upon his rear ranks and forced them to turn about and fight with him. And now the Barbarians crowded one another into the trench and fell among the waggons, and finally, after great slaughter, were successfully driven back. The elderly men and the host of women watched the brilliant exploit of Acrotatus. And when he went back again through the city to his allotted post, covered with blood and triumphant, elated with his victory, the Spartan women thought that he had become taller and more beautiful than ever, and envied Chilonis her lover. Moreover, some of the elderly men accompanied him on his way, crying: "Go, Acrotatus, and take to thyself Chilonis; only, see that thou begettest brave sons for Sparta."

A fierce battle was also waged where Pyrrhus himself led, and many Spartans made a splendid

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Φύλλιος ἐπὶ πλείστον ἀντισχῶν καὶ πλείστους ἀποκτείνας τῶν βιαζομένων, ὡς ἦσθετο τραυμάτων πλήθει παραλυόμενον ἑαυτὸν, ἐκστάς τι τῶν ἐπιτεταγμένων τῆς χώρας ἔπεσεν ἐντὸς τῶν ὄπλων, ὥστε μὴ γενέσθαι τὸν νεκρὸν ὑπὸ τοῖς πολεμίοις.

XXIX. Νυκτὸς δὲ ἡ μάχη διεκρίθη· καὶ κοιμώμενος ὁ Πύρρος ὄψιν εἶδε τοιαύτην. ἐδόκει βάλλεσθαι κεραυνοῖς ὑπ' αὐτοῦ τὴν Λακεδαίμονα καὶ φλέγεσθαι πᾶσαν, αὐτὸν δὲ χαίρειν. ὑπὸ δὲ τῆς χαρᾶς ἐξεγρόμενος τοὺς τε ἡγεμόνας ἐκέλευεν ἐν παρασκευῇ τὸν στρατὸν ἔχειν, καὶ τοῖς φίλοις διηγέιτο τὸν ὄνειρον ὡς ληψόμενος κατὰ κράτος τὴν πόλιν. οἱ μὲν οὖν ἄλλοι θαυμασιῶς ἐπέιθοντο, Λυσιμάχῳ δὲ οὐκ ἤρεσκεν ἡ ὄψις, ἀλλ' ἔφη δεδιέναι μὴ, καθάπερ τὰ βαλλόμενα τοῖς κεραυνοῖς ἀνέμβατα μένει χωρία, καὶ τῷ Πύρρῳ προσημαίνῃ τὸ θεῖον ἀνείσοδον ἔσεσθαι τὴν πόλιν. ὁ δὲ Πύρρος εἰπὼν ὅτι ταῦτα μὲν ἐστὶ πυλαϊκῆς ὀχλαγωγίας καὶ ἀσοφίαν ἔχοντα πολλήν, ἐκεῖνο δὲ δεῖ τὰ ὄπλα διὰ χειρῶν ἔχοντας ὑποβάλλειν ἑαυτοῖς,

Εἰς οἰωνὸς ἄριστος ἀμύνεσθαι περὶ Πύρρου, ἐξανέστη καὶ προσῆγεν ἅμ' ἡμέρα τὸν στρατὸν.

3 Ἡμύνοντο δὲ προθυμία καὶ ἀρετῇ παρὰ δύναμιν οἱ Λακεδαιμόνιοι· καὶ παρήσαν αἱ γυναῖκες ὀρέγ-

PYRRHUS

fight, but particularly Phyllius, who surpassed all in the tenacity of his resistance and the numbers of the on-rushing enemy whom he slew; and when he perceived that his powers were failing from the multitude of the wounds he had received, he made way for one of his comrades in the line, and fell inside the ranks, that his dead body might not come into the hands of the enemy.

XXIX. Night put an end to the battle; and Pyrrhus, as he slept, had the following vision. He dreamed that Sparta was smitten with thunderbolts from his hand and was all ablaze, and that he was filled with joy. His joy waked him from sleep, and he commanded his officers to get the army ready for action, and narrated his dream to his friends, convinced that he was going to take the city by storm. Most of them, then, were fully persuaded that he was right, but Lysimachus was not pleased with the vision; he said he was afraid lest, as places smitten by thunderbolts are kept free from the tread of men, the Deity might be indicating in advance to Pyrrhus also that the city was not to be entered by him. But Pyrrhus declared that this was nonsense intended for the crowd, and great folly, and calling upon his hearers to take their arms in their hands and act upon the belief that rose up, and at day-break led forth his army.

“One is the best of all omens, to fight in defence of Pyrrhus,”¹

But the Lacedaemonians defended themselves with an alacrity and bravery beyond their strength; the ¹ An adaptation of Iliad, xii. 243, by substituting “Pyrrhus” for “one’s country” (Πύρρον for πατρίς).

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ουσαι βέλη, καὶ σιτία καὶ ποτὸν τοῖς δεομένοις προσφέρουσαι, καὶ ἀναλαμβάνουσαι τοὺς τιτρωσκομένους. τὴν τε τάφρον οἱ Μακεδόνες χοῦν ἐπειρῶντο, πολλὴν συμφοροῦντες ὕλην, ὑφ' ἧς ὄπλα καὶ σώματα νεκρῶν ἐπιχειομένης ἀπεκρύ-4 πτετο. καὶ πρὸς τοῦτο τῶν Λακεδαιμονίων βοηθούντων ὄφθη παρὰ τὴν τάφρον καὶ τὰς ἀμάξας ὁ Πύρρος ἵππῳ βιαζόμενος εἰς τὴν πόλιν. κραυγῆς δὲ τῶν κατὰ τοῦτο τεταγμένων γενομένης καὶ δρόμου καὶ ὀλολυγμοῦ τῶν γυναικῶν, ἤδη διεξ-ελαύνοντι τῷ Πύρρῳ καὶ προσκειμένῳ τοῖς κατὰ πρόσωπον ἐξήλατο Κρητικῶ βέλει πληγείς ὁ ἵππος ὑπὸ τὴν γαστέρα, καὶ κατέβαλε δυσθανα-τῶν τὸν Πύρρον εἰς τόπους ὀλισθηροὺς καὶ 403 5 κατάντεις. θορυβουμένων δὲ περὶ τοῦτον τῶν ἐταίρων ἐπέδραμον οἱ Σπαρτιᾶται, καὶ χρώμενοι τοῖς βέλεσιν ἐξέωσαν ἅπαντας. ἐκ δὲ τούτου καὶ τὴν ἄλλην μάχην ἔπαυεν, οἴομενος ἐνδώσειν τοὺς Λακεδαιμονίους σχεδὸν ἀπάντων κατατετρωμένων αὐτοῖς, πεπτωκότων δὲ πολλῶν. ἡ δ' ἀγαθὴ τύχη τῆς πόλεως, εἴτε πείραν ἀρετῆς λαμβάνουσα τῶν ἀνδρῶν, εἴθ' ἑαυτῆς, ὅσῃ ἐν ἀπόροις 6 ἔχει δύναμιν, ἀπόδειξιν διδοῦσα, μοχθηρὰς ἤδη τῶν Λακεδαιμονίων ἐχόντων τὰς ἐλπίδας Ἀμειν-ἰαν τε Φωκέα, τῶν Ἀντιγόνου στρατηγῶν, ἐκ Κορίνθου βοηθήσοντα παρεισήγαγε μετὰ ξένων, καὶ τοῦτον ἄρτι δεδεγμένων ὁ βασιλεὺς αὐτοῖς Ἀρεὺς ἦκεν ἐκ Κρήτης δισχιλίους στρατιώτας κομίζων. αἱ τε δὴ γυναῖκες εὐθύς ἐπὶ τὰς οἰκίας

PYRRHUS

women, too, were at hand, proffering missiles, distributing food and drink to those who needed them, and taking up the wounded. The Macedonians tried to fill up the trench, collecting and throwing into it great quantities of materials, beneath which the arms and dead bodies were hidden away. And when the Lacedaemonians tried to put a stop to this, Pyrrhus was seen forcing his way on horseback past the trench and the waggons into the city. But the men stationed at this point raised a shout, and there was a concourse and shrieking of the women, and just as Pyrrhus was riding through the waggons and attacking the men in front of him, his horse was wounded in the belly by a Cretan javelin and leaped to one side, and in his death agony threw Pyrrhus upon steep and slippery ground. His companions were thrown into confusion around him, and the Spartans, running upon them and making good use of their missiles, drove them all off. After this, Pyrrhus brought the fighting to a stop at other points also, thinking that the Spartans would make some concessions, now that almost all of them were wounded and many had fallen. But now the good fortune of the city, either because she was satisfied with the bravery of its men, or because she would show forth the great power which she herself has in desperate crises, brought to their aid from Corinth, when the hopes of the Spartans were already sorry, Ameinias the Phocian, one of the generals of Antigonus, with mercenary troops; and no sooner had he been received into the city than Areus the Spartan king came from Crete, bringing with him two thousand soldiers. So the women at once dispersed to their ἔσκεδάσθησαν, οὐδὲν ἔτι πολυπραγμονεῖν ἀξιούσαι τῶν πολεμικῶν, καὶ τοὺς παρ' ἡλικίαν ἐν τοῖς ὄπλοις ὑπ' ἀνάγκης γενομένους ἀφέντες αὐτοὺς ἐπὶ τὴν μάχην ἔταξαν.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- XXX. Τὸν δὲ Πύρρον ἔσχε μὲν τις ἀλκὴ καὶ φιλοτιμία μᾶλλον διὰ τοὺς προσγεγονότας κρατῆσαι τῆς πόλεως· ὡς δὲ οὐδὲν ἐπέραине, πληγὰς λαβὼν ἀπέστη καὶ τὴν χώραν ἐπόρθει διανοούμενος αὐτόθι χειμάσαι. τὸ δὲ χρεῶν ἦν ἄφυκτον. ἐν γὰρ Ἄργει στάσις ἦν Ἀριστέου πρὸς Ἀρίστιππον. ἐπεὶ δὲ ὁ Ἀρίστιππος ἐδόκει χρῆσθαι φίλῳ τῷ Ἀντιγόνῳ, φθύσας ὁ Ἀριστέας ἐκάλει τὸν
- 2 Πύρρον εἰς τὸ Ἄργος. ὁ δὲ ἐλπίδας ἐξ ἐλπίδων αἰεὶ κυλίνδων, καὶ ταῖς μὲν εὐτυχίαις ἐπ' ἄλλας χρώμενος ἀφορμαῖς, ἃ δὲ ἔπταιεν ἐτέροις βουλόμενος ἀναπληροῦν πράγμασιν, οὔτε ἤτταν οὔτε νίκην ὄρον ἐποιεῖτο τοῦ ταράττεσθαι καὶ ταράττειν. εὐθύς οὖν ἀνεξεύγνυνεν ἐπὶ τὸ Ἄργος. ὁ δὲ Ἄρευσ ἐνέδρας τε πολλὰς ὑφείς καὶ καταλαβὼν τὰ χαλεπώτατα τῆς ὁδοῦ περιέκοπτε τοὺς Γαλάτας καὶ τοὺς Μολοσσοὺς ὀπισθοφυλακοῦντας.
- 3 Τῷ δὲ Πύρρῳ προεῖρητο μὲν ἐκ τῶν ἱερῶν ἀλόβων γενομένων ὑπὸ τοῦ μάντεως ἀποβολὴ τινος τῶν ἀναγκαίων, παρὰ δὲ τὸν καιρὸν τότε τῷ θορύβῳ καὶ τῷ κινήματι τὸν λογισμὸν ἐκκρουσθεὶς ἐκέλευσε τὸν υἱὸν Πτολεμαῖον λαβόντα τοὺς ἐταίρους παραβοηθεῖν, αὐτὸς δὲ θᾶπτον ἐκ τῶν στενῶν
- 4 ἐφέλκόμενος τὴν στρατιὰν ὑπήγγεν. ὀξείας δὲ περὶ

PYRRHUS

homes, since they no longer thought it meet to busy themselves with the work of war, and the men, after dismissing from their ranks those of unmilitary age whom necessity had brought there, arrayed themselves for battle.

XXX. Pyrrhus, too, was more than ever possessed by a fierce ambition to become master of the city, now that reinforcements had come to it; but since he could accomplish nothing, and met with fresh losses, he went away, and fell to ravaging the country, purposing to spend the winter there. But Fate was not to be escaped. For at Argos there was a feud between Aristetas and Aristippus; and since Aristippus was thought to enjoy the friendship of Antigonus, Aristetas hastened to invite Pyrrhus into Argos. Pyrrhus was always entertaining one hope after another, and since he made one success but the starting point for a new one, while he was determined to make good each disaster by a fresh undertaking, he suffered neither defeat nor victory to put a limit to his troubling himself and troubling others. At once, therefore, he broke camp and set out for Argos. But Areus, by setting frequent ambushes and occupying the most difficult points on the march, kept cutting off the Gauls and Molossians who brought up the rear for Pyrrhus.

Now, it had been foretold to Pyrrhus by his seer, in consequence of sacrifices where no liver could be found, that he was to lose one of his kindred; but here, unhappily, owing to the agitation and tumult among his rear-guard, he forgot himself, and ordered his son Ptolemy with his comrades to go to the rescue, while he himself drew his army more quickly out of the narrow pass and led them forward. A τὸν Πτολεμαῖον μάχης γενομένης, καὶ τῶν ἐπι-λέκτων Λακεδαιμονίων, ὧν Εὐάλκος ἡγήετο, τοῖς μαχομένοις πρὸ αὐτοῦ συμπλεκομένων, ἀνὴρ πλήκτης καὶ δραμεῖν ὀξύς, Ὅρουσος ὄνομα, Κρής Ἄπτεραῖος, ἐκ πλαγίου παραδραμὼν ἀγωνιζόμενον ἐκθύμως τὸν νεανίσκον ἐπάταξε καὶ κατέ-5 βαλε. πεσόντος δὲ ἐκείνου καὶ τροπῆς γενομένης τῶν περὶ αὐτόν, οἱ Λακεδαιμόνιοι διώκοντες καὶ κρατοῦντες ἔλαθον εἰς τὸ πεδῖον συνεμβalόντες καὶ ἀποληφθέντες ὑπὸ τῶν ὀπλιτῶν, ἐφ' οὓς ὁ Πύρρος ἄρτι τὸν θάνατον τοῦ παιδὸς ἀκηκοὺς καὶ περιπαθῶν ἐπέστρεψε τοὺς ἱππεῖς τῶν Μολοσσῶν. καὶ πρῶτος εἰσελάσας ἐνεπίμπλατο φόνου τῶν Λακεδαιμονίων, αἰὲ μὲν τις ἄμαχος καὶ δεινὸς ἐν τοῖς ὄπλοις φαινόμενος, τότε δὲ ὑπερβάλλων τόλμη καὶ βία τοὺς προτέρους ἀγῶνας.

6 ἐπεὶ δὲ ἐπέβαλε τῷ Εὐάλκῳ τὸν ἵππον, ὁ μὲν ἐκ πλαγίου παραστὰς μικρὸν ἐδέησε τῷ ξίφει τὴν ἐπὶ τῆς ἡνίας χεῖρα διακόψαι τοῦ Πύρρου, τὴν δὲ ἡνίαν πατάξας ἀπέκοψεν. ὁ δὲ Πύρρος ἅμα τῇ πληγῇ τοῦ δόρατος διελάσας ἐκείνον ἀπερρῆν τοῦ ἵππου, καὶ πεζὸς ἤδη πάντας ἐπὶ τῷ Εὐάλκῳ μαχομένους ἀπέκτεινε τοὺς λογάδας. καὶ μέγα τοῦτο τῇ Σπάρτῃ παρανάλωμα τοῦ πολέμου πέ-ρας ἔχοντος ἐποίησεν ἡ φιλοτιμία τῶν ἀρχόντων.

XXXI. Ὁ δὲ Πύρρος ὡσπερ ἐναγισμὸν τινα τῷ παιδὶ τελέσας καὶ λαμπρὸν ἐπιτάφιον ἀγωνι-σάμενος, καὶ πολὺ τῆς λύπης ἐν τῷ πρὸς τοὺς πολεμίους ἀφείς θυμῷ, προήγεν ἐπὶ τὸ Ἄργος.
καὶ τὸν Ἀντίγονον ἤδη πυνθανόμενος ἐπὶ τῶν 404
ἄκρων ὑπὲρ τοῦ πεδίου καθῆσθαι, περὶ τὴν Ναυ-

PYRRHUS

fierce battle raged where Ptolemy was, and while a band of picked Spartans under the command of Evalcus engaged the soldiers who were fighting in front of him, a man of stout arm and swift foot, Oryssus by name, of Aptera in Crete, ran up on one side of the young prince as he was fighting spiritedly, smote him, and laid him low. Upon Ptolemy's fall and the rout of his company, the Spartans pursued, carrying all before them, and before they were aware of it had dashed out into the plain and were cut off by the infantry of Pyrrhus. Against this band of Spartans Pyrrhus, who had just heard of the death of his son and was in anguish, turned his Molossian horsemen. He himself charged at their head, and sated himself with Spartan blood. He had always shown himself invincible and terrible in arms, but now his daring and might surpassed all previous displays. When he set his horse upon Evalcus, the Spartan stepped aside and had almost cut off with his sword the bridle-hand of Pyrrhus; as it was he hit the rein and severed it. Pyrrhus transfixed the Spartan with a thrust of his spear, and at the same instant fell off his horse, and fighting on foot, at once proceeded to slay all the picked band which was fighting over the body of Evalcus. This great additional loss to Sparta when the war was already at an end was due to the ambition of the commanders.

XXXI. So Pyrrhus, after accomplishing as it were an expiation for his son and celebrating his obsequies with a brilliant contest, having also vented much of his grief in his fury against the enemy, led his army on towards Argos. And when he learned that Antigonus was already posted on the heights com-

πλίαν ἐστρατοπέδευσε. τῇ δ' ὑστεραία κήρυκα πρὸς τὸν Ἀντίγονον ἔπεμψε, λυμεῶνά τε καλῶν καὶ προκαλούμενος εἰς τὸ πεδῖον καταβάντα δια-2 γωνίσασθαι περὶ τῆς βασιλείας. ὁ δὲ ἀπεκρίνατο τὴν μὲν αὐτοῦ στρατηγίαν οὐχ ὄπλων μᾶλλον ἢ καιρῶν εἶναι, τῷ δὲ Πύρρῳ πολλὰς ὁδοὺς ἀνεω-γέναι πρὸς θάνατον, εἰ ζῆν μὴ σχολάζει. πρὸς δὲ ἀμφοτέρους πρέσβεις ἤκον ἐξ Ἀργούς, ἀπαλλάτ-τεσθαι δεόμενοι καὶ τὴν πόλιν ἔαν μηδετέρου γενομένην, εὖνουν δὲ οὖσαν ἀμφοτέροις. ὁ μὲν οὖν Ἀντίγονος ἐπέβητο καὶ τὸν υἱὸν ἐδίδου τοῖς Ἀργείοις ὄμηρον, ὁ δὲ Πύρρος ὡμολόγει μὲν ἀπαλ-λαγήσεσθαι, μὴ παρέχων δὲ πίστιν ὑποπτότερος ἦν.

3 Γίνεται δὲ σημεῖον αὐτῷ τε τῷ Πύρρῳ μέγα, τῶν γὰρ βοῶν τεθυμένων αἱ κεφαλαὶ κείμεναι χωρὶς ἤδη τὰς τε γλώττας ὤφθησαν προβάλλουσαι καὶ περιλιχμώμεναι τὸν ἑαυτῶν φόνον, ἔν τε τῇ πόλει τῶν Ἀργείων ἢ τοῦ Λυκείου προφήτις Ἀπόλλωνος ἐξέδραμε βοῶσα νεκρῶν ὄραν καὶ φόνου κατάπλεω τὴν πόλιν, τὸν δ' αἰτὸν ἐπὶ τὸν ἀγῶνα χωροῦντα, εἶτα φροῦδον εἶναι.

XXXII. Σκότους δὲ πολλοῦ προσμίξας ὁ Πύρρος τοῖς τείχεσι, καὶ πύλην εὐρῶν ἦν Διαμπερὲς καλοῦσιν ἀνεωγμένην ὑπὸ τοῦ Ἀριστέου αὐτοῖς, ἄχρι μὲν τοῦ παρεισπεσεῖν τοὺς Γαλάτας τοὺς παρ' αὐτοῦ καὶ τὴν ἀγορὰν καταλαβεῖν ἐλάνθανε· τῆς δὲ πύλης τοὺς ἐλέφαντας οὐ δεχομένης καὶ διὰ τοῦτο τοὺς πύργους αὐτῶν ἀφαιρούντων, εἶτα πάλιν ἐν σκότει καὶ θορύβῳ περιτιθέντων καὶ γενομένης διατριβῆς, οἱ Ἀργεῖοι συναισθόμενοι πρὸς τὴν Ἀσπίδα καὶ τοὺς ὄχυρους τόπους manding the plain, he pitched his camp near Nauplia. On the following day he sent a herald to Antigonus, calling him a robber, and challenging him to come down into the plain and fight with him for the kingdom. But Antigonus replied that in conducting a campaign he relied more upon opportunities than upon arms, and that many roads to death lay open to Pyrrhus if he was tired of life. And now to both kings came ambassadors from Argos, entreating them to go away and allow the city to be neutral, but well-disposed towards both. Antigonus, accordingly, consented, and gave his son to the Argives as a hostage; Pyrrhus also agreed to go away, but since he gave no pledge, he remained under suspicion.

PYRRHUS

Moreover, Pyrrhus himself had a significant portent; for the heads of his sacrificed cattle, though they already lay apart from the bodies, were seen to put out their tongues and lick up their own gore. And besides this, in the city of Argos the priestess of Apollo Lyceius ran forth from the temple crying that she saw the city full of corpses and slaughter, and that the eagle which visited the scene of combat presently vanished away.

XXXII. At dead of night Pyrrhus came up to the walls of the city, and finding that the gate called Diamperes had been thrown open for them by Aristneas, was undiscovered long enough for his Gauls to enter the city and take possession of the market-place. But the gate would not admit his elephants, and therefore the towers had to be taken off their backs and put on again when the animals were inside, in darkness and confusion. This caused delay, and the Argives, taking the alarm, ran up to the Aspis and other strong places of the city, and sending

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- ἀνέθεον, καὶ τὸν Ἀντίγονον ἐκάλουον πέμποντες.
- 2 ὁ δὲ αὐτὸς μὲν ἐγγὺς προσελάσας ἐφήδρευε, τοὺς δὲ στρατηγούς καὶ τὸν υἱὸν εἰσέπεμψε συχνὴν βοήθειαν ἄγοντας. ἦκε δὲ καὶ Ἄρευσ ἔχων χιλίους Κρήτας καὶ Σπαρτιάτας τοὺς ἐλαφροτάτους. καὶ πάντες ἅμα τοῖς Γαλάταις προσβαλόντες εἰς πολὺν θόρυβον κατέστησαν αὐτούς. ὁ δὲ Πύρρος εἰσιὼν μετ' ἀλαλαγμοῦ καὶ βοῆς παρὰ τὴν Κυλάραβιν, ὡς οἱ Γαλάται τοῖς περὶ αὐτὸν ἀντηλάλαξαν οὐκ ἰταμὸν οὐδὲ θαρραλέον, εἶκασε ταραττομένων εἶναι τὴν φωνὴν καὶ πονούντων.
- 3 ἐπήγεον οὖν θάπτον, ὠθῶν τοὺς πρὸ αὐτοῦ τῶν ἰππέων δυσοδοῦντας ἐν τοῖς ὀχετοῖς, ὧν ἡ πόλις ἐστὶ μεστή, καὶ κινδυνεύοντας. ἦν δὲ καὶ ἀσάφεια πολλὴ τῶν δρωμένων καὶ παραγγελλομένων ἐν νυκτομαχίᾳ, καὶ πλάναι καὶ διασπασμοὶ περὶ τοὺς στενωπούς, καὶ στρατηγίας οὐδὲν ἔργον ὑπὸ σκότους καὶ βοῆς ἀκρίτου καὶ στενότητος, ἀλλὰ διέτριβον ἄλλως περιμένοντες ἀμφοτέρω τὴν ἡμέραν.
- 4 Ἦδη δὲ διαλάμποντος ἤ τε Ἀσπίς ὄπλων περίπλεως πολεμίων ὀφθείσα τὸν Πύρρον διέτάραξε, καὶ τῆς ἀγορᾶς ἐν πολλοῖς ἀναθήμασι κατιδὼν λύκον χαλκοῦν καὶ ταῦρον οἶον εἰς μάχην ἀλλήλοισι συνιόντας ἐξεπλάγη, χρησμόν τινα πρὸς ἑαυτὸν ἀνενεγκῶν παλαιόν, ὡς ἀποθανεῖν αὐτῷ πεπρωμένον ὅταν λύκον ἴδῃ ταύρῳ μαχόμενον.
- 5 ταῦτα δὲ Ἀργεῖοι πάθους ὑπομνήματα παλαιοῦ to Antigonus called upon him for help. Antigonus marched up close to the city, and lying in wait there himself, sent his generals and his son inside with a considerable relief-force. Areus also came, with a thousand Cretans and Spartans (the most lightly armed). All these troops united in an assault upon the Gauls and threw them into great confusion. And Pyrrhus, who now entered the city with shouts and cries by way of Cylarabis,¹ noticed that the Gauls did not answer his men with any vigour or courage, and therefore conjectured that their response was that of men confounded and in distress. Accordingly, he led on faster, pushing along the horsemen in front of him, who were making their way with difficulty among the water-conduits, of which the city is full, and were in peril of their lives from them. And now, in this night-battle, there was great uncertainty as to what commands were given and how the commands were carried out; men straggled and lost their way among the narrow streets, and generalship was of no avail owing to the darkness, confused shouting, and confined spaces; both parties therefore were unable to accomplish anything and waited for the day.

PYRRHUS

But when at last it began to grow light, the sight of the Aspis filled with armed enemies greatly disturbed Pyrrhus; moreover, among the numerous votive-offerings in the market-place he caught sight of a wolf and bull in bronze, represented as closing with one another in battle, and he was dumbfounded, for he called to mind an ancient oracle regarding himself which declared that it was fated for him to die when he saw a wolf fighting with a bull. Now, the Argives say that these figures were set up in γενενησθαι παρ' αὐτοῖς λέγουσι. Δαναῶ γάρ, ὅτε πρῶτον ἐπέβη τῆς χώρας κατὰ τὰ Πυράμια τῆς Θυρατίδος, εἰς Ἄργος πορευομένῳ λύκον φανῆναι ταύρῳ μαχόμενον· θέμενον δὲ τὸν Δαναὸν ὡς ὁ λύκος εἶη πρὸς αὐτοῦ (ξένον γὰρ ὄντα τοῖς ἐγχωρίοις ἐπιτίθεσθαι καθάπερ αὐτόν), ἐφορᾶν τὴν μάχην, καὶ τοῦ λύκου κρατήσαντος Ἀπόλλωνι Λυκείῳ προσευξάμενον ἐπιχειρήσαι καὶ περιγενέσθαι, στάσει Γελάνορος, ὃς τότε τῶν Ἀργείων ἐβασίλευεν, ἐκπεσόντος. τὸ μὲν οὖν ἀνάθημα 405 τοῦτον εἶχε τὸν λόγον.

¹ A gymnasium just outside the city towards the East.

XXXIII. Πρὸς δὲ τὴν ὄψιν ὁ Πύρρος ἄμα καὶ τῷ μηδὲν ὦν ἤλπιζε¹ προχωρεῖν ἀθυμῶν ἀναστρέφειν διανοεῖτο· τὰς δὲ πύλας στενὰς οὔσας φοβούμενος ἔπεμψε πρὸς τὸν υἱὸν Ἐλενον μετὰ τῆς πολλῆς δυνάμεως ἔξω καταλελειμμένον, κελεύων τοῦ τείχους διασκάπτειν καὶ δέχεσθαι τοὺς ἐκπίπτου² τας, ἂν ἐνοχλῶσιν οἱ πολέμιοι. σπουδῇ δὲ καὶ θορύβῳ τοῦ πεμφθέντος οὐδὲν σαφὲς ἀπαγγέλλοντος, ἀλλὰ καὶ διαμαρτίας γενομένης, τῶν θηρίων τὰ λοιπὰ καὶ στρατιώτας ἀναλαβὼν τοὺς κρατίστους ὁ νεανίσκος εἶσω διὰ τῶν πυλῶν ἐχώρει τῷ πατρὶ βοηθήσων. ἔτυχε δὲ ὁ Πύρρος ἀναστρέφων ἤδη. καὶ μέχρι μὲν ἡ ἀγορὰ παρείχεν ὑπεξάγοντι χώραν καὶ μαχομένῳ, ἐκ μεταβολῆς ἠμύνετο τοὺς ἐπιφερο³ μένους· ἐπεὶ δὲ τῆς ἀγορᾶς εἰς τὸν στενωπὸν ἐξωσθεὶς τὸν ἐπὶ τὴν πύλην ἀνήκοντα συνέπιπτε τοῖς ἐπιβοηθοῦσιν ἐξ ἐναντίας προσφερομένοις, οἱ

¹ ἤλπιζε Coraës, Bekker, and Blass, with the MSS.: ἤλπισε.

PYRRHUS

their market-place as memorials of an ancient event. Namely, when Danaüs first landed in the country, near Pyramia in the district of Thyreatis, and was on his way to Argos, he saw a wolf fighting with a bull; and conceiving that he himself was represented by the wolf (since both were strangers and were attacking the natives), he watched the battle to its end, and when the wolf had prevailed, paid his vows to Apollo Lyceiüs (the wolf-god), attacked the city, and was victorious, after Gelanor, who was at that time king of Argos, had been driven out by a faction. This, then, was the significance of the dedication.¹

XXXIII. Dejected at this sight, as well as because none of his hopes were being realized, Pyrrhus purposed to retreat; but fearing the narrowness of the gates he sent to his son Helenus, who had been left outside the city with the greater part of the forces, ordering him to tear down part of the wall and succour those who rushed out through the breach, in case the enemy molested them. Owing to the haste and tumult, however, the messenger brought no clear orders, but actually made a mistake, and the young prince, taking the rest of the elephants and the best of his soldiers, marched through the gate into the city to help his father. But Pyrrhus was already on the retreat. And as long as the market-place afforded him room for withdrawing and fighting, he would turn and repel his assailants; but after he had been driven out of the market-place into the narrow street which led up to the gate, and encountered those who were rushing to his aid from the opposite direction, some of these could not hear

¹ Cf. Pausanias, ii. 19, 3.

μὲν οὐχ ὑπήκουον ὑποχωρεῖν βοῶντος αὐτοῦ, τοὺς
 δὲ καὶ πάνυ προθύμους ὄντας εἶργον οἱ κατοπίν 4 ἀπὸ τῆς πύλης ἐπιχεόμενοι. καὶ γὰρ ὁ μέγιστος ἐλέφας ἐν τῇ πύλῃ πλάγιος παραπесῶν καὶ βρυ-χώμενος ἐμποδῶν ἔκειτο τοῖς ἀποτρεπομένοις, καὶ τῶν προεισεληλυθότων ἕτερος, ᾧ Νίκων ὄνομα ἦν, ἀπορρύντα τὸν ἐπιστάτην ὑπὸ τραυμάτων ζητῶν ἀναλαβεῖν καὶ φερόμενος πρὸς τούναντίον τοῖς ὑπεξάγουσιν, ἀνέμιξε φίλους ὁμοῦ καὶ πολεμίους 5 ὠθουμένους ὑπ' αὐτοῦ· καὶ περιέπιπτον ἀλλήλοις, ἕως εὐρῶν νεκρὸν ἀνείλετο τῇ προβοσκίδι, καὶ τοῖς ὀδοῦσιν ἀμφοτέροις ὑπολαβὼν ἀνέστρεφε πάλιν ὥσπερ ἐμμανῆς, ἀνατρέπων καὶ διαφθείρων τοὺς ἐντυγχάνοντας. οὕτω δὲ θλιβομένων καὶ συμπιλουμένων πρὸς ἀλλήλους οὐδεὶς οὐδὲν ἑαυτῷ καθ' ἓνα χρῆσθαι δυνατὸς ἦν, ἀλλ' ὥσπερ ἐν σῶμα συγγεγομφωμένον ἑαυτῷ τὸ πᾶν πλήθος ἐλάμβανε πολλὰς ἀποκλίσεις καὶ μεταβολὰς ἐπ' 6 ἀμφότερα. καὶ μάχαι μὲν ἦσαν ὀλίγαι πρὸς τοὺς ἐναπολαμβανομένους αἰεὶ τῶν πολεμίων ἢ προσκειμένους ὀπισθεν, πλεῖστα δὲ ἑαυτοὺς εἰργά-ζοντο κακί. σπασάμενον γὰρ τὸ ξίφος ἢ κλίναντα λόγχην οὐκ ἦν ἀναλαβεῖν οὐδὲ καταθέσθαι πάλιν, ἀλλ' ἐχώρει δι' ὧν ἔτυχε τὰ τοιαῦτα πάντα, καὶ περιπίπτοντες ἀλλήλοις ἔθνησκον.

XXXIV. Ὁ δὲ Πύρρος ἐφορῶν τὸν περιέχοντα χειμῶνα καὶ κλύδωνα, τὴν μὲν στεφάνην, ἣ διὰ-σημον ἦν τὸ κράνος, ἀφελὼν ἔδωκέ τιμι τῶν ἐταί-ρων, αὐτὸς δὲ τῷ ἵππῳ πεποιθῶς εἰς τοὺς

PYRRHUS

him when he called out to them to withdraw, and those who did, even though they were very ready to obey him, were kept from doing so by those who were pouring in behind them from the gate. For the largest of the elephants had fallen athwart the gateway¹ and lay there roaring, in the way of those who would have turned back; and another elephant, one of those which had gone on into the city, Nicon by name, seeking to recover his rider, who had fallen from his back in consequence of wounds, and dashing in the face of those who were trying to get out, crowded friends and foes alike together in a promiscuous throng, until, having found the body of his master, he took it up with his proboscis, laid it across his two tusks, and turned back as if crazed, overthrowing and killing those who came in his way. Thus crushed and matted together not a man of them could act at all for himself, but the whole multitude, bolted together, as it were, into one body, kept rolling and swaying this way and that. Little fighting could be done against those of the enemy who were continually being caught up into their ranks or attacking them from the rear, and they wrought most harm to themselves. For when a man had drawn his sword or poised his spear, he could not recover or sheathe his weapon again, but it would pass through those who stood in its way, and so they died from one another's blows.

XXXIV. But Pyrrhus, seeing the stormy sea that surged about him, took off the coronal, with which his helmet was distinguished, and gave it to one of his companions; then, relying on his horse, he plunged in among the enemy who were pursuing

¹ "De travers tout au beau milieu de la porte" (Amyot).

ἐπομένους τῶν πολεμίων ἐνέβαλε, καὶ δόρατι πληγείς διὰ τοῦ θώρακος οὐ καιρίαν πληγὴν οὐδὲ μεγάλην ἐπέστρεψε κατὰ τοῦ πατάξαντος, ὃς ἦν Ἄργεῖος, οὐ τῶν ἐπιφανῶν, ἀλλὰ πενιχρᾶς καὶ
 2 πρεσβυτέρας υἱὸς γυναικός. αὕτη τότε θεω-μένη τὴν μάχην ὡσπερ αἱ λοιπαὶ γυναῖκες ἀπὸ τοῦ τέγους, ὡς ἐπέγνω συνηστώτα τῷ Πύρρῳ τὸν υἱόν, ἐκπαθῆς γενομένη πρὸς τὸν κίνδυνον, ἄρασα κεραμίδα ταῖς χερσὶν ἀμφοτέραις ἀφήκεν ἐπὶ τὸν Πύρρον. ἐμπεσούσης δὲ τῇ κεφαλῇ κατὰ τοῦ κράνους, καὶ τῶν σφονδύλων πρὸς τὴν βάσιν τοῦ τραχήλου συντριβέντων, αἷ τε ὄψει συνεχύθησαν αὐτοῦ καὶ προήκαντο τὰς ἡνίας αἱ χεῖρες. αὐτὸς δὲ κατενεχθεὶς παρὰ τὸν τοῦ Λικυμνίου σηκὸν 3 ἔπεσεν ὑπὸ τῶν πολλῶν ἀγνοούμενος. Ζώπυρος δέ τις τῶν παρὰ Ἀντιγόνῳ στρατευομένων καὶ δύο ἢ τρεῖς ἕτεροι προσδραμόντες καὶ κατανοήσαντες εἰς τινα θυρῶνα παρείλκυσαν αὐτὸν ἀρ-χόμενον ἐκ τῆς πληγῆς ἀναφέρεσθαι. σπασαμένου δὲ τοῦ Ζωπύρου μάχαιραν Ἰλλυρικὴν ὡς τὴν κεφαλὴν ἀποτεμοῦντος ἐνέβλεψε δεινόν, ὥστε τὸν Ζωπυρον περίφοβον γενόμενον, καὶ τὰ μὲν τρέμοντα ταῖς χερσὶ, τὰ δὲ ἐπιχειροῦντα, θορύβου δὲ καὶ ταραχῆς μεστὸν ὄντα, μὴ κατ' ὀρθόν, ἀλλὰ 406 παρὰ τὸ στόμα καὶ τὸ γένειον ἀποτέμνοντα βρα-4 δέως καὶ μόλις ἀποσπάσαι τὴν κεφαλὴν. ἤδη δὲ σύνδηλον ἦν τὸ γεγονός πλείοσι, καὶ προσδραμῶν ὁ Ἄλκυονεὺς ἤτησε τὴν κεφαλὴν ὡς ἂν κατανοή-
 σων. λαβὼν δὲ ἀφίππευσε πρὸς τὸν πατέρα, καὶ καθεζομένῳ μετὰ τῶν φίλων προσέβαλε. θεασάμενος δὲ καὶ γνοὺς ὁ Ἀντίγονος τὸν μὲν υἱόν

PYRRHUS

him. Here he was wounded by a spear which pierced his breastplate—not a mortal, nor even a severe wound—and turned upon the man who had struck him, who was an Argive, not of illustrious birth, but the son of a poor old woman. His mother, like the rest of the women, was at this moment watching the battle from the house-top, and when she saw that her son was engaged in conflict with Pyrrhus, she was filled with distress in view of the danger to him, and lifting up a tile with both her hands threw it at Pyrrhus. It fell upon his head below his helmet and crushed the vertebrae at the base of his neck, so that his sight was blurred and his hands dropped the reins. Then he sank down from his horse and fell near the tomb of Licymnius,¹ unrecognised by most who saw him. But a certain Zopyrus, who was serving under Antigonus, and two or three others, ran up to him, saw who he was, and dragged him into a door-way just as he was beginning to recover from the blow. And when Zopyrus drew an Illyrian short-sword with which to cut off his head, Pyrrhus gave him a terrible look, so that Zopyrus was frightened; his hands trembled, and yet he essayed the deed; but being full of alarm and confusion his blow did not fall true, but along the mouth and chin, so that it was only slowly and with difficulty that he severed the head. Presently what had happened was known to many, and Alcioneus, running to the spot, asked for the head as if he would see whose it was. But when he had got it he rode away to his father, and cast it down before him as he sat among his friends. Antigonus, however, when he saw and recognised the head, drove his son

¹ Cf. Pausanias, ii. 22, 8.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἀπήλασε τῇ βακτηρίᾳ παίων καὶ καλῶν ἐναγῆ καὶ βάρβαρον, αὐτὸς δὲ τὴν χλαμύδα προθέμενος τοῖς ὄμμασιν ἐδάκρυσεν, Ἀντιγόνου τοῦ πάππου μνησθεὶς καὶ Δημητρίου τοῦ πατρός, οἰκείων παραδειγμάτων εἰς τύχης μεταβολήν.

- 5 Τὴν μὲν οὖν κεφαλὴν καὶ τὸ σῶμα τοῦ Πύρρου κοσμήσας ἔκαυσεν· ἐπεὶ δὲ ὁ Ἀλκωνεὺς τῷ Ἑλένῳ περιτυχὼν ταπεινῷ καὶ χλαμύδιον λιτὸν ἀμπεχομένῳ φιλανθρώπως ἐνέτυχε καὶ τῷ πατρὶ προσήγαγεν, ἰδὼν ὁ Ἀντίγονος “Βελτίονα μὲν,” εἶπεν, “ὦ παῖ, ταῦτα τῶν προτέρων,¹ ἀλλ’ οὐδὲ νῦν ὀρθῶς τῷ μὴ περιελεῖν τὴν ἐσθήτα ταύτην, ἢ μᾶλλον ἡμᾶς καταισχύνει τοὺς κρατεῖν δοκοῦντας.”
- 6 ἐκ τούτου φιλοφρονησάμενος καὶ κοσμήσας τὸν Ἑλενον ἀπέστειλεν εἰς Ἡπειρον, καὶ τοῖς φίλοις τοῦ Πύρρου πρῶως ἐνετύγχανε τοῦ στρατοπέδου καὶ τῆς δυνάμεως πάσης κύριος γενόμενος.

¹ προτέρων Bekker adopts the πρότερον of Muretus.

PYRRHUS

away, smiting him with his staff and calling him impious and barbarous ; then, covering his face with his cloak he burst into tears, calling to mind Antigonus his grandfather and Demetrius his father, who were examples in his own family of a reversal of fortune.

The head and body of Pyrrhus, then, Antigonus caused to be adorned for burial and burned ; and when Alcyoneus found Helenus in an abject state and wearing a paltry cloak, and spoke to him kindly and brought him into the presence of his father, Antigonus was pleased with his conduct, and said : " This is better, my son, than what thou didst before ; but not even now hast thou done well in allowing this clothing to remain, which is a disgrace the rather to us who are held to be the victors." Then, after showing kindness to Helenus and adorning his person, he sent him back to Epeirus, and he dealt mildly with the friends of Pyrrhus when he became master of their camp and of their whole force.

CAIUS MARIUS

ΓΑΙΟΣ ΜΑΡΙΟΣ

Ι. Γαίου Μαρίου τρίτον οὐκ ἔχομεν εἰπεῖν ὄνομα, καθάπερ οὐδὲ Κοῖντου Σερτωρίου τοῦ κατασχόντος Ἰβηρίαν, οὐδὲ Λευκίου Μομμίου -οῦ Κόρινθον ἐλόντος· ὁ γὰρ Ἀχαικὸς τούτῳ γε τῆς πράξεως ἐπώνυμον γέγονεν, ὡς ὁ Ἀφρικανὸς
2 Σκηπίωνι καὶ ὁ Μακεδονικὸς Μετέλλῳ. ἐξ οὗ καὶ μάλιστα Ποσειδώνιος ἐλέγχειν οἶεται τοὺς τὸ τρίτον ὄνομα Ῥωμαίοις κύριον εἶναι νομίζοντας, οἶον τὸν Κάμιλλον καὶ τὸν Μάρκελλον καὶ τὸν Κάτωνα· γίνεσθαι γὰρ ἂν ἀνωτύμους¹ τοὺς ἀπὸ μόνων τῶν δυεῖν προσαγορευομένους. λαυθάνει δὲ ἑαυτὸν ὅτι τούτῳ τῷ λόγῳ πάλιν αὐτὸς ἀνωτύμους ποιεῖ² τὰς γυναῖκας· οὐδεμιᾶ γὰρ γυναικὶ τίθεται τῶν ὀνομάτων τὸ πρῶτον, ὅπερ οἶεται κυρίως ὄνομα Ῥωμαίοις ὑπάρχειν ὁ Ποσειδώνιος.
3 τῶν δὲ ἄλλων τὸ μὲν κοινὸν ἀπὸ συγγενείας, τοὺς Πομπητίους καὶ τοὺς Μαλλίους καὶ τοὺς Κορνηλίους (ὥσπερ ἂν Ἡρακλείδας τις εἶποι καὶ Πελοπίδας), τοῦτο δὲ προσηγορικὸν ἐξ ἐπιθέτου πρὸς τὰς φύσεις ἢ τὰς πράξεις ἢ τὰ τοῦ σώματος εἶδη καὶ πάθη τίθεσθαι, τὸν Μακρίνον καὶ τὸν Τουρκουᾶτον καὶ τὸν Σύλλαν (οἶόν ἐστιν ὁ Μνήμων ἢ ὁ Γρυπὸς ἢ ὁ Καλλίνικος). εἰς μὲν οὖν ταῦτα

¹ ἂν ἀνωτύμους Ziegler, after Schaefer : ἀνωτύμους.

² ποιεῖ Bekker and Ziegler, after Coraës : ποιεῖται.

CAIUS MARIUS

I. OF a third name for Caius Marius we are ignorant, as we are in the case of Quintus Sertorius the subduer of Spain, and of Lucius Mummius the captor of Corinth ; for Mummius received the surname of Achaïcus from his great exploit, as Scipio received that of Africanus, and Metellus that of Macedonicus. From this circumstance particularly Poseidonius thinks to confute those who hold that the third name is the Roman proper name, as, for instance, Camillus, Marcellus, or Cato ; for if that were so, he says, then those with only two names would have had no proper name at all. But it escapes his notice that his own line of reasoning, if extended to women, robs them of their proper names ; for no woman is given the first name, which Poseidonius thinks was the proper name among the Romans. Moreover, of the other two names, one was common to the whole family, as in the case of the Pompeii, the Manlii, or the Cornelii (just as a Greek might speak of the Heracleidae or the Pelopidae), and the other was a cognomen or epithet, given with reference to their natures or their actions, or to their bodily appearances or defects, Macrinus, for example, or Torquatus, or Sulla (like the Greek Mnemon, Grypus, or Callinicus).¹ However, πολλὰς δίδωσιν ἐπιχειρήσεις ἢ τῆς συνηθείας ἀνωμαλία.

¹ The full name of a Roman citizen consisted of a praenomen (the "given," or "proper" name), a nomen designating his family or gens, and a cognomen, which was also hereditary. Women rarely had a praenomen, or "proper" name, but bore the family name only.

II. Τῆς δὲ ὄψεως τῆς Μαρίου λιθίνην εἰκόνα κειμένην ἐν Ῥαβέννῃ τῆς Γαλατίας ἐθεώμεθα πάνυ τῇ λεγομένη περὶ τὸ ἦθος στρυφνότητι καὶ πικρία πρέπουσαν. ἀνδρώδης γὰρ φύσει καὶ πολεμικὸς γενόμενος, καὶ στρατιωτικῆς μᾶλλον ἢ πολιτικῆς παιδείας μεταλαβὼν, ἄκρατον ἐν ταῖς 2 ἐξουσίαις τὸν θυμὸν ἔσχε. λέγεται δὲ μήτε γράμματα μαθεῖν Ἑλληνικὰ μήτε γλώττη πρὸς μηδὲν Ἑλληνίδι χρῆσθαι τῶν σπουδῆς ἐχομένων, ὡς γελοῖον γράμματα μαθάνειν ὧν οἱ διδάσκαλοι δουλείου ἐτέροις· μετὰ δὲ τὸν δεύτερον θρίαμβον ἐπὶ ναοῦ τινοῦ καθιερώσει θεᾶς Ἑλληνικὰς 407 παρέχων, εἰς τὸ θέατρον ἔλθων καὶ μόνον καθίσας 3 εὐθύς ἀπαλλαγῆναι. ὥσπερ οὖν Ξενοκράτει τῷ φιλοσόφῳ σκυθροποτέρῳ δοκοῦντι τὸ ἦθος εἶναι πολλάκις εἰώθει λέγειν ὁ Πλάτων, “ὦ μακάριε Ξενοκράτες, θύε ταῖς Χάρισιν,” οὕτως εἴ τις ἔπεισε Μάριον θύειν ταῖς Ἑλληνικαῖς Μούσαις καὶ Χάρισιν, οὐκ ἂν ἐκπρεπεστάταις στρατηγίαις καὶ πολιτείαις ἀμορφοτάτην ἐπέθηκε κορωνίδα, ὑπὸ θυμοῦ καὶ φιλαρχίας ἀώρου καὶ πλεονεξιῶν ἀπαρηγορήτων εἰς ὠμότατον καὶ ἀγριώτατον γῆρας ἐξοκέιλας. ταῦτα μὲν οὖν ἐπὶ τῶν πράξεων αὐτῶν εὐθύς θεωρήσθω.

III. Γενόμενος δὲ γονέων παντάπασιν ἀδόξων, αὐτουργῶν δὲ καὶ πενήτων, πατὴρ μὲν ὁμωνύμου, μητὴρ δὲ Φουλκινίας, ὄψέ ποτε πόλιν εἶδε καὶ in these matters the irregularity of custom furnishes many topics for discussion.

CAIUS MARIUS

II. As for the personal appearance of Marius, we have seen a marble statue of him at Ravenna in Gaul, and it very well portrays the harshness and bitterness of character which are ascribed to him. For since he was naturally virile and fond of war, and since he received a training in military rather than in civil life, his temper was fierce when he came to exercise authority. Moreover, we are told that he never studied Greek literature, and never used the Greek language for any matter of real importance, thinking it ridiculous to study a literature the teachers of which were the subjects of another people; and when, after his second triumph and at the consecration of some temple, he furnished the public with Greek spectacles, though he came into the theatre, he merely sat down, and at once went away. Accordingly, just as Plato was wont to say often to Xenocrates the philosopher, who had the reputation of being rather morose in his disposition, "My good Xenocrates, sacrifice to the Graces," so if Marius could have been persuaded to sacrifice to the Greek Muses and Graces, he would not have put the ugliest possible crown upon a most illustrious career in field and forum, nor have been driven by the blasts of passion, ill-timed ambition, and insatiable greed upon the shore of a most cruel and savage old age. However, his actual career shall at once bring this into clear view.

III. Born of parents who were altogether obscure—poor people who lived by the labour of their own hands (Marius was his father's name, Fulcinia that of his mother), it was not till late that he saw the city

τῶν ἐν πόλει διατριβῶν ἐγεύσατο, τὸν δὲ ἄλλον χρόνον ἐν κώμῃ Κιρραιάτωνι τῆς Ἀρπίνης δίαιταν εἶχε, πρὸς μὲν ἀστεῖον καὶ γλαφυρὸν βίον ἀγροικοτέραν, σώφρονα δὲ καὶ ταῖς πάλαι Ῥωμαίων

2 τροφαῖς ἐοικυῖαν. πρώτην δὲ στρατείαν στρατευσάμενος ἐπὶ Κελτίβηρας, ὅτε Σκηπίων Ἀφρικανὸς Νομαντίαν ἐπολιόρκει, τὸν στρατηγὸν οὐκ ἐλάνθανεν ἀνδρεία τῶν ἄλλων νέων διαφέρων καὶ τὴν μεταβολὴν τῆς διαίτης, ἣν ὑπὸ τρυφῆς καὶ πολυτελείας διεφθαρμένοις ἐπήγε τοῖς στρατεύμασιν ὁ Σκηπίων, εὐκολώτατα προσδεχόμενος. λέγεται δὲ καὶ πολέμιον ἄνδρα συστάς κατα-

3 βαλεῖν ἐν ὄψει τοῦ στρατηγοῦ. διὸ ταῖς τε ἄλλαις προήγετο τιμαῖς ὑπ' αὐτοῦ, καὶ ποτε λόγου μετὰ δεῖπνον ἐμπεσόντος ὑπὲρ στρατηγῶν, καὶ τῶν παρόντων ἐνὸς εἴτε ἀληθῶς διαπορήσαντος εἴτε πρὸς ἡδονὴν ἐρομένου τὸν Σκηπίωνα τίνα δὴ τοιοῦτον ἔξει μετ' ἐκείνον ἡγεμόνα καὶ προστάτην ὁ Ῥωμαίων δῆμος, ὑπερκατακειμένου τοῦ Μαρίου τῇ χειρὶ τὸν ὦμον ἡρέμα πατάξας ὁ Σκηπίων, "Τάχα δὲ τοῦτον," εἶπεν. οὕτως εὐφύῃς ἦν ὁ μὲν ἐκ μειρακίου φανῆναι μέγας, ὁ δὲ ἀπὸ τῆς ἀρχῆς τὸ τέλος νοῆσαι.

IV. Τὸν δ' οὖν Μάριον ὑπὸ ταύτης λέγεται μάλιστα τῆς φωνῆς, ὥσπερ ὑπὸ θείας κληδόνας, ἐπαρθέντα ταῖς ἐλπίσιν ὀρμησάμενος πρὸς τὴν πολιτείαν, καὶ τυχεῖν δημαρχίας Κεκίλιου Μετέλλου or got a taste of city ways. In the meantime he lived at Cirrhaeton,¹ a village in the territory of Arpinum, in a manner that was quite rude when compared with the polished life of a city, but temperate, and in harmony with the rearing which the ancient Romans gave their children. His first service as a soldier was in a campaign against the Celtiberians, when Scipio Africanus was besieging Numantia,² and he attracted the notice of his general by excelling the other young men in bravery, and by his very cheerful acceptance of the changed regimen which Scipio introduced into his army when it was spoiled by luxury and extravagance. It is said, too, that he encountered and laid low an enemy in the sight of his general. Therefore he was advanced by his commander to many honours; and once, when the talk after supper had to do with generals, and one of the company (either because he really wished to know or merely sought to please) asked Scipio where the Roman people would find any such chieftain and leader to follow him, Scipio, gently tapping Marius on the shoulder as he reclined next him, said: "Here, perhaps." So gifted by nature were both men; the one in showing himself great while still a young man, and the other in discerning the end from the beginning.

CAIUS MARIUS

IV. So, then, Marius, filled with high hopes, we are told, by this speech of Scipio in particular, as if it were a divine utterance in prophecy, set out upon a political career, and was made tribune of the people³ with the assistance of Caecilius Metellus, of

¹ Probably a corruption for Cereatae.

² 134-133 B.C.

³ In 119 B.C., at the age of thirty-eight.

σπουδάσαντος, οὐ τὸν οἶκον ἐξ ἀρχῆς καὶ πατρό-2 θεν ἑθεράπευεν. ἐν δὲ τῇ δημαρχία νόμον τινα περὶ ψηφοφορίας γράφοντος αὐτοῦ δοκοῦντα τῶν δυνατῶν ἀφαιρεῖσθαι τὴν περὶ τὰς κρίσεις ἰσχύν, ἐνιστάμενος Κόττας ὁ ὑπάτος συνέπεισε τὴν βου-λὴν τῷ μὲν νόμῳ μάχεσθαι, τὸν δὲ Μάριον καλεῖν λόγον ὑφέξοντα. καὶ τοῦ δόγματος τούτου γρα-φέντος εἰσελθὼν ἐκείνος οὐκ ἔπαθε νέου πάθος ἀπὸ μηδενὸς λαμπροῦ προεληλυθότος ἄρτι πρὸς τὴν πολιτείαν, ἀλλ' ἑαυτῷ διδοὺς ἤδη φρονεῖν ἡλικίαν αἱ μετέπειτα πράξεις ἔδωκαν, ἠπέιλησε τὸν Κότ-3 ταν ἀπάγειν εἰς τὸ δεσμωτήριον, εἰ μὴ διαγράψει τὸ δόγμα. τοῦ δὲ πρὸς Μέτελλον τραπομένου καὶ γνώμην ἐρωτῶντος, Μέτελλος μὲν ἀναστὰς συνηγόρει τῷ ὑπάτῳ, Μάριος δὲ τὸν ὑπὲρ τὴν μεταπεμφάμενος ἔξωθεν ἐκέλευεν ἀπάγειν αὐτὸν τὸν Μέτελλον εἰς τὸ δεσμωτήριον. ἐκείνου δὲ τοὺς ἄλλους ἐπικαλουμένου δημάρχους ἐβοήθει μὲν οὐδεὶς, ἡ δὲ σύγκλητος εἴξασα προήκατο τὸ δόγμα.
 καὶ λαμπρὸς ἐξελάσας ὁ Μάριος εἰς τὸ πλῆθος ἐκύρωσε τὸν νόμον, δόξας ἄκαμptos μὲν εἶναι πρὸς φόβον, ἄτρεπτος δὲ ὑπ' αἰδούσ, δεινὸς δὲ κατὰ τῆς βουλῆς ἀνίστασθαι χάριτι τῶν πολλῶν 4 δημαγωγῶν. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ ταύτην μὲν ταχέως μετέστησεν ἐτέρῳ πολιτεύματι τὴν δόξαν. νόμου γὰρ εἰσφερομένου περὶ σίτου διανομῆς τοῖς πολίταις ἐναντιωθεὶς ἐρρωμενέστατα καὶ κρατήσας, εἰς τὸ ἴσον ἑαυτὸν κατέστησε τῇ τιμῇ πρὸς 408 ἀμφοτέρους ὡς μηδετέροις παρὰ τὸ συμφέρον χαριζόμενος.

V. Μετὰ δὲ τὴν δημαρχίαν ἀγορανομίαν τὴν μείζονα παρήγγειλε. δύο γὰρ εἰσι τάξεις ἀγο-

CAIUS MARIUS

whose house he had always been an hereditary adherent. While serving as tribune he introduced a law concerning the mode of voting, which, as it was thought, would lessen the power of the nobles in judicial cases; whereupon Cotta the consul opposed him and persuaded the senate to contest the law, and to summon Marius before it to explain his procedure. The senate voted to do this, and Marius appeared before it. He did not, however, behave like a young man who had just entered political life without any brilliant services behind him, but assumed at once the assurance which his subsequent achievements gave him, and threatened to hale Cotta off to prison unless he had the vote rescinded. Cotta then turned to Metellus and asked him to express his opinion, and Metellus, rising in his place, concurred with the consul; but Marius called in the officer and ordered him to conduct Metellus himself to prison. Metellus appealed to the other tribunes, but none of them came to his support, so the senate gave way and rescinded its vote. Marius therefore came forth in triumph to the people and got them to ratify his law. Men now thought him superior to fear, unmoved by respect of persons, and a formidable champion of the people in opposition to the senate. However, this opinion was quickly modified by another political procedure of his. For when a law was introduced providing for the distribution of grain to the citizens, he opposed it most strenuously and carried the day, thereby winning for himself an equal place in the esteem of both parties as a man who favoured neither at the expense of the general good.

V. After his tribuneship, he became a candidate for the higher aedileship. For there are two classes

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- ρανομιῶν, ἡ μὲν ἀπὸ τῶν δίφρων τῶν ἀγκυλοπόδων, ἐφ' ὧν καθεζόμενοι χρηματίζουσιν, ἔχουσα τοῦνομα τῆς ἀρχῆς, τὴν δ' ὑποδεεστέραν δημοτικὴν καλοῦσιν. ὅταν δὲ τοὺς ἐντιμότερους ἔλονται περὶ τῶν ἐτέρων πάλιν τὴν ψῆφον λαμβάνουσιν. ὡς οὖν ὁ Μάριος φανερὸς ἦν λειπόμενος ἐν ἐκείνῃ, ταχὺ μεταστὰς αὐθις ἦται τὴν ἐτέραν. δόξας δὲ θρασὺς εἶναι καὶ αὐθάδης ἀπέτυχε· καὶ δυσὶν ἐν ἡμέρᾳ μιᾷ περιπεσὼν ἀποτεύξεσιν, ὃ μηδεὶς ἔπαθεν ἄλλος, οὐδὲ μικρὸν ὑφήκατο τοῦ φρονήματος, ὕστερον δὲ οὐ πολλῶ στρατηγίαν μετελθὼν ὀλίγον ἐδέησεν ἐκπεσεῖν, ἔσχατος δὲ πάντων ἀναγορευθεὶς δίκην ἔσχε δεκασμοῦ.
- 3 Μάλιστα δὲ ὑποψίαν παρέσχε Κασσίου Σαβάκωνος οἰκέτης ὀφθεῖς ἐντὸς τῶν δρυφάκτων ἀναμεμυγμένος τοῖς φέρουσι τὰς ψήφους· ὁ γὰρ Σαβάκων ἦν ἐταῖρος ἐν τοῖς μάλιστα Μαρίου. κληθεὶς οὖν οὗτος ὑπὸ τῶν δικαστῶν ἔφη διὰ τὸ καῦμα διψήσας ὕδωρ ψυχρὸν αἰτῆσαι καὶ τὸν οἰκέτην ἔχοντα ποτήριον εἰσελθεῖν πρὸς αὐτόν,
- 4 εἶτ' εὐθύς οἴχεσθαι πιόντος. οὗτος μὲν οὖν ὑπὸ τῶν μετὰ ταῦτα τιμητῶν ἐξέπεσε τῆς βουλῆς, ἐπιτήδειος εἶναι παθεῖν τοῦτο δόξας ἢ διὰ τὴν ψευδομαρτυρίαν ἢ διὰ τὴν ἀκρασίαν· ἐπὶ δὲ τὸν Μάριον καὶ Γάϊος Ἐρέννιος μάρτυς εἰσαχθεὶς οὐκ ἔφη πάτριον εἶναι καταμαρτυρεῖν πελατῶν, ἀλλὰ τὸν νόμον ἀφιέναι ταύτης τῆς ἀνάγκης τοὺς πάτρωνας (οὕτως γὰρ οἱ Ῥωμαῖοι τοὺς προστάτας

CAIUS MARIUS

of aediles, one taking its name of "curule" from the chairs with curving feet on which the magistrates sit in the exercise of their functions, the other, and the inferior, being called "plebeian." When the superior aediles have been elected, the people cast a second vote for the others. Accordingly, when it was clear that Marius was losing his election to the higher office, he immediately changed his tactics and applied for the other. But men thought him bold and obstinate, and he was defeated; nevertheless, although he had met with two failures in one day, a thing which had never happened to any candidate before, he did not lower his assurance in the least, but not long afterwards became a candidate for the praetorship¹ and narrowly missed defeat; he was returned last of all, and was prosecuted for bribery.

Suspicion was chiefly aroused by the sight of a servant of Cassius Sabaco inside the palings among the voters; for Sabaco was an especial friend of Marius. Sabaco was therefore summoned before the court, and testified that the heat had made him so thirsty that he had called for cold water, and that his servant had come in to him with a cup, and had then at once gone away after his master had drunk. Sabaco, however, was expelled from the senate by the censors of the next year, and it was thought that he deserved this punishment, either because he had given false testimony, or because of his intemperance. But Caius Herennius also was brought in as a witness against Marius, and pleaded that it was contrary to established usage for patrons (the Roman term for our representatives at law) to bear witness against clients, and that the law relieved them of this necessity; and

¹ In 115 B.C.

καλοῦσι), τοῦ δ' Ἐρεννίων οἴκου τοὺς Μαρίου γονεῖς καὶ Μάριον αὐτὸν ἐξ ἀρχῆς γεγονέναι 5 πελάτας. ἀποδεξαμένων δὲ τὴν ἀπόρρησιν τῆς μαρτυρίας τῶν δικαστῶν αὐτὸς ἀντεῖπεν ὁ Μάριος πρὸς τὸν Ἐρεννιον ὡς, ὅτε πρῶτον ἀρχῶν ἀνηγορευῆθη, τὸν πελάτην ἐκβεβηκῶς· ὅπερ ἦν οὐ παντάπασι ἀληθές. ἀρχὴ γὰρ οὐ πᾶσα τοῦ νέμειν προστάτην ἀπάλλάσσει τοὺς τυχόντας αὐτοὺς καὶ γένος, ἀλλ' ἢ τὸν ἀγκυλόποδα δίφρον ὁ νόμος δίδωσιν. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ ταῖς πρώταις ἡμέ-ραις ἐν τῇ δίκῃ κακῶς πράττων ὁ Μάριος καὶ χαλεποῖς χρώμενος τοῖς δικασταῖς, τῇ τελευταίᾳ παραλόγως ἀπέφυγεν ἴσων τῶν ψήφων γενομένων.

VI. Ἐν μὲν οὖν τῇ στρατηγίᾳ μετρίως ἐπαινούμενον ἑαυτὸν παρέσχε. μετὰ δὲ τὴν στρατηγίαν κλήρω λαβὼν τὴν ἐκτὸς Ἰβηρίαν λέγεται καθάραι ληστηρίων τὴν ἐπαρχίαν ἀνήμερον οὔσαν ἔτι τοῖς ἐθισμοῖς καὶ θηριώδη, καὶ τὸ ληστεύειν οὐπω τότε τῶν Ἰβήρων οὐχὶ κάλλιστον ἡγουμένων. ἐν δὲ τῇ πολιτείᾳ γενόμενος οὐκ εἶχεν οὔτε πλούτον οὔτε λόγον, οἷς ἦγον οἱ τότε μάλιστα 2 τιμώμενοι τὸν δῆμον. αὐτὴν δὲ τὴν ἀνάτασιν τοῦ φρονήματος καὶ τὸ περὶ τοὺς πόνους ἐνδελεχῆς αὐτοῦ καὶ τὸ δημοτικὸν τῆς διαίτης ἐν τινι σπουδῇ τιθεμένων τῶν πολιτῶν ηὔξανετο τῇ τιμῇ πρὸς δύναμιν, ὥστε καὶ γάμον γῆμαι λαμπρὸν οἰκίας ἐπιφανοῦς τῆς Καισάρων Ἰουλίαν, ἧς ἦν ἀδελ-φιδοῦς Καῖσαρ ὁ χρόνοις ὕστερον Ῥωμαίων μέγι-στος γενόμενος καί τι κατ' οἰκειότητα ζηλώσας Μάριον, ὡς ἐν τοῖς περὶ ἐκείνου γέγραπται.

CAIUS MARIUS

not only the parents of Marius but Marius himself had originally been clients of the house of the Herennii. The jurors accepted this plea in avoidance of testimony, but Marius himself contradicted Herennius, declaring that as soon as he had been elected to his magistracy he had ceased to be a client; which was not altogether true. For it is not every magistracy that frees its occupants (as well as their posterity) from their relations to a patron, but only that to which the law assigns the curule chair. However, although during the first days of the trial Marius fared badly and found the jurors severe towards him, on the last day, contrary to all expectation, there was a tie vote and he was acquitted.

VI. Well, then, for his praetorship Marius got only moderate commendation. After his praetorship, however, the province of Farther Spain was allotted to him, and here he is said to have cleared away the robbers, although the province was still uncivilized in its customs and in a savage state, and robbery was at that time still considered a most honourable occupation by the Spaniards. But when he returned to political life, he had neither wealth nor eloquence, with which the magnates of the time used to influence the people. Still, the very intensity of his assurance, his indefatigable labours, and his plain and simple way of living, won him a certain popularity among his fellow citizens, and his honours brought him increasing influence, so that he married into the illustrious family of the Caesars and became the husband of Julia, who was the aunt of that Caesar who in after times became greatest among the Romans, and in some degree, because of his relationship, made Marius his example, as I have stated in his Life.¹

¹ See the Caesar, v. 1 f.

3 Τῷ δὲ Μαρίῳ καὶ σωφροσύνην μαρτυροῦσι καὶ καρτερίαν, ἧς δεῦγμα καὶ τὸ περὶ τὴν χειρουργίαν ἐστίν. ἰξιῶν γάρ, ὡς ἔοικε, μεγάλων ἀνάπλεως ἄμφω τὰ σκέλη γεγωνῶς καὶ τὴν ἀμορφίαν δυσχεραίνων ἔγνω παρασχεῖν ἑαυτὸν τῷ ἱατρῷ· καὶ παρέσχευ ἄδετος θάτερον σκέλος, οὐδὲν κινήθεις οὐδὲ στενάξας, ἀλλὰ καθεστῶτι τῷ προσώπῳ καὶ μετὰ σιωπῆς ὑπερβολάς τινας ἀλγηδόνων ἐν ταῖς τομαῖς ἀνασχόμενος. τοῦ δ' ἱατροῦ μετιόντος ἐπὶ θάτερον οὐκέτι παρέσχε, φήσας ὄραν τὸ ἐπανόρθωμα τῆς ἀλγηδόνας οὐκ ἄξιον.

VII. Ἐπεὶ δὲ Κεκίλιος Μέτελλος ἀποδειχθεὶς 409 ἐπὶ τὸν κατὰ Ἰουγούρθα πόλεμον ὑπατος στρατηγὸς εἰς Λιβύην ἐπηγάγετο πρεσβευτὴν Μάριον, ἐνταῦθα πράξεων μεγάλων καὶ λαμπρῶν ἀγῶνων ἐπιλαβόμενος τὸ μὲν αὔξειν τὸν Μέτελλον, ὥσπερ οἱ λοιποί, καὶ πολιτεύεσθαι πρὸς ἐκεῖνον εἶασε χαίρειν· ἰξιῶν δὲ οὐχ ὑπὸ Μετέλλου κεκλήσθαι πρεσβευτῆς, ὑπὸ δὲ τῆς τύχης εἰς εὐφύεστατον καιρὸν ὁμοῦ καὶ μέγιστον εἰσάγεσθαι πράξεων 2 θέατρον, ἐπεδείκνυτο πᾶσαν ἀνδραγαθίαν. καὶ πολλὰ τοῦ πολέμου δυσχερῆ φέροντος οὔτε τῶν μεγάλων τινὰ πόνων ὑποτρέσας οὔτε τῶν μικρῶν ἀπαξιώσας, ἀλλὰ τοὺς μὲν ὁμοτίμους εὐβουλία καὶ προνοία τοῦ συμφέροντος ὑπερβαλλόμενος, πρὸς δὲ τοὺς στρατιώτας ὑπὲρ εὐτελείας καὶ καρτερίας διαμιλλώμενος εὖνοϊαν ἔσχε πολλήν 3 παρ' αὐτοῖς. ὅλως μὲν γὰρ ἔοικε τοῦ κάμνειν

CAIUS MARIUS

There is testimony both to the temperance of Marius, and also to his fortitude, of which his behaviour under a surgical operation is a proof. He was afflicted in both legs, as it would appear, with varicose veins, and as he disliked the deformity, he resolved to put himself into the physician's hands. Refusing to be bound, he presented to him one leg, and then, without a motion or a groan, but with a steadfast countenance and in silence, endured incredible pain under the knife. When, however, the physician was proceeding to treat the other leg, Marius would suffer him no further, declaring that he saw the cure to be not worth the pain.

. VII. When Caecilius Metellus the consul was appointed commander-in-chief for the war against Jugurtha,¹ he took Marius with him to Africa in the capacity of legate. Here, in essaying great exploits and brilliant struggles, Marius was not careful, like the rest, to enhance the glory of Metellus and conduct himself in his interests; and deeming that he had not so much been called by Metellus to the office of legate as he was being introduced by Fortune into a most favourable opportunity as well as a most spacious theatre for exploits, he made a display of every sort of bravery. And though the war brought many hardships, he neither shunned any great labour, nor disdained any that were small, but surpassed the officers of his own rank in giving good counsel and foreseeing what was advantageous, and vied with the common soldiers in frugality and endurance, thereby winning much goodwill among them. For as a general thing it would seem that every man finds

¹ In 109 B.C.

ἐκάστω παραμυθία τὸ συγκάμνον ἐκουσίως εἶναι·
δοκεῖ γὰρ ἀφαιρεῖν τὴν ἀνάγκην· ἥδιστον δὲ Ῥωμαίῳ θέαμα στρατιώτῃ στρατηγὸς ἐσθίων ἐν ὄψει κοινὸν ἄρτον ἢ κατακείμενος ἐπὶ στιβάδος εὐτελοῦς ἢ περὶ ταφρείαν τινὰ καὶ χαράκωσιν ἔργου συνεφαπτόμενος. οὐ γὰρ οὕτως τοὺς τιμῆς καὶ χρημάτων μεταδιδόντας ὡς τοὺς πόνου καὶ κινδύνου μεταλαμβάνοντας ἡγεμόνας θαυμάζουσιν, ἀλλὰ μᾶλλον ἀγαπῶσι τῶν ῥαθυμεῖν ἐπιτρεπόν-των τοὺς συμπονεῖν ἐθέλοντας,

- 4 Ταῦτα πάντα ποιῶν ὁ Μάριος καὶ διὰ τούτων
τοὺς στρατιώτας δημαγωγῶν ταχὺ μὲν ἐνέπλησε τὴν Λιβύην, ταχὺ δὲ τὴν Ῥώμην, ὀνόματος καὶ δόξης, τῶν ἀπὸ στρατοπέδου τοῖς οἴκοι γραφόντων ὡς οὐκ ἔστι πέρασ οὐδὲ ἀπαλλαγὴ τοῦ πρὸς τὸν βάρβαρον πολέμου μὴ Γαίῳ Μάριον ἐλομένοις ὑπατον.

VIII. Ἐφ' οἷς δῆλος ἦν ὁ Μέτελλος ἀχθόμενος.
μάλιστα δὲ αὐτὸν ἠνίασε τὸ περὶ Τουρπίλλιον.
οὗτος γὰρ ὁ ἀνὴρ ἦν μὲν ἐκ πατέρων ξένος τῷ Μετέλλῳ καὶ τότε τὴν ἐπὶ τῶν τεκτόνων ἔχων ἀρχὴν συνεστράτευε· φρουρῶν δὲ Βάγαν, πόλιν μεγάλην, καὶ τῷ μηδὲν ἀδικεῖν τοὺς ἐνοικούντας, ἀλλὰ πρῶως καὶ φιλανθρώπως αὐτοῖς προσ-φέρεσθαι πιστεύων, ἔλαθεν ὑποχείριος τοῖς πολεμίοις γενόμενος. παρεδέξαντο γὰρ τὸν Ἰουγούρθαν, τὸν δὲ Τουρπίλλιον οὐδὲν ἠδίκησαν, ἀλλὰ σῶον 2 ἐξαιτησάμενοι διῆκαν. ἔσχεν οὖν αἰτίαν προ-δοσίας· καὶ παρῶν ὁ Μάριος τῇ κρίσει σύμβουλος

CAIUS MARIUS

solace for his labours in seeing another voluntarily share those labours; this seems to take away the element of compulsion; and it is a most agreeable spectacle for a Roman soldier when he sees a general eating common bread in public, or sleeping on a simple pallet, or taking a hand in the construction of some trench or palisade. For they have not so much admiration for those leaders who share honour and riches with them as for those who take part in their toils and dangers, but have more affection for those who are willing to join in their toils than for those who permit them to lead an easy life.

By doing all these things and thereby winning the hearts of the soldiers, Marius soon filled Africa, and soon filled Rome, with his name and fame, and men in the camp wrote to those at home that there would be no end or cessation of the war against the Barbarian unless they chose Caius Marius consul.

VIII. At all this Metellus was evidently displeased. But it was the affair of Turpillius that most vexed him. This Turpillius was an hereditary guest-friend of Metellus, and at this time was serving in his army as chief of engineers. But he was put in charge of Vaga, a large city, and because he relied for safety on his doing the inhabitants no wrong, but rather treating them with kindness and humanity, he unawares came into the power of the enemy; for they admitted Jugurtha into their city. Still, they did Turpillius no harm, but obtained his release and sent him away safe and sound. Accordingly, a charge of treachery was brought against him; and Marius, who was a member of the council which tried the case, αὐτός τέ οἱ πικρὸς ἦν καὶ τῶν ἄλλων παρώξυνε τοὺς πλείστους, ὥστε ἄκουτα τὸν Μέτελλον ἐκβιασθῆναι καὶ καταψηφίσασθαι θάνατον τοῦ ἀνθρώπου. μετ' ὀλίγον δὲ τῆς αἰτίας ψευδοῦς φανείσης, οἱ μὲν ἄλλοι συνήχθοντο τῷ Μετέλλῳ βαρέως φέροντι, Μάριος δὲ χαίρων καὶ ποιούμενος ἴδιον τὸ ἔργον οὐκ ἠσχύνετο λέγειν περιῶν ὡς αὐτὸς εἶη προστετριμμένος ἀλάστορα τῷ Μετέλλῳ ξενοκτόνον.

- 3 Ἐκ τούτου φανερώς ἀπηχθάνοντο· καὶ λέγεται ποτε τοῦ Μαρίου παρόντος οἶον ἐφυβρίζων ὁ Μέτελλος εἰπεῖν, “Σὺ δὴ καταλιπὼν ἡμᾶς, ὦ γενναῖε, πλεῖν ἐπ’ οἴκου διανοῇ καὶ παραγγέλλειν ὑπατείαν; οὐ γὰρ ἀγαπήσεις, ἂν τῶμῶ παιδὶ τούτῳ συνυπατεύσης;” ἦν δὲ ὁ παῖς τότε τοῦ
- 4 Μετέλλου παντάπασι μειράκιον. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ τοῦ Μαρίου σπουδάζοντος ἀφεθῆναι, πολλὰς ἀναβολὰς ποιησάμενος, ἔτι δώδεκα λειπομένων ἡμερῶν ἐπὶ τὴν τῶν ὑπάτων ἀνάδειξιν, ἀφήκεν αὐτόν. ὁ δὲ πολλὴν ἀπὸ στρατοπέδου τὴν ἐπὶ θάλασσαν εἰς Ἰτύκην ὁδὸν ἡμέραις δυσὶ καὶ μιᾷ νυκτὶ συνελὼν ἔθνε πρὸ τοῦ πλοῦ. καὶ λέγεται τὸν μάντιν εἰπεῖν ὡς ἀπίστους τινὰς τὸ μέγεθος καὶ κρείττονας ἐλπίδος ἀπάσης εὐπραξίας προ-
- 5 φαίνοι τῷ Μαρίῳ τὸ δαιμόνιον. ὁ δὲ τούτοις ἐπαρθεὶς ἀνήχθη. καὶ τὸ πέλαγος τεταρταῖος 410 οὐρίῳ πνεύματι περάσας αὐτίκα τε τῷ δήμῳ ποθεινὸς ὤφθη, καὶ προαχθεὶς ὑπὸ τινος τῶν δημάρχων εἰς τὸ πλῆθος ἐπὶ πολλαῖς κατὰ τοῦ Μετέλλου διαβολαῖς ἠτείτο τὴν ἀρχήν, ὑπισχνούμενος ἢ κτενεῖν ἢ ζῶντα λήψεσθαι τὸν Ἰουγούρθαν.

CAIUS MARIUS

was himself bitter, and exasperated most of the others against the accused, so that Metellus was reluctantly forced to pass sentence of death upon him. After a short time, however, the charge was found to be false, and almost everybody sympathized with Metellus in his grief; but Marius, full of joy and claiming the condemnation as his own work, was not ashamed to go about saying that he had fastened upon the path of Metellus a daemon who would avenge the murder of a guest-friend.

In consequence of this there was open enmity between the two men; and we are told that on one occasion when Marius was present Metellus said to him as if in mockery: "Dost thou purpose to leave us, my good Sir, and sail for home, and stand for the consulship? Pray will it not satisfy thee to be fellow-consul with this my son?" Now the son of Metellus was at this time a mere stripling. However, Marius was eager to be dismissed, and so, after making many postponements, and when only twelve days remained before the election of consuls, Metellus dismissed him. Marius accomplished the long journey from the camp to Utica and the sea in two days and one night, and offered sacrifice before he sailed. And the seer is said to have told him that the Deity revealed for Marius successes that were of incredible magnitude and beyond his every expectation. Elated by this prophecy he put to sea. In three days he crossed the sea with a favouring wind, and was at once welcomed gladly by the populace, and after being introduced to the assembly by one of the tribunes, he first made many slanderous charges against Metellus, and then asked for the consulship, promising that he would either kill Jugurtha or take him alive.

- IX. Ἀναγορευθεὶς δὲ λαμπρῶς εὐθύς ἐστρατολόγει, παρὰ τὸν νόμον καὶ τὴν συνήθειαν πολλὸν τὸν ἄπορον καὶ φαῦλον¹ καταγραφῶν, τῶν πρόσθεν ἡγεμόνων οὐ προσδεχομένων τοὺς τοιούτους, ἀλλ', ὥσπερ ἄλλο τι τῶν καλῶν, τὰ ὄπλα μετὰ τιμῆς τοῖς ἀξίοις νεμόντων, ἐνέχυρον τὴν οὐσίαν.
- 2 ἐκάστου τιθέναι δοκοῦντος. οὐ μὴν ταυτὰ γε μάλιστα διέβαλε τὸν Μάριον, ἀλλ' οἱ λόγοι θρασεῖς ὄντες ὑπεροψία καὶ ὕβρει τοὺς πρώτους ἐλύπουν, σκυλὸν τε βοῶντος αὐτοῦ τὴν ὑπατείαν φέρεσθαι τῆς τῶν εὐγενῶν καὶ πλουσίων μαλακίας, καὶ τραύμασιν οἰκείοις πρὸς τὸν δῆμον, οὐ μνήμασι νεκρῶν οὐδὲ ἀλλοτρίαις εἰκόσι νεανιεύεσθαι.
- 3 πολλάκις δὲ καὶ τοὺς ἀτυχήσαντας ἐν Λιβύῃ στρατηγούς, τοῦτο μὲν Βησιτίαν, τοῦτο δὲ Ἀλβίνον, ἀνθρώπους οἰκῶν μὲν ἐπιφανῶν, αὐτοὺς δὲ τύχῃ σφαλέντας, ἀπολέμους καὶ δι' ἀπειρίαν πταισάντας ὀνομάζων, ἐπιθυμῶν τῶν παρόντων εἰ μὴ καὶ τοὺς ἐκείνων οἴονται προγόνους αὐτῷ μᾶλλον ἀνεῦξασθαι παραπλησίους ἐκγόνους ἀπολιπεῖν, ἅτε δὴ μηδὲ αὐτοὺς δι' εὐγένειαν, ἀλλ' ὑπ' ἀρετῆς καὶ καλῶν ἔργων ἐνδόξους γενομένους.
- 4 ταῦτα δὲ οὐ κενῶς οὐδὲ ἀλαζονικῶς ἔλεγεν οὐδὲ μάτην ἀπεχθάνεσθαι τοῖς δυνατοῖς βουλόμενος, ἀλλ' ὁ δῆμος αὐτόν, ἠδόμενός τε τῇ βουλῇ προπηλακιζομένη καὶ λόγου κόμπῳ μετρῶν ἀεὶ φρονήματος μέγεθος, ἐξεκούφιζε, καὶ συνεξώρμα μὴ

¹ φαῦλον van Herwerden : δοῦλον.

CAIUS MARIUS

IX. He was triumphantly elected,¹ and at once began to levy troops. Contrary to law and custom he enlisted many a poor and insignificant man, although former commanders had not accepted such persons, but bestowed arms, just as they would any other honour, only on those whose property assessment made them worthy to receive these, each soldier being supposed to put his substance in pledge to the state. It was not this, however, that brought most odium upon Marius, but the boldly insolent and arrogant speeches with which he vexed the nobles, crying out that he had carried off the consulship as spoil from the effeminacy of the rich and well-born, and that he had wounds upon his own person with which to vaunt himself before the people, not monuments of the dead nor likenesses of other men. Often, too, he would mention by name the generals in Africa who had been unsuccessful, now Bestia, and now Albinus, men of illustrious houses indeed, but unfortunate themselves, and unwarlike, who had met with disaster through lack of experience; and he would ask his audience if they did not think that the ancestors of these men would have much preferred to leave descendants like himself, since they themselves had been made illustrious, not by their noble birth, but by their valour and noble deeds. Such talk was not mere empty boasting, nor was his desire to make himself hated by the nobility without purpose; indeed the people, who were delighted to have the senate insulted and always measured the greatness of a man's spirit by the boastfulness of his speech, encouraged him, and incited him not to spare φείδεσθαι τῶν ἀξιολόγων, χαριζόμενον τοῖς πολλοῖς.

¹ For the year 107 B.C., at the age of fifty.

Χ. Ὡς δὲ διέπλευσεν εἰς Λιβύην, Μέτελλος μὲν ἦττων τοῦ φθόνου γενόμενος, καὶ περιπαθῶν ὅτι, κατειργασμένου τὸν πόλεμον αὐτοῦ καὶ μηδὲν ὑπόλοιπον ἢ τὸ σῶμα τοῦ Ἰουγούρθα λαβεῖν ἔχοντας, ἤκει Μάριος ἐπὶ τὸν στέφανον καὶ τὸν θρίαμβον, ἐκ τῆς πρὸς ἐκείνον ἀχαριστίας ἠύξημένος, οὐχ ὑπέμεινεν εἰς τὸ αὐτὸ συνελθεῖν, ἀλλ' αὐτὸς μὲν ὑπέξεχώρησε, Ῥουτίλιος δὲ τὸ στρά-2 τευμα τῷ Μαρῖῳ παρέδωκε, πρεσβευτῆς γεγωνῶς τοῦ Μετέλλου. καὶ περιῆλθέ τις νέμεσις ἐν τῷ τέλει τῶν πράξεων Μάριον· ἀφηρέθη γὰρ ὑπὸ Σύλλα τὴν τοῦ κατορθώματος δόξαν, ὡς ὑπ' ἐκείνου Μέτελλος· ὃν τρόπον δέ, ἀφηγήσομαι βραχέως, ἐπεὶ τὰ καθ' ἕκαστον μᾶλλον ἐν τοῖς περὶ Σύλλα γέγραπται.

Βόκχος ὁ τῶν ἄνω βαρβάρων βασιλεὺς ἦν πενθερὸς Ἰουγούρθα, καὶ πολεμοῦντι μὲν οὐ πάνυ τι 3 συλλαμβάνειν ἐδόκει, προβαλλόμενος αὐτοῦ τὴν ἀπιστίαν, καὶ τὴν αὔξησιν δεδοικῶς· ἐπεὶ δὲ φεύ-γων καὶ πλανώμενος ἐκείνον ὑπ' ἀνάγκης ἔθετο τῶν ἐλπίδων τελευταῖον καὶ κατῆρε πρὸς αὐτόν, αἰσχύνῃ μᾶλλον ὡς ἰκέτην ἢ δι' εὐνοίαν ὑποδεξάμενος διὰ χειρὸς εἶχε, φανερώς μὲν ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ παραιτούμενος Μάριον καὶ γράφων ὡς οὐκ ἂν ἐκδώῃ καὶ παρρησιαζόμενος, κρύφα δὲ βου-λεύων προδοσίαν ἐπ' αὐτῷ, καὶ μεταπεμπόμενος Λεύκιον Σύλλαν, ταμίαν μὲν ὄντα Μαρῖου, χρή-4 ὡς δὲ πιστεύσας ἀνέβη πρὸς αὐτόν ὁ Σύλλας,

CAIUS MARIUS

men of high repute if he wished to please the multitude.

X. When he had crossed to Africa, Metellus, now become a victim of jealousy, and vexed because, after he had brought the war to an end and had nothing further to do except to seize the person of Jugurtha, Marius was coming to enjoy the crown and the triumph,—a man whose ingratitude towards his benefactor had raised him to power,—would not consent to meet him, but privately left the country while Rutilius, who had become his legate, handed over the army to Marius. And in the end a retribution fell upon Marius; for Sulla robbed him of the glory of his success, as Marius had robbed Metellus. How this came to pass, I will narrate briefly, since the details are given more at length in my Life of Sulla.¹

Bocchus, the king of the Barbarians in the interior, was a son-in-law of Jugurtha, and apparently gave him little or no assistance in his war, alleging his faithlessness as an excuse, and fearing the growth of his power. But when Jugurtha in his flight and wandering felt compelled to make him his last hope and sought haven with him, Bocchus received him, more out of regard for his position as a suppliant than from goodwill, and kept him in his hands. So far as his open acts were concerned, Bocchus entreated Marius in behalf of his father-in-law, writing that he would not give him up and assuming a bold tone; but secretly he planned to betray him, and sent for Lucius Sulla, who was quaestor for Marius and had been of some service to Bocchus during the campaign. But when Sulla had come to him in all confidence,

¹ Chapter iii.

ἔσχε μὲν τις τροπὴ γνώμης καὶ μετάνοια τὸν βάρβαρον, ἡμέρας τε συχνὰς διηνέχθη τῷ λογισμῷ, βουλευόμενος ἢ παραδοῦναι τὸν Ἰουγούρθαν ἢ μηδὲ τὸν Σύλλα ἀφεῖναι· τέλος δὲ τὴν προτέραν κυρώσας προδοσίαν, ἐνεχείρισε τῷ Σύλλα ζῶντα τὸν Ἰουγούρθαν.

- 5 Καὶ τοῦτο πρῶτον ὑπῆρξεν αὐτοῖς σπέρμα τῆς ἀνηκέστου καὶ χαλεπῆς ἐκείνης στάσεως, ἣ μικρὸν ἐδέησεν ἀνατρέφαι τὴν Ῥώμην. πολλοὶ γὰρ ἐβούλοντο τοῦ Σύλλα τὸ ἔργον εἶναι τῷ Μαρίῳ φθονοῦντες, αὐτὸς τε Σύλλας σφραγίδα ποιησάμενος ἐφόρει γλυφὴν ἔχουσαν ἐγχειριζόμενον ὑπὸ 411
6 τοῦ Βόκχου τὸν Ἰουγούρθαν ἑαυτῷ. καὶ ταύτη χρώμενος αἰεὶ διετελεῖ φιλότιμον ἄνδρα καὶ πρὸς κοινωνίαν δόξης ἀγνώμονα καὶ δύσεριν ἐρεθίζων τὸν Μάριον, ἐναγόντων μάλιστα τῶν ἐχθρῶν τῶν ἐκείνου, καὶ τὰ μὲν πρῶτα τοῦ πολέμου καὶ μέγιστα τῷ Μετέλλῳ, τὰ δ' ἔσχατα καὶ τὸ πέρασ αὐτοῦ Σύλλα προστιθέντων, ὡς παύσαιτο θαυμάζων καὶ προσέχων ἐκείνῳ μάλιστα πάντων ὁ δῆμος.

- XI. Ταχὺ μέντοι τὸν φθόνον τοῦτον καὶ τὰ μίση καὶ τὰς διαβολὰς ἀπεσκέδασε τοῦ Μαρίου καὶ μετέστησεν ὁ κατασχὼν τὴν Ἰταλίαν ἀπὸ τῆς ἐσπέρας κίνδυνος, ἅμα τῷ πρῶτον ἐν χρεία μεγάλου στρατηγοῦ γενέσθαι καὶ περισκέψασθαι τὴν πόλιν ὧ χρωμένη κυβερνήτῃ διαφευξέται κλύδωνα πολέμου τοσοῦτον, οὐδενὸς ἀνασχόμενου τῶν ἀπὸ γένους μεγάλων ἢ πλουσίων οἰκῶν ἐπὶ τὰς ὑπατικὰς κατιόντων ἀρχαιρεσίας, ἀλλ' ἀπόντα τὸν 2 Μάριον ἀναγορευσάντων. ἄρτι γὰρ ἀπηγγελμένης αὐτοῖς τῆς Ἰουγούρθα συλλήψεως αἱ περὶ Τευ-

CAIUS MARIUS

the Barbarian experienced a change of heart and felt repentant, and for many days wavered in his plans, deliberating whether to surrender Jugurtha or to hold Sulla also a prisoner. Finally however, he decided upon his first plan of treachery, and put Jugurtha alive into the hands of Sulla.

This was the first seed of that bitter and incurable hatred between Marius and Sulla, which nearly brought Rome to ruin. For many wished Sulla to have the glory of the affair because they hated Marius, and Sulla himself had a seal-ring made, which he used to wear, on which was engraved the surrender of Jugurtha to him by Bocchus. By constantly using this ring Sulla provoked Marius, who was an ambitious man, loath to share his glory with another, and quarrelsome. And the enemies of Marius gave Sulla most encouragement, by attributing the first and greatest successes of the war to Metellus, but the last, and the termination of it, to Sulla, that so the people might cease admiring Marius and giving him their chief allegiance.

XI. Soon, however, all this envy and hatred and slander of Marius was removed and dissipated by the peril which threatened Italy from the west, as soon as the state felt the need of a great general and looked about for a helmsman whom she might employ to save her from so great a deluge of war. Then the people would have nothing to do with anyone of high birth or of a wealthy house who offered himself at the consular elections, but proclaimed Marius consul¹ in spite of his absence from the city. For no sooner had word been brought to the people of the capture of Jugurtha than the

¹ For the year 104 B.C.

- τόνων καὶ Κίμβρων φῆμαι προσέπιπτον, ἀπιστίαν μὲν ἐν ἀρχῇ παρασχοῦσαι πλήθους τε καὶ ῥώμης τῶν ἐπερχομένων στρατῶν, ὕστερον δὲ τῆς ἀληθείας ὑποδεέστεραι φανείσαι. μυριάδες μὲν γὰρ αἱ μάχιμοι τριάκοντα σὺν ὄπλοις ἐχώρουν, ὄχλοι δὲ παίδων καὶ γυναικῶν ἐλέγοντο πολλῶ πλείους συμπεριάγεσθαι, γῆς χρῆζοντες ἢ θρέψει τοσοῦτον πλήθος, καὶ πόλεων ἐν αἷς ἰδρυθέντες βιώσονται, καθάπερ πρὸ αὐτῶν ἐπυυθάνοντο Κελτοὺς τῆς Ἰταλίας τὴν ἀρίστην κατασχεῖν Τυρρηνῶν
- 3 ἀφελομένους. αὐτοὶ μὲν γὰρ ἀμιξία τῇ πρὸς ἑτέρους, μήκει τε χώρας ἢν ἐπῆλθον, ἡγνοοῦντο, τίνες ὄντες ἀνθρώπων ἢ πόθεν ὀρμηθέντες ὥσπερ νέφος ἐμπέσοιεν Γαλατία καὶ Ἰταλία. καὶ μάλιστα μὲν εἰκάζοντο Γερμανικὰ γένη τῶν καθηκόντων ἐπὶ τὸν βόρειον ὠκεανὸν εἶναι τοῖς μεγέθεσι τῶν σωματῶν καὶ τῇ χαροπότητι τῶν ὀμμάτων, καὶ ὅτι Κίμβρους ἐπονομάζουσι Γερμανοὶ τοὺς ληστὰς.
- 4 Εἰσὶ δὲ οἱ τὴν Κελτικὴν διὰ βάθος χώρας καὶ μέγεθος ἀπὸ τῆς ἕξω θαλάσσης καὶ τῶν ὑπαρκτίων κλιμάτων πρὸς ἥλιον ἀνίσχοντα κατὰ τὴν Μαιῶτιν ἐπιστρέφουσαν ἄπτεσθαι τῆς Ποντικῆς Σκυθίας λέγουσι, κῦκείθεν τὰ γένη μεμίχθαι. τούτους ἐξαναστάντας οὐκ ἐκ μιᾶς ὀρμῆς οὐδὲ συνεχῶς, ἀλλὰ ἔτους ὥρα καθ' ἕκαστον ἐνιαυτὸν εἰς τοῦμπροσθεν αἰὲ χωροῦντας πολέμῳ χρόνοις
- 5 πολλοῖς ἐπελθεῖν τὴν ἡπειρον. διὸ καὶ πολλὰς κατὰ μέρος ἐπικλήσεις ἐχόντων κοινῇ Κελτοσκύθας τὸν στρατὸν ὠνόμαζον.

CAIUS MARIUS

reports about the Teutones and Cimbri fell upon their ears. What these reports said about the numbers and strength of the invading hosts was disbelieved at first, but afterwards it was found to be short of the truth. For three hundred thousand armed fighting men were advancing, and much larger hordes of women and children were said to accompany them, in quest of land to support so vast a multitude, and of cities in which to settle and live, just as the Gauls before them, as they learned, had wrested the best part of Italy from the Tyrrhenians and now occupied it. They themselves, indeed, had not had intercourse with other peoples, and had traversed a great stretch of country, so that it could not be ascertained what people it was nor whence they had set out, thus to descend upon Gaul and Italy like a cloud. The most prevalent conjecture was that they were some of the German peoples which extended as far as the northern ocean, a conjecture based on their great stature, their light-blue eyes, and the fact that the Germans call robbers Cimbri.

But there are some who say that Gaul was wide and large enough to reach from the outer sea and the subarctic regions to the Maeotic Lake on the east, where it bordered on Pontic Scythia, and that from that point on Gauls and Scythians were mingled. These mixed Gauls and Scythians had left their homes and moved westward, not in a single march, nor even continuously, but with each recurring spring they had gone forward, fighting their way, and in the course of time had crossed the continent. Therefore, while they had many names for different detachments, they called their whole army by the general name of Galloscythians.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- Ἄλλοι δέ φασι Κιμμερίων τὸ μὲν πρῶτον ὑφ' Ἑλλήνων τῶν πάλαι γνωσθὲν οὐ μέγα γενέσθαι τοῦ παντὸς μόριον, ἀλλὰ φυγὴν ἢ στάσιν τινα βιασθεῖσαν ὑπὸ Σκυθῶν εἰς Ἀσίαν ἀπὸ τῆς Μαιώτιδος διαπερᾶσαι. Λυγδάμιος ἡγουμένου, τὸ δὲ πλεῖστον αὐτῶν καὶ μαχιμώτατον ἐπ' ἐσχάτοις οἰκοῦν· παρὰ τὴν ἕξω θάλασσαν γῆν μὲν νέμεσθαι σύσκιον καὶ ὑλώδη καὶ δυσήλιον πάντη διὰ βάθος
- 6 καὶ πυκνότητα δρυμῶν, οὓς μέχρι τῶν Ἑρκυνίων εἴσω διήκειν, οὐρανοῦ δὲ εἰληχένοι καθ' ὃ δοκεῖ μέγα λαμβάνων ὁ πόλος ἕξαρμα διὰ τὴν ἔγκλισιν τῶν παραλλήλων ὀλίγον ἀπολείπειν τοῦ κατὰ κορυφὴν ἰσταμένου σημείου πρὸς τὴν οἴκησιν, αἶτε ἡμέραι βραχύτητι καὶ μήκει πρὸς τὰς νύκτας ἴσαι κατανέμεσθαι τὸν χρόνον· διὸ καὶ τὴν εὐπορίαν τοῦ μυθεύματος Ὀμήρῳ γενέσθαι πρὸς
- 7 τὴν νεκυίαν. ἔνθεν οὖν τὴν ἔφοδον εἶναι τῶν βαρβάρων τούτων ἐπὶ τὴν Ἰταλίαν, Κιμμερίων μὲν ἐξ ἀρχῆς, τότε δὲ Κίμβρων οὐκ ἀπὸ τρόπου προσαγορευομένων. ἀλλὰ ταῦτα μὲν εἰκασμῶ μάλλον 412 ἢ κατὰ βέβαιον ἱστορίαν λέγεται.
- 8 Τὸ δὲ πλῆθος οὐκ ἔλαττον, ἀλλὰ πλεόν εἶναι τοῦ λεχθέντος ὑπὸ πολλῶν ἰστόρηται. θυμὸν δὲ καὶ τόλμαν ἀνυπόστατοι καὶ χειρῶν ἔργα παρὰ τὰς μάχας ὀξύτητι καὶ βίᾳ πυρὸς ἐοικότες ἐπήεσαν, οὐδενὸς ἀντέχοντος αὐτῶν πρὸς τὴν ἔφοδον, ἀλλὰ πάντων μὲν, ὅσους ἐπῆλθον, ἐν λόγῳ λείας ἀγομένων καὶ φερομένων, πολλῶν δὲ καὶ μεγάλων Ῥωμαϊκῶν στρατοπέδων καὶ στρατηγῶν, ὅσοι προεκάθηντο τῆς ἐκτὸς Ἀλπεων Γαλατίας, ἀνηρ-
- 9 πασμένων ἀκλεῶς· οἱ καὶ μάλιστα τὴν φορὰν

CAIUS MARIUS

Others, however, say that the Cimmerians who were first known to the ancient Greeks were not a large part of the entire people, but merely a body of exiles or a faction which was driven away by the Scythians and passed from the Maeotic Lake into Asia under the lead of Lygdamis; whereas the largest and most warlike part of the people dwelt at the confines of the earth along the outer sea, occupying a land that is shaded, wooded, and wholly sunless by reason of the height and thickness of the trees, which reach inland as far as the Hercynii; and as regards the heavens, they are under that portion of them where the pole gets a great elevation by reason of the declination of the parallels, and appears to have a position not far removed from the spectator's zenith, and a day and a night divide the year into two equal parts; which was of advantage to Homer in his story of Odysseus consulting the shades of the dead.¹ From these regions, then, these Barbarians sallied forth against Italy, being called at first Cimmerians, and then, not inappropriately, Cimbri. But all this is based on conjecture rather than on sure historical evidence.

Their numbers, however, are given by many writers as not less, but more, than the figure mentioned above. Moreover, their courage and daring made them irresistible, and when they engaged in battle they came on with the swiftness and force of fire, so that no one could withstand their onset, but all who came in their way became their prey and booty, and even many large Roman armies, with their commanders, who had been stationed to protect Transalpine Gaul, were destroyed ingloriously; indeed, αὐτῶν κακῶς ἀγωνισάμενοι κατὰ τῆς Ῥώμης ἐπεσπάσαντο. νικήσαντες γὰρ οἷς ἐνέτυχον, καὶ χρημάτων πολλῶν κρατήσαντες, ἔγνωσαν μηδαμοῦ γῆς ἑαυτοὺς ἰδρύνειν, πρὶν ἀνατρέψωσι τὴν Ῥώμην καὶ διαπορθήσωσι τὴν Ἰταλίαν.

¹ Odyssey, Book XI. See vv. 14 ff., describing the Cimmerians.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

XII. Ταῦτα Ῥωμαῖοι πυνθανόμενοι πολλαχόθεν, ἐκάλουν Μάριον ἐπὶ τὴν στρατηγίαν. καὶ τὸ δεύτερον ὑπάτος ἀπεδείχθη, τοῦ μὲν νόμου κωλύοντος ἀπόντα καὶ μὴ διαλιπόντα χρόνον ὠρισμένον αὐθις αἰρεῖσθαι, τοῦ δὲ δήμου τοὺς ἀντιλέγοντας ἐκβαλόντος. ἡγούντο γὰρ οὔτε νῦν πρῶτον εἶξιν τῷ συμφέροντι τὸν νόμον, οὔτε ἀλογώτεραν εἶναι τὴν παρούσαν αἰτίαν ἐκείνης δι' ἣν τὸν Σκηπίωνα παρὰ τοὺς νόμους ὑπάτου ἀπέδειξαν, οὐ φοβούμενοι τὴν ἑαυτῶν ἀποβαλεῖν, ἀλλὰ τὴν Καρχηδονίων ἐπιθυμοῦντες ἀνελεῖν.

2 ταῦτα ἔδοξε· καὶ Μάριος ἐκ Λιβύης μετὰ τοῦ στρατεύματος διακομισθεὶς αὐταῖς Καλάνδαις Ἰανουαρίαις, ἣν ἔτους ἀρχὴν ἄγουσι Ῥωμαῖοι, τὴν τε ὑπατείαν ἀνέλαβε καὶ τὸν θρίαμβον εἰσήλασεν, ἄπιστον ἐπιδειξάμενος θέαμα Ῥωμαίοις Ἰουγούρθαν αἰχμάλωτον, οὐ ζώντος οὐδ' ἂν εἰς ἥλπισε πολεμίων κρατῆσαι· οὕτω τις ἦν ποικίλος ἀνὴρ τύχαις ὀμιλῆσαι καὶ πανουργία πολλῇ

3 μεμιγμένον ἔχων τὸ θυμοειδές. ἀλλ' ἐξέστη γε

¹ See chapter xi. 1. Marius was still in Africa.

CAIUS MARIUS

by their feeble resistance they were mainly instrumental in drawing the on-rushing Barbarians down upon Rome. For when the invaders had conquered those who opposed them, and had got abundance of booty, they determined not to settle themselves anywhere until they had destroyed Rome and ravaged Italy.

XII. Learning of these things from many quarters, the Romans summoned Marius to the command. And he was appointed consul for the second time,¹ although the law forbade that a man in his absence and before the lapse of a specified time should be elected again; still, the people would not listen to those who opposed the election. For they considered that this would not be the first time that the law had given way before the demands of the general good, and that the present occasion demanded it no less imperatively than when they had made Scipio consul contrary to the laws,² although at that time they were not fearful of losing their own city, but desirous of destroying that of the Carthaginians. This course was adopted, Marius came across the sea from Africa with his army, and on the very Calends of January, which with the Romans is the first day of the year, assumed the consulship and celebrated his triumph, exhibiting to the Romans Jugurtha in chains. This was a sight which they had despaired of beholding, nor could any one have expected, while Jugurtha was alive, to conquer the enemy; so versatile was he in adapting himself to the turns of fortune, and so great craft did he combine with his courage. But we are told that when he had πομπευθείς, ὡς λέγουσι, τότε τοῦ φρονεῖν· καὶ μετὰ τὸν θριάμβον εἰς τὸ δεσμοτήριον ἐμπεισῶν, ὡς οἱ μὲν αὐτοῦ βία περιέρρηξαν τὸν χιτωνίσκον, οἱ δὲ σπεύδοντες ἀφελέσθαι βία τὸ χρυσοῦν ἐλλόβιον ἅμα τὸν λοβὸν συναπέρρηξαν, ὡσθεις δὲ γυμνὸς εἰς τὸ βάραθρον κατεβλήθη, μεστὸς ὢν ταραχῆς καὶ διασεσηρῶς, “Ἡράκλεις,” εἶπεν, 4 “ὡς ψυχρὸν ὑμῶν τὸ βαλανεῖον.” ἀλλὰ τοῦτον μὲν ἐξ ἡμέραις ζυγομαχήσαντα τῷ λιμῷ καὶ μέχρι τῆς ἐσχάτης ὥρας ἐκκρεμασθέντα τῆς τοῦ ζῆν ἐπιθυμίας εἶχεν ἀξία δίκη τῶν ἀσεβημάτων.

² In 147 B.C., when Scipio had not reached the age required by law.

Ἐν δὲ τῷ θριάμβῳ κομισθῆναι λέγουσι χρυσοῦ μὲν ἑπτὰ καὶ τρισχιλίας λίτρας, ἀργύρου δὲ ἀσήμου πεντακισχιλίας ἑπτακοσίας ἐβδομήκοντα πέντε, νομίσματος δὲ δραχμὰς ἑπτακισχιλίας ἐπὶ μυριάσιν ὀκτῶ καὶ εἴκοσι.

5 Μετὰ δὲ τὴν πομπὴν ὁ Μάριος σύγκλητον ἤθροισεν ἐν Καπετωλίῳ· καὶ παρήλθε μὲν εἶτε λαθὼν αὐτὸν εἶτε τῇ τύχῃ χρώμενος ἀγροικότερον ἐν τῇ θριαμβικῇ κατασκευῇ, ταχὺ δὲ τὴν βουλήν ἀχθεσθεῖσαν αἰσθόμενος ἐξανέστη καὶ μεταλαβὼν τὴν περιπόρφυρον αὐθις ἦλθεν.

XIII. Ἐν δὲ τῇ στρατείᾳ τὴν δύναμιν διεπόνει καθ’ ὁδὸν ἐξασκῶν δρόμοις τε παντοδαποῖς καὶ μακραῖς ὁδοιπορίαις, ἑαυτῷ δὲ ἀχθοφορεῖν ἀναγκάζων καὶ αὐτουργεῖν τὰ πρὸς τὴν δίαιταν, ὥστε καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα τοὺς φιλοπόνους καὶ σιωπῇ μετ’ εὐκολίας τὰ προστασσόμενα ποιούντας ἡμίονους Μαρριανοὺς καλεῖσθαι. καίτοι τινὲς αἰτίαν ἑτέραν
 2 τοῦ λόγου τούτου νομίζουσι. Σκηπίωνος γάρ, ὅτε Νομαντίαν ἐπολιόρκει, βουλευθέντος ἐπιδεῖν μὴ

CAIUS MARIUS

been led in triumph he lost his reason; and that when, after the triumph, he was cast into prison, where some tore his tunic from his body, and others were so eager to snatch away his golden ear-ring that they tore off with it the lobe of his ear, and when he had been thrust down naked into the dungeon pit, in utter bewilderment and with a grin on his lips he said: "Hercules! How cold this Roman bath is!" But the wretch, after struggling with hunger for six days and up to the last moment clinging to the desire of life, paid the penalty which his crimes deserved.

In the triumphal procession there were carried, we are told, three thousand and seven pounds of gold, of uncoined silver five thousand seven hundred and seventy-five, and in coined money two hundred and eighty-seven thousand drachmas.

After the procession was over, Marius called the senate into session on the Capitol, and made his entry, either through inadvertence or with a vulgar display of his good fortune, in his triumphal robes; but perceiving quickly that the senators were offended at this, he rose and went out, changed to the usual robe with purple border, and then came back.

XIII. Setting out on the expedition, he laboured to perfect his army as it went along, practising the men in all kinds of running and in long marches, and compelling them to carry their own baggage and to prepare their own food. Hence, in after times, men who were fond of toil and did whatever was enjoined upon them contentedly and without a murmur, were called Marian mules. Some, however, think that this name had a different origin. Namely, when Scipio was besieging Numantia,¹ he wished to inspect

¹ Cf. chapter iii. 2.

μόνον τὰ ὄπλα μηδὲ τοὺς ἵππους, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοὺς ὄρεις καὶ τὰς ἀμάξας, ὅπως ἐκάστοις ἐξησκήμενα καὶ παρεσκευασμένα τυγχάνοι, προαγαγεῖν τὸν Μάριον ἵππον τε κάλλιστα τεθραμμένον ὑπ' αὐτοῦ καὶ ἡμίονον εὐεξία καὶ πραότητα καὶ ῥώμῃ διαφέροντα πολὺ τῶν ἄλλων· ἡσθέντος οὖν τοῦ στρατηγοῦ τοῖς τοῦ Μαρίου θρέμμασι 413 καὶ πολλὰκις αὐτῶν μνησθέντος, οὕτως ἄρα τοὺς σκώπτουτας ἐν ἐπαίνῳ τὸν ἐνδελεχῆ καὶ τλήμονα καὶ φιλόπονον Μαρριανὸν ἡμίονον προσαγορεύειν.

XIV. Εὐτύχημα δὲ δοκεῖ τῷ Μαρίῳ μέγα γενέσθαι. τῶν γὰρ βαρβάρων ὡσπερ τινὰ παλίρροιαν τῆς ὀρμῆς λαβόντων καὶ ῥύνετων πρότερον ἐπὶ τὴν Ἰβηρίαν, χρόνον ἔσχε καὶ τὰ σώματα γυμνάσαι τῶν ἀνδρῶν καὶ τὰ φρονήματα πρὸς τὸ θαρρεῖν ἀναρρῶσαι, τὸ δὲ μέγιστον, αὐτὸς οἶος ἦν 2 κατανοηθῆναι. τὸ γὰρ ἐν ἀρχῇ σκυθρωπὸν αὐτοῦ καὶ περὶ τὰς τιμωρίας δυσμεῖλικτον ἐθισθεῖσι μηδὲν ἀμαρτάνειν μηδὲ ἀπειθεῖν ἅμα τῷ δικαίῳ σωτήριον ἐφαίνετο, τὴν τε τοῦ θυμοῦ σφοδρότητα καὶ τὸ τραχὺ τῆς φωνῆς καὶ ἀγριωπὸν τοῦ προσώπου συντρεφόμενον κατὰ μικρὸν οὐχ αὐτοῖς ἐνόμιζον εἶναι φοβερόν, ἀλλὰ τοῖς πολεμίοις. 3 μάλιστα δὲ ἢ περὶ τὰς κρίσεις ὀρθότης αὐτοῦ τοῖς στρατιώταις ἤρεσκεν· ἧς καὶ τοιούδε τι δεῦγμα λέγεται.

Γάιος Λούσιος ἀδελφιδοῦς αὐτοῦ τεταγμένος ἐφ' ἡγεμονίας ἐστρατεύετο, τὰλλα μὲν ἀνὴρ οὐ δοκῶν εἶναι πονηρός, ἦγτων δὲ μεираκίων καλῶν. οὗτος ἦρα νεανίσκου τῶν ὑφ' αὐτῷ στρατευομένων, not only the arms and the horses, but also the mules and the waggons, that every man might have them in readiness and good order. Marius, accordingly, brought out for inspection both a horse that had been most excellently taken care of by him, and a mule that for health, docility, and strength far surpassed all the rest. The commanding officer was naturally well pleased with the beasts of Marius and often spoke about them, so that in time those who wanted to bestow facetious praise on a persevering, patient, laborious man would call him a Marian mule.

CAIUS MARIUS

XIV. And now, as it would seem, a great piece of good fortune befell Marius. For the Barbarians had a reflux, as it were, in their course, and streamed first into Spain. This gave Marius time to exercise the bodies of his men, to raise their spirits to a sturdier courage, and, what was most important of all, to let them find out what sort of a man he was. For his sternness in the exercise of authority and his inflexibility in the infliction of punishment appeared to them, when they became accustomed to obedience and good behaviour, salutary as well as just, and they regarded the fierceness of his temper, the harshness of his voice, and that ferocity of his countenance which gradually became familiar, as fearful to their enemies rather than to themselves. But it was above all things the uprightness of his judicial decisions that pleased the soldiers; and of this the following illustration is given.

Caius Lusius, a nephew of his, had a command under him in the army. In other respects he was a man of good reputation, but he had a weakness for beautiful youths. This officer was enamoured of one of the young men who served under him, by name

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- ὄνομα Τρεβωνίου, καὶ πολλάκις πειρῶν οὐκ 4 ἐτύγγανε· τέλος δὲ νύκτωρ ὑπηρέτην ἀποστείλας μετεπέμπετο τὸν Τρεβώνιον· ὁ δὲ νεανίας ἦκε μὲν, ἀντειπεῖν γὰρ οὐκ ἐξῆν καλούμενον, εἰσαχ-θεῖς δὲ ὑπὸ τὴν σκηνὴν πρὸς αὐτὸν ἐπιχειροῦντα βιάζεσθαι σπασάμενος τὸ ξίφος ἀπέκτεινε. ταῦτα ἐπράχθη τοῦ Μαρίου μὴ παρόντος· ἐπανελθὼν 5 δὲ προῦθθηκε τῷ Τρεβωνίῳ κρίσιν. ἐπεὶ δὲ πολλῶν κατηγορούντων, οὐδενὸς δὲ συνηγορούντος, αὐτὸς εὐθαρσῶς καταστάς διηγήσατο τὸ πρᾶγμα καὶ μάρτυρας ἔσχεν ὅτι πειρῶντι πολλάκις ἀντεῖπε τῷ Λουσίῳ καὶ μεγάλων διδομένων ἐπ' οὐδενὶ προήκατο τὸ σῶμα, θαυμάσας ὁ Μάριος καὶ ἤσθεις ἐκέλευσε τὸν πατριὸν ἐπὶ ταῖς ἀριστεταῖς στέφανον κομισθῆναι, καὶ λαβὼν αὐτὸς ἐστεφάνωσε τὸν Τρεβώνιον ὡς κάλλιστον ἔργον ἐν καιρῷ παραδειγμάτων δεομένῳ καλῶν ὑποδεδειγμένον.
- 6 Τοῦτο εἰς τὴν Ῥώμην ἀπαγγελθὲν οὐχ ἦκιστα
 τῷ Μαρίῳ συνέπραξε τὴν τρίτην ὑπατείαν· ἅμα δὲ καὶ τῶν βαρβάρων ἔτους ὥρα προσδοκίμων ὄντων ἐβούλοντο μετὰ μηδενὸς ἄλλου στρατηγοῦ κινδυνεύσαι πρὸς αὐτούς. οὐ μὴν ἦκον ὡς προσ-εδοκῶντο ταχέως, ἀλλὰ πάλιν διῆλθε τῷ Μαρίῳ
- 7 ὁ τῆς ὑπατείας χρόνος. ἐνισταμένων δὲ τῶν ἀρ-χαιρεσιῶν καὶ τοῦ συνάρχοντος αὐτοῦ τελευτή-σαντος, ἀπολιπὼν ἐπὶ τῶν δυνάμεων Μάνιον Ἀκύλλιον αὐτὸς ἦκεν εἰς Ῥώμην. μετιόντων δὲ πολλῶν καὶ ἀγαθῶν τὴν ὑπατείαν, Λούκιος
- 498

CAIUS MARIUS

Trebonius, and had often made unsuccessful attempts to seduce him. But finally, at night, he sent a servant with a summons for Trebonius. The young man came, since he could not refuse to obey a summons, but when he had been introduced into the tent and Caius attempted violence upon him, he drew his sword and slew him. Marius was not with the army when this happened; but on his return he brought Trebonius to trial. Here there were many accusers, but not a single advocate, wherefore Trebonius himself courageously took the stand and told all about the matter, bringing witnesses to show that he had often refused the solicitations of Lusius and that in spite of large offers he had never prostituted himself to anyone. Then Marius, filled with delight and admiration, ordered the customary crown for brave exploits to be brought, and with his own hands placed it on the head of Trebonius, declaring that at a time which called for noble examples he had displayed most noble conduct.

Tidings of this were brought to Rome and helped in no small degree to secure for Marius his third consulship;¹ at the same time, too, the Barbarians were expected in the spring, and the Romans were unwilling to risk battle with them under any other general. However, the Barbarians did not come as soon as they were expected, and once more the period of Marius's consulship expired. As the consular elections were at hand, and as his colleague in the office had died, Marius left Manius Aquillius in charge of the forces and came himself to Rome. Here many men of great merit were candidates for the consulship, but Lucius Saturninus, who had more

¹ For the year 103 B.C.

Σατορνίνος ὁ μάλιστα τῶν δημάρχων ἄγων τὸ πλῆθος, ὑπὸ τοῦ Μαρίου τεθεραπευμένος ἐδημηγόρει, κελεύων ἐκείνον ὑπατον αἰρεῖσθαι. θρυπτομένου δὲ τοῦ Μαρίου καὶ παραιτεῖσθαι τὴν ἀρχὴν φάσκοντος ὡς δὴ μὴ δεομένου, προδύτην αὐτὸν ὁ Σατορνίνος ἀπεκάλει τῆς πατρίδος 8 ἐν κινδύνῳ τοσοῦτῳ φεύγοντα τὸ στρατηγεῖν. καὶ φανερός μὲν ἦν ἀπιθάνως συνυποκρινόμενος τὸ προσποίημα τῷ Μαρίῳ, τὸν δὲ καιρὸν ὀρώντες οἱ πολλοὶ τῆς ἐκείνου δεινότητος ἅμα καὶ τύχης δεόμενοι ἐψηφίσαντο τὴν τετάρτην ὑπατείαν, καὶ συνάρχοντα Κάτλον αὐτῷ Λουτάτιον κατέστησαν, ἄνδρα καὶ τιμώμενον ὑπὸ τῶν ἀρίστων καὶ τοῖς πολλοῖς οὐκ ἐπαχθῆ.

XV. Πυνθανόμενος δὲ τοὺς πολεμίους ὁ Μάριος ἐγγύς εἶναι διὰ ταχέων ὑπερέβαλε τὰς Ἄλπει· καὶ τειχίσας στρατόπεδον παρὰ τῷ Ῥοδανῷ ποταμῷ συνῆγεν εἰς αὐτὸ χορηγίαν ἀφθονόν, ὡς μηδέποτε παρὰ τὸν τοῦ συμφέροντος λογισμόν ἐκβιασθείη δι' ἔνδειαν τῶν ἀναγκαίων εἰς μάχην
 2 καταστήναι. τὴν δὲ κομιδὴν ὧν ἔδει¹ τῷ στρατεύματι μακρὰν καὶ πολυτελῆ πρότερον οὖσαν πρὸς τὴν θάλασσαν, αὐτὸς εἰργάσατο ῥάδιαν καὶ ταχεῖαν. τὰ γὰρ στόματα τοῦ Ῥοδανοῦ, πρὸς τὰς ἀνακοπὰς τῆς θαλάττης, ἰλύν τε πολλὴν λαμβάνοντα καὶ θίνα πηλῷ βαθεῖ συμπεπιλημένην ὑπὸ τοῦ κλύδωνος, χαλεπὸν καὶ ἐπίπονον καὶ βραδύπορον τοῖς σιταγωγοῖς ἐποίει τὸν εἰσπλουν.
 3 ὁ δὲ τρέψας ἐνταῦθα τὸν στρατὸν σχολάζοντα τάφρον μεγάλην ἐνέβαλε, καὶ ταύτη πολὺ μέρος τοῦ ποταμοῦ μεταστήσας περιήγαγεν εἰς ἐπιτή-

¹ ἔδει Coraës, Bekker, and Ziegler, after Reiske; ἔδειτο.

CAIUS MARIUS

influence with the people than any other tribune, was won over by the flattering attentions of Marius, and in his harangues urged the people to elect Marius consul. Marius affected to decline the office and declared that he did not want it, but Saturninus called him a traitor to his country for refusing to command her armies at a time of so great peril. Now, it was clear that Saturninus was playing his part at the instigation of Marius, and playing it badly, too, but the multitude, seeing that the occasion required the ability as well as the good fortune of Marius, voted for his fourth consulship,¹ and made Catulus Lutatius his colleague, a man who was esteemed by the nobility and not disliked by the common people.

XV. Learning that the enemy were near, Marius rapidly crossed the Alps, and built a fortified camp along the river Rhone. Into this he brought together an abundance of stores, that he might never be forced by lack of provisions to give battle contrary to his better judgment. The conveyance of what was needful for his army, which had previously been a long and costly process where it was by sea, he rendered easy and speedy. That is, the mouths of the Rhone, encountering the sea, took up great quantities of mud and sand packed close with clay by the action of the billows, and made the entrance of the river difficult, laborious, and slow for vessels carrying supplies. So Marius brought his army to the place, since the men had nothing else to do, and ran a great canal. Into this he diverted a great part of the river and brought it round to a suitable place

¹ 102 B.C.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

δειον αἰγιαλόν, βαθὺ μὲν καὶ ναυσὶ μεγάλαις ἔποχον, λείον δὲ καὶ ἄκλυστον στόμα λαβοῦσαν πρὸς τὴν θάλασσαν. αὕτη μὲν οὖν ἔτι ἀπ' ἐκείνου τὴν ἐπωνυμίαν φυλάττει.

- 4 Τῶν δὲ βαρβάρων διελόντων σφᾶς αὐτοὺς δίχα Κίμβροι μὲν ἔλαχον διὰ Νωρικῶν ἄνωθεν ἐπὶ Κάτλον χωρεῖν καὶ τὴν πάροδον ἐκείνην βιάζεσθαι, Τεύτονες δὲ καὶ Ἄμβρωνες διὰ Λιγύων ἐπὶ
- 5 Μάριον παρὰ θάλατταν. καὶ Κίμβροις μὲν ἐγένετο πλείων ἢ διατριβὴ καὶ μέλλησις, Τεύτονες δὲ καὶ Ἄμβρωνες ἄραυτες εὐθύς καὶ διελθόντες τὴν ἐν μέσῳ χώραν ἐφαίνοντο πλήθει τε ἄπειροι καὶ δυσπρόσοπτοι τὰ εἶδη, φθόγγον τε καὶ θόρυβον οὐχ ἑτέροις ὅμοιοι. περιβαλόμενοι δὲ τοῦ πεδίου μέγα μέρος¹ καὶ στρατοπεδεύσαντες προὔκαλουντο τὸν Μάριον εἰς μάχην.

XVI. Ὁ δὲ τούτων μὲν οὐκ ἐφρόντιζεν, ἐν δὲ τῷ χάρακι τοὺς στρατιώτας συνεῖχε, καὶ καθήπτετο πικρῶς τῶν θρασυνομένων, καὶ τοὺς προπίπτοντας ὑπὸ θυμοῦ καὶ μάχεσθαι βουλομένους προδότας ἀπεκάλει τῆς πατρίδος. οὐ γὰρ ὑπὲρ θριάμβων τὴν φιλοτιμίαν εἶναι καὶ τροπαίων, ἀλλ' ὅπως νέφος τοσοῦτον πολέμου καὶ σκηπτὸν

2 ὡσάμενοι διασώσουσι τὴν Ἰταλίαν. ταῦτα μὲν ἰδίᾳ πρὸς τοὺς ἡγεμόνας καὶ τοὺς ὁμοτίμους ἔλεγε, τοὺς δὲ στρατιώτας ὑπὲρ τοῦ χάρακος ἰστάς ἀνὰ μέρος καὶ θεᾶσθαι κελεύων εἴθιζε τὴν μορφήν ἀνέχεσθαι τῶν πολεμίων καὶ τὴν φωνὴν ὑπομένειν

¹ μέγα μέρος Coraës and Bekker, after Reiske: μέγα.

CAIUS MARIUS

on the coast, a deep bay where large ships could float, and where the water could flow out smoothly and without waves to the sea. This canal, indeed, still bears the name of Marius.¹

The Barbarians divided themselves into two bands, and it fell to the lot of the Cimbri to proceed through Noricum in the interior of the country against Catulus, and force a passage there, while the Teutones and Ambrones were to march through Liguria along the sea-coast against Marius. On the part of the Cimbri there was considerable delay and loss of time, but the Teutones and Ambrones set out at once, passed through the intervening country, and made their appearance before Marius. Their numbers were limitless, they were hideous in their aspect, and their speech and cries were unlike those of other peoples. They covered a large part of the plain, and after pitching their camp challenged Marius to battle.

XVI. Marius, however, paid no heed to them, but kept his soldiers inside their fortifications, bitterly rebuking those who would have made a display of their courage, and calling those whose high spirit made them wish to rush forth and give battle traitors to their country. For it was not, he said, triumphs or trophies that should now be the object of their ambition, but how they might ward off so great a cloud and thunder-bolt of war and secure the safety of Italy. This was his language in private to his officers and equals; but he would station his soldiers on the fortifications by detachments, bidding them to observe the enemy, and in this way accustomed them not to fear their shape or dread their cries,

¹ Cf. Strabo, iv. 8 (p. 183).

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ὅλως οὐσαν ἀλλόκοτον καὶ θηριώδη, σκευήν τε καὶ κίνησιν αὐτῶν καταμανθάνειν, ἅμα τῷ χρόνῳ τὰ φαινόμενα δεινὰ ποιουμένους τῇ διανοίᾳ χειροήθη διὰ τῆς ὄψεως· ἠγείτο γὰρ πολλὰ μὲν ἐπιψεύδεσθαι τῶν οὐ προσόντων τὴν καινότητα τοῖς φοβεροῖς, ἐν δὲ τῇ συνηθείᾳ καὶ τὰ τῇ φύσει δεινὰ

3 τὴν ἔκπληξιν ἀποβάλλειν. τῶν δὲ οὐ μόνον ἡ καθ' ἡμέραν ὄψις ἀφήρει τι τοῦ θάμβους, ἀλλὰ καὶ πρὸς τὰς ἀπειλὰς τῶν βαρβάρων καὶ τὸν κόμπου οὐκ ἀνεκτὸν ὄντα θυμὸς αὐτοῖς παριστάμενος ἐξεθέρμαινε καὶ διέφλεγε τὰς ψυχὰς, οὐ μόνον ἀγόντων καὶ φερόντων τὰ πέριξ ἅπαντα τῶν πολεμίων, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῷ χάρακι ποιουμένων προσβολὰς μετὰ πολλῆς ἀσελγείας καὶ θρασύτητος, ὥστε φωνὰς καὶ διαγανακτήσεις τῶν

4 στρατιωτῶν πρὸς τὸν Μάριον ἐκφέρεσθαι. “Τίνα δὴ καταγνοὺς ἀνανδρίαν ἡμῶν Μάριος εἶργει μάχης ὥσπερ γυναικας ὑπὸ κλεισὶ καὶ θυρωροῖς; φέρε, παθόντες ἀνδρῶν πάθος ἐλευθέρων ἐρώμεθα πότερον ἄλλους ἀναμένει μαχουμένους ὑπὲρ τῆς Ἰταλίας, ἡμῖν δὲ λειτουργοῖς χρήσεται διὰ παντός, ὅταν δέηται τάφρους ὀρύσσειν καὶ πηλὸν

5 ἐκκαθαίρειν καὶ ποταμούς τινας παρατρέπειν; ἐπὶ ταῦτα γάρ, ὡς ἔοικεν, ἦσκει τοῖς πολλοῖς πόνοις ἡμᾶς, καὶ ταῦτα τῶν ὑπατειῶν ἀποδειξάμενος ἔργα τοῖς πολίταις ἐπάνεισιν. ἢ τὰ Κάρβωνος αὐτὸν φοβεῖ καὶ Καιπίωνος, οὓς ἐνίκησαν οἱ πολέμιοι, πολὺ μὲν αὐτοὺς τῆς Μαρίου δόξης καὶ

CAIUS MARIUS

which were altogether strange and ferocious; and to make themselves acquainted with their equipment and movements, thus in course of time rendering what was only apparently formidable familiar to their minds from observation. For he considered that their novelty falsely imparts to terrifying objects many qualities which they do not possess, but that with familiarity even those things which are really dreadful lose their power to affright. And so in the case of his soldiers, not only did the daily sight of the enemy lessen somewhat their amazement at them, but also, when they heard the threats and the intolerable boasting of the Barbarians, their anger rose and warmed and set on fire their spirits; for the enemy were ravaging and plundering all the country round, and besides, often attacked the Roman fortifications with great temerity and shamelessness, so that indignant speeches of his soldiers reached the ears of Marius. "What cowardice, pray, has Marius discovered in us that he keeps us out of battle like women under lock and key? Come, let us act like freemen and ask him if he is waiting for other soldiers to fight in defence of Italy, and will use us as workmen all the time, whenever there is need of digging ditches and clearing out mud and diverting a river or two. For it was to this end, as it would seem, that he exercised us in those many toils,¹ and these are the achievements of his consulships which he will exhibit to his fellow-citizens on his return to Rome. Or does he fear the fate of Carbo and Caepio, whom the enemy defeated?² But they were far behind Marius in reputation and excellence, and ἀρετῆς ἀποδέοντας, πολὺ δὲ χεῖρονα στρατὸν ἄγοντας; ἀλλὰ καὶ παθεῖν τι δρῶντας, ὡς ἐκεῖνοι, κάλλιον ἢ καθῆσθαι πορθουμένων τῶν συμμάχων θεατάς.”

¹ Cf. chapter xiii. 1.

² Carbo in 113 B.C., Caepio in 105 B.C. See the Dictionary of Proper Names.

XVII. Ταῦτ' ἀκούων ὁ Μάριος ἤδeto, καὶ κατεπράϋνευ αὐτοὺς ὡς οὐκ ἐκείνοις ἀπιστῶν, ἀλλ' ἔκτινων λογίων τὸν τῆς νίκης ἅμα καιρὸν καὶ τόπον ἐκδεχόμενος. καὶ γὰρ τινα Σύραν γυναῖκα, Μάρθαν ὄνομα, μαντεύεσθαι λεγομένην ἐν φορείῳ κατακειμένην σεμνῶς περιήγετο, καὶ θυσίας ἔθυεν ἐκείνης κελευούσης. ἦν πρότερον μὲν ἀπήλασεν ἢ σύγκλητος ἐντυχεῖν ὑπὲρ τούτων βουλομένη καὶ τὰ μέλλοντα προθεσπίζουσαν, ἐπεὶ δὲ πρὸς τὰς γυναῖκας εἰσιούσα διάπειραν ἐδίδου καὶ μάλιστα τῇ Μαρίου παρακαθίζουσα παρὰ τοὺς πόδας τῶν μονομάχων ἐπιτυχῶς προηγόρευε τὸν μέλλοντα νικᾶν, ἀναπεμφθεῖσα πρὸς Μάριον ὑπ' ἐκείνης ἐθαυμάζετο. καὶ τὰ πολλὰ μὲν ἐν φορείῳ παρεκομίζετο, πρὸς δὲ τὰς θυσίας κατῆι φοινικίδα διπλῆν ἐμπεπορπημένη καὶ λόγχην ἀναδεμένην ταινίαις καὶ στεφανώμασι φέρουσα. τοῦτο μὲν οὖν τὸ δρᾶμα πολλοῖς ἀμφισβήτησιν παρείχεν, εἴτε πεπεισμένος ὡς ἀληθῶς εἴτε πλαττόμενος καὶ συνυποκρινόμενος ἐπιδείκνυται τὴν ἄνθρωπον.

Τὸ δὲ περὶ τοὺς γῦπας θαύματος ἄξιον Ἀλέξανδρος ὁ Μύνδιος ἱστόρηκε. δύο γὰρ ἐφαίνοντο πρὸ τῶν κατορθωμάτων αἰεὶ περὶ τὰς στρατείας led an army that was far inferior to his. Surely it is better to do something, even if we perish as they did, rather than to sit here and enjoy the spectacle of our allies being plundered."

CAIUS MARIUS

XVII. Marius was delighted to hear of such expressions, and tried to calm the soldiers down by telling them that he did not distrust them, but in consequence of certain oracles was awaiting a fit time and place for his victory. And indeed he used to carry about ceremoniously in a litter a certain Syrian woman, named Martha, who was said to have the gift of prophecy, and he would make sacrifices at her bidding. She had previously been rejected by the senate when she wished to appear before them with reference to these matters and predicted future events. Then she got audience of the women and gave them proofs of her skill, and particularly the wife of Marius, at whose feet she sat when some gladiators were fighting and successfully foretold which one was going to be victorious. In consequence of this she was sent to Marius by his wife, and was admired by him. As a general thing she was carried along with the army in a litter, but she attended the sacrifices clothed in a double purple robe that was fastened with a clasp, and carrying a spear that was wreathed with fillets and chaplets. Such a performance as this caused many to doubt whether Marius, in exhibiting the woman, really believed in her, or was pretending to do so and merely acted a part with her.

The affair of the vultures, however, which Alexander of Myndus relates, is certainly wonderful. Two vultures were always seen hovering about the armies of Marius before their victories, and accompanied καὶ παρηκολούθουν γνωριζόμενοι χαλκοῖς περιδεραιοῖς· ταῦτα δὲ οἱ στρατιῶται συλλαβόντες αὐτοὺς περιήψαν, εἶτα ἀφήκαν· ἐκ δὲ τούτου γνωρίζοντες ἠσπάζοντο αὐτοὺς οἱ στρατιῶται¹ καὶ φανέντων ἐπὶ ταῖς ἐξόδοις ἔχαιρον ὡς ἀγαθόν τι πράζοντες.

- 4 Πολλῶν δὲ σημείων προφαινομένων τὰ μὲν ἄλλα χαρακτῆρα κοινὸν εἶχεν, ἐκ δὲ Ἀμερίας καὶ Τουδέρτου, πόλεων Ἰταλικῶν, ἀπηγγέλθη νυκτὸς ὄφθαι κατὰ τὸν οὐρανὸν αἰχμὰς τε φλογοειδεῖς καὶ θυρεοὺς διαφερομένους τὸ πρῶτον, εἶτα συμπίπτοντας. ἀλλήλοισι καὶ σχήματα καὶ κινήματα λαμβάνοντας οἷα γίνεται μαχομένων ἀνδρῶν, τέλος δὲ τῶν μὲν ἐνδιδόντων, τῶν δ' ἐπιφερομένων,
- 5 πάντας ἐπὶ δυσμὰς ῥύηται. περὶ τοῦτον δὲ πῶς τὸν χρόνον ἀφίκετο καὶ Βατάκης ἐκ Πεσσινοῦντος ὁ τῆς μεγάλης μητρὸς ἱερεὺς, ἀπαγγέλλων ὡς ἡ θεὸς ἐκ τῶν ἀνακτόρων ἐφθέγγετο αὐτῷ νίκην καὶ κράτος πολέμου Ῥωμαίοις ὑπάρχειν. τῆς δὲ συγκλήτου προσεμένης καὶ τῇ θεῷ ναδὸν ἐπινίκιον ἰδρύσασθαι ψηφισαμένης, τὸν Βατάκην εἰς τὸν δῆμον προελθόντα καὶ ταῦτα βουλόμενον εἰπεῖν ἐκώλυσε δημαρχῶν Αὐλὸς Πομπηῖος, ἀγύρτην ἀποκαλῶν καὶ πρὸς ὕβριν ἀπελαύνων τοῦ βήματος.
- 6 ὁ δὲ καὶ μάλιστα τῷ λόγῳ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου πίστιν παρέσχεν. οὐ γὰρ ἔφθη τῆς ἐκκλησίας λυθείσης ὁ Αὐλὸς εἰς οἶκον ἐπανελθεῖν, καὶ πυρετὸς ἐξήνθησεν αὐτῷ τοσοῦτος ὥστε πᾶσι καταφανῆ γενόμενον καὶ περιβόητον ἐντὸς ἑβδόμης ἡμέρας ἀποθανεῖν.

¹ αὐτοὺς οἱ στρατιῶται with Reiske: τοὺς στρατιώτας, which Bekker and Ziegler bracket.

CAIUS MARIUS

them on their journeys, being recognized by bronze rings on their necks; for the soldiers had caught them, put these rings on, and let them go again; and after this, on recognizing the birds, the soldiers greeted them, and they were glad to see them when they set out upon a march, feeling sure in such cases that they would be successful.

Many signs also appeared, most of which were of the ordinary kind; but from Ameria and Tuder, cities of Italy, it was reported that at night there had been seen in the heavens flaming spears, and shields which at first moved in different directions, and then clashed together, assuming the formations and movements of men in battle, and finally some of them would give way, while others pressed on in pursuit, and all streamed away to the westward. Moreover, about this time Bataces, the priest of the Great Mother,¹ came from Pessinus announcing that the goddess had declared to him from her shrine that the Romans were to be victorious and triumphant in war. The senate gave credence to the story and voted that a temple should be built for the goddess in commemoration of the victory; but when Bataces came before the assembly and desired to tell the story, Aulus Pompeius, a tribune of the people, prevented him, calling him an impostor, and driving him with insults from the rostra. And lo, this did more than anything else to gain credence for the man's story. For hardly had Aulus gone back to his house after the assembly was dissolved, when he broke out with so violent a fever that he died within a week, and everybody knew and talked about it.

¹ Cybelé, Mother of the Gods.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

XVIII. Οἱ δὲ Τεύτονες ἐπεχείρησαν μὲν ἡσυχάζοντος τοῦ Μαρίου πολιορκεῖν τὸ στρατόπεδον, βέλεσι δὲ πολλοῖς ἐντυχόντες ἀπὸ τοῦ χάρακος φερομένοις καὶ τινὰς ἐξ αὐτῶν ἀποβαλόντες ἔγνωσαν εἰς τοῦμπροσθεν χωρεῖν ὡς ὑπερβαλοῦντες ἀδεῶς τὰς Ἄλπεις· καὶ συσκευασάμενοι παρήμειβον τὸ στρατόπεδον τῶν Ῥωμαίων, τότε δὴ μάλιστα παμπληθεῖς μήκει καὶ χρόνῳ τῆς παρόδου φανέντες· ἡμέραις γὰρ ἐξ λέγονται τὸν χάρακα τοῦ Μαρίου παραμείψασθαι 2 συνεχῶς ὀδεύοντες. ἐπορεύοντο δὲ ἐγγύς, πυνθανόμενοι τῶν Ῥωμαίων μετὰ γέλωτος εἶ τι πρὸς τὰς γυναῖκας ἐπιστέλλοιεν· αὐτοὶ γὰρ ἔσσεσθαι ταχέως παρ' αὐταῖς. ἐπεὶ δὲ παρήλλαξαν οἱ βάρβαροι καὶ προήεσαν, ἄρας καὶ αὐτὸς ἐπηκολούθει σχέδην, ἐγγύς μὲν αἰεὶ καὶ παρ' αὐτοὺς ἐκείνους ἰδρυσόμενος, ὀχυραῖς δὲ χρώμενος στρατοπεδείαις καὶ χωρία καρτερὰ προβαλλόμενος, ὥστε 3 ἐν ἀσφαλεῖ νυκτερεύειν. οὕτω δὴ προϊόντες ἐγένοντο πρὸς τοῖς καλουμένοις ὕδασι Σεξτίοις, ὅθεν ἔδει πορευθέντας οὐ πολλὴν ὁδὸν ἐν ταῖς Ἄλπεσιν εἶναι. διὸ δὴ καὶ Μάριος ἐνταῦθα παρεσκευάζετο μάχεσθαι, καὶ κατέλαβε τῷ στρατοπέδῳ τόπον ἰσχυρὸν μὲν, ὕδωρ δὲ ἄφθονον οὐκ ἔχοντα, βουλόμενος, ὡς φασι, καὶ τούτῳ 4 παροξύναι τοὺς στρατιώτας. πολλῶν γέ τοι δυσχεραίνοντων καὶ διψήσειν λεγόντων, δείξας τῇ χειρὶ ποταμὸν τινα ῥέοντα πλησίον τοῦ βαρβαρικοῦ χάρακος, ἐκείθεν αὐτοῖς ἔφησεν εἶναι

CAIUS MARIUS

XVIII. But the Teutones, since Marius kept quiet, attempted to take his camp by storm ; many missiles, however, were hurled against them from the fortifications, and they lost some of their men. They therefore decided to march forward, expecting to cross the Alps without molestation. So they packed up their baggage and began to march past the camp of the Romans. Then, indeed, the immensity of their numbers was made specially evident by the length of their line and the time required for their passage ; for it is said they were six days in passing the fortifications of Marius, although they moved continuously. And they marched close to the camp, inquiring with laughter whether the Romans had any messages for their wives ; “for,” said they, “we shall soon be with them.” But when the Barbarians had passed by and were going on their way, Marius also broke camp and followed close upon them, always halting near by and at their very side, but strongly fortifying his camps and keeping strong positions in his front, so that he could pass the night in safety. Thus the two armies went on until they came to the place called Aquae Sextiae, from which they had to march only a short distance and they would be in the Alps. For this reason, indeed, Marius made preparations to give battle here, and he occupied for his camp a position that was strong, but poorly supplied with water, wishing, as they say, by this circumstance also to incite his soldiers to fight. At any rate, when many of them were dissatisfied and said they would be thirsty there, he pointed to a river that ran near the barbarian fortifications, and told them they could get water there, but the ποτὸν ὄνιον αἵματος. “Τί οὖν,” ἔφασαν, “οὐκ εὐθύς ἡμᾶς ἄγεις ἐπ’ αὐτούς, ἕως ὑγρὸν τὸ αἷμα ἔχομεν;” κακέϊνος ἡρέμα τῇ φωνῇ, “Πρότερον,” εἶπεν, “ὀχυρωτέον ἡμῖν τὸ στρατόπεδον.”

XIX. Οἱ μὲν οὖν στρατιῶται καίπερ ἀσχάλ-λοντες ἐπείθοντο τῆς δὲ θεραπείας τὸ πλῆθος οὐτ’ αὐτοὶ ποτὸν οὐθ’ ὑποζυγίοις ἔχοντες ἀθρόοι κατέβαινον ἐπὶ τὸν ποταμόν, οἱ μὲν ἀξίνας, οἱ δὲ πελέκεις, ἔνιοι δὲ καὶ ξίφη καὶ λόγχας ἅμα τοῖς ὑδρίοις ἀναλαβόντες, ὡς καὶ διὰ μάχης ὑδρυσό-μενοι. τούτοις τὸ πρῶτον ὀλίγοι προσεμάχοντο τῶν πολεμίων· ἔτυχον γὰρ ἀριστῶντες οἱ πολλοὶ 2 μετὰ λουτρόν, οἱ δὲ ἐλούοντο. ῥήγγυσι γὰρ αὐτόθι ναμάτων θερμῶν πηγὰς ὁ χῶρος· καὶ μέρος τι περὶ ταῦτα τοὺς βαρβάρους εὐπαθοῦντας καὶ πανηγυρίζοντας ἡδονῇ καὶ θαύματι τοῦ τόπου κατέλαβον οἱ Ῥωμαῖοι. πρὸς δὲ τὴν κραυγὴν πλειόνων συντρεχόντων τῷ τε Μαρίῳ χαλεπὸν ἦν ἔτι τοὺς στρατιώτας ἐπισχεῖν περὶ τῶν οἰκετῶν δεδιότας, καὶ τῶν πολεμίων τὸ μαχιμώτατον μέρος, ὑφ’ οὗ προήττηντο Ῥωμαῖοι μετὰ Μαλλίου καὶ Καιπίωνος πρότερον (“Ἀμβρωνες ὠνο-μάζοντο καὶ πλῆθος ὑπὲρ τρισμυρίουσιν αὐτοὶ καθ’ ἑαυτοὺς ἦσαν), ἀναίξαντες ἐπὶ τὰς πανοπλίας 3 ἐχώρουν. τὰ μὲν οὖν σώματα πλησμονῇ βεβαρημένοι, τοῖς δὲ φρονήμασι γαῦροι καὶ διακεχυμένοι πρὸς τὸν ἄκρατον, οὐκ ἀτάκτοις οὐδὲ μανιώδεσι φερόμενοι δρόμοις οὐδὲ ἀναρθρον ἀλαλαγμὸν ἰέν-τες, ἀλλὰ κρούοντες ῥυθμῷ τὰ ὄπλα καὶ συναλ-

CAIUS MARIUS

price of it was blood. "Why, then," they said, "dost thou not lead us at once against the enemy, while our blood is still moist?" To which Marius calmly replied: "We must first make our camp strong."

XIX. His soldiers, accordingly, though reluctant, obeyed; but the throng of camp-servants, who had no water either for themselves or their beasts, went down in a body to the river, some taking hatchets, some axes, and some also swords and lances along with their water-jars, determined to get water even if they had to fight for it. With these only a few of the enemy at first engaged, since the main body were taking their meal after bathing, and some were still bathing. For streams of warm water burst from the ground in this place, and at these the Romans surprised a number of the Barbarians, who were enjoying themselves and making merry in this wonderfully pleasant place. Their cries brought more of the Barbarians to the spot, and Marius had difficulty in longer restraining his soldiers, since they had fears now for their servants. Besides, the most warlike division of the enemy, by whom at an earlier time the Romans under Manlius and Caepio had been defeated¹ (they were called Ambrones and of themselves numbered more than thirty thousand), had sprung up from their meal and were running to get their arms. However, though their bodies were surfeited and weighed down with food and their spirits excited and disordered with strong wine, they did not rush on in a disorderly or frantic course, nor raise an inarticulate battle-cry, but rhythmically clashing their arms and leaping to the sound they

¹ Cf. chapter xvi. 5.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- λόμενοι πάντες ἄμα τὴν αὐτῶν ἐφθέγγοντο πολλάκις προσηγορίαν Ἀμβρωνες, εἴτε ἀνακαλούμενοι σφᾶς αὐτούς, εἴτε τοὺς πολεμίους τῇ
- 4 *προδηλώσει προεκφοβούμενους. τῶν δὲ Ἰταλικῶν πρῶτοι καταβαίνοντες ἐπ' αὐτούς Λίγυες, ὡς ἤκουσαν βοῶντων καὶ συνῆκαν, ἀντεφώνουν καὶ αὐτοὶ τὴν πάτριον ἐπικλήσιν αὐτῶν εἶναι· σφᾶς γὰρ αὐτούς οὕτως κατὰ γένος ὀνομάζουσι Λίγυες.
 πυκνὸν οὖν καὶ παράλληλον ἀντήχει πρὶν εἰς χεῖρας συνελθεῖν τὸ ἀναφώνημα· καὶ τῶν στρατῶν ἑκατέροις ἀνὰ μέρος συναναφθεγγομένων καὶ φιλοτιμουμένων πρῶτον ἀλλήλους τῷ μεγέθει τῆς βοῆς ὑπερβαλέσθαι, παρῶξυνε καὶ διηρέθιζε τὸν θυμὸν ἢ κραυγή.*
- 5 Τοὺς μὲν οὖν Ἀμβρωνας διέσπασε τὸ ρεῖθρον· οὐ γὰρ ἐφθασαν εἰς τάξιν καταστήναι διαβάντες, ἀλλὰ τοῖς πρῶτοις εὐθύς μετὰ δρόμου τῶν Λι-γύων προσπεσόντων ἐν χερσὶν ἦν ἡ μάχη· τοῖς δὲ Λίγυσι τῶν Ῥωμαίων ἐπιβοηθούντων καὶ φερομένων ἄνωθεν ἐπὶ τοὺς βαρβάρους βιασθέν-
- 6 τες ἐτρέποντο. καὶ πλείστοι μὲν αὐτοῦ περὶ τὸ ρεῖθρον ὠθούμενοι κατ' ἀλλήλων ἐπαίοντο καὶ κατεπίμπλασαν φόνου καὶ νεκρῶν τὸν ποταμόν, τοὺς δὲ διαβάντες οἱ Ῥωμαῖοι μὴ τολμώντας ἀναστρέφειν ἔκτεινον ἄχρι τοῦ στρατοπέδου καὶ τῶν
- 7 ἀμαξῶν φεύγοντας. ἐνταῦθα δὲ αἱ γυναῖκες ἀπαντῶσαι μετὰ ξιφῶν καὶ πελέκεων δεινὸν τετριγυῖαι καὶ περιθύμον ἠμύνοντο τοὺς φεύγοντας ὁμοίως καὶ τοὺς διώκοντας, τοὺς μὲν ὡς προδότας, τοὺς δὲ ὡς πολεμίους, ἀναπεφυρμένοι μαχομένοις καὶ χερσὶ γυμναῖς τοὺς τε θυρεοὺς τῶν Ῥωμαίων

CAIUS MARIUS

would frequently shout out all together their tribal name Ambrones, either to encourage one another, or to terrify their enemies in advance by the declaration. The first of the Italians to go down against them were the Ligurians, and when they heard and understood what the Barbarians were shouting, they themselves shouted back the word, claiming it as their own ancestral appellation; for the Ligurians call themselves Ambrones by descent. Often, then, did the shout echo and reecho from either side before they came to close quarters; and since the hosts back of each party took up the cry by turns and strove each to outdo the other first in the magnitude of their shout, their cries roused and fired the spirit of the combatants.

Well, then, the Ambrones became separated by the stream; for they did not all succeed in getting across and forming an array, but upon the foremost of them the Ligurians at once fell with a rush, and the fighting was hand-to-hand. Then the Romans came to the aid of the Ligurians, and charging down from the heights upon the Barbarians overwhelmed and turned them back. Most of the Ambrones were cut down there in the stream where they were all crowded together, and the river was filled with their blood and their dead bodies; the rest, after the Romans had crossed, did not dare to face about, and the Romans kept slaying them until they came in their flight to their camp and waggons. Here the women met them, swords and axes in their hands, and with hideous shrieks of rage tried to drive back fugitives and pursuers alike, the fugitives as traitors, and the pursuers as foes; they mixed themselves up with the combatants, with bare hands tore ἀποσπῶσαι καὶ τῶν ξιφῶν ἐπιλαμβανόμεναι, καὶ τραύματα καὶ διακοπὰς σωμάτων ὑπομένουσαι, μέχρι τελευτῆς ἀήττητοι τοῖς θυμοῖς. τὴν μὲν οὖν παραποτάμιον μάχην οὕτω κατὰ τύχην μάλλον ἢ γνώμη τοῦ στρατηγοῦ γενέσθαι λέγουσιν.

- XX. Ἐπεὶ δὲ πολλοὺς τῶν Ἀμβρώνων· οἱ Ῥωμαῖοι διαφθείραντες ἀνεχώρησαν ὀπίσω καὶ σκότος ἐπέσχευ, οὐχ ὥσπερ ἐπ' εὐτυχίματι τοσοῦτῳ τὸν στρατὸν ἐδέξαντο παιᾶνες ἐπινίκιοι καὶ πότιοι κατὰ σκηναὺς καὶ φιλοφροσύναι περὶ δεῖπνα καὶ τὸ πάντων ἡδιστον ἀνδράσιν εὐτυχῶς 417 μεμαχημένοι, ὕπνος ἤπιος, ἀλλ' ἐκείνην μάλιστα 2 τὴν νύκτα φοβερὰν καὶ ταραχώδη διήγαγον. ἦν μὲν γὰρ αὐτοῖς ἀχαράκωτον τὸ στρατόπεδον καὶ ἀτείχιστον, ἀπελείποντο¹ δὲ τῶν βαρβάρων ἔτι πολλαὶ μυριάδες ἀήττητοι, καὶ συμμεμιγμένων τούτοις ὅσοι διαπεφύγεσαν τῶν Ἀμβρώνων, ὄδυρμος ἦν διὰ νυκτός, οὐ κλαυθοῖς οὐδὲ στεναγμοῖς ἀνθρώπων ἐοικώς, ἀλλὰ θηρομιγῆς τις ὠρυγὴ καὶ βρύχημα μεμιγμένον ἀπειλαῖς καὶ θρήνοις ἀναπεμπόμενον ἐκ πλήθους τοσοῦτου τά τε περίξ 3 ὄρη καὶ τὰ κοῖλα τοῦ ποταμοῦ περιεφώνει. καὶ κατεῖχε φρικώδης ἤχος τὸ πεδίον, τοὺς δὲ Ῥωμαίους δέος, αὐτὸν τε τὸν Μάριον ἔκπληξιν ἄκοσμόν τινα καὶ ταραχώδη νυκτομαχίαν προσδεχόμενον. οὐ μὴν ἐπήλθον οὔτε νυκτός οὔτε τῆς ἐπιούσης ἡμέρας, ἀλλὰ συντάττοντες ἑαυτοὺς καὶ παρασκευαζόμενοι διετέλουν.
- 4 Ἐν τούτῳ δὲ Μάριος, ἦσαν γὰρ ἐκ κεφαλῆς τῶν βαρβάρων νάπαι περικλινεῖς καὶ κατάσκιοι

¹ ἀπελείποντο, Bekker adopts Coraës' correction to ὑπελείποντο.

CAIUS MARIUS

away the shields of the Romans or grasped their swords, and endured wounds and mutilations, their fierce spirits unvanquished to the end. So, then, as we are told, the battle at the river was brought on by accident rather than by the intention of the commander.

XX. After destroying many of the Ambrones the Romans withdrew and night came on; but in spite of so great a success the army did not indulge in paeans of victory, or drinking in the tents, or friendly converse over suppers, or that sweetest of all delights for men who have fought and won a battle, gentle sleep, but that night more than any other was spent in fears and commotions. For their camp was still without palisade or wall, and there were still left many myriads of the Barbarians who had met with no defeat. These had been joined by all the Ambrones who survived the battle, and there was lamentation among them all night long, not like the wailings and groans of men, but howlings and bellowings with a strain of the wild beast in them, mingled with threats and cries of grief, went up from this vast multitude and echoed among the surrounding hills and over the river valley. The whole plain was filled with an awful din, the Romans with fear, and even Marius himself with consternation as he awaited some disorderly and confused night-battle. However, the Barbarians made no attack either during that night or the following day, but spent the time in marshalling their forces and making preparations.

Meanwhile, since the position of the Barbarians was commanded by sloping glens and ravines that were δρυμοῖς αὐλῶνες, ἐνταῦθα Κλαύδιον Μάρκελλον ἐκπέμπει μετὰ τρισχιλίων ὀπλιτῶν, ἐνεδρεῦσαι κελεύσας κρύφα καὶ μαχομένοις ἐξόπισθεν ἐπιφανῆναι. τοὺς δὲ ἄλλους δειπνήσαντας ἐν ὥρᾳ καὶ κοιμηθέντας ἅμ' ἡμέρα συνέταττε πρὸ τοῦ χάρακος ἀγαγών, καὶ προεξέπεμπε τοὺς ἰππέας

 5 εἰς τὸ πεδῖον. θεασάμενοι δὲ οἱ Τεύτονες οὐκ ἠνέσχοντο καταβαίνοντας αὐτοῖς ἐξ ἴσου διαγωνίζεσθαι τοὺς Ῥωμαίους, ἀλλὰ σὺν τάχει καὶ δι' ὀργῆς ὀπλισάμενοι τῷ λόφῳ προσέβαλον. ὁ δὲ Μάριος ἑκασταχοῦ διαπέμπων τοὺς ἡγεμόνας ἐστάναι καὶ καρτερεῖν παρεκάλει, πελασάντων δὲ εἰς ἐφικτὸν ἐξακουτίσαι τοὺς ὑσσοῦς, εἶτα χρῆσθαι ταῖς μαχαίραις καὶ τοῖς θυρεοῖς ἀντερείσαντας βιάζεσθαι· τῶν γὰρ τόπων ἐπισφαλῶν ὄντων ἐκείνοις οὔτε τόνον ἔξειν τὰς πληγὰς οὔτε ῥώμην τὸν συνασπισμὸν, ἐν περιτροπῇ καὶ σάλῳ τῶν σωμάτων ὄντων διὰ τὴν ἀνωμαλίαν. ταῦτα ἅμα παρήνει καὶ δρῶν ἐωρᾶτο πρῶτος· οὐδενὸς γὰρ ἤσκητο χεῖρον τὸ σῶμα, καὶ πάντας πολὺ τῇ τόλμῃ παρήλλαττεν.

XXI. Ὡς οὖν ἀντιστάντες αὐτοῖς οἱ Ῥωμαῖοι καὶ συμπεσόντες ἔσχον ἄνω φερομένους, ἐκθλιβόμενοι κατὰ μικρὸν ὑπεχώρουν εἰς τὸ πεδῖον· καὶ τῶν πρώτων ἤδη καθισταμένων εἰς τάξιν ἐν τοῖς ἐπιπέδοις βοή καὶ διασπασμὸς ἦν περὶ τοὺς ὀπισθεν. ὁ γὰρ καιρὸς οὐκ ἔλαθε τὸν Μάρκελλον, ἀλλὰ τῆς κραυγῆς ὑπὲρ τοὺς λόφους ἄνω φερομένης ἀναστήσας τοὺς μετ' αὐτοῦ δρόμῳ καὶ shaded by trees, Marius sent Claudius Marcellus thither with three thousand men-at-arms, under orders to lie concealed in ambush until the battle was on, and then to show themselves in the enemy's rear. The rest of his soldiers, who had taken supper in good season and then got a night's sleep, he led out at day-break and drew up in front of the camp, and sent out his cavalry into the plain. The Teutones, seeing this, could not wait for the Romans to come down and fight with them on equal terms, but quickly and wrathfully armed themselves and charged up the hill. But Marius, sending his officers to all parts of the line, exhorted the soldiers to stand firmly in their lines, and when the enemy had got within reach to hurl their javelins, then take to their swords and crowd the Barbarians back with their shields; for since the enemy were on precarious ground their blows would have no force and the locking of their shields no strength, but the unevenness of the ground would keep them turning and tossing about. This was the advice he gave his men, and they saw that he was first to act accordingly; for he was in better training than any of them, and in daring far surpassed them all.

CAIUS MARIUS

XXI. Accordingly, the Romans awaited the enemy's onset, then closed with them and checked their upward rush, and at last, crowding them back little by little, forced them into the plain. Here, while the Barbarians in front were at last forming in line on level ground, there was shouting and commotion in their rear. For Marcellus had watched his opportunity, and when the cries of battle were borne up over the hills he put his men upon the run and

- ἀλαλαγμῷ προσέπιπτε κατὰ νότου, κτείνων τοὺς
 2 ἐσχάτους. οἱ δὲ τοὺς πρὸ αὐτῶν ἐπισπώμενοι ταχὺ πᾶν τὸ στράτευμα ταραχῆς ἐνέπλησαν, οὐ πολὺν τε χρόνον ἠνέσχοντο παιόμενοι διχόθεν, ἀλλὰ τὴν τάξιν λύσαντες ἔφευγον. οἱ δὲ Ῥωμαῖοι διώκοντες αὐτῶν μὲν ὑπὲρ δέκα μυριάδας ἢ ζῶντας εἶλον ἢ κατέβαλον, σκηνῶν δὲ καὶ ἀμαξῶν καὶ χρημάτων κρατήσαντες, ὅσα μὴ διεκλάπη, Μάριον λαβεῖν ἐψηφίσαντο. καὶ δωρεᾶς ταύτης λαμπροτάτης τυχῶν οὐδὲν ἄξιον ἔχειν ὧν ἐστρατήγησεν ἐνομίσθη διὰ τὸ τοῦ κινδύνου μέγεθος.
- 3 "Ἐτεροὶ δὲ περὶ τῆς δωρεᾶς τῶν λαφύρων οὐχ ὁμολογοῦσιν, οὐδὲ περὶ τοῦ πλήθους τῶν πεσόντων. Μασσαλήτας μέντοι λέγουσι τοῖς ὀστέοις περιθριγκῶσαι τοὺς ἀμπελῶνας, τὴν δὲ γῆν, τῶν νεκρῶν καταναλωθέντων ἐν αὐτῇ καὶ διὰ χειμῶνος ὄμβρων ἐπιπεσόντων, οὕτως ἐκλιπανθῆναι καὶ γενέσθαι διὰ βάθους περίπλευ τῆς σηπεδόνας ἐνδύσης ὥστε καρπῶν ὑπερβάλλον εἰς ὥρας πλήθος ἐξενεγκεῖν καὶ μαρτυρῆσαι τῷ Ἀρχιλόχῳ 418 λέγοντι πιαίνεσθαι πρὸς τοῦ τοιοῦτου τὰς ἀρούρας.
- 4 ἐπικεικῶς δὲ ταῖς μεγάλαις μάχαις ἐξαισίους ἕτεροὺς ἐπικαταρρήγνυσθαι λέγουσιν, εἴτε δαιμονίου τινὸς τὴν γῆν καθαροῖς καὶ διῦπετέσιν ἀγνίζοντος ὕδασι καὶ κατακλύζοντος, εἴτε τοῦ φόνου καὶ τῆς σηπεδόνας ἐξανείσης ὑγρὰν καὶ βαρεῖαν ἀναθυμίασιν, ἢ τὸν ἀέρα συνίστησιν εὐτρεπτον ὄντα καὶ ῥάδιον μεταβάλλειν ἀπὸ σμικροτάτης ἐπὶ πλείστον ἀρχῆς.

CAIUS MARIUS

fell with loud shouts upon the enemy's rear, where he cut down the hindmost of them. Those in the rear forced along those who were in front of them, and quickly plunged the whole army into confusion, and under this double attack they could not hold out long, but broke ranks and fled. The Romans pursued them and either slew or took alive over a hundred thousand of them, besides making themselves masters of their tents, waggons, and property, all of which, with the exception of what was pilfered, was given to Marius by vote of the soldiers. And though the gift that he received was so splendid, it was thought to be wholly unworthy of his services in the campaign, where the danger that threatened had been so great.

There are some writers, however, who give a different account of the division of the spoils, and also of the number of the slain. Nevertheless, it is said that the people of Massalia fenced their vineyards round with the bones of the fallen, and that the soil, after the bodies had wasted away in it and the rains had fallen all winter upon it, grew so rich and became so full to its depths of the putrefied matter that sank into it, that it produced an exceeding great harvest in after years, and confirmed the saying of Archilochus¹ that "fields are fattened" by such a process. And it is said that extraordinary rains generally dash down after great battles, whether it is that some divine power drenches and hallows the ground with purifying waters from Heaven, or that the blood and putrefying matter send up a moist and heavy vapour which condenses the air, this being easily moved and readily changed to the highest degree by the slightest cause.

¹ Bergk, Poet. Lyr. Graeci, ii.⁴ pp. 428 f.

XXII. Μετὰ δὲ τὴν μάχην ὁ Μάριος τῶν βαρβαρικῶν ὄπλων καὶ λαφύρων τὰ μὲν ἐκπρεπῆ καὶ ὀλόκληρα καὶ πομπικὴν ὄψιν τῷ θριάμβῳ δυνάμενα παρασχεῖν ἐπέλεξε, τῶν δὲ ἄλλων ἐπὶ πυρᾶς μεγάλης κατασφραγίσας τὸ πλῆθος ἔθυσεν
 2 θυσίαν μεγαλοπρεπῆ. καὶ τοῦ στρατοῦ παρεστῶτος ἐν ὄπλοις ἐστεφανωμένου περιζωσάμενος αὐτός, ὥσπερ ἔθος ἐστίν, ἀναλαβὼν τὴν περιπόρφυρον καὶ λαβὼν δᾶδα καιομένην καὶ δι' ἀμφοτέρων τῶν χειρῶν ἀνασχὼν πρὸς τὸν οὐρανὸν ἔμελλεν ὑψήσειν τῇ πυρᾷ· καὶ προσελαύνοντες ἵπποις ἐωρῶντο φίλοι σὺν τάχει πρὸς αὐτόν, ὥστε πολλὴν γενέσθαι σιωπὴν καὶ προσδοκίαν
 3 ἀπάντων. ἐπεὶ δὲ ἐγγὺς ἦσαν, ἀποπηδήσαντες ἐδεξιούντο τὸν Μάριον, εὐαγγελιζόμενοι τὸ πέμπτου αὐτὸν ὑπατοῦ ἡρῆσθαι, καὶ γράμματα περὶ τούτων ἀπέδωκαν. μεγάλης οὖν χαρᾶς τοῖς ἐπιπικίοις προσγενομένης ὃ τε στρατὸς ὑφ' ἡδονῆς ἐνοπλίῳ τινὶ κρότῳ καὶ πατάγῳ συνηλάλαξαν, καὶ τῶν ἡγεμόνων τὸν Μάριον αὐθις ἀναδούντων δάφνης στεφάνοις ἐνήψε τὴν πυρᾶν καὶ τὴν θυσίαν ἐπετελείωσεν.

XXIII. Ἡ δὲ μηθὲν ἐῶσα τῶν μεγάλων εὐτυχημάτων ἄκρατον εἰς ἡδονὴν καὶ καθαρὸν, ἀλλὰ μίξει κακῶν καὶ ἀγαθῶν ποικίλλουσα τὸν ἀνθρώπινον βίον ἢ τύχη τις ἢ νέμεσις ἢ πραγμάτων ἀναγκαία φύσις οὐ πολλαῖς ὕστερον ἡμέραις ἐπήγαγε τῷ Μαρίῳ τὴν περὶ Κάτλου τοῦ συναρχοντος ἀγγελίαν, ὥσπερ ἐν εὐδία καὶ γαλήνῃ νέφος, αὐθις ἕτερον φόβον καὶ χειμῶνα τῇ Ῥώμῃ
 2 περιστήσασα. ὁ γὰρ δὴ Κάτλος ἀντικαθήμενος τοῖς Κίμβροις τὰς μὲν ὑπερβολὰς τῶν Ἀλπεων

CAIUS MARIUS

XXII. After the battle, Marius collected such of the arms and spoils of the Barbarians as were handsome, entire, and fitted to make a show in his triumphal procession; all the rest he heaped up on a huge pyre and set on foot a magnificent sacrifice. The soldiers had taken their stand about the pyre in arms, with chaplets on their heads, and Marius himself, having put on his purple-bordered robe and girt it about him, as the custom was, had taken a lighted torch, held it up towards heaven with both hands, and was just about to set fire to the pyre, when some friends were seen riding swiftly towards him, and there was deep silence and expectancy on the part of all. But when the horsemen were near, they leaped to the ground and greeted Marius, bringing him the glad news that he had been elected consul for the fifth time,¹ and giving him letters to that effect. This great cause for rejoicing having been added to the celebration of their victory, the soldiers, transported with delight, sent forth a universal shout, accompanied by the clash and clatter of their arms, and after his officers had crowned Marius afresh with wreaths of bay, he set fire to the pyre and completed the sacrifice.

XXIII. However, that power which permits no great successes to bring a pure and unmixed enjoyment, but diversifies human life with a blending of evil and of good—be it Fortune, or Nemesis, or Inevitable Necessity, within a few days brought to Marius tidings of his colleague Catulus, which, like a cloud in a calm and serene sky, involved Rome in another tempest of fear. For Catulus, who was facing the Cimbri, gave up trying to guard the passes of the

¹ For the year 101 B. C.

- ἀπέγνω φυλάσσειν, μὴ κατὰ πολλὰ τὴν δύναμιν μέρη διαιρεῖν ἀναγκαζόμενος ἀσθενῆς γένοιτο, καταβάς δ' εὐθύς εἰς τὴν Ἰταλίαν καὶ τὸν Ἄτισῶνα ποταμὸν λαβὼν πρὸ αὐτοῦ καὶ φραξάμενος πρὸς τὰς διαβάσεις ἐκατέρωθεν ἰσχυροῖς χαρα-κώμασιν, ἔξευξε τὸν πόρον, ὡς ἐπιβοηθεῖν εἴη τοῖς 3 στενῶν οἱ βάρβαροι. τοῖς δὲ τοσοῦτον περιήν ὑπεροψίας καὶ θράσους κατὰ τῶν πολεμίων ὥστε ῥώμην καὶ τόλμαν ἐπιδεικνύμενοι μᾶλλον ἢ πράττουντές τι τῶν ἀναγκαίων γυμνοὶ μὲν ἠνείχοντο νιφόμενοι καὶ διὰ πάγων καὶ χιόνος βαθείας τοῖς ἄκροις προσέβαινον, ἄνωθεν δὲ τοὺς θυρεοὺς πλατεῖς ὑποτιθέντες τοῖς σώμασιν, εἶτα ἀφιέντες αὐτοὺς ὑπεφέροντο κατὰ κρημνῶν ὀλισθήματα 4 καὶ λισσάδας ἀχανεῖς ἐχόντων. ὡς δὲ παρα-στρατοπεδεύσαντες ἐγγὺς καὶ κατασκευάμενοι τὸν πόρον ἤρξαντο χοῦν, καὶ τοὺς πέριξ λόφους ἀναρρηγνύντες, ὥσπερ οἱ γίγαντες, ἅμα δένδρα πρόρριζα καὶ κρημνῶν σπαράγματα καὶ γῆς κολωνοὺς ἐφόρουν εἰς τὸν ποταμὸν, ἐκθλίβοντες τὸ ρεῦμα καὶ τοῖς ἐρείδουσι τὰ ζεύγματα βάθροις ἐφιέντες βάρη μεγάλα συρόμενα κατὰ ῥοῦν καὶ τινάττοντα ταῖς πληγαῖς τὴν γέφυραν, ἀποδειλιάσαντες οἱ πλείστοι τῶν στρατιωτῶν ἐξέλιπον τὸ μέγα στρατόπεδον καὶ ἀνεχώρουν.
- 5 Ἐνθα δὴ Κάτλος ἔδειξεν ἑαυτόν, ὥσπερ χρῆ τὸν ἀγαθὸν καὶ τέλειον ἄρχοντα, τὴν αὐτοῦ δόξαν ἐν ὑστέρω τῶν πολιτῶν τιθέμενον. ἐπεὶ γὰρ οὐκ ἔπειθε τοὺς στρατιώτας μένειν, ἀλλ' ἑώρα περιδεῶς ἀναζευγνύντας, ἄρασθαι κελεύσας τὸν αἰτὸν 41!

CAIUS MARIUS

Alps, lest he should be weakened by the necessity of dividing his forces into many parts, and at once descended into the plains of Italy. Here he put the river Atiso between himself and the enemy, built strong fortifications on both banks of it to prevent their crossing, and threw a bridge across the stream, that he might be able to go to the help of the people on the other side in case the Barbarians made their way through the passes and attacked the fortresses. But these Barbarians were so contemptuous and bold in following their enemies that, more by way of displaying their strength and daring than because it was necessary at all, they endured the snow-storms without any clothing, made their way through ice and deep snow to the summits, and from there, putting their broad shields under them and then letting themselves go, slid down the smooth and deeply fissured cliffs. After they had encamped near the stream and examined the passage, they began to dam it up, tearing away the neighbouring hills, like the giants of old, carrying into the river whole trees with their roots, fragments of cliffs, and mounds of earth, and crowding the current out of its course; they also sent whirling down the stream against the piles of the bridge heavy masses which made the bridge quiver with their blows, until at last the greater part of the Roman soldiers played the coward, abandoned their main camp, and began to retreat.

And now Catulus, like a consummately good commander, showed that he had less regard for his own reputation than for that of his countrymen. For finding that he could not persuade his soldiers to remain, and seeing that they were making off in terror, he ordered his standard to be taken up, ran to the

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

εἰς τοὺς πρώτους τῶν ἀπερχομένων ὤρμησε δρόμῳ καὶ πρῶτος ἠγεῖτο, βουλόμενος αὐτοῦ τὸ αἰσχρὸν, ἀλλὰ μὴ τῆς πατρίδος γενέσθαι, καὶ δοκεῖν μὴ φεύγοντας, ἀλλ' ἐπομένους τῷ στρατηγῷ ποιῆσθαι τὴν ἀποχώρησιν. οἱ δὲ βάρβαροι τὸ μὲν πέραν τοῦ Ἀτισῶνος φρούριον ἐπελθόντες ἔλαβον, καὶ τοὺς αὐτόθι Ῥωμαίους ἀνδρῶν κρατίστους γενομένους καὶ προκινδυνεύσαντας ἀξίως τῆς πατρίδος θαυμάσαντες ὑποσπόνδους ἀφήκαν, ὁμόσαντες τὸν χαλκοῦν ταῦρον, ὃν ὕστερον ἀλόντα μετὰ τὴν μάχην εἰς τὴν Κάτλου φασὶν οἰκίαν ὥσπερ ἀκροθίνιον τῆς νίκης κομισθῆναι. τὴν δὲ χώραν ἔρημον βοηθείας ἐπιχυθέντες ἐπόρθουν.

XXIV. Ἐπὶ τούτοις ἐκαλεῖτο Μάριος εἰς τὴν Ῥώμην καὶ παραγενόμενος, πάντων αὐτὸν οἰομένων θριαμβεύσειν καὶ τῆς βουλῆς προθύμως ψηφισαμένης, οὐκ ἠξίωσεν, εἴτε τοὺς στρατιώτας καὶ συναγωνιστὰς ἀποστερῆσαι τῆς φιλοτιμίας μὴ βουλόμενος, εἴτε πρὸς τὰ παρόντα θαρρύνων τὸ πλῆθος, ὡς τῇ τύχῃ τῆς πόλεως παρακατατιθέμενος τὴν τῶν πρώτων κατορθωμάτων δόξαν ἐν τοῖς δευτέροις λαμπροτέραν ἀποδοθησομένην.

2 διαλεχθεὶς δὲ τὰ πρέποντα τῷ καιρῷ καὶ πρὸς τὸν Κάτλον ἐξορήσας, τοῦτόν τε παρεθάρρυνε καὶ τοὺς αὐτοῦ μετεπέμπετο στρατιώτας ἐκ Γαλατίας. ὡς δὲ ἀφίκοντο, διαβὰς τὸν Ἡριδανὸν εἴργειν ἐπειρᾶτο τῆς ἐντὸς Ἰταλίας τοὺς βαρβάρους. οἱ δὲ τοὺς Τεύτονας ἐκδέχεσθαι καὶ

526

CAIUS MARIUS

foremost of the retiring troops, and put himself at their head, wishing that the disgrace should attach to himself and not to his country, and that his soldiers, in making their retreat, should not appear to be running away, but following their general. The Barbarians attacked and captured the fortress on the further side of the Atiso, and they so much admired the Romans there, who showed themselves bravest of men and fought worthily of their country, that they let them go on parole, making them take oath upon the bronze bull. This was subsequently captured, after the battle, and was carried, we are told, to the house of Catulus as the chief prize of the victory. But the country was now destitute of defenders, and the Barbarians inundated and ravaged it.

XXIV. In view of these things Marius was summoned to Rome. When he had arrived there, it was the general expectation that he would celebrate the triumph which the senate had readily voted him. But he refused to do so, either because he did not wish to deprive his soldiers and comrades-in-arms of their due honours, or because he would encourage the multitude in view of the present crisis by entrusting the glory of his first success to the fortune of the state, in the hope that it would be returned to him enhanced by a second. Having said what was suitable to the occasion, he set out to join Catulus, whom he tried to encourage, while at the same time he summoned his own soldiers from Gaul. When these had come, he crossed the Po and tried to keep the Barbarians out of the part of Italy lying this side of the river. But the Barbarians declined battle, alleging that they were waiting for θαυμάζειν ὡς βραδυνόντων φάσκοντες ἀνεβάλλοντο τὴν μάχην, εἴτε ἀγνοοῦντες ὄντως τὴν ἐκείνων φθοράν, εἴτε βουλόμενοι δοκεῖν ἀπιστεῖν.

3 καὶ γὰρ τοὺς ἀγγέλλοντας ἠκίζοντο δεινῶς, καὶ τὸν Μάριον ἤτουν πέμψαντες ἑαυτοῖς καὶ τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς χώραν καὶ πόλεις ἱκανὰς ἐνοικεῖν. ἐρομένου δὲ τοῦ Μαρίου τοὺς πρέσβεις περὶ τῶν ἀδελφῶν, κακείνων ὀνομασάντων τοὺς Τεύτονας, οἱ μὲν ἄλλοι πάντες ἐγέλασαν, ὁ δὲ Μάριος ἔσκωψεν εἰπών· “ Ἐἴατε τοίνυν τοὺς ἀδελφούς· ἔχουσι γὰρ γῆν ἐκείνοι καὶ διὰ παντὸς ἔξουσι παρ’ ἡμῶν

4 λαβόντες.” οἱ δὲ πρέσβεις τὴν εἰρωνεῖαν συνέντες ἐλοιδόρουν αὐτὸν ὡς δίκην ὑφέξοντα, Κίμβροις μὲν αὐτίκα, Τεύτοσι δὲ ὅταν παραγένωνται. “ Καὶ μὴν πάρεισιν,” ἔφη ὁ Μάριος, “ καὶ οὐχ ἔξει καλῶς ὑμῖν ἀπαλλαγῆναι πρότερον ἢ τοὺς ἀδελφούς ἀσπάσασθαι.” καὶ ταῦτα εἰπὼν ἐκέλευσε τοὺς βασιλεῖς τῶν Τευτόνων προαχθῆναι δεδεμένους· ἐάλωσαν γὰρ ἐν ταῖς Ἄλπεσι φεύγοντες ὑπὸ Σηκουανῶν.

XXV. Ὡς δὲ ἀπηγγέλθη ταῦτα τοῖς Κίμβροις, αὐθις ἐξ ἀρχῆς ἐχώρουν ἐπὶ τὸν Μάριον ἡσυχάζοντα καὶ διαφυλάττοντα τὸ στρατόπεδον. λέγεται δὲ εἰς ἐκείνην τὴν μάχην πρῶτον ὑπὸ Μαρίου καινοτομηθῆναι τὸ περὶ τοὺς ὑσσούς. τὸ γὰρ εἰς τὸν σίδηρον ἔμβλημα τοῦ ξύλου πρότερον μὲν ἦν δυσὶ περόναις κατειλημμένον σιδηραῖς, τότε δὲ ὁ Μάριος τὴν μὲν, ὥσπερ εἶχεν, εἶασε, τὴν δ’ ἐτέραν ἐξελὼν ξύλινον ἤλον εὐθραυστον ἀντ’ αὐτῆς their brethren the Teutones and wondered why they were so long in coming; this was either because they were really ignorant of their destruction, or because they wished to have the appearance of disbelieving it. For they terribly mishandled those who brought tidings of it, and sent to Marius demanding territory for themselves and their brethren and enough cities for them to dwell in. When Marius asked their ambassadors whom they meant by their brethren, they said they meant the Teutones. At this, all the other Romans who heard them burst out laughing, and Marius scoffingly said: "Then don't trouble yourselves about your brethren, for they have land, and they will have it forever—land which we have given them." The ambassadors understood his sarcasm and fell to abusing him, declaring that he should be punished for it, by the Cimbri at once, and by the Teutones when they came. "Verily," said Marius, "they are here, and it will not be right for you to go away before you have embraced your brethren." Saying this, he ordered the kings of the Teutones to be produced in fetters; for they had been captured among the Alps, where they were fugitives, by the Sequani.

CAIUS MARIUS

XXV. When these things had been reported to the Cimbri, they once more advanced against Marius, who kept quiet and carefully guarded his camp. And it is said that it was in preparation for this battle that Marius introduced an innovation in the structure of the javelin. Up to this time, it seems, that part of the shaft which was let into the iron head was fastened there by two iron nails; but now, leaving one of these as it was, Marius removed the other, and put in its place a wooden pin that could easily

2 ἐνέβαλε, τεχνάζων προσπεσόντα τὸν ὕσσον τῷ θυρεῷ τοῦ πολεμίου μὴ μένειν ὀρθόν, ἀλλὰ τοῦ ξυλίνου κλασθέντος ἤλου καμπὴν γίνεσθαι περὶ τὸν σίδηρον καὶ παρέλκεσθαι τὸ δόρυ, διὰ τὴν στρεβλότητα τῆς αἰχμῆς ἐνεχόμενον.

Βοιωρίζ δὲ ὁ τῶν Κίμβρων βασιλεὺς ὀλιγοστὸς προσιππεύσας τῷ στρατοπέδῳ προὔκαλεῖτο τὸν Μάριον, ἡμέραν ὀρίσαντα καὶ τόπον, προελθεῖν
3 καὶ διαγωνίσασθαι περὶ τῆς χώρας. τοῦ δὲ Μαρίου φήσαντος οὐδέποτε Ῥωμαίους συμβούλους κεχρῆσθαι περὶ μάχης τοῖς πολεμίοις, οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ καὶ χαριεῖσθαι τοῦτο Κίμβροις, ἡμέραν μὲν ἔθεντο τὴν ἀπ' ἐκείνης τρίτην, χώραν δὲ τὸ πεδίον τὸ περὶ Βερκέλλας, Ῥωμαίους μὲν ἐπιτήδειον ἐνιππάσασθαι, τῶν δὲ ἀνάχυσιν τῷ πλήθει
παρασχεῖν.

4. Τηρήσαντες οὖν τὸν ὠρισμένον χρόνον ἀντι-παρετάσσοντο, Κάτλος μὲν ἔχων δισμυρίους καὶ 420 τριακοσίους στρατιώτας, οἱ δὲ Μαρίου δισχίλιοι
μὲν ἐπὶ τρισμυρίοις ἐγένοντο, περιέσχον δὲ τὸν Κάτλον ἐν μέσῳ νεμηθέντες εἰς ἐκάτερον κέρας, ὡς Σύλλας, ἠγωνισμένος ἐκείνην τὴν μάχην, 5 γέγραφε. καὶ φησι τὸν Μάριον ἐλπίσαντα τοῖς ἄκροις μάλιστα καὶ κατὰ κέρας συμπεσεῖν τὰς φάλαγγας, ὅπως ἴδιος ἢ νίκη τῶν ἐκείνου στρα-τιωτῶν γένοιτο καὶ μὴ μετὰσχοι τοῦ ἀγῶνος ὁ Κάτλος μηδὲ προσμίξειε τοῖς πολεμίοις, κόλπωμα τῶν μέσων, ὥσπερ εἴωθεν ἐν μεγάλοις μετώποις, λαμβανόντων, οὕτω διαστήσαι τὰς δυνάμεις.

CAIUS MARIUS

be broken. His design was that the javelin, after striking the enemy's shield, should not stand straight out, but that the wooden peg should break, thus allowing the shaft to bend in the iron head and trail along the ground, being held fast by the twist at the point of the weapon.

And now Boerix the king of the Cimbri, with a small retinue, rode up towards the camp and challenged Marius to set a day and a place and come out and fight for the ownership of the country. Marius replied that the Romans never allowed their enemies to give them advice about fighting, but that he would nevertheless gratify the Cimbri in this matter. Accordingly, they decided that the day should be the third following, and the place the plain of Vercellae, which was suitable for the operations of the Roman cavalry, and would give the Cimbri room to deploy their numbers.

When, therefore, the appointed time had come, the Romans drew up their forces for battle. Catulus had twenty thousand three hundred soldiers, while those of Marius amounted to thirty-two thousand, which were divided between both wings and had Catulus between them in the centre, as Sulla, who fought in this battle, has stated.¹ He says also that Marius hoped that the two lines would engage at their extremities chiefly and on the wings, in order that his soldiers might have the whole credit for the victory and that Catulus might not participate in the struggle nor even engage the enemy (since the centre, as is usual in battle-fronts of great extent, would be folded back); and therefore arranged the ὁμοια δὲ καὶ τὸν Κάτλον αὐτὸν ἀπολογεῖσθαι περὶ τούτων ἱστοροῦσι, πολλὴν κατηγοροῦντα τοῦ Μαρίου κακοήθειαν πρὸς αὐτόν.

¹ In his Memoirs; cf. the Sulla, iv. 3.

Τοῖς δὲ Κίμβροις τὸ μὲν πεζὸν ἐκ τῶν ἐρυμάτων καθ' ἡσυχίαν προῆει, βάθος ἴσον τῷ μετώπῳ ποιούμενον. ἐκάστη γὰρ ἐπέσχε πλευρὰ σταδίου
 7 τριάκοντα τῆς παρατάξεως· οἱ δὲ ἵππεῖς μύριοι καὶ πεντακισχίλιοι τὸ πλῆθος ὄντες ἐξήλασαν λαμπροί, κράνη μὲν εἰκασμένα θηρίων φοβερῶν χάσμασι καὶ προτομαῖς ἰδιομόρφοις ἔχοντες, ἄς ἐπαιρόμενοι λόφοις πτερωτοῖς εἰς ὕψος ἐφαίνοντο μείζους, θώραξι δὲ κεκοσμημένοι σιδηροῖς, θυρεοῖς δὲ λευκοῖς στίλβοντες. ἀκόντισμα δὲ ἦν ἐκάστῳ διβολία· συμπεσόντες δὲ μεγάλαις ἐχρῶντο καὶ βαρεῖαις μαχαίραις.

XXVI. Τότε δὲ οὐχὶ κατὰ στόμα προσεφέροντο τοῖς Ῥωμαίοις, ἀλλ' ἐκκλίνοντες ἐπὶ δεξιὰ ὑπήγον αὐτοὺς κατὰ μικρόν, ἐμβάλλοντες εἰς τὸ μέσον αὐτῶν τε καὶ τῶν πεζῶν ἐξ ἀριστερᾶς παρατεταγμένων. καὶ συνείδον μὲν οἱ τῶν Ῥωμαίων στρατηγοὶ τὸν δόλον, ἐπισχεῖν δὲ τοὺς στρατιώτας οὐκ ἔφθησαν, ἀλλ' ἐνὸς ἐκβοήσαντος ὅτι φεύγου-
 2 σιν οἱ πολέμοι, πάντες ὤρμησαν διώκειν. καὶ τὸ πεζὸν ἐν τούτῳ τῶν βαρβάρων ἐπήει καθάπερ πέλαγος ἀχανὲς κινούμενον. ἐνταῦθα νιψάμενος ὁ Μάριος τὰς χεῖρας καὶ πρὸς τὸν οὐρανὸν ἀνασχῶν εὐξάτο τοῖς θεοῖς κατὰ ἑκατόμβης. εὐξάτο δὲ καὶ Κάτλος ὁμοίως ἀνασχῶν τὰς χεῖρας καθιερώσειν τὴν τύχην τῆς ἡμέρας ἐκείνης. τὸν δὲ Μάριον καὶ θύσαντα λέγεται τῶν ἱερῶν αὐτῷ δειχθέντων μέγα φθεγξάμενον εἰπεῖν· “Ἐμὴ ἢ νίκη.”

CAIUS MARIUS

forces in this manner. And we are told that Catulus himself also made a similar statement in defence of his conduct in the battle, and accused Marius of great malice in his treatment of him.

As for the Cimbri, their foot-soldiers advanced slowly from their defences, with a depth equal to their front, for each side of their formation had an extent of thirty furlongs; and their horsemen, fifteen thousand strong, rode out in splendid style, with helmets made to resemble the maws of frightful wild beasts or the heads of strange animals, which, with their towering crests of feathers, made their wearers appear taller than they really were; they were also equipped with breastplates of iron, and carried gleaming white shields. For hurling, each man had two lances; and at close quarters they used large, heavy swords.

XXVI. At this time, however, they did not charge directly upon the Romans, but swerved to the right and tried to draw them along gradually until they got them between themselves and their infantry, which was drawn up on their left. The Roman commanders perceived the crafty design, but did not succeed in holding their soldiers back; for one of them shouted that the enemy was taking to flight, and then all set out to pursue them. Meanwhile the infantry of the Barbarians came on to the attack like a vast sea in motion. Then Marius, after washing his hands, lifted them to heaven and vowed a hecatomb to the gods; Catulus also in like manner lifted his hands and vowed that he would consecrate the fortune of that day. It is said, too, that Marius offered sacrifice, and that when the victims had been shown to him, he cried with a loud voice: "Mine is the victory."

- 3 Γενομένης δὲ τῆς ἐφόδου πρᾶγμα νεμεσητὸν παθεῖν τὸν Μάριον οἱ περὶ Σύλλαν ἱστοροῦσι. κοινορτοῦ γὰρ ἄρθέντος, οἶον εἰκός, ἀπλέτου καὶ τῶν στρατοπέδων ἀποκεκρυμμένων, ἐκείνον μὲν, ὡς τὸ πρῶτον ὤρμησε πρὸς τὴν δίωξιν, ἐπισπασάμενον τὴν δύναμιν ἀστοχῆσαι τῶν πολεμίων καὶ παρενεχθέντα τῆς φάλαγγος ἐν τῷ πεδίῳ διαφέρεσθαι πολὺν χρόνον, τῷ δὲ Κάτλῳ τοὺς βαρβάρους ἀπὸ τύχης συρραγῆναι, καὶ γενέσθαι τὸν ἀγῶνα κατ' ἐκείνον καὶ τοὺς ἐκείνου μάλιστα στρατιώτας, ἐν οἷς αὐτὸς ὁ Σύλλας τετάχθαι
- 4 φησί· συναγωνίσασθαι δὲ τοῖς Ῥωμαίοις τὸ καῦμα καὶ τὸν ἥλιον ἀντιλάμποντα τοῖς Κίμβροις. δεινοὶ γὰρ ὄντες ὑπομεῖναι κρῦη, καὶ τόποις ἐντεθραμμένοι σκιεροῖς, ὡς λέλεκται, καὶ ψυχροῖς, ἀνετρέποντο πρὸς τὸ θάλπος, ἰδρῶτά τε μετὰ ἄσθματος πολὺν ἐκ τῶν σωμάτων ἀφιέντες καὶ τοὺς θυρεοὺς προβαλλόμενοι πρὸ τῶν προσώπων, ἅτε δὴ καὶ μετὰ τροπᾶς θέρους τῆς μάχης γενομένης, ἅς ἄγουσι Ῥωμαῖοι πρὸ τριῶν ἡμερῶν τῆς νουμηνίας τοῦ νῦν μὲν Αὐγούστου, τότε δὲ
- 5 Σεξτιλίου μηνός. ὤνησε δὲ καὶ πρὸς τὸ θαρρεῖν ὁ κοινορτὸς ἀποκρύψας τοὺς πολεμίους. οὐ γὰρ κατείδον ἐκ πολλοῦ τὸ πλῆθος, ἀλλὰ δρόμῳ τοῖς κατ' αὐτοὺς ἕκαστοι προσμίξαντες ἐν χερσὶν ἦσαν, ὑπὸ τῆς ὄψεως μὴ προεκφοβηθέντες. οὕτω δ' ἦσαν διάπονοι τὰ σώματα καὶ κατηθληκότες ὡς μήτε ἰδρῶντά τινα μήτε ἀσθμαίνοντα Ῥωμαίων ὀφθῆναι διὰ πνίγους τοσοῦτου καὶ μετὰ δρόμου

CAIUS MARIUS

After the attack had begun, however, an experience befell Marius which signified the divine displeasure, according to Sulla. For an immense cloud of dust was raised, as was to be expected, and the two armies were hidden from one another by it, so that Marius, when he first led his forces to the attack, missed the enemy, passed by their lines of battle, and moved aimlessly up and down the plain for some time. Meanwhile, as chance would have it, the Barbarians engaged fiercely with Catulus, and he and his soldiers, among whom Sulla says he himself was posted, bore the brunt of the struggle. The Romans were favoured in the struggle, Sulla says, by the heat, and by the sun, which shone in the faces of the Cimbri. For the Barbarians were well able to endure cold, and had been brought up in shady and chilly regions, as I have said.¹ They were therefore undone by the heat; they sweated profusely, breathed with difficulty, and were forced to hold their shields before their faces. For the battle was fought after the summer solstice, which falls, by Roman reckoning, three days before the new moon of the month now called August,² but then Sextilis. Moreover, the dust, by hiding the enemy, helped to encourage the Romans. For they could not see from afar the great numbers of the foe, but each one of them fell at a run upon the man just over against him, and fought him hand to hand, without having been terrified by the sight of the rest of the host. And their bodies were so inured to toil and so thoroughly trained that not a Roman was observed to sweat or pant, in spite of the great heat and the run with which they

¹ Chapter xi. 5 f.

² a. d. III. Kalendas Augusti.

τῆς συρράξεως γενομένης, ὡς τὸν Κάτλον αὐτὸν 421
 ἱστορεῖν λέγουσι μεγαλύνοντα τοὺς στρατιώτας.

- XXVII. Τὸ μὲν οὖν πλεῖστον μέρος καὶ μαχι-μώτατον τῶν πολεμίων αὐτοῦ κατεκόπη· καὶ γὰρ ἦσαν ὑπὲρ τοῦ μὴ διασπᾶσθαι τὴν τάξιν οἱ πρόμαχοι μακραῖς ἀλύσεσι πρὸς ἀλλήλους συνε-χόμενοι διὰ τῶν ζωστήρων ἀναδεδεμέναις· τοὺς δὲ φεύγοντας ὡσαντες πρὸς τὸ χαράκωμα τραγικῶ-2 τάτοις ἐνετύγχανον πάθεισιν. αἱ γὰρ γυναῖκες ἐπὶ τῶν ἀμαξῶν μελανείμονες ἐφεστῶσαι τοὺς τε φεύγοντας ἔκτεινον, αἱ μὲν ἄνδρας, αἱ δὲ ἀδελφούς, αἱ δὲ πατέρας, καὶ τὰ νήπια τῶν τέκνων ἀπάγ-χουσαι ταῖς χερσὶν ἐρρίπτουν ὑπὸ τοὺς τροχοὺς καὶ τοὺς πόδας τῶν ὑποζυγίων, αὐτὰς δὲ ἀπέσφαττον. μίαν δὲ φασιν ἐξ ἄκρου ῥυμοῦ κρεμαμένην τὰ παιδιά τῶν αὐτῆς σφυρῶν ἀφημμένα βρόχοις 3 ἐκατέρωθεν ἤρτησθαι· τοὺς δὲ ἄνδρας ἀπορία δένδρων τοῖς κέρασι τῶν βοῶν, τοὺς δὲ τοῖς σκέλεσι προσδεῖν τοὺς αὐτῶν τραχήλους, εἴτα κέντρα προσφέροντας ἐξαλλομένων τῶν βοῶν ἐφελκομένους καὶ πατουμένους ἀπόλλυσθαι. πλὴν καίπερ οὕτως αὐτῶν διαφθαρέντων, ἐάλωσαν ὑπὲρ ἕξ μυριάδας· αἱ δὲ τῶν πεσόντων ἐλέγοντο δις τοσαῦται γενέσθαι.
- 4 Τὰ μὲν οὖν χρήματα διήρπασαν οἱ Μαρῖον στρατιῶται, τὰ δὲ λάφυρα καὶ τὰς σημαίας καὶ τὰς σάλπιγγας εἰς τὸ Κάτλου στρατόπεδον ἀνενεχθῆναι λέγουσιν· ᾧ καὶ μάλιστα τεκμηρίῳ χρῆσθαι τὸν Κάτλον ὡς κατ' αὐτὸν ἡ νίκη γένοιτο.
 καὶ μέντοι καὶ τοῖς στρατιώταις, ὡς ἔοικεν, ἐμπεσοῦσης ἔριδος, ἠρέθησαν οἶον διαιτηταὶ πρέσβεις came to the encounter. This is what Catulus himself is said to have written¹ in extolling his soldiers.

CAIUS MARIUS

XXVII. The greatest number and the best fighters of the enemy were cut to pieces on the spot; for to prevent their ranks from being broken, those who fought in front were bound fast to one another with long chains which were passed through their belts. The fugitives, however, were driven back to their entrenchments, where the Romans beheld a most tragic spectacle. The women, in black garments, stood at the waggons and slew the fugitives—their husbands or brothers or fathers, then strangled their little children and cast them beneath the wheels of the waggons or the feet of the cattle, and then cut their own throats. It is said that one woman hung dangling from the tip of a waggon-pole, with her children tied to either ankle; while the men, for lack of trees, fastened themselves by the neck to the horns of the cattle, or to their legs, then plied the goad, and were dragged or trampled to death as the cattle dashed away. Nevertheless, in spite of such self-destruction, more than sixty thousand were taken prisoners; and those who fell were said to have been twice that number.

Now, the enemy's property became the booty of the soldiers of Marius, but the spoils of battle, the standards, and the trumpets, were brought, we are told, to the camp of Catulus; and Catulus relied chiefly upon this as a proof that the victory was won by his men. Furthermore, a dispute for the honour of the victory arose among the soldiers, as was natural, and the members of an embassy from Parma were

¹ Catulus wrote a history of his consulship, of which Cicero speaks in terms of high praise (Brutus, 35, 132 ff.).

Παρμιτῶν παρόντες, οὓς οἱ Κάτλου διὰ τῶν πολεμίων νεκρῶν ἄγοντες ἐπεδείκνυντο τοῖς ἑαυτῶν ὑσσοῖς διαπεπαρμένους· γνώριμοι δ' ἦσαν ὑπὸ γραμμάτων, τοῦνομα τοῦ Κάτλου παρὰ τὸ ξύλον
 5 αὐτῶν ἐγχαράξαντος. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ τῷ Μαρίῳ προσετίθετο σύμπαν τὸ ἔργον ἢ τε προτέρα νίκη καὶ τὸ πρόσχημα τῆς ἀρχῆς. μάλιστα δὲ οἱ πολλοὶ κτίστην τε Ῥώμης τρίτον ἐκείνου ἀνηγόρευον, ὡς οὐχ ἦπτονα τοῦ Κελτικοῦ τοῦτον ἀπεωσμένον τὸν κίνδυνον, εὐθυμούμενοί τε μετὰ παίδων καὶ γυναικῶν ἕκαστοι κατ' οἶκον ἅμα τοῖς θεοῖς καὶ Μαρίῳ δείπνου καὶ λουβῆς ἀπήρχοντο, καὶ θριαμβεύειν μόνον ἠξίουσαν ἀμφοτέρους τοὺς θριάμ-
 6 βους. οὐ μὴν ἐθριάμβευσεν οὕτως, ἀλλὰ μετὰ τοῦ Κάτλου, μέτριον ἐπὶ τηλικαύταις εὐτυχίαις βουλόμενος παρέχειν ἑαυτόν· ἔστι δὲ ὃ τι καὶ τοὺς στρατιώτας φοβηθεῖς παρατεταγμένους, εἰ Κάτλος ἀπείργετο τῆς τιμῆς, μηδὲ ἐκείνον εἰς θριαμβεύειν.

XXVIII. Πέμπτην μὲν οὖν ὑπατείαν διεῖπε· τῆς δὲ ἕκτης ὡς οὐδὲ εἰς πρώτης ὠρέγετο, θεραπείαις τὸν δῆμον ἀναλαμβάνων καὶ πρὸς χάριν ἐνδιδούς τοῖς πολλοῖς, οὐ μόνον παρὰ τὸν ὄγκον καὶ τὸ κοινὸν ἀξίωμα τῆς ἀρχῆς, ἀλλὰ καὶ παρὰ τὴν αὐτοῦ φύσιν ὑγρὸς τις εἶναι βουλόμενος καὶ
 2 δημοτικός, ἠκιστα τοιοῦτος πεφυκώς. ἀλλ' ἦν, ὡς λέγουσι, πρὸς πολιτείαν καὶ τοὺς ἐν ὄχλοις

¹ Marius was consul still, while Catulus had not been re-elected, and was only pro-consul.

CAIUS MARIUS

chosen to act as arbitrators. These men the soldiers of Catulus conducted among the dead bodies of the enemy, which were clearly seen to have been pierced by their javelins; for these could be known by the name of Catulus which had been cut into the shaft. However, the entire success was attributed to Marius, both on account of his former victory and of his superior rank.¹ Above all, the people hailed him as the third founder of Rome,² on the ground that the peril which he had averted from the city was not less than that of the Gallic invasion; and all of them, as they made merry at home with their wives and children, would bring ceremonial offerings of food and libations of wine to Marius as well as to the gods, and they were insistent that he alone should celebrate both triumphs. Marius, however, would not do this, but celebrated his triumph with Catulus, wishing to show himself a man of moderation after a course of so great good fortune. Perhaps, too, he was afraid of the soldiers, who were drawn up and ready, in case Catulus were deprived of his honour, to prevent Marius also from celebrating a triumph.

XXVIII. Thus, then, his fifth consulship was coming to an end; but he was as eager for a sixth as another would have been for his first. He tried to win over the people by obsequious attentions, and yielded to the multitude in order to gain its favour, thus doing violence, not only to the dignity and majesty of his high office, but also to his own nature, since he wished to be a compliant man of the people when he was naturally at farthest remove from this. In confronting a political crisis or the tumultuous

² With Romulus and Camillus. See the Camillus, xxxi. 2.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

θορύβους ὑπὸ φιλοδοξίας ἀτολμότατος, καὶ τὸ παρὰ τὰς μάχας ἀνέκπληκτον καὶ στάσιμον ἐν ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις ἀπέλειπεν αὐτὸν ὑπὸ τῶν τυχόντων ἐπαίνων καὶ ψόγων ἐξιστάμενον.
 καίτοι λέγεται Καμερίνων ἄνδρας ὁμοῦ χιλίου διαπρεπῶς ἀγωνισαμένους ἐν τῷ πολέμῳ δωρησάμενος πολιτείᾳ, δοκοῦντος εἶναι τούτου παρα-νόμου καὶ τινων ἐγκαλούντων, εἰπεῖν ὅτι τοῦ νόμου διὰ τὸν τῶν ὄπλων ψόφον οὐ κατακούσειεν.
 3 οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ μᾶλλον ἔοικεν ἐκπλήσσεσθαι καὶ δεδιέναι τὴν ἐν ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις κραυγὴν. ἐν μὲν γε τοῖς ὄπλοις ἀξίωμα καὶ δύναμιν εἶχε διὰ τὴν χρείαν, ἐν δὲ τῇ πολιτείᾳ περικοπτόμενος τὰ πρωτεῖα κατέφευγεν ἐπὶ τὴν τῶν πολλῶν εὐνοίαν καὶ χάριν, ὑπὲρ τοῦ μέγιστος γενέσθαι τὸ βέλ-4 τιστος εἶναι προῖέμενος. πᾶσι μὲν οὖν προσέκρουε τοῖς ἀριστοκρατικοῖς, μάλιστα δὲ ὀρρωδῶν τὸν Μέτελλον ἠχαριστημένον ὑπ' αὐτοῦ καὶ φύσει δι' 422 ἀρετὴν ἀληθῆ πολεμοῦντα τοῖς οὐ κατὰ τὸ βέλτιστον ὑποδουμένοις τὰ πλήθη καὶ πρὸς ἡδονὴν δημαγωγοῦσιν, ἐπεβούλευε τῆς πόλεως ἐκβαλεῖν 5 τὸν ἄνδρα. καὶ πρὸς τοῦτο Γλαυκίαν καὶ Σατορ-νῖνον, ἀνθρώπους θρασυτάτους καὶ πλήθος ἄπορον καὶ θορυβοποιὸν ὑπ' αὐτοῖς ἔχοντας, οἰκειωσάμενος εἰσέφερε νόμους δι' αὐτῶν· καὶ τὸ στρατιωτικὸν ἐπάρας κατεμίγνυε ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις καὶ κατεστασίαζε τὸν Μέτελλον. ὥς δὲ Ῥουτίλιος ἱστορεῖ,

CAIUS MARIUS

throng, we are told, his ambition made him most timorous, and that undaunted firmness which he showed in battle forsook him when he faced the popular assemblies, so that he was disconcerted by the most ordinary praise or blame. And yet we are told that when he had bestowed citizenship upon as many as a thousand men of Camerinum for conspicuous bravery in the war, the act was held to be illegal and was impeached by some; to whom he replied that the clash of arms had prevented his hearing the voice of the law. However, he appeared to be in greater fear and terror of the shouting in the popular assemblies. At any rate, while in war he had authority and power because his services were needed, yet in civil life his leadership was more abridged, and he therefore had recourse to the goodwill and favour of the multitude, not caring to be the best man if only he could be the greatest. The consequence was that he came into collision with all the aristocrats. It was Metellus, however, whom he especially feared, a man who had experienced his ingratitude, and one whose genuine excellence made him the natural enemy of those who tried to insinuate themselves by devious methods into popular favour and sought to control the masses by pleasing them. Accordingly, he schemed to banish Metellus from the city. For this purpose he allied himself with Saturninus and Glaucia, men of the greatest effrontery, who had a rabble of needy and noisy fellows at their beck and call, and with their assistance would introduce laws. He also stirred up the soldiery, got them to mingle with the citizens in the assemblies, and thus controlled a faction which could overpower Metellus. Then, according to Rutilius, who is generally a lover

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

τὰ μὲν ἄλλα φιλαλήθης ἀνὴρ καὶ χρηστός, ἰδίᾳ δὲ τῷ Μαρίῳ προσκεκρουκώς, καὶ τῆς ἕκτης ἔτυχεν ὑπατείας ἀργύριον εἰς τὰς φυλάς καταβαλὼν πολὺ καὶ πριάμενος τὸ Μέτελλον ἐκκρούσαι τῆς ἀρχῆς, Οὐαλλέριον δὲ Φλάκκον ὑπηρέτην μάλλον ἢ συνάρχοντα τῆς ὑπατείας λαβεῖν.
 6 οὐδενὶ μέντοι τῶν πρὸ αὐτοῦ πλὴν μόνῳ Κορβίνῳ Οὐαλλερίῳ τοσαύτας ὑπατείας ἔδωκεν ὁ δῆμος, ἀλλ' ἐκείνῳ μὲν ἀπὸ τῆς πρώτης εἰς τὴν τελευταίαν ἔτη πέντε καὶ τεσσαράκοντα γενέσθαι λέγουσι, Μᾶριος δὲ μετὰ τὴν πρώτην τὰς πέντε ῥύμη μίᾳ τύχης διέδραμε.

XXIX. Καὶ μάλιστα περὶ τὴν τελευταίαν ἐφθονεῖτο, πολλὰ συνεξαμαρτάνων τοῖς περὶ τὸν Σατορνίνον. ὧν ἦν καὶ ὁ Νωνίου φόνος, ὃν ἀντιπαραγγέλλοντα δημαρχίαν ἀπέσφαξεν ὁ Σατορνίνος. εἶτα δημαρχῶν ἐπήγε τὸν περὶ τῆς χώρας νόμον, ᾧ προσεγέγραπτο τὴν σύγκλητον ὁμόσαι προσελθοῦσαν, ἢ μὴν ἐμμενεῖν οἷς ἂν ὁ δῆμος ψηφίσαιτο καὶ πρὸς μηδὲν ὑπεναντιώσεσθαι.
 2 τοῦτο τοῦ νόμου τὸ μέρος προσποιούμενος ἐν τῇ βουλῇ διώκειν ὁ Μάριος οὐκ ἔφη δέξεσθαι¹ τὸν ὄρκον, οὐδὲ ἄλλον οἶεσθαι σωφρονοῦντα· καὶ γὰρ εἰ μὴ μοχθηρὸς ἦν ὁ νόμος, ὕβριν εἶναι τὰ τοιαῦτα τὴν βουλὴν διδόναι βιαζομένην, ἀλλὰ μὴ πειθοῖ μηδὲ ἐκούσαν. ταῦτα δὲ οὐχ οὕτως φρονῶν ἔλεγεν, ἀλλὰ τῷ Μετέλλῳ ἀπάτην περιτιθεὶς ἄφικτον.

¹ δέξεσθαι Coraës, Bekker, and Ziegler, after Reiske δέξασθαι.

CAIUS MARIUS

of truth and an honest man, but had a private quarrel with Marius, he actually got his sixth consulship by paying down large sums of money among the tribes, and by buying votes made Metellus lose his election to the office, and obtained as his colleague in the consulship Valerius Flaccus, who was more a servant than a colleague. And yet the people had never bestowed so many consulships upon any other man except Corvinus Valerius. In the case of Corvinus, however, forty-five years are said to have elapsed between his first and his last consulship; whereas Marius, after his first consulship, ran through the other five without a break.

XXIX. In this last consulship¹ particularly did Marius make himself hated, because he took part with Saturninus in many of his misdeeds. One of these was the murder of Nonius, whom Saturninus slew because he was a rival candidate for the tribuneship. Then, as tribune, Saturninus introduced his agrarian law, to which was added a clause providing that the senators should come forward and take oath that they would abide by whatsoever the people might vote and make no opposition to it. In the senate Marius made pretence of opposing this part of the law, and declared that he would not take the oath, and that he thought no other sensible man would; for even if the law were not a bad one, it was an insult to the senate that it should be compelled to make such concessions, instead of making them under persuasion and of its own free will. He said this, however, not because it was his real mind, but that he might catch Metellus in the toils of a fatal

¹ 100 B.C.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- 3 αὐτὸς μὲν γὰρ εἰς ἀρετῆς καὶ δεινότητος μερίδα τὸ ψεύσασθαι τιθέμενος λόγον οὐδένα τῶν πρὸς τὴν σύγκλητον ὠμολογημένων ἔξειν ἔμελλε, τὸν δὲ Μέτελλον εἰδὼς βέβαιον ἄνδρα καὶ τὴν “ αλήθειαν ἀρχὴν μεγάλης ἀρετῆς ” κατὰ Πίνδαρον ἠγούμενον ἐβούλετο τῇ πρὸς τὴν σύγκλητον ἀρνήσει προληφθέντα καὶ μὴ δεξάμενον τὸν ὄρκον εἰς ἀνήκεστον ἐμβαλεῖν πρὸς τὸν δῆμον ἔχθραν. ὃ καὶ συνέβη.
- 4 Τοῦ γὰρ Μετέλλου φήσαντος μὴ ὁμόσειν, τότε μὲν ἡ βουλὴ διελύθη, μετὰ δὲ ἡμέρας ὀλίγας τοῦ Σατορνίνου πρὸς τὸ βῆμα τοὺς συγκλητικούς ἀνακαλουμένου καὶ τὸν ὄρκον ὁμνύειν ἀναγκάζοντος ὁ Μάριος παρελθὼν, γενομένης σιωπῆς καὶ πάντων εἰς ἐκεῖνον ἀνηρητημένων, μακρὰ χαίρειν φράσας τοῖς ἐν τῇ βουλῇ νεανιευθεῖσιν ἀπὸ φωνῆς, οὐχ οὕτω πλατὺν ἔφη φορεῖν τὸν τράχηλον ὡς προαποφαίνεσθαι καθάπαξ εἰς πρᾶγμα τηλικούτου, ἀλλ’ ὁμείσθαι καὶ τῷ νόμῳ πειθαρχήσειν, εἴπερ ἔστι νόμος· καὶ γὰρ τοῦτο προσέθηκε τὸ
- 5 σοφὸν ὥσπερ παρακάλυμμα τῆς αἰσχύνης. ὁ μὲν οὖν δῆμος ἦσθεις ὁμόσαντος ἀνεκρότησε καὶ κατευφῆμισε, τοὺς δὲ ἀρίστους κατήφεια δεινὴ καὶ μῖσος ἔσχε τοῦ Μαρίου τῆς μεταβολῆς. ὤμνυσαν οὖν ἅπαντες ἐφεξῆς δεδιότες τὸν δῆμον ἄχρι Μετέλλου· Μέτελλος δέ, καίπερ ἀντιβολουμένων καὶ δεομένων τῶν φίλων ὁμόσαι καὶ μὴ περιβαλεῖν ἑαυτὸν ἐπιτιμίαις ἀνηκέστοις, ἀ κατὰ τῶν μὴ ὁμνούντων ὁ Σατορνίνος εἰσέφερεν, οὐχ ὑφή-

CAIUS MARIUS

trick. For he himself regarded lying as part of a man's excellence and ability, made no account of his agreements with the senators, and did not intend to keep them; whereas he knew that Metellus was a steadfast man, who thought with Pindar that "truth is the foundation of great excellence,"¹ and he therefore wished to bind him beforehand by a statement to the senate that he would not take the oath, and then have his refusal to do so plunge him into a hatred on the part of the people that could never be removed. And this was what came to pass.

For Metellus declared that he would not take the oath, and the senate broke up for a while; but after a few days Saturninus summoned the senators to the rostra and tried to force them to take the oath. When Marius came forward there was silence, and the eyes of all were fastened upon him. Then, bidding a long farewell to all his boastful and insincere expressions in the senate, he said his throat was not broad enough to pronounce an opinion once for all upon so important a matter, but that he would take the oath, and obey the law, if it was a law; adding this bit of sophistry as a cloak for his shame. The people, then, delighted at his taking the oath, clapped their hands in applause, but the nobles were terribly dejected and hated Marius for his change of front. Accordingly, all the senators took the oath in order, through fear of the people, until the turn of Metellus came; but Metellus, although his friends earnestly entreated him to take the oath and not subject himself to the irreparable punishments which Saturninus proposed for those who should

¹ Fragment 221 (Boeckh).

- 6 κατο τοῦ φρονήματος οὐδὲ ὄμοσεν, ἀλλ' ἐμμένων τῷ ἤθει καὶ πᾶν παθεῖν δεινὸν ἐπὶ τῷ μῆθεν αἰσχρὸν ἐργάσασθαι· παρεσκευασμένος ἀπῆλθεν ἐκ τῆς ἀγορᾶς, διαλεγόμενος τοῖς περὶ αὐτὸν ὡς τὸ κακὸν τι πράξαι φαῦλον εἶη, τὸ δὲ καλὸν μὲν, 423 ἀκινδύνως δέ, κοινόν, ἴδιον δὲ ἀνδρὸς ἀγαθοῦ τὸ
- 7 μετὰ κινδύνων τὰ καλὰ πράσσειν. ἐκ τούτου ψηφίζεται Σατορνῖνος ἐπικηρῦξαι τοὺς ὑπάτους ὅπως πυρὸς καὶ ὕδατος καὶ στέγης εἴργηται Μέτελλος· καὶ τὸ φαυλότατον αὐτοῖς τοῦ πλήθους παρῆν ἔτοιμον ἀποκτινύναι τὸν ἄνδρα. τῶν δὲ βελτίστων περιπαθούντων καὶ συντρεχόντων πρὸς τὸν Μέτελλον οὐκ εἶα στασιάζειν δι' αὐτόν, ἀλλὰ ἀπῆλθεν ἐκ τῆς πόλεως ἔμφροσι λογισμῷ
- 8 χρησάμενος. “Ἡ γὰρ ἀμεινόνων,” ἔφη, “τῶν πραγμάτων γενομένων καὶ τοῦ δήμου μετανοήσαντος ἀφίξομαι παρακαλούμενος, ἢ μενόντων ὁμοίων ἀπηλλάχθαι κράτιστον.” ἀλλὰ γὰρ ὅσης μὲν ἀπέλαυσεν εὐνοίας παρὰ τὴν φύγην καὶ τιμῆς Μέτελλος, ὃν δὲ τρόπον ἐν Ῥόδῳ φιλοσοφῶν διητήθη, βέλτιον ἐν τοῖς περὶ ἐκείνου γραφομένοις εἰρήσεται.

XXX. Μάριος δὲ τὸν Σατορνῖνον ἀντὶ τῆς ὑπουργίας ταύτης ἐπὶ πᾶν προίοντα τόλμης καὶ δυνάμειος περιορᾶν ἀναγκαζόμενος, ἔλαθεν οὐκ ἀνεκτὸν ἀπεργασάμενος κακόν, ἀλλ' ἀντικρυς ὅπλοις καὶ σφαγαῖς ἐπὶ τυραννίδα καὶ πολιτείας ἀνατροπὴν πορευόμενον. αἰδούμενος δὲ τοὺς κρατίστους, θεραπεύων δὲ τοὺς πολλούς, ἔργον ἀνελεύθερον ἐσχάτως ὑπέμεινε καὶ παλίμβολον.

2 ἐλθόντων γὰρ ὡς αὐτὸν ὑπὸ νύκτα τῶν πρώτων

CAIUS MARIUS

refuse, would not swerve from his purpose or take the oath, but, adhering to his principles and prepared to suffer any evil rather than do a shameful deed, he left the forum, saying to those about him that to do a wrong thing was mean, and to do the right thing when there was no danger was any man's way, but that to act honourably when it involved dangers was peculiarly the part of a good and true man. Upon this, Saturninus got a vote passed that the consuls should proclaim Metellus interdicted from fire, water, and shelter; and the meanest part of the populace supported them and was ready to put the man to death. The best citizens, however, sympathised with Metellus and crowded hastily about him, but he would not allow a faction to be raised on his account, and departed from the city, following the dictates of prudence. "For," said he, "either matters will mend and the people will change their minds and I shall return at their invitation, or, if matters remain as they are, it is best that I should be away." But what great goodwill and esteem Metellus enjoyed during his exile, and how he spent his time in philosophical studies at Rhodes, will be better told in his Life.¹

XXX. And now Marius, who was forced, in return for this assistance, to look on quietly while Saturninus ran to extremes of daring and power, brought about unawares a mischief that was not to be cured, but made its way by arms and slaughter directly towards tyranny and subversion of the government. And since he stood in awe of the nobles, while he courted the favour of the multitude, he was led to commit an act of the utmost meanness and duplicity. For when the leading men had come to him by night

¹ No such Life is extant.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- ἀνδρῶν καὶ παρακαλούντων ἐπὶ τὸν Σατορνῖνον, ἐτέραις θύραις ἐκείνον ὑπεδέξατο τούτων ἀγνοούντων. εἶτα πρόφασιν λέγων πρὸς ἀμφοτέρους κοιλίας διάρροϊαν, νῦν μὲν ὡς τούτους, νῦν δὲ ὡς ἐκείνον ἐπὶ τῆς οἰκίας ἀνὰ μέρος διατρέχων
- 3 συνέκρουε καὶ παρώξυνεν. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ καὶ τῆς βουλῆς καὶ τῶν ἰππέων συνισταμένων καὶ ἀγανακτούντων ἐξήνεγκεν εἰς ἀγορὰν τὰ ὄπλα, καὶ καταδιωχθέντας αὐτοὺς εἰς τὸ Καπετώλιον εἶλε δίψει· τοὺς γὰρ ὄχετοὺς ἀπέκοψεν, οἱ δ' ἀπειπόντες ἐκείνον ἐκάλουν καὶ παρέδωκαν σφᾶς αὐτοὺς διὰ τῆς λεγομένης δημοσίας πίστεως.
- 4 ἐπεὶ δὲ παντοῖος γενόμενος ὑπὲρ τοῦ σῶσαι τοὺς ἀνδρας οὐδὲν ᾤνησεν, ἀλλὰ κατιόντες εἰς ἀγορὰν ἀνηρέθησαν, ἐκ τούτου τοῖς τε δυνατοῖς ἅμα καὶ τῷ δήμῳ προσκεκρουκῶς, τιμητείας παραπεσοῦσης ἐπίδοξος ὧν οὐ μετήλθεν, ἀλλ' εἴασεν ἐτέρους ὑποδεεστέρους αἰρεθῆναι, δεδιῶς ἀποτυχεῖν. ἄλλως δὲ αὐτὸς ἐκαλλωπίζετο πολλοῖς μὴ θέλειν ἀπεχθάνεσθαι τοὺς βίους αὐτῶν καὶ τὰ ἦθη πικρῶς ἐξετάζων.

XXXI. Δόγματος δὲ εἰσφερομένου Μέτελλον ἀπὸ τῆς φυγῆς ἀνακαλεῖσθαι, πολλὰ καὶ διὰ λόγων καὶ δι' ἔργων μάτην ἐναντιωθεὶς τέλος ἀπεῖπε· καὶ δεξαμένου τὴν γνώμην τοῦ δήμου προθύμως, οὐχ ὑπομένων κατερχόμενον ἐπιδεῖν τὸν Μέτελλον ἐξέπλευσεν εἰς Καππαδοκίαν καὶ Γαλατίαν, λόγῳ μὲν ἀποδώσων ἅς εὔξατο τῇ and were trying to incite him against Saturninus, without their knowledge he introduced Saturninus into the house by another door; then, pretending to both parties that he had a diarrhoea, he would run backwards and forwards in the house, now to the nobles and now to Saturninus, trying to irritate and bring them into collision. However, when the senate and the knights began to combine and give utterance to their indignation, he led his soldiers into the forum, forced the insurgents to take refuge on the Capitol, and compelled them to surrender for lack of water. For he cut off the water-conduits; whereupon they gave up the struggle, called Marius, and surrendered themselves on what was called the public faith. Marius did all he could to save the men, but it was of no avail, and when they came down into the forum they were put to death. This affair made Marius obnoxious alike to the nobles and to the people, and when the time for electing censors came he did not present himself as a candidate, although everyone expected that he would, but allowed other and inferior men to be elected, for fear that he would be defeated. However, he tried to put a good face upon his conduct by saying that he was unwilling to incur the hatred of many citizens by a severe examination into their lives and manners.

CAIUS MARIUS

XXXI. When a decree was introduced recalling Metellus from exile, Marius opposed it strongly both by word and deed, but finding his efforts vain, at last desisted; and after the people had adopted the measure with alacrity, unable to endure the sight of Metellus returning, he set sail for Cappadocia and Galatia,¹ ostensibly to make the sacrifices which he μητρὶ τῶν θεῶν θυσίας, ἐτέραν δὲ τῆς ἀποδημίας 2 ἔχων ὑπόθεσιν λαυθάνουσαν τοὺς πολλούς. ἀφυῆς γὰρ ὦν πρὸς εἰρήνην καὶ ἀπολίτευτος, ἠϋξημένος δὲ τοῖς πολέμοις, εἶτα κατὰ μικρὸν αὐθις ὑπὸ ἀργίας καὶ ἡσυχίας ἀπομαραίνεσθαι τὴν δύναμιν αὐτοῦ καὶ τὴν δόξαν οἰόμενος, ἐξήτει καινῶν πραγμάτων ἀρχάς. ἤλπιζε γὰρ τοὺς βασιλεῖς συνταράξας καὶ Μιθριδάτην ἐπίδοξον ὄντα πολεμῆσειν ἀναστήσας καὶ παροξύνας, εὐθὺς ἐπ' αὐτὸν ἡγεμῶν αἰρεθήσεσθαι καὶ νέων μὲν τὴν πόλιν θριάμβων, σκύλων δὲ Πουτικῶν καὶ πλούτου 3 βασιλικοῦ τὸν οἶκον ἐμπλήσειν. διὸ καὶ Μιθ-ριδάτου πάσῃ χρησαμένου θεραπείᾳ καὶ τιμῇ πρὸς αὐτὸν οὐ καμφθεὶς οὐδὲ ὑπέίξας, ἀλλ' εἰπὼν, “Ἡ μείζον, ὦ βασιλεῦ, πειρῶ δύνασθαι Ῥωμαίων, ἣ ποίει σιωπῇ τὸ προστασώμενον,” ἐξέπληξεν αὐ-τόν, ὡς φωνῆς μὲν πολλάκις, παρρησίας δὲ τότε πρῶτον ἀκούσαντα Ῥωμαϊκῆς.

XXXII. Ἐπανελθὼν δὲ εἰς Ῥώμην οἰκίαν ἐδεί-ματο τῆς ἀγορᾶς πλησίον, εἶτε, ὡς αὐτὸς ἔλεγε, τοὺς θεραπεύοντας αὐτὸν ἐνοχλεῖσθαι μὴ βουλό- 424 μενος μακρὰν βαδίζοντας, εἶτε τοῦτο αἴτιον οἰόμενος εἶναι τοῦ μὴ πλείονας ἄλλων ἐπὶ θύρας αὐτοῦ φοιτᾶν. τὸ δ' οὐκ ἦν ἄρα τοιοῦτον· ἀλλ' ὀμιλίας χάριτι καὶ πολιτικαῖς χρεῖαις ἐτέρων λειπόμενος ὥσπερ ὄργανον πολεμικὸν ἐπ' εἰρή-2 νης παρημελείτο. καὶ τοῖς μὲν ἄλλοις ἦπτον ἤχθετο παρευδοκιμούμενος, σφόδρα δὲ αὐτὸν ἠνία Σύλλας ἐκ τοῦ πρὸς ἐκείνον αὐξανόμενος φθόνου had vowed to the Mother of the Gods, but really having another reason for his journey which the people did not suspect. He had, that is, no natural aptitude for peace or civil life, but had reached his eminence by arms. And now, thinking that his influence and reputation were gradually fading away because of his inactivity and quietude, he sought occasions for new enterprises. For he hoped that if he stirred up the kings of Asia and incited Mithridates to action, who was expected to make war upon Rome, he would at once be chosen to lead the Roman armies against him, and would fill the city with new triumphs, and his own house with Pontic spoils and royal wealth. For this reason, though Mithridates treated him with all deference and respect, he would not bend or yield, but said: "O King, either strive to be stronger than Rome, or do her bidding without a word." This speech startled the king, who had often heard the Roman speech, but then for the first time in all its boldness.

CAIUS MARIUS

XXXII. On returning to Rome, he built a house for himself near the forum, either, as he himself said, because he was unwilling that those who paid their respects to him should have the trouble of coming a long distance, or because he thought that distance was the reason why he did not have larger crowds at his door than others. The reason, however, was not of this nature; it was rather his inferiority to others in the graces of intercourse and in political helpfulness, which caused him to be neglected, like an instrument of war in time of peace. Of all those who eclipsed him in popular esteem he was most vexed and annoyed by Sulla, whose rise to power was due to the jealousy which the nobles felt towards Marius, τῶν δυνατῶν καὶ τὰς πρὸς ἐκείνουν διαφορὰς ἀρχὴν πολιτείας ποιούμενος. ἐπεὶ δὲ καὶ Βόκχος ὁ Νομάς σύμμαχος Ῥωμαίων ἀναγεγραμμένος ἔστησεν ἐν Καπετωλίῳ Νίκας τροπαιοφόρους καὶ παρ' αὐταῖς ἐν εἰκόσι χρυσαῖς Ἰουγούρθαν ἐγχειριζόμενον ὑπὸ αὐτοῦ Σύλλα, τοῦτο ἐξέστησεν ὀργῇ καὶ φιλονεικίᾳ Μάριον, ὡς Σύλλα περισπῶντος εἰς ἑαυτὸν τὰ ἔργα, καὶ παρεσκευάζετο

 3 βία τὰ ἀναθήματα καταβάλλειν. ἀντεφιλονεῖκει δὲ Σύλλας, καὶ τὴν στάσιν ὅσον οὐπω φερομένην εἰς μέσον ἐπέσχεν ὁ συμμαχικὸς πόλεμος ἐξαίφνης ἐπὶ τὴν πόλιν ἀναρραγεῖς. τὰ γὰρ μαχιμώτατα τῶν Ἰταλικῶν ἔθνῶν καὶ πολυανθρωπώτατα κατὰ τῆς Ῥώμης συνέστησαν καὶ μικρὸν ἐδέησαν συγγέαι τὴν ἡγεμονίαν, οὐ μόνον ὄπλοις ἐρρωμένα καὶ σώμασιν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τόλμαις στρατηγῶν καὶ δεινότησι χρησάμενα θαυμασταῖς καὶ ἀντιπάλοις.

XXXIII. Οὗτος ὁ πόλεμος τοῖς πάθεσι ποικίλος γενόμενος καὶ ταῖς τύχαις πολυτροπώτατος ὅσον Σύλλα προσέθηκε δόξης καὶ δυνάμεως, τοσοῦτον ἀφείλε Μαρίου. βραδὺς γὰρ ἐφάνη ταῖς ἐπιβολαῖς, ὄκνου τε περὶ πάντα καὶ μελλήσεως ὑπόπλεως, εἴτε τοῦ γήρωσ τὸ δραστήριον ἐκείνο καὶ θερμὸν ἐν αὐτῷ κατασβεννύντος (ἐξηκοστὸν γὰρ ἤδη καὶ πέμπτον ἔτος ὑπερέβαλλεν), εἴτε, ὡς αὐτὸς ἔλεγε, περὶ νεῦρα γεγονῶς νοσώδης καὶ σώματι δύσεργος ὧν ὑπέμενε παρὰ δύναμιν
 2 αἰσχύνῃ τὰς στρατείας. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ καὶ τότε μάχῃ τε μεγάλη νικήσας ἑξακισχιλίους ἀνείλε τῶν πολεμίων, καὶ λαβὴν οὐδαμῇ παρέσχευ αὐ-

CAIUS MARIUS

and who was making his quarrels with Marius the basis of his political activity. And when Bocchus the Numidian, who had been designated an ally of the Romans, set up trophy-bearing Victories on the Capitol, and by their side gilded figures representing Jugurtha surrendered by him to Sulla, Marius was transported with rage and fury to see Sulla thus appropriating to himself the glory of his achievements, and was making preparations to tear down the votive offerings. But Sulla too was furious, and civil dissension was just on the point of breaking out, when it was stopped by the Social War, which suddenly burst upon the city.¹ That is, the most warlike and most numerous of the Italian peoples combined against Rome, and came within a little of destroying her supremacy, since they were not only strong in arms and men, but also had generals whose daring and ability were amazing and made them a match for the Romans.

XXXIII. This war, which was varied in its events and most changeful in its fortunes, added much to Sulla's reputation and power, but took away as much from Marius. For he was slow in making his attacks, and always given to hesitation and delay, whether it was that old age had quenched his wonted energy and fire (for he was now past his sixty-sixth year), or that, as he himself said, a feeling of shame led him to go beyond his powers in trying to endure the hardships of the campaign when his nerves were diseased and his body unfit for work. However, even then he won a great victory in which he slew six thousand of the enemy; and he never allowed them to get a grip upon him, but even when he was τοῖς, ἀλλὰ καὶ περιταφρευόμενος ἠνέσχετο καὶ χλευαζόμενος καὶ καλούμενος οὐ παρωξύνθη. λέγεται δὲ Ποπλίου Σίλωνος, ὃς μέγιστον εἶχε τῶν πολεμίων ἀξίωμα καὶ δύναμιν, εἰπόντος πρὸς αὐτόν, “Εἰ μέγας εἶ στρατηγός, ὦ Μάριε, διαγωνισαὶ καταβάς,” ἀποκρίνασθαι, “Σὺ μὲν οὖν, εἰ μέγας εἶ στρατηγός, ἀνάγκασόν με διαγωνίσασθαι 3 μὴ βουλόμενον.” πάλιν δὲ ποτε τῶν μὲν πολεμίων καιρὸν ἐπιχειρήσεως παραδόντων, τῶν δὲ Ῥωμαίων ἀποδειλιασάντων, ὡς ἀνεχώρησαν ἀμφοτέροι, συναγαγὼν εἰς ἐκκλησίαν τοὺς στρατιώτας, “Ἄπορῶ,” φησί, “πότερον εἶπω τοὺς πολεμίους ἀνανδροτέρους ἢ ὑμᾶς· οὔτε γὰρ ἐκείνοι τὸν νῶτον ὑμῶν οὔτε ὑμεῖς ἐκείνων τὸ ἰνίον ἰδεῖν ἐδυνήθητε.” τέλος δὲ ἀφῆκε τὴν στρατηγίαν ὡς ἑξαδυνατῶν τῷ σώματι διὰ τὴν ἀσθένειαν.

¹ 90-89 B.C. See the Sulla, vi. 1 f.

XXXIV. Ἐπεὶ δὲ ἤδη τῶν Ἰταλικῶν ἐγκεκλικότων ἐμνηστεύοντο πολλοὶ τὸν Μιθριδατικὸν πόλεμον ἐν Ῥώμῃ διὰ τῶν δημαγωγῶν, παρὰ πᾶσαν ἐλπίδα Σουλπίκιος δήμαρχος, ἀνὴρ θρασύτατος, παραγαγὼν Μάριον ἀπεδείκνυεν ἀνθύπατον στρατηγὸν ἐπὶ Μιθριδάτην. καὶ ὁ δῆμος διέστη, τῶν μὲν αἰρουμένων τὰ Μαρίου, τῶν δὲ Σύλλαν καλούντων καὶ τὸν Μάριον ἐπὶ θερμὰ κελευόντων εἰς Βαίτας βαδίζειν καὶ τὸ σῶμα θεραπεύειν ὑπὸ τε γήρωσ καὶ ρευμάτων ἀπειρη- 2 κός, ὡς αὐτὸς ἔλεγε. καὶ γὰρ ἦν ἐκεῖ περὶ Μισσηνοὺς τῷ Μαρίῳ πολυτελῆς οἰκία, τρυφὰς ἔχουσα hemmed about with trenches bided his time, and was not unduly irritated by their insults and challenges. We are told that Publius Silo,¹ who had the greatest authority and power among the enemy, once said to him, "If thou art a great general, Marius, come down and fight it out with us"; to which Marius answered, "Nay, but do thou, if thou art a great general, force me to fight it out with you against my will." And at another time, when the enemy had given him an opportunity to attack them, but the Romans had played the coward, and both sides had withdrawn, he called an assembly of his soldiers and said to them: "I do not know whether to call the enemy or you the greater cowards; for they were not able to see your backs, nor you their napes." At last, however, he gave up his command, on the ground that his infirmities made him quite incapable of exercising it.

CAIUS MARIUS

XXXIV. But when the Italians had at last made their submission, and many persons at Rome were suing for the command in the Mithridatic war, with the aid of the popular leaders, contrary to all expectation the tribune Sulpicius, a most audacious man, brought Marius forward and proposed to make him pro-consul in command against Mithridates. The people were divided in opinion, some preferring Marius, and others calling for Sulla and bidding Marius go to the warm baths at Baiae and look out for his health, since he was worn out with old age and rheums, as he himself said. For at Baiae, near Cape Misenum, Marius owned an expensive house, which had appointments more luxurious and effeminate

¹ Pompaedius Silo, leader of the Marsi. Cf. the Cato Minor, ii. 1-4.

καὶ διαίτας θηλυτέρας ἢ κατ' ἄνδρα πολέμων τοσοῦτων καὶ στρατειῶν αὐτουργόν. ταύτην λέ-γεται μυριάδων ἑπτὰ ἡμίους Κορνηλία πρίασθαι· χρόνου δ' οὐ πάνυ πολλοῦ γενομένου Λεύκιος Λεύκολλος ὠνεῖται μυριάδων πεντήκοντα 425 καὶ διακοσίων· οὕτως ταχέως ἀνέδραμεν ἡ πολυ-τέλεια καὶ τοσαύτην ἐπίδοσιν τὰ πράγματα πρὸς 3 τρυφὴν ἔλαβεν. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ Μάριος φιλοτίμως πάνυ καὶ μεираκιωδῶς ἀποτριβόμενος τὸ γῆρας καὶ τὴν ἀσθένειαν ὁσημέραι κατέβαινεν εἰς τὸ πεδίον, καὶ μετὰ τῶν νεανίσκων γυμναζόμενος ἐπεδείκνυε τὸ σῶμα κοῦφον μὲν ὄπλοις, ἔποχον δὲ ταῖς ἵππασίαις, καίπερ οὐκ εὐσταλῆς γεγωνῶς ἐν γῆρα τὸν ὄγκον, ἀλλ' εἰς σάρκα περιπληθῆ καὶ βαρεῖαν ἐνδεδωκῶς.

4 Ἐνίοις μὲν οὖν ἤρεσκε ταῦτα πράττων, καὶ κατιόντες ἐθεῶντο τὴν φιλοτιμίαν αὐτοῦ καὶ τὰς ἀμίλλας, τοῖς δὲ βελτίστοις ὀρώσιν οἰκτείρειν ἐπήει τὴν πλεονεξίαν καὶ τὴν φιλοδοξίαν, ὅτι πλουσιώτατος ἐκ πένητος καὶ μέγιστος ἐκ μικροῦ γεγωνῶς ὄρον οὐκ οἶδεν εὐτυχίας, οὐδὲ θαυμαζόμενος ἀγαπᾷ καὶ ἀπολαύων ἐν ἡσυχίᾳ τῶν παρ-5 ὄντων, ἀλλ' ὥσπερ ἐνδεῆς ἀπάντων εἰς Καππα-δοκίαν καὶ τὸν Εὐξείνιον Πόντον ἄρας ἐκ θριάμβων καὶ δόξης ἐκφέρει τοσοῦτον γῆρας, Ἀρχελάφ καὶ Νεοπτολέμφ τοῖς Μιθριδάτου σατράπαις διαμα-χούμενος. αἱ δὲ πρὸς ταῦτα τοῦ Μαρίου δικαιο-λογίαι παντάπασιν ἐφαίνοντο ληρώδεις· ἔφη γὰρ ἐθέλειν τὸν υἱὸν ἀσκήσαι παρῶν αὐτὸς ἐπὶ στρατείας.

XXXV. Ταῦτα τὴν πόλιν ἐκ πολλῶν χρόνων ὑπὸλον γεγεννημένην καὶ νοσοῦσαν ἀνέρρηξεν,

CAIUS MARIUS

than became a man who had taken active part in so many wars and campaigns. This house, we are told, Cornelia bought for seventy-five thousand drachmas; and not long afterwards Lucius Lucullus purchased it for two million five hundred thousand. So quickly did lavish expenditure spring up, and so great an increase in luxury did life in the city take on. Marius, however, showing a spirit of keen emulation that might have characterized a youth, shook off old age and infirmity and went down daily into the Campus Martius, where he exercised himself with the young men and showed that he was still agile in arms and capable of feats of horsemanship, although his bulk was not well set up in his old age, but ran to corpulence and weight.

Some, then, were pleased to have him thus engaged, and would go down into the Campus and witness his emulation in competitive contests; but the better part were moved to pity at the sight of his greed and ambition, because, though he had risen from poverty to the greatest wealth and from obscurity to the highest place, he knew not how to set bounds to his good fortune, and was not content to be admired and enjoy quietly what he had, but as if in need of all things, and after winning triumphs and fame, was setting out, with all his years upon him, for Cappadocia and the Euxine sea, to fight it out with Archelaüs and Neoptolemus, the satraps of Mithridates. And the justification for this which Marius offered was thought to be altogether silly; he said, namely, that he wished to take part personally in the campaign in order to give his son a military training.

XXXV. These things brought to a head the secret disease from which the state had long been suffering,

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

εὐφρέστατον εὐρόντος ὄργανον Μαρίου πρὸς τὸν κοινὸν ὄλεθρον τὸ Σουλπικίου θράσος, ὃς διὰ τὰλλα πάντα θαυμάζων καὶ ζηλῶν τὸν Σατορνῖνον ἀτολμίαν ἐπεκάλει τοῖς πολιτεύμασιν αὐτοῦ
 2 καὶ μέλλησιν. αὐτὸς δὲ μὴ μέλλων ἑξακοσίουσ μὲν εἶχε περὶ αὐτὸν τῶν ἵππικῶν οἶον δορυφόρους, καὶ τούτους ἀντισύγκλητον ὠνόμαζεν, ἐπελθὼν δὲ μεθ' ὄπλων ἐκκλησιάζουσι τοῖς ὑπάτοις τοῦ μὲν ἑτέρου φυγόντος ἐξ ἀγορᾶς τὸν υἱὸν ἐγκαταλαβὼν ἀπέσφαξε, Σύλλας δὲ παρὰ τὴν οἰκίαν τοῦ Μαρίου διωκόμενος, οὐδενὸς ἂν προσδοκήσαντος, εἰσέπεσε· καὶ τοὺς μὲν διώκοντας ἔλαθε δρόμῳ παρενεχθέντας, ὑπ' αὐτοῦ δὲ Μαρίου λέγεται κατὰ θύρας ἑτέρας ἀσφαλῶς ἀποπεμφθεῖς διεκπε-
 3 σεῖν εἰς τὸ στρατόπεδον. αὐτὸς δὲ Σύλλας ἐν τοῖς ὑπομνήμασιν οὐ φησι καταφυγεῖν πρὸς τὸν Μάριον, ἀλλ' ἀπαλλαχθῆναι βουλευσόμενος ὑπὲρ ὧν Σουλπίκιος ἠνάγκαζεν αὐτὸν ἄκοντα ψηφίσασθαι, περισχῶν ἐν κύκλῳ ξίφεσι γυμνοῖς καὶ συνελάσας πρὸς τὸν Μάριον, ἄχρι οὐ προελθὼν ἐκεῖθεν εἰς ἀγοράν, ὡς ἠξίου ἐκεῖνοι, τὰς
 4 ἀπραξίας ἔλυσε. γενομένων δὲ τούτων ὃ τε Σουλπίκιος ἤδη κρατῶν ἐπεχειροτόνησε τῷ Μαρῖῳ τὴν στρατηγίαν, ὃ τε Μάριος ἐν παρασκευῇ τῆς ἐξόδου καθειστήκει, καὶ δύο χιλιάρχους ἐξέπεμψε παραληψομένους τὸ Σύλλα στρα-

CAIUS MARIUS

and Marius found a most suitable instrument for the destruction of the commonwealth in the audacity of Sulpicius, who was in all things an admirer and an imitator of Saturninus, except that he charged him with timidity and hesitation in his political measures. Sulpicius himself was not a man of hesitation, but kept six hundred of the Knights about him as a body-guard, which he called his anti-senate; he also made an attack with armed men upon the consuls as they were holding an assembly, and when one of them fled from the forum, Sulpicius seized his son and butchered him; Sulla, however, the other consul, as he was being pursued past the house of Marius, did what no one would have expected and burst into the house. His pursuers ran past the house and therefore missed him, and it is said that Marius himself sent him off safely by another door so that he came in haste to his camp. But Sulla himself, in his Memoirs, says he did not fly for refuge to the house of Marius, but withdrew thither in order to consult with Marius about the step which Sulpicius was trying to force him to take (by surrounding him with drawn swords and driving him to the house of Marius), and that finally he went from there to the forum and rescinded the consular decree for the suspension of public business, as Sulpicius and his party demanded.¹ When this had been done, Sulpicius, who was now master of the situation, got the command conferred upon Marius by vote of the people; and Marius, who was making his preparations for departure, sent out two military tribunes to take over the command of Sulla's army.

¹ These proceedings are much more clearly narrated in the Sulla, chapter viii. Cf. also Appian, Bell. Civ. i. 55.

τευμα. Σύλλας δὲ τοὺς στρατιώτας παροξύνας (ἦσαν δὲ τρισμυρίων καὶ πεντακισχιλίων οὐ μείους ὀπλίται) προήγαγεν ἐπὶ τὴν Ῥώμην. τοὺς δὲ χιλιάρχους, οὓς ἐπέπεμψε Μάριος, προσπεσόντες οἱ στρατιῶται διέφθειραν.

- 5 Πολλοὺς δὲ καὶ Μάριος ἐν Ῥώμῃ τῶν Σύλλα φίλων ἀνηρήκει, καὶ δούλους ἐλευθερίαν ἐκήρυττεν ἐπὶ συμμαχία· λέγονται δὲ τρεῖς μόνοι προσγενέσθαι. μικρὰ δ' ἀντιστάς εἰσελάσαντι τῷ Σύλλᾳ καὶ ταχέως ἐκβιασθεὶς ἔφυγε. τῶν δὲ περὶ αὐτόν, ὡς πρῶτον ἐξέπεσε τῆς πόλεως, διασπαρέντων, σκότους ὄντος εἰς τι τῶν ἐπαυλίων αὐτοῦ Σολώνιον
- 6 κατέφυγε. καὶ τὸν μὲν υἱὸν ἐπέμψεν ἐκ τῶν Μουκίου τοῦ πενθεροῦ χωρίων οὐ μακρὰν ὄντων τὰ ἐπιτήδεια ληψόμενον, αὐτὸς δὲ καταβάς εἰς Ὀστίαν, φίλου τινὸς Νουμερίου πλοῖον αὐτῷ παρασκευάσαντος, οὐκ ἀναμείνας τὸν υἱόν, ἀλλὰ Γράνιον ἔχων μεθ' αὐτοῦ τὸν πρόγονον ἐξέπλευσεν. ὁ δὲ 426 νεανίας, ὡς ἦλθεν εἰς τὰ χωρία τοῦ Μουκίου, λαμβάνων τι καὶ σκευαζόμενος ἡμέρας καταλαβούσης οὐ παντάπασι τοὺς πολεμίους ἔλαθεν, ἀλλ' ἦλθον ἱππεῖς ἐλαύνοντες καθ' ὑπόνοιαν ἐπὶ
- 7 τὸν τόπον· οὓς ὁ τῶν ἀγρῶν ἐπιμελητῆς προἰδόμενος ἔκρυψε τὸν Μάριον ἐν ἀμάξῃ κυάμους ἀγούσῃ, καὶ βούς ὑποζεύξας ἀπήντα τοῖς ἱππεῦσιν εἰς πόλιν ἐλαύνων τὴν ἄμαξαν. οὕτω δὲ πρὸς τὴν οἰκίαν τῆς γυναικὸς ὁ Μάριος διακομισθεὶς καὶ λαβὼν ὄσων ἐδεῖτο νυκτὸς ἐπὶ θάλασσαν ἦκε καὶ νεὼς ἐπιβάς εἰς Λιβύην πλεύσας ἀπεπέρασεν.

XXXVI. Ὁ δὲ πρεσβύτης Μάριος ὡς ἀνήχθη, πνεύματι φορῶ κομιζόμενος παρὰ τὴν Ἰταλίαν

CAIUS MARIUS

Sulla, however, called upon his soldiers (who were no fewer than thirty-five thousand legionaries) to resent this, and led them forth against Rome. His soldiers also fell upon the tribunes whom Marius had sent and slew them.

Marius, too, put to death many of Sulla's friends in Rome, and proclaimed freedom to the slaves if they would fight on his side. It is said, however, that only three of them joined his ranks, and after a feeble resistance to Sulla's entry into the city he was speedily driven out and took to flight.¹ As soon as he had made his escape from the city his companions were scattered, and since it was dark, he took refuge at one of his farmsteads, called Solonium. He also sent his son to get provisions from the estate of his father-in-law, Mucius, which was not far off, while he himself went down to the coast at Ostia, where a friend of his, Numerius, had provided a vessel for him. Then, without waiting for his son, but taking his step-son Granius with him, he set sail. The younger Marius reached the estate of Mucius, but as he was getting supplies and packing them up, day overtook him and he did not altogether escape the vigilance of his enemies; for some horsemen came riding towards the place, moved by suspicion. When the overseer of the farm saw them coming, he hid Marius in a waggon loaded with beans, yoked up his oxen, and met the horsemen as he was driving the waggon to the city. In this way young Marius was conveyed to the house of his wife, where he got what he wanted, and then by night came to the sea, boarded a ship that was bound for Africa, and crossed over.

XXXVI. The elder Marius, after putting to sea, was borne by a favouring wind along the coast of ¹ Cf. the Sulla, chapter ix.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- ἐφοβήθη Γεμίνιον τινα τῶν ἐν Ταρρακίῃ δυνατῶν ἐχθρὸν αὐτοῦ, καὶ ταῖς ναύταις προεῖπεν εἶργεσθαι Ταρρακίης. οἱ δὲ ἐβούλοντο μὲν αὐτῷ χαρίζεσθαι, τοῦ δὲ πνεύματος εἰς πελάγιον μεθίσταμένου καὶ κλύδωνα κατάγοντος πολὺν οὔτε τὸ πορθμεῖον ἐδόκει περικλυζόμενον ἀνθέξειν, τοῦ τε Μαρίου δυσφοροῦντος καὶ κακῶς ἔχοντος ὑπὸ ναυτίας μόλις ἀντιλαμβάνονται τῶν περὶ τὸ
- 2 Κίρκαιον αἰγιαλῶν. τοῦ δὲ χειμῶνος ἀύξανουμένου καὶ τῶν σιτίων ἐπιλειπόντων ἐκβάντες ἐπλάζοντο πρὸς οὐδένα σκοπὸν, ἀλλ' οἷα συμβαίνει ταῖς μεγάλαις ἀπορίαις αἰεὶ φεύγειν ἐκ τοῦ παρόντος ὡς χαλεπωτάτου καὶ τὰς ἐλπίδας ἔχειν ἐν τοῖς ἀδήλοις. ἐπεὶ πολεμία μὲν ἐκείνοις ἡ γῆ, πολεμία δὲ ἡ θάλασσα, φοβερὸν δὲ ἦν ἀνθρώποις περιπεσεῖν, φοβερὸν δὲ μὴ περιπεσεῖν δι' ἔνδειαν τῶν
- 3 ἀναγκαίων. οὐ μὴν ἀλλ' ὄψε που βοτῆρσιν ὀλίγοις ἐντυγχάνουσιν, οἱ δοῦναι μὲν οὐδὲν ἔσχον αὐτοῖς δεομένοις, γνωρίσαντες δὲ τὸν Μάριον ἐκέλευον ἀπαλλάττεσθαι τὴν ταχίστην· ὀλίγον γὰρ ἔμπροσθεν αὐτόθι κατὰ ζήτησιν αὐτοῦ συχ-
- 4 νοὺς ἰππέας ὀφθῆναι διεξελαύνοντας. ἐν παντὶ δὲ γεγρονῶς ἀπορίας, μάλιστα δὲ νηστεία τῶν περὶ αὐτὸν ἀπαγορευόντων, τότε μὲν ἐκτραπόμενος τῆς ὁδοῦ καὶ καταβαλὼν ἑαυτὸν εἰς ὕλην βαθεῖαν ἐπιπόνως διενυκτέρευσε. τῇ δ' ὕστεραία συνηγμένος ὑπ' ἐνδείας καὶ τῷ σώματι πρὶν ἐκλελῦσθαι παντάπασι χρῆσασθαι βουλόμενος ἐχώρει παρὰ τὸν αἰγιαλόν, ἐπιθαρσύνων τοὺς ἐπομένους καὶ

CAIUS MARIUS

Italy ; but since he was afraid of one Geminius, who was a powerful man in Terracina and an enemy of his, he told his sailors to keep clear of Terracina. The sailors were willing enough to do as he wished, but the wind veered round and blew towards the shore, bringing in a heavy surge, and it was thought that the vessel would not hold out against the beating of the waves ; besides, Marius was in a wretched plight from sea-sickness, and therefore they made their way, though with difficulty, to the coast near Circeii. Then, as the storm was increasing and their provisions were failing, they landed from the vessel and wandered about. They had no definite object in view, but, as is usual in cases of great perplexity, sought always to escape the present evil as the most grievous, and fixed their hopes on the unknown future. For the land was their enemy, and the sea an enemy as well ; they were afraid they might fall in with men, and they were afraid they might not fall in with men because they had no provisions. However, late in the day they came upon a few herdsmen ; these had nothing to give them in their need, but they recognized Marius and bade him go away as fast as he could ; for a little while before numerous horsemen had been seen riding about there in search of him. Thus at his wits' end, and, what was worst of all, his companions fainting with hunger, he turned aside for the while from the road, plunged into a deep forest, and there spent the night in great distress. But the next day, compelled by want, and wishing to make use of his strength before it failed him altogether, he wandered along the shore, trying to encourage his companions, and begging them not to

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- δεόμενος μὴ προαποκάμνειν τῆς τελευταίας ἐλπίδος, ἐφ' ἣν ἑαυτὸν φυλάττει μαντεύμασι παλαιοῖς 5 πιστεύων. νέος γὰρ ὢν ἔτι παντελῶς καὶ διατρίβων κατ' ἀγρὸν ὑποδέξασθαι τῷ ἱματίῳ καταφερομένην ἀετοῦ νεοττιὰν ἐπτὰ νεοττοὺς ἔχουσαν ἰδόντας δὲ τοὺς γονεῖς καὶ θαυμάσαντας διαπυθάνεσθαι τῶν μάντεων· τοὺς δὲ εἰπεῖν ὡς ἐπιφανέστατος ἀνθρώπων ἔσοιτο καὶ τὴν μεγίστην ἡγεμονίαν καὶ ἀρχὴν ἐπτάκις αὐτὸν λαβεῖν ἀναγκαῖον εἶη.
- 6 Ταῦτα οἱ μὲν ἀληθῶς τῷ Μαρίῳ συντυχεῖν οὕτω λέγουσιν· οἱ δὲ τοὺς τότε καὶ παρὰ τὴν ἄλλην φυγὴν ἀκούσαντας αὐτοῦ καὶ πιστεύσαντας ἀναγράψαι πρᾶγμα κομιδῇ μυθῶδες. ἀετὸς γὰρ οὐ τίκτει πλείον τῶν δυεῖν, ἀλλὰ καὶ Μουσαῖον ἐψεῦσθαι λέγουσιν εἰπόντα περὶ τοῦ ἀετοῦ, ὡς

Ἐρία μὲν τίκτει, δύο δ' ἐκλέπει, ἐν δ' ἀλεγίζει.¹

τὸ μέντοι πολλάκις ἐν τῇ φυγῇ καὶ ταῖς ἐσχάταις ἀπορίαις Μάριον εἰπεῖν ὡς ἄχρισ ἐβδόμης ὑπατείας πρόεισιν, ὁμολογούμενόν ἐστιν.

XXXVII. Ἦδη δὲ Μιντούρης, πόλεως Ἰταλικῆς, ὅσον εἴκοσι σταδίων ἀπέχοντες ὀρώσιν ἱππέων ἴλην πρόσωθεν ἐλαύνοντας ἐπ' αὐτοὺς καὶ κατὰ τύχην ὀλκάδας δύο φερομένας. ὡς οὖν ἕκαστος ποδῶν εἶχε καὶ ῥώμης καταδραμόντες ἐπὶ τὴν θάλασσαν καὶ καταβαλόντες ἑαυτοὺς προσενήχοντο ταῖς ναυσί. - καὶ λαβόμενοι τῆς ἐτέρας οἱ περὶ τὸν Γράνιον ἀπεπέρασαν εἰς τὴν

¹ *Ὅς τρία μὲν κτλ., as cited in Aristotle, Hist. An. vi. 6 (p. 563^a, 17).

CAIUS MARIUS

give up the struggle before his last hope could be realized, for which he was still reserving himself in reliance on ancient prophecies. When, that is, he was quite young and living in the country, he had caught in his cloak a falling eagle's nest, which had seven young ones in it; at sight of this, his parents were amazed, and made enquiries of the seers, who told them that their son would be most illustrious of men, and was destined to receive the highest command and power seven times.

Some say that this really happened to Marius; but others say that those who heard the story from him at this time and during the rest of his flight, believed it, and recorded it, though it was wholly fabulous. For, they say, an eagle does not lay more than two eggs at one time, and Musaeus also was wrong when, speaking of the eagle, he says:

“Three indeed she layeth, and two hatcheth, but one only doth she feed.”¹

However, that Marius, during his flight and in his extremest difficulties, often said that he should attain to a seventh consulship, is generally admitted.

XXXVII. But presently, when they were about twenty furlongs distant from Minturnae, an Italian city, they saw from afar a troop of horsemen riding towards them, and also, as it chanced, two merchant vessels sailing along. Accordingly, with all the speed and strength they had, they ran down to the sea, threw themselves into the water, and began to swim to the ships. Granius and his party reached one of the ships and crossed over to the opposite

¹ Fragment 21 (Kinkel, Ep. Graec. Frag., p. 229).

- 2 ἀντικρὺς νῆσον· Αἰναρία καλεῖται· αὐτὸν δὲ Μάριον βαρὺν ὄντα τῷ σώματι καὶ δυσμεταχείριστον οἰκέται δύο μόλις καὶ χαλεπῶς ὑπὲρ τῆς 427
θαλάττης ἐξάραυτες εἰς τὴν ἑτέραν ἔβεντο ναῦν, ἤδη τῶν ἰππέων ἐφεστῶτων καὶ διακελευομένων ἀπὸ γῆς τοῖς ναύταις κατάγειν τὸ πλοῖον ἢ τὸν Μάριον ἐκβαλόντας αὐτοὺς ἀποπλεῖν ὅπη χρῆζοιεν. ἰκετεύοντος δὲ τοῦ Μαρίου καὶ δακρύνοντος, οἱ κύριοι τῆς ὀλκάδος ὡς ἐν ὀλίγῳ πολλὰς ἐπ' ἀμφότερα τῆς γνώμης τροπὰς λαβόντες ὁμῶς ἀπεκρίναντο τοῖς ἰππεῦσι μὴ προέσθαι τὸν
- 3 Μάριον. ἐκείνων δὲ πρὸς ὀργὴν ἀπελασάντων αὐτοῖς ἑτέρων γενόμενοι λογισμῶν κατεφέροντο πρὸς τὴν γῆν· καὶ περὶ τὰς ἐκβολὰς τοῦ Λίριος ποταμοῦ διάχυσιν λιμνώδη λαμβάνοντος ἀγκύρας βαλόμενοι παρεκάλουν αὐτὸν ἐκβῆναι καὶ τροφὴν ἐπὶ γῆς λαβεῖν καὶ τὸ σῶμα θεραπεῦσαι κεκακωμένον, ἄχρι οὗ φορὰ γένηται· γίγνεσθαι δὲ τὴν εἰωθυῖαν ὥραν τοῦ πελαγίου μαραινομένου καὶ τῶν ἐλῶν αὔραν ἀναδιδόντων ἐπιεικῶς διαρκῆ.
- 4 ταῦτα πεισθεὶς ὁ Μάριος ἔπραττε· καὶ τῶν ναυτῶν ἐξελομένων αὐτὸν ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν κατακλιθεὶς ἐν τινὶ πόσῃ πορρωτάτῳ τοῦ μέλλοντος εἶχε τὴν διάνοιαν. οἱ δὲ εὐθύς ἐπιβάντες ἐπὶ τὴν ναῦν καὶ τὰς ἀγκύρας ἀναλαβόντες ἔφευγον, ὡς οὔτε καλὸν ἐκδοῦναι τὸν Μάριον αὐτοῖς οὔτε σώζειν ἀσφαλές. οὕτω δὲ πάντων ἔρημος ἀπολειφθεὶς πολὺν μὲν χρόνον ἀναυδος ἐπὶ τῆς ἀκτῆς ἔκειτο, μόλις δὲ πῶς ἀναλαβὼν ἑαυτὸν ἐπορεύετο ταλαιπώρως ἀνοδαίαις· καὶ διεξελθὼν ἔλη βαθέα καὶ
- 5 τάφρους ὕδατος καὶ πηλοῦ γεμούσας ἐπιτυγχάνει καλύβη λιμνουργοῦ γέροντος, ὃν περιπεσῶν ἰκέ-

CAIUS MARIUS

island, Aenaria by name ; Marius himself, who was heavy and unwieldy, two slaves with toil and difficulty held above water and put into the other ship, the horsemen being now at hand and calling out from the shore to the sailors either to bring the vessel to shore or to throw Marius overboard and sail whither they pleased. But since Marius supplicated them with tears in his eyes, the masters of the vessel, after changing their minds often in a short time, nevertheless replied to the horsemen that they would not surrender Marius. The horsemen rode away in a rage, and the sailors, changing their plan again, put in towards the shore ; and after casting anchor at the mouth of the Liris, where the river expands into a lake, they advised Marius to leave the vessel, take some food ashore with him, and recruit his strength after his hardships until a good wind for sailing should arise ; this usually arose, they said, when the wind from the sea died away and a tolerably strong breeze blew from the marshes. Marius was persuaded to follow their advice ; so the sailors carried him ashore, and he lay down in some grass, without the slightest thought of what was to come. Then the sailors at once boarded their vessel, hoisted anchor, and took to flight, feeling that it was neither honourable for them to surrender Marius nor safe to rescue him. Thus, forsaken of all men, he lay a long time speechless on the shore, but recovered himself at last and tried to walk along, the lack of any path making his progress laborious. He made his way through deep marshes and ditches full of mud and water, until he came to the hut of an old man who got his living from the water. At his feet Marius fell τευε γενέσθαι σωτήρα καὶ βοηθὸν ἀνδρός, εἰ διαφύγοι τὰ παρόντα, μείζονας ἐλπίδων ἀμοιβὰς ἀποδώσουτος. ὁ δὲ ἄνθρωπος, εἴτε πάλοι γινώσκων εἴτε πρὸς τὴν ὄψιν ὡς κρείττονα θαυμάσας, ἀναπαύσασθαι μὲν ἔφη δεομένῳ τὸ σκηνύδριον

 6 αὐτὸν ἐν τόπῳ μᾶλλον ἡσυχίαν ἔχοντι. τοῦ δὲ Μαρίου δεθθέντος τοῦτο ποιεῖν, ἀγαγὼν αὐτὸν εἰς τὸ ἔλος καὶ πτῆξαι κελεύσας ἐν χωρίῳ κοίλῳ παρὰ τὸν ποταμὸν ἐπέβαλε τῶν τε καλάμων πολλοὺς καὶ τῆς ἄλλης ἐπιφέρων ὕλης ὄση κούφη καὶ περιπέσειν ἀβλαβῶς δυναμένη.

XXXVIII. Χρόνου δὲ οὐ πολλοῦ διαγενομένου ψόφος αὐτῷ καὶ θόρυβος ἀπὸ τῆς καλύβης προσἔπεσεν. ὁ γὰρ Γεμίνιος ἐκ Ταρρακίνης ἔπεμψε πολλοὺς ἐπὶ τὴν δίωξιν, ὧν ἔνιοι κατὰ τύχην ἐκεῖ προσελθόντες ἐξεφόβουν καὶ κατεβόων τοῦ γέροντος ὡς ὑποδεδεγμένου καὶ κατακρυβόντος 2 πολέμιον Ῥωμαίων. ἐξαναστὰς οὖν ὁ Μάριος καὶ ἀποδυσάμενος καθῆκεν ἑαυτὸν εἰς τὴν λίμνην ὕδωρ παχὺ καὶ τελματῶδες ἔχουσαν. ὅθεν οὐ διέλαθε τοὺς ζητοῦντας, ἀλλ' ἀνασπασθεῖς βορ-βόρου κατάπλεως γυμνὸς εἰς Μιντούρνας ἀνήχθη καὶ παρεδόθη τοῖς ἄρχουσιν. ἦν γὰρ εἰς ἅπασαν ἤδη πόλιν ἐξενηνεγμένον παράγγελμα περὶ τοῦ Μαρίου δημοσίᾳ διώκειν καὶ κτείνειν τοὺς λα-3 βόντας. ὅμως δὲ βουλευσασθαι πρότερον ἐδόκει τοῖς ἄρχουσι καὶ κατατίθενται τὸν Μάριον εἰς οἰκίαν Φαννίας γυναικὸς οὐκ εὐμενῶς δοκούσης ἔχειν πρὸς αὐτὸν ἐξ αἰτίας παλαιᾶς.

CAIUS MARIUS

down and besought him to save and help a man who, in case he escaped his present perils, would recompense him beyond all his hopes. Then the man, who either knew Marius from of old or saw that in his face which won the regard due to superior rank, told him that if he merely wanted to rest, the cabin would suffice, but that if he was wandering about trying to escape pursuers, he could be hidden in a place that was more quiet. Marius begged that this might be done, and the man took him to the marsh, bade him crouch down in a hollow place by the side of the river, and threw over him a mass of reeds and other material which was light enough to cover without injuring him.

XXXVIII. Not much time had elapsed, however, when a din and tumult at the hut fell upon the ears of Marius. For Geminius had sent a number of men from Terracina in pursuit of him, some of whom had chanced to come to the old man's hut, and were frightening and berating him for having received and hidden an enemy of Rome. Marius therefore rose from his hiding-place, stripped off his clothes, and threw himself into the thick and muddy water of the marsh. Here he could not elude the men who were in search of him, but they dragged him out all covered with slime, led him naked to Minturnae, and handed him over to the magistrates there. Now, word had already been sent to every city that Marius was to be pursued by the authorities and killed by his captors. But nevertheless, the magistrates decided to deliberate on the matter first; so they put Marius for safe-keeping in the house of a woman named Fannia, who was thought to be hostile to him on account of an ancient grievance.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Ἦν γὰρ ἀνὴρ τῇ Φαννίᾳ Τιτίνιος· τούτου διαστᾶσα τὴν φερνὴν ἀπήτει λαμπρὰν οὔσαν. ὁ δὲ μοιχείαν ἐνεκάλει· καὶ γίνεται Μάριος ὑπατεύων 4 τὸ ἕκτον δικαστής. ἐπεὶ δὲ τῆς δίκης λεγομένης ἐφαίνεται καὶ τὴν Φαννίαν ἀκόλαστον γεγονέναι καὶ τὸν ἄνδρα τοιαύτην εἰδότα λαβεῖν καὶ συμβιώσαι πολὺν χρόνον, ἀμφοτέρους δυσχεράνας τὸν μὲν ἄνδρα τὴν φερνὴν ἐκέλευσεν ἀποδοῦναι, τῆς δὲ γυναικὸς ἀτιμίας ἕνεκα τῇ καταδίκη χαλ-κούς τέσσαρας προσετίμησεν.

5 Οὐ μὴν ἦ γε Φαννία τότε πάθος γυναικὸς 428 ἠδίκημένης ἔλαβεν, ἀλλ' ὡς εἶδε τὸν Μάριον, πορρωτάτῳ γενομένη τοῦ μνησικακεῖν, ἐκ τῶν παρόντων ἐπεμελεῖτο καὶ παρεθάρρυνεν αὐτόν. ὁ δὲ κάκεινὴν ἐπήνει καὶ θαρρεῖν ἔφασκε· σημεῖον γὰρ αὐτῷ γεγονέναι χρηστόν. ἦν δὲ τοιοῦτον.

Ὡς ἀγόμενος πρὸς τῇ οἰκίᾳ τῆς Φαννίας ἐγε-γόνει, τῶν θυρῶν ἀνοιχθεισῶν ὄνος ἔνδοθεν ἐχώρει δρόμῳ, πιόμενος ἀπὸ κρήνης ἐγγὺς ἀπορρευούσης· 6 προσβλέψας δὲ τῷ Μαρίῳ λαμυρόν τι καὶ γεγη-θὸς ἔστη πρῶτον ἐναντίον, εἶτα φωνὴν ἀφήκε λαμπρὰν καὶ παρεσκίρτησε παρ' αὐτόν ὑπὸ γαιρότητος. ἐξ οὗ συμβαλὼν ὁ Μάριος ἔφασκεν ὡς διὰ θαλάσσης αὐτῷ μᾶλλον ἢ διὰ γῆς ὑποδείκνυσι σωτηρίαν τὸ δαιμόνιον· τὸν γὰρ ὄνον οὐ προσέ-χοντα τῇ ξηρᾷ τροφῇ πρὸς τὸ ὕδωρ ἀπ' αὐτοῦ τραπέσθαι.

Ταῦτα διαλεχθεὶς τῇ Φαννίᾳ καθ' αὐτόν ἀνε-

CAIUS MARIUS

Fannia, that is, had been married to Titinnius; but she had separated herself from him and demanded back her dowry, which was considerable. Her husband, however, had accused her of adultery; and Marius, who was serving in his sixth consulship, had presided over the trial. When the case was pleaded, and it appeared that Fannia had been a dissolute woman, and that her husband had known this and yet had taken her to wife and lived with her a long time, Marius was disgusted with both of them, and decreed that the husband should pay back his wife's dowry, while at the same time he imposed upon the woman, as a mark of infamy, a fine of four coppers.

However, at the time of which I speak, Fannia did not act like a woman who had been wronged, but when she saw Marius, she put far from her all resentment, cared for him as well as she could, and tried to encourage him. Marius commended her, and said he was of good courage; for an excellent sign had been given him. And this sign was as follows.

When, as he was led along, he had come to the house of Fannia, the door flew open and an ass ran out, in order to get a drink at a spring that flowed hard by; with a saucy and exultant look at Marius the animal at first stopped in front of him, and then, giving a magnificent bray, went frisking past him triumphantly. From this Marius drew an omen and concluded that the Deity was indicating a way of escape for him by sea rather than by land; for the ass made no account of its dry fodder, but turned from that to the water.

After explaining this to Fannia, Marius lay down

παίετο, τὴν θύραν τοῦ δωματίου προσθεῖναι κελεύσας.

- XXXIX. Βουλευομένοις δὲ τοῖς ἄρχουσι καὶ συνέδροις τῶν Μιντουρνησίων ἔδοξε μὴ μέλλειν, ἀλλὰ διαχρήσασθαι τὸν ἄνδρα. καὶ τῶν μὲν πολιτῶν οὐδεὶς ὑπέστη τὸ ἔργον, ἰππεὺς δὲ Γαλάτης τὸ γένος ἢ Κίμβρος (ἀμφοτέρως γὰρ ² ἱστορεῖται) λαβὼν ξίφος ἐπεισῆλθεν αὐτῷ. τοῦ δὲ οἰκήματος ἐν ᾧ ἔτυχε μέρει κατακείμενος οὐ πάνυ λαμπρὸν φῶς ἔχοντας, ἀλλ' ὄντος ἐπισκίου, λέγεται τὰ μὲν ὄμματα τοῦ Μαρίου φλόγα πολλὴν ἐκβάλλοντα τῷ στρατιώτῃ φανῆναι, φωνὴν δὲ μεγάλην ἐκ τοῦ παλισκίου γενέσθαι, “Σὺ δὴ τολμᾶς, ἄνθρωπε, Γάϊον Μάριον ἀνελεῖν;” ἐξῆλθεν οὖν εὐθύς ὁ βάρβαρος φυγῇ, καὶ τὸ ξίφος ἐν μέσῳ καταβαλὼν ἐχώρει διὰ θυρῶν, τοῦτο μόνον βοῶν, “Οὐ δύναμαι Γάϊον Μάριον ἀποκτεῖναι.” ³ πάντας οὖν ἐκπληξίς ἔσχεν, εἴτα οἶκτος καὶ μετάνοια τῆς γνώμης καὶ κατάμεμψις ἑαυτῶν ὡς βούλευμα βεβουλευκότων ἄνομον καὶ ἀχάριστον ἐπ' ἀνδρὶ σωτῆρι τῆς Ἰταλίας, ᾧ μὴ βοηθῆσαι δεινὸν ἦν. “Ἴτω δ' οὖν ὅπη χρῆζει φυγᾶς, ἀνατλησόμενος ἀλλαχόθι τὸ μεμορμένον. ἡμεῖς δὲ εὐχώμεθα μὴ νεμεσῆσαι θεοὺς Μάριον ἄπορον καὶ γυμνὸν ἐκ τῆς πόλεως ἐκβαλοῦσιν.” ὑπὸ τοιούτων λογισμῶν εἰσπεσόντες ἀθρόοι καὶ περισχόντες ⁴ αὐτὸν ἐξῆγον ἐπὶ τὴν θάλασσαν. ἄλλου δὲ ἄλλο τι προθύμως ὑπηρετοῦντος καὶ σπευδόντων ἀπάντων ἐγένετο τριβῆ τοῦ χρόνου. τὸ γὰρ τῆς λεγομένης Μαρίας ἄλσος, ἧ σέβονται καὶ παραφυλάττουσι μῆθὲν ἐκεῖθεν ἐκκομισθῆναι τῶν

CAIUS MARIUS

to rest alone, after ordering the door of the apartment to be closed.

XXXIX. Upon deliberation, the magistrates and councillors of Minturnae decided not to delay, but to put Marius to death. No one of the citizens, however, would undertake the task, so a horseman, either a Gaul or a Cimbrian (for the story is told both ways), took a sword and went into to the room where Marius was. Now, that part of the room where Marius happened to be lying had not a very good light, but was gloomy, and we are told that to the soldier the eyes of Marius seemed to shoot out a strong flame, and that a loud voice issued from the shadows saying: "Man, dost thou dare to slay Caius Marius?" At once, then, the Barbarian fled from the room, threw his sword down on the ground, and dashed out of doors, with this one cry: "I cannot kill Caius Marius." Consternation reigned, of course, and then came pity, a change of heart, and self-reproach for having come to so unlawful and ungrateful a decision against a man who had been the saviour of Italy, and who ought in all decency to be helped. "So, then," the talk ran, "let him go where he will as an exile, to suffer elsewhere his allotted fate. And let us pray that the gods may not visit us with their displeasure for casting Marius out of our city in poverty and rags." Moved by such considerations, they rushed into his room in a body, surrounded him, and began to lead him forth to the sea. But although this one and that one were eager to do him some service and all made what haste they could, still there was delay. For the grove of Marica, as it was called, which was held in veneration, and from which nothing was permitted to be carried out that had ever εἰσκομισθέντων, ἐμποδῶν ἦν τῆς ἐπὶ θάλασσαν ὁδοῦ, καὶ κύκλῳ περιιόντας ἔδει βραδύνειν, ἄχρι οὗ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων τις ἐκβοήσας ἔφη μηδεμίαν ἄβατον μηδ' ἀπόρευτον ὁδὸν εἶναι δι' ἧς σώζεται Μάριος. καὶ πρῶτος αὐτὸς λαβὼν τι τῶν κομιζομένων ἐπὶ ναῦν διὰ τοῦ τόπου διεξῆλθε.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

XL. Τοιαύτη προθυμία ταχὺ πάντων συμπορισθέντων καὶ Βηλαίου τινὸς ναῦν τῷ Μαρίῳ παρασχόντος, ὃς ὕστερον πίνακα τῶν πράξεων ἐκείνων γραψάμενος ἀνέθηκεν εἰς τὸ ἱερόν ὅθεν ἐμβὰς ὁ Μάριος ἀνήχθη, τῷ πνεύματι φέροντι χρώμενος ἐφέρετό πως κατὰ τύχην πρὸς Αἰναρίαν τὴν νῆσον, ὅπου τὸν Γράνιον καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους φίλους εὐρῶν ἔπλει μετ' αὐτῶν ἐπὶ Λιβύης. ὕδατος δὲ ἐπιλιπόντος αὐτοὺς ἀναγκαίως Σικελία κατὰ τὴν Ἐρυκίνην προσέσχον. ἔτυχε δὲ περὶ τοὺς τόπους ἐκείνους ὁ Ῥωμαίων ταμίας παραφυλάσσων, καὶ μικροῦ μὲν αὐτὸν ἀποβάντα τὸν Μάριον εἶλεν, ἀπέκτεινε δὲ περὶ ἑκκαίδεκα τῶν ὑδρευομένων. Μάριος δὲ κατὰ σπουδὴν ἀναχθεὶς καὶ διαπεράσας τὸ πέλαγος πρὸς Μήνιγγα τὴν νῆσον, ἐνταῦθα διαπυθάνεται πρῶτον ὡς ὁ παῖς αὐτοῦ διασέσωσται μετὰ Κεθήγου καὶ πορεύονται πρὸς τὸν βασιλέα τῶν Νομάδων Ἰάμφαν, δεησόμενοι βοηθεῖν. ἐφ' οἷς μικρὸν ἀναπνεύσας ἐθάρρησεν ἀπὸ τῆς νήσου πρὸς τὴν Καρχηδοῦναιαν προσβαλεῖν. 429

Ἐστρατήγει δὲ τῆς Λιβύης τότε Σεξιτίλιος, ἀνὴρ Ῥωμαῖος, οὔτε φαῦλον οὔθεν οὔτε χρηστὸν ἐκ Μαρίου προειληφώς, ἀλλ' ὅσον ἀπ' οἴκτου τι προσδοκώμενος ὠφελήσειν. ἄρτι δὲ αὐτοῦ μετ'

CAIUS MARIUS

been carried in, lay between them and the sea as they were going, and if they went round it they must needs lose time. At last, however, one of the older men cried out and said that no path could forbid men's steps and passage if it were the path of safety for Marius. And the speaker himself was the first to take some of the things that were being carried to the ship and pass through the holy place.

XL. Everything was speedily provided through such readiness as this, and a certain Belaeus furnished a ship for Marius. Belaeus afterwards had a painting made representing these scenes, and dedicated it in the temple at the spot where Marius embarked and put to sea. Favoured by the wind he was borne along by chance to the island of Aenaria, where he found Granius and the rest of his friends, and set sail with them for Africa. But their supply of fresh water failed, and they were compelled to touch at Erycina in Sicily. In this neighbourhood, as it chanced, the Roman quaestor was on the watch, and almost captured Marius himself as he landed; he did kill about sixteen of his men who came ashore for water. Marius therefore put out to sea with all speed and crossed to the island of Meninx, where he first learned that his son had come off safely with Cethegus, and that they were on their way to Iampsas the king of Numidia, intending to ask his aid. At this news Marius was a little refreshed, and made bold to push on from the island to the neighbourhood of Carthage.

The Roman governor of Africa at this time was Sextilius, a man who had received neither good nor ill at the hands of Marius, but whom, as it was expected, pity alone would move to give him aid. Hardly, however, had Marius landed with a few companions, ὀλίγων ἀποβεβηκότος ὑπηρέτης ἀπαντήσας καὶ καταστάς ἐναντίον εἶπεν, "Ἀπαγορεύει σοι Σεξτίλιος ὁ στρατηγός, ὦ Μάριε, Λιβύης ἐπιβαίνειν εἰ δὲ μή, φησὶν ἀμυνεῖν τοῖς τῆς βουλῆς δόγμασιν, 4 ὡς Ῥωμαίων πολεμῖφ χρώμενος." ταῦτα ἀκούσαντα τὸν Μάριον ὑπὸ λύπης καὶ βαρυθυμίας ἀπορία λόγων ἔσχε, καὶ πολλὸν χρόνον ἡσυχίαν ἤγε δεινὸν εἰς τὸν ὑπηρέτην ἀποβλέπων. ἐρομένου δὲ ἐκείνου τί φράζει καὶ τί λέγει πρὸς τὸν στρατηγόν, ἀπεκρίνατο μέγα στενάξας, "Ἀγγελλε τοίνυν ὅτι Γάϊον Μάριον ἐν τοῖς Καρχηδόνας ἐρειπίοις φυγάδα καθεζόμενον εἶδες," οὐ κακῶς ἅμα τὴν τε τῆς πόλεως ἐκείνης τύχην καὶ τὴν ἑαυτοῦ μεταβολὴν ἐν παραδείγματος λόγφ θέμενος.

5 Ἐν τούτῳ δὲ Ἰάμφας ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Νομάδων ἐπαμφοτερίζων τοῖς λογισμοῖς ἐν τιμῇ μὲν ἤγε τοὺς περὶ τὸν νέον Μάριον, ἀπιέναι δὲ βουλομένους ἔκ τινος αἰὲ προφάσεως κατεῖχε, καὶ δῆλος ἦν ἐπ' οὐδενὶ χρηστῷ ποιούμενος τὴν ἀναβολήν. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ συμβαίνει τι τῶν εἰκότων αὐτοῖς πρὸς σωτηρίαν. ὁ γὰρ νέος Μάριος εὐπρεπῆς ὦν τὴν ὄψιν ἠνία τινὰ τῶν παλλακίδων τοῦ βασιλέως παρ' ἀξίαν πράττων· ὁ δὲ οἶκτος οὗτος 6 ἀρχὴ καὶ πρόφασις ἦν ἔρωτος. τὸ μὲν οὖν πρῶτον ἀπετρίβετο τὴν ἄνθρωπον· ὡς δὲ οὔτε φυγῆς ἑτέραν ὁδὸν ἐώρα καὶ τὰ παρ' ἐκείνης σπουδαιότερον ἢ πρὸς ἡδονὴν ἀκόλαστον διεπράττετο, δεξάμενος τὴν φιλοφροσύνην καὶ συνεκπεμφθεὶς ὑπ' αὐτῆς ἀπέδρα μετὰ τῶν φίλων καὶ διέφυγε πρὸς τὸν Μάριον. ἐπεὶ δὲ ἀλλήλους ἠσπάσαντο, πορευόμενοι παρὰ τὴν θάλασσαν ἐντυγχάνουσι σκορπίοις μαχομένοις· καὶ τὸ σημεῖον ἐφάνη τῷ

CAIUS MARIUS

when an official met him, stood directly in front of him, and said : "Sextilius the governor forbids thee, Marius, to set foot in Africa ; and if thou disobeyest, he declares that he will uphold the decrees of the senate and treat thee as an enemy of Rome." When he heard this, Marius was rendered speechless by grief and indignation, and for a long time kept quiet, looking sternly at the official. Then, when asked by him what he had to say, and what answer he would make to the governor, he answered with a deep groan : "Tell him, then, that thou hast seen Caius Marius a fugitive, seated amid the ruins of Carthage." And it was not inaptly that he compared the fate of that city with his own reversal of fortune.

Meanwhile Iampsas the king of Numidia, hesitating which course to take, did indeed treat the younger Marius and his party with respect, but always had some excuse for detaining them when they wished to go away, and clearly had no good end in view in thus postponing their departure. However, something occurred which, though not at all extraordinary, led to their escape. The younger Marius, that is, being a handsome fellow, one of the concubines of the king was pained to see him treated unworthily, and this feeling of compassion ripened into love. At first, then, Marius repelled the woman's advances ; but when he saw that there was no other way of escape for him and his friends, and that her behaviour was based on a genuine affection, he accepted her favours ; whereupon she helped him in getting off, and he ran away with his friends and made his escape to his father. After father and son had embraced one another, they walked along the sea-shore, and there they saw some scorpions fighting, which the elder

7 Μαρίῳ πονηρόν. εὐθύς οὖν ἀλιάδος ἐπιβάντες εἰς Κέρκιναν διεπέρων, νῆσον ἀπέχουσαν οὐ πολὺ τῆς ἠπείρου· καὶ τοσοῦτον ἔφθασαν ὅσον ἀνηγμένων αὐτῶν ἰππεῖς ὀράσθαι παρὰ τοῦ βασιλέως ἐλαύνοντας ἐπὶ τὸν τόπον ὅθεν ἀνήχθησαν. τοῦτον οὐδενὸς ἐλάττονα κίνδυνον ἔδοξεν ἐκφυγεῖν ὁ Μάριος.

XLI. Ἐν δὲ Ῥώμῃ Σύλλας μὲν ἠκούετο τοῖς Μιθριδάτου πολεμεῖν στρατηγοῖς περὶ Βοιωτίαν, οἱ δὲ ὑπατοὶ στασιάσαντες ἐχώρουν εἰς ὄπλα. καὶ μάχης γενομένης Ὀκτάβιος μὲν κρατήσας ἐξέβαλε Κίνναν ἐπιχειροῦντα τυραννικώτερον ἄρχειν, καὶ κατέστησεν αὐτ' αὐτοῦ Κορνήλιου Μερούλλαν ὑπατον, ὁ δὲ Κίννας ἐκ τῆς ἄλλης Ἰταλίας συναγαγὼν δύναμιν αὐτίς διεπολέμει

2 πρὸς αὐτούς. ταῦτα τῷ Μαρίῳ πυνθανομένῳ πλεῦσαι τὴν ταχίστην ἐφαίνετο· καὶ παραλαβὼν ἐκ τῆς Λιβύης Μαυρουσίων τινὰς ἰππότας καὶ τῶν ἀπὸ τῆς Ἰταλίας τινὰς καταφερομένων, συναμφοτέρους οὐ πλείονας χιλίων γενομένους, ἀνήχθη. προσβαλὼν δὲ¹ Τελαμῶνι τῆς Τυρρησίας καὶ ἀποβὰς ἐκήρυττε δούλοις ἐλευθερίαν· καὶ τῶν αὐτόθι γεωργούντων καὶ νεμόντων ἐλευθέρων κατὰ δόξαν αὐτοῦ συντρεχόντων ἐπὶ τὴν θάλασσαν ἀναπέιθων τοὺς ἀκμαιοτάτους ἐν ἡμέραις ὀλίγαις χεῖρα μεγάλην ἤθροισε καὶ τεσσαράκοντα ναῦς ἐπλήρωσεν.

3 Εἰδὼς δὲ τὸν μὲν Ὀκτάβιον ἄριστον ἄνδρα καὶ τῷ δικαιοτάτῳ τρόπῳ βουλόμενον ἄρχειν, τὸν δὲ Κίνναν ὑποπτόν τε τῷ Σύλλᾳ καὶ πολεμοῦντα τῇ

¹ ἀνήχθη. προσβαλὼν δὲ with Coraës: μεθ' ὧν ἀνήχθη, προσβαλὼν.

CAIUS MARIUS

Marius regarded as a bad omen. At once, therefore, they boarded a fishing-boat and crossed over to the island of Cercina, which was not far distant from the mainland; and scarcely had they put out from land when horsemen sent by the king were seen riding towards the spot whence they had sailed. It would seem that Marius never escaped a greater peril than this.

XLI. But in Rome, Sulla was heard of as waging war with the generals of Mithridates in Boeotia; and the consuls quarrelled and were resorting to arms. A battle took place, Octavius won the day, cast out Cinna, who was trying to be too arbitrary in his rule, and put Cornelius Merula in his place as consul; whereupon Cinna assembled a force from the other parts of Italy and made war anew upon Octavius and his colleague. When Marius heard of these things, he thought best to sail thither as fast as he could; so taking with him from Africa some Moorish horsemen, and some Italians who had wandered thither, the number of both together not exceeding a thousand, he put to sea. Putting in at Telamon in Tyrrhenia, and landing there, he proclaimed freedom to the slaves; he also won over the sturdiest of the free farmers and herdsmen of the neighbourhood, who came flocking down to the sea attracted by his fame, and in a few days had assembled a large force and manned forty ships.

And now, knowing that Octavius was a most excellent man and wished to rule in the justest way, but that Cinna was distrusted by Sulla and was making καθεστῶση πολιτεία, τούτῳ προσνέμειν ἑαυτὸν ἔγνω μετὰ τῆς δυνάμεως. ἔπεμψεν οὖν ἑπαγγελλόμενος ὡς ὑπάτῳ πάντα ποιήσειν τὰ προστασόμενα. δεξαμένου δὲ τοῦ Κίννα καὶ προσαγορεύσαντος αὐτὸν ἀνθύπατον, ῥάβδους δὲ καὶ 430 τᾶλλα παράσημα τῆς ἀρχῆς ἀποστείλαντος, οὐκ ἔφη πρέπειν αὐτοῦ ταῖς τύχαις τὸν κόσμον, ἀλλ' ἐσθῆτι φαύλῃ κεκρημένος καὶ κομῶν ἀφ' ἧς ἔφυγεν ἡμέρας, ὑπὲρ ἑβδομήκοντα γεγονῶς ἔτη βάδην προσῆει, βουλόμενος μὲν ἐλεεινὸς εἶναι, τῷ δὲ οἴκτῳ συμμέμικτο τὸ οἰκεῖον τῆς ὄψεως αὐτοῦ πλέον τὸ φοβερόν, καὶ διέφαινεν ἢ κατήφεια τὸν θυμὸν οὐ τεταπεινωμένον, ἀλλ' ἐξηγριωμένον ὑπὸ τῆς μεταβολῆς.

XLII. Ἀσπασάμενος δὲ τὸν Κίνναν καὶ τοῖς στρατιώταις ἐντυχῶν εὐθύς εἶχετο τοῦ ἔργου καὶ μεγάλην μεταβολὴν τῶν πραγμάτων ἐποίησε. πρῶτον μὲν γὰρ ταῖς ναυσὶ τὰ σιτηγὰ περικόπτων καὶ τοὺς ἐμπόρους ληϊζόμενος ἐκράτησε τῆς ἀγορᾶς, ἔπειτα τὰς παραλίους πόλεις ἐπιπλέων ἤρει. τέλος δὲ τὴν Ὀστίαν αὐτὴν λαβὼν ἐκ προδοσίας τὰ τε χρήματα διήρπασε καὶ τῶν ἀνθρώπων τοὺς πολλοὺς ἀπέκτεινε, καὶ γεφυρώσας τὸν ποταμὸν ἀπέκοψε κομιδῇ τὰς ἐκ θαλάσσης εὐπορίας τῶν 2 πολεμίων. ἄρας δὲ τῷ στρατῷ πρὸς τὴν πόλιν ἐχώρει καὶ τὸ καλούμενον Ἴανουκλον ὄρος κατέσχεν, οὐ τοσοῦτον ἀπειρία τοῦ Ὀκταβίου τὰ πράγματα βλάπτοντος, ὅσον ἀκριβεία τῶν δικαίων προἰεμένου τὰ χρειώδη παρὰ τὸ συμφέρον, ὅς war upon the established constitution, he determined to join Cinna with his forces. Accordingly he sent to Cinna and offered to obey him in everything as consul. Cinna accepted his offer, named him proconsul, and sent him the fasces and other insignia of the office. Marius, however, declared that these decorations were not suited to his fortunes, and in mean attire, his hair uncut since the day of his flight, being now over seventy years of age, came with slow steps to meet the consul. For he wished that men should pity him; but with his appeal for compassion there was mingled the look that was natural to him and now more terrifying than ever, and through his downcast mien there flashed a spirit which had been, not humbled, but made savage by his reverses.

580

CAIUS MARIUS

XLII. After greeting Cinna and presenting himself to Cinna's soldiers, he at once began his work and greatly changed the posture of affairs. In the first place, by cutting off the grain-ships with his fleet and plundering the merchants, he made himself master of the city's supplies; next, he sailed to the maritime cities and took them; and finally, he seized Ostia itself, which was treacherously surrendered to him, plundering the property there and killing most of its inhabitants, and by throwing a bridge across the river completely cut off the enemy from such stores as might come by sea. Then he set out and marched with his army towards the city, and occupied the hill called Janiculum. Octavius damaged his own cause, not so much through lack of skill, as by a too scrupulous observance of the laws, wherein he unwisely neglected the needs of the hour. For though many urged him to call the slaves to arms

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- γε πολλῶν κελεύοντων αὐτὸν ἐπ' ἐλευθερία καλεῖν τοὺς οἰκέτας οὐκ ἔφη δούλοις μεταδώσειν τῆς πατρίδος, ἧς Γάϊον Μάριον εἵργει τοῖς νόμοις
- 3 ἀμύνων. ἐπεὶ δὲ Μέτελλος υἱὸς Μετέλλου τοῦ στρατηγησάντος ἐν Λιβύῃ καὶ διὰ Μάριον ἐκπεσόντος ἦκεν εἰς Ῥώμην καὶ πολὺ τοῦ Ὀκταβίου στρατηγικώτερος ἐφαίνετο, καταλιπόντες οἱ στρατιῶται τὸν Ὀκτάβιον ἦκον ὡς ἐκείνον ἄρχειν δεόμενοι καὶ σώζειν τὴν πόλιν· εὐ γὰρ ἀγωνιεῖσθαι καὶ κρατήσκειν ἔμπειρον ἡγεμόνα καὶ δραστήριον λαβόντες. ἀγανακτήσαντος δὲ τοῦ Μετέλλου καὶ κελεύοντος ἀπιέναι πρὸς τὸν ὑπατον, ᾤχοντο πρὸς τοὺς πολεμίους. ὑπεξέστη δὲ καὶ Μέτελλος ἀπογνοὺς τὴν πόλιν.
- 4 Ὀκτάβιον δὲ Χαλδαῖοι καὶ θῦταί τινες καὶ σιβυλλισταὶ πείσαντες ἐν Ῥώμῃ κατέσχον, ὡς εὐ γενησομένων. ὁ γὰρ ἀνὴρ οὗτος δοκεῖ, τᾶλλα Ῥωμαίων εὐγνωμονέστατος γενόμενος καὶ μάλιστα δὴ τὸ πρόσχημα τῆς ὑπατείας ἀκολάκευτον ἐπὶ τῶν πατρίων ἐθῶν καὶ νόμων ὥσπερ διαγραμμάτων ἀμεταβόλων διαφυλάξας, ἄρρωστία τῇ περὶ ταῦτα χρήσασθαι, πλείονα συνῶν χρόνον ἀγύρταις καὶ μάντεσιν ἢ πολιτικοῖς καὶ πολεμικοῖς
- 5 ἀνδράσιν. οὗτος μὲν οὖν πρὶν εἰσελθεῖν τὸν Μάριον, ὑπὸ τῶν προπεμφθέντων ἀπὸ τοῦ βήματος κατασπασθεῖς ἐσφάττετο· καὶ λέγεται διάγραμμα Χαλδαϊκὸν ἐν τοῖς κόλποις αὐτοῦ φονευθέντος εὔρεθῆναι. καὶ τὸ πρᾶγμα πολλὴν ἀλογίαν εἶχε, τὸ δυεῖν ἡγεμόνων ἐπιφανεστάτων Μάριον μὲν under promise of freedom, he said he would not make bondmen members of the state from which he was trying to exclude Marius in obedience to the laws. Moreover, when Metellus (son of the Metellus who had commanded in Africa and had been banished through the intrigues of Marius) came to Rome, it was thought that he was far superior to Octavius as a general, and the soldiers forsook Octavius and came to him, entreating him to take the command and save the city; for they would make a good fight, they said, and win the victory if they got a tried and efficient leader. Metellus, however, was indignant at them and bade them go back to the consul; whereupon they went off to the enemy. Metellus also left the city, despairing of its safety.

CAIUS MARIUS

But Octavius was persuaded by certain Chaldaeans, sacrificers, and interpreters of the Sibylline books to remain in the city, on the assurance that matters would turn out well. For it would seem that this man, although he was in other ways the most sensible man in Rome, and most careful to maintain the dignity of the consular office free from undue influence in accordance with the customs of the country and its laws, which he regarded as unchangeable ordinances, had a weakness in this direction, since he spent more time with charlatans and seers than with men who were statesmen and soldiers. This man, then, before Marius entered the city, was dragged down from the rostra by men who had been sent on before, and butchered; and we are told that a Chaldaean chart was found in his bosom after he had been slain. Now, it seems very unaccountable that, of two most illustrious commanders, Marius ὀρθῶσαι τὸ μὴ καταφρονῆσαι μαντικῆς, Ὀκτάβιον δὲ ἀπολέσαι.

XLIII. Οὕτω δὴ τῶν πραγμάτων ἐχόντων ἡ βουλή συνελθοῦσα πρέσβεις ἐξέπεμψε πρὸς Κίνναν καὶ Μάριον, εἰσιέναι καὶ φείδεσθαι δεομένη τῶν πολιτῶν. Κίννας μὲν οὖν ὡς ὑπατος ἐπὶ τοῦ δίφρου καθήμενος ἐχρημάτιζε καὶ φιλανθρώπους ἀποκρίσεις ἔδωκε τοῖς πρέσβεσι, Μάριος δὲ τῷ δίφρῳ παρειστήκει φθεγγόμενος μὲν οὐδέν, ὑποδηλῶν δὲ αἰεὶ τῇ βαρύτητι τοῦ προσώπου καὶ τῇ στυγνότητι τοῦ βλέμματος ὡς εὐθύς ἐμπλήσων

2 φόνων τὴν πόλιν. ἐπεὶ δὲ ἀναστάντες ἐβάδιζον, Κίννας μὲν εἰσῆει δορυφορούμενος, Μάριος δὲ παρὰ ταῖς πύλαις ὑποστὰς εἰρωνεύετο πρὸς ὀργήν, φυγὰς εἶναι λέγων καὶ τῆς πατρίδος εἰργεσθαι κατὰ τὸν νόμον, εἰ δὲ χρήζοι τις αὐτοῦ παρόντος, ἐτέρα ψήφῳ λυτέον εἶναι τὴν ἐκβάλλουσαν, ὡς δὴ νόμιμός τις ὦν ἀνὴρ καὶ κατιῶν εἰς πόλιν

3 ἐλευθέραν. ἐκάλει δὴ τὸ πλῆθος εἰς ἀγοράν· καὶ 431 πρὸ τοῦ τρεῖς ἢ τέτταρας φυλάς ἐνεγκεῖν τὴν ψήφον ἀφείδαι τὸ πλάσμα καὶ τὴν φυγαδικὴν ἐκείνην δικαιολογίαν κατῆει, δορυφόρους ἔχων λογάδας ἐκ τῶν προσπεφοιτηκώτων δούλων, οὓς Βαρδυναίους προσηγόρευσεν. οὗτοι πολλοὺς μὲν ἀπὸ φωνῆς, πολλοὺς δὲ ἀπὸ νεύματος ἀνήρουν προστάσσοντος αὐτοῦ· καὶ τέλος Ἀγχάριον, ἄνδρα βουλευτὴν καὶ στρατηγικόν, ἐντυγχάνοντα τῷ Μαρῖῳ καὶ μὴ προσαγορευθέντα καταβάλλουσιν ἔμπροσθεν αὐτοῦ ταῖς μαχαίραις τύπτον-

4 τες. ἐκ δὲ τούτου καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ὅσους ἀσπασμένους μὴ προσαγορεύσειε μηδὲ ἀντασπάσαιτο, τοῦτο αὐτὸ σύμβολον ἦν ἀποσφάττειν εὐθύς ἐν should succeed by regarding divinations, but Octavius should be ruined.

CAIUS MARIUS

XLIII. Matters being at this pass, the senate met and sent a deputation to Cinna and Marius, begging them to enter the city and spare the citizens. Cinna, accordingly, as consul, seated on his chair of office, received the embassy and gave them a kindly answer; but Marius, standing by the consul's chair without speaking a word, made it clear all the while, by the heaviness of his countenance and the gloominess of his look, that he would at once fill the city with slaughter. After the conference was over they moved on towards the city. Cinna entered it with a body-guard, but Marius halted at the gates and angrily dissembled, saying that he was an exile and was excluded from the country by the law, and if his presence there was desired, the vote which cast him out must be rescinded by another vote, since, indeed, he was a law-abiding man and was returning to a free city. So the people were summoned to the forum; and before three or four of the tribes had cast their votes, he threw aside his feigning and all that petty talk about being an exile, and entered the city, having as his body-guard a picked band of the slaves who had flocked to his standard, to whom he had given the name of Bardyaei. These fellows killed many of the citizens at a word of command from him, many, too, at a mere nod; and at last, when Ancharius, a man of senatorial and praetorial dignity, met Marius and got no salutation from him, they struck him down with their swords before the face of their master. After this, whenever anybody else greeted Marius and got no salutation or greeting in return, this of itself was a signal for the man's ταῖς ὁδοῖς, ὥστε καὶ τῶν φίλων ἕκαστον ἀγωνίας μεστὸν εἶναι καὶ φρίκης ὁσάκις ἀσπασόμενοι τῷ Μαρίῳ πελάζοιεν· κτεινομένων δὲ πολλῶν Κίννας μὲν ἀμβλὺς ἦν καὶ μεστὸς ἤδη τοῦ φονεύειν, Μάριος δὲ καθ' ἑκάστην ἡμέραν ἀκμάζοντι τῷ

 θυμῷ καὶ διψῶντι διὰ πάντων ἐχώρει τῶν ὅπως 5 οὖν ἐν ὑποψία γεγονότων. καὶ πᾶσα μὲν ὁδός, πᾶσα δὲ πόλις τῶν διωκόντων καὶ κυνηγετούντων τοὺς ὑποφεύγοντας καὶ κεκρυμμένους ἔγεμεν.
 ἠλέγχετο δὲ καὶ ξενίας καὶ φιλίας πίστις οὐδὲν ἔχουσα παρὰ τὰς τύχας βέβαιον· ὀλίγοι γὰρ 6 παρὰ σφᾶς καταφυγόντας. ἄξιον οὖν ἄγασθαι καὶ θαυμάσαι τοὺς τοῦ Κορνούτου θεράποντας, οἱ τὸν δεσπότην ἀποκρύψαντες οἴκοι, νεκρὸν δέ τινα τῶν πολλῶν ἀναρτήσαντες ἐκ τοῦ τραχήλου καὶ περιθέντες αὐτῷ χρυσοῦν δακτύλιον ἐπεδείκνυον τοῖς Μαρίου δορυφόροις καὶ κοσμήσαντες ὡς ἐκείνου αὐτὸν ἔθαπτον. ὑπενόησε δὲ οὐδεὶς, ἀλλ' οὕτω λαθὼν ὁ Κορνούτος ὑπὸ τῶν οἰκετῶν εἰς Γαλατίαν διεκομίσθη.

XLIV. Χρηστῷ δὲ καὶ Μάρκος Ἀντώνιος ὁ ῥήτωρ φίλῳ χρησάμενος ἠτύχησεν. ὁ γὰρ ἄν-θρωπος ἦν μὲν πένης καὶ δημοτικός, ὑποδεξάμενος δὲ πρῶτον ἄνδρα Ῥωμαίων καὶ φιλοφρονούμενος ἐκ τῶν παρόντων, οἰκέτην ἔπεμψε πρὸς τινα τῶν ἐγγύς καπήλων ληψόμενον οἶνον. διαγενομένου δὲ ἐπιμελέστερον καὶ βελτίονα μετρήσαι κελεύοντος ἠρώτησεν ὁ κάπηλος ὃ τι παθὼν οὐχὶ τὸν 586

CAIUS MARIUS

slaughter in the very street, so that even the friends of Marius, to a man, were full of anguish and horror whenever they drew near to greet him. So many were slain that at last Cinna's appetite for murder was dulled and sated; but Marius, whose anger increased day by day and thirsted for blood, kept on killing all whom he held in any suspicion whatsoever. Every road and every city was filled with men pursuing and hunting down those who sought to escape or had hidden themselves. Moreover, the trust men placed in the ties of hospitality and friendship was found to be no security against the strokes of Fortune; for few there were, all told, who did not betray to the murderers those who had taken refuge with them. All the more worthy of praise and admiration, then, was the behaviour of the slaves of Cornutus. They concealed their master in his house; then they hung up by the neck one of the many dead bodies that lay about, put a gold ring on its finger, and showed it to the guards of Marius, after which they decked it out as if it were their master's body and gave it burial. Nobody suspected the ruse, and thus Cornutus escaped notice and was conveyed by his slaves into Galatia.

XLIV. Marcus Antonius also, the orator, found a faithful friend, but it did not save him. For this friend, who was a poor plebeian and had received into his house a leading man of Rome, whom he wished to entertain as well as he could, sent a slave to a neighbouring innkeeper to get some wine. As the slave tasted the wine more carefully than usual and ordered some of better quality, the innkeeper asked him what was the reason that he did not buy the

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- νέον, ὥσπερ εἴωθεν, ὠνεῖται καὶ δημοτικόν, ἀλλὰ 2 τοῦ σπουδαίου καὶ πολυτελοῦς. ἀπλῶς δέ πως ἐκείνου φράσαντος ὡς πρὸς συνήθη καὶ γνώριμον, ὅτι Μάρκον Ἀντώνιον ὁ δεσπότης ἐστὶ παρ' αὐτῷ κρυπτόμενον, ἀσεβῆς καὶ μιαρὸς ὧν ὁ κύπηλος ἅμα τῷ τὸν οἰκέτην ἀπελθεῖν αὐτὸς συνέτεινε πρὸς Μάριον ἤδη περὶ δεῖπνον ὄντα, καὶ
 3 ᾠροσαχθεῖς ὠμολόγησε παραδώσειν αὐτῷ τὸν Ἀντώνιον. ἀκούσας οὖν ἐκείνος ἐκκραγεῖν λέγεται μέγα καὶ ταῖς χερσὶν ὑφ' ἡδονῆς ἀνακροτῆσαι καὶ μικροῦ μὲν ἐδέησεν ἐξαναστὰς αὐτὸς ἐπὶ τὸν τόπον φέρεσθαι, τῶν δὲ φίλων κατασχόντων Ἀννιον ἔπεμπε καὶ στρατιώτας μετ' αὐτοῦ κελεύσας κατὰ τάχος τὴν κεφαλὴν τοῦ Ἀντωνίου κομίζειν.
 ὡς οὖν ἦκον ἐπὶ τὴν οἰκίαν, ὁ μὲν Ἄννιος ὑπέστη παρὰ τὰς θύρας, οἱ δὲ στρατιῶται διὰ κλιμάκων ἀναβάντες εἰς τὸ δωμάτιον καὶ θεασάμενοι τὸν Ἀντώνιον ἄλλος ἄλλον ἐπὶ τὴν σφαγὴν ἀνθ'
 4 ἑαυτοῦ παρεκάλει καὶ προὔβάλλετο. τοιαύτη δὲ τις ἦν, ὡς ἔοικε, τοῦ ἀνδρὸς ἢ τῶν λόγων σειρὴν καὶ χάρις, ὥστε ἀρξαμένου λέγειν καὶ παραιτεῖσθαι τὸν θάνατον ἄψασθαι μὲν οὐδεὶς ἐτόλμησεν οὐδὲ ἀντιβλέψαι, κάτω δὲ κύψαντες ἐδάκρυον ἅπαντες. διατριβῆς δὲ γενομένης ἀναβὰς ὁ Ἄννιος ὀρᾷ τὸν μὲν Ἀντώνιον διαλεγόμενον, τοὺς δὲ στρατιώτας ἐκπεπληγμένους καὶ κατακεκλημημένους ὑπ' αὐτοῦ· κακίστας οὖν ἐκείνους καὶ προσδραμῶν αὐτὸς ἀποτέμνει τὴν κεφαλὴν.
- 5 Κάτλος δὲ Λουτάτιος Μαρῖφ συνάρξας καὶ

CAIUS MARIUS

new and ordinary wine as usual, instead of wanting some that was choice and expensive. The slave, in his great simplicity, conscious that he was dealing with an old acquaintance, told him that his master was entertaining Marcus Antonius, who was concealed at his house. As soon as the slave had gone home, the innkeeper, who was an impious and pestilent fellow, hastened in person to find Marius, who was already at supper, and on being introduced, promised to betray Antonius to him. When Marius heard this, as we are told, a loud cry burst from his lips and he clapped his hands for joy; he actually came near springing from his seat and hurrying to the place himself, but his friends restrained him; so he sent Annius and some soldiers with him, ordering them to bring him the head of Antonius with all speed. Accordingly, when they were come to the house, Annius stopped at the door, while the soldiers climbed the stairs and entered the room. But when they beheld Antonius, every man began to urge and push forward a companion to do the murder instead of himself. So indescribable, however, as it would seem, was the grace and charm of his words, that when Antonius began to speak and pray for his life, not a soldier had the hardihood to lay hands on him or even to look him in the face, but they all bent their heads down and wept. Perceiving that there was some delay, Annius went upstairs, and saw that Antonius was pleading and that the soldiers were abashed and enchanted by his words; so he cursed his men, and running up to Antonius, with his own hands cut off his head.

Again, the friends of Catulus Lutatius, who had been a colleague of Marius in the consulship, and συνθριαμβεύσας ἀπὸ Κίμβρων, ἐπεὶ πρὸς τοὺς δεομένους ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ καὶ παραιτούμενους ὁ Μάριος τοσοῦτον μόνον εἶπεν, “Ἀποθανεῖν δεῖ,” κατακλεισάμενος εἰς οἶκημα καὶ πολλοὺς ἄνθρακας ἐκζωπυρήσας ἀπεπνίγη.

6 Ῥιπτουμένων δὲ τῶν σωμάτων ἀκεφάλων καὶ 432 πατουμένων ἐν ταῖς ὁδοῖς ἔλεος οὐκ ἦν, ἀλλὰ φρίκη καὶ τρόμος ἀπάντων πρὸς τὴν ὄψιν. ἡνία δὲ μάλιστα τὸν δῆμον ἢ τῶν καλουμένων Βαρδουαίων ἀσέλγεια. τοὺς γὰρ δεσπότας ἐν ταῖς οἰκίαις σφάττοντες ἤσχυνον μὲν αὐτῶν παῖδας, ἐμίγνυντο δὲ βία ταῖς δεσποίναις, ἀκατάσχετοι δὲ ἦσαν ἀρπάζοντες καὶ μαιφονοῦντες, ἕως οἱ περὶ Κίνναν καὶ Σερτώριον συμφρονήσαντες ἐπέθεντο κοιμωμένοις αὐτοῖς ἐν τῷ στρατοπέδῳ καὶ κατηκόντισαν ἅπαντας.

XLV. Ἐν τούτῳ δὲ ὥσπερ τροπαίας τινας ἀμειβούσης ἐφοίτων ἄγγελοι πανταχόθεν ὡς Σύλλας συνηρηκῶς τὸν Μιθριδατικὸν πόλεμον καὶ τὰς ἐπαρχίας ἀνειληφῶς ἐπιπλέοι μετὰ πολλῆς δυνάμεως. καὶ τοῦτο βραχείαν ἐπίσχεσιν ἐποίησε καὶ παῦλαν ὀλίγην ἀφάτων κακῶν, ὅσον οὐπω τὸν πόλεμον ἤκειν ἐπ’ αὐτοὺς οἰομένων. ὕπατος μὲν οὖν ἀπεδείχθη τὸ ἕβδομον Μάριος, καὶ προελθὼν αὐταῖς Καλάνδαις Ἰανουαρίαις, ἔτους ἀρχῇ, Σέξτον τινὰ Λουκῖνον κατεκρήμνισεν ὁ κακείνους καὶ τῇ πόλει τῶν αὐθις ἐδόκει κακῶν γεγονέναι σημείον μέγιστον.

CAIUS MARIUS

with him had celebrated a triumph over the Cimbri, interceded for him and begged Marius to spare his life; but the only answer they could get was: "He must die." Catulus therefore shut himself up in a room, lighted up a great quantity of charcoal, and was suffocated.

But headless trunks thrown into the streets and trampled under foot excited no pity, though everybody trembled and shuddered at the sight. The people were most distressed, however, by the wanton licence of the Bardyaei, as they were called, who butchered fathers of families in their houses, outraged their children, violated their wives, and could not be checked in their career of rapine and murder until Cinna and Sertorius, after taking counsel together, fell upon them as they were asleep in their camp, and transfixed them all with javelins.¹

XLV. Meanwhile, as if a change of wind were coming on, messengers arrived from all quarters with reports that Sulla had finished the war with Mithridates, had recovered the provinces, and was sailing for home with a large force. This gave a brief stay and a slight cessation to the city's unspeakable evils, since men supposed that the war was all but upon them. Accordingly, Marius was elected consul for the seventh time, and assuming office on the very Calends of January,² which is the first day of the year, he had a certain Sextus Lucinus thrown down the Tarpeian rock. This was thought to be a most significant portent of the evils that were once more to fall both upon the partisans of Marius and upon the city.

¹ Cf. the Sertorius, v. 5.

² 86 B.C.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- 2 Αὐτὸς δὲ ἤδη τοῖς τε πόνοις ἀπειρηκῶς καὶ ταῖς φροντίσιν οἶον ὑπέραντλος ὢν καὶ κατάπονος, τὴν ψυχὴν πρὸς τοσαύτην αὐθις ἐπίνοιαν νέου πολέμου καὶ καινῶν ἀγῶνων καὶ φόβων ὑπὸ ἐμπειρίας δεινῶν καὶ καμάτου τρέμουσαν οὐκ ἀνέφερε, λογιζόμενος ὡς οὐ πρὸς Ὀκτάβιον οὐδὲ Μερούλλαν σύγκλυδος ὀμίλου καὶ στασιώδους ὄχλου στρατηγούς ὁ κίνδυνος ἔσοιτο, Σύλλας δὲ ἐκεῖνος ἔπεισιν ὁ τῆς πατρίδος αὐτὸν ἐξελάσας πάλαι, νῦν δὲ Μιθριδάτην συνεσταλκῶς εἰς τὸν Εὐξείνιον Πόντον. ὑπὸ τοιούτων θραυόμενος λογισμῶν, καὶ τὴν μακρὰν ἄλην αὐτοῦ καὶ φυγὰς καὶ κινδύνους διὰ γῆς καὶ θαλάττης ἐλαυνομένου λαμβάνων πρὸ ὀφθαλμῶν, εἰς ἀπορίας ἐνέπιπτε δεινὰς καὶ νυκτερινὰ δείματα καὶ ταραχώδεις ὀνείρους, αἰεὶ τινος ἀκούειν φθεγγομένου δοκῶν δειναὶ γὰρ κοῖται καὶ ἀποιοχόμενιο λέοντος.

- μάλιστα δὲ πάντων φοβούμενος τὰς ἀγρυπνίας ἐνέβαλεν εἰς πότους ἑαυτὸν καὶ μέθας ἄωρους καὶ παρ' ἡλικίαν, ὥσπερ ἀπόδρασιν τῶν φροντίδων 4 τὸν ὕπνον μηχανώμενος. τέλος δὲ ὡς ἤκέ τις ἀπαγγέλλων ἀπὸ θαλάσσης, νέοι προσπίπτοντες αὐτῷ φόβοι, τὰ μὲν δέει τοῦ μέλλοντος, τὰ δὲ ὥσπερ ἄχθει καὶ κόρῳ τῶν παρόντων, ῥοπῆς βραχείας ἐπιγενομένης εἰς νόσον κατηνέχθη πλευρίτιν, ὡς ἱστορεῖ Ποσειδώνιος ὁ φιλόσοφος, αὐτὸς εἰσελ-

CAIUS MARIUS

But Marius himself, now worn out with toils, deluged, as it were, with anxieties, and wearied, could not sustain his spirits, which shook within him as he again faced the overpowering thought of a new war, of fresh struggles, of terrors known by experience to be dreadful; and of utter weariness. He reflected, too, that it was not Octavius or Merula in command of a promiscuous throng and a seditious rabble against whom he was now to run the hazard of war, but that the famous Sulla was coming against him, the man who had once ejected him from the country, and had now shut Mithridates up to the shores of the Euxine Sea. Tortured by such reflections, and bringing into review his long wandering, his flights, and his perils, as he was driven over land and sea, he fell into a state of dreadful despair, and was a prey to nightly terrors and harassing dreams, wherein he would ever seem to hear a voice saying :—

“Dreadful, indeed, is the lion’s lair, even though it be empty.”¹

And since above all things he dreaded the sleepless nights, he gave himself up to drinking-bouts and drunkenness at unseasonable hours and in a manner unsuited to his years, trying thus to induce sleep as a way of escape from his anxious thoughts, And finally, when one came with tidings from the sea, fresh terrors fell upon him, partly because he feared the future, and partly because he was wearied to satiety by the present, so that it needed only a slight impulse to throw him into a pleurisy, as Poseidonius the philosopher relates, who says that he

¹ A hexameter verse of unknown authorship.

θείν και διαλεχθῆναι περὶ ὧν ἐπρέσβευεν ἤδη 5 νοσοῦντι φάσκων αὐτῷ. Γάϊος δέ τις Πείσων, ἀνὴρ ἱστορικός, ἱστορεῖ τὸν Μάριον ἀπὸ δείπνου περιπατοῦντα μετὰ τῶν φίλων ἐν λόγοις γενέσθαι περὶ τῶν καθ' ἑαυτὸν πραγμάτων, ἄνωθεν ἀρξά-μενον· καὶ τὰς ἐπ' ἀμφοτέρα πολλάκις μεταβολὰς ἀφηγησάμενον εἰπεῖν ὡς οὐκ ἔστι νουν ἔχοντος ἀνδρὸς ἔτι τῇ τύχῃ πιστεύειν ἑαυτόν· ἐκ δὲ τού-6 του τοὺς παρόντας ἀσιγασάμενον καὶ κατακλιθέντα συνεχῶς ἡμέρας ἑπτὰ τελευτῆσαι. τινὲς δὲ τὴν φιλοτιμίαν αὐτοῦ φασιν ἐν τῇ νόσῳ παντά-πασιν ἀποκαλυφθεῖσαν εἰς ἄτοπον ἐξοκεῖλαι παρακοπήν, οἰομένου τὸν Μιθριδατικὸν στρατη-γεῖν πόλεμον, εἶτα, ὥσπερ ἐπ' αὐτῶν εἰώθει τῶν ἀγῶνων, σχήματα παντοδαπὰ καὶ κινήματα σώματος μετὰ συντόνου κραυγῆς καὶ πυκνῶν 7 ἀλαλαγμάτων ἀποδιδόντος. οὕτως δεινὸς αὐτῷ καὶ δυσπαραμύθητος ἐκ φιλαρχίας καὶ ζηλοτυπίας ἔρωσ ἐντετῆκει τῶν πράξεων ἐκείνων. διὸ ἔτη μὲν ἑβδομήκοντα βεβιωκώς, ὑπατος δὲ πρῶτος ἀνθρώπων ἑπτάκις ἀνηγορευμένος, οἶκόν τε καὶ πλοῦτον ἀρκούντα βασιλείαις ὁμοῦ πολλαῖς κεκτημένος, ὠδύρετο τὴν ἑαυτοῦ τύχην ὡς ἐνδεὴς 433 καὶ ἀτελεῆς ὧν ἐπόθει προαποθνήσκων.

XLVI. Πλάτων μὲν οὖν ἤδη πρὸς τῷ τελευτᾷ γενόμενος ὕμνει τὸν αὐτοῦ δαίμονα καὶ τὴν τύχην, ὅτι πρῶτον μὲν ἄνθρωπος, εἶτα Ἕλληνας, οὐ βάρβαρος οὐδὲ ἄλογον τῇ φύσει θηρίον γένοιτο, πρὸς δὲ τούτοις, ὅτι τοῖς Σωκράτους χρόνοις ἀπήνητησεν went in personally and conversed with Marius on the subjects of his embassy after Marius had fallen ill. But a certain Caius Piso, an historian, relates that Marius, while walking about with his friends after supper, fell to talking about the events of his life, beginning with his earliest days, and after recounting his frequent reversals of fortune, from good to bad and from bad to good, said that it was not the part of a man of sense to trust himself to Fortune any longer; and after this utterance bade his friends farewell, kept his bed for seven days consecutively, and so died. Some, however, say that his ambitious nature was completely revealed during his illness by his being swept into a strange delusion. He thought that he had the command in the Mithridatic war, and then, just as he used to do in his actual struggles, he would indulge in all sorts of attitudes and gestures, accompanying them with shrill cries and frequent calls to battle. So fierce and inexorable was the passion for directing that war which had been instilled into him by his envy and lust of power. And therefore, though he had lived to be seventy years old, and was the first man to be elected consul for the seventh time, and was possessed of a house and wealth which would have sufficed for many kingdoms at once, he lamented his fortune, in that he was dying before he had satisfied and completed his desires.

CAIUS MARIUS

XLVI. Plato, however, when he was now at the point of death, lauded his guardian genius and Fortune because, to begin with, he had been born a man and not an irrational animal; again, because he was a Greek and not a Barbarian; and still again, because his birth had fallen in the times of Socrates.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- 2 ἡ γένεσις αὐτοῦ. καὶ νῆ Δία τὸν Ταρσέα λέγουσιν Ἄντίπατρον ὡσαύτως ὑπὸ τὴν τελευταίην ἀναλογιζόμενον ὡν τύχοι μακαρίων μηδὲ τῆς εἰς Ἀθήνας οἰκοθεν εὐπλοίας ἐπιλαθέσθαι, καθάπερ φιλοχρήστου τῆς τύχης ἅπασαν δόσιν εἰς μεγάλην χάριν τιθέμενον καὶ σώζοντα τῇ μνήμῃ διὰ τέλους, ἧς οὐδέν ἐστιν ἀνθρώπῳ ταμειῶν ἀγαθῶν βε-
- 3 βαιότερον. τοὺς δὲ ἀμνήμονας καὶ ἀνοήτους ὑπεκρεῖ τὰ γιγνόμενα μετὰ τοῦ χρόνου· διὸ μηθὲν στέγοντες μηδὲ διατηροῦντες αἰεὶ κενοὶ μὲν ἀγαθῶν, πλήρεις δὲ ἐλπίδων πρὸς τὸ μέλλον ἀποβλέπουσι, τὸ παρὸν προϊέμενοι. καίτοι τὸ μὲν ἂν ἡ τύχη κωλύσαι δύναίτο, τὸ δὲ ἀναφαίρετόν ἐστιν·
- 4 ἀλλ' ὅμως τοῦτο τῆς τύχης ὡς ἀλλότριον ἐκβάλλοντες ἐκεῖνο τὸ ἄδηλον ὀνειρώπτουσι, εἰκότα πάσχοντες. πρὶν γὰρ ἐκ λόγου καὶ παιδείας ἔδραν ὑποβαλέσθαι καὶ κρηπίδα τοῖς ἔξωθεν ἀγαθοῖς, συνάγοντες αὐτὰ καὶ συμφοροῦντες ἐμπλήσαι τῆς ψυχῆς οὐ δύνανται τὸ ἀκόρεστον.
- 5 Ἀποθνήσκει δ' οὖν Μάριος ἡμέρας ἑπτακαίδεκα τῆς ἐβδόμης ὑπατείας ἐπιλαβῶν. καὶ μέγα ἔσχε παραντίκα τὴν Ῥώμην χάσμα καὶ θάρσος ὡς χαλεπῆς τυραννίδος ἀπηλλαγμένην· ὀλίγαις δὲ ἡμέραις ἦσθοντο νέον ἀντηλλαγμένοι καὶ ἀκμαζόντα ἀντὶ πρεσβύτου δεσπότην· τοσαύτην ὁ υἱὸς αὐτοῦ Μάριος ὠμότητα καὶ πικρίαν ἀπεδείξατο, τοὺς ἀρίστους καὶ δοκιμωτάτους ἀναιρῶν.
- 6 δόξας δὲ καὶ τολμητῆς καὶ φιλοκίνδυνος εἶναι

CAIUS MARIUS

And indeed they say that Antipater of Tarsus, when he was in like manner near his end and was enumerating the blessings of his life, did not forget to mention his prosperous voyage from home to Athens, just as though he thought that every gift of a benevolent Fortune called for great gratitude, and kept it to the last in his memory, which is the most secure storehouse of blessings for a man. Unmindful and thoughtless persons, on the contrary, let all that happens to them slip away as time goes on; therefore, since they do not hold or keep anything, they are always empty of blessings, but full of hopes, and are looking away to the future while they neglect the present. And yet the future may be prevented by Fortune, while the present cannot be taken away; nevertheless these men cast aside the present gift of Fortune as something alien to them, while they dream of the future and its uncertainties. And this is natural. For they assemble and heap together the external blessings of life before reason and education have enabled them to build any foundation and base for these things, and therefore they cannot satisfy the insatiable appetite of their souls.

So, then, Marius died, seventeen days after entering upon his seventh consulship. And immediately Rome was filled with great rejoicing and a confident hope that she was rid of a grievous tyranny; but in a few days the people perceived that they had got a new and vigorous master in exchange for the old one; such bitterness and cruelty did the younger Marius display, putting to death the best and most esteemed citizens. He got the reputation of being bold and fond of danger in fighting his enemies, and πρὸς τοὺς πολεμίους ἐν ἀρχῇ παῖς Ἄρεος ὠνομάζετο, ταχὺ δὲ τοῖς ἔργοις ἐλεγχόμενος αὐθις Ἄφροδίτης υἱὸς ἐκαλεῖτο. τέλος δὲ κατακλεισθεὶς εἰς Πραϊνεστὸν ὑπὸ Σύλλα καὶ πολλὰ φιλοψυχήσας μάτην, ὡς ἦν ἄφυκτα τῆς πόλεως ἀλίσκομένης, αὐτὸς αὐτὸν ἀπέκτεινεν.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

CAIUS MARIUS

in the beginning was called a son of Mars ; but his deeds soon showed what he really was, and he was called instead a son of Venus. And finally he was shut up in Praeneste by Sulla, and after many vain attempts to save his life, when the city was captured and he could not escape, he slew himself.¹

¹ See the Sulla, xxxii. 1.

A PARTIAL DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

A PARTIAL DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

A

Actium, 279, 293, 297, a promontory of Acarnania in northern Greece, at the entrance of the Ambraciot gulf.

Aeacides, 59, 347, king of Epeirus and father of Pyrrhus. He was driven from his kingdom in 317 B.C., and recalled in 313, during which year he was defeated and slain by the forces of Cassander.

Aegae, 433, a town in central Macedonia, the burial place of the royal line.

Aemilius, 411, Quintus Aemilius Papus, consul in 282 and 278 B.C. and censor in 275. In all these offices he had Calus Fabricius as colleague.

Aëropus, the Macedonian, 47, 369, not otherwise known.

Agathocles (1), 61, 369, 387 f., tyrant of Syracuse, 210–289 B.C. He also assumed the title of King of Sicily.

Agathocles (2), 77, 117 f., a son of Lysimachus the king of Thrace, sent against Demetrius in 287 B.C. murdered in 284.

Agrippa, 215, 285 f., 305, 331 f., Marcus Vipsanius A., fellow-student of Octavius Caesar at Apollonia, and an intimate friend. He was one of the leading men of the Augustan age. He lived 63–12 B.C.

Agrippina, 333, Agrippina the Younger, daughter of Germanicus and grand-daughter of Agrippa. In 28 A.D. she married Domitius Ahenobarbus, who died in 40. In 49 she married her uncle, the emperor Claudius.

Ahenobarbus, 333, see Domitius (3).

Albinus, 483, Spurius Postumius A., was consul in 110 B.C. and conducted the war against Jugurtha unsuccessfully. He was condemned for treasonable relations with Jugurtha.

Alcyoneus, 459 f., a son of Antigonus Gonatas, not otherwise mentioned.

Alexander (1), 355, Roxana's son by Alexander the Great, born in 323 B.C., and taken to Macedonia by Antipater in 320. On the death of Antipater in 319, Roxana fled with her son to Epeirus, where he was betrothed to Deldameia, the daughter of King Aeacides. After his restoration to Macedonia by Aeacides in 317, he was imprisoned with his mother by Cassander, and both were murdered in 311.

Alexander (2), 87–91, 341, 361f., 381, a son of Cassander by Thesalonice, the sister of Alexander the Great.

Alexander (3), 371, a son of Pyrrhus and Lanassa, not otherwise mentioned.

Alexander (4), 135, a son of Demetrius and Deldameia, not otherwise known.

Alexander (5), 23, son of Polysperchon, was sent by his father in

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

- 318 B.C. to wrest Athens from the power of Cassander (see the Phocion, xxxiii.). He was assassinated at Sicyon in 314.
- Alexander (6), 219, 263, son of Antony and Cleopatra, graced the triumph of Octavius Caesar at Rome, and was there reared by Octavia (see the Antony, lxxxvii. 1).
- Alexander (7), 245, 249, of Antioch, a friend of Antony, not otherwise known.
- Alexander of Myndus (in Caria), 507, a Greek writer on zoölogy, of uncertain date.
- Alexas the Laodicean, 303 f., not otherwise known.
- Alexas the Syrian, 289, not otherwise known.
- Amanus, 132 f., a range of mountains between Cilicia and Syria, at the head of the gulf of Issus.
- Amorgus, 29, an island in the Aegean Sea, south-east of Naxos.
- Amphissa, 199, the chief town of the Ozolian Locrians, about seven miles west of Delphi.
- Ancharia, 207, first wife of Caius Octavius. Plutarch erroneously identifies her daughter Octavia with the Octavia who was the daughter of Atia.
- Anthesterion, 61 f., the eighth month of the Attic calendar, answering to parts of February and March.
- Anticyra, 295, a town in Phocis, on a bay of the Corinthian gulf.
- Antigenidas, 5, a celebrated Theban flute-player and poet in the times of Alexander the Great.
- Antigone, 357 f., 369, daughter of Berenicé and first wife of Pyrrhus.
- Antigonus (1), 7-77, 333 f., 367, 431, surnamed the One-eyed, king of Asia, father of Demetrius Poliorcetes. He fell in the battle of Ipsus (301 B.C.).
- Antigonus (2), 99, 111, 129, 133 f., 431 f., 445 f., 449 f., 459 f., son of Demetrius Poliorcetes, king of Macedonia 283-239 B.C., Antigonus Gonatas.
- Antigonus the Jew, 219, king of Judaea. His rival, Herod, was made king of Judaea by the Roman senate, through the influence of Antony. Antigonus was then defeated and captured by Herod (with the assistance of the Roman general Sosius), and delivered over to Antony, who had him executed (37 B.C.).
- Antiochus (1), 71, 77, 93-97, 129 f., Antiochus I., son of Seleucus and king of Syria, killed in battle with the Gauls 261 B.C.
- Antiochus (2), of Commagené, 213 f., established in power by Pompey (64 B.C.), and a supporter of Pompey against Caesar. He died shortly before 31 B.C.
- Antipater (1), 33, 91, 335, regent of Macedonia during Alexander's absence in the East, and of Alexander's empire after the murder of Perdiccas in 321 B.C. He died in 319.
- Antipater (2), 87, 91, 361, son of Cassander by Thessalonice the sister of Alexander the Great. After the death of his brother Alexander, Antipater fled for refuge to Lysimachus, who had him put to death.
- Antipater of Tarsus, 597, a Stoic philosopher who was flourishing in 144 B.C.
- Antiphon, 197. It is uncertain which of the many men of this name is meant.
- Antonia (1), 333, elder daughter of Antony and Octavia. Her son by Lucius Domitius Ahenobarbus Cneius Domitius, was the father of Nero.
- Antonia (2), 333, younger daughter of Antony and Octavia. She lived to see her grandson Caligula emperor in 37 A.D.
- Antonius (1), 587 f., Marcus Antonius the orator, grandfather of the triumvir, 143-87 B.C. He was consul in 99, censor in 97, and a partisan of Sulla. Cicero often speaks of him as one of the greatest of Roman orators.
- Antonius (2), 139, Marcus Antoninus Creticus, father of the triumvir.

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

- In 74 B.C. he was given command of the Roman fleet in order to clear the Mediterranean of pirates but he failed ignominiously and was defeated in an attack upon Crete. His surname was given him in derision. He was avaricious and rapacious.
- Antonius (3), 157, Caius Antonius, uncle of the triumvir. He served under Sulla in the Mithridatic war, and was expelled from the senate for plundering the allies. He was Cicero's colleague in the consulship in 63 B.C., and in 59 was convicted of extortion in his province of Macedonia, in spite of the defence of his conduct by Cicero.
- Antonius (4), 171, 185, Caius Antonius, elder brother of the triumvir. After his praetorship he received the province of Macedonia, where he was put to death in 42 B.C. See the Brutus, xxv.-xxviii.
- Antonius (5), 171, 203, Lucius Antonius, younger brother of the triumvir. He was consul in 41 B.C., and was besieged by Octavius Caesar in Perusia, and compelled to surrender. His life was spared, however, and he was even given command in Spain. Nothing more is heard of him.
- Antonius (6), 331, 333, Julius Antonius, younger son of the triumvir by Fulvia. He received great favours from Augustus, and was consul in 10 B.C. But in consequence of an intrigue with Julia, the daughter of Augustus, he was condemned to death in 2 B.C., and took his own life.
- Antyllus, 301, 319, 331 (cf. 199 f.), a name given by Greek writers to Marcus Antonius, the elder son of the triumvir by Fulvia. The name is probably a corruption of the diminutive Antonillus. According to Dion Cassius (li. 8, 4), Antony sent Antyllus to appease Octavius Caesar after the battle of Actium.
- Apama the Persian, 77, daughter of Spitamenes the Bactrian prince, and married to Seleucus in 325 B.C., when Alexander and his principal officers took oriental wives.
- Apelles, 53, the most celebrated of Greek painters. He flourished at the courts of Philip and Alexander of Macedon.
- Apemantus, 297 f., not otherwise known.
- Apollonia, 171, an ancient Greek city of Illyria. Towards the end of the Roman republic it became a famous seat of learning.
- Aquae Sextiae, 511, a Roman colony in southern Gaul, founded in 122 B.C., and named from its hot and cold springs, and from its founder, the pro-consul Sextius Calvinus. It is the modern Aix.
- Aquillius, 499, Manius A., consul in 101 B.C., and in 88 one of the consular legates to prosecute the war against Mithridates. He fell into the hands of Mithridates, who put him to a cruel death.
- Archidamia, 439, mentioned only in this connection.
- Archidamus, 85, Archidamus IV., king of Sparta. It was in 296 B.C. that he was defeated by Demetrius.
- Archilochus, 87, 213, of Paros, one of the earliest Ionian lyric poets, flourishing in 650 B.C.
- Arelus, 317, 321, a philosopher of the Stoic school, is said to have been a teacher of Augustus.
- Areus, 425 f., 445 f., 453, Areus I., king of Sparta 309-265 B.C. He fell in a battle with the Macedonians at Corinth, and was succeeded by his son Acrotatus.
- Ariobarzanes, 11, Ariobarzanes II., king of Pontus 363-337 B.C.
- Aristeas, 447, 451, a citizen of Argos who invited Pyrrhus into the city. His rival, Aristippus, favoured Antigonus Gonatas.
- Aristobulus, 143, a prince of Judaea, captured and carried to Rome by Pompey in 63 B.C. In 57 he escaped and stirred up war

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

- anew in Judaea, but was again captured and sent to Rome by Gabinius. In 49 he was released and sent home by Julius Caesar, but was poisoned to death on the journey by emissaries of Pompey.
- Aristocrates, 295, not otherwise known.
- Aristodemus, 21, 39, 41, a friend and flatterer of Antigonus I., sent by him in 315 B.C. to maintain his interests in Peloponnesus against Cassander. The mission for Demetrius in 306 is the last we hear of him.
- Arpinum, 469, an ancient city of the Volscians, on the river Liris, the birth-place of Marius and Cicero.
- Arruntius, 289, perhaps the Lucius Arruntius who was consul in 22 B.C.
- Arsaces, 335, probably Arsaces XV. (Phraates IV.), king of the Parthians 37-2 B.C.
- Artabazus, 341, clearly an error for Artavasdes (cf. the Antony, 1. 4).
- Artavasdes, 221, 225, 253 f. (341), king of Armenia 55-30 B.C. After the battle of Actium, Cleopatra had him put to death, and sent his head to his inveterate enemy, Artavasdes of Media.
- Asculum, 413 f., a city in the interior of Apulia.
- Asinius, 157, a friend of Antony, otherwise little known.
- Atia, 207, daughter of Marcus Atius Balbus and Julia (the sister of Julius Caesar). She was married to Caius Octavius, by whom she was the mother of Octavius Caesar, afterwards Augustus.
- Attalus (1), 275, probably Attalus I., king of Pergamum 241-197 B.C.
- Attalus (2), 47, Attalus III., surnamed Philometor, king of Pergamum 138-133 B.C. In his will he made the Romans his heirs.
- Axius, 105, the principal river of Macedonia, flowing past Pella into the Thermaic gulf.
- B
- Balae, 555, a watering place on the coast of Campania, in the bay between Cape Misenum and Puteoli.
- Beneventum, 427, one of the chief cities of Samnium, in central Italy, east of Capua. It was called Maleventum until 268 B.C., when a Roman colony was established there.
- Berenicé, 355 f., 361, came to Egypt from Macedonia in attendance on Ptolemy's bride Eurydicé, the daughter of Antipater. She secured the succession for her son, Ptolemy Philadelphus, who paid her divine honours after her death. Theocritus celebrates her virtues in Idyll xvii.
- Beroea, 111, 375 f., a city in the northern part of Macedonia, about thirty miles from Pella, the capital. Cf. Acts, xvii. 10, 14.
- Berytus, 255, a Phœnician city on the coast north of Tyre and Sidon. It became a Roman colony, and was favoured and adorned by Agrippa.
- Bestia, 483, Lucius Calpurnius B., tribune of the people in 121 B.C., and consul in 111. He made a disgraceful peace with Jugurtha, for which he was tried and condemned in 110.
- Bibulus, 149, Lucius Calpurnius B., aedile in 65 B.C., praetor in 62, and consul in 59, in each case a colleague of Julius Caesar. He was Pompey's admiral in 49, and died in 48, before the battles at Dyrrhachium.
- Bircenna, 369 f., wife of Pyrrhus, not otherwise mentioned.
- Bocchoris, 67, an ancient Egyptian king and legislator, of the ninth century B.C.
- Bocchus, 485 f. king of Mauretania, and betrayer of Jugurtha to the Romans in 106 B.C.
- Boëdromion, 61 f., the third Attic month, answering nearly to our September.
- Brundisium, 155, 215, 279, an important city on the eastern coast of Italy (Calabria), with a fine harbour. It was the natural

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

- point of departure from Italy to the East, and was the chief naval station of the Romans in the Adriatic.
- Brutus, 163, Decimus Junius B., surnamed Albinus after his adoption by Aulus Postumius Albinus, the consul of 99 B.C. He was widely employed, highly esteemed and richly rewarded by Julius Caesar, and yet joined his murderers. After Caesar's death he opposed Antony successfully, but fell a victim to the coalition between Antony and Octavius in 43 B.C.
- C
- Caepio, 505, 513, Quintus Servilius C., consul in 106 B.C., and proconsul in Gallia Narbonensis for the following year. Ten years after his defeat by the Cimbri (cf. the Camillus, xix. 7) he was brought to trial for misconduct in the war, condemned, and thrown into prison.
- Caesar, 179 f., Lucius Julius C., uncle of Antony, consul in 64 B.C., legate of Julius Caesar in Gaul in 52. He took no active part in the struggle between Pompey and Caesar, but sided with the aristocracy against Antony. After his life was saved by his sister we hear nothing of him.
- Caesarion, 261, 301, 321, according to Cleopatra, her son by Julius Caesar. He was born in 47 B.C.
- Caius, 333, Caius Caesar Caligula, youngest son of Germanicus, emperor 37-41 A.D.
- Callimachus, 301, a celebrated grammarian, critic, and poet of the Alexandrine period, chief librarian at Alexandria from about 260 B.C. till his death about 240.
- Calpurnia, 171, daughter of the Lucius Calpurnius Piso who was consul in 58 B.C. She became the wife of Julius Caesar in 59. See the Caesar, lxiii.
- Calvisius, 271, Caius C. Statianus, one of the legates of Julius Caesar in the civil war, and governor of Africa in 45 B.C. He commanded the fleet of Octavius Caesar in the war with Sextus Pompeius.
- Canidius, 215, 235, 265, 281, 285, 201 f., 301, Lucius Canidius Crassus, brought about a union between Antony and Lepidus in 43 B.C., and was consul in 40. After the battle of Actium he was put to death by Octavius Caesar.
- Canopus, 203, 339, a town in Egypt, about fifteen miles east of Alexandria, on one of the mouths of the Nile.
- Capito, 217, Caius Fontelius C., had been sent in 37 B.C. to restore friendship between Octavius and Antony.
- Cappadocia, 13, a central district of Asia Minor.
- Carbo, 505, Cnaeus Papirius C., was consul with Cinna in 85 B.C. On Sulla's return from the East and victorious advance upon Rome, Carbo fled to Libya, but was taken prisoner by Pompey and cruelly put to death (see the Pompey, chapter x.).
- Cassander, 19, 41, 53, 77 f., 87, 91, 351 f., 361, a son of Antipater the regent of Macedonia. He was master of Athens from 318 to 307 B.C., when Demetrius Poliorcetes took possession of the city. He died in 297.
- Cassandreia, 113, a city founded by Cassander on the site of the ancient Potidaea, in the Chalcidic peninsula of eastern Macedonia.
- Cassius, 151 f., Quintus C. Longinus, tribune of the people with Antony in 49 B.C., and made governor of Further Spain by Julius Caesar, where he had been praetor and quaestor in 54. Here he renewed the most shameless exactions. He was lost at sea in 47.
- Cataonia, 121, one of the divisions of Cappadocia.
- Catulus, 501, 503, 523 ff., 527, 531-539, 589, Quintus Lutatius Catu-

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

- lus, consul in 102 B.C. with Marius, a highly educated man, author of orations and poems, and of a history of his consulship and the Cimbric war.
- Celaenae, 17, a city of Phrygia at the sources of the Maeander (Xenophon, Anab. i. 2, 7).
- Cenchreae, 55, the eastern harbour-town of Corinth.
- Caunus, 125, a city in southern Caria with a commodious port.
- Censorinus, 187, Lucius Marcus C., a partisan of Antony, praetor in 43 B.C., consul in 39, and afterwards governor of Macedonia.
- Cerameicus, 29 f., the Inner Cerameicus is meant, which extended from the Dipylum gate through the agora between the Areiopagus and the Hill of the Nymphs.
- Chaonians, 405, 441, one of the chief tribes of Epeirus.
- Chersonese, Syrian, 129, 133, a name given to the valley of the Orontes about the city of Apameia.
- Cineas, 385 f., 389, 393, 403, 407 f., 413, 419, minister and faithful friend of Pyrrhus, and the most eloquent man of his day. His mission to Sicily is the last we hear of him, and he must have died before Pyrrhus returned to Italy in 276 B.C.
- Cinna, 597 f., 585 f., 591, Lucius Cornelius C., leader of the Marian party during Sulla's absence in the East (87-84 B.C.). He was consul in 87, 86, 85 and 84. He was slain in a mutiny of his soldiers at Brundisium, where he had hoped to prevent the landing of Sulla.
- Circei, 361, a maritime town of Latium, at the foot of Mons Circeius.
- Claudius (1), 403 f., 407, Appius Claudius Caecus, censor in 312 B.C. and consul in 317 and 296, in which last year he was victorious over the Samnites. His speech in reply in reply to Cineas was extant in Cicero's time (Cicero, Brutus, 16, 62).
- Claudius (2), 333, Tiberius Claudius Drusus Nero Germanicus, fourth Roman emperor (41-54 A.D.).
- Cleon, 27, the Athenian demagogue and leader of the war party 428-422 B.C. See the Nicias, chapters vii. f.
- Cleonymus, 97, 435 ff., younger son of Cleomenes II. king of Sparta, excluded from the throne on his father's death in 309 B.C.
- Cleopatra (1), 161-339 passim, daughter of Ptolemy Auletes the king of Egypt, born about 69 B.C. On the death of her father in 51, she became queen of Egypt in conjunction with her younger brother Ptolemy.
- Cleopatra (2), 219, 331, daughter of Antony and Cleopatra, born in 40 B.C. By Juba she had a son Ptolemy, who succeeded his father as king of Numidia.
- Clodia (or Claudia), 181, daughter of Clodius by Fulvia. She was betrothed to Octavius Caesar in 43 B.C., but he never regarded her as his wife, and sent her back to her mother at the outbreak of the Perusian war (alluded to in the Antony, xxx. 1).
- Clodius, 141, 161, Publius Claudius (Clodius) Pulcher, son of the Appius Claudius mentioned in the Sulla, xxix. 3. He became the most venomous foe of Cicero (cf. the Cicero, chapters xxix.-xxxv.).
- Coelius (or Caelius), 285, the text is corrupt, and the name should probably be Sossius (or Sosius).
- Commagené, 213, 277, the northernmost district of Syria.
- Corcyra, 369, 373, an island in the Ionian Sea opposite Epeirus, the modern Corfu.
- Cornelia, 557, daughter of Scipio Africanus the Elder, mother-in-law of Scipio Africanus the Younger, and mother of the Gracchi.
- Cornutus, 436, probably the Marcus Cornutus who had served with distinction in the Marsic war (90 B.C.).

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

- Corrhagus (or Corrhæus), 7, a Macedonian otherwise unknown.
- Corvinus, 543, Marcus Valerius C., 371-271 B.C., five times dictator and six times consul.
- Cotta, 471, Lucius Aurelius C., consul in 119 B.C.
- Craterus, 33, one of the ablest officers of Alexander the Great, and a man of noble character. He fell in battle against Eumenes in 321 B.C. See the Eumenes, chapters v. ff.
- Crates, the philosopher, 117, of Athens, became head of the Academy about 270 B.C. His writings are not preserved.
- Curio, 141, 149, Caius Scribonius C., an able orator, but reckless and profligate. He was tribune of the people in 50 B.C., and sold his support to Caesar, who made him prætor in Sicily in 49. Thence he crossed into Africa to attack the Pompeian forces there, but was defeated and slain (Caesar, Bell. Civ., ii. 23-44).
- Curius, 427 f., Manius Curius Dentatus, consul in 290 B.C., during which year he celebrated two triumphs, one over the Samnites and one over the Sabines. He was consul again in 275, when Pyrrhus returned to Italy from Sicily. In 274 he was consul for the third time, and continued the war against the allies of Pyrrhus. Then he retired to his Sabine farm for the remainder of his days, dying in 270.
- Cydnus, 193, a river in eastern Cilicia, on which was the city of Tarsus.
- Cyrené, 135, a Greek city on the northern coast of Africa, in commercial relations with Carthage, Greece, and Egypt.
- Cyrrhestica, 123, 213, a district in northern Syria, south of Comagené.
- the Danaï, migrating from Egypt into Greece.
- Deïdameia, 59, 73, 79, 135, 349, 355, 363, sister of Pyrrhus, and one of the many wives of Demetrius. She died in 300 B.C.
- Dellius, 191 f., 273, a Roman knight transacting business in Asia, where he joined Dolabella in 44 B.C., and afterwards Antony. He wrote a history of Antony's war with the Parthians, to which Plutarch is indirectly much indebted. Horace dedicated to him the third Ode of Book ii.
- Demetrias, 135, a city at the head of the Pagasaean gulf, founded by Demetrius Poliorcetes about 290 B.C.
- Demetrias the Phalerean, 19 f., 25 a celebrated rhetorician and orator (346-283 B.C.). He was regent of Athens for Cassander from 318 to 307.
- Demochares (1), of Leuconœ, 57 f., was married to the mother of Demosthenes.
- Demochares. (2), of Soli, not otherwise known.
- Deucalion, 347, a mythical king of Phthia in Thessaly, the Noah of the Greek legend of the flood.
- Dexoius, 399, known only from this exploit, which, in Frontinus, Strat., ii. 4, 9, is attributed to Laevinus.
- Dicomes, 281, king of the Getae, not otherwise mentioned.
- Dionysius, 401, 415, of Halicarnassus, came to Rome in 29 B.C., where he published his great work on the history of Rome in 7 B.C.
- Dium, 87, an important maritime town in S.E. Macedonia.
- Dodona, 347, a town in Epeirus, seat of the most ancient oracle of Zeus.
- Dolabella (1), 157-165, Publius Cornelius D., the profligate and debt-ridden son-in-law of Cicero. He took part with Caesar, but approved of his murder, and gained the consulship for the remainder of the year 44. He was outlawed and declared a

D

Danaüs, 455, mythical ancestor of

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

- public enemy on account of his extortions in Asia, and committed suicide.
- Dolabella (2), 325, Publius Cornelius D., son of the preceding. He was consul in 10 A.D.
- Domitius (1), 231, 265, 281, Cnaeus Domitius Ahenobarbus, son of the Ahenobarbus who fell at Pharsalus (see the Pompey, lxix.1) pardoned by Caesar, but a follower of Brutus and Cassius, reconciled to Antony in 40 B.C.
- Domitius (2), 333, Lucius D. Ahenobarbus, son of the preceding. He was consul in 16 B.C., and afterwards celebrated a triumph for campaigns in Germany. He died in 25 A.D.
- Domitius (3), 333 (Ahenobarbus), Cnaeus D. Ahenobarbus, son of the preceding, and father of the emperor Nero. He was consul in 32 A.D. His life was filled with flagrant and unnatural crimes.
- Domitius (4), 333, Lucius Domitius Ahenobarbus, the original name of the emperor Nero. After his adoption by the emperor Claudius he was called Nero Claudius Caesar Drusus Germanicus.
- Dromichaetea, 99, 133, king of the Getae, known only from his victory over Lysimachus.
- Dromocleides the Sphettian, 33, 85, not otherwise known.
- Drusus, 333, Nero Claudius D. Germanicus, son of Livia by Tiberus Claudius Nero, born in 38 B.C., a younger brother of the emperor Tiberius. He conducted great campaigns against the Gauls and Germans, and died in the field at the age of thirty-one.
- E
- Edessa, 107, 381, a city in northern Macedonia, the ancient capital of the country.
- Empedocles, 13, a famous philosopher and poet of Acragas (Agrigentum) in Sicily, flourishing in 440 B.C.
- Epicurus, 83, 409, founder of the philosophical school named from him, born in Samos, 342 B.C., died at Athens, 270 B.C.
- Erasistratus, 93 f., one of the most celebrated physicians of antiquity. After his residence at the court of Seleucus, he lived at Alexandria in the practice of his profession. He was still living in 258 B.C.
- Eumenes, 275, probably Eumenes II. is meant, king of Pergamum 197-159 B.C.
- Eurycles the Laconian, 289 f., not otherwise known.
- Eurydicé (1), 33, 135, one of the wives of Demetrius, not otherwise known.
- Eurydicé (2), 117, daughter of Antipater and wife of Ptolemy Lagus. Jealous of Berenicé, she withdrew from the court of Egypt and was now (287 B.C.) residing at Miletus.
- F
- Fabricius, 401, 407 f., 411 f., Caius F. Lucinius, consul in 282 and 278 B.C. with Aemilius Papus, and censor with him in 275. A fine example of old Roman simplicity and integrity.
- Flaccus, 543, Lucius Valerius F., colleague of Marius in the consulship of 100 B.C., and censor in 97 with Marcus Antonius the orator. In 86 he was made consul with Cinna and sent to Asia to conduct the war against Mithridates. Here he was murdered by Pimbria (see the Sulla, xii. 9, with note).
- Frentanian, 399, the Frentani were a hardy people of central Italy, allied to the Samnites, by whom they were bordered on the West.
- Fulvia, 161 f., 181, 197 f., 203-207, 217, 261, 267, 301, wife of Antony. She had previously been the wife of Clodius the demagogue, and of Curio, the friend and legate of Julius Caesar.

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

She redeemed what had been a dissolute life by her passionate devotion to Antony.

Furnius, 271, Calus Furnius, tribune of the people in 50 B.C., a friend of Cicero, and yet a faithful adherent of Antony. After the battle of Actium he was reconciled to Octavius Caesar, by whom he was highly honoured.

G

Gabinus, 143, 155, Aulus G., tribune of the people in 66 B.C., praetor in 61, and consul with Piso in 58, the year during which Cicero was exiled. He was recalled from his province of Syria in 55, prosecuted for taking bribes, and exiled. He died in 48.

Gallus (1), 235 f., Flavius G., not otherwise known.

Gallus (2), 317, Calus Cornelius G., a distinguished poet and orator at Rome who stood in high favour with Octavius Caesar, and served him in high command. After Cleopatra's death he was made prefect of Egypt. He afterwards fell from the emperor's favour, and, to escape exile, took his own life.

Gaza, 13, an ancient city and stronghold in southern Palestine.

Germanicus, 333, Germanicus Caesar, son of Nero Claudius Drusus, nephew of the emperor Tiberius, and brother of the emperor Claudius. His extraordinary fame and popularity at Rome awakened the jealousy of Tiberius and led to his death in 19 A.D.

Glauca, 541, Calus Servillus G., praetor in 100 B.C., a partisan of Marius, and a partner of Saturninus in the popular tumults of that year. He perished with Saturninus. Cicero compares him to the Athenian demagogue Hyperbolus (Brutus, 62, 224).

H

Halae, 299, a town in N.E. Boeotia, near the sea.

Halicarnassus, 19, a large and strong Dorian city in S.W. Caria.

Helenus, 371, 455, 461, son of Pyrrhus by Lanassa, the daughter of Agathocles (erroneously by Bircenna, 371). Nothing further is known of him.

Heracleia, 395, a Greek city in Lucania on the gulf of Tarentum. It was at this time in alliance with Tarentum against Rome.

Hercynii, 491, tribes in central and southern Germany.

Herennius, 473 f., Calus H., tribune of the people in 80 B.C., and opposed to Sulla. After the death of Sulla he joined Sertorius in Spain (76-72 B.C.). See the Pompey, xviii. 3.

Herod, 277, 301 f., Herod the Great, made king of Judaea in 40 B.C. by the Roman senate, at the behest of Antony. His title was confirmed by Augustus, to whom he remained loyal till his death in 4 B.C. Cf. Matthew, chapter ii.

Hieronymus, 97, 401, 415, of Cardia, a historian of the times following the death of Alexander the Great. He was a friend and companion of Eumenes (cf. the Eumenes, xii.) and after the death of Eumenes became a friend of Antigonus, then of Demetrius his son, and finally of Antigonus Gonatas. The death of Pyrrhus (272 B.C.) is mentioned in his history.

Hipparchus, 293, 305, a friend of Antony, not otherwise known.

Hirtius, 175, Aulus H., a warm friend and supporter of Julius Caesar, consul in 43 B.C. He fell in gallantly leading an assault upon Antony's troops (cf. the Cicero, xlv. 3 f.).

Hortensius, 185, Quintus H. Hortalus, son of the great orator Hortensius, though apparently cast off by his father on account of his dissolute habits. He joined Caesar in 49 B.C., and served under him in important commands (cf. the Caesar, xxxii. 2). In 44 B.C. he held the province of Macedonia, and Brutus was to succeed him.

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

- Hybreas, 189, of Mylasa, in Caria, reputed to be the greatest orator of his time. His works are lost.
- Hyrodes, 211, 219, another form of Orodes, Orodes I., the same as Arsaces XIV., the king of the Parthians who defeated Crassus in 53 B.C.

I

- Ialysus, 51, mythical founder of the city of Ialysus in Rhodes.
- Iampeas (Hiempsal), 575 f., king of Numidia. He was expelled from his kingdom by Domitius Ahenobarbus, the leader of the Marian party in Africa, but was reinstated by Pompey in 81 B.C. Cf. the Pompey, xii. 4.
- Iapygian promontory, 391. Iapygia was a Greek name of the S.E. district of Italy, called Calabria by the Romans.
- Iolcus, 135, an ancient and famous city at the head of the Pagasaean gulf, the assembling place for Jason's Argonauts. It was merged in Demetrias.
- Ipsus, 71, 81, 355, a village in southern Phrygia.
- Isis, 263, 307, an Egyptian goddess, identified with the Demeter of the Greeks.

J

- Juba, 331, Juba II., king of Mauritania. He lived from 50 B.C. to about 20 A.D., was educated at Rome, and became a learned and voluminous writer. Among his works was a History of Rome.
- Jugurtha, 477, 481, 485 f., 493, 553, king of Numidia 112-106 B.C. He was brought a prisoner to Rome, and starved to death in 104.
- Julia, 139, 181, daughter of the Lucius Julius Caesar who was consul in 90 B.C., and mother of Antony. She fled from Rome in 41, but returned to Italy with her son in 39, after she had aided in reconciling him with Octavius Caesar.

L

- Labienuus, 197, 205, 211, son of the Labienus who fell at Munda in 45 B.C. After the murder of Julius Caesar he joined the party of Brutus and Cassius, and was sent by them into Parthia, where he proved a formidable enemy of Octavius and Antony. He was not slain in his battle with Ventidius, but fled in disguise to Cilicia, where he was discovered and killed by a freedman of Octavius.
- Lachares, 81 f., an Athenian demagogue who made himself tyrant of the city in 296 B.C. According to Pausanias (i. 25, 7), he was murdered at Coroneia in Boeotia shortly after his flight from Athens.
- Laevinus, 393 f., 399 f., 407, Publius Valerius L., one of the consuls in 280 B.C., known only from this campaign against Pyrrhus. The tradition is through Dionysius of Halicarnassus, who copied Hieronymus, who had access to the Memoirs of Pyrrhus.
- Lamis, 37, 45, 55, 61-67, mistress of Demetrius.
- Lamprias, 199 f., the grandfather of Plutarch, a convivial soul.
- Lanassa, 369 f., 373, daughter of Agathocles, wife of Pyrrhus, and then of Demetrius.
- Lentulus (1), 139 f., Publius Cornelius L. Sura, was consul in 71 B.C., but in the following year was expelled from the senate. This led him to join the conspiracy of Catiline.
- Lentulus (2), Lucius Cornelius L. Crus, consul in 49 B.C., and author of the violent measures which

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

- drove the tribunes, Antony and Curio, to Caesar at Ravenna. On the outbreak of civil war he joined Pompey in the East, fled with him from Pharsalus, and was put to death in Egypt. See the Pompey, lxxx. 4.
- Leonnatus the Macedonian, 397 f., known only from this incident.
- Leosthenes, 349, an Athenian general of the league for expelling the Macedonians from Greece after the death of Alexander. He died during the siege of Lamia (323 B.C.).
- Leotychides, 435, son of the Spartan king Agis II., excluded from the throne by Lysander (cf. the Lysander, chapter xxii.).
- Lepidus, 153, 161, 169, 175-183, 205, Marcus Aemilius L., joined the party of Caesar in 49 B.C., and was Caesar's consular colleague in 46. After Caesar's murder he sided with Antony, and as member of the triumvirate received Spain and Narbonese Gaul as his provinces, then, in 40, Africa, where he remained till 36. He was then deposed from the triumvirate. He lived till 13 B.C.
- Lernaean hydra, 407, a fabled monster haunting the marshy district in south-eastern Argolis, slain by Heracles in his second labour.
- Libo, 155, Lucius Scribonius L., an adherent of Pompey in the civil war, and legate of Bibulus on Pompey's fleet, succeeding Bibulus in the supreme command. He afterwards served under Sextus Pompeius, but deserted him for Antony in 35 B.C. He was consul with Antony in 34.
- Licymnus, 459, a mythical personage, half-brother of Alcmené the mother of Heracles. He was slain by Tlepolemus the son of Heracles.
- Liris, 587, one of the principal rivers of central Italy, flowing S.W. into the sea near Minturnæ.
- Lissus, 155, a coast-town in southern Illyria.
- Livia, 323, 221 f., Livia Drusilla, married first to Tiberius Claudius Nero, but in 35 B.C. Octavius took her in marriage from her husband. To her first husband she bore Tiberius (afterwards emperor) and Drusus. She bore Augustus no children, but had unbounded influence over him. She died in 29 A.D.
- Lucania, 385, 395, 401, 427, a district of southern Italy, west of Apulia and north of Bruttium.
- Lucinus, 591, Sextus L., not otherwise known.
- Lupercalia, 165, a shepherds' festival in honour of the rustic god Faunus, held in Rome February 15. Cf. the Caesar lxi. 1.
- Lygdamis, 491, leader of the Cimmerians in their invasion of Lydia in the seventh century B.C. Cf. Herodotus, i. 15.
- Lynceus the Samian, 65, distinguished as comic poet and historian, brother of Duris the historian, and contemporary with Menander in the latter half of the fourth century B.C.
- Lysimachus (1), 31-133 passim, 339, 361 f., 375-381, an officer of Alexander the Great, not prominent during Alexander's life, but afterwards king of Thrace., He fell in battle with Seleucus, 281 B.C.
- Lysimachus (2), 443, a companion of Pyrrhus, not otherwise known.
- Lutatius, 501, 589, see Catulus.

M

- Macrinus, 465, a cognomen denoting leanness.
- Maecenas, 215, Caius Cilnius M., the great patron of literature and art during the reign of Augustus, whose prime minister he was.
- Mamertines, 421-425, "Children of Mars," mercenary troops from Campania in the employ of Agathocles tyrant of Syracuse.

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

- They seized Messana in 310 B.C. and became a formidable power. They passed finally under the dominion of Rome.
- Manlius, 513, Cnaeus Manlius Maximus, consul in 105 B.C. He obtained Transalpine Gaul as his province, where he was defeated by the Gauls, chiefly owing to quarrels with his colleague, Servilius Caepio.
- Marcellus (1), 519, Marcus Claudius M., prominent later (90 B.C.) in the Marsic war, and an orator of some merit (cf. Cicero, Brutus, 36, 136).
- Marcellus (2), 149, 207, 331, Calus Claudius Marcellus, consul in 50 B.C., a friend of Cicero and Pompey, and an uncompromising foe of Julius Caesar. He took no part in the civil war, and was pardoned by Caesar. As husband of Octavia, the sister of Octavius Caesar, he had considerable influence. He is last heard of about 41 B.C.
- Marcellus (3), 331, Caius Claudius M., son of the preceding, born in 43 B.C. He married Julia, the daughter of Augustus, in 25, and was also adopted by Augustus. He died in 23. Cf. Vergil, Aeneid, vi. 860-886.
- Massalia (Massilia), 213 a town in southern Gaul, east of the Rhone, the modern Marseilles.
- Megacles, 399, known only from this incident.
- Menelaüs, 35-39, a brother of Ptolemy Lagus, and commander of his fleet. He is not otherwise known.
- Meninx, 575, an island off the north coast of Africa, near Carthage.
- Merula, 579, 593, Lucius Cornelius M., chosen consul in 87 B.C., after Cinna had fled the city, by the partisans of Sulla. On the return of Marius and Cinna in the same year, he was summoned to trial for illegally exercising the consulship, and committed suicide.
- Messapia, 385, 393, like Iapygia, a name given by the Greeks to the south-eastern district of Italy, called Calabria by the Romans.
- Metellus (1), 465, Quintus Caecilius M. Macedonicus, was praetor in 148 B.C., and received Macedonia as his province, where he was superseded by Lucius Mummius before he could complete the conquest of Greece. He celebrated a triumph, however, in 146, was consul in 143, and died in 115.
- Metellus (2), 469, Lucius Caecilius M. Dalmaticus, consul in 119 B.C., and winner of a bloodless triumph over the Dalmatians.
- Metellus (3), 477 f., 485 f., 541-547, 549, 583, Quintus Caecilius M. Numidicus, consul in 109 B.C., and conqueror of Jugurtha, but supplanted by Marius. He was unjustly expelled from the senate, and went into exile, from which he was recalled in 99, largely through the efforts of his son, Metellus Pius.
- Metellus (4), 583, Quintus Caecilius M. Pius, son of the preceding. He was consul with Sulla in 80 B.C., and one of his most successful generals. After Sulla's death in 78, Metellus was sent to Spain to prosecute the war against Sertorius. He died about 63.
- Meton, 383 f., known only from this incident.
- Minturnae, 565, 569, 573, a town of Latium, on the river Liris, about three miles from the sea.
- Misenum, 207, a promontory and port on the coast of Campania. It was a station for the Roman fleet in the times of Augustus and the Empire.
- Mithridates, 11 f., Mithridates II., king of Pontus 337-302 B.C. At the time here noted (318 B.C.) he was at the court of Antigonus as a subject vassal.
- Mithridates (2), 245, 249, not otherwise known.
- Mithridates (3), 551, 555 f., 579, 593, the sixth king of Pontus bearing this name, commonly called Mithridates the Great, 120-63 B.C.,

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

- the most formidable enemy of the Romans in the East.
- Mithridates of Commagené, 277. not otherwise known.
- Molossians, 405, 447 f., one of the chief tribes of Epeirus.
- Monaeses, 219 f., 245, not otherwise known.
- Mummius, 465, Lucius Mummius Achaicus, consul in 146 B.C., conqueror of Greece, destroyer of Corinth, establisher of the Roman province of Achaia. He was also censor in 142, with Scipio Africanus the Younger.
- Munychia, 19, 23 f., 85, the acropolis of the Peiraeus.
- Munychion, 63, the tenth month of the Attic calendar, answering to parts of April and May.
- Musaeus, 565, a mythical personage, to whom various poetical works were assigned.
- Mutina, 175, an important city in Cisalpine Gaul, south of the Po, the modern Modena.

N

- Nero Germanicus, 333, see Domitianus (4).
- Nicarchus, 295, Plutarch's great-grandfather, not otherwise known.
- Numantia, 469, 495, a strong city in north-eastern Spain, memorable for its siege and destruction by Scipio Africanus the Younger in 134 B.C.

O

- Octavia, 205 f., 211, 215 f., 257-261, 265 ff., 273, 303, 233, 331 f., daughter of Caius Octavius by his second wife Atia, and own sister of Octavius Caesar (Augustus). She died in 4 B.C. Her son Marcellus was destined to be the successor of Augustus, but died untimely in 23 B.C.
- Octavius (1), 479-585, 593, Cnaeus Octavius, consul in 87 B.C. with

- Cinna, and supporter of the aristocratic party while Sulla was absent in the East.
- Octavius (2), 285, was an adherent of Pompey in 49 B.C., and served successfully on Pompey's fleet. After the battle of Pharsalus he fled to Africa, and after that of Thapsus claimed joint command with Cato (see the Cato Minor, lxxv. 2). He is not heard of after the battle of Actium.
- Olympias, 51, mother of Alexander the Great, put to death in 316 B.C. by order of Cassander.
- Olympus, 321, a physician and historian, not otherwise known.
- Omphalé, 337, a mythical queen of Lydia, whom Heracles served for three years.
- Ostia, 561, 581, a city of Latium at the mouth of the Tiber, the seaport of Rome.

P

- Pandosia, 395, a small city of Lucania near Heracleia, to be distinguished from the city of Pandosia in Bruttium.
- Pansa, 175, Caius Vibius P., a devoted friend of Julius Caesar, who made him governor of Cisalpine Gaul in 46 B.C., and consul for the year 43 with Hirtius.
- Pantauchus, 101, 365, had been an officer of Alexander the Great.
- Patrae, 23, 275, a town on the coast of Achaia near the entrance to the Corinthian gulf, the modern Patras.
- Patrocles, 121, a Macedonian Greek in the service of Seleucus I., the king of Syria. He was author of a trustworthy geographical work on India and other eastern regions, which is cited by Strabo.
- Paulus, 179, Lucius Aemilius Paulus (or Paullus), brother of Lepidus the triumvir. He was consul in 50 B.C., and a determined foe of Julius Caesar. But Caesar bribed him into allegiance (see

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

- the Caesar, xxix. 3). After Caesar's death, Paulus returned to the aristocratic party, and was proscribed by the triumvirs. He escaped death, however, and fled to Miletus, where he died soon afterwards.
- Pelagus, 347, mythical ancestor of the Pelasgians, the earliest inhabitants of Greece.
- Pella, 107, was made the capital of Macedonia by Philip II., and was the birthplace of Alexander the Great. It was west of the river Axios, and some fifteen miles from the sea.
- Pelusium, 143 f., 307, a strong frontier-town on the eastern branch of the Nile.
- Pergamum, 271, in Mysia, capital of the kingdom founded by Eumenes in 263 B.C.
- Perseus, 135, the last king of Macedonia, 179-168 B.C. See the Aemilius Paulus, x.-xxxvii.
- Pessinus, 509, a town of Galatia in Asia Minor, famed for its rich temple of Cybelé.
- Petra, 297, chief city of the district of Arabia which borders Egypt on the N.E. It lay about halfway between the Dead Sea and the Arabian Gulf.
- Pharos, 203, 297, an island off Alexandria, artificially united with the mainland.
- Pharsalus, in Thessaly, the scene of the decisive battle between Pompey and Caesar in 48 B.C.
- Phila, 33 f., 51, 65, 77 f., 91, 113, 117, 135, daughter of Antipater and wife of Demetrius, a virtuous and gifted woman, faithfully devoted to Demetrius in spite of all his marital sins.
- Phillip, 51, 59, 105, Phillip II. of Macedonia, father of Alexander the Great, reigned 359-336 B.C.
- Philippides, 31, one of the principal poets of the New Comedy at Athens, flourishing in 325 B.C.
- Philotas, 197 f., 201, known only from these incidents.
- Phylarchus, 439, of Naucratis and Athens, a historian flourishing in 215 B.C., to whom Plutarch is much indebted in his Agis and Cleomenes, and his Pyrrhus.
- Phraata, 223, 227, 253, a place somewhere in ancient Media which served as a residence for the Parthian kings. It was probably named from Phraates.
- Phraates, 219, 223, 229 f., Phraates IV. or Arsaces XV. (this latter name continuing that of the founder of the line), king of Parthia, a man of cruelty and treachery. His son was stolen and carried to Rome, and was surrendered to his father by Augustus on condition of the return of the Roman standards and prisoners captured from Crassus. These were actually returned to Rome in 20 B.C.
- Phraortes, 255, apparently an error for Phraates.
- Piso, 595, Caius P., not definitely known.
- Plancus, 177, 269, Lucius Munatius P., a friend of Julius Caesar, serving under him in Gaul and during the civil war. After Caesar's death he went over to Antony, was consul in 42 B.C., and governor of Syria in 35. He deserted Antony for Octavius Caesar in 32. It was on his proposal that the title of Augustus was conferred upon Octavius in 27.
- Pleistarchus, 77 f., son of Antipater and brother of Cassander. After the battle of Ipsus (301 B.C.) he received the province of Cilicia. After his expulsion from this by Demetrius nothing further is heard of him.
- Polemon, 275 f., Polemon I., made king of Pontus about 36 B.C. by Antony. He ransomed himself from the Parthians, and continued to co-operate with Antony. After the battle of Actium he made his peace with Octavius, and was by him confirmed in his kingdom. He died about 2 B.C.
- Polysperchon, 23, 367, a distinguished officer of Alexander the

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

- Great, appointed by Antipater to succeed him in the regency. He connived at some of the worst crimes of Cassander. He is last heard of in 303 B.C.
- Pompeius (1), 509; Aulus P., not otherwise known.
- Pompeius (2), 207 f., 217, 263, Sextus P., younger son of Pompey the Great by his third wife, escaped after the battle of Munda (45 B.C.), and was active against the triumvirate until his death in 35.
- Poseidonius, 465, 593, a famous Stoic philosopher, of Apameia in Syria, a contemporary of Cicero, taught at Rhodes, and was resident at Athens and Rome.
- Pothelinus, 275, one of the guardians of the young Ptolemy when Caesar came to Egypt. He was put to death by Caesar (cf. the Caesar, xlviii. f.). The name must therefore be used oratorically here.
- Priené, 267, one of the twelve Ionian cities in Asia Minor, north of Miletus.
- Proculeius, 315 f., Cornelius P. (Plutarch calls him Procleius), a wealthy Roman knight, afterwards highly honoured by Augustus. Horace mentions him with praise (Carm. ii. 2, 5 f.).
- Protogenes, 51 f., of Caunus in Caria, one of the most celebrated of Greek painters, contemporary with Apelles, flourishing in 330 B.C.
- Ptolemy (1), 13-117 passim, 227 f., 355, 361, 375, Ptolemy Lagus, king of Egypt 306-283, the most far-sighted and successful of the officers of Alexander the Great.
- Ptolemy (2), 109, Ptolemy IV., surnamed Philopator, king of Egypt 222-205 B.C.
- Ptolemy (3), Ptolemy XI., commonly known as Ptolemy Auletes, restored to the throne of Egypt in 55 B.C. through Pompey's influence. He never regained the goodwill of his people, and died in 51.
- Ptolemy (4), 361, 369, 441, 449, son of Pyrrhus and Antigone, was left in charge of his father's kingdom at the age of fifteen, when Pyrrhus set out for Italy in 280 B.C.
- Ptolemy (5), 263, son of Antony and Cleopatra, surnamed Philadelphus. After the death of Antony his life was spared by Octavius Caesar, and he was brought up by Octavia with her own children. Nothing more is heard of him.
- Publicola, 285 f., Lucius Gellius P., deserted to the side of Octavius and Antony from that of Brutus and Cassius, and was made consul in 36 B.C. He probably perished at the battle of Actium.
- Pyrrha, 347, mythical wife of the mythical Deucalion (cf. Horace, Carm. i. 2, 6).
- Pythodorus, 61, the Torch-bearer, an official in the celebration of the Eleusinian mysteries. See the Alcibiades, xxlii. 3.

Q

Quinda, 77, a city of Cilicia, later called Anazarbus.

R

Rhosus, 77, probably a place on the N.W. coast of Syria, below the gulf of Issus.

Rutilius, 541, Publius Rutilius Rufus, statesman and orator, consul in 105 B.C. He was convicted of peculation in his proconsulship of Asia (99 B.C.), and retired to Smyrna for the rest of his days. He wrote a History of Rome in Greek.

S

Sabaco, 473, Cassius S., not otherwise known.

Sadalas, 277, king of Thrace, not otherwise known.

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

- Salamis, 37 f., 87, a city on the eastern coast of Cyprus.
- Samnium (Samnites), 385, 401, 407f., 407 f., 413, 423, 427, a mountainous district in central Italy, east of Latium and Campania. The Samnites did not make final submission to Rome until 272 B.C.
- Samosata, 213, the royal residence of the district of Commagene, situated on the upper Euphrates.
- Saturn, 411, Italian god of agriculture. For the festival of the Saturnalia, see the note on the Sulla, xviii. 6.
- Saturninus, 499 f., 541-549, 559, Lucius Appuleius Saturninus, a Roman noble who allied himself with Marius and the popular party, tribune of the people in 102 and 100 B.C., in which last year he perished at the hands of a mob.
- Scipio (1), 465, Publius Cornelius Scipio Africanus the Elder, 234-183 B.C.
- Scipio (2), 469, 493 f., Publius Cornelius Scipio Aemilianus Africanus the Younger, son of Aemilius Paulus, adopted by Publius Scipio the son of the conqueror of Hannibal, 185-129 B.C.
- Seleucus (1), 17-133 passim, Seleucus I., surnamed Nicator, founder of the Syrian dynasty, king of Syria 306-280 B.C.
- Seleucus (2), 307, apparently an officer serving under Antony and Cleopatra.
- Sextilius, 575 f., not otherwise known. Cf. Appian, B.C. i. 62.
- Sicyon, 205, a city of Achaia in Northern Peloponnesus, near the Corinthian Gulf.
- Sidon, 255, a Phoenician city on the coast of Palestine, north of Tyre.
- Silanus, 273, Marcus S., not otherwise known.
- Siris, 395, a river of Lucania flowing east into the gulf of Tarentum.
- Sosigenes, 126, not otherwise definitely known.
- Sossius (or Sossius), 215, Cornelius S., consul in 66 B.C., followed the fortunes of Antony, who made him governor of Syria and Cilicia in place of Ventidius. He commanded the left wing of Antony's fleet at Actium, escaped from the battle, and was pardoned by Octavius.
- Statianus, 223, Oppius S., not otherwise known.
- Stilpo, 23 f., founder of a Megarian school of philosophy. Little is known of his life.
- Stratocles, 27-33, 57-63, an Athenian orator and demagogue of disreputable character, but persuasive speech.
- Stratonice, 77 f., 93-97, 129 f., 135, daughter of Demetrius and Phila.
- Sulla, 465, see the Coriolanus, xl. 2-4, with the note.
- Sulpicius, 555, 559, Publius S. Rufus, one of the most famous orators of his time. He was at first an aristocrat in politics, and as such was made tribune of the people in 83 B.C. But he became the creature of Marius, and was put to death by Sulla (cf. the Sulla, x. 1).

T

- Taenarum, 291, the southern promontory of Laconia, in Peloponnesus.
- Taphosiris, 339, a town in Libya about twenty-five miles west of Alexandria. It contained a "Tomb of Osiris."
- Tarentum, 215 f., 279, 383 f., 389 f., 313, 401 f., 407, 413, 419, 423, 427, a wealthy and powerful Greek city in S.E. Italy, at the head of the gulf named from it. It was a Spartan colony, founded about 708 B.C.
- Taurus, 119, an extensive mountain range of southern Asia Minor.
- Taurus, 285, Statilius T., a distinguished general under Octavius, consul in 26 B.C., and prefect of Rome during the absence of Augustus in 16.

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

Telamon, 579, a city on the coast of Etruria (Tyrrhenia).

Terracina (Tarracina), 563, 569, a maritime city of Latium, about ten miles from Circeii.

Thessalonice, 87, wife of Cassander, and sister of Alexander the Great.

Timagenes, 303, of Alexandria, carried prisoner to Rome in 55 B.C., where he regained his freedom and taught rhetoric successfully, enjoying the favour of Augustus for a while.

Timon the Misanthrope, 297 ff., is said to have died in consequence of refusing to have a surgeon set a broken limb.

Titius, 235, 269, Marcus T., owed his life to Sextus Pompeius, but when Sextus was captured in Asia, Titius put him to death. He deserted Antony for Octavius Caesar, by whom he was made consul in 31 B.C.

Torquatus, 465, a cognomen formed from "torques," a chain stripped from a fallen foe.

Trebellius, 157, Lucius T., tribune of the people in 47 B.C., and a colleague of Dolabella. He afterwards, to placate Antony, tried to carry the very measures in which he had opposed Dolabella.

Trebonius, 167, Caius T., tribune of the people in 55 B.C., and an instrument of the first triumvirs. He was afterwards legate of Caesar in Gaul, and was loaded with favours by him, but still joined his murderers. He was sent out as pro-consul to Asia in 43, where he was slain by Dolabella, who was acting for Antony against Brutus and Cassius.

U

Utica, 481, a Phoenician colony from Tyre, older than Carthage, on the N.W. coast of Africa, about twenty-seven miles from Carthage.

V

Varius, 179, Lucius Varius, surnamed Cotylon (or Cotyla), had been aedile in 44 B.C., and had served Antony during the siege of Mutina in 43.

Ventidius, 209-215, Publius V. Bassus, a native of Picenum, and brought to Rome as prisoner of war in 89 B.C., where he was manumitted. He served with distinction under Julius Caesar in the civil war, and after the death of Caesar joined Antony. After his triumph nothing is heard of him.

X

Xenocrates the Philosopher, 467, a native of Chalcedon in Bithynia, and a disciple at Athens of Aeschines the Socratic. He lived 396-314 B.C.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES.

VOLUME I.

THESEUS AND ROMULUS.
LYCURGUS AND NUMA.
SOLON AND PUBLICOLA.

VOLUME II.

THEMISTOCLES AND CAMILLUS.
ARISTIDES AND CATO MAJOR.
CIMON AND LUCULLUS.

VOLUME III.

PERICLES AND FABIIUS MAXIMUS.
NICIAS AND CRASSUS.

VOLUME IV.

ALCIBIADES AND CORIOLANUS.
LYSANDER AND SULLA.

VOLUME V.

AGESILAÛS AND POMPEY.
PELOPIDAS AND MARCELLUS.

VOLUME VI.

DION AND BRUTUS.
TIMOLEON AND AEMILIUS PAULUS.

VOLUME VII.

DEMOSTHENES AND CICERO.
ALEXANDER AND CAESAR.

VOLUME VIII.

SERTORIUS AND EUMENES.
PHOCION AND CATO THE YOUNGER.

VOLUME IX.

DEMETRIUS AND ANTONY.
PYRRHUS AND CAIUS MARIUS.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

WITH AN ENGLISH TRANSLATION BY BERNADOTTE PERRIN

IN ELEVEN VOLUMES

X

AGIS AND CLEOMENES, AND TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS
PHILOPOEMEN AND FLAMININUS

LONDON : WILLIAM HEINEMANN
NEW YORK : G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS

MCMXXI

52

283262

Digitized by Google

PREFATORY NOTE

As in the preceding volumes of this series, agreement between the Sintenis (Teubner, 1873-1875) and Bekker (Tauchnitz, 1855-1857) editions of the Parallel Lives has been taken as a basis for the text. Any preference of one to the other, and any important deviation from both, have been indicated. An abridged account of the manuscripts of Plutarch may be found in the Introduction to the first volume. No attempt has been made to furnish either a diplomatic text or a full critical apparatus. For these, the reader must be referred to the major edition of Sintenis (Leipzig, 1839-1846) or to the new text of the Lives by Lindskog and Ziegler (Teubner). In the present edition, the reading which follows the colon in the brief critical notes is that of the Teubner Sintenis, and also, unless stated in the note, that of the Tauchnitz Bekker.

In May, 1920, Professor Perrin put the finishing touches upon the eleventh and last volume of this series of the Lives of Plutarch for the "Loeb Classical Library," a task which he had undertaken nine years before. On August 31, 1920, he died after a brief illness, having nearly completed his seventy-third year. During the nine years, of which he devoted the leisure hours to the translation of his favourite author, the very magnitude of the task, and the inspiration of the hope that he might leave behind him a version of the Lives that would make the famous men of ancient Greece and Rome, so wonderfully depicted by the great biographer, as familiar to the next generation as they were to the youth in his own boyhood, seemed to sustain and strengthen his powers. The wide and discriminating experience with modern men of action which the translator possessed, combined with the classical historian's special knowledge of the times which he was called upon to interpret after Plutarch, an author whom he had studied with sympathetic interest for many years, gave Professor Perrin peculiar qualifications for the task; and the English-speaking world already knows with what eminent success he achieved it.

PREFATORY NOTE

The American Editor, who had been called in constant consultation by Professor Perrin during the progress of the work, has by the wish of his family undertaken to see the present and final volume through the press. Volume XI, which will contain an extensive General Index, will, it is hoped, be published in 1922.

THE EDITORS.

CONTENTS

	PAGE
PREFATORY NOTE	v
ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES IN THIS EDITION	viii
TRADITIONAL ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES	ix
AGIS AND CLEOMENES	1
TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS	143
COMPARISON OF AGIS AND CLEOMENES AND THE GRACCHI	241
PHILOPOEMEN	255
TITUS FLAMININUS	321
COMPARISON OF PHILOPOEMEN AND TITUS	387
DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES	395

ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES IN THIS EDITION IN THE CHRONOLOGICAL SEQUENCE OF THE GREEK LIVES.

VOLUME I.

- (1) Theseus and Romulus.
Comparison.
- (2) Lycurgus and Numa.
Comparison.
- (3) Solon and Publicola.
Comparison.

VOLUME II.

- (4) Themistocles and Camillus.
- (9) Aristides and Cato the Elder.
Comparison.
- (13) Cimon and Lucullus.
Comparison.

VOLUME III.

- (5) Pericles and Fabius Max-
imus.
Comparison.
- (14) Nicias and Crassus.
Comparison.

VOLUME IV.

- (6) Alcibiades and Coriola-
nus.
Comparison.
- (12) Lysander and Sulla.
Comparison.

VOLUME V.

- (16) Agesilaüs and Pompey.
Comparison.
- (8) Pelopidas and Marcellus.
Comparison.

VOLUME VI.

- (22) Dion and Brutus.
Comparison.
- (7) Timoleon and Aemilius
Paulus.
Comparison.

VOLUME VII.

- (20) Demosthenes and Cicero.
Comparison.
- (17) Alexander and Julius Caesar.

VOLUME VIII.

- (15) Sertorius and Eumenes.
Comparison.
- (18) Phocion and Cato the Younger.

VOLUME IX.

- (21) Demetrius and Antony.
Comparison.
- (11) Pyrrhus and Caius Marius.

VOLUME X.

- (19) Agis and Cleomenes, and Tiberius and Caius
Gracchus.
Comparison.
- (10) Philopoemen and Flam-
inius.
Comparison.

VOLUME XI.

- (24) Aratus.
- (23) Artaxerxes.
- (25) Galba.
- (26) Otho.

THE TRADITIONAL ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES.

- (1) Theseus and Romulus.
- (2) Lycurgus and Numa.
- (3) Solon and Publicola.
- (4) Themistocles and Camillus.
- (5) Pericles and Fabius Maximus.
- (6) Alcibiades and Coriolanus.
- (7) Timoleon and Aemilius Paulus.
- (8) Pelopidas and Marcellus.
- (9) Aristides and Cato the Elder.
- (10) Philopoemen and Flamininus.
- (11) Pyrrhus and Caius Marius.
- (12) Lysander and Sulla.
- (13) Cimon and Lucullus.
- (14) Nicias and Crassus.
- (15) Sertorius and Eumenes.
- (16) Agesilaüs and Pompey.
- (17) Alexander and Julius Caesar.
- (18) Phocion and Cato the Younger.
- (19) Agis and Cleomenes, and Tiberius and Caius
Gracchus.
- (20) Demosthenes and Cicero.
- (21) Demetrius and Antony.
- (22) Dion and Brutus.
-
- (23) Artaxerxes.
- (24) Aratus.
- (25) Galba.
- (26) Otho.

Digitized by Google

x

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

VOL. X.

9

ΑΓΙΣ ΚΑΙ ΚΛΕΟΜΕΝΗΣ

ΑΓΙΣ

1. Οὐκ ἀτόπως τινὲς οὐδὲ φαύλως συγκείσθαι πρὸς τῶν φιλοδόξους ὑπονοοῦσι τὸν ἐπὶ τῷ Ἰξίονι μύθον, ὡς δὴ λαβόντι τὴν νεφέλην ἀντὶ τῆς Ἡρας καὶ τῶν Κενταύρων οὕτως γενομένων. καὶ γὰρ οὗτοι τῆς ἀρετῆς ὥσπερ εἰδώλω τινὶ τῇ δόξῃ συνόντες, οὐδὲν εἰλικρινὲς οὐδ' ὠμολογημένον, ἀλλὰ νόθα καὶ μικτὰ πολλὰ πράττουσιν, ἄλλοτε ἄλλας φορὰς φερόμενοι, ζήλοισ καὶ πάθεσιν ἐπακολουθοῦντες, ὅπερ οἱ Σοφοκλέους βοτῆρες ἐπὶ τῶν ποιμνίων λέγουσιν· τούτοις γὰρ ὄντες δεσπότες δουλεύομεν, καὶ τῶνδ' ἀνάγκη καὶ σιωπῶντων κλύειν.

2 ὅπερ ἀληθῶς οἱ πρὸς ἐπιθυμίας ὄχλων καὶ ὄρμᾶς πολιτευόμενοι πάσχουσι, δουλεύοντες καὶ ἀκολουθοῦντες ἵνα δημαγωγοὶ καὶ ἄρχοντες ὀνομάζωνται. καθάπερ γὰρ οἱ πρωρεῖς τὰ ἔμπροσθεν προορώμενοι τῶν κυβερνητῶν ἀφορῶσι πρὸς ἐκείνους καὶ τὸ προστασσόμενον ὑπ' ἐκείνων ποιοῦσιν, οὕτως οἱ πολιτευόμενοι καὶ πρὸς δόξαν ὀρώντες ὑπηρεταὶ μὲν τῶν πολλῶν εἰσιν, ὄνομα δὲ ἀρχόντων ἔχουσιν.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

AGIS

I. Not without rhyme or reason is the supposition of some writers that the tale about Ixion—how it was the cloud that he embraced instead of Hera and begat from thence the Centaurs—has an application to lovers of glory. For such men, consorting with glory, which we may call an image of virtue, produce nothing that is genuine and of true lineage, but much that is bastard and monstrous, being swept now along one course and now along another in their attempts to satisfy desire and passion. The herdsmen of Sophocles say,¹ in speaking of their flocks:—

“Of these, indeed, though masters, we are yet the slaves,
And to them we must listen even though they're dumb.”

And this, in truth, is the experience of public men who act in conformity with the desires and impulses of multitudes, making themselves attendants and slaves in order that they may be called popular leaders and rulers. For just as a ship's lookout, who sees what lies ahead before the ship's captain does, nevertheless turns to him for orders and does what he ordains, so the public man whose eyes are fixed on glory is a servant of the multitude, although he has the name of ruler.

¹ Probably in the lost “Poimenes,” or Shepherds (Nauck, *Trag. Graec. Frag.*², p. 249).

II. Ὁ μὲν γὰρ ἀπηκριβωμένος καὶ τελείως ἀγαθὸς οὐδ' ἂν ὄλως δόξης δέοιτο, πλὴν ὅση πάροδον ἐπὶ τὰς πράξεις διὰ τοῦ πιστεῦσθαι¹ δίδωσι· νέφ δὲ ἔτι ὄντι καὶ φιλοτίμῳ δοτέον ἀπὸ τῶν καλῶν ἔργων καὶ δόξῃ τι καλλωπίσασθαι καὶ κομπάσαι. φυόμεναι γὰρ ἐν τοῖς τηλικούτοις αἱ ἀρεταὶ καὶ βλαστάνουσαι τό τε κατορθούμενον, ὡς φησι Θεόφραστος, ἐκβεβαιούνται τοῖς ἐπαίνοις, καὶ τὸ λοιπὸν αὖξονται μετὰ φρονήματος ἐπαί-2 ρόμεναι. τὸ δὲ ἄγαν πανταχοῦ μὲν ἐπισφαλές, ἐν δὲ ταῖς πολιτικαῖς φιλοτιμίαις ὀλέθριον· ἐκφέ-ρει γὰρ εἰς μανίαν καὶ παραφροσύνην ὑπαιθρον ἐξουσίας μεγάλης ἐπιλαβομένους, ὅταν μὴ τὸ καλὸν ἔνδοξον εἶναι θέλωσιν, ἀλλ' ἀγαθὸν ἠγῶνται τὸ ἔνδοξον εἶναι. ὅπερ² οὖν Φωκίων πρὸς Ἀντίπατρον ἀξιούντά τι παρ' αὐτοῦ τῶν μὴ καλῶν “Οὐ δύνασαι,” εἶπεν, “ἅμα καὶ φίλῳ Φωκίῳνι χρῆσθαι καὶ κόλακι,” τοῦτο λεκτέον ἢ ὁμοίον τι 3 τούτῳ πρὸς τοὺς πολλούς· “Οὐ δύνασθε τὸν αὐτὸν ἔχειν καὶ ἄρχοντα καὶ ἀκόλουθον.” ἐπεὶ συμβαίνει γε καὶ οὕτως τὸ τοῦ δράκοντος, οὗ φησιν ὁ μῦθος τὴν οὐρὰν τῆ κεφαλῇ στασιάσασαν ἀξιοῦν ἠγείσθαι παρὰ μέρος καὶ μὴ διὰ παντὸς 796 ἀκολουθεῖν ἐκείνῃ, λαβοῦσαν δὲ τὴν ἠγεμονίαν αὐτὴν τε κακῶς ἀπαλλάττειν ἀνοία πορευομένην καὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν καταξαίνειν, τυφλοῖς καὶ κωφοῖς μέρεσιν ἀναγκαζομένην παρὰ φύσιν ἔπεισθαι.
 4 τοῦτο πολλοὺς τῶν πρὸς χάριν ἅπαντα πεπολιτευμένων ὀρώμεν πεπονθότας· ἐξαρτήσαντες γὰρ

¹ διὰ τοῦ π., Coraës, Bekker, and Ziegler, after Bryan : καὶ διὰ τοῦ π.

² ὅπερ Blass and Ziegler (with S^s p.m.) : ὅπερ.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

II. The man, indeed, whose goodness is complete and perfect will have no need at all of glory, except so far as glory gives him access to achievement by reason of the confidence men have in him; but a man who is still young and is fond of honours may be allowed to plume and exalt himself somewhat even upon glory, provided that glory is the outcome of noble deeds. For the virtues, which are incipient and budding in the young, are confirmed in their proper development, as Theophrastus says, by the praises of men, and complete their growth under the incentive of pride. But excess is everywhere harmful, and in the case of men who cherish political ambitions, it is deadly; for it sweeps them away into manifest folly and madness as they grasp after great power, when they refuse to regard what is honourable as glorious, but consider that what is glorious is good. Therefore, what Phocion said to Antipater, who demanded from him some dishonourable service, "Thou canst not have Phocion as thy friend and at the same time thy flatterer," this, or something akin to this, must be said to the multitude: "Ye cannot have the same man as your ruler and your slave." Since in this case also one certainly can apply the fable of the serpent whose tail rebelled against its head and demanded the right to lead in turn instead of always following; so it took the lead, and by the folly of its progress got itself into mischief and lacerated the head, which was compelled, contrary to nature, to follow a part that had neither eyes nor ears. This, as we see, has been the experience of many of the men whose whole political activity is directed towards the winning of popular favour; they made themselves dependent on the multitude, which is borne αὐτοὺς ὄχλων εἰκῆ φερομένων οὐτ' ἀναλαβεῖν ὕστερον οὐτ' ἐπιστῆσαι τὴν ἀταξίαν ἐδυνήθησαν.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Ταῦτα δὲ ἡμῖν εἰς τὴν παρὰ τῶν πολλῶν δόξαν ἐπήλθεν εἰπεῖν ἐννοήσασιν ἡλίκην ἔχει δύναμιν ἐκ τῶν Τιβερίῳ καὶ Γαίῳ τοῖς Γράγχοις συμπεσόντων, οὓς κάλλιστα μὲν φύντας, κάλλιστα δὲ τραφέντας, καλλίστην δὲ τῆς πολιτείας ὑπόθεσιν λαβόντας, ἀπώλεσεν οὐχ οὕτως ἐπιθυμία δόξης ἄμετρος, ὡς φόβος ἀδοξίας ἐκ προφάσεως οὐκ
5 ἀγεννοὺς πεφυκῶς. μεγάλην γὰρ εὐνοίαν προειληφότες παρὰ τῶν πολιτῶν ἡσχύνθησαν ἐγκαταλιπεῖν ὥσπερ χρέος· ἀμιλλώμενοι δ' αἰεὶ πολιτεύμασι χρηστοῖς τὰς τιμὰς ὑπερβάλλεσθαι, καὶ τιμώμενοι μᾶλλον ἐξ ὧν ἐπολιτεύοντο κεχαρισμένως, καὶ τοῦτον τὸν τρόπον ἴση φιλοτιμία πρὸς τε τὸν δῆμον ἑαυτοὺς καὶ τὸν δῆμον πρὸς ἑαυτοὺς ἐκκαύσαντες, ἔλαθον ἀψάμενοι πραγμάτων ἐν οἷς οὐκέτ' ἦν τὸ ἐπιμεῖναι καλόν, αἰσχρὸν δ' ἤδη τὸ παύσασθαι.

6 Ταῦτα μὲν οὖν ἐπικρινεῖς αὐτὸς ἐκ τῆς διηγήσεως· παραβάλωμεν δὲ αὐτοῖς Λακωνικὸν ζεῦγος δημαγωγῶν, Ἄγιν καὶ Κλεομένην τοὺς βασιλεῖς. καὶ γὰρ οὗτοι τὸν δῆμον αὔξοντες, ὥσπερ ἐκείνοι, καὶ πολιτείαν καλὴν καὶ δικαίαν ἐκλελοιπυῖαν πολὺν χρόνον ἀναλαμβάνοντες, ὁμοίως ἀπηχθάνοντο τοῖς δυνατοῖς μὴ βουλομένοις ἀφεῖναι τὴν συνήθη πλεονεξίαν. ἀδελφοὶ μὲν οὖν οὐκ ἦσαν about at random, and then could neither recover themselves nor put a stop to the progress of disorder.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

These remarks upon the glory which comes from the favour of the multitude I have been led to make because I was reminded of its great influence by the fortunes of Tiberius and Caius Gracchus. They were men of most generous natures, and had a most generous rearing, and adopted most generous political principles; and yet they were ruined, I will not say by an immoderate desire for glory, but rather by a fear of losing it. And this fear had no unworthy origin. For after they had enjoyed great kindness from their fellow citizens, they were ashamed to leave it unpaid, like a debt of money; and so they were forever striving by the excellence of their political services to surpass the honours conferred upon them, and were honoured all the more in consequence of their grateful political services. In this way, after kindling an equal ardour in themselves towards the people and in the people towards themselves, they engaged in enterprises wherein, though they knew it not, it was no longer honourable for them to persist, and already disgraceful for them to stop.

As to this matter, however, my reader will judge for himself from my narrative; and I shall compare with the Gracchi a pair of popular leaders in Sparta, Agis and Cleomenes the kings. For these also tried to exalt the people, just as the Gracchi did, and tried to restore an honourable and just civil polity which had lapsed for a long time; and like the Gracchi they incurred the hatred of the nobles, who were unwilling to relax their wonted greed. It is true that the ἀλλήλων οἱ Λάκωνες, συγγενοῦς δὲ καὶ ἀδελφῆς ἦσαντο πολιτείας, ἀρχὴν τοιαύτην λαβόντες.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

III. Ἐπεὶ παρεισέδου πρῶτον εἰς τὴν πόλιν ἀργύρου καὶ χρυσοῦ ζῆλος, καὶ συνηκολούθησε τοῦ πλοῦτου τῇ μὲν κτήσει πλεονεξία καὶ μικρολογία τῇ δὲ χρήσει καὶ ἀπολαύσει τρυφή καὶ μαλακία καὶ πολυτέλεια, τῶν πλείστων ἐξέπεσεν ἡ Σπάρτη καλῶν, καὶ ταπεινὰ πράττουσα παρ' ἀξίαν διετέλει μέχρι τῶν χρόνων ἐκείνων ἐν οἷς Ἄγισ καὶ
 2 Λεωνίδας ἐβασίλευον, Ἄγισ μὲν Εὐρυπωντίδης καὶ Εὐδαμίδα παῖς, ἕκτος ἀπὸ Ἀγησιλάου τοῦ διαβάντος εἰς τὴν Ἀσίαν καὶ μέγιστον Ἑλλήνων δυνηθέντος· ἦν γὰρ Ἀγησιλάου μὲν Ἀρχίδαμος ὁ περὶ Μανδύριον τῆς Ἰταλίας ὑπὸ Μεσσαπίων ἀποθανών, Ἀρχιδάμου δὲ πρεσβύτερος μὲν υἱὸς Ἄγισ, Εὐδαμίδας δὲ νεώτερος, ὅς, Ἀγιδῶς ὑπὸ Ἀντιπάτρου περὶ Μεγάλην πόλιν ἀναιρεθέντος ἀτέκνου, τὴν βασιλείαν ἔσχε, τούτου δὲ Ἀρχίδαμος, Ἀρχιδάμου δὲ ἕτερος Εὐδαμίδας, Εὐδαμίδα
 3 δὲ Ἄγισ, περὶ οὗ τάδε γέγραπται· Λεωνίδας δὲ ὁ Κλεωνύμου τῆς μὲν ἐτέρας οἰκίας ἦν Ἀγιάδης, ὄγδοος δὲ ἀπὸ Πausανίου τοῦ νικῆσαντος ἐν Πλαταιαῖς μάχῃ Μαρδόνιον. Πausανίας γὰρ υἱὸν ἔσχε Πλειστῶνακτα, Πλειστῶναξ δὲ Πausανίαν, οὗ φυγόντος εἰς Τεγέαν ἐκ Λακεδαίμονος ὃ τε πρεσβύτερος υἱὸς Ἀγησίπολις ἐβασίλευσε καὶ τούτου τελευτήσαντος ἀτέκνου Κλεόμβροτος
 4 ὁ νεώτερος. ἐκ δὲ Κλεομβρότου πάλιν ἄλλος Ἀγησίπολις ἦν καὶ Κλεομένης, ὧν Ἀγησίπολις μὲν οὔτε ἤρξε πολὺν χρόνον οὔτε παῖδας ἔσχε, Κλεομένης δὲ βασιλεύσας μετὰ Ἀγησίπολιν τὸν

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

Spartans were not brothers; still, they adopted political courses which were kindred and brother to one another. The occasion was as follows.

III. When once the love of silver and gold had crept into the city, closely followed by greed and parsimony in the acquisition of wealth and by luxury, effeminacy, and extravagance in the use and enjoyment of it, Sparta fell away from most of her noble traits, and continued in a low estate that was unworthy of her down to the times when Agis and Leonidas were kings. Agis was of the Eurypontid royal house, a son of Eudamidas, and the sixth in descent from the Agesilaüs who crossed into Asia and became the most powerful Greek of his time. For Agesilaüs had a son Archidamus, who was slain by the Messapians at Mandurium in Italy¹; Archidamus had an elder son Agis, and a younger son Eudamidas, who, after Agis was slain by Antipater at Megalopolis² leaving no issue, became king; Eudamidas was succeeded by Archidamus, Archidamus by another Eudamidas, and Eudamidas by Agis,³ the subject of this Life. Leonidas, on the other hand, the son of Cleonymus, was of the other royal house, the Agiad, and was eighth in descent from the Pausanias who defeated Mardonius at Plataea. For Pausanias had a son Pleistoanax, and Pleistoanax a son Pausanias, upon whose exile and flight from Sparta to Tegea⁴ his elder son Agesipolis became king; Agesipolis, dying without issue, was succeeded by a younger brother Cleombrotus, and Cleombrotus, in turn, had two sons, Agesipolis and Cleomenes, of whom Agesipolis reigned only a short time and left no sons, while Cleomenes, who became king after him, lived to

¹ In 338 B.C.

² In 330 B.C.

³ In 244 B.C.

⁴ In 395 B.C. See the Lysander, xxx. 1.

μὲν πρεσβύτερον τῶν υἱῶν Ἀκρότατον ἔτι ζῶν ἀπέβαλε, νεώτερον δὲ Κλεώνυμον κατέλιπεν, ὃς οὐκ ἐβασίλευσεν, ἀλλ' Ἄρεως υἱὸς ὦν Κλεομένους, Ἀκροτάτου δ' υἱός· Ἄρεως δὲ πεσόντος 5 5 κατέσχευεν. ἀπέθανε δὲ καὶ οὗτος ἡττηθεὶς μάχῃ 797 περὶ Μεγάλην πόλιν ὑπὸ Ἀριστοδήμου τοῦ τυράννου, καταλιπὼν ἐγκύμονα τὴν γυναῖκα. παιδίον δὲ ἄρρενος γενομένου Λεωνίδας ὁ Κλεωνύμου τὴν ἐπιτροπὴν ἔσχευεν, εἶτα πρὶν ἐν ἡλικίᾳ γενέσθαι τελευτήσαντος, οὕτως εἰς αὐτὸν ἡ βασιλεία περιήλθεν οὐ πάνυ τοῖς πολίταις εὐάρμοστον ὄντα.
 6 καίπερ γὰρ ἐγκεκλικότων ἤδη τῇ διαφθορᾷ τοῦ πολιτεύματος ὁμαλῶς ἀπάντων, ἦν τις ἐν τῷ Λεωνίδᾳ τῶν πατρῶων ἐπιφανῆς ἐκδιαίτησις, ἃτε δὴ χρόνον ἡλιυδημένῳ πολὺν ἐν αὐλαῖς σατραπικαῖς καὶ τεθεραπευκότι Σέλευκον, εἶτα τὸν ἐκεῖθεν ὄγκον εἰς Ἑλληνικὰ πράγματα καὶ νόμιμον ἀρχὴν οὐκ ἐμμελῶς μεταφέροντι.

IV. Ὁ δ' Ἄγις οὕτω πολὺν παρήλλαττεν εὐφυΐα καὶ φρονήματι ψυχῆς οὐ μόνον τοῦτον, ἀλλὰ σχεδὸν ἅπαντας ὅσοι μετ' Ἀγησίλαον τὸν μέγαν ἐβασίλευσαν, ὥστε μηδέπω γεγονῶς εἰκοστὸν ἔτος, ἐντεθραμμένος δὲ πλούτοις καὶ τρυφαῖς γυναικῶν, τῆς τε μητρὸς Ἀγησιστράτας καὶ τῆς μᾶμμης Ἀρχιδαμίας, αἱ πλεῖστα χρήματα Λακεδαιμονίῳ ἐκέκτηντο, πρὸς τε τὰς ἡδονὰς εὐθύς ἀπισχυρίσασθαι, καὶ τὸν ἐπιπρέψαι μάλιστα τῇ χάριτι lose his elder son Acrotatus, but left behind him a younger son Cleonymus; Cleonymus, however, did not come to the throne, but Areus,¹ who was a nephew of Cleomenes and son of Acrotatus; Areus fell in battle at Corinth,² and his son Acrotatus came to the throne; Acrotatus also was defeated and slain at Megalopolis, by the tyrant Aristodemus, leaving his wife with child; and after she had given birth to a son, Leonidas the son of Cleonymus was made the child's guardian. But the young king died before reaching manhood, and the kingship therefore devolved upon Leonidas,³ who was altogether unacceptable to the people. For although the destruction of the constitution had already led to a general decline in manners, there was in Leonidas a very marked departure from the traditions of his country, since for a long time he had frequented oriental courts and had been a servile follower of Seleucus, and now sought to transfer the pride and pomp which prevailed abroad into Hellenic relations and a constitutional government, where they were out of place.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

IV. Agis, on the contrary, far surpassed in native excellence and in loftiness of spirit not only Leonidas, but almost all the kings who had followed the great Agesilaüs. Therefore, even before he had reached his twentieth year, and although he had been reared amid the wealth and luxury of women, namely, his mother Agesistrata and his grandmother Archidamia (who were the richest people in Sparta), he at once set his face against pleasures. He put away from his person the adornments which were thought to

¹ See the Pyrrhus, xxvi. 8 ff.

² In 265 B.C., in battle with Antigonus Gonatas.

³ About 256 B.C.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

τῆς μορφῆς ὠραῖσμον δοκοῦντα περισπάσας τοῦ σώματος, καὶ πᾶσαν ἐκδὺς καὶ διαφυγὼν πολυτέλειαν, ἐγκαλλωπίζεσθαι τῷ τριβωνίῳ, καὶ δεῖπνα καὶ λουτρὰ καὶ διαίτας Λακωνικὰς ζητεῖν, καὶ λέγειν ὡς οὐδὲν δέοιτο τῆς βασιλείας, εἰ μὴ δι' αὐτὴν ἀναλήψοιτο τοὺς νόμους καὶ τὴν πάτριον ἀγωγὴν.

V. Ἀρχὴν μὲν οὖν διαφθορᾶς καὶ τοῦ νοσεῖν ἔσχε τὰ πράγματα τῶν Λακεδαιμονίων σχεδὸν ἀφ' οὗ τὴν Ἀθηναίων καταλύσαντες ἡγεμονίαν χρυσίου τε καὶ ἀργυρίου κατέπλησαν ἑαυτούς. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν οἰκῶν ὃν ὁ Λυκούργος ὤρισε φυλαττόντων ἀριθμὸν ἐν ταῖς διαδοχαῖς, καὶ πατρὸς παιδὶ τὸν κλῆρον ἀπολείποντος, ἀμῶς γέ πως ἢ τάξις αὕτη καὶ ἰσότης διαμένουσα τὴν πόλιν ἐκ τῶν ἄλλων ἀνέφερον ἀμαρτημάτων.

2 ἐφορεύσας δέ τις ἀνὴρ δυνατός, αὐθάδης δὲ καὶ χαλεπὸς τὸν τρόπον, Ἐπιτάδευς ὄνομα, πρὸς τὸν υἱὸν αὐτῷ γενομένης διαφορᾶς ῥήτραν ἔγραψεν ἐξεῖναι τὸν οἶκον αὐτοῦ καὶ τὸν κλῆρον ᾧ τις ἐθέλοι καὶ ζῶντα δοῦναι καὶ καταλιπεῖν διατιθέ-

3 μενον. οὗτος μὲν οὖν αὐτοῦ τινα θυμὸν ἀποπιμπλὰς ἴδιον εἰσήνεγκε τὸν νόμον· οἱ δὲ ἄλλοι πλεονεξίας ἔνεκα δεξάμενοι καὶ κυρώσαντες ἀπώλεσαν τὴν ἀρίστην κατάστασιν. ἐκτῶντο γὰρ ἀφειδῶς ἤδη παρωθούντες οἱ δυνατοὶ τοὺς προσήκοντας ἐκ τῶν διαδοχῶν· καὶ ταχὺ τῆς εὐπορίας εἰς ὀλίγους συρρυσθείσης πενία τὴν πόλιν κατέσχευε, ἀσχολίαν τῶν καλῶν καὶ ἀνελευθερίαν ἐπιφέρουσα

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

benefit the grace of his figure, laid aside and avoided every extravagance, prided himself on his short Spartan cloak, observed sedulously the Spartan customs in his meals and baths and general ways of living, and declared that he did not want the royal power at all unless by means of it he could restore the ancient laws and discipline.

V. And here I may say that the Lacedaemonian state began to suffer distemper and corruption soon after its subversion of the Athenian supremacy filled it with gold and silver. However, since the number of families instituted by Lycurgus¹ was still preserved in the transmission of estates, and father left to son his inheritance, to some extent the continuance of this order and equality sustained the state in spite of its errors in other respects. But when a certain powerful man came to be ephor who was headstrong and of a violent temper, Epitadeus by name, he had a quarrel with his son, and introduced a law permitting a man during his lifetime to give his estate and allotment to any one he wished, or in his will and testament so to leave it. This man, then, satisfied a private grudge of his own in introducing the law; but his fellow citizens welcomed the law out of greed, made it valid, and so destroyed the most excellent of institutions. For the men of power and influence at once began to acquire estates without scruple, ejecting the rightful heirs from their inheritances; and speedily the wealth of the state streamed into the hands of a few men, and poverty became the general rule, bringing in its train lack of leisure for noble pursuits and occupations unworthy of freemen, along with envy and μετὰ φθόνου καὶ δυσμενείας πρὸς τοὺς ἔχοντας.

¹ See the Lycurgus, viii. f.

 4 ἀπελείφθησαν οὖν ἑπτακοσίων οὐ πλείονες Σπαρ-τιᾶται, καὶ τούτων ἴσως ἑκατὸν ἦσαν οἱ γῆν κекτημένοι καὶ κλῆρον· ὁ δ' ἄλλος ὄχλος ἄπορος καὶ ἄτιμος ἐν τῇ πόλει παρεκάθητο, τοὺς μὲν ἔξωθεν πολέμους ἀργῶς καὶ ἀπροθύμως ἀμυνό-μενος, αἰεὶ δέ τινα καιρὸν ἐπιτηρῶν μεταβολῆς καὶ μεταστάσεως τῶν παρόντων.

VI. Διὰ ταῦτα δὴ καλὸν ὁ Ἄγις, ὥσπερ ἦν, ποιούμενος ἐξιῶσαι καὶ ἀναπληρῶσαι τὴν πόλιν, ἐπειρᾶτο τῶν ἀνθρώπων. οἱ μὲν οὖν νέοι ταχὺ καὶ παρ' ἐλπίδας ὑπήκουσαν αὐτῷ, καὶ συναπεδύ-σαντο πρὸς τὴν ἀρετὴν, ὥσπερ ἐσθήτα τὴν δίαιταν 2 ἐπ' ἐλευθερίᾳ συμμεταβάλλοντες. τῶν δὲ πρε-σβυτέρων, ἅτε δὴ πόρρω διαφθορᾶς γεγονότων, συνέβαινε τοῖς πλείστοις ὥσπερ ἐπὶ δεσπότην ἀγομένους ἐκ δρασμοῦ δεδιέναι καὶ τρέμειν τὸν Λυκοῦργον, καὶ καθήπτοντο τοῦ Ἄγιδος ὀδυρο-μένου τὰ παρόντα πράγματα καὶ τὸ παλαιὸν 798 ἀξίωμα τῆς Σπάρτης ἐπιποθοῦντος. Λύσανδρος δὲ ὁ Λίβυος καὶ Μανδροκλείδας ὁ Ἐκφάνους, ἔτι δὲ Ἀγησίλαος ἀπεδέξαντο καὶ συμπαρῶρμησαν 3 αὐτοῦ τὴν φιλοτιμίαν. ἦν δὲ Λύσανδρος μὲν ἐν δόξῃ μάλιστα τῶν πολιτῶν, Μανδροκλείδας δὲ δεινότατος Ἑλλήνων πράγματα συσκευάσασθαι καὶ τὸ συνετὸν τοῦτο καὶ δολερὸν τόλμη μεμιγμένον ἔχων· Ἀγησίλαον δὲ θεῖον ὄντα τοῦ βασιλέως καὶ δυνατὸν εἰπεῖν, ἄλλως δὲ μαλακὸν καὶ φιλοχρήματον, ἐμφανῶς μὲν ὁ υἱὸς Ἴππομέδων

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

hatred towards the men of property. Thus there were left of the old Spartan families not more than seven hundred, and of these there were perhaps a hundred who possessed land and allotment; while the ordinary throng, without resources and without civic rights, lived in enforced idleness, showing no zeal or energy in warding off foreign wars, but ever watching for some opportunity to subvert and change affairs at home.

VI. Agis, therefore, thinking it a noble achievement, as it was, to equalize and restore to full numbers the body of citizens, began to sound the inclinations of people. The young men, as he found, quickly and beyond his expectations gave ear to him, and stripped themselves for the contest in behalf of virtue, like him casting aside their old ways of living as worn-out garments in order to attain liberty. But most of the older men, since they were now far gone in corruption, feared and shuddered at the name of Lycurgus as if they had run away from their master and were being led back to him, and they upbraided Agis for bewailing the present state of affairs and yearning after the ancient dignity of Sparta. Lysander, however, the son of Libys, Mandrocleidas the son of Ecphanes, as well as Agesilaüs, approved of the king's aspirations and supported him in them. Lysander was in the highest repute among the citizens, and Mandrocleidas was the ablest Greek of his time in setting schemes on foot, and his sagacity and craft were mingled with daring; Agesilaüs, who was the king's uncle on his mother's side, and a powerful orator, though otherwise effeminate and avaricious, was openly urged on and encouraged by his son

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἐκινεὶ καὶ παρεθάρρυνεν, εὐδόκιμος ἐν πολλοῖς πολέμοις ἀνὴρ καὶ μέγα δι' εὐνοίαν τῶν νέων 4 δυνάμενος· ἡ δὲ ἀληθῶς ἀναπείσασα τὸν Ἀγησί-λαον αἰτία τῶν πραττομένων μετασχεῖν ὀφλημάτων πλήθος ἦν, ὧν ἤλπιζεν ἀπαλλαγῆσεσθαι μεταβάλλων τὴν πολιτείαν. ὡς οὖν τάχιστα προσηγάγετο τοῦτον ὁ Ἄγις, εὐθύς ἐπιχειρεῖ μετ' αὐτοῦ τὴν μητέρα πείθειν, ἀδελφὴν οὖσαν τοῦ Ἀγησιλάου, πλήθει δὲ πελατῶν καὶ φίλων καὶ χρεωστῶν μέγα δυναμένην ἐν τῇ πόλει καὶ πολλὰ τῶν κοινῶν διαπραττομένην.

VII. Ἡ δὲ ἀκούσασα τὸ μὲν πρῶτον ἐξεπλάγη καὶ κατέπαυε τὸ μειράκιον ὡς οὔτε δυνατῶν οὔτε λυσιτελῶν ἐφίεμενον· ἐπεὶ δὲ ταῦτα μὲν ὁ Ἀγησίλαος ἐδίδασκεν ὡς καλῶς ἔξει καὶ πραχθήσεται συμφερόντως, αὐτὸς δὲ ὁ βασιλεὺς ἐδεῖτο τῆς μητρὸς ἐπιδούναι πρὸς δόξαν αὐτῷ καὶ φιλοτιμίαν τὸν πλοῦτον, ὡς χρήμασι μὲν οὐ δυνάμενος πρὸς 2 τοὺς ἄλλους βασιλεῖς ἐξισωθῆναι (σατραπῶν γὰρ οἰκέτας καὶ δούλους ἐπιτρόπων Πτολεμαίου καὶ Σελεύκου κεκτήσθαι πλείονα συμπάντων ὁμοῦ τῶν ἐν Σπάρτῃ βασιλέων), ἐὰν δὲ σωφροσύνη καὶ λιτότητι καὶ μεγαλοψυχίᾳ τὰς ἐκείνων ὑπερβαλόμενος τρυφὰς ἰσότητα καὶ κοινωνίαν καταστήσῃ τοῖς πολίταις, ὄνομα καὶ δόξαν ὡς ἀληθῶς βασιλέως μεγάλου κτησόμενος, οὕτω μετέπεσον ταῖς γνώμαις αἱ γυναῖκες ὑπὸ τῆς φιλοτιμίας
 3 σχέθησαν οἶον ἐπιπνοία πρὸς τὸ καλόν, ὥστε τὸν

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

Hippomedon, who had won fair fame in many wars, and had great influence because he stood in favour with the young men. But what really induced Agesilaüs to take part in the king's enterprise was the multitude of his debts, of which he hoped to rid himself by changing the constitution. As soon, then, as Agis had won over Agesilaüs, he straightway sought with the aid of his uncle to persuade his mother, who was a sister of Agesilaüs, and owing to the multitude of her retainers, friends, and debtors, had great influence in the state and took a large part in public affairs.

VII. When she heard her son's plea, she was at first amazed, and tried to stop the young man from attempting what she thought was neither possible nor profitable; but Agesilaüs tried to show her that the king's project would be feasible and its accomplishment advantageous, and the king himself besought his mother to contribute her wealth for the advancement of his ambition and glory. For in the matter of property, he said, he could not equal the other kings (since the servants and slaves of the satraps and overseers of Ptolemy and Seleucus had larger possessions than all the kings of Sparta put together); but if in self-restraint, simplicity, and magnanimity he should surpass their luxury, and thereby establish equality and community of possession among his citizens, he would win the name and fame of a really great king. The women, lifted up by the young man's high ambition, were so changed in their purposes, and possessed, as it were, by so great an inspiration to take the noble course, that they joined in urging and hastening on the projects of μὲν Ἄγιν συνεξορμᾶν καὶ συνεπιταχύνειν, μεταπεμπομένας δὲ τοὺς φίλους παρακαλεῖν καὶ ταῖς ἄλλαις διαλέγεσθαι γυναιξίν, ἅτε δὴ τοὺς Λακεδαιμονίους ἐπισταμένας κατηκόους ὄντας αἰεὶ τῶν γυναικῶν, καὶ πλείον ἐκείναις τῶν δημοσίων ἢ τῶν ἰδίων αὐτοῖς πολυπραγμονεῖν διδόντας.

Ἦν δὲ τότε τῶν Λακωνικῶν πλούτων ἐν ταῖς γυναιξὶ τὸ πλεῖστον, καὶ τοῦτο τὴν πράξιν τῷ
 4 Ἄγιδι δύσεργον καὶ χαλεπὴν ἐποίησεν. ἀντέστησαν γὰρ αἱ γυναῖκες οὐ μόνον τρυφῆς ἐκπίπτουσαι δι' ἀπειροκαλίαν εὐδαιμονιζομένης, ἀλλὰ καὶ τιμὴν καὶ δύναμιν, ἣν ἐκ τοῦ πλουτεῖν ἐκαρποῦντο, περικοπτομένην αὐτῶν ὀρώσαι. καὶ πρὸς τὸν Λεωνίδαυ τραπόμεναι παρεκάλουν ὄντα πρεσβύτερον ἐπιλαμβάνεσθαι τοῦ Ἄγιδος καὶ τὰ
 5 πραττόμενα διακωλύειν. ἐβούλετο μὲν οὖν ὁ Λεωνίδας τοῖς πλουσίοις βοηθεῖν, δεδιὼς δὲ τὸν δῆμον ἐπιθυμοῦντα τῆς μεταβολῆς οὐδὲν ἀντέπραττε φανερώς, λάθρα δὲ τὴν πράξιν ἐζήτει κακουργεῖν καὶ διαφθεῖρειν ἐντυγχάνων τοῖς ἄρχουσι καὶ διαβάλλων τὸν Ἄγιν ὡς τυραννίδος μισθὸν τοῖς πένησι τὰ τῶν πλουσίων προτείνοντα, καὶ γῆς μεταδόσεσι καὶ χρεῶν ἀφέσεσι πολλοὺς ὠνούμενον ἑαυτῷ δορυφόρους, οὐ τῇ Σπάρτῃ πολίτας.

VIII. Οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ διαπραξάμενος ὁ Ἄγις ἔφορον γενέσθαι τὸν Λύσανδρον, εὐθύς εἰσέφερε δι' αὐτοῦ ῥήτραιν εἰς τοὺς γέροντας, ἧς ἦν κεφάλαια χρεῶν μὲν ἀφεθῆναι τοὺς ὀφείλοντας, τῆς δὲ γῆς ἀναδασθείσης τὴν μὲν ἀπὸ τοῦ κατὰ Πελλήνην χαράδρου πρὸς τὸ Ταύγετον καὶ Μαλέαν καὶ

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

Agis, sent for their friends among the men and invited them to help, and held conference with the women besides, since they were well aware that the men of Sparta were always obedient to their wives, and allowed them to meddle in public affairs more than they themselves were allowed to meddle in domestic concerns.

Now, at this time the greater part of the wealth of Sparta was in the hands of the women, and this made the work of Agis a grievous and difficult one. For the women were opposed to it, not only because they would be stripped of the luxury which, in the general lack of higher culture, made their lives seem happy, but also because they saw that the honour and influence which they enjoyed in consequence of their wealth would be cut off. So they had recourse to Leonidas, and besought him, since he was an older man, to withstand Agis and hinder what he was trying to accomplish. Leonidas, accordingly, was desirous of aiding the rich, but he feared the people, who were eager for a revolution. He therefore made no open opposition to Agis, but secretly sought to damage his undertaking and bring it to nought by slandering him to the chief magistrates, declaring that he was purchasing a tyranny by offering to the poor the property of the rich, and by distribution of land and remission of debts was buying a large body-guard for himself, not many citizens for Sparta.

VIII. However, Agis procured Lysander's election as ephor, and at once employed him to introduce a bill into the senate,¹ the chief provisions of which were that debtors should be relieved of their debts, and that the land should be divided up, that which lay between the water-course at Pellene and Taygetus,

¹ About 243 B.C.

Σελασίαν κλήρους γενέσθαι τετρακισχιλίους πεντακοσίους, τὴν δ' ἔξω μυρίους πεντακισχιλίους·
 2 καὶ ταύτην μὲν τοῖς ὄπλα φέρειν δυναμένοις τῶν περιόικων μερισθῆναι, τὴν δὲ ἐντὸς αὐτοῖς Σπαρτιάταις· ἀναπληρωθῆναι δὲ τούτους ἕκ τε περιόικων καὶ ξένων, ὅσοι τροφῆς μετεσχηκότες ἐλευθερίου καὶ χαρίεντες ἄλλως τοῖς σώμασι καὶ καθ' ἡλικίαν ἀκμάζοντες εἴεν· σύνταξιν δὲ τούτων εἰς πεντεκαίδεκα γενέσθαι φιδίτια κατὰ τετρακοσίους καὶ διακοσίους, καὶ δίαιταν ἣν εἶχον οἱ πρόγονοι διαιτᾶσθαι.

IX. Γραφείσης δὲ τῆς ῥήτρας, καὶ τῶν γερόντων εἰς ταῦτό ταῖς γνώμαις οὐ συμφερομένων, ἐκκλησίαν συναγαγὼν ὁ Λύσανδρος αὐτὸς τε διελέχθη τοῖς πολίταις, καὶ Μανδροκλείδας καὶ Ἀγησίλαος ἐδέοντο μὴ δι' ὀλίγους ἐντροφῶντας αὐτοῖς περιῦδεῖν ἐρριμμένον τὸ ἀξίωμα τῆς Σπάρτης, ἀλλὰ τῶν τε προτέρων χρησμῶν μνημονεύσαι, τὴν φιλοχρημοσύνην ὡς ὀλέθριον τῇ Σπάρτῃ φυλάττεσθαι διακελευομένων, καὶ τῶν ἔναγχος ἕκ Πασιφάας κεκομισμένων αὐτοῖς.

2 Ἱερὸν δὲ Πασιφάας καὶ μαντεῖον ἦν ἐν Θαλάμαις τιμώμενον, ἣν τινες μὲν ἰστοροῦσι τῶν Ἀτλαντίδων μίαν οὔσαν ἕκ Διὸς τὸν Ἄμμωνα τεκεῖν, τινὲς δὲ Κασάνδραν τὴν Πριάμου τελευτήσασαν ἐνταῦθα καὶ διὰ τὸ πᾶσι φαίνειν τὰ μαντεῖα Πασιφάαν προσαγορευθεῖσαν. ὁ δὲ Φύλαρχος Ἀμύκλα θυγατέρα, Δάφνην τοῦνομα, φησὶν ὑποφεύγουσαν Ἀπόλλωνα βουλόμενον αὐτῇ μιγῆναι, καὶ μεταβαλοῦσαν εἰς τὸ φυτόν, ἐν τιμῇ τοῦ θεοῦ
 3 γενέσθαι καὶ μαντικὴν λαβεῖν δύναμιν. ἔφασαν

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

Malea, and Sellasia, into forty-five hundred lots, and that which lay outside this into fifteen thousand; that this larger land should be apportioned among those of the provincials who were capable of bearing arms, and the smaller among the genuine Spartans; that the number of these Spartans should be filled up from the provincials and foreigners who had received the rearing of freemen and were, besides, of vigorous bodies and in the prime of life; and that these should be formed into fifteen public messes by four hundreds and two hundreds, and should practise the mode of life which the ancient Spartans had followed.

IX. The "rhetra" was introduced in the senate, and the senators were divided in opinion. Lysander therefore called together a general assembly and discussed the matter himself with the citizens, and Mandrocleidas and Agesilaiis begged them not to suffer the insolent opposition of a few to blind them to the prostration of Sparta's dignity, but to call to mind the earlier oracles which bade them beware of the love of riches as a fatal thing for Sparta, as well as the oracles which had lately been brought to them from Pasiphaë.

Now there was a temple of Pasiphaë at Thalamae, and her oracle there was held in honour. Some say that Pasiphaë was one of the daughters of Atlas, and the mother of Ammon by Zeus, and some that Cassandra the daughter of Priam died at Thalamae, and was called Pasiphaë because she declared her oracles to all. Phylarchus, however, says that she was a daughter of Amyclas, Daphne by name, and that, fleeing the embraces of Apollo, she was changed into the tree of like name, after which she was honoured by the god with the gift of prophetic power. Be οὖν καὶ τὰ παρὰ ταύτης μαντεία προστάττειν τοῖς Σπαρτιάταις ἴσους γενέσθαι πάντας καθ' ἑν ὁ Λυκούργος ἐξ ἀρχῆς ἔταξε νόμον. ἐπὶ πᾶσι δὲ ὁ βασιλεὺς Ἄγις εἰς μέσον παρελθὼν καὶ βραχέα διαλεχθεὶς ἔφη συμβολὰς διδόναι τῇ πολιτείᾳ μεγίστας ἦν καθίστησι· τὴν γὰρ αὐτοῦ πρῶτον οὐσίαν εἰς μέσον τιθέναι, πολλὴν μὲν οὖσαν ἐν τοῖς γεωργουμένοις καὶ νεμομένοις, ἄνευ δὲ τούτων ἑξακόσια τάλαντα νομίσματος ἔχουσαν· τὸ δὲ αὐτὸ καὶ τὰς μητέρας ποιεῖν καὶ τοὺς φίλους καὶ οἰκείους, πλουσιωτάτους ὄντας Σπαρτιατῶν.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

X. Ὁ μὲν οὖν δῆμος ἐξεπλάγη τὴν μεγαλοψυχίαν τοῦ νεανίσκου, καὶ περιχαρῆς ἦν ὡς δι' ἐτῶν ὁμοῦ τι διακοσίων¹ πεφηνότος ἀξίου τῆς Σπάρτης βασιλέως· ὁ δὲ Λεωνίδας τότε δὴ μάλιστα πρὸς τοῦναντίον ἐφιλονείκησε. λογιζόμενος γὰρ ὅτι ταῦτά μὲν ἀναγκασθήσεται ποιεῖν, οὐ τὴν αὐτὴν δὲ χάριν ἔξει παρὰ τοῖς πολίταις, ἀλλὰ πάντων ὁμοίως ἂ κέκτηνται κατατιθεμένων μόνῳ τῷ ἀρξαμένῳ προσθήσουσι τὴν τιμὴν, ἠρώτα τὸν Ἄγιν εἰ δίκαιον ἄνδρα καὶ σπουδαίου² ἡγεῖται γεγονέναι Λυκούργον. ὁμολογήσαντος δ' ἐκείνου, “Ποῦ τοίνυν,” ἔφη, “Λυκούργος ἢ χρεῶν ἀποκοπὰς ἔδωκεν ἢ ξένους κατέταξεν εἰς τὴν πολιτείαν, ὃς οὐδὲ ὄλως ἐνόμιζεν ὑγιαίνειν τὴν πόλιν μὴ χρωμένην ξενηλασίαις;”

Ὁ δὲ Ἄγις ἀπεκρίνατο μὴ θαυμάζειν τὸν Λεωνίδα, εἰ τεθραμμένος ἐν ξένη καὶ πεπαιδο-

¹ ὁμοῦ τι διακοσίων Blass (Fuhr) : ὁμοῦ τριακοσίων.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

this as it may, it was now said that the oracles brought from this goddess ordained that all Spartans should be on an equality according to the original law made by Lycurgus. . And finally, King Agis came forward and after a brief discourse said that he offered very large contributions to the constitutions which he was trying to establish ; for in the first place he put into the common stock his own estate, which included extensive tillage and pasture, and apart from this six hundred talents in money ; and, besides, his mother and his grandmother did likewise, together with their relatives and friends, and they were the wealthiest among the Spartans.

X. The people, accordingly, were filled with amazement at the magnanimity of the young man, and were delighted, feeling that after a lapse of nearly two hundred years a king had appeared who was worthy of Sparta ; but Leonidas, now more than ever, strove in opposition. For he reasoned that he would be compelled to do as Agis had done, and that he would not get the same gratitude for it among the citizens, but that if all the rich alike made their property a part of the common fund, the honour for it would be given to him alone who had led the way. He therefore asked Agis if he thought that Lycurgus had shown himself a just and worthy man, and when Agis said that he did, "When, then," said Leonidas, "did Lycurgus either grant abolition of debts or admit foreigners into citizenship—a man who held that the state was in no healthy way at all if it did not practise expulsion of foreigners ?"

But Agis replied that he was not astonished to find Leonidas, who had been reared in foreign lands and

ποιημενος ἐκ γάμων σατραπικῶν ἀγνοεῖ τὸν
 Λυκούργου, ὅτι τὸ μὲν ὀφείλειν καὶ δανείζειν ἅμα
 3 τῷ νομίσματι συνεξέβαλεν ἐκ τῆς πόλεως, τῶν δ' ἐν ταῖς πόλεσι ξένων τοὺς τοῖς ἐπιτηδεύμασι καὶ ταῖς διαίταις ἀσυμφύλους μᾶλλον ἐδυσχέραινε· καὶ γὰρ ἐκείνους ἤλαυνεν οὐ τοῖς σώμασι πολε-μῶν, ἀλλὰ τοὺς βίους αὐτῶν καὶ τοὺς τρόπους δεδιώς, μὴ συναναχρῶννύμενοι τοῖς πολίταις τρυφῆς καὶ μαλακίας καὶ πλεονεξίας ἐντέκωσι ζῆλον· ἐπεὶ Τέρπανδρὸν γε καὶ Θάλητα καὶ Φερεκύδην ξένους ὄντας, ὅτι τὰ αὐτὰ τῷ Λυ-κούργῳ διετέλουν ἄδοντες καὶ φιλοσοφούντες, 4 ἐν Σπάρτῃ τιμηθῆναι διαφερόντως. “Σὺ δὲ
 Ἐκπρέπη μὲν,” ἔφησεν, “ἐπαινεῖς, ὃς ἐφορεύων Φρύνιδος τοῦ μουσικοῦ σκεπάρνῳ τὰς δύο τῶν ἐννέα χορδῶν ἐξέτεμε, καὶ τοὺς ἐπὶ Τιμοθέῳ πάλιν τὸ αὐτὸ τοῦτο πράξαντας, ἡμᾶς δὲ μέμφη 800 τρυφὴν καὶ πολυτέλειαν καὶ ἀλαζονείαν ἐκ τῆς Σπάρτης ἀναιρῶντας, ὥσπερ οὐχὶ κακείνων τὸ ἐν μουσικῇ σοβαρὸν καὶ περιττὸν ὅπως ἐνταῦθα μὴ προέλθῃ φυλαττομένων, ὅπου γενομένων βίων καὶ τρόπων ἀμετρία καὶ πλημμέλεια τὴν πόλιν ἀσύμφωνον καὶ ἀνάρμοστον ἑαυτῇ πεποιήκεν.”

XI. Ἐκ τούτου τῷ μὲν Ἀγιδι τὸ πλῆθος ἐπηκολούθησεν, οἱ δὲ πλούσιοι τὸν τε Λεωνίδα παρεκάλουν μὴ σφᾶς προέσθαι, καὶ τοὺς γέροντας, οἷς τὸ κράτος ἦν ἐν τῷ προβουλεύειν, δεόμενοι καὶ πείθοντες ἴσχυσαν, ὅσον ἐνὶ πλείονας γενέ-2 σθαι τοὺς ἀποψηφισαμένους τὴν ῥήτραν. ὁ δὲ
 Λύσανδρος ἔτι τὴν ἀρχὴν ἔχων ὤρμησε τὸν Λεω-

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

had children by an oriental marriage, ignorant that Lycurgus had banished from the state debts and loans along with coined money, and that foreigners in the cities were held by him in less displeasure than men to whom the Spartan practices and ways of living were not congenial; these, indeed, he sought to drive away, not because he was hostile to their persons, but because he feared lest their lives and manners should contaminate the citizens, and breed in them a love of luxury, effeminacy, and greed; for certainly Terpander and Thales and Pherecydes were foreigners, and yet, because the teachings of their songs and philosophy always accorded with those of Lycurgus, they were held in surpassing honour at Sparta. "Thou praisest Ectrepes," said Agis, "who, as ephor, cut out with an edge two of the nine lute-strings of Phrynis the musician, and likewise the magistrates in the time of Timotheus, who did the same thing in their turn, but thou blamest me for trying to remove luxury, extravagance, and ostentation from Sparta, as if those magistrates also were not on the watch to prevent the pompous and superfluous in music from making such advances here that the consequent excess and discord in lives and manners would render the state dissonant and incongruous."

XI. After this, the common people took sides with Agis, but the men of wealth entreated Leonidas not to abandon them. And by prayers and arguments with the senators, whose power lay in their privilege of presenting all measures to the people, they so far prevailed that by a single vote the proposed rhetra was rejected. Lysander, however, who was still ephor, set on foot an indictment of Leonidas by virtue of νίδαν διώκειν κατὰ δὴ τινα νόμον παλαιόν, ὃς οὐκ ἔσ' τὸν Ἡρακλείδην ἐκ γυναικὸς ἀλλοδαπῆς τεκνοῦσθαι, τὸν δὲ ἀπελθόντα τῆς Σπάρτης ἐπὶ μετοικισμῷ πρὸς ἑτέρους ἀποθνήσκειν κελεύει. ταῦτα κατὰ τοῦ Λεωνίδα λέγειν ἑτέρους διδάξας, αὐτὸς παρεφύλαττε μετὰ τῶν συναρχόντων τὸ σημεῖον.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- 3 Ἔστι δὲ τοιόνδε· δι' ἐτῶν ἐννέα λαβόντες οἱ ἔφοροι νύκτα καθαρὰν καὶ ἀσέληνον, σιωπῇ καθέζονται πρὸς οὐρανὸν ἀποβλέποντες. εἰάν οὖν ἐκ μέρους τινὸς εἰς ἕτερον μέρος ἀστήρ διάξῃ, κρίνουσι τοὺς βασιλεῖς ὡς περὶ τὸ θεῖον ἔξαμαρτάνοντας, καὶ καταπαύουσι τῆς ἀρχῆς, μέχρι ἂν ἐκ Δελφῶν ἢ Ὀλυμπίας χρησμὸς ἔλθῃ τοῖς ἠλωκόσι τῶν βασιλέων βοηθῶν.
- 4 Τοῦτο δὴ τὸ σημεῖον αὐτῷ γεγονέναι λέγων ὁ Λύσανδρος κρίσιν τῷ Λεωνίδᾳ προῦθηκε, καὶ μάρτυρας παρέιχεν ὡς ἐκ γυναικὸς Ἀσιανῆς, ἣν τῶν Σελεύκου τινὸς ὑπάρχων αὐτῷ συνοικίσαντος ἔσχε, τεκνώσαιο δύο παιδιά, δυσχεραίνόμενος δὲ καὶ μισούμενος ὑπὸ τῆς γυναικὸς ἐπανέλθοι παρὰ γνώμην οἴκαδε, καὶ διαδοχῆς ἔρημον ἀνέλοιτο τὸ βασίλειον. ἅμα δὲ τῇ δίκῃ Κλεόμβροτον ἔπειθε τῆς βασιλείας ἀντιποιεῖσθαι, γαμβρὸν ὄντα τοῦ Λεωνίδα, γένους δὲ τοῦ βασιλικοῦ. φοβηθεὶς οὖν ὁ Λεωνίδας ἰκέτης γίνεται τῆς Χαλκιοῖκου, καὶ συνικέτευεν ἢ θυγάτηρ τῷ πατρί, τὸν Κλεόμβροτον ἀπολιπούσα. καλουμένον δὲ πρὸς τὴν δίκην, αὐτοῦ καὶ μὴ καταβαίνοντος, ἐκεῖνον an ancient law which forbade any descendant of Heracles to beget children by a foreign woman, and ordained that anyone who left Sparta to settle among foreigners should be put to death.¹ After instructing others to spread these charges against Leonidas, he himself, with his colleagues, proceeded to observe the traditional sign from heaven.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

This is observed as follows. Every ninth year the ephors select a clear and moonless night, and in silent session watch the face of the heavens. If, then, a star shoots across the sky, they decide that their kings have transgressed in their dealings with the gods, and suspend them from their office, until an oracle from Delphi or Olympia comes to the succour of the kings thus found guilty.

This sign Lysander now declared had been given him, and indicted Leonidas, and produced witnesses showing that he was the father of two children by a woman of Asia who had been given him to wife by one of the lieutenants of Seleucus; and that owing to the woman's dislike and hatred of him he had come back home against his own wishes, where he had assumed the royal dignity, to which there was then no direct successor. Besides bringing this indictment, Lysander tried to persuade Cleombrotus to lay claim to the royal dignity. Cleombrotus was a son-in-law of Leonidas, and one of the royal line. Leonidas, accordingly, took fright, and fled as a suppliant to the temple of Athena of the Brazen House. His daughter also forsook Cleombrotus and became a suppliant with her father. When Leonidas was summoned to his trial and did not appear, he was ἀποψηφισάμενοι τὴν βασιλείαν τῷ Κλεομβρότῳ παρέδωκαν.

¹ Plutarch here merges two separate laws. Cf. the Lycurgus, xxvii. 3.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

XII. Ἐν τούτῳ δὲ τῆς ἀρχῆς ὁ Λύσανδρος ἀπηλλάγη τοῦ χρόνου διελλόντος. οἱ δὲ κατασταθέντες ἔφοροι τὸν μὲν Λεωνίδα ἀνέστησαν ἰκετεύοντα, τῷ δὲ Λυσάνδρῳ καὶ τῷ Μανδροκλείδῃ δίκην ἐπήγουν ὡς παρὰ τὸν νόμον χρεῶν ἀποκοπὰς καὶ γῆν ἀναδάσασθαι ψηφισαμένοις.

- 2 κινδυνεύοντες οὖν ἐκείνοι πείθουσι τοὺς βασιλεῖς ὁμοῦ γενομένους χαίρειν εἶναι τὰ τῶν ἐφόρων βουλεύματα· τοῦτο γὰρ τὸ ἀρχεῖον ἰσχύειν ἐκ διαφορᾶς τῶν βασιλέων, τῷ τὰ βελτίονα λέγοντι προστιθέμενον τὴν ψῆφον, ὅταν ἄτερος ἐρίξῃ πρὸς τὸ συμφέρον· ἀμφοῖν δὲ ταῦτὰ βουλευομένων ἄλυτον εἶναι τὴν ἐξουσίαν, καὶ παρανόμως μαχεῖσθαι πρὸς τοὺς βασιλεῖς, ὧν μαχομένων δαιτᾶν καὶ βραβεύειν αὐτοῖς εἶναι προσήκον,
- 3 οὐχὶ πολυπραγμονεῖν ὁμοφρονούντων. οὕτω δὲ πεισθέντες ἀμφοτέροι καὶ μετὰ τῶν φίλων εἰς ἀγορὰν καταβάντες ἀνέστησαν μὲν ἐκ τῶν δίφρων τοὺς ἐφόρους, ἄλλους δ' ἀντ' αὐτῶν ἀπέδειξαν, ὧν εἷς ἦν Ἀγησίλαος. ὀπλίσαντες δὲ τῶν νέων πολλοὺς καὶ λύσαντες τοὺς δεδεμένους ἐγένοντο φοβεροὶ τοῖς ὑπεναντίοις ὡς πολλοὺς ἀποκτε-
- 4 νοῦντες. ἀπέθανε δὲ οὐδεὶς ὑπ' αὐτῶν, ἀλλὰ καὶ Λεωνίδα εἰς Τεγέα ὑπεξιόντα βουλευθέντος διαφθεῖραι τοῦ Ἀγησιλάου, καὶ πέμψαντος ἐπ' αὐτὸν εἰς τὴν ὁδὸν ἄνδρας, πυθόμενος ὁ Ἅγις

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

deposed, and Cleombrotus was made king in his place.¹

XII. At this point, Lysander's term expired and he went out of office. The new board of ephors encouraged Leonidas to leave his suppliant's asylum, and brought an indictment against Lysander and Mandrocleidas for violating the law in proposing an abolition of debts and a distribution of land. Thus put in legal peril, Lysander and Mandrocleidas persuaded the two kings to act together and disregard the edicts of the ephors; for that board of magistrates, they said, derived its power from dissension between the two kings, by giving their vote to the king who offered the better advice, whenever the other was at variance with the public good; but when the two kings were in accord, their power was indissoluble, and it would be unlawful for the ephors to contend against them, although when the kings were in contention with one another it was the privilege of the ephors to act as arbiters between them, but not to interfere when they were of one mind. Persuaded by these arguments, both the kings went with their friends into the market place, removed the ephors from their seats, and appointed others in their stead, one of whom was Agesilaüs.² Then they armed a large body of young men and set free all who were in prison, thus striking fear into their opponents, who thought they would put many of them to death. No one, however, lost his life at their hands; on the contrary, when Agis learned that Agesilaüs had plotted to make away with Leonidas as he was trying to withdraw to Tegea, and had sent men to assault him on the road, he sent out another company of

¹ About 242 B.C.

² See chapter vi. 3 f.

έτέρους απέστειλε πιστούς, οἱ τὸν Λεωνίδα περισχόντες ἀσφαλῶς εἰς Τεγέαυ κατέστησαν.

- XIII. Οὕτω δὲ τῆς πράξεως αὐτοῖς ὀδῶ βαδι- 801 ζούσης καὶ μηδενὸς ἐνισταμένου μηδὲ διακωλούτου, εἰς ἀνήρ, Ἄγησίλαοσ, ἀνέτρεψε πάντα καὶ διελυμήνατο, κάλλιστον διανόημα καὶ Λακω-νικώτατον αἰσχίστῳ νοσήματι τῇ φιλοπλουτία 2 διαφθείρας. ἐπειδὴ γὰρ ἐκέκτητο μὲν ἐν τοῖς μάλιστα πολλὴν καὶ ἀγαθὴν χώραν, ὄφειλε δὲ πάμπολλα, μήτε διαλύσαι δυνάμενοσ τὰ χρέα μήτε τὴν χώραν προέσθαι βουλόμενοσ ἔπεισε τὸν Ἄγιν ὡσ ἀμφοτέρων μὲν ἅμα πραττομένων μέγασ ἔσοιτο περὶ τὴν πόλιν ὁ νεωτερισμόσ, εἰ δὲ τῇ τῶν χρεῶν ἀφέσει θεραπευθεῖεν οἱ κτηματικοὶ πρότερον, εὐκόλωσ ἀν αὐτῶν καὶ καθ' ἡσυχίαν¹ 3 ὕστερον ἐνδεξομένων τὸν ἀναδασμόν. ταῦτα δὲ καὶ τοῖς περὶ Λύσανδρον ἐδόκει, συνεξαπατωμένοισ ὑπὸ τοῦ Ἄγησιλάου, καὶ τὰ παρὰ τῶν χρεωστῶν γραμματεῖα συνενέγκαντες εἰς ἀγοράν, ἃ κλάρια καλοῦσι, καὶ πάντα συνθέντες εἰς ἐν συνέπρησαν. ἀρθείσης δὲ φλογὸσ οἱ μὲν πλού-σιοι καὶ δανειστικοὶ περιπαθοῦντες ἀπῆλθον, ὁ δὲ Ἄγησίλαοσ ὡσπερ ἐφυβρίζων οὐκ ἔφη λαμπρότερον ἐωρακέμαι φῶσ οὐδὲ πῦρ ἐκείνου καθαρώτερον.
- 4 Ἄξιούντων δὲ τῶν πολλῶν καὶ τὴν γῆν εὐθὺσ νέμεσθαι καὶ τῶν βασιλέων οὕτω ποιεῖν κε-λευόντων, ἀσχολίασ τινὰσ ἐμβάλλον ὁ Ἄγησίλαοσ αἰὲ καὶ προφάσεισ λέγων παρήγηε τὸν χρόνον, ἄχρι οὐ στρατεῖα συνέβη τῷ Ἄγιδι, μεταπεμπομένων τῶν Ἀχαιῶν συμμάχων δντων

¹ καὶ καθ' ἡσυχίαν Coraës and Ziegler : καθ' ἡσυχίαν.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

trusted followers who took Leonidas under their protection and brought him safely to Tegea.

XIII. Thus the enterprise of the kings was making good progress and no one tried to oppose or hinder them, when one man, Agesilaüs, upset and ruined everything. He allowed a most shameful disease of avarice to wreck a most noble and most truly Spartan plan. For since he was an exceedingly large owner of valuable land, but owed huge sums of money, being unable to pay his debts and unwilling to give up his lands, he persuaded Agis that if both his projects should be carried through at the same time the resulting convulsion in the state would be great; but that if the men of property should first be won over by a remission of their debts, they would afterwards accept the distribution of land contentedly and quietly. This was also the opinion of Lysander, who was deceived in like manner by Agesilaüs. So they caused the mortgages (the Spartans call them "klaria," or allotment pledges) to be brought into the market-place, heaped them altogether, and set fire to them. As the flames rose, the men of wealth and the lenders of money went away with heavy hearts; but Agesilaüs, as if in mockery of them, declared that his eyes had never seen a brighter or purer flame than that.

And now the multitude demanded also that the land should at once be divided, and the kings gave orders that this should be done; but Agesilaüs would always interpose some obstacle or make some excuse, and so consumed time until it became the duty of Agis to head a military expedition, when the Achaeans, who were their allies, sent βοήθειαν ἐκ Λακεδαιμόνος. Αἰτωλοὶ γὰρ ἦσαν ἐπίδοξοι διὰ τῆς Μεγαρικῆς ἐμβαλοῦντες εἰς Πελοπόννησον· καὶ τοῦτο κωλύσων Ἄρατος ὁ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν στρατηγὸς ἠθροίζε δύναμιν καὶ τοῖς ἐφόροις ἔγραφεν.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

XIV. Οἱ δὲ τὸν Ἄγιν εὐθύς ἐξέπεμπον ἐπιηρμένον τῇ φιλοτιμίᾳ καὶ προθυμίᾳ τῶν συστρατευομένων. νέοι γὰρ ὄντες οἱ πλείστοι καὶ πένητες, καὶ τὴν μὲν ἀπὸ τῶν χρεῶν ἄδειαν ἔχοντες ἤδη καὶ λελυμένοι, τοὺς δὲ ἀγροὺς ἐλπίζοντες, ἂν ἐπανέλθωσιν ἐκ τῆς στρατείας, νεμηθήσονται, θαυμαστοὺς τῷ Ἀγιδι παρείχον ἑαυτούς·
 2 καὶ θέαμα ταῖς πόλεσιν ἦσαν ἀβλαβῶς καὶ πράως καὶ μόνον οὐκ ἀψοφητὶ διαπορευόμενοι τὴν Πελοπόννησον, ὥστε θαυμάζειν καὶ διαλογίζεσθαι τοὺς Ἕλληνας οἷος ἦν ἄρα κόσμος Λακωνικοῦ στρατεύματος Ἀγησίλαον ἔχοντος ἢ Λύσανδρον ἐκείνον ἢ Λεωνίδα τὸν παλαιὸν ἠγούμενον, ὅπου πρὸς μεράκιον ὀλίγου δεῖν νεώτατον ἀπάντων αἰδῶς τοσαύτη καὶ φόβος ἐστὶ
 3 τῶν συστρατευομένων.¹ καὶ μέντοι καὶ αὐτὸς ὁ νεανίσκος εὐτελείᾳ καὶ φιλοπονίᾳ καὶ τῷ μηδὲν ἰδιώτου λαμπρότερον ἠμφιέσθαι καὶ ὠπλίσθαι σεμνυνόμενος ἀξιοθέατος ἦν καὶ ζηλωτὸς ὑπὸ τῶν πολλῶν· ἐπεὶ τοῖς γε πλουσίοις οὐκ ἤρεσκεν ὁ νεωτερισμὸς αὐτοῦ, δεδιόσι μὴ κίνημα καὶ παράδειγμα τοῖς πανταχόσε δήμοις γένηται.

XV. Συμμίξας δὲ τῷ Ἀράτῳ περὶ Κόρινθον ὁ Ἄγισ ἔτι βουλευομένῳ περὶ μάχης καὶ παρατάξεως πρὸς τοὺς πολεμίους, ἐπεδείξατο καὶ προθυμίαν πολλὴν καὶ τόλμαν οὐ μανικὴν οὐδὲ for aid from Sparta. For the Aetolians were expected to invade Peloponnesus by way of Megara; and Aratus, the general of the Achaeans, in an effort to prevent this, was assembling a force and wrote a letter to the ephors.

¹ συστρατευομένων Blass : στρατευομένων.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

XIV. These at once sent out Agis, who was exalted in spirit by the ambition and ardour of the soldiers under him. For being young men for the most part and poor, and having now immunity from their debts and absolution, and expecting that they would receive allotments of land if they returned from the expedition, their devotion to Agis was astonishing. And they were a spectacle to the cities as they marched through the Peloponnesus without doing any injury, without rudeness, and almost without noise, so that the other Greeks were amazed and asked themselves what must have been the discipline of a Spartan army under the command of the great Agesilaüs, or the famous Lysander, or Leonidas of old, since towards a stripling who was almost the youngest of the whole army so great reverence and fear were felt by his soldiers. And indeed the young man himself, owing to his simplicity, his love of hardships, and the pride he took in clothing and arming himself with no more splendour than a common soldier, won the admiration and devotion of the multitudes; for to the rich, certainly, his innovating ways were not pleasing, owing to a fear that they might prove a disturbing force and set a bad example among the common people everywhere.

XV. Aratus, when Agis joined him near Corinth, was still deliberating whether or not to meet the enemy in open battle. Here Agis displayed great ardour, and courage which was sane and calculating.

ἀλόγιστον. ἔφη γὰρ αὐτῷ μὲν δοκεῖν διαμάχεται καὶ μὴ παριέναι τὸν πόλεμον εἶσω, τὰς πύλας τῆς Πελοποννήσου προεμένους, ποιήσιν δὲ τὸ δοκοῦν Ἀράτῳ· καὶ γὰρ πρεσβύτερόν τε εἶναι καὶ στρατηγεῖν Ἀχαιῶν, οἷς οὐχὶ προτάξων οὐδὲ ἡγησόμενος, ἀλλὰ συστρατευσόμενος ἦκοι καὶ βοηθήσων.

2 Ὁ δὲ Σινωπεὺς Βάτων αὐτὸν οὐκ ἐθέλειν μάχεσθαι φησι τὸν Ἄγιν Ἀράτου κελεύοντος, οὐκ ἐντετυχηκῶς οἷς Ἄρατος γέγραφε περὶ τούτων, ἀπολογιζόμενος ὅτι βέλτιον ἡγεῖτο, τοὺς καρποὺς σχεδὸν ἅπαντας συγκεκομισμένων ἤδη τῶν γεωργῶν, παρελθεῖν τοὺς πολεμίους ἢ μάχῃ διακινδυνεύσαι περὶ τῶν ὄλων.

3 Ἐπεὶ δ' οὖν Ἄρατος ἀπέγνω μάχεσθαι καὶ τοὺς συμμάχους ἐπαινέσας διαφῆκε, θαυμασθεῖς ὁ Ἄγισ ἀνεξεύγνυεν, ἤδη τῶν ἔνδον ἐν Σπάρτῃ 802 θόρυβον πολὺν ἐχόντων καὶ μεταβολήν.

XVI. Ὁ γὰρ Ἀγησίλαος ἐφορεύων, ἀπηλλαγμένος οἷς ταπεινὸς ἦν πρότερον, οὐδενὸς ἐφείδετο φέροντος ἀργύριον ἀδικήματος, ἀλλὰ μῆνα τρισκαιδέκατον, οὐκ ἀπαιτούσης τότε τῆς περιόδου, παρὰ τὴν νενομισμένην τάξιν τῶν χρόνων ἐνέβαλε τοῖς τέλεσι καὶ παρέπραττε. δεδιῶς δὲ τοὺς ἀδικουμένους καὶ μισούμενος ὑπὸ πάντων ἔτρεφε
2 κατέβαινε εἰς τὸ ἀρχεῖον. καὶ τῶν βασιλέων τοῦ μὲν ὄλως καταφρονεῖν, τὸν δὲ Ἄγιν ἐβούλετο

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

For he declared that in his opinion it was best to fight a decisive battle and not to abandon the gate of the Peloponnesus and suffer the enemy to pass inside : "However," he said, "I will do as seems best to Aratus, for Aratus is an older man, and is general of the Achaeans ; I did not come hither to be their leader or to give them orders, but to give them aid and share their expedition."

Baton of Sinopé, however, says that Agis himself was unwilling to give battle although Aratus urged it ; but Baton has not read what Aratus wrote about this matter,¹ urging in self-defence that he thought it better, now that the husbandmen had gathered in almost all their crops, to suffer the enemy to pass by, instead of risking everything in battle.

When, therefore, Aratus decided not to give battle, and dismissed his allies with praises for their proffered aid, Agis, who had won universal admiration, led his forces back to Sparta, where there was already much commotion and a revolution.

XVI. For Agesilaüs, who was one of the ephors, being now freed from what had kept him in restraint before, shrank from no injustice that brought him money, nay, contrary to the customary arrangement of the calendar, and when the time for it had not yet come, he inserted a thirteenth month² and exacted the taxes for it. Moreover, in fear of the victims of his injustice and hated by all men, he kept an armed bodyguard, and would go down to his magistracy under their protection. And as for the kings, he wished men to think that he utterly despised the one,

¹ In his "Commentaries." See the Aratus, iii. 2.

² This was regularly done thrice during a period of nine years, but in distinctly specified years. The object was to equalize the lunar and solar years.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

δοκεῖν διὰ τὴν συγγένειαν μᾶλλον ἢ διὰ τὴν βασιλείαν ἔν τινι τιμῇ τίθεσθαι. διέδωκε δὲ λόγον ὡς καὶ αὐτῆς ἐφορεύσων.

Διὸ καὶ θᾶσσον ἀποκινδυνεύσαντες οἱ ἐχθροὶ καὶ συστάντες ἐκ Τεγέας ἀναφανδὸν τὸν Λεωνίδα ἐπὶ τὴν ἀρχὴν κατήγαγον, ἠδέως καὶ τῶν πολλῶν θεασαμένων· ὠργίζοντο γὰρ πεφenaκισμένοι τῆς
 3 χώρας μὴ νεμηθείσης. τὸν μὲν οὖν Ἄγησίλαον ὁ υἱὸς Ἴππομέδων, δεόμενος τῶν πολιτῶν καὶ πᾶσι προσφιλῆς ὢν δι' ἀνδραγαθίαν, ὑπέξήγαγε καὶ διέσωσε· τῶν δὲ βασιλέων ὁ μὲν Ἄγις ἐπὶ τὴν Χαλκίοικον κατέφυγεν, ὁ δὲ Κλεόμβροτος εἰς τὸ τοῦ Ποσειδῶνος ἱερὸν ἐλθὼν ἰκέτευε· καὶ γὰρ ἐδόκει τούτῳ μᾶλλον ὁ Λεωνίδας χαλεπὸς εἶναι, καὶ παρῆς τὸν Ἄγιον ἐπὶ τοῦτον ἀνέβη στρατιώτας ἔχων· καὶ κατηγορεῖ μετ' ὀργῆς ὅτι γαμβρὸς ὢν ἐπεβούλευσεν αὐτῷ καὶ τὴν βασιλείαν ἀφείλετο καὶ συνεξέβαλε τῆς πατρίδος.

XVII. Ὁ μὲν οὖν Κλεόμβροτος οὐδὲν εἶχεν εἰπεῖν, ἀλλ' ἠπορημένος ἐκάθητο καὶ σιωπῶν· ἡ δὲ Χιλωνίς, ἡ τοῦ Λεωνίδου θυγάτηρ, πρότερον μὲν ἀδικουμένῳ τῷ πατρὶ συνηδικεῖτο, καὶ τοῦ Κλεομβρότου τὴν βασιλείαν παραλαβόντος ἀποσταῖσα τὴν τοῦ πατρὸς συμφορὰν ἐθεράπευε, καὶ παρόντι μὲν συνικέτευε, φεύγοντος δὲ πενθοῦσα καὶ χαλεπῶς ἔχουσα πρὸς τὸν Κλεόμβροτον διετέλει, τότε δὲ αὐτὴ πάλιν ταῖς τύχαις συμμεταand held Agis in some slight honour more because of his near relationship than because he was king. He also spread reports that he was going to be ephor again.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

For this reason his enemies lost no time in taking the great hazard, and banding together, openly brought home Leonidas from Tegea to exercise the royal power. Even the common people were glad to see this done, for they were incensed at their deception in the promised division of the land. Agesilaüs, accordingly, was taken out of the country and saved by his son Hippomedon, who entreated his fellow-citizens, and was beloved of all because of his valour; and as for the kings, Agis fled for refuge to the temple of Athena of the Brazen House, while Cleombrotus went as a suppliant to the sanctuary of Poseidon;¹ for Leonidas was thought to be more bitter against him, and in fact he left Agis unmolested and went up against Cleombrotus with soldiers. And when he arrived he denounced Cleombrotus angrily because, though a son-in-law, he had plotted against him, robbed him of the royal power, and helped in driving him from the country.

XVII. Cleombrotus, on his part, had naught to say for himself, but sat perplexed and speechless; Chilonis, however, the daughter of Leonidas, who before this had felt herself wronged in the wrongs done to her father, and when Cleombrotus was made king had left him and ministered to her father in his misfortunes,—sharing his suppliant life while he was in the city, and in his exile continually grieving for him and cherishing bitter thoughts of Cleombrotus—at this

¹ On the promontory of Taenarum. See the Cleomenes, xxii. 5.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- βάλλουσα μετὰ τοῦ ἀνδρὸς ἰκέτις ὤφθη καθε-ζομένη, περιβεβληκυῖα τὰς χεῖρας ἐκείνῳ καὶ τῶν παιδίων τὸ μὲν ἔνθεν, τὸ δ' ἔνθεν ὑφ' αὐτὴν
- 2 ἔχουσα. θαυμαζόντων δὲ πάντων καὶ δακρυνόντων ἐπὶ τῇ χρηστότητι καὶ φιλοστοργίᾳ τῆς γυναικὸς, ἄψαμένη τῶν πέπλων καὶ τῆς κόμης ἀτημελῶς ἔχόντων, “Τοῦτο,” εἶπεν, “ὦ πάτερ, ἐμοὶ τὸ σχῆμα καὶ τὴν ὄψιν οὐχ ὁ Κλεομβρότου περιτέθεικεν ἔλεος, ἀλλ' ἀπὸ τῶν σῶν κακῶν καὶ τῆς σῆς φυγῆς μεμένηκέ μοι σύντροφον καὶ σύνοικον τὸ πένθος. πότερον οὖν δεῖ με σοῦ βασιλεύοντος ἐν Σπάρτῃ καὶ νικῶντος ἐγκαταβιῶναι ταύταις ταῖς συμφοραῖς, ἢ λαβεῖν ἐσθῆτα λαμπρὰν καὶ βασιλικήν, ἐπιδούσαν ὑπὸ σοῦ τὸν παρθένιον
- 3 ἄνδρα φονευόμενον; ὃς εἰ μὴ παραιτεῖταί σε μηδὲ πείθει τέκνων καὶ γυναικὸς δάκρυσι, χαλεπωτέραν ἢ σὺ βούλει δίκην ὑφέξει τῆς κακοβουλίας ἐπιδὼν ἐμὲ τὴν φιλτάτην αὐτῷ προαποθανούσαν.
 τίτι γὰρ ἐμὲ δεῖ ζῆν παρρησία πρὸς τὰς ἄλλας γυναῖκας, ἢ μήτε παρ' ἀνδρὸς δεομένη μήτε παρὰ πατρὸς ἑλεός ἐστιν; ἀλλὰ καὶ γυνὴ καὶ θυγάτηρ συνατυχεῖν καὶ συνατιμάζεσθαι τοῖς ἐμαυτῆς
- 4 ἐγενόμην. τούτῳ μὲν οὖν εἰ καὶ τις ἦν λόγος εὐπρεπῆς, ἐγὼ τούτου ἀφειλόμην τότε σοὶ συνεξετασθεῖσα καὶ καταμαρτυρήσασα τῶν ὑπὸ τούτου γενομένων· σὺ δὲ αὐτῷ τὸ ἀδίκημα ποιεῖς εὐαπολόγητον, οὕτω μέγα καὶ περιμάχητον ἀποφαίνων τὸ βασιλεύειν ὥστε δι' αὐτὸ καὶ γαμβροὺς φονεύειν καὶ τέκνων ἀμελεῖν εἶναι δίκαιον.”

XVIII. Ἡ μὲν Χιλωνὶς τοιαῦτα ποτνωμένη τό τε πρόσωπον ἐπὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν ἐπέθηκε τοῦ Κλεομβρότου, καὶ τὸ βλέμμα διεφθαρμένον καὶ

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

time changed back again with the changed fortunes of the men, and was seen sitting as a suppliant with her husband, her arms thrown about him, and a little child clinging to her on either side. All beholders were moved to wonder and tears at the fidelity and devotion of the woman, who, touching her robes and her hair, alike unkempt, said: "This garb, my father, and this appearance, are not due to my pity for Cleombrotus; nay, ever since thy sorrows and thine exile grief has been my steadfast mate and companion. Must I, then, now that thou art king in Sparta and victorious over thine enemies, continue to live in this sad state, or put on the splendid attire of royalty, after seeing the husband of my youth slain at thy hands? That husband, unless he persuades and wins thee over by the tears of his wife and children, will pay a more grievous penalty for his evil designs than thou desirest, for he shall see me, his most beloved one, dead before he is. For with what assurance could I live and face the other women, I, whose prayers awakened no pity in either husband or father? Nay, both as wife and as daughter I was born to share only the misfortune and dishonour of the men nearest and dearest to me. As for my husband, even if he had some plausible excuse for his course, I robbed him of it at that time by taking thy part and testifying to what he had done; but thou makest his crime an easy one to defend by showing men that royal power is a thing so great and so worth fighting for that for its sake it is right to slay a son-in-law and ignore a child."

XVIII. Uttering such supplications Chilonis rested her face upon the head of Cleombrotus and turned συντετηκὸς ὑπὸ λύπης περιήνεγκεν εἰς τοὺς παρόντας. ὁ δὲ Λεωνίδας διαλεχθεὶς τοῖς φίλοις τὸν μὲν Κλεόμβροτον ἐκέλευσεν ἀναστάντα φεύγειν, τῆς δὲ παιδὸς μένειν ἐδεῖτο καὶ μὴ καταλιπεῖν ἑαυτὸν οὕτω φιλοῦντα καὶ δεδωκότα χάριν 2 τὴν τοῦ ἀνδρὸς αὐτῇ σωτηρίαν. οὐ μὴν ἔπεισεν, ἀλλ' ἀνισταμένῳ τῷ ἀνδρὶ θάτερον τῶν παιδίων ἐγχειρίσασα, θάτερον δ' ἀναλαβοῦσα καὶ προσκυνήσασα τὸν βωμὸν τοῦ¹ θεοῦ συνεξῆλθεν, ὥστε εἰ μὴ πάνυ διεφθαρμένος ἦν ὑπὸ κενῆς δόξης ὁ Κλεόμβροτος, εὐτύχημα ἂν ἠγήσατο τὴν φυγὴν αὐτῷ τῆς βασιλείας μείζον εἶναι διὰ τὴν γυναῖκα.

Μεταστησάμενος δὲ τὸν Κλεόμβροτον ὁ Λεωνίδας καὶ τοὺς πρώτους ἐφόρους ἐκβαλὼν τῆς ἀρχῆς, ἑτέρους δὲ ποιησάμενος, εὐθύς ἐπεβούλευε
 3 τῷ Ἄγιδι. καὶ πρῶτον μὲν ἔπειθεν αὐτὸν ἀναστῆναι καὶ συμβασιλεύειν, ὡς δεδωκότων συγγνώμην τῶν πολιτῶν· συνεξηπατήσθαι γὰρ ὑπὸ τοῦ Ἄγησιλάου νέον ὄντα καὶ φιλότιμον. ἐκείνου δὲ ὑφορωμένου καὶ κατὰ χώραν μένοντος αὐτὸς μὲν ἐπαύσατο φενακίζων καὶ κατειρωνευόμενος, Ἀμφάρης δὲ καὶ Δαμοχάρης καὶ Ἀρκεσίλαος ἀναβαίνοντες εἰώθεσαν αὐτῷ διαλέγεσθαι· καί ποτε καὶ παραλαβόντες ἐπὶ λουτρὸν ἀπὸ τοῦ
 4 ἱεροῦ κατήγαγον καὶ λουσάμενον πάλιν εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν κατέστησαν. καὶ ἦσαν πάντες· μὲν αὐτῷ συνήθεις, ὁ δὲ Ἀμφάρης καὶ κεχρημένος² ἔναγχος

¹ τοῦ θεοῦ Coraës, Bekker, and Ziegler, after Bryan; τῆς θεοῦ. ² καὶ κεχρημένος Coraës and Bekker delete καί.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

her eyes, all melted and marred with grief, upon the bystanders. Then Leonidas, after conference with his friends, bade Cleombrotus leave his asylum and go into exile, but begged his daughter to remain, and not to abandon him, since he loved her so much, and had made her a free gift of her husband's life. He could not persuade her, however, but when her husband rose to go she put one of her children in his arms, took up the other one herself, and went forth in his company after an obeisance to the altar of the god; so that if Cleombrotus had not been wholly corrupted by vain ambition, he would have considered that exile was a greater blessing for him than the kingdom, because it restored to him his wife.

After removing Cleombrotus from his asylum, Leonidas expelled the officiating ephors from their office, appointed others in their place, and at once began to lay plots against the life of Agis. To begin with, he tried to persuade Agis to leave his asylum and share the royal power with him, assuring Agis that the citizens had pardoned him, because, being a young man and ambitious, he had been one of those whom Agesilaüs had completely deceived. But Agis continued to be suspicious and would not leave his asylum. So Leonidas himself stopped trying to cheat and play tricks upon him, but Amphares, Damochares, and Arcesilaüs did not. They were wont to go up to the temple and converse with Agis; and once they actually took him in charge and brought him down from the temple for a bath, and after he had bathed, restored him again to the temple. They were all comrades of his, but Amphares had also borrowed recently some ἱμάτια καὶ ποτήρια τῶν πολυτελῶν παρὰ τῆς Ἀγησιστράτας ἐπεβούλευε διὰ ταῦτα τῷ βασιλεῖ καὶ ταῖς γυναιξίν ὡς ἀποστερήσων. καὶ μάλιστα γὰρ αὐτὸς ὑπακοῦσαι τῷ Λεωνίδα λέγεται καὶ παροξύναι τοὺς ἐφόρους, ὧν καὶ αὐτὸς εἰς ἦν.

XIX. Ἐπεὶ δὲ ὁ Ἄγις τὸν μὲν ἄλλον ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ διέτριβε χρόνον, εἰώθει δὲ καταβαίνειν ὅτε τύχοι πρὸς τὸ λουτρόν, ἐκεῖ συλλαβεῖν αὐτὸν ἔγνωσαν, ὅταν ἔξω τοῦ ἱεροῦ γένηται. καὶ παραφυλάξαντες λελουμένον ἀπήντησαν καὶ ἠσπασαντο, καὶ συμπροῆγον ἅμα διαλεγόμενοι καὶ 2 παίζοντες ὡς πρὸς συνήθη καὶ νέον. ἐκτροπήν δὲ τινα τῆς ὁδοῦ πλαγίαν πρὸς τὸ δεσμωτήριον ἐχούσης, ὡς ἐγένοντο κατ' αὐτὴν βαδίζοντες, ὁ μὲν Ἀμφάρης διὰ τὸ ἄρχειν ἀψάμενος τοῦ Ἄγιδος, “Ἄγω σε,” εἶπεν, “ἐπὶ τοὺς ἐφόρους, ὧ Ἄγι, λόγον ὑφέξοντα τῶν πεπολιτευμένων.” ὁ δὲ 3 Δαμοχάρης, εὐρωστος ὧν καὶ μέγας, τὸ ἱμάτιον περιβαλὼν περὶ τὸν τράχηλον εἵλκεν. ἄλλων δὲ ἐπωθούντων ὀπισθεν ἐκ παρασκευῆς, οὐδενὸς βοηθοῦντος, ἀλλ' ἐρημίας οὔσης, ἐμβάλλουσιν αὐτὸν εἰς τὸ δεσμωτήριον. εὐθύς δὲ παρῆν ὁ μὲν 4 Λεωνίδας μισθοφόρους ἔχων πολλούς, καὶ τὸ οἶκημα περιέσχευ ἔξωθεν, οἱ δὲ ἔφοροι πρὸς τὸν Ἄγιν εἰσῆλθον, καὶ τῶν γερόντων εἰς τὸ οἶκημα μεταπεμψάμενοι τοὺς ταῦτά βουλομένους, ὡς δὴ κρίσεως αὐτῷ γινομένης, ἐκέλευον ὑπὲρ τῶν πεπραγμένων ἀπολογεῖσθαι. γελάσαντος δὲ τοῦ νεανίσκου πρὸς τὴν εἰρωνείαν αὐτῶν, ὁ μὲν Ἀμφάρης οἰμωξόμενον ἐκάλει καὶ δίκην ὑφέξοντα τῆς ἰταμότητος· ἄλλος δὲ τῶν ἐφόρων, οἶον ἐνδιδοῦς costly vestures and beakers from Agesistrata, and therefore plotted to destroy the king and the women, that he might not have to return what he had borrowed. And he, certainly, more than any one else, as we are told, followed the counsels of Leonidas and embittered the ephors, of whom he was one, against Agis.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

XIX. Now Agis spent most of his time in the sanctuary, but was wont to go down from time to time to his bath. There, then, they determined to seize him, when he was outside the sanctuary. So they waited till he had finished his bath, and then came to meet him with friendly greetings, and walked along with him, conversing and jesting with him after the manner of youthful comrades. But at a certain point the road branched off towards the prison, and when they were come to that place, Amphares, by virtue of his office, laid hands on Agis and said: "I shall lead thee, Agis, to the ephors, to answer for thy measures of state"; and Damochares, who was tall and robust, threw his cloak about the king's neck and dragged him along. Others pushed him along from behind, as had been agreed, and since he had no helper but was without a friend, they thrust him into the prison. At once Leonidas was at hand with a large band of mercenaries and surrounded the prison, while the ephors went in to Agis. After sending for those of the senators who were of the same mind as themselves, as though the king were to have a trial, the ephors ordered Agis to defend his conduct of affairs. The young king laughed at their dissimulation, whereupon Amphares threatened that he would rue the day and be punished for his temerity; but another ephor, as τῷ Ἄγιδι καὶ δεικνύων ἀποφυγὴν τῆς αἰτίας, ἠρώτησεν εἰ ταῦτα ἔπραξεν ὑπὸ Λυσάνδρου καὶ

 5 Ἄγησιλάου βιασθεῖς. ἀποκριναμένου δὲ τοῦ Ἄγιδος ὡς βιασθεῖς μὲν ὑπ' οὐδενός, ζηλῶν δὲ καὶ μιμούμενος τὸν Λυκούργον ἐπὶ τὴν αὐτὴν ἔλθοι πολιτείαν, πάλιν ὁ αὐτὸς ἠρώτησεν εἰ μετανοεῖ τοῖς πεπραγμένοις. φήσαντος δὲ τοῦ νεανίσκου μὴ μετανοεῖν ἐπὶ τοῖς κάλλιστα βεβουλευμένοις, κὰν τὰ ἔσχατα πεισόμενον αὐτὸν ἴδῃ, θάνατον αὐτοῦ κατεψηφίσαντο, καὶ τοὺς ὑπηρέτας 6 ἐκέλευον ἄγειν εἰς τὴν καλουμένην Δεχάδα. τοῦτο δέ ἐστιν οἴκημα τῆς εἰρκτῆς ἐν ᾧ θανατοῦσι τοὺς καταδίκους ἀποπνίγοντες. ὁρῶν δὲ τοὺς ὑπηρέτας ὁ Δαμοχάρης οὐ τολμῶντας ἄψασθαι τοῦ Ἄγιδος, ὁμοίως δὲ καὶ τῶν μισθοφόρων τοὺς παρεστῶτας ἀποστρεφομένους καὶ φεύγοντας τὸ ἔργον, ὡς οὐ θεμιτὸν οὐδὲ νενομισμένον βασιλέως σώματι τὰς 804 χεῖρας προσφέρειν, διαπειλησάμενος αὐτοῖς καὶ λαιδορηθεῖς εἶλκεν αὐτὸς εἰς τὸ οἴκημα τὸν Ἄγιν.
 7 ἤδη γὰρ ἦσθηντο πολλοὶ τὴν σύλληψιν, καὶ θόρυβος ἦν ἐπὶ ταῖς θύραις καὶ φῶτα πολλά, καὶ παρήσαν ἢ τε μήτηρ τοῦ Ἄγιδος καὶ ἡ μάμμη βοῶσαι καὶ δεόμεναι τὸν βασιλέα τῶν Σπαρτιατῶν λόγου καὶ κρίσεως τυχεῖν ἐν τοῖς πολίταις. διὸ καὶ μάλιστα κατήπειξαν τὴν ἀναίρεσιν, ὡς ἐξαρ-παγησομένου νυκτὸς ἂν πλείονες ἐπέλθωσιν.

XX. Ὁ μὲν οὖν Ἄγισ ἐπὶ τὴν στραγγάλην πορευόμενος, ὡς εἶδέ τινα τῶν ὑπηρετῶν δακρύ-

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

though plainly offering Agis a way of escape from the charges against him, asked him if he had done what he did under compulsion from Lysander and Agesilaüs. And when Agis answered that he had suffered compulsion from no one, but that in admiration and imitation of Lycurgus he had adopted the same public policy as his, the same ephor asked again if he repented of what he had done. But the young king declared that he had no repentance for what he had most excellently planned, and would not have, even if he saw that he was to suffer the extremest penalty. So they condemned him to death, and ordered the officers to lead him into the "Dechas," as it was called. This is a chamber of the prison in which they strangle those who are under sentence of death. But Damochares, when he saw that the officers did not dare to lay hands on Agis, and likewise that even the mercenaries who were there shrank from the deed and were loth to do it, feeling as they did that it was contrary to the laws of God and man to lay hands upon the person of a king, heaped threats and abuse upon them and himself dragged Agis into the chamber of death. For already many people were aware of the arrest, and there was a noisy throng at the door and many torches, and the mother and grandmother of Agis were there, with cries and prayers that the king of the Spartans should have a hearing and a trial before the citizens. For this reason especially the ephors hastened on the king's execution, believing that he would be taken out of their hands in the night if the concourse should increase.

XX. Agis, then, on his way to the halter, saw one of the officers shedding tears of sympathy for him.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

οντα καὶ περιπαθούντα, “ Παιῦσαί με,” εἶπεν, “ ὦ ἄνθρωπε, κλαίων· καὶ γὰρ οὕτως παρανόμως καὶ ἀδίκως ἀπολλύμενος κρείττων εἰμὶ τῶν ἀναιρούντων.” καὶ ταῦτ’ εἰπὼν παρέδωκε τῷ βρόχῳ τὸν 2 τράχηλον ἐκουσίως. ὁ δὲ Ἀμφάρης προελθὼν ἐπὶ τὰς θύρας, καὶ τὴν Ἀγησιστράταν προσπεσοῦσαν αὐτῷ διὰ συνήθειαν καὶ φιλίαν ἀναστήσας, οὐδὲν ἔφη περὶ τὸν Ἄγιν ἔσεσθαι βίαιον οὐδὲ ἀνήκεστον· ἐκέλευε δὲ κάκεινην, εἰ βούλοίτο, πρὸς τὸν υἱὸν εἰσελθεῖν. ἐκείνης δὲ καὶ τὴν μητέρα μετ’ αὐτῆς παρεῖναι δεομένης οὐδὲν ἔφη κωλύειν 3 ὁ Ἀμφάρης· καὶ δεξάμενος ἀμφοτέρας, καὶ πάλιν κλείσαι τὰς θύρας τοῦ δεσμοτηρίου κελεύσας, προτέρα μὲν τὴν Ἀρχιδαμίαν παρέδωκεν, ἤδη σφόδρα πρεσβῦτιν οὖσαν καὶ καταγεγηρακυῖαν ἐν ἀξιώματι μεγίστῳ τῶν πολιτίδων, ἀποθανούσης δὲ ἐκείνης ἐκέλευσε τὴν Ἀγησιστράταν ἔσω 4 βαδίζειν. ὡς δὲ εἰσελθοῦσα τὸν τε υἱὸν ἐθεάσατο χαμαὶ κείμενον καὶ τὴν μητέρα νεκρὰν ἐκ τοῦ βρόχου κρεμαμένην, ἐκείνην μὲν αὐτῇ τοῖς ὑπηρε-ταις συγκαθεῖλε καὶ παρεκτείνασα τῷ Ἀγιδι τὸ σῶμα περιέστειλε καὶ κατεκάλυψε· τῷ δὲ υἱῷ προσπεσοῦσα καὶ φιλήσασα τὸ πρόσωπον, “ Ἡ πολλή σε,” εἶπεν, “ ὦ παῖ, εὐλάβεια καὶ τὸ πρᾶον
 5 καὶ φιλάνθρωπον ἀπώλεσε μεθ’ ἡμῶν.” ὁ δὲ Ἀμφάρης ἀπὸ τῆς θύρας ὀρώων τὰ γινόμενα καὶ τὰς φωνὰς ἀκούων ἐπεισῆλθε, καὶ πρὸς τὴν Ἀγη-σιστράταν μετ’ ὀργῆς εἶπεν· “ Εἰ τοίνυν,” ἔφη, “ ταῦτὰ ἐδοκίμαζες τῷ υἱῷ, ταῦτὰ καὶ πείσῃ.”
 καὶ ἡ Ἀγησιστράτα πρὸς τὸν βρόχον ἀνιστα-

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

“My man,” said he, “cease weeping; for even though I am put to death in this lawless and unjust manner, I have the better of my murderers.” And saying these words, he offered his neck to the noose without hesitation. But Amphares went to the door of the prison, where Agesistrata fell at his feet in an appeal to his friendship and intimacy. Amphares lifted her up and assured her that Agis was not to suffer violence or death; and he bade her, if she wished, go in to her son. And when Agesistrata begged that her mother might go in with her, Amphares said there was nothing to prevent. So he admitted both the women, and after ordering the door of the prison to be locked again, delivered Archidamia first to the executioners. She was now a very aged woman, and had lived all her days in very high repute among her countrywomen. After she had been put to death, Amphares ordered Agesistrata to enter the chamber of execution. So she went in, and when she saw her son lying dead upon the ground, and her mother’s dead body still hanging in the noose, with her own hands she helped the officers to take her down, laid her body out by the side of Agis, and composed and covered it. Then, embracing her son and kissing his face, she said: “My son, it was thy too great regard for others, and thy gentleness and humanity, which has brought thee to ruin, and us as well.” Then Amphares, who stood at the door and saw and heard what she did and said, came in and said angrily to her: “If, then, thou hast been of the same mind as thy son, thou shalt also suffer the same fate.” And Agesistrata, as she rose to present her neck to the μένη, “Μόνον,” ἔφη, “συνενέγκαι ταῦτα τῇ Σπάρτῃ.”

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

XXI. Τοῦ δὲ πάθους εἰς τὴν πόλιν ἐξαγγελθέντος καὶ τῶν τριῶν σωμάτων ἐκκομιζομένων οὐκ ἦν ὁ φόβος οὔτω μέγας, ὥστε μὴ καταφανεῖς εἶναι τοὺς πολίτας ἀλγοῦντας μὲν ἐπὶ τοῖς γεγυνοσιν, μισοῦντας δὲ τὸν Λεωνίδα καὶ τὸν Ἀμφάρην, μηδὲν δεινότερον μηδὲ ἀνοσιώτερον ἐξ οὗ Δωριεῖς Πελοπόννησον οἰκοῦσιν οἰομένους ἐν Σπάρτῃ πε-
 2 πρᾶχθαι. βασιλεῖ γάρ, ὡς ἔοικε, Λακεδαιμονίων οὐδὲ οἱ πολέμοι ῥαδίως ἐν ταῖς μάχαις ἀπαντῶντες προσέφερον τὰς χεῖρας, ἀλλ' ἀπετρέποντο δεδιότες καὶ σεβόμενοι τὸ ἀξίωμα. διὸ καὶ πολλῶν γεγυ-νότων Λακεδαιμονίοις ἀγώνων πρὸς Ἑλληνας εἰς μόνος ἀνῆρέθη πρὸ τῶν Φιλιππικῶν δόρατι πλη-γεῖς περὶ Λεῦκτρα Κλεόμβροτος. Μεσσηνίων δὲ 3 οὐ φασι Λακεδαιμόνιοι, πληγῆναι δὲ μόνον. ἀλλὰ ταῦτα μὲν ἔχει τινὰς ἀμφιλογίας. ἐν δὲ Λακεδαίμοι πρῶτος Ἄγις βασιλεύων ὑπὸ τῶν ἐφόρων ἀπέθανε, καλὰ μὲν ἔργα καὶ πρέποντα τῇ Σπάρτῃ προελόμενος, ἡλικίας δὲ γεγυνοῦς ἐν ἡ ἁμαρτάνουντες ἄνθρωποι συγγνώμης τυγχάνουσι, μεμφθεῖς δὲ ὑπὸ τῶν φίλων δικαιότερον ἢ τῶν ἐχθρῶν, ὅτι καὶ Λεωνίδα περιέσωσε καὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις ἐπί-στευσεν, ἡμερώτατος καὶ πραότατος γενόμενος.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

noose, said: "My only prayer is that this may bring good to Sparta."

XXI. When tidings of the sad event had been carried to the city and the three bodies were carried forth for burial, the fear felt by the citizens was not so strong as to prevent them from manifesting sorrow over what had been done, and hatred for Leonidas and Amphares. It was thought that nothing more dreadful or heinous had been done in Sparta since the Dorians had dwelt in Peloponnesus. For against a king of the Lacedaemonians, as it seems, not even their enemies would willingly raise their hands if they met him in battle, but they would spare him, out of fear and reverence for his dignity. And for this reason, although there had been many conflicts between Lacedaemonians and other Greeks, only one Spartan king had been slain up to the time of Philip of Macedon, namely, Cleombrotus, who was smitten by a spear at Leuctra.¹ The Messenians, however, say that Theopompus also fell in battle, at the hands of Aristomenes; but the Lacedaemonians deny this, and say that their king was only wounded. This matter may be disputed; but Agis was certainly the first king of Sparta to be put to death by the ephors. And yet he had chosen a line of conduct that was noble and worthy of Sparta, and was of an age in which men are usually pardoned for their errors, and his friends could with more justice blame him than his enemies, because he spared the life of Leonidas, and, most mild and gentle man that he was, put faith in his other foes.

¹ See the Pelopidas, xxiii.

ΚΛΕΟΜΕΝΗΣ

- I. Ἀποθανόντος δὲ αὐτοῦ τὸν μὲν ἀδελφὸν 805 Ἄρχίδαμον οὐκ ἔφθη συλλαβεῖν ὁ Λεωνίδας εὐθύς ἐκφυγόντα, τὴν δὲ γυναῖκα παιδίον ἔχουσαν νεογνὸν ἐκ τῆς οἰκίας ἀπαγαγὼν βία Κλεομένει τῷ υἱῷ συνώκισεν οὐ πᾶν γάμων ὥραν ἔχοντι, τὴν δὲ ἄνθρωπον ἄλλῳ δοθῆναι μὴ βουλόμενος.
 ἦν γὰρ οὐσίας τε μεγάλης ἐπίκληρος ἢ Ἁγιάτις Γυλίππου τοῦ πατρός, ὥρα τε καὶ κάλλει πολὺ τῶν Ἑλληνίδων διαφέρουσα καὶ τὸν τρόπον 2 ἐπιεικής. διὸ πολλὰ μὲν ἐποίησεν, ὡς φασι, μὴ βιασθῆναι δεομένη, συνελθοῦσα δὲ εἰς ταῦτό τῳ Κλεομένει τὸν μὲν Λεωνίδα ἐμίσει, περὶ δὲ αὐτὸν τὸν νεανίσκον ἦν ἀγαθὴ γυνὴ καὶ φιλόστοργος, ἐρωτικῶς ἅμα τῳ λαβεῖν πρὸς αὐτὴν διατεθέντα καὶ τινα τρόπον συμπαθοῦντα τῇ πρὸς τὸν Ἁγιν εὐνοία καὶ μνήμη τῆς γυναικός, ὥστε καὶ πυν-θάνεσθαι πολλάκις περὶ τῶν γεγονότων καὶ προσέχειν ἐπιμελῶς διηγουμένης ἐκείνης ἦν ὁ Ἁγίς ἔσχε διάνοιαν καὶ προαίρεσιν.
- 3 Ἦν δὲ καὶ φιλότιμος μὲν καὶ μεγαλόφρων ὁ Κλεομένης καὶ πρὸς ἐγκράτειαν καὶ ἀφέλειαν οὐχ ἡττον τοῦ Ἁγίδος εὐ πεφυκῶς, τὸ δὲ εὐλαβὲς ἄγαν ἐκείνο καὶ πρᾶον οὐκ εἶχεν, ἀλλὰ κέντρον τι θυμοῦ τῇ φύσει προσέκειτο καὶ μετὰ σφοδρότη-τος ὀρμὴ πρὸς τὸ φαινόμενον αἰεὶ καλόν. ἐφαίνετο δὲ κάλλιστον μὲν αὐτῷ κρατεῖν ἐκόντων, καλὸν δὲ καὶ μὴ πειθομένων περιεῖναι πρὸς τὸ βέλτιον ἐκβιαζόμενον.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

CLEOMENES

I. Upon the death of Agis¹ his brother Archidamus at once took to flight, and thus escaped arrest at the hands of Leonidas; but his wife, who had an infant son, was taken from her home by Leonidas and compelled to marry his son Cleomenes. Cleomenes was too young for marriage, but Leonidas was unwilling to have Agiatis marry anyone else. For she was heir to the great estate of her father Gylippus, in youthful beauty she far surpassed the other women of Greece, and she had an excellent disposition. Therefore she begged most earnestly, we are told, that she should not be forced into this marriage, but after she was united to Cleomenes, though she hated Leonidas, to the young man himself she was a good and affectionate wife. And he, as soon as Agiatis was his, became passionately fond of her, and in a way sympathized with her devotion to the memory of Agis, so that he would often ask her about the career of Agis, and listen attentively as she told of the plans and purposes which Agis had formed.

And, besides, Cleomenes was aspiring and magnanimous, and no less prone by nature than Agis to self-restraint and simplicity. He had not, however, the scrupulous and gentle nature for which Agis was remarkable, and his natural courage was always goading him on, as it were, and fiercely impelling him towards that which in any case appeared to be the honourable course. He thought it a most excellent thing to rule over willing subjects, but a good thing also to subdue such subjects as were disobedient, and force them towards the better goal.

¹ About 241 B.C.

II. Οὐκ ἤρεσκε μὲν οὖν αὐτῷ τὰ κατὰ τὴν πόλιν, ἀπραγμοσύνη καὶ ἡδονῇ κατακεκηλημένων τῶν πολιτῶν καὶ τοῦ βασιλέως πάντα τὰ πράγματα χαίρειν ἑῶντος, εἰ μηδεὶς αὐτὸν ἐνοχλοῖη σχολάζειν ἐν ἀφθόνοις καὶ τρυφᾶν βουλόμενον, ἀμελουμένων δὲ τῶν κοινῶν, κατ' οἰκίαν ἐκάστου πρὸς αὐτὸν ἔλκοντος τὸ κερδαλέον· ἀσκήσεως δὲ καὶ σωφροσύνης νέων καὶ καρτερίας καὶ ἰσότητος οὐδὲ ἀσφαλὲς ἦν τούτων τῶν περὶ Ἄγιν ἀπολωλότων μνημονεύειν.

- 2 Λέγεται δὲ καὶ λόγων φιλοσόφων τὸν Κλεομένη μετασχεῖν ἔτι μειράκιον ὄντα, Σφαίρου τοῦ Βορυσθενίτου παραβαλόντος εἰς τὴν Λακεδαίμονα καὶ περὶ τοὺς νέους καὶ τοὺς ἐφήβους οὐκ ἀμελῶς διατρίβοντος. ὁ δὲ Σφαῖρος ἐν τοῖς πρώτοις ἐγγύονει τῶν Ζήνωνος τοῦ Κιτιέως μαθητῶν, καὶ τοῦ Κλεομένου εἶκε τῆς φύσεως τὸ ἀνδρῶδες ἀγαπήσαι τε καὶ προσεκαῦσαι τὴν φιλοτιμίαν.
- 3 Λεωνίδα μὲν γὰρ τὸν παλαιὸν λέγουσιν, ἐπερωτηθέντα ποῖός τις αὐτῷ φαίνεται ποιητῆς γεγονέναι Τυρταῖος, εἰπεῖν· “Ἄγαθὸς νέων ψυχὰς κακκανῆν.” ἐμπιπλάμενοι γὰρ ὑπὸ τῶν ποιημάτων ἐνθουσιασμοῦ παρὰ τὰς μάχας ἠφείδουν ἑαυτῶν· ὁ δὲ Στωϊκὸς λόγος ἔχει τι πρὸς τὰς μεγάλας φύσεις καὶ ὀξείας ἐπισφαλὲς καὶ παράβολον, βαθεῖ δὲ καὶ πρᾶφ κεραννύμενος ἦθει μάλιστα εἰς τὸ οἰκεῖον ἀγαθὸν ἐπιδίδωσιν.

III. Ἐπεὶ δὲ τελευτήσαντος τοῦ Λεωνίδου τὴν βασιλείαν παρέλαβε καὶ τοὺς πολίτας τότε δὴ παντάπασιν ἐκλελυμένους ἑώρα, τῶν μὲν πλουσίων καθ' ἡδονὰς ἰδίας καὶ πλεονεξίας παρο-

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

II. Of course, then, the condition of the city was not pleasing to him. The citizens had been lulled to sleep by idleness and pleasure ; the king was willing to let all public business go, provided that no one thwarted his desire for luxurious living in the midst of his wealth ; the public interests were neglected, while every man was eagerly intent upon his own private gain ; and as for practice in arms, self-restraint in the young, hardiness, and equality, it was even dangerous to speak of these now that Agis was dead and gone.

It is said also that Cleomenes studied philosophy when he was still a stripling, after Sphaerus of Borysthenis had made a voyage to Sparta and busied himself sedulously there with the youth and young men. Sphaerus had become one of the leading disciples of Zeno of Citium, and it would appear that he admired the manly nature of Cleomenes and increased the fires of his high ambition. For Leonidas of old, as we are told, when asked what manner of poet he thought Tyrtaeus to be, replied ; "A good one to inflame the souls of young men." And indeed they were filled with divine inspiration by his poems, and in battle were prodigal of their lives. However, for great and impetuous natures the Stoic doctrines are somewhat misleading and dangerous, although when they permeate a deep and gentle character, they redound most to its proper good.

III. But at the death of Leonidas¹ Cleomenes came to the throne, and saw that the citizens were by that time altogether degenerate. The rich neglected the common interests for their own private ¹ In 235 B.C. Cleomenes was then about twenty-four years of age.

- ρώντων τὰ κοινά, τῶν δὲ πολλῶν διὰ τὸ πράττειν κακῶς περὶ τὰ οἰκεία καὶ πρὸς τὸν πόλεμον ἀπροθύμων καὶ πρὸς τὴν ἀγωγὴν ἀφιλοτίμων γεγονότων, αὐτοῦ δὲ ὄνομα βασιλεύοντος ἦν
- 2 μόνον, ἣ δὲ ἀρχὴ πᾶσα τῶν ἐφόρων, εὐθύς μὲν εἰς νοῦν ἔθετο τὰ παρόντα μεθιστάναι καὶ κινεῖν, ὄντος δὲ αὐτῷ φίλου Ξενάρους, ἐραστοῦ γεγονότος (τοῦτο δὲ ἐμπνεῖσθαι Λακεδαιμόνιοι καλοῦσιν), ἀπεπειράτο τούτου διαπυρηνόμενος τὸν Ἄγιν, ὁποῖος γένοιτο βασιλεὺς καὶ τίνι τρόπῳ καὶ μετὰ τίνων ἐπὶ ταύτην ἔλθοι τὴν ὁδόν. ὁ δὲ Ξενάρης τὸ μὲν πρῶτον οὐκ ἀηδῶς ἐμέμνητο τῶν πραγμάτων ἐκείνων, ὡς ἐπράχθη καθ' ἕκαστα μυθολο-
- 3 γῶν καὶ διηγούμενος· ὡς δὲ ἦν καταφανὴς ὁ Κλεομένης ἐμπαθέστερον προσέχων καὶ κινούμενος ὑπερφυῶς πρὸς τὴν καινοτομίαν τοῦ Ἄγιδος καὶ ταῦτὰ πολλάκις ἀκούειν βουλόμενος, ἐπέπληξεν αὐτῷ πρὸς ὀργὴν ὁ Ξενάρης ὡς οὐχ ὑγιαίνοντι, καὶ τέλος ἀπέστη τοῦ διαλέγεσθαι καὶ φοιτᾶν πρὸς αὐτόν, οὐδενὶ μέντοι τὴν αἰτίαν ἔφρασε τῆς διαφορᾶς, ἀλλ' αὐτὸν ἔφη γινώσκειν ἐκείνον.
- 4 Οὕτω δὲ τοῦ Ξενάρους ἀντικρούσαντος ὁ Κλεομένης καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους ὁμοίως ἔχειν ἡγούμενος, αὐτὸς ἐν ἑαυτῷ συνετίθει τὴν πρᾶξιν. οἰόμενος δ' ἂν ἐν πολέμῳ μᾶλλον ἢ κατ' εἰρήνην μεταστῆσαι τὰ παρόντα, συνέκρουσε πρὸς τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς τὴν πόλιν, αὐτοὺς διδόντας ἐγκλημάτων προφάσεις. ὁ γὰρ Ἄρατος ἰσχύων μέγιστον ἐν τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς ἐβούλετο μὲν ἐξ ἀρχῆς εἰς μίαν σύνταξιν ἀγαγεῖν Πελοποννησίους, καὶ τοῦτο τῶν πολλῶν στρατηγιῶν αὐτῷ καὶ τῆς μακρᾶς πολιτείας ἦν pleasure and aggrandizement; the common people, because of their wretched state at home, had lost all readiness for war and all ambition to maintain the ancient Spartan discipline; and he himself, Cleomenes, was king only in name, while the whole power was in the hands of the ephors. He therefore at once determined to stir up and change the existing order of things, and as he had a friend, Xenares, who had been his lover (or inspirer, as the Spartans say), he would make trial of his sentiments by inquiring in detail what sort of a king Agis had been, and in what way and with what assistants he had entered upon the course of action so fatal to him. At first Xenares was quite glad to recall those matters, and rehearsed the events at length and in detail; but when it was apparent that Cleomenes took an unusual interest in the story, and was profoundly stirred by the innovations of Agis, and wished to hear about him over and over again, Xenares rebuked him angrily, calling him unsound in mind, and finally stopped visiting and conversing with him. To no one, however, did he tell the reason of their variance, but merely said that Cleomenes understood it.

806

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

And so Cleomenes, finding Xenares averse, and thinking that everybody else was of like mind with him, began to arrange his project all by himself. And because he thought that he could better bring about his reforms in time of war than in the midst of peace, he embroiled the state with the Achaeans, who were themselves giving grounds for complaint. For Aratus, the most powerful man among the Achaeans, was from the outset desirous of bringing all the Peloponnesians into one confederation, and this was the end pursued by him during his many

τέλος, ἡγουμένῳ μόνως ἂν οὕτως ἀνεπιχειρήτους 5 ἔσεσθαι τοῖς ἔκτος πολεμίοις. ἐπεὶ δὲ τῶν ἄλλων σχεδὸν ἀπάντων αὐτῷ προσγεγονότων ἀπελεί-ποντο Λακεδαιμόνιοι καὶ Ἡλείοι καὶ ὅσοι Λακε-δαιμονίοις Ἀρκάδων προσεῖχον, ἅμα τῷ τὸν Λεωνίδα ἀποθανεῖν παρηνώχλει τοῖς Ἀρκάσι καὶ περιέκοπτεν αὐτῶν μάλιστα τοὺς τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς ὁμοροῦντας, ἀποπειρώμενος τῶν Λακεδαιμονίων, καὶ τοῦ Κλεομένουσ ὡς νέου καὶ ἀπείρου κατα-φρονῶν.

IV. Ἐκ τούτου Κλεομένη πρῶτον οἱ ἔφοροι πέμπουσι καταληψόμενον τὸ περὶ τὴν Βέλβιναν Ἀθηναῖον. ἐμβολὴ δὲ τῆς Λακωνικῆς τὸ χωρίον ἐστὶ, καὶ τότε πρὸς τοὺς Μεγαλοπολίτας ἦν ἐπί-δικον. καταλαβόντος δὲ τοῦτο καὶ τειχίσαντος τοῦ Κλεομένουσ ὁ Ἄρατος οὐθὲν ἐγκαλέσας, ἀλλὰ νυκτὸς ἐκστρατεύσας ἐπεχείρησε Τεγεάταισ καὶ 2 Ὀρχομενίοις. τῶν δὲ προδοτῶν ἀποδειλιασάντων ὁ μὲν Ἄρατος ἀνεχώρησε λεληθέναι νομίζων, ὁ δὲ Κλεομένησ εἰρωνεῖα χρώμενος ἔγραψε πρὸς αὐτόν, ὡσ δὴ παρὰ φίλου πυνθανόμενος ποῦ τῆσ νυκτὸς ἐξέλθοι. τοῦ δὲ ἀντιγράψαντος ὡσ ἐκείνου Βέλβιναν μέλλειν τειχίζειν ἀκούσας καταβαίη τοῦτο κωλύσων, πάλιν ὁ Κλεομένησ ἀποστείλασ τοῦτο μὲν οὕτως ἔχειν ἔφη πεπεισθαι. “τοὺσ δὲ φανούσ καὶ τὰσ κλίμακασ,” εἶπεν, “εἰ μὴ τί σοι διαφέρει, γράψων ἡμῖν, ἐπὶ τί σοι παρηκολού-3 θουν.” τοῦ δὲ Ἀράτου πρὸς τὸ σκῶμμα γελά-σαντος καὶ πυνθανομένου ποῖός τις ὁ νεανίσκος εἶη, Δαμοκράτης ὁ Λακεδαιμόνιος φυγὰσ, “Εἴ τι πράττεισ,” ἔφη, “πρὸς Λακεδαιμονίους, ὦρα

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

generalships and his long political activity, since he was of the opinion that in this way alone would they be safe from the attacks of their enemies without. Nearly all the other Peloponnesians adopted his views, but the Lacedaemonians, the Eleians, and the Arcadians who sided with the Lacedaemonians, held aloof. Therefore, as soon as Leonidas was dead, Aratus began to harass the Arcadians, and ravaged the territories of those especially who were adjacent to Achaea. His object was to put the Lacedaemonians to the test, and he despised Cleomenes as a young and inexperienced man.

IV. Upon this, the ephors began operations by sending Cleomenes to occupy the precinct of Athena at Belbina. This commands an entrance into Laconia, and was at that time a subject of litigation with the Megalopolitans. After Cleomenes had occupied and fortified this place, Aratus made no public protest, but led out his forces one night and tried to surprise Tegea and Orchomenus. Those who were to betray the places to him, however, played the coward, and Aratus withdrew, thinking that his attempt had escaped notice. But Cleomenes wrote him an ironical letter, inquiring, as from a friend, whither he had marched out in the night. Aratus wrote back that hearing of Cleomenes' intention to fortify Belbina he had gone down there to prevent it. Whereupon Cleomenes sent back word again that he believed this story to be true; "but those torches and ladders," said he, "if it is all one to thee, tell me for what purpose thou hadst them with thee." Aratus burst out laughing at the jest, and inquired what manner of youth this was. Whereupon Damocrates, the Lacedaemonian exile, replied: "If thou hast designs

σοι ταχύνειν πρὸ τοῦ κέντρα φῦσαι τοῦτον τὸν νεοσσόν.”

Ἐκ τούτου Κλεομένει μετὰ ἰππέων ὀλίγων καὶ πεζῶν τριακοσίων ἐν Ἀρκαδία στρατοπεδευομένῳ προσέταξαν ἀναχωρεῖν οἱ ἔφοροι, φοβούμενοι τὸν πόλεμον. ἐπεὶ δὲ ἀναχωρήσαντος αὐτοῦ Καφύας ἔλαβεν ὁ Ἄρατος, αὐθις ἐξέπεμπον τὸν Κλεομένην. λαβόντος δὲ αὐτοῦ Μεθύδριον καὶ τὴν Ἀργολικὴν καταδραμόντος, ἐξεστράτευσαν οἱ Ἀχαιοὶ διςμυρίοις πεζοῖς καὶ χιλίοις ἰππεύσιν Ἀριστομάχου στρατηγούντος. ἀπαντήσαντος δὲ περὶ Παλλάντιον Κλεομένους καὶ βουλομένου μάχεσθαι, φοβηθεὶς τὴν τόλμαν ὁ Ἄρατος οὐκ εἶασε διακινδυνεύσαι τὸν στρατηγόν, ἀλλ’ ἀπήλθε λοιδορούμενος μὲν ὑπὸ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν, χλευαζόμενος δὲ καὶ καταφρονούμενος ὑπὸ τῶν Λακεδαιμονίων, οὐδὲ πεντακισχιλίων τὸ πλῆθος ὄντων. μέγας οὖν τῷ φρονήματι γεγονῶς ὁ Κλεομένης ἐθρασύνετο πρὸς τοὺς πολίτας, καὶ τῶν παλαιῶν τινος αὐτοὺς ἀνεμίμησκε βασιλέων εἰπόντος οὐ μάτην ὅτι¹ Λακεδαιμόνιοι πυνθάνονται περὶ τῶν πολεμίων, οὐ πόσοι εἰσίν, ἀλλὰ ποῦ εἰσιν.

V. Ἐπεὶ δὲ τοῖς Ἠλείοις πολεμουμένοις ὑπὸ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν βοηθήσας, καὶ περὶ τὸ Λύκαιον ἀπιούσιν ἤδη τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς ἐπιβαλὼν, ἅπαν μὲν ἐτρέψατο καὶ διεπτόησεν αὐτῶν τὸ στράτευμα, συχνούς δὲ ἀνεῖλε καὶ ζῶντας ἔλαβεν, ὥστε καὶ περὶ Ἀράτου φήμην ἐκπεσεῖν εἰς τοὺς Ἕλληνας ὡς τεθηκότος, ὁ μὲν Ἄρατος ἄριστα τῷ καιρῷ χρησάμενος ἐκ τῆς τροπῆς ἐκείνης εὐθὺς ἐπι upon the Lacedaemonians, see that thou hastenest, before this young cock grows his spurs."

¹ εἰπόντος οὐ μάτην ὅτι Sintonis (com.) and Blass, after Stephanus: εἰπόντος ὅτι μάτην (MSS.).

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

After this, when Cleomenes with a few horsemen and three hundred foot-soldiers was making an expedition in Arcadia, the ephors, fearing the issue of the war, ordered him to come back home. After he had returned, however, Aratus seized Caphyae, and the ephors sent Cleomenes forth again. He seized Methydrium and overran the territory of Argolis, whereupon the Achaeans marched out with twenty thousand foot-soldiers and a thousand horsemen under Aristomachus as general. Cleomenes met them at Pallantium and offered battle, but Aratus, in fear of this boldness, would not suffer his general to hazard the issue, and retired. For this he was reproached by the Achaeans, and jeered at and despised by the Lacedaemonians, who were less than five thousand strong. Cleomenes was therefore greatly lifted up in spirit and began to show a bold front to the citizens; and he would often remind them of one of their ancient kings¹ who said, and not idly either, "The Lacedaemonians are wont to ask, not how many, but where, their enemies are."

V. After this, he went to the aid of the Eleians, upon whom the Achaeans were making war, and falling upon the Achaeans near Mt. Lycaenum, as they were withdrawing, he put their entire army to panic flight, slew great numbers of them, and took many prisoners, so that even Aratus was widely reported among the Greeks to be dead. But Aratus, making the best use of his opportunity, immediately after

¹ Agis II. (427-398 B.C.); cf. the Morals, pp. 190 c; 215 d.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Μαντίνειαν ἦλθε καὶ μηδενὸς ἂν προσδοκίσαντος
 2 εἶλε τὴν πόλιν καὶ κατέσχε, τῶν δὲ Λακεδαιμονίων παντάπασι ταῖς γνώμαις ἀναπεσόντων καὶ τῷ Κλεομένει πρὸς τὰς στρατείας ἐνισταμένων, ὤρ-μησε μεταπέμπεσθαι τὸν Ἄγιδος ἀδελφὸν Ἀρχιδαμον ἐκ Μεσσήνης, ᾧ βασιλεύειν ἀπὸ τῆς ἐτέρας οἰκίας ἦν προσῆκον, οἰόμενος ἀμβλυτέραν τὴν τῶν ἐφόρων ἀρχὴν ἔσεσθαι τῆς βασιλείας ἰσορρόπου 3 καὶ ὀλοκλήρου γενομένης. οἱ δὲ ἀνηρηκότες πρότερον τὸν Ἄγιν αἰσθόμενοι τοῦτο, καὶ φοβηθέντες μὴ δίκην δῶσι τοῦ Ἀρχιδάμου κατελθόντος, ἐδέ-ξαντο μὲν αὐτὸν εἰς τὴν πόλιν παραγενόμενον κρύφα καὶ συγκατήγον, εὐθύς δὲ ἀπέκτειναν, εἶτε ἄκοντος τοῦ Κλεομένου, ὡς οἶεται Φύλαρχος, εἶτε πεισθέντος ὑπὸ τῶν φίλων καὶ προεμένου τὸν ἄνθρωπον αὐτοῖς. τῆς γὰρ αἰτίας τὸ πλεῖστον ἐπ' ἐκείνους ἦλθε βεβιάσθαι τὸν Κλεομένη δοκούντας.

VI. Οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ κινεῖν εὐθύς ἐγνωκῶς τὰ κατὰ τὴν πόλιν, ἔπεισε τοὺς ἐφόρους χρήμασιν ὅπως αὐτῷ ψηφίσωνται στρατείαν. ἐθεράπευσε δὲ καὶ τῶν ἄλλων συχνοὺς διὰ τῆς μητρὸς Κρατησι-κλείας ἀφειδῶς συγχορηγούσης καὶ συμφιλοτιμουμένης, ἧ γε καὶ γάμου μὴ δεομένη λέγεται διὰ τὸν υἱὸν ἄνδρα λαβεῖν πρωτεύοντα δόξῃ καὶ 2 δυνάμει τῶν πολιτῶν. ἐξαγαγὼν δὲ τὴν στρα-τείαν καταλαμβάνει τῆς Μεγαλοπολίτιδος χωρίον Λεῦκτρα· καὶ γενομένης πρὸς αὐτὸν ὀξείας τῶν

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

this defeat marched to Mantinea, and to everybody's surprise captured and held the city. At this the Lacedaemonians were altogether disheartened and opposed any further expedition on the part of Cleomenes. He therefore determined to summon from Messene the brother of Agis, Archidamus,¹ who was the rightful king from the other royal house, thinking that the power of the ephors would be diminished if the royal power were restored to its full strength so as to counterbalance it. But those who had formerly murdered Agis comprehended this design, and fearing that they would pay the penalty for their crime if Archidamus was restored, they did indeed receive him when he came secretly into the city, and assisted in his restoration, but immediately put him to death. Cleomenes may have been opposed to this, as Phylarchus thinks, or perhaps he was persuaded by his friends to abandon the hapless man to his murderers. For the greater part of the blame attached itself to them, since they were thought to have constrained Cleomenes.

VI. However, having determined to attempt at once his reforms in the state, Cleomenes bribed the ephors to send him on an expedition. He also won the favour of large numbers of the citizens with the help of his mother Cratesicleia, who assisted him liberally in providing ways and means, and shared his ambitions. It is even said that although she had no desire to marry again, for the sake of her son she took a husband who was foremost among the citizens in reputation and influence. So Cleomenes led forth his forces and occupied Leuctra, a stronghold of Megalopolis. The Achaeans, under the command of

¹ See chapter i. 1.

Ἀχαιῶν βοθηίας Ἀράτου στρατηγούντος, ὑπὸ τὴν πόλιν αὐτὴν παραταξάμενος ἠττήθη μέρει τινὶ τοῦ στρατεύματος. ἐπεὶ δὲ χαράδραν τινὰ βαθεῖαν οὐκ εἶασε διαβῆναι τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς ὁ 3 Ἀρατος, ἀλλ' ἐπέστησε τὴν διώξιν, ἀγανακτῶν δὲ Λυδιάδας ὁ Μεγαλοπολίτης συνεξώρμησε τοὺς περὶ αὐτὸν ἰππεῖς καὶ διώκων εἰς χωρίον ἀμπέλων καὶ τάφρων καὶ τειχῶν μεστὸν ἐνσεΐσας καὶ διασπασθεῖς περὶ ταῦτα κακῶς ἀπήλλαττε, κατι-δῶν ὁ Κλεομένης ἀνῆκε τοὺς Ταραντίνους καὶ τοὺς Κρήτας ἐπ' αὐτόν, ὑφ' ὧν ὁ Λυδιάδας ἀμυνόμενος εὐρώστως ἔπεσε. πρὸς τοῦτο θαρρήσαντες οἱ Λακεδαιμόνιοι μετὰ βοῆς ἐνέβαλον τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς, καὶ τροπὴν ὄλου τοῦ στρατεύματος ἐποίησαν.
 4 ἀποθανόντων δὲ συχνῶν τοὺς μὲν ἄλλους ὑπο-σπόνδους ὁ Κλεομένης ἀπέδωκε, τὸν δὲ Λυδιάδαν νεκρὸν ἀχθῆναι πρὸς αὐτὸν κελεύσας, κοσμήσας πορφυρίδι καὶ στέφανον ἐπιθείς, πρὸς τὰς πύλας τῶν Μεγαλοπολιτῶν ἀπέστειλεν. οὗτος ἦν Λυδιά-δας ὁ καταθέμενος τὴν τυραννίδα καὶ τοῖς πολίταις ἀποδοὺς τὴν ἐλευθερίαν καὶ τὴν πόλιν προσκο-μίσας Ἀχαιοῖς.

VII. Ἐκ τούτου Κλεομένης μέγα φρονῶν ἤδη, καὶ πεπεισμένος ἂν ὡς βούλεται τοῖς πράγμασι χρώμενος πολεμῆ πρὸς τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς, ῥαδίως ἐπικρατήσειν, ἐδίδασκε τὸν τῆς μητρὸς ἄνδρα Μεγιστόνου ὡς χρὴ τῶν ἐφόρων ἀπαλλαγέντας εἰς μέσον θεῖναι τὰ κτήματα τοῖς πολίταις καὶ τὴν Σπάρτην ἴσην γενομένην ἐγείρειν καὶ προάγειν ἐπὶ τὴν τῆς Ἑλλάδος ἡγεμονίαν. πεισθέντος δ' ἐκείνου δύο τῶν ἄλλων φίλων ἢ τρεῖς προσέ-λαβε.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

Aratus, came swiftly to the aid of their allies against him, and Cleomenes, after drawing up his forces under the very walls of the city, was worsted at one point. But Aratus would not permit the Achaeans to cross a certain deep ravine, and brought his pursuit to a stop. Lydiadas the Megalopolitan, however, chafing at this, dashed on with the horsemen under his command, and pursuing the enemy into a place full of vines, ditches, and walls, had his ranks broken and thrown into disorder thereby, and began to fall into difficulties. Cleomenes, observing this, sent against him his Tarentines and Cretans, at whose hands Lydiadas, defending himself sturdily, fell. At this the Lacedaemonians took courage and with a shout fell upon the Achaeans and routed their entire army. Great numbers of them were slain, and their bodies Cleomenes restored at the enemy's request; but the body of Lydiadas he asked to have brought to him, arrayed it in a purple robe and put a crown upon the head, and then sent it back to the gates of Megalopolis. This was the Lydiadas who renounced the tyranny, gave back to the citizens their freedom, and attached the city to the Achaean league.

VII. After this, Cleomenes, being now greatly elated, and persuaded that if he could keep the control of things entirely in his own hands during the war with the Achaeans, he would easily obtain the mastery, began to instruct his mother's husband, Megistonoüs, that they must needs get rid of the ephors, put the property of the citizens into a common stock, and rouse and incite the Spartans, thus put upon their old footing of equality, to assume the supremacy in Greece. Megistonoüs was convinced, and enlisted in the cause two or three of his friends besides.

- 2 Συνέβη δὲ περὶ τὰς ἡμέρας ἐκείνας καὶ τῶν ἐφόρων ἓνα κοιμώμενον ἐν Πασιφίας ὄναρ ἰδεῖν θαυμαστόν· ἐδόκει γὰρ ἐν ᾧ τόπῳ τοῖς ἐφόροις ἔθος ἐστὶ καθεζομένοις χρηματίζειν ἓνα δίφρον κεῖσθαι, τοὺς δὲ τέτταρας ἀνηρῆσθαι, καὶ θαυμάζοντος αὐτοῦ φωνῆν ἐκ τοῦ ἱεροῦ γενέσθαι φράζουσαν ὡς τοῦτο τῇ Σπάρτῃ λῶόν ἐστι. ταύτην τὴν ὄψιν διηγούμενου τοῦ ἐφόρου πρὸς τὸν Κλεομένην, τὸ μὲν πρῶτον διαταράχθη καθ' ὑποψίαν τινὰ πειράζεσθαι δοκῶν, ὡς δὲ ἐπέισθη μὴ ψεύδεσθαι τὸν διηγούμενον, ἐθάρρησε. καὶ λαβῶν ὅσους ὑπώπτευε μάλιστα τῶν πολιτῶν ἐναντιώσεσθαι πρὸς τὴν πρᾶξιν, Ἑραίαν καὶ Ἀλσαίαν τὰς πόλεις ταττομένας ὑπὸ τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς εἶλε, καὶ σίτον εἰσήγαγεν Ὀρχομενίοις, καὶ Μαντινείᾳ
- 3
- 4 παρεστρατοπέδευσε, καὶ ὅλως ἄνω καὶ κάτω μακραῖς πορείαις ἀποτρύσας τοὺς Λακεδαιμονίους ἀπέλιπεν αὐτῶν δεηθέντων τοὺς πολλοὺς ἐν Ἀρκαδίᾳ, τοὺς δὲ μισθοφόρους ἔχων αὐτὸς ἐπὶ τὴν Σπάρτην ἐχώρει. καὶ καθ' ὁδὸν οἷς ἐπίστευε μάλιστα καλῶς πρὸς αὐτὸν ἔχειν ἀνεκοινοῦτο τὴν γνώμην, καὶ προῆει σχέδην, ὡς περὶ τὸ δεῖπνον οὔσι τοῖς ἐφόροις ἐπιπέσοι.

VIII. Γενόμενος δὲ τῆς πόλεως ἐγγύς, Εὐρυκλείδαν μὲν εἰς τὸ τῶν ἐφόρων συσσίτιον ἀπέστειλεν ὡς τινα παρ' αὐτοῦ λόγον ἀπὸ στρατιᾶς κομίζοντα, Θηρυκίων δὲ καὶ Φοῖβις καὶ δύο τῶν συντρόφων τοῦ Κλεομένου, οὓς μόθακας καλοῦσιν, ἐπηκολούθουν στρατιώτας ὀλίγους ἔχοντες.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

Now, it came to pass about that time that one of the ephors, who was sleeping in the precinct of Pasiphaë, had an astonishing dream. He dreamed that in the place where the ephors were wont to sit for the prosecution of business, one chair only stood, but the other four had been taken away; and that in his amazement at this a voice came to him from the temple saying that this was better for Sparta. This dream the ephor related to Cleomenes, who at first was much disturbed, and thought that the other had some suspicion of his design and was making trial of him; but when he was convinced that the relater spoke the truth, his courage revived. So taking all the citizens who, as he suspected, would be most opposed to his designs, he seized Heraea and Alsaëa, two cities belonging to the Achaean league, introduced supplies of food into Orchomenus, and encamped by Mantinea, from whence he made long marches up and down the land, and utterly wore out the Lacedaemonians, so that it was at their own request that he left most of them in Arcadia, while with his mercenaries he himself set out for Sparta. On the march he imparted his design to those whom he believed to be most favourably disposed to him, and went forward slowly, that he might fall upon the ephors while they were at supper.

VIII. When the city was close at hand, he sent Eurycleidas to the mess-table of the ephors, ostensibly to carry some message of the king from the army; but Therycion, Phoebis, and two of the Helots, who had been bred up along with Cleomenes¹ (they call them "mothakes"), followed after with a few ¹ Such Helot companions afterwards became freemen, and sometimes even citizens in Sparta.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἔτι δὲ τοῦ Εὐρυκλείδα διαλεγομένου τοῖς ἐφόροις ἐπιδραμόντες ἐσπασμέναις ταῖς μαχαίραις ἔπαιον 2 αὐτούς. ὁ μὲν οὖν πρῶτος Ἀγύλαιος, ὡς ἐπλήγη, πεσὼν καὶ τεθνήαι δόξας ἀτρέμα συναγαγὼν καὶ παρέλκων ἑαυτὸν ἐκ τοῦ οἰκήματος ἔλαθεν εἰς τι δωμάτιον εἰσερπύσας μικρὸν, ὃ φόβου μὲν ἦν ἱερόν, ἄλλως δὲ κεκλεισμένον αἰεὶ, τότε ἐκ τύχης ἀνεωγμένον ἐτύγχανεν. εἰς τοῦτο συνεισενεγκὼν ἑαυτὸν ἀπέκλεισε τὸ θύριον. οἱ δὲ τέσσαρες ἀνηρέθησαν, καὶ τῶν ἐπιβοηθούτων αὐτοῖς οὐ πλείονες ἢ δέκα. τοὺς γὰρ ἡσυχίαν ἄγοντας οὐκ ἔκτειναν, οὐδὲ τοὺς ἀπιόντας ἐκ τῆς πόλεως ἐκώλυον. ἐφείσαντο δὲ καὶ τοῦ Ἀγυλαίου μεθ' ἡμέραν ἐκ τοῦ ἱεροῦ προελθόντος.

IX. Ἔστι δὲ Λακεδαιμονίοις οὐ φόβου μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ θανάτου καὶ γέλωτος καὶ τοιούτων ἄλλων παθημάτων ἱερά. τιμῶσι δὲ τὸν φόβον οὐχ ὥσπερ οὖς ἀποτρέπονται δαίμονας, ἡγούμενοι βλαβερόν, ἀλλὰ τὴν πολιτείαν μάλιστα συνέ-
 2 χεσθαι φόβῳ νομίζοντες. διὸ καὶ προεκήρυττον οἱ ἔφοροι τοῖς πολίταις εἰς τὴν ἀρχὴν εἰσιόντες, ὡς Ἀριστοτέλης φησί, κείρεσθαι τὸν μύστακα καὶ προσέχειν τοῖς νόμοις, ἵνα μὴ χαλεποὶ ὦσιν αὐτοῖς· τὸ τοῦ μύστακος, οἶμαι, προτείνοντες, ὅπως καὶ περὶ τὰ μικρότατα τοὺς νέους πειθαρχεῖν
 3 ἐθίζωσι. καὶ τὴν ἀνδρείαν δέ μοι δοκοῦσιν οὐκ ἀφοβίαν, ἀλλὰ φόβον ψόγου καὶ δέος ἀδοξίας οἱ παλαιοὶ νομίζειν. οἱ γὰρ δειλότατοι πρὸς τοὺς νόμους θαρραλεώτατοι πρὸς τοὺς πολεμίους εἰσί·

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

soldiers. These men, while Eurycleidas was still making his report to the ephors, ran in upon them with drawn swords and smote them. The first of them, Agylaeus, on receiving the blow, fell and lay still as though dead; but afterwards he quietly pulled himself together, dragged himself out of the room, and crept unobserved into a little building which was a temple of Fear. Usually it was closed, but at this time it chanced to be open. Into this building he betook himself and locked the door. But the other four were slain, and also about ten of those who came to their aid. For the people who kept quiet were not killed, nor were those who wished to leave the city prevented. And even Agylaeus was spared when he came out of the temple next day.

IX. Now, the Lacedaemonians have temples of Death, Laughter, and that sort of thing, as well as of Fear. And they pay honours to Fear, not as they do to the powers which they try to avert because they think them baleful, but because they believe that fear is the chief support of their civil polity. For this reason, too, when the ephors enter upon their office, as Aristotle says, they issue a proclamation commanding all men to shave their moustaches, and to obey the laws, that these may not be severe upon them. They insist upon the shaving of the moustache, I think, in order that they may accustom the young men to obedience in the most trifling matters. And the men of old, in my opinion, did not regard bravery as a lack of fear, but as fear of reproach and dread of disgrace. For the men who feel most dread of the laws have most courage in

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

καὶ τὸ παθεῖν ἥκιστα δεδίασιν οἱ μάλιστα φοβού-4 μνοι τὸ κακῶς ἀκούσαι. διὸ καὶ καλῶς ὁ εἰπών·

. . . ἵνα γὰρ δέος, ἔνθα καὶ αἰδώς.

καὶ Ὁμηρος,

αἰδοῖός τέ μοί ἐσσι, φίλε ἔκυρέ, δεινός τε·
καί

σιγῇ δειδιότες σημάντορας.

τὸ γὰρ αἰσχύνεσθαι μάλιστα συμβαίνει πρὸς οὓς καὶ τὸ δεδοικέναι τοῖς πολλοῖς. διὸ καὶ παρὰ τὸ τῶν ἐφόρων συσσίτιον τὸν φόβον ἴδρυνται Λακεδαιμόνιοι, μοναρχίας ἐγγυτάτω κατασκευασάμενοι τὸ ἀρχεῖον.

Χ. Ὁ δ' οὖν Κλεομένης ἡμέρας γενομένης προέγραψεν ὀγδοήκοντα τῶν πολιτῶν οὓς ἔδει μεταστῆναι, καὶ τοὺς δίφρους ἀνείλε τῶν ἐφόρων πλὴν ἑνός, ἐν ᾧ καθήμενος ἔμελλεν αὐτὸς χρηματίζειν. ἐκκλησίαν δὲ ποιήσας ἀπελογοῖτο περὶ τῶν πεπραγμένων. ἔφη γὰρ ὑπὸ τοῦ Λυκούργου τοῖς βασιλεῦσι συμμιχθῆναι τοὺς γέροντας, καὶ πολὺν χρόνον οὕτω διοικεῖσθαι τὴν πόλιν οὐδὲν
2 ἐτέρας ἀρχῆς δεομένην, ὕστερον δὲ τοῦ πρὸς Μεσσηνίου πολέμου μακροῦ γενομένου τοὺς βασιλεῖς, διὰ τὰς στρατείας ἀσχόλους ὄντας αὐτοὺς πρὸς τὸ κρίνειν, αἰρεῖσθαι τινὰς ἐκ τῶν φίλων καὶ ἀπολείπειν τοῖς πολίταις ἀνθ' ἑαυτῶν, ἐφόρους προσαγορευθέντας, καὶ διατελεῖν γε τούτους τὸ

809

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

facing their enemies; and those shun death least who most fear ill fame. Therefore it has been well said¹:

“ . . . for where dread is, there also is reverence.”

And Homer says²:

“ Revered art thou by me, dear father-in-law, and dreaded too ; ”

and

“ Without a word, in dread of their leaders.³ ”

For by the multitude reverence is most apt to be felt towards those whom they also fear. For this reason, too, the Lacedaemonians erected a temple to Fear alongside the mess-hall of the ephors, after they had endowed this magistracy with almost absolute powers.

X. And now to resume; Cleomenes, when day came, published a list of eighty citizens who must go into exile, and removed all the ephoral chairs except one; in this he purposed to sit himself for the transaction of public business. Then he called a general assembly and made a defence of his proceedings. He said that Lycurgus had blended the powers of senate and kings, and that for a long time the state was administered in this way and had no need of other officials. But later, when the Messenian war proved to be long, the kings, since their campaigns abroad left them no time to administer justice themselves, chose out some of their friends and left them behind to serve the citizens in their stead. These were called ephors, or guardians, and as a matter of fact they

¹ By Stasinus of Cyprus. Cf. Plato, Euthyphro, 12 a ; Kinkel, Ep. Graec. Frag. i. p. 30.

² Iliad, iii. 172, Helen to Priam.

³ Iliad, iv. 431, of the Achaeans marshalled for battle.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- πρώτον ὑπηρέτας τῶν βασιλέων ὄντας, εἶτα κατὰ μικρὸν εἰς ἑαυτοὺς τὴν ἐξουσίαν ἐπιστρέφοντας οὕτως λαθεῖν ἴδιον ἀρχεῖον κατασκευασαμένους.
- 3 σημεῖον δὲ τούτου τὸ μέχρι νῦν μεταπεμπομένων τὸν βασιλέα τῶν ἐφόρων τὸ πρῶτον ἀντιλέγειν καὶ τὸ δεύτερον, τὸ δὲ τρίτον καλούντων ἀναστάντα βαδίζειν πρὸς αὐτούς· καὶ τὸν πρῶτον ἐπισφοδρῦναντα τὴν ἀρχὴν καὶ ἀνατεινάμενον Ἄστερωπὸν ἡλικίαις ὕστερον πολλαῖς ἔφορον γενέσθαι. μετριάζοντας μὲν οὖν αὐτούς, ἔφη, κρεῖττον ἦν ὑπομένειν, ἐξουσία δὲ ἐπιθέτω τὴν πατριὸν καταλύοντας ἀρχὴν, ὥστε τῶν βασιλέων τοὺς μὲν ἐξελαύνειν, τοὺς δὲ ἀποκτινύειν ἀκρίτους, ἀπειλεῖν δὲ τοῖς ποθοῦσιν αὐθις ἐπιδεῖν τὴν καλλίστην καὶ θειοτάτην ἐν Σπάρτῃ κατάστασιν,
- 4 οὐκ ἀνεκτόν. εἰ μὲν οὖν δυνατὸν ἦν ἄνευ σφαγῆς ἀπαλλάξαι τὰς ἐπεισάκτους τῆς Λακεδαίμονος κῆρας, τρυφᾶς καὶ πολυτελείας καὶ χρέα καὶ δανεισμοὺς καὶ τὰ πρεσβύτερα τούτων κακά, πενίαν καὶ πλοῦτον, εὐτυχέστατον ἂν ἠγεῖσθαι πάντων βασιλέων ἑαυτὸν ὥσπερ ἰατρὸν ἀνωδύνως ἰασάμενον τὴν πατρίδα· νῦν δὲ τῆς ἀνάγκης ἔχειν συγγνώμονα τὸν Λυκούργον, ὃς οὔτε βασιλεὺς ὦν οὔτε ἀρχων, ἰδιώτης δὲ βασιλεύειν ἐπιχειρῶν ἐν τοῖς ὄπλοις προῆλθεν εἰς ἀγοράν, ὥστε δείσαντα τὸν βασιλέα Χάριλλον ἐπὶ βωμὸν καταφυγεῖν.
- 5 ἀλλ' ἐκεῖνον μὲν ὄντα χρηστὸν καὶ φιλόπατριν ταχὺ τῷ Λυκούργῳ τῶν πραττομένων μετασχεῖν
- 70

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

continued at first to be assistants of the kings, but then gradually diverted the power into their own hands, and so, ere men were aware, established a magistracy of their own. As proof of this, Cleomenes cited the fact that down to that day, when the ephors summoned a king to appear before them, he refused to go at the first summons, and at the second, but at the third rose up and went to them ; and he said that the one who first added weight to the office, and extended its powers, Asteropus, was ephor many generations later. As long, then, he said, as the ephors kept within bounds, it had been better to bear with them ; but when with their assumed power they subverted the ancient form of government to such an extent as to drive away some kings, put others to death without trial, and threaten such as desired to behold again in Sparta her fairest and most divinely appointed constitution, it was not to be endured. If, then, it had been possible without bloodshed to rid Sparta of her imported curses, namely luxury and extravagance, and debts and usury, and those elder evils than these, namely, poverty and wealth, he would have thought himself the most fortunate king in the world to have cured the disease of his country like a wise physician, without pain ; but as it was, he said, in support of the necessity that had been laid upon him, he could cite Lycurgus, who, though he was neither king nor magistrate, but a private person attempting to act as king, proceeded with an armed retinue into the market-place, so that Charillus the king took fright and fled for refuge to an altar. That king, however, Cleomenes said, since he was an excellent man and a lover of his country, speedily concurred in the measures of Lycurgus and accepted

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

καὶ τὴν μεταβολὴν δέξασθαι τῆς πολιτείας, ἔργῳ δὲ μαρτυρῆσαι τὸν Λυκούργον ὅτι πολιτείαν μεταβαλεῖν ἄνευ βίας καὶ φόβου χαλεπὸν ἐστίν, οἷς αὐτὸν ἔφη μετριώτατα κεχρηῆσθαι, τοὺς ἐνισταμένους τῇ σωτηρίᾳ τῆς Λακεδαίμονος ἐκποδῶν 6 ποιησάμενον. τοῖς δὲ ἄλλοις ἔφη πᾶσι τὴν τε γῆν ἅπασαν εἰς μέσον τιθέναι, καὶ χρεῶν τοὺς ὀφείλοντας ἀπαλλάττειν, καὶ τῶν ξένων κρίσιν ποιεῖν καὶ δοκιμασίαν, ὅπως οἱ κράτιστοι γενόμενοι Σπαρτιᾶται σώξωσι τὴν πόλιν τοῖς ὅπλοις, καὶ παυσώμεθα τὴν Λακωνικὴν Αἰτωλῶν καὶ Ἰλλυριῶν λείαν οὖσαν ἐρημίᾳ τῶν ἀμυνόντων ἐφορῶντες.

XI. Ἐκ τούτου πρῶτον μὲν αὐτὸς εἰς μέσον τὴν οὐσίαν ἔθηκε καὶ Μεγιστόνους ὁ πατρῷος αὐτοῦ καὶ τῶν ἄλλων φίλων ἕκαστος, ἔπειτα καὶ οἱ λοιποὶ πολῖται πάντες, ἡ δὲ χώρα διενεμήθη. κλήρον δὲ καὶ τῶν ὑπ' αὐτοῦ γεγονότων φυγάδων ἀπένειμεν ἐκάστῳ, καὶ κατάξειν ἅπαντας ὡμολόγησε τῶν πραγμάτων ἐν ἡσυχίᾳ γενομένων.
 2 ἀναπληρώσας δὲ τὸ πολίτευμα τοῖς χαριστάτοις τῶν περιοίκων ὀπλίτας τετρακισχιλίους ἐποίησε, καὶ διδάξας αὐτοὺς ἀντὶ δόρατος χρῆσθαι σαρίσῃ δι' ἀμφοτέρων καὶ τὴν ἀσπίδα φορεῖν δι' ὀχάνης, μὴ διὰ πόρπακος, ἐπὶ τὴν παιδείαν τῶν νέων ἐτράπη καὶ τὴν λεγομένην ἀγωγὴν, ἧς τὰ πλεῖστα παρῶν ὁ Σφαῖρος αὐτῷ συγκαθίστη, ταχὺ τὸν προσήκοντα τῶν τε γυμνασίων καὶ τῶν συσσιτίων κόσμον ἀναλαμβάνοντων, καὶ συστελλο-

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

the change of constitution ; still, as a matter of fact Lycurgus by his own acts bore witness to the difficulty of changing a constitution without violence and fear. To these, Cleomenes said, he had himself resorted with the greatest moderation, for he had but put out of the way the men who were opposed to the salvation of Sparta. For all the rest, he said, the whole land should be common property, debtors should be set free from their debts, and foreigners should be examined and rated, in order that the strongest of them might be made Spartan citizens and help to preserve the state by their arms. "In this way," he said, "we shall cease to behold Sparta the booty of Aetolians and Illyrians through lack of men to defend her."

XI. After this, to begin with, Cleomenes himself placed his property in the common stock, as did Megistonöus his step-father and every one of his friends besides ; next, all the rest of the citizens did the same, and the land was parcelled out. Cleomenes also assigned a portion of land to each man who had been exiled by him, and promised to bring them all home after matters had become quiet. Then he filled up the body of citizens with the most promising of the free provincials, and thus raised a body of four thousand men-at-arms, whom he taught to use a long pike, held in both hands, instead of a short spear, and to carry their shields by a strap instead of by a fixed handle. Next he devoted himself to the training of the young men and to the "agoge," or ancient discipline, most of the details of which Sphaerus, who was then in Sparta, helped him in arranging. And quickly was the proper system of bodily training and public messes resumed, a few out μένων ὀλίγων μὲν ὑπ' ἀνάγκης, ἔκουσίως δὲ τῶν πλείστων εἰς τὴν εὐτελεῆ καὶ Λακωνικὴν ἐκείνην 3 δίαιταν. ὅμως δὲ τὸ τῆς μοναρχίας ὄνομα παραμυθούμενος ἀπέδειξε μεθ' ἑαυτοῦ βασιλέα τὸν ἀδελφὸν Εὐκλείδαν. καὶ τότε μόνον Σπαρτιάταις ἐκ μιᾶς οἰκίας συνέβη δύο σχεῖν βασιλέας.

XII. Αἰσθόμενος δὲ τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς καὶ τὸν Ἄρατον, ὡς ἐπισφαλῶς αὐτῷ τῶν πραγμάτων ἐχόντων διὰ τὸν νεωτερισμὸν, οὐκ ἂν οἰομένους προελθεῖν ἔξω τῆς Λακεδαίμονος οὐδὲ ἀπολιπεῖν μετέωρον ἐν κινήματι τηλικούτῳ τὴν πόλιν, οὐκ ἀγεννὲς οὐδὲ ἄχρηστον ἠγήσατο τὴν προθυμίαν
 2 τοῦ στρατεύματος ἐπιδείξει τοῖς πολεμίοις. ἐμβαλὼν οὖν εἰς τὴν Μεγαλοπολιτικὴν ὠφελείας τε μεγάλας ἤθροισε καὶ φθορὰν πολλὴν ἀπειργάσατο τῆς χώρας. τέλος δὲ τοὺς περὶ τὸν Διόνυσον τεχνίτας ἐκ Μεσσηνίας διαπορευομένους λαβῶν, καὶ πηξάμενος θέατρον ἐν τῇ πολεμίᾳ, καὶ προθεὶς ἀπὸ τετταράκοντα μνῶν ἀγῶνα, μίαν ἡμέραν ἔθεᾶτο καθήμενος, οὐ δεόμενος θεάς, ἀλλ' οἶον ἐντρυφῶν τοῖς πολεμίοις καὶ περιουσίαν τινὰ τοῦ κρατεῖν πολὺ τῷ καταφρονεῖν ἐπιδεικνύμενος.
 3 ἐπεὶ ἄλλως γε τῶν Ἑλληνικῶν καὶ βασιλικῶν στρατευμάτων ἐκεῖνο μόνον οὐ μίμους παρακολουθοῦντας εἶχεν, οὐ θαυματοποιούς, οὐκ ὄρχηστρίδας, οὐ ψαλτρίδας, ἀλλὰ πάσης ἀκολασίας καὶ βωμολοχίας καὶ πανηγυρισμοῦ καθαρὸν ἦν, τὰ μὲν πολλὰ μελετώντων τῶν νέων καὶ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων διδασκόντων, τὰς δὲ παιδιάς, ὅποτε σχολάζοιεν, ταῖς συνήθεσιν εὐτραπελίαις καὶ τῷ λέγειν τι χάρειν καὶ Λακωνικὸν πρὸς ἀλλήλους of necessity, but most with a willing spirit, subjecting themselves to the old Spartan regime with all its simplicity. And yet, desiring to give the name of absolute power a less offensive sound, he associated with himself in royal power his brother Eucleidas. And this was the only time when the Spartans had two kings from the same house.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

XII. Learning that Aratus and the Achaeans believed that this revolution had jeopardized his position, and therefore did not think that he would venture forth outside of Sparta, or leave the city while it was still in the suspense of so great an agitation, he thought it a fine and helpful thing to make a display of the ready zeal of his army to his enemies. Accordingly, he invaded the territory of Megalopolis, collected large booty, and devastated the country far and wide. And finally arresting a company of actors who were passing through the country from Messen^é, he built a theatre in the enemy's territory, instituted a contest for a prize of forty minae, and sat spectator for a whole day; not that he felt the need of a spectacle, but in exultant mockery, as it were, of his enemies, and to show to the world by his contempt for them that he held complete control of affairs, with something, as it were, to spare. For at other times, the Spartan alone of Greek or Macedonian armies had no players in attendance, no jugglers, no dancing-girls, no harpists, but was free from every kind of licence, scurrility, and general festivity; while for the most part the young men practised themselves and the elder men taught them, and for amusement, when their work was over, they had recourse to their wonted pleasantries and the interchange of Spartan διατιθεμένων. ἦν δὲ ἔχει τὸ τοιοῦτον τῆς παιδιᾶς εἶδος ὠφέλειαν, ἐν τῷ Λυκούργου βίῳ γέγραπται.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

XIII. Πάντων δ' αὐτὸς ἐγίγνετο διδάσκαλος, εὐτελῆ καὶ ἀφελῆ καὶ φορτικὸν οὐδὲν οὐδὲ ὑπὲρ τοὺς πολλοὺς ἔχοντα τὸν ἑαυτοῦ βίον ὥσπερ παράδειγμα σωφροσύνης ἐν μέσῳ θέμενος· ὃ καὶ πρὸς τὰς Ἑλληνικὰς πράξεις ῥοπήν τινα παρέσχεν αὐτῷ. τοῖς μὲν γὰρ ἄλλοις ἐντυγχάνοντες οἱ ἄνθρωποι βασιλεύσιν οὐχ οὕτω κατεπλήττοντο τοὺς πλούτους καὶ τὰς πολυτελείας, ὡς ἐβδελύττοντο τὴν ὑπεροψίαν αὐτῶν καὶ τὸν ὄγκον ἐπαχθῶς καὶ τραχέως προσφερομένων τοῖς ἐν-2 τυγχάνουσι· πρὸς δὲ Κλεομένη βαδίζοντες, ὄντα τε δὴ βασιλέα καὶ καλούμενον, εἶτα ὀρώντες οὐ πορφύρας τινὰς οὐ χλαίνας περὶ αὐτὸν οὐδὲ κλινιδίων καὶ φορείων κατασκευάς, οὐδ' ὑπ' ἀγγέλων ὄχλου καὶ θυρωρῶν ἢ διὰ γραμματείων χρηματίζοντα χαλεπῶς καὶ μόλις, ἀλλ' αὐτὸν ἐν ἱματίῳ τῷ τυχόντι πρὸς τὰς δεξιώσεις ἀπαντῶντα καὶ διαλεγόμενον καὶ σχολάζοντα τοῖς χρήζουσιν ἱλαρῶς καὶ φιλανθρώπως, ἐκηλοῦντο καὶ κατε-3 δημαγωγοῦντο, καὶ μόνον ἀφ' Ἡρακλέους ἐκείνου ἔφασαν γεγονέναι.

Τῶν δὲ δεῖπνων αὐτοῦ τὸ μὲν καθημερινὸν ἦν ἐν τρικλίνῳ σφόδρα συνεσταλμένον καὶ Λακωνικόν, εἰ δὲ πρέσβεις ἢ ξένους δέχοιτο, δύο μὲν ἄλλαι προσπαρεβάλλοντο κλίνας, μικρῷ δὲ μᾶλλον οἱ ὑπηρέται τὴν τράπεζαν ἐπελάμπρυνον, οὐ καρुकείαις τισὶν οὐδὲ πέμμασιν, ἀλλ' ὥστε ἀφθονωτέρας εἶναι τὰς παραθέσεις καὶ φιλανθρωπότερον τὸν οἶνον. καὶ γὰρ ἐπετίμησέ τινα τῶν witticisms. Of what great advantage this sort of amusement is, I have told in my Life of Lycurgus.¹

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

XIII. In all these matters Cleomenes was himself a teacher. His own manner of life was simple, plain, and no more pretentious than that of the common man, and it was a pattern of self-restraint for all. This gave him a great advantage in his dealings with the other Greeks. For when men had to do with the other kings, they were not so much awed by their wealth and extravagance as they were filled with loathing for their haughtiness and pomp as they gave offensive and harsh answers to their auditors; but when men came to Cleomenes, who was a real as well as a titled king, and then saw no profusion of purple robes or shawls about him, and no array of couches and litters; when they saw, too, that he did not make the work of his petitioners grievous and slow by employing a throng of messengers and door-keepers or by requiring written memorials, but came in person, just as he happened to be dressed, to answer the salutations of his visitors, conversing at length with those who needed his services and devoting time cheerfully and kindly to them, they were charmed and completely won over, and declared that he alone was a descendant of Heracles.

His usual supper was held in a room which had only three couches, and was very circumscribed and Spartan; but if he was entertaining ambassadors or guest-friends, two more couches would be brought in, and the servants would make the table a trifle more brilliant, not with sauces or sweetmeats, but with more generous dishes and a kindlier wine. And indeed he censured one of his friends, when he heard

¹ Chapter xii.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

φίλων ἀκούσας ὅτι ξένους ἐστιῶν ζωμὸν αὐτοῖς μέλανα καὶ μάζαν, ὥσπερ ἔθος ἦν ἐν τοῖς φιδι-τίοις, παρέθηκεν· οὐ γὰρ ἔφη δεῖν ἐν τούτοις οὐδὲ πρὸς τοὺς ξένους λίαν ἀκριβῶς λακωνίζειν.
 4 ἀπαρθείσης δὲ τῆς τραπέζης εἰσεκομίζετο τρίπους κρατῆρα χαλκοῦν ἔχων οἴνου μεστὸν καὶ φιάλας ἀργυρᾶς δικοτύλους δύο καὶ ποτήρια τῶν ἀργυρῶν ὀλίγα παντάπασιν, ἐξ ὧν ἔπινεν ὁ βουλόμενος, ἄκουτι δὲ οὐδεὶς ποτήριον προσέφερεν.
 ἀκρόαμα δὲ οὐτ' ἦν οὐτ' ἐπεζητεῖτο· ἐπαιδαγωγὴ γὰρ αὐτὸς ὀμιλία τὸν πότον, τὰ μὲν ἐρωτῶν, τὰ δὲ διηγούμενος, οὔτε τὴν σπουδὴν ἀηδῆ τῶν λόγων τὴν τε παιδιὰν ἐπίχαριν καὶ ἀσόλοικον 5 ἔχόντων. ἄς μὲν γὰρ οἱ λοιποὶ τῶν βασιλέων ἐπὶ τοὺς ἀνθρώπους θήρας ἐποιοῦντο, χρήμασι καὶ δωρεαῖς δελεάζοντες αὐτοὺς καὶ διαφθείροντες, ἀτέχνους καὶ ἀδίκους ἐνόμιζεν εἶναι· τὸ δὲ ὀμιλία καὶ λόγῳ χάριν ἔχοντι καὶ πίστιν οἰκειοῦσθαι καὶ προσάγεσθαι τοὺς ἐντυγχάνοντας ἐφαίνετο κάλλιστον αὐτῷ καὶ βασιλικώτατον, ὡς οὐδενὶ φίλου διαφέροντα μισθωτὸν ἢ τῷ τὸν μὲν ἦθει καὶ λόγῳ, τὸν δὲ ὑπὸ χρημάτων ἀλίσκεσθαι.

XIV. Πρῶτον μὲν οὖν οἱ Μαντινεῖς αὐτὸν ἐπηγάγοντο, καὶ νύκτωρ εἰς τὴν πόλιν παρεισπεσόντι 811 τὴν φρουρὰν τὴν Ἀχαιῶν συνεκβαλόντες ἐνεχείρισαν αὐτούς. ὁ δὲ καὶ τοὺς νόμους αὐτοῖς καὶ τὴν πολιτείαν ἀποδοὺς αὐθημερὸν ἀπῆλθεν εἰς Τεγέαν. ὀλίγῳ δ' ὕστερον ἐκπεριελθὼν δι' Ἀρ-καδίας κατέβαινε ἐπὶ τὰς Ἀχαικὰς Φεράς,

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

that in entertaining guest-friends he had set before them the black soup and barley-bread of the public mess-tables; "for," said he, "in these matters and before foreigners we must not be too strictly Spartan." After the table had been removed, a tripod would be brought in on which were a bronze mixer full of wine, two silver bowls holding a pint apiece, and drinking cups of silver, few all told, from which he who wished might drink; but no one had a cup forced upon him. Music there was none, nor was any such addition desired; for Cleomenes entertained the company himself by his conversation, now asking questions, now telling stories, and his discourse was not unpleasantly serious, but had a sportiveness that charmed and was free from rudeness. For the hunt which all the other kings made for men, ensnaring them with gifts and bribes and corrupting them, Cleomenes considered unskilful and unjust. In his eyes it was the noblest method, and one most fit for a king, to win over his visitors and attach them to himself by an intercourse and conversation which awakened pleasure and confidence. For he felt that a hireling differed from a friend in nothing except that the one was captured by a man's character and conversation, the other by a man's money.

XIV. To begin with, then, the Mantineians invited him to help them, and after he had made his way into the city by night, they expelled the Achaean garrison and put themselves in his hands. Cleomenes restored to them their laws and constitution, and on the same day marched away to Tegea. Then, shortly afterwards, he fetched a compass through Arcadia and marched down upon the Achaean city of Pherae. His βουλόμενος ἢ μάχην θέσθαι πρὸς τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς ἢ διαβάλλειν τὸν Ἄρατον ὡς ἀποδιδράσκοντα καὶ προίεμενον αὐτῷ τὴν χώραν. ἐστρατήγει μὲν γὰρ Ἑπερβατᾶς τότε, τοῦ δὲ Ἄρατου τὸ πᾶν ἦν

 2 κράτος ἐν τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς. ἐξελθόντων δὲ πανδημῆ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν καὶ στρατοπεδευσασμένων ἐν Δύμαις περὶ τὸ Ἑκατόμβαιον, ἐπελθὼν ὁ Κλεομένης ἔδοξε μὲν οὐ καλῶς ἐν μέσῳ τῆς τε Δυμαίων πόλεως, πολεμίας οὐσης, καὶ τοῦ στρατεύματος τῶν Ἀχαιῶν αὐλίσασθαι, τολμηρῶς δὲ προκαλούμενος τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς ἠνάγκασε συμβαλεῖν, καὶ νικήσας κατὰ κράτος καὶ τρεψάμενος τὴν φάλαγγα πολλοὺς μὲν ἐν τῇ μάχῃ διέφθειρεν αὐτῶν, πολλῶν δὲ καὶ ζώντων ἐκυρίευσεν. ἐπελθὼν δὲ Λάγγωνι καὶ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν τοὺς φρουροῦντας ἐξελάσας ἀπέδωκεν Ἡλείοις τὴν πόλιν.

XV. Οὕτω δὲ συντετριμμένοις τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς ὁ μὲν Ἄρατος, εἰωθὼς παρ' ἐνιαυτὸν ἀεὶ στρατηγεῖν, ἀπέιπατο τὴν ἀρχὴν καὶ παρητήσατο καλούντων καὶ δεομένων· οὐ καλῶς, οἶον ἐν χειμῶνι πραγμάτων μείζονι, μεθεὶς ἐτέρῳ τὸν οἶακα καὶ προέμενος τὴν ἔξουσίαν. ὁ δὲ Κλεομένης πρῶτον μὲν μέτρια τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς ἐδόκει πρέσβεσιν ἐπιτάττειν, ἐτέρους δὲ πέμπων ἐκέλευεν αὐτῷ παραδιδόναι τὴν ἡγεμονίαν, ὡς τᾶλλα μὴ διοισόμενος πρὸς αὐτοὺς, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοὺς αἰχμαλώτους
 2 εὐθύς ἀποδώσων καὶ τὰ χωρία. βουλομένων δὲ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν ἐπὶ τούτοις δέχεσθαι τὰς διαλύσεις καὶ τὸν Κλεομένην καλούντων εἰς Λέρναν, ὅπου

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

desire was either to fight a battle with the Achaeans, or to bring Aratus into disrepute for running away and abandoning the country to him. For although Hyperbatas was general at that time, Aratus had the entire power in the Achaean league. Moreover, after the Achaeans had marched out with all their forces and pitched their camp at Dymae, near the Hecatombaeum, Cleomenes came up against them. He did not think it well, however, to pitch his own camp between the city of Dymae, which was hostile, and the army of the Achaeans, and therefore boldly challenged the Achaeans and forced them to engage. He was completely victorious, routed their phalanx, slew many of them in the battle, and took many prisoners also. Then he went up against Langon, drove out the Achaean garrison, and restored the city to the Eleians.

XV. The Achaeans having been thus utterly overwhelmed, Aratus, who was wont to be their general every other year, refused the office and declined to listen to their invitations and prayers; thus unwisely, when the ship of state was in a heavy storm, handing over the helm to another and abandoning the post of authority. Cleomenes, on the other hand, at the first was thought to impose moderate terms upon the Achaean embassy, but afterwards he sent other envoys and bade them hand over to him the leadership among the Greeks, assuring them that on other points he would not quarrel with them, but would at once restore to them their captives and their strongholds.¹ The Achaeans were willing to settle matters on these terms, and invited Cleomenes to come to Lerna,

¹ Cf. the Aratus, xxxviii. 5 f.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

τὴν ἐκκλησίαν ἔμελλον ἔχειν, ἔτυχε τὸν Κλεομένην συντόμως ὀδεύσαντα καὶ χρησάμενον παρὰ καιρὸν ὑδροποσία αἵματος πλήθος ἀνενεγκεῖν καὶ τὴν φωνὴν ἀποκοπήναι. διὸ τῶν μὲν αἰχμαλώτων ἀπέπεμψε τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς τοὺς ἐπιφανεστάτους, τὸν δὲ σύλλογον ὑπερθέμενος ἀνεχώρησεν εἰς Λακεδαίμονα.

XVI. Τοῦτο διελυμήνατο τὰ πράγματα τῆς Ἑλλάδος, ἀμῶς γέ πως ἐκ τῶν παρόντων ἀναλαβεῖν αὐτὴν ἔτι καὶ διαφυγεῖν τὴν Μακεδόνων ὕβριν καὶ πλεονεξίαν δυναμένης. ὁ γὰρ Ἄρατος, εἴτε ἀπιστία καὶ φόβῳ τοῦ Κλεομένου, εἴτε φθονῶν εὐτυχοῦντι παρ' ἐλπίδα καὶ νομίζων ἔτη τρία καὶ τριάκοντα πρωτεύοντος αὐτοῦ δεινὸν εἶναι τὴν δόξαν ἅμα καὶ τὴν δύναμιν ἐπιφύντα
 2 νέον ἄνδρα καθελεῖν, καὶ παραλαβεῖν πραγμάτων ἠΰξημένων ὑπ' αὐτοῦ καὶ κεκρατημένων χρόνον τοσοῦτον ἀρχήν, πρῶτον μὲν ἐπειράτω τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς παραβιάζεσθαι καὶ διακωλύειν ὡς δὲ οὐ προσεῖχον αὐτῷ τοῦ Κλεομένου ἐκπεπληγμένοι τὸ θράσος, ἀλλὰ καὶ δικαίαν ἐποιοῦντο τὴν ἀξίωσιν τῶν Λακεδαιμονίων, εἰς τὸ πάτριον
 3 σχῆμα κοσμοῦντων τὴν Πελοπόννησον, τρέπεται πρὸς ἔργον οὐδεὶ μὲν τῶν Ἑλλήνων προσήκον, αἰσχιστον δ' ἐκείνῳ καὶ τῶν πεπραγμένων ὑπ' αὐτοῦ καὶ πεπολιτευμένων ἀναξιώτατον, Ἀντίγονον ἐπὶ τὴν Ἑλλάδα καλεῖν καὶ Μακεδόνων ἐμπιπλάναι τὴν Πελοπόννησον, οὓς αὐτὸς ἐκ Πελοποννήσου μειράκιον ὧν ἐξήλασεν ἐλευθέρως τὸν Ἀκροκόρινθον, καὶ πᾶσι μὲν τοῖς βασιλεῦσιν ὑποπτος καὶ διάφορος γενόμενος, τουτουῖ

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

where they were about to hold their assembly. But it fell out that Cleomenes, who had made a strenuous march and then too soon had drunk water, brought up a great quantity of blood and lost his speech. For this reason he sent back to the Achaeans the most prominent men among their captives, but postponed the conference and went back home to Sparta.

XVI. This ruined the cause of Greece, at a time when she was still able in some way or other to recover from her grievous plight and escape Macedonian greed and insolence. For Aratus (whether it was through distrust and fear of Cleomenes, or because he envied the king his unlooked for success, and thought it a terrible thing after three and thirty years of leadership to have his own fame and power stripped from him by an upstart of a young man, and the authority taken over in a cause which he himself had built up and controlled for so long a time), in the first place tried to force the Achaeans aside and hinder their purpose; but when they paid no heed to him in their consternation at the daring spirit of Cleomenes, but actually saw justice in the demands of the Lacedaemonians, who were seeking to restore the Peloponnesus to its ancient status, Aratus took a step which would have been unmeet for any Greek to take, but was most shameful for him and most unworthy of his career as soldier and statesman. For he invited Antigonus into Greece and filled the Peloponnesus with Macedonians, whom he himself had driven out of Peloponnesus when, as a young man, he delivered Acrocorinthus from their power¹—he who had incurred the suspicion and hostility of all the reigning kings, and of this very Antigonus had

¹ See the Aratus, xvi. ff.

- δὲ αὐτὸν Ἀντίγονον εἰρηκῶς κακὰ μυρία δι' ὧν 4 ἀπολέλοιπεν ὑπομνημάτων. καίτοι πολλὰ παθεῖν καὶ παραβαλέσθαι φησὶν αὐτὸς ὑπὲρ Ἀθηναίων, ὅπως ἡ πόλις ἀπαλλαγείη φρουρᾶς καὶ Μακεδόνων· εἶτα τούτους ἐπὶ τὴν πατρίδα καὶ τὴν ἐστίαν τὴν ἑαυτοῦ μεθ' ὄπλων εἰσήγαγεν ἄχρι τῆς γυναικωνί- 812 τιδος· τὸν δὲ ἀφ' Ἡρακλέους γεγονότα καὶ βασι-λεύοντα Σπαρτιατῶν, καὶ τὴν πάτριον πολιτείαν, ὥσπερ ἁρμονίαν ἐκκελυμένην, ἀνακρουόμενον αὐθις ἐπὶ τὸν σῶφρονα καὶ Δώριον ἐκείνον τοῦ Λυκούρ-γου νόμον καὶ βίον, οὐκ ἤξιον Σικυωνίων ἡγεμόνα 5 καὶ Τριταίων γράφεσθαι, φεύγων δὲ τὴν μάξαν καὶ τὸν τρίβωνα, καὶ τὸ δεινότατον ὧν κατηγορεῖ Κλεομένους, ἀναίρεσιν πλούτου καὶ πενίας ἐπαν-ὀρθωσιν, διαδήματι καὶ πορφύρᾳ καὶ Μακεδονικοῖς καὶ σατραπικοῖς προστάγμασιν ὑπέρριψε μετὰ τῆς Ἀχαΐας αὐτόν, ἵνα μὴ Κλεομένει ποιεῖν δοκῆ τὸ προσταττόμενον, Ἀντιγόνεια θύων καὶ παιᾶνας ἄδων αὐτὸς ἐστεφανωμένος εἰς ἄνθρωπον ὑπὸ φθόγης κατασηπόμενον.
- 6 Ἀλλὰ ταῦτα μὲν οὐκ Ἀράτου βουλόμενοι κατηγορεῖν γράφομεν (ἐν πολλοῖς γὰρ ὁ ἀνὴρ οὗτος Ἑλληνικὸς γέγονε καὶ μέγας), οἰκτείροντες δὲ τῆς ἀνθρωπίνης φύσεως τὴν ἀσθένειαν, εἰ μὴδὲ ἐν ἡθεσιν οὕτως ἀξιολόγοις καὶ διαφόροις πρὸς ἀρετὴν ἐκφέρειν δύναται τὸ καλὸν ἀνεμέσητον.
- XVII. Ἐλθόντων δὲ Ἀχαιῶν εἰς Ἄργος αὐθις ἐπὶ τὸν σύλλογον καὶ τοῦ Κλεομένους ἐκ Τεγέας καταβεβηκότος ἐλπίς ἦν πολλὴ τῶν ἀνθρώπων ἔσεσθαι τὴν διάλυσιν. ὁ δὲ Ἄρατος, ἤδη διωμολογημένων αὐτῷ πρὸς τὸν Ἀντίγονον τῶν με-

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

said countless evil things in the commentaries which he left behind him. And still, though he had incurred many hardships and dangers in behalf of Athens, as he says himself, in order that the city might be set free from its garrison of Macedonians, he afterwards brought these Macedonians, under arms, into his own country and into his own home; aye, even into the apartments of his women;¹ but he would not consent that the man who was a descendant of Heracles and king of Sparta, and was seeking to bring its ancient polity, now like a decadent melody, back again to that restrained and Dorian law and life which Lycurgus had instituted, should be entitled leader of Sicyon and Tritaea. Instead of this, to avoid the Spartan barley-bread and short-cloak, and the most dreadful of the evils for which he denounced Cleomenes, namely, abolition of wealth and restoration of poverty, he cast himself and all Achaea down before a diadem, a purple robe, Macedonians, and oriental behests. And that he might not be thought to obey Cleomenes, he offered sacrifices to Antigonus and sang paeans himself, with a garland on his head, in praise of a man who was far gone with consumption.

I write this, however, not with any desire to denounce Aratus, for in many ways he was a true Greek and a great one, but out of pity for the weakness of human nature, which, even in characters so notably disposed towards excellence, cannot produce a nobility that is free from blame.

XVII. When the Achaeans came to Argos again for the conference, and Cleomenes had come down from Tegea, there was strong hope that the two men would come to an agreement. But Aratus, since the most important questions between him and Antigonus

¹ See the Aratus, xlix. 1.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- γίστων, φοβούμενος τὸν Κλεομένη μὴ πάντα διαπράξῃται καθομιλήσας τὸ πλῆθος ἢ καὶ βιασάμενος, ἡξίου λαβόντα τριακοσίους ὁμήρους μόνον εἰσιέναι πρὸς αὐτούς, ἢ κατὰ γυμνάσιον ἔξωθεν τὸ Κυλλαράβιον προσελθόντα μετὰ τῆς
- 2 δυνάμεως διαλέγεσθαι. ταῦτ' ἀκούσας ὁ Κλεομένης ἄδικα πάσχειν ἔφασκε· δεῖν γὰρ εὐθύς αὐτῷ τότε προειπεῖν, οὐ νῦν, ἦκοντος ἐπὶ τὰς θύρας τὰς ἐκείνων, ἀπιστεῖν καὶ ἀπελαύνειν. γράψας δὲ περὶ τούτων ἐπιστολὴν πρὸς τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς, ἧς ἦν τὸ πλεῖστον Ἀράτου κατηγορία, πολλὰ δὲ καὶ τοῦ Ἀράτου λοιδορήσαντος αὐτὸν πρὸς τὸ πλῆθος, ἀνέζευξε διὰ ταχέων καὶ κήρυκα πόλεμον προερούντα τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς ἔπεμψεν, οὐκ εἰς Ἄργος, ἀλλ' εἰς Αἴγιον, ὡς φησιν Ἄρατος, ὅπως φθάσῃ τὴν παρασκευὴν αὐτῶν.
- 3 Ἐγγέγονει δὲ κίνημα τῶν Ἀχαιῶν, καὶ πρὸς ἀπόστασιν ὄρμησαν αἱ πόλεις, τῶν μὲν δήμων νομὴν τε χώρας καὶ χρεῶν ἀποκοπὰς ἐλπιδάντων, τῶν δὲ πρώτων πολλαχοῦ βαρυνομένων τὸν Ἄρατον, ἐνίων δὲ καὶ δι' ὀργῆς ἐχόντων ὡς ἐπάγοντα τῇ Πελοποννήσῳ Μακεδόνας. διὸ τούτοις ἐπαρθεῖς ὁ Κλεομένης εἰς Ἀχαΐαν ἐνέβαλε· καὶ πρῶτον μὲν εἶλε Πελλήνην ἑξαπίνης ἐπιπεσών, καὶ τοὺς φρουροῦντας ἐξέβαλε τῶν Ἀχαιῶν.¹
- 4 μετὰ δὲ ταῦτα Φενεὸν προσηγάγετο καὶ Πεντέλειον. ἐπεὶ δὲ φοβηθέντες οἱ Ἀχαιοὶ προδοσίαν τινὰ πραττομένην ἐν Κορίνθῳ καὶ Σικυῶνι τοὺς

¹ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν with Blass : μετὰ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

had already been settled, and because he was afraid that Cleomenes would carry all his points by either winning over or constraining the multitude, demanded that Cleomenes, after receiving three hundred hostages, should come into the city alone for his conference with them, or else should come with his army as far as the gymnasium outside the city called Cyllarabium, and treat with them there. When Cleomenes heard this, he declared that he had been wronged; for he ought to have been told of this when the conference was first proposed, and not be distrusted and driven away now, when he had come to their very doors. Then, after writing a letter to the Achaeans on the matter, most of which was denunciation of Aratus, and after Aratus on his part had abused him at great length to the multitude, Cleomenes broke camp with all speed and sent a herald to declare war upon the Achaeans, not to Argos, but to Aegium, in order, as Aratus says, that he might anticipate their preparations for defence.¹

Now, there had been agitation among the Achaeans, and their cities were eager for revolt, the common people expecting division of land and abolition of debts, and the leading men in many cases being dissatisfied with Aratus, and some of them also enraged at him for bringing Macedonians into Peloponnesus. Therefore Cleomenes, encouraged by these conditions, invaded Achaea. First, he took Pellené by a sudden assault, and drove out the Achaean garrison; next, he brought over to his cause Pheneus and Penteleium. Presently the Achaeans, who were afraid that some treachery was afoot in Corinth and

¹ Cf. the Aratus, xxxix.

ἰππεῖς καὶ τοὺς ξένους ἀπέστειλαν ἐξ Ἄργους ἐκεῖ παραφυλάξοντας, αὐτοὶ δὲ τὰ Νέμεια καταβάντες εἰς Ἄργος ἤγον, ἐλπίσας, ὅπερ ἦν, ὁ Κλεομένης, ὄχλου πανηγυρικοῦ καὶ θεατῶν τὴν πόλιν γέμουσαν ἀπροσδοκῆτως ἐπελθὼν μᾶλλον τaráξειν, νυκτὸς ἤγε πρὸς τὰ τείχη τὸ στρα-5 τευμα, καὶ τὸν περὶ τὴν Ἀσπίδα τόπον καταλαβὼν ὑπὲρ τοῦ θεάτρου χαλεπὸν ὄντα καὶ δυσπρόσοδον οὕτως τοὺς ἀνθρώπους ἐξέπληξεν ὥστε μηδένα τραπέσθαι πρὸς ἀλκὴν, ἀλλὰ καὶ φρουρὰν λαβεῖν, καὶ δοῦναι τῶν πολιτῶν ὀμήρους εἴκοσι, καὶ γενέσθαι συμμάχους Λακεδαιμονίων, ἔχοντος ἐκείνου τὴν ἡγεμονίαν.

XVIII. Οὐ μικρὸν οὖν τοῦτο καὶ πρὸς δόξαν αὐτῷ καὶ δύναμιν ὑπῆρχεν. οὔτε γὰρ οἱ πάλαι βασιλεῖς Λακεδαιμονίων πολλὰ πραγματευσάμενοι προσαγαγέσθαι τὸ Ἄργος βεβαίως ἠδυνήθησαν, ὃ τε δεινότετος τῶν στρατηγῶν Πύρρος εἰσελθὼν καὶ βιασάμενος οὐ κατέσχε τὴν πόλιν, ἀλλ' ἀπέθανε καὶ πολὺ συνδιεφθάρη μέρος αὐτῷ
 2 τῆς δυνάμεως. ὅθεν ἐθαύμαζον τὴν ὀξύτητα καὶ 813 διάνοιαν τοῦ Κλεομένου· καὶ οἱ πρότερον αὐτοῦ τὸν Σόλωνα καὶ τὸν Λυκοῦργον ἀπομιμήσασθαι φάσκοντες ἐν τῇ τῶν χρεῶν ἀφέσει καὶ τῇ τῶν κτημάτων ἐξισώσει καταγελῶντες, τότε παντελῶς ἐπέιθοντο τοῦτο αἴτιον γεγόνεαι τῆς περὶ τοὺς
 3 Σπαρτιατάς μεταβολῆς. οὕτω γὰρ ἔπραττον τὸ πρὶν ταπεινὰ καὶ βοηθεῖν αὐτοῖς ἀδυνάτως εἶχον, ὥστε πέντε μυριάδας ἀνδραπόδων ἐμβαλόντας εἰς τὴν Λακωνικὴν Αἰτωλοὺς ἀπαγαγεῖν, ὅτε φασὶν εἰπεῖν τινα τῶν πρεσβυτέρων Σπαρτιατῶν ὡς ὤνησαν οἱ πολέμιοι τὴν Λακωνικὴν ἀποκουφί-

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

Sicyon, sent their horsemen and their mercenaries out of Argos to keep watch over those cities, while they themselves went down to Argos and began celebrating the Nemean games. So Cleomenes, expecting, as was the case, that while the throng was holding festival and the city was full of spectators, his unexpected approach would be more apt to cause confusion, led his army by night up to the walls, occupied the region about the Aspis overlooking the theatre, a region which was rugged and hard to come at, and so terrified the inhabitants that not a man of them thought of defence, but they accepted a garrison and gave twenty citizens as hostages, agreeing to become allies of the Lacedaemonians, and to give Cleomenes the chief command.

XVIII. This greatly increased the reputation and power of Cleomenes. For the ancient kings of Sparta, in spite of numerous efforts, were not able to secure the abiding allegiance of Argos; and the most formidable of generals, Pyrrhus, although he fought his way into the city, could not hold it, but was slain there, and a great part of his army perished with him.¹ Therefore men admired the swiftness and intelligence of Cleomenes; and those who before this had mocked at him for feebly imitating, as they said, Solon and Lycurgus in the abolition of debts and the equalization of property, were now altogether convinced that this imitation was the cause of the change in the Spartans. For these were formerly in so low a state and so unable to help themselves, that Aetolians invaded Laconia and took away fifty thousand slaves. It was at this time, we are told, that one of the elder Spartans remarked that the enemy had helped Sparta

¹ See the Pyrrhus, xxxii. ff.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

4 σαντες. ὀλίγου δὲ χρόνου διελθόντος ἀψάμενοι μόνον τῶν πατριῶν ἔθων καὶ καταστάντες εἰς ἴχνος ἐκείνης τῆς ἀγωγῆς, ὥσπερ παρόντι καὶ συμπολιτευομένῳ τῷ Λυκούργῳ πολλὴν ἐπίδειξιν ἀνδρείας ἐποιούντο καὶ πειθαρχίας, τὴν τῆς Ἑλλάδος ἀναλαμβάνοντες ἡγεμονίαν τῇ Λακεδαιμόνι καὶ ἀνακτώμενοι τὴν Πελοπόννησον.

XIX. Ἐαλωκότος δὲ Ἄργους καὶ κατόπιν εὐθύς προσθεμένων τῷ Κλεομένει Κλεωνῶν καὶ Φλιούντος, ἐτύγχανε μὲν ὁ Ἄρατος ἐν Κορίνθῳ ποιούμενός τινα τῶν λεγομένων λακωνίζειν ἐξέτασιν ἀγγελίας δὲ περὶ τούτων προσπεσούσης διαταραχθεὶς καὶ τὴν πόλιν ἀποκλίνουσαν αἰσθόμενος πρὸς τὸν Κλεομένη καὶ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν ἀπαλλαγῆναι βουλομένην, ἐκάλει μὲν εἰς τὸ βουλευτήριον τοὺς πολίτας, ἔλαθε δὲ διολισθῶν ἄχρι τῆς πύλης. ἐκεῖ δὲ τοῦ ἵππου προσαχθέντος ἀναβάς ἔφυγεν

2 εἰς Σικυῶνα. τῶν δὲ Κορινθίων ἀμιλλωμένων εἰς Ἄργος πρὸς τὸν Κλεομένη φησὶν ὁ Ἄρατος τοὺς ἵππους πάντας ῥαγῆναι, τὸν δὲ Κλεομένη μέμφεσθαι τοὺς Κορινθίους μὴ συλλαβόντας αὐτόν, ἀλλ' ἐάσαντας διαφυγεῖν· οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ καὶ πρὸς αὐτὸν ἐλθεῖν Μεγιστόνου παρὰ τοῦ Κλεομένου δεομένου παραλαβεῖν τὸν Ἀκροκόρινθον (εἶχε γὰρ φρουρὰν Ἀχαιῶν) καὶ πολλὰ χρήματα δίδοντας· ἀποκρίνασθαι δὲ αὐτὸν ὡς οὐκ ἔχει τὰ πράγματα, μᾶλλον δὲ ὑπὸ τῶν πραγμάτων αὐτὸς ἔχεται· ταῦτα μὲν ὁ Ἄρατος γέγραφεν.

3 Ὁ δὲ Κλεομένης ἐκ τοῦ Ἄργους ἐπελθὼν καὶ προσαγαγόμενος Τροιζηνίους, Ἐπιδαυρίους, Ἑρμιονέας, ἤκεν εἰς Κόρινθον καὶ τὴν μὲν ἄκραν περιεχαράκωσε, τῶν Ἀχαιῶν οὐ βουλομένων

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

by lightening her burden. But now only a little time had elapsed, and they had as yet barely resumed their native customs and re-entered the track of their famous discipline, when, as if before the very eyes of Lycurgus and with his co-operation, they gave abundant proof of valour and obedience to authority, by recovering the leadership of Hellas for Sparta and making all Peloponnesus their own again.

XIX. Thus Argos was taken by Cleomenes, and immediately afterwards Cleonae and Phlius came over to him. When this happened, Aratus was at Corinth, holding a judicial examination of those who were reputed to favour the Spartan cause. The unexpected tidings threw him into consternation, and perceiving that the city was leaning towards Cleomenes and wished to be rid of the Achaeans, he summoned the citizens into the council-hall, and then slipped away unnoticed to the city gate. There his horse was brought to him, and mounting it he fled to Sicyon. The Corinthians were so eager to get to Cleomenes at Argos that, as Aratus says, all their horses were ruined. Aratus says also that Cleomenes upbraided the Corinthians for not seizing him, but letting him escape; however, Megistonous came to him, he says, bringing from Cleomenes a request for the surrender of Acrocorinthus (which was held by an Achaean garrison) and an offer of a large sum of money for it; to which he replied that he did not control affairs, but rather affairs controlled him. This is what Aratus writes.

But Cleomenes, marching up from Argos and taking over Troezen, Epidaurus, and Hermioné, came to Corinth. Its citadel he blockaded, since the Achaeans would not abandon it, and after summonέκλιπείν, τοῦ δὲ Ἀράτου τοὺς φίλους καὶ τοὺς ἐπιτρόπους μεταπεμφάμενος ἐκέλευσε τὴν οἰκίαν καὶ τὰ χρήματα λαβόντας φυλάττειν καὶ διοικεῖν.

4 Τριτύμαλλον δὲ πάλιν τὸν Μεσσήνιον ἀπέστειλε πρὸς αὐτόν, ἀξιῶν ὑπὸ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν καὶ τῶν Λακεδαιμονίων ὁμοῦ φυλάττεσθαι τὸν Ἀκροκόρινθον, ἰδίᾳ δὲ τῷ Ἀράτῳ διπλὴν ἐπαγγελόμενος τὴν σύνταξιν ἧς ἐλάμβανε παρὰ Πτολεμαίου τοῦ βασιλέως. ἐπεὶ δὲ ὁ Ἀρατος οὐχ ὑπήκουσεν, ἀλλὰ τὸν τε υἱὸν ἐπεμψε πρὸς τὸν Ἀντίγονον μετὰ τῶν ἄλλων ὁμήρων καὶ ψηφίσασθαι τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς ἔπεισεν Ἀντιγόνῳ παραδιδόναι τὸν Ἀκροκόρινθον, οὕτως ὁ Κλεομένης τὴν τε Σικωνίαν ἐμβαλὼν ἐπόρθησε, καὶ τὰ χρήματα τοῦ Ἀράτου, τῶν Κορινθίων αὐτῷ ψηφισαμένων, δωρεὰν ἔλαβε.

XX. Τοῦ δὲ Ἀντιγόνου μετὰ πολλῆς δυνάμεως τὴν Γεράνειαν ὑπερβάλλοντος οὐκ ᾤετο δεῖν τὸν Ἴσθμόν, ἀλλὰ τὰ ὄνειρα χαρακώσας καὶ τειχίσας φυλάττειν, καὶ τοπομαχῶν ἀποτρίβεσθαι τοὺς Μακεδόνας μᾶλλον ἢ συμπλέκεσθαι πρὸς φάλαγγα συνησκημένην. καὶ τούτοις χρώμενος τοῖς λογισ-

2 μοῖς εἰς ἀπορίαν καθίστη τὸν Ἀντίγονον. οὔτε γὰρ σίτον εἶχεν ἐκ παρασκευῆς ἱκανόν, οὔτε βιάσασθαι τὴν πάροδον, καθημένου τοῦ Κλεομένου, ἦν ῥάδιον· ἐπιχειρήσας δὲ παραδύεσθαι διὰ τοῦ Λεχαιίου νυκτὸς ἐξέπεσε καὶ τινὰς ἀπέβαλε τῶν στρατιωτῶν, ὥστε παντάπασι θαρρήσαι τὸν Κλεομένη καὶ τοὺς περὶ αὐτὸν ἐπλημένους τῇ νίκη τραπέσθαι πρὸς τὸ δεῖπνον, ἀθυμεῖν δὲ τὸν Ἀντίγονον εἰς οὐκ εὐπόρους κατακλειόμενον ὑπὸ

3 τῆς ἀνάγκης λογισμούς. ἐβουλεύετο γὰρ ἐπὶ

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

ing the friends and stewards of Aratus, ordered them to take the house and property of Aratus into their charge and management. Then he sent Tritymallus the Messenian once more to Aratus, proposing that Acrocorinthus should be garrisoned by Achaeans and Lacedaemonians together, and promising Aratus personally double the stipend which he was receiving from King Ptolemy.¹ Aratus, however, would not listen to the proposition, but sent his son to Antigonus along with the other hostages, and persuaded the Achaeans to vote the surrender of Acrocorinthus to Antigonus. Therefore Cleomenes invaded the territory of Sicyon and ravaged it, and accepted the property of Aratus when the Corinthians voted it to him as a gift.

XX. When Antigonus with a large force was crossing the mountain-range of Geraneia, Cleomenes thought it more advisable to fortify thoroughly, not the Isthmus, but the Oneian range of hills, and to wear out the Macedonians by a war of posts and positions, rather than to engage in formal battle with their disciplined phalanx. He carried out this plan, and thereby threw Antigonus into straits. For he had not a sufficient store of provisions, and it was no easy matter to force his passage while Cleomenes sat entrenched. Moreover, when he attempted to slip past his enemy in the night by way of Lechaeum, he was driven out and lost some of his soldiers. Therefore Cleomenes was altogether encouraged, and his men, elated by their victory, betook themselves to supper; but Antigonus was dejected, since he was shut up by necessity to difficult plans. For he was τὴν ἄκραν ἀναξευγύναι τὸ Ἑραῖον κακείθεν εἰς Σικυῶνα πλοίοις περαιῶσαι τὴν δύναμιν· ὃ καὶ χρόνου πολλοῦ καὶ παρασκευῆς ἦν οὐ τῆς τυχοῦσης. ἤδη δὲ πρὸς ἑσπέραν ἦγον ἕξ Ἄργους κατὰ θάλατταν ἄνδρες Ἀράτου φίλοι, καλοῦντες αὐτὸν ὡς ἀφισταμένων τῶν Ἀργείων τοῦ Κλεομένου. ὁ δὲ πρᾶττων ἦν τὴν ἀπόστασιν Ἀριστοτέλης· καὶ τὸ πλήθος οὐ χαλεπῶς ἔπεισεν, ἀγανακτοῦν ὅτι χρεῶν ἀποκοπὰς οὐκ ἐποίησεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Κλεο-4 μένης ἐλπίσασιν. λαβὼν οὖν ὁ Ἄρατος παρ' Ἀντιγόνου στρατιώτας χιλίους καὶ πεντακοσίους παρέπλευσεν εἰς Ἐπίδαυρον. ὁ δὲ Ἀριστοτέλης ἐκείνου οὐ περιέμενε, ἀλλὰ τοὺς πολίτας παραλαβὼν προσεμάχετο τοῖς φρουροῦσι τὴν ἀκρόπολιν· καὶ παρῆν αὐτῷ Τιμόξενος μετὰ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν ἐκ Σικυῶνος βοηθῶν.

¹ Ptolemy III., surnamed Euergetes, king of Egypt 247-222 B.C. See the Aratus, xli. 3.

XXI. Ταῦτα περὶ δευτέραν φυλακὴν τῆς νυκτὸς ἀκούσας ὁ Κλεομένης μετεπέμψατο Μεγιστόνου, καὶ πρὸς ὄργην ἐκέλευσεν εὐθύς εἰς Ἄργος βοηθεῖν· ὁ γὰρ ὑπὲρ τῶν Ἀργείων μάλιστα καταπιστωσάμενος πρὸς αὐτὸν ἐκείνος ἦν, καὶ διεκώλυσεν ἐκβαλεῖν τοὺς ὑπόπτους. ἀπολύσας οὖν τὸν Μεγιστόνου μετὰ δισχιλίων στρατιωτῶν αὐτὸς προσεῖχε τῷ Ἀντιγόνῳ, καὶ τοὺς Κορινθίους παρεθάρρυνεν ὡς οὐδενὸς μεγάλου περὶ τὸ Ἄργος, ἀλλὰ ταραχῆς τινος ἀπ' ἀνθρώπων ὀλίγων γεγεννη-
 2 μένης. ἐπεὶ δὲ ὁ Μεγιστόνους τε παρεισπεσῶν εἰς τὸ Ἄργος ἀνηρέθη μαχόμενος καὶ μόγις ἀντεῖχον οἱ φρουροὶ καὶ διεπέμποντο συχνούς πρὸς τὸν Κλεομένην, φοβηθεὶς μὴ τοῦ Ἄργους οἱ πολέμιοι κρατήσαντες καὶ τὰς παρόδους ἀποκλείσαντες planning to march off to the promontory of the Heraeum, and from there to put his army across to Sicyon in transports—an undertaking requiring much time and extraordinary preparations. But when it was already towards evening, there came to him from Argos by sea some friends of Aratus, who summoned him to the city, on the ground that the Argives were ready to revolt from Cleomenes. The author of the revolt was Aristotle; and the multitude were easy to persuade, being incensed because Cleomenes had not brought about the abolition of debts which they expected. Accordingly, Aratus took fifteen hundred soldiers from Antigonus and sailed to Epidaurus. Aristotle, however, did not await his coming, but at the head of the citizens made an attack upon the garrison of the citadel; and Timoxenus came to his aid from Sicyon with the Achaean army.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

XXI. It was about midnight when Cleomenes heard of these things, and summoning Megistonöus, he angrily ordered him to go at once to Argos with assistance; for it was Megistonöus who had given him most assurances of the fidelity of the Argives, and had thereby prevented him from expelling the suspected citizens. After sending off Megistonöus, then, with two thousand soldiers, he himself kept watch upon Antigonus and tried to encourage the Corinthians, telling them that there was no great trouble at Argos, but only a slight disturbance made by a few men. However, when Megistonöus, who had made his way into Argos, was slain in battle, and the garrison held out with difficulty and kept sending frequent messengers to Cleomenes, he was afraid that if the enemy made themselves masters of αὐτοὶ πορθῶσιν ἀδεῶς τὴν Λακωνικὴν καὶ πολιορκῶσι τὴν Σπάρτην ἔρημον οὖσαν, ἀπῆγγεν ἐκ Κορίνθου τὸ στράτευμα. καὶ ταύτης μὲν εὐθὺς ἐστέρητο τῆς πόλεως εἰσελθόντος Ἀντιγόνου καὶ φρουρὰν καταστήσαντος· ἐπιβαλὼν δὲ τῷ Ἀργεὶ κατὰ τὸ τεῖχος ἐπεχείρησε μὲν εἰσαλέσθαι καὶ συνέστρεψεν ἐκ τῆς πορείας τὴν δύναμιν, ἐκκόψας δὲ τὰς ὑπὸ τὴν Ἀσπίδα ψαλίδας ἀνέβη καὶ συνέμιξε τοῖς ἔνδον ἔτι πρὸς τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς ἀντέχουσι, καὶ τῶν ἐντὸς ἔνια κλίμακας προσθεὶς κατέλαβε, καὶ τοὺς στενωποὺς ἐρήμους πολεμίων ἐποίησε, τοῖς βέλεσι

 4 χρῆσασθαι προστάξας τοὺς Κρήτας. ὥς δὲ κατεῖδε τὸν Ἀντίγονον ἀπὸ τῶν ἄκρων εἰς τὸ πεδίου καταβαίνοντα μετὰ τῆς φάλαγγος, τοὺς δὲ ἰππεῖς ἤδη ρύδην ἐλαύνοντας εἰς τὴν πόλιν, ἀπέγνω κρατήσειν· καὶ συναγαγὼν ἅπαντας πρὸς αὐτὸν ἀσφαλῶς κατέβη καὶ παρὰ τὸ τεῖχος ἀπηλλάττετο, μεγίστων μὲν ἐν ἐλαχίστῳ χρόνῳ πραγμάτων ἐπικρατήσας, καὶ μετὰ μικρὸν ὄλης ὁμοῦ τι μιᾷ περιόδῳ Πελοποννήσου κύριος γενέσθαι δεήσας, ταχὺ δ' αὖθις ἐκπεσὼν ἀπάντων. οἱ μὲν γὰρ εὐθὺς ἀπεχώρησαν αὐτοῦ τῶν στρατευσόμενων, οἱ δὲ ὀλίγον ὕστερον τῷ Ἀντιγόνῳ τὰς πόλεις παρέδωκαν.

XXII. Οὕτω δ' αὐτῷ πεπραχότι κατὰ τὴν στρατείαν καὶ ἀπαγαγόντι τὴν δύναμιν, ἐσπέρας ἤδη περὶ Τεγέαν ἀφίκοντό τινες ἐκ Λακεδαίμονος οὐκ ἐλάττονα τῆς ἐν χερσὶ θυστυχίαν ἀπαγγέλλοντες, τεθνάναι τὴν γυναῖκα, δι' ἣν οὐδὲ ταῖς πάνυ κατορθουμέναις ἐκεῖνος ἐνεκαρτέρει στρατείαις, ἀλλὰ συνεχῶς κατέβαινε εἰς Σπάρτην,

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

Argos and shut up the passes, they might ravage at will the Laconian territory and lay siege to Sparta, which he had left without defenders. He therefore led his army away from Corinth. This city was at once lost to him, for Antigonus entered it and set a garrison there; but Cleomenes, on reaching Argos, made an attempt to scale the walls, and with this in view drew his forces together from their march, and cutting his way through the tunnels running under the Aspis, or citadel, he made the ascent and effected a junction with his garrison inside, which was still holding out against the Achaeans. He actually got possession of some portions of the city by using scaling-ladders, and cleared the streets of the enemy by bringing his Cretan archers into action. But when he saw Antigonus with his phalanx descending from the heights into the plain, and his horsemen already streaming into the city, he gave up trying to master it; and gathering all his troops about him he made his way safely down from the citadel and withdrew along past the city wall. He had made the greatest possible conquests in the briefest possible time, and had come within a little of making himself master of all Peloponnesus by a single march through it, but had quickly lost everything again. For some of his allies left him at once, and others after a little while handed their cities over to Antigonus.

XXII. Such was the result of his expedition, and he was leading his army home, when, as it was already evening and he was near Tegea, messengers from Sparta came with tidings of a fresh and even greater calamity, the death of his wife. It was because of her that even in his most successful campaigns he could not endure to the end, but would

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἐρῶν τῆς Ἀγιάτιδος καὶ περὶ πλείστου ποιού-2 μενος ἐκείνην. ἐπλήγη μὲν οὖν καὶ ἤλγησεν, ὡς εἰκὸς ἦν νέον ἄνδρα καλλίστης καὶ σωφρονεστάτης ἀφηρημένον γυναικός· οὐ μὴν κατήσχυεν οὐδὲ προήκατο τῷ πάθει τὸ φρόνημα καὶ τὸ μέγεθος τῆς ψυχῆς, ἀλλὰ καὶ φωνὴν καὶ σχῆμα καὶ μορφὴν ἐν ᾧ πρότερον εἶχεν ἦθει διαφυλάτ-των τὰ τε προστάγματα τοῖς ἡγεμόσιν ἐδίδου καὶ 815 περὶ τῆς ἀσφαλείας τῶν Τεγεατῶν ἐφρόντιζεν.
 3 ἅμα δὲ ἡμέρα κατέβαινεν εἰς Λακεδαίμονα, καὶ μετὰ τῆς μητρὸς οἴκοι καὶ τῶν παίδων ἀπαλγήσασ τὸ πένθος εὐθύς ἦν ἐν τοῖς περὶ τῶν ὄλων λογισμοῖς.

Ἐπεὶ δὲ Πτολεμαῖος ὁ τῆς Αἰγύπτου βασιλεὺς ἐπαγγελόμενος αὐτῷ βοήθειαν ἡξίου λαβεῖν ὄμηρα τοὺς παῖδας καὶ τὴν μητέρα, χρόνον μὲν συχνὸν ἡσχύνητο φράσαι τῇ μητρὶ, καὶ πολλάκις εἰσελθὼν καὶ πρὸς αὐτῷ γενόμενος τῷ λόγῳ κατεσιώπησεν, ὥστε κάκείνην ὑπονοεῖν καὶ παρὰ τῶν φίλων αὐτοῦ διαπυθάνεσθαι μὴ τι κατοκνεῖ 4 βουλόμενος ἐντυχεῖν αὐτῇ. τέλος δὲ τοῦ Κλεομένου ἀποτολήσαντος εἰπεῖν, ἐξεγέλασέ τε μέγα καί, “Τοῦτο ἦν,” εἶπεν, “ὃ πολλάκις ὀρμήσας λέγειν ἀπεδειλίσας; οὐ θάττον ἡμᾶς ἐνθέμενος εἰς πλοῖον ἀποστελεῖς, ὅπου ποτὲ τῇ Σπάρτῃ νομίζεις τὸ σῶμα τοῦτο χρησιμώτατον ἔσεσθαι, πρὶν ὑπὸ γήρωσ αὐτοῦ καθήμενον διαλυθῆναι;”

5 Πάντων οὖν ἐτοίμων γενομένων ἀφίκοντο μὲν εἰς Ταίναρον πεζῇ καὶ προὔπεμψεν ἡ δύναμις αὐτοῦ ἐν τοῖς ὅπλοις· μέλλουσα δὲ τῆς νεῶς ἐπιβαίνειν ἡ Κρατησίκλεια τὸν Κλεομένη μόνου εἰς τὸν νεῶν τοῦ Ποσειδῶνος ἀπήγαγε, καὶ περι-

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

continually be coming home to Sparta, out of love for Agiatis and in supreme devotion to her. Of course, then, he was smitten with grief, as was natural for a young man who had lost a most beautiful and most sensible wife, but he did not allow his suffering to shame or betray the loftiness of his thought or the greatness of his spirit. He maintained his usual speech, dress, and bearing, gave the customary orders to his captains, and took thought for the safety of Tegea. Next morning he returned to Sparta, and after duly mourning his loss with his mother and children at home, he at once engaged in the measures which he planned for the public good.

Now, Ptolemy the king of Egypt promised him aid and assistance, but demanded his mother and his children as hostages. For a long time, therefore, he was ashamed to tell his mother, and though he often went to her and was at the very point of letting her know, he held his peace, so that she on her part became suspicious and enquired of his friends whether there was not something which he wished to impart to her but hesitated to do so. Finally, when Cleomenes plucked up courage to speak of the matter, his mother burst into a hearty laugh and said: "Was this the thing which thou wast often of a mind to tell me but lost thy courage? Make haste, put me on board a vessel, and send this frail body wheresoever thou thinkest it will be of most use to Sparta, before old age destroys it sitting idly here."

Accordingly, when all things were ready, they came to Taenarus by land, while the army escorted them under arms. And as Cratesicleia was about to embark, she drew Cleomenes aside by himself into the temple of Poseidon, and after embracing and kissing βαλοῦσα καὶ κατασπασαμένη διαλγοῦντα καὶ συν-6 τεταραγμένον, “Ἄγε,” εἶπεν, “ὦ βασιλεῦ Λακεδαιμονίων, ὅπως, ἐπὰν ἔξω γενώμεθα, μηδεὶς ἴδῃ δακρύνοντας ἡμᾶς μηδὲ ἀνάξιόν τι τῆς Σπάρτης ποιοῦντας. τοῦτο γὰρ ἐφ’ ἡμῖν μόνον· αἱ τύχαι δέ, ὅπως ἂν ὁ δαίμων διδῶ, πάρεισι.” ταῦτα δ’ εἰποῦσα καὶ καταστήσασα τὸ πρόσωπον, ἐπὶ τὴν ναῦν ἐχώρει τὸ παιδίον ἔχουσα, καὶ διὰ τάχους

 7 ἐκέλευσεν ἀπαίρειν τὸν κυβερνήτην. ἐπεὶ δὲ εἰς Αἴγυπτον ἀφίκετο καὶ τὸν Πτολεμαῖον ἐπύθετο λόγους παρ’ Ἀντιγόνου καὶ πρεσβείας δεχόμενον, περὶ δὲ τοῦ Κλεομένουσ ἤκουσεν ὅτι, τῶν Ἀχαιῶν προκαλουμένων αὐτὸν εἰς διαλύσεις, φοβοῖτο δι’ ἐκείνην ἄνευ Πτολεμαίου καταθέσθαι τὸν πόλεμον, ἐπέστειλεν αὐτῷ τὰ τῇ Σπάρτῃ πρέποντα καὶ συμφέροντα πράττειν καὶ μὴ διὰ μίαν γραῦν καὶ παιδιάριον αἰεὶ δεδιέναι Πτολεμαῖον. αὕτη μὲν οὖν παρὰ τὰς τύχας τοιαύτη λέγεται γεγενῆσθαι.

XXIII. Τοῦ δὲ Ἀντιγόνου Τεγέαν μὲν παραλα-βόντος, Ὀρχομενὸν δὲ καὶ Μαντίνειαν διαρπάσαντος, εἰς αὐτὴν τὴν Λακωνικὴν συνεσταλμένος
 ὁ Κλεομένης τῶν μὲν ειλώτων τοὺς πέντε μνᾶς Ἀττικὰς καταβαλόντας ἐλευθέρους ἐποίει καὶ τάλαντα πεντακόσια συνέλεξε, διχιλίους δὲ προσκαθοπλίσας Μακεδονικῶς ἀντίταγμα τοῖς παρ’ Ἀντιγόνου λευκάσπισιν, ἔργον ἐπὶ νοῦν βάλλεται
 2 μέγα καὶ πᾶσιν ἀπροσδόκητον. ἡ Μεγάλη πόλις ἦν μὲν τότε καὶ καθ’ ἑαυτὴν οὐδέν τι μείων οὐδὲ ἀσθενεστέρα τῆς Λακεδαίμονος, εἶχε δὲ τὴν ἀπὸ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν καὶ τοῦ Ἀντιγόνου βοήθειαν, ἐν πλευραῖς καθεζομένου καὶ δοκοῦντος ὑπὸ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν ἐπικεκλῆσθαι μάλιστα τῶν Μεγαλο-

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

him in his anguish and deep trouble, said: "Come, O king of the Lacedaemonians, when we go forth let no one see us weeping or doing anything unworthy of Sparta. For this lies in our power, and this alone; but as for the issues of fortune, we shall have what the Deity may grant." After saying this, she composed her countenance and proceeded to the ship with her little grandson, and bade the captain put to sea with all speed. And when she was come to Egypt, and learned that Ptolemy was entertaining embassies and proposals from Antigonus, and heard that although the Achaeans invited Cleomenes to make terms with them, he was afraid on her account to end the war without the consent of Ptolemy, she sent word to him that he must do what was fitting and advantageous for Sparta, and not, because of one old woman and a little boy, be ever in fear of Ptolemy. Such, then, as we are told, was the bearing of Cratesicleia in her misfortunes.

XXIII. After Antigonus had taken Tegea by siege, and had surprised Orchomenus and Mantinea, Cleomenes, now reduced to the narrow confines of Laconia, set free those of the Helots who could pay down five Attic minas (thereby raising a sum of five hundred talents), armed two thousand of them in Macedonian fashion as an offset to the White Shields of Antigonus, and planned an undertaking which was great and entirely unexpected. Megalopolis was at that time of itself fully as large and strong as Sparta, and could have assistance from the Achaeans and from Antigonus; for Antigonus was encamped near by, and it was thought that the Megalopolitans were chiefly responsible for his being called in by the

3 πολιτῶν σπουδασάντων. ταύτην διαρπάσαι διανοηθεὶς ὁ Κλεομένης (οὐ γὰρ ἔστιν ᾧ μᾶλλον ἔοικε τὸ ταχὺ καὶ ἀπροσδόκητον ἐκείνης τῆς πράξεως), ἡμερῶν πέντε σιτίλα λαβεῖν κελεύσας ἐξῆγε τὴν δύναμιν ἐπὶ τὴν Σελασίαν ὡς τὴν Ἀργολικὴν κακουργησῶν· ἐκεῖθεν δὲ καταβάς ἐπὶ τὴν Μεγαλοπολιτικὴν καὶ δειπνοποιησάμενος περὶ τὸ Πραίτειον εὐθύς ἐπορεύετο τὴν δι-

4 Ἐλικούντος ἐπὶ τὴν πόλιν ἀποσχὼν δ' οὐ πολὺ Παντέα μὲν ἔχοντα δύο τάγματα τῶν Λακεδαιμονίων ἀπέστειλε, καταλαβέσθαι κελεύσας μεσοπύργου δ' τῶν τειχῶν ἐρημότατον εἶναι τοῖς Μεγαλοπολίταις ἐπυρθάνετο, τῇ δὲ ἄλλῃ δυνάμει σχολαίως ἐπηκολούθει. τοῦ δὲ Παντέως οὐ μόνον ἐκείνον τὸν τόπον, ἀλλὰ καὶ πολὺ μέρος τοῦ τείχους ἀφύλακτον εὐρόντος, καὶ τὰ μὲν καθαιρούντος εὐθύς, τὰ δὲ διασκάπτοντος, τῶν δὲ φρουρῶν οἷς ἐνέτυχε πάντας ἀποκτείναντος, ἔφθασε 816 προσμίξας ὁ Κλεομένης, καὶ πρὶν αἰσθῆσθαι τοὺς Μεγαλοπολίτας ἔνδον ἦν μετὰ τῆς δυνάμεως.

XXIV. Φανεροῦ δὲ μόλις τοῦ κακοῦ γενομένου τοῖς κατὰ τὴν πόλιν, οἱ μὲν εὐθύς ἐξέπιπτον ὅσα τυγχάνοι τῶν χρημάτων λαμβάνοντες, οἱ δὲ συνεστρέφοντο μετὰ τῶν ὄπλων, καὶ τοῖς πολεμίοις ἐνιστάμενοι καὶ προσβάλλοντες ἐκείνους μὲν οὐκ ἴσχυσαν ἐκκρούσαι, τοῖς δὲ φεύγουσι τῶν πολιτῶν ἀσφαλῶς ἀπελθεῖν παρέσχον, ὥστε μὴ πλείονα τῶν χιλίων ἐγκαταληφθῆναι σώματα, τοὺς δὲ ἄλλους ἅπαντας ὁμοῦ μετὰ τέκνων καὶ γυναικῶν φθάσαι διαφυγόντας εἰς Μεσσήνην.

2 ἐσώθη δὲ καὶ τῶν προσβοηθούτων καὶ μαχομένων τὸ πλῆθος· ὀλίγοι δὲ παντάπασιν ἤλωσαν,

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

Achaean. This city Cleomenes planned to snatch away (for nothing else could better describe the speed and unexpectedness of his famous achievement), and ordering his men to take five days' rations, he led them forth to Sellasia, as though he would ravage the territory of Argos. But from there he descended into the territory of Megalopolis, and after giving his men their supper at the Rhoeteium, he marched at once by way of Helicus against the city itself. When he was not far away he dispatched Panteus with two divisions of Lacedaemonians, ordering him to seize a portion of the wall between two towers which he had learned was the most unprotected part of the walls of Megalopolis, while he himself with the rest of his army followed slowly after. Panteus found not only that particular spot, but also a great part of the wall, undefended, and at once tore down some portions of it, undermining others, and slaying all the defenders whom he encountered. Cleomenes promptly joined him, and before the Megalopolitans were aware of it, he was inside the city with his army.

XXIV. At last the disaster became clear to the citizens, and some of them at once fled the city, taking with them what property they could lay hands on, while others banded together under arms, resisting and assaulting the enemy. These they were not strong enough to eject from the city, but they afforded a safe escape to the citizens who wished to flee, so that not more than a thousand persons were taken in the place; all the rest, together with their wives and children, succeeded in escaping to Messene. Moreover, the greater part of those who tried to save the city by fighting got off alive; but a few of them,

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- ὧν ἦν Λυσανδρίδας τε καὶ Θεαρίδας, ἄνδρες ἔνδοξοι καὶ δυνατοὶ μάλιστα τῶν Μεγαλοπολιτῶν. διὸ καὶ λαβόντες αὐτοὺς εὐθύς οἱ στρατιῶται τῷ Κλεομένει προσήγον. ὁ δὲ Λυσανδρίδας ὡς εἶδε τὸν Κλεομένην πόρρωθεν, ἀναβοήσας, “Ἐξεστί σοι νῦν,” εἶπεν, “ὦ βασιλεῦ Λακεδαιμονίων, ἔργον ἀποδειξαμένῳ τοῦ πεπραγμένου κάλλιον
- 3 καὶ βασιλικώτατον ἔνδοξοτάτῳ γενέσθαι.” ὁ Κλεομένης δὲ ὑποτοπήσας αὐτοῦ τὴν ἔντευξιν, “Τί δέ,” εἶπεν, “ὦ Λυσανδρίδα, λέγεις; οὐ γὰρ δὴ πού με τὴν πόλιν ὑμῖν ἀποδοῦναι κελεύεις;” καὶ ὁ Λυσανδρίδας, “Αὐτὸ μὲν οὖν,” ἔφη, “λέγω καὶ συμβουλεύω μὴ διαφθεῖραι πόλιν τηλικαύτην, ἀλλ’ ἐμπλῆσαι φίλων καὶ συμμάχων πιστῶν καὶ βεβαίων, ἀποδόντα Μεγαλοπολίταις τὴν πατρίδα καὶ σωτήρα δήμου το-
- 4 σούτου γενόμενον.” μικρὸν οὖν ὁ Κλεομένης διασιωπήσας, “Χαλεπόν,” ἔφη, “τὸ πιστεῦσαι ταῦτα, νικάτω δὲ τὸ πρὸς δόξαν αἰεὶ μᾶλλον ἢ τὸ λυσιτελὲς παρ’ ἡμῖν.” καὶ ταῦτα εἰπὼν ἀπέστειλε τοὺς ἄνδρας εἰς Μεσσήνην καὶ κήρυκα παρ’ ἑαυτοῦ, τοῖς Μεγαλοπολίταις ἀποδιδούς τὴν πόλιν ἐπὶ τῷ συμμάχου εἶναι καὶ φίλους ἀποστάντας Ἀχαιῶν.
- 5 Οὕτω δὲ τοῦ Κλεομένους εὐγνώμονα καὶ φιλόανθρωπα προτείναντος οὐκ εἶασε τοὺς Μεγαλοπολίτας ὁ Φιλοποίμην ἐγκαταλιπεῖν τὴν πρὸς τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς πίστιν, ἀλλὰ κατηγορῶν τοῦ Κλεομένους ὡς οὐ ζητοῦντος ἀποδοῦναι τὴν πόλιν, ἀλλὰ προσλαβεῖν τοὺς πολίτας, ἐξέβαλε τὸν Θεαρίδαν καὶ τὸν Λυσανδρίδαν ἐκ τῆς Μεσσήνης.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

all told, were captured, among whom were Lysandridas and Thearidas, men of the greatest reputation and influence in Megalopolis. Therefore the soldiers had no sooner seized them than they brought them to Cleomenes. Then Lysandridas, when he saw Cleomenes from afar, cried out with a loud voice and said: "It is in thy power now, O king of the Lacedaemonians, to display an action fairer and more worthy of a king than any that has preceded it, and thereby win men's highest esteem." But Cleomenes, conjecturing what the speaker wished, said: "What meanest thou, Lysandridas? Thou surely canst not bid me give your city back again to you." To which Lysandridas replied: "Indeed, that is just what I mean, and I advise thee in thine own interests not to destroy so great a city, but to fill it with friends and allies who are trusty and true by giving back to the Megalopolitans their native city and becoming the preserver of so large a people." Accordingly, after a short silence, Cleomenes said: "It is difficult to believe that all this will happen, but with us let what makes for good repute always carry the day, rather than what brings gain." And with these words he sent the two men off to Messene attended by a herald from himself, offering to give back their city to the Megalopolitans on condition that they renounce the Achaean cause and be his friends and allies.

However, although Cleomenes made this benevolent and humane offer, Philopoemen would not allow the Megalopolitans to break their pledges to the Achaeans, but denounced Cleomenes on the ground that he sought, not so much to give their city back to its citizens, as rather to get the citizens with their city¹; then he drove Thearidas and Lysandridas out

¹ See the Philopoemen, v.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

οὗτος ἦν Φιλοποίμην ὁ πρωτεύσας ὕστερον Ἀχαιῶν καὶ μεγίστην κτησάμενος ἐν τοῖς Ἑλλησι δόξαν, ὡς ἰδίᾳ περὶ αὐτοῦ γέγραπται.

- XXV. Τούτων δὲ ἀπαγγελθέντων τῷ Κλεομένει, τετηρηκῶς τὴν πόλιν ἄθικτον καὶ ἀκέραιον, ὥστε μηδένα λαθεῖν μηδὲ τοῦλάχιστον λαβόντα, τότε παντάπασι τραχυθεις καὶ ἀγανακτήσας τὰ μὲν χρήματα διήρπασεν, ἀνδριάντας δὲ καὶ γραφὰς ἀπέστειλεν εἰς Σπάρτην, τῆς δὲ πόλεως τὰ πλείστα καὶ μέγιστα μέρη κατασκάψας καὶ διαφθείρας ἀνέζευξεν ἐπ' οἴκου, φοβούμενος τὸν
- 2 Ἀντίγονον καὶ τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς. ἐπράχθη δὲ οὐδὲν ἀπ' αὐτῶν. ἐτύγχανον μὲν γὰρ ἐν Αἰγίῳ βουλήν ἔχοντες· ἐπεὶ δὲ Ἄρατος ἀναβὰς ἐπὶ τὸ βῆμα πολὺν μὲν χρόνον ἔκλαιε τὴν χλαμύδα θέμενος πρὸ τοῦ προσώπου, θαυμαζόντων δὲ καὶ λέγειν κελεούντων εἶπεν ὅτι Μεγάλῃ πόλις ἀπόλωλεν ὑπὸ Κλεομένου, ἡ μὲν σύνοδος εὐθύς διελύθη τῶν Ἀχαιῶν καταπλαγέντων τὴν ὀξύτητα καὶ
- 3 τὸ μέγεθος τοῦ πάθους, ὁ δὲ Ἀντίγονος ἐπιχειρήσας βοηθεῖν, εἶτα βραδέως αὐτῷ τῆς δυνάμεως ἐκ τῶν χειμαδίων ἀνισταμένης, ταύτην μὲν αὐθις ἐκέλευσε κατὰ χώραν μένειν, αὐτὸς δὲ παρήλθεν εἰς Ἄργος, οὐ πολλοὺς ἔχων στρατιώτας μεθ' ἑαυτοῦ.

- Διὸ καὶ τὸ δεύτερον ἐγχείρημα τοῦ Κλεομένου ἔδοξε μὲν τετολμηῆσθαι παραβόλως καὶ μανικῶς, ἐπράχθη δὲ μετὰ πολλῆς προνοίας, ὡς φησι
- 4 Πολύβιος. εἰδὼς γὰρ εἰς τὰ χειμάδια διεσπαρ-

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

of Messene. This was that Philopoemen who afterwards became the leader of the Achaeans and won the greatest fame among the Greeks, as I have written in his own Life.

XXV. When tidings of these things were brought to Cleomenes, although he had taken strict care that the city should be inviolate and unharmed, so that no one took even the least thing without being detected, he was now so incensed and embittered that he plundered it, and sent its statues and pictures off to Sparta; then, after completely demolishing most and the largest portions of the city, he marched back towards home, being in fear of Antigonus and the Achaeans. But these did nothing. For they were holding a general assembly at Aegium; and here Aratus, after mounting the bema, wept for a long time, holding his mantle before his face; and when his audience was amazed and bade him speak, he told them that Megalopolis had been destroyed by Cleomenes. Then the assembly at once broke up, the Achaeans being filled with consternation at the swiftness and magnitude of the calamity. Antigonus at first attempted to give aid, but afterwards, since his forces came up to him but slowly from their winter quarters, he ordered them to remain where they were, while he himself proceeded to Argos, having only a few soldiers with him.

And this was the reason why the next attempt of Cleomenes, which was thought to be a deed of extravagant and frantic daring, was really made with great forethought, as Polybius says.¹ For Cleomenes

¹ "Most people thought this a hazardous and foolhardy step; but those who were capable of judging regarded the measure as at once safe and prudent" (ii. 64, 1).

μένους κατὰ πόλιν¹ τοὺς Μακεδόνας, καὶ τὸν 817
 Ἀντίγονον οὐ πολλοὺς ἔχοντα μισθοφόρους ἐν Ἀργεὶ διαχειμάζοντα μετὰ τῶν φίλων, ἐνέβαλεν εἰς τὴν Ἀργεῖαν, λογιζόμενος ἢ δι' αἰσχύνην τοῦ
 Ἀντιγόνου παροξυνθέντος ἐπικρατήσῃ ἢ μὴ
 5 τολμήσαντα μάχεσθαι διαβαλεῖν πρὸς τοὺς Ἀργεῖους. ὃ καὶ συνέβη. διαφθειρομένης γὰρ τῆς χώρας ὑπ' αὐτοῦ καὶ πάντων ἀγομένων καὶ φερομένων, οἱ μὲν Ἀργεῖοι δυσανασχετοῦντες ἐπὶ τὰς θύρας συνηστρέφοντο τοῦ βασιλέως καὶ κατεβῶν, μάχεσθαι κελεύοντες ἢ τοῖς κρείττοσιν ἐξίστασθαι τῆς ἡγεμονίας· ὁ δὲ Ἀντίγονος, ὡς ἔδει στρατηγὸν ἔμφρονα, τὸ κινδυνεύσαι παραλόγως καὶ προέσθαι τὴν ἀσφάλειαν αἰσχρὸν, οὐ τὸ κακῶς ἀκοῦσαι παρὰ τοῖς ἐκτὸς ἡγούμενος, οὐ προῆλθεν, ἀλλ' ἐνέμενε τοῖς αὐτοῦ λογισμοῖς. ὁ δὲ Κλεομένης ἄχρι τῶν τειχῶν τῷ στρατῷ προσ-ελθὼν καὶ καθυβρίσας καὶ διαλυμηνάμενος ἀδεῶς ἀνεχώρησεν.

XXVI. Ὀλίγῳ δὲ ὕστερον αὐθις, εἰς Τεγέαν ἀκούσας προῖεναι τὸν Ἀντίγονον ὡς ἐκείθεν εἰς τὴν Λακωνικὴν ἐμβαλοῦντα, ταχὺ τοὺς στρατιώτας ἀναλαβὼν καὶ καθ' ἑτέρας ὁδοὺς παραλλάξας αἴμ' ἡμέρα πρὸς τῇ πόλει τῶν Ἀργείων ἀνεφανή, πορθῶν τὸ πεδίον καὶ τὸν σῖτον οὐ κείρων, ὥσπερ οἱ λοιποὶ, δρεπάναις καὶ μαχαίραις, ἀλλὰ κόπτων ξύλοις μεγάλοις εἰς σχῆμα ῥομφαίας ἀπειργασμένοις, ὡς ἐπὶ παιδιᾷ χρωμένους ἐν τῷ πορεύεσθαι σὺν μηδενὶ πόνῳ πάντα συγκατατρίψαι καὶ
 2 διαφθεῖραι τὸν καρπὸν. ὡς μέντοι κατὰ τὴν

¹ κατὰ πόλιν Blass and Ziegler, after Schoemann : κατὰ πόλιν ὡς φησι.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

knew that the Macedonians were dispersed among the cities in their winter quarters, and that Antigonus had only a few mercenaries with him at Argos, where he was spending the winter with his friends. Cleomenes therefore invaded the territory of Argos, calculating that Antigonus would either be shamed into fighting and would be overpowered, or, in case he did not venture to fight, would incur odium among the Argives. And this was what actually came to pass. For while Cleomenes was wasting the country and robbing it of all that was there, the Argives, in distress, kept thronging the doors of the king and calling upon him with loud voices either to fight or yield the leadership to his betters. But Antigonus, as became a prudent general, considering that disgrace lay in taking unreasonable risks and throwing away his security, rather than in being abused by the outside rabble, would not go forth from the city, but stood by his previous plans. So Cleomenes came up to the very walls of the city with his army, wrought insolent havoc, and then withdrew unmolested.

XXVI. A little later, however, hearing that Antigonus had advanced to Tegea with intent to invade Laconia from that city, Cleomenes quickly took his soldiers, marched past the enemy by a different route, and at daybreak appeared suddenly before the city of Argos, ravaging the plain and destroying the grain, not cutting this down, as usual, with sickles and knives, but beating it down with great pieces of wood fashioned like spear-shafts. These his soldiers plied as if in sport, while passing by, and with no effort at all they would crush and ruin all the crop. When, however, they were come to the Κυλλάραβιν γενόμενοι τὸ γυμνάσιον ἐπεχείρουν προσφέρειν πῦρ, ἐκώλυσεν, ὡς καὶ τῶν περὶ Μεγάλην πόλιν ὑπ' ὀργῆς μᾶλλον ἢ καλῶς αὐτῶ πεπραγμένων.

Τοῦ δὲ Ἀντιγόνου πρῶτον μὲν εὐθὺς εἰς Ἄργος ἀναχωρήσαντος, ἔπειτα τὰ ὄρη καὶ τὰς ὑπερβολὰς πάσας φυλακαῖς καταλαβόντος, ἀμελεῖν καὶ καταφρονεῖν προσποιούμενος ἔπεμψε κήρυκας τὰς κλεῖς ἀξιῶν τοῦ Ἡραίου λαβεῖν, ὅπως ἀπαλλάττοιο
 3 τῇ θεῷ θύσας. οὕτω δὲ παίξας καὶ κατειρωνευσάμενος, καὶ τῇ θεῷ θύσας ὑπὸ τὸν νεῶν κεκλεισμένον, ἀπήγαγεν εἰς Φλιούντα τὸν στρατόν· ἐκείθεν δὲ τοὺς φρουροῦντας τὸν Ὀλίγυρτον ἐξελίσας κατέβη παρὰ τὸν Ὀρχομενόν, οὐ μόνον τοῖς πολίταις φρόνημα καὶ θάρσος ἐμπεποιηκῶς, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοῖς πολεμίους ἀνὴρ ἡγεμονικὸς δοκῶν εἶναι καὶ
 4 πραγμάτων μεγάλων ἄξιος. τὸ γὰρ ἐκ μιᾶς πόλεως ὀρμώμενον ὁμοῦ τῇ Μακεδόνων δυνάμει καὶ Πελοποννησίοις ἅπασι καὶ χορηγία βασιλικῇ πολεμεῖν, καὶ μὴ μόνον ἄθικτον διαφυλάττοντα τὴν Λακωνικὴν, ἀλλὰ καὶ χώραν κακῶς ποιούντα τὴν ἐκείνων καὶ πόλεις αἰροῦντα τηλικαύτας, οὐ τῆς τυχούσης ἐδόκει δεινότητος εἶναι καὶ μεγαλοφροσύνης.

XXVII. Ἄλλ' ὁ πρῶτος τὰ χρήματα νεῦρα τῶν πραγμάτων προσειπὼν εἰς τὰ τοῦ πολέμου πράγματα μάλιστα βλέψας τοῦτ' εἰπεῖν ἔοικε. καὶ Δημάδης, τὰς τριῆρεις μὲν καθέλκειν καὶ πληροῦν ποτε τῶν Ἀθηναίων κελευόντων, χρήματα δ' οὐκ ἐχόντων "Πρότερόν ἐστιν," ἔφη, "τὸ προδεῦσαι τοῦ φυρᾶσαι."¹ λέγεται δὲ καὶ

¹ τὸ προδεῦσαι τοῦ φυρᾶσαι Bekker and Blass, after 110

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

Cyllarabis and attempted to set the gymnasium on fire, Cleomenes stopped them, feeling that his work at Megalopolis had been done to satisfy his anger rather than his honour.

As for Antigonus, in the first place he went back at once to Argos, and then occupied the hills and all the passes with outposts. But Cleomenes pretended to despise and ignore all this, and sent heralds to the king demanding the keys to the Heraeum, that he might offer sacrifice to the goddess before he went away. Then, after this jest and mockery, and after sacrificing to the goddess under the walls of the temple, which was closed, he led his army off to Phlius. From thence, after expelling the garrison of Oligyrtus, he marched down to Orchomenus, not only infusing high spirits and courage into its citizens, but also leading his enemies to think him a man capable of leadership and worthy to wield great power. For he drew his resources from but a single city, and yet waged war against the Macedonian power, all the Peloponnesians, and the treasures of a king together, and not only kept Laconia inviolate, but actually ravaged his enemies' territory and took cities of great size; and men thought this a proof of no ordinary ability and largeness of purpose.

XXVII. But he who first declared that money is the sinews of affairs would seem to have spoken with special reference to the affairs of war. And Demades, when the Athenians once ordered that their triremes should be launched and manned, but had no money, said: "Dough must be moistened before it is kneaded." It is said also that Archidamus of old, Schoemann: τοῦ πρῶτατεῦσαι τὸ φυρᾶσαι (before the lookout-man comes the bread-maker) with the MSS.

Ἄρχίδαμος ὁ παλαιὸς ὑπὸ τὴν ἀρχὴν τοῦ Πελοποννησιακοῦ πολέμου, κελευόντων εἰσφορὰς τάξαι τῶν συμμάχων αὐτόν, εἰπεῖν ὡς ὁ πόλεμος οὐ
 2 τεταγμένα σιτεῖται. καθάπερ γὰρ οἱ σεσωμασκηκότες ἀθληταὶ τῷ χρόνῳ καταβαροῦσι καὶ καταγωνίζονται τοὺς εὐρύθμους καὶ τεχνίτας, οὕτως καὶ ὁ Ἄντίγονος ἐκ πολλῆς ἀναφέρων δυνάμεως πρὸς τὸν πόλεμον ἐξεπένοι καὶ κατήθλει τὸν Κλεομένη γλίσχρως καὶ μόλις πορίζοντα τοῖς 3 ξένοις μισθὸν καὶ τροφήν τοῖς πολίταις. ἐπεὶ τὰλλὰ γε πρὸς τοῦ Κλεομένου ὁ χρόνος ἦν, τῶν οἴκοι πραγμάτων ἀνιστάντων τὸν Ἄντίγονον. βάρβαροι γὰρ περιέκοπτον ἀπόντος καὶ κατέ-τρεχον τὴν Μακεδονίαν, καὶ τότε δὴ πολὺς ἄνωθεν 818 Ἰλλυριῶν ἐμβεβλήκει στρατός, ὑφ' οὗ πορθούμενοι μετεπέμποντο τὸν Ἄντίγονον οἱ Μακεδόνες. καὶ παρ' ὀλίγον πρὸ τῆς μάχης συνέτυχε ταῦτα τὰ γράμματα κομισθῆναι πρὸς αὐτόν· ὧν κομισθέντων εὐθὺς ἂν ἀπήλθε μακρὰ χαίρειν φράσας
 4 Ἀχαιοῖς. ἀλλ' ἢ τὰ μέγιστα τῶν πραγμάτων κρίνουσα τῷ παρὰ μικρὸν τύχῃ τηλικαύτην ἀπεδείξατο ῥοπήν καιροῦ καὶ δύναμιν, ὥστε, τῆς μάχης ἐν Σελασίᾳ γενομένης καὶ τοῦ Κλεομένου ἀποβεβληκός τὴν δύναμιν καὶ τὴν πόλιν, εὐθὺς παρεῖναι τοὺς καλοῦντας τὸν Ἄντίγονον. ὃ καὶ μάλιστα τὴν δυστυχίαν τοῦ Κλεομένου οἰκτρο-
 5 τέραν ἐποίησεν. εἰ γὰρ ἡμέρας δύο μόνας ἐπέσχε καὶ παρήγαγε φυγομαχῶν, οὐκ ἂν ἐδέησεν αὐτῷ μάχης, ἀλλ' ἐφ' οἷς ἐβούλετο διηλλάγη πρὸς τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς ἀπελθόντων τῶν Μακεδόνων· νῦν δέ, ὥσπερ εἴρηται, διὰ τὴν ἀχρηματίαν ἐν τοῖς

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

towards the beginning of the Peloponnesian war, when the allies ordered their contributions for the war to be fixed, said: "War has no fixed rations."¹ And indeed, just as athletes who have taken a full course of training, in time bear down and overpower those who are merely graceful and skilful, so also did Antigonus, who engaged in the war with large resources, wear out and prostrate Cleomenes, who could only meagrely and with difficulty provide pay for his mercenaries and sustenance for his citizen-soldiers. And yet in all other respects, certainly, time was on the side of Cleomenes; for affairs at home demanded the presence of Antigonus. During his absence Barbarians had been overrunning and devastating Macedonia, and at this particular time a large army of Illyrians from the interior had burst in, and in consequence of their ravages the Macedonians summoned Antigonus home. Their letters came within a little of reaching him before the decisive battle. If they had so reached him, he would at once have gone away and left the Achaeans to their own devices. But Fortune, who decides the most important affairs by a narrow margin, favoured him with so slight a preponderance in the scale of opportunity and power, that no sooner had the battle at Sellasia been fought, where Cleomenes lost his army and his city, than the messengers summoning Antigonus arrived. And this more than anything else made the misfortune of Cleomenes to be greatly pitied. For if he could have held out only two days, and continued his defensive tactics, he would not have needed to fight a battle, but the Macedonians would have gone away and he could have made his own terms with the Achaeans. But now, as I said before, his lack of ¹ See the Crassus, ii. 7.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

δπλοις τὸ πᾶν θέμενος ἠναγκάσθη δισμυρίοις, ὡς Πολύβιός φησι, πρὸς τρισμυρίους ἀντιπαρατάξασθαι.

- XXVIII. Καὶ θαυμαστὸν μὲν ἐν τῷ κινδύνῳ παρασχὼν ἑαυτὸν στρατηγόν, ἐκθύμοις δὲ χρησάμενος τοῖς πολίταις, οὐ μὴν οὐδὲ τῶν ξένων μεμπτῶς ἀγωνισαμένων, τῷ τρόπῳ τῆς ὀπλίσεως καὶ τῷ βάρει τῆς ὀπλιτικῆς φάλαγγος ἐξεθλίβη. Φύλαρχος δὲ καὶ προδοσίαν γενέσθαι φησὶ τὴν μάλιστα τῷ Κλεομένει τὰ πράγματα διεργασα-
- 2 μένην. τοῦ γὰρ Ἀντιγόνου τοὺς Ἰλλυριοὺς καὶ τοὺς Ἀκαρνᾶνας ἐκπεριελθεῖν κρύφα κελεύσαντος καὶ κυκλώσασθαι θάτερον κέρας, ἐφ' οὗ τεταγμένος ἦν Εὐκλείδας ὁ τοῦ Κλεομένους ἀδελφός, εἶτα τὴν ἄλλην ἐπὶ μάχῃ δύναμιν ἐκτάττουτος, ἀπὸ σκοπῆς θεωρῶν ὁ Κλεομένης, ὡς οὐδαμοῦ τὰ ὄπλα τῶν Ἰλλυριῶν καὶ τῶν Ἀκαρνάνων κατείδεν, ἐφοβήθη μὴ πρὸς τι τοιοῦτον αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἀντίγονος κέχρηται.
- 3 καλέσας δὲ Δαμοτέλη τὸν ἐπὶ τῆς κρυπτείας τεταγμένον, ὁρᾶν ἐκέλευσε καὶ ζητεῖν ὅπως ἔχει τὰ κατὰ νότου καὶ κύκλῳ τῆς παρατάξεως. τοῦ δὲ Δαμοτέλους (ἦν γάρ, ὡς λέγεται, χρήμασιν πρότερον ὑπ' Ἀντιγόνου διεφθαρμένος) ἀμελεῖν ἐκείνων εἰπόντος ὡς καλῶς ἐχόντων, τοῖς δὲ συνάπτουσιν ἐξ ἐναντίας προσέχειν καὶ τούτους ἀμύνεσθαι, πιστεύσας ἐπὶ τὸν Ἀντίγονον ἐχώρει,
- 4 καὶ τῇ ῥύμῃ τῶν περὶ αὐτὸν Σπαρτιατῶν ὡσάμενος τὴν φάλαγγα τῶν Μακεδόνων ἐπὶ πέντε πού σταδίους ὑποχωρούντων ἐκβιαζόμενος καὶ

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

resources forced him to stake the whole issue on a battle where, as Polybius says,¹ he could oppose only twenty thousand men to thirty thousand.

XXVIII. He showed himself an admirable general in the hour of peril, his fellow countrymen gave him spirited support, and even his mercenaries fought in a praiseworthy manner, but he was overwhelmed by the superior character of his enemies' armour and the weight of their heavy-armed phalanx. Phylarchus, however, says that there was treachery also, and that this was chiefly what ruined Cleomenes. For Antigonos ordered his Illyrians and Acarnanians to go round by a secret way and envelope the other wing, which Eucleidas, the brother of Cleomenes, commanded, and then led out the rest of his forces to battle; and when Cleomenes, from his post of observation, could nowhere see the arms of the Illyrians and Acarnanians, he was afraid that Antigonos was using them for some such purpose. He therefore called Damoteles, the commander of the secret service contingent,² and ordered him to observe and find out how matters stood in the rear and on the flanks of his array. But Damoteles (who had previously been bribed, as we are told, by Antigonos) told him to have no concern about flanks and rear, for all was well there, but to give his attention to those who assailed him in front, and repulse them. So Cleomenes, putting faith in what he was told, advanced upon Antigonos, and by the sweeping onset of his Spartans drove back the phalanx of the Macedonians for about five furlongs, ¹ Hist. ii. 65. 2 and 7. The battle of Sellasia was fought in June of 221 B.C.

² A rural police with the special duty of watching the Helots, or slave population.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

κρατῶν ἠκολούθησεν. εἶτα τῶν περὶ τὸν Εὐκλείδαν ἀπὸ θατέρου κυκλωθέντων ἐπιστὰς καὶ κατιδὼν τὸν κίνδυνον, “Οἴχη μοι, φίλτατε ἀδελφέ,” εἶπεν, “οἴχη, γενναῖος ὢν καὶ παισὶ ζηλωτὸς 5 Σπαρτιατῶν καὶ γυναιξὶν ἀοίδιμος.” οὕτω δὲ τῶν περὶ τὸν Εὐκλείδαν ἀναιρεθέντων, καὶ τῶν ἐκεῖθεν, ὡς ἐκράτουν, ἐπιφερομένων ταραττομένους ὁρῶν τοὺς στρατιώτας καὶ μένειν οὐκέτι τολμῶντας, ἔσωζεν ἑαυτὸν. ἀποθανεῖν δὲ καὶ τῶν ξένων πολλοὺς λέγουσι καὶ Λακεδαιμονίους ἅπαντας πλὴν διακοσίων, ἑξακισχιλίουσ ὄντας.

XXIX. Ἐπεὶ δὲ εἰς τὴν πόλιν ἀφίκετο, τοῖς μὲν ἀπαντήσασι τῶν πολιτῶν παρήνει δέχεσθαι τὸν Ἀντίγονον, αὐτὸς δὲ εἶπεν εἴτε ζῶν εἴτε ἀποθανῶν, ὃ μέλλοι τῇ Σπάρτῃ συνοίσειν, τοῦτο πράξειν. ὁρῶν δὲ τὰς γυναῖκας τοῖς μετ’ αὐτοῦ πεφευγῶσι προστρεχούσας καὶ δεχομένας τὰ ὄπλα
 2 καὶ ποτὸν προσφερούσας, αὐτὸς εἰσῆλθε μὲν εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν τὴν ἑαυτοῦ, τῆς δὲ παιδίσκης, ἣν εἶχεν, ἐλευθέραν οὔσαν ἐκ Μεγάλης πόλεως ἀνειληφῶς μετὰ τὴν τῆς γυναικὸς τελευτὴν, ὡς εἴθιστο, προσιούσης καὶ βουλομένης ἀπὸ στρατείας ἤκοντα θεραπεύειν, οὔτε πιεῖν ἐκδεδιψηκῶς ὑπέμεινεν οὔτε καθίσαι κεκμηκῶς, ἀλλ’ ὥσπερ ἐτύγχανε 819
 3 ἐπιθείς, καὶ χρόνον οὐ πολὺν οὕτω διαναπαύσας τὸ σῶμα καὶ τῇ διανοίᾳ περιδραμῶν ἅπαντας τοὺς λογισμούς, ὥρμησε μετὰ τῶν φίλων εἰς τὸ Γύθιον. κακεῖθεν ἐπιβάντες ἐπ’ αὐτὸ τοῦτο παρεσκευασμένων πλοίων ἀνήχθησαν.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

and followed after them victoriously. Then, after Eucleidas with the other wing had been encircled, he came to a stop, and seeing their peril, said; "I have lost thee, my dearest brother, I have lost thee, thou noble heart, thou great example to Spartan boys, thou theme for a song to Spartan wives!" After Eucleidas and his forces had in this way been cut to pieces, and the enemy, after their victory there, were coming on against the other wing, Cleomenes, seeing that his soldiers were in disorder and no longer had courage to stand their ground, took measures for his own safety. Many of his mercenaries fell, as we are told, and all the Spartans, six thousand in number, except two hundred.

XXIX. When Cleomenes came to the city, he advised the citizens who met him to receive Antigonus; as for himself, he said he would do whatever promised to be best for Sparta, whether it called for his life or death. Then, seeing the women running up to those who had escaped with him, relieving them of their arms, and bringing drink to them, he went into his own house. Here his concubine, a free woman of Megalopolis whom he had taken to himself after the death of his wife, came to him, as was her wont upon his return from the field, and wished to minister to him; but he would neither drink, though he was faint with thirst, nor sit down, though he was worn out. Instead, all in armour as he was, he put his arm aslant against one of the pillars of the house, dropped his face upon his forearm, and after resting himself in this way for a short time, and running over in his thoughts all possible plans, he set out with his friends for Gythium. There he went on board of vessels provided for this very purpose and put to sea.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

XXX. Ὁ δὲ Ἀντίγονος ἐξ ἐφόδου παραλαβὼν τὴν πόλιν, καὶ χρησάμενος τοῖς Λακεδαιμονίοις φιλανθρώπως, καὶ τὸ ἀξίωμα τῆς Σπάρτης οὐ προπηλακίσας οὐδ' ἐνυβρίσας, ἀλλὰ καὶ νόμους καὶ πολιτείαν ἀποδοὺς καὶ τοῖς θεοῖς θύσας, ἀνεχώρησεν ἡμέρα τρίτη, πυθόμενος ἐν Μακεδονίᾳ πολὺν πόλεμον εἶναι καὶ πορθεῖσθαι τὴν χώραν ὑπὸ τῶν βαρβάρων. ἤδη δὲ καὶ τὸ νόσημα κατεῖχεν αὐτόν, εἰς φθίσειν ἐκβεβηκὸς ἰσχυρὰν 2 καὶ κατάρρουν σύντονον. οὐ μὴν ἀπέειπεν, ἀλλ' ἀντήρκεσε πρὸς τοὺς οἰκείους ἀγῶνας ὅσον ἐπὶ νίκη μεγίστῃ καὶ φόνῳ πλείστῳ τῶν βαρβάρων εὐκλεέστερον ἀποθανεῖν, ὡς μὲν εἰκὸς ἐστὶ καὶ λέγουσιν οἱ περὶ Φύλαρχον, αὐτῇ τῇ περὶ τὸν ἀγῶνα κραυγῇ τὸ σῶμα προσαναρρήξας· ἐν δὲ ταῖς σχολαῖς ἦν ἀκούειν ὅτι βοῶν μετὰ τὴν νίκην ὑπὸ χαρᾶς, “ὦ καλῆς ἡμέρας,” πλήθος αἵματος ἀνήγαγε καὶ πυρέξας συντόνως ἐτελεύτησε. ταῦτα μὲν τὰ περὶ Ἀντίγονου.

XXXI. Κλεομένης δὲ πλέων ἀπὸ Κυθήρων εἰς νῆσον ἐτέραν, Αἰγιαλίαν, κατέσχευεν. ὅθεν εἰς Κυρήνην περαιοῦσθαι μέλλοντος αὐτοῦ, τῶν φίλων εἰς ὄνομα Θηρυκίων, ἀνὴρ πρὸς τε τὰς πράξεις φρονήματι κεχρημένος μεγάλῳ καὶ τοῖς λόγοις γεγωνώς τις ὑψηλὸς ἀεὶ καὶ μέγανυχος, ἐντυχὼν αὐτῷ κατ' ἰδίαν, “Τὸν μὲν κάλλιστον,” εἶπεν, “ὦ βασιλεῦ, θάνατον τὸν ἐν τῇ μάχῃ προηκάμεθα· 2 καίτοι πάντες ἤκουσαν ἡμῶν λεγόντων ὡς οὐχ ὑπερβήσεται τὸν βασιλέα τῶν Σπαρτιατῶν Ἀντίγονος εἰ μὴ νεκρόν. ὁ δὲ δεῦτερος δόξῃ καὶ ἀρετῇ νῦν ἔτι πάρεστιν ἡμῖν. ποῖ πλέομεν ἀλογίστως,

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

XXX. Antigonus marched up and took the city without resistance. He treated the Lacedaemonians humanely, and did not insult or mock the dignity of Sparta, but restored her laws and constitution,¹ sacrificed to the gods, and went away on the third day. For he learned that there was a great war in Macedonia and that the Barbarians were ravaging the country. Moreover, his disease was already in full possession of him, having developed into a quick consumption and an acute catarrh. He did not, however, give up, but had strength left for his conflicts at home, so that he won a very great victory, slew a prodigious number of the Barbarians, and died gloriously, having broken a blood-vessel (as it is likely, and as Phylarchus says) by the very shout that he raised on the field of battle. And in the schools of philosophy one used to hear the story that after his victory he shouted for joy, "O happy day!" and then brought up a quantity of blood, fell into a high fever, and so died. So much concerning Antigonus.

XXXI. As for Cleomenes, he sailed from Cythera to Aegialia, another island, and put in there. As he was about to cross from thence to Cyrene, one of his friends, Therycion by name, a man who brought a large spirit to the conduct of affairs and was always somewhat lofty in his speech and grandiloquent, came to him privately and said: "The noblest death, O King, a death in battle, we have put away from us; and yet all men heard us declare that Antigonus should not pass the king of Sparta except over his dead body. But a death that is second in virtue and glory is now still in our power. Whither do we ἀποφεύγοντες ἐγγὺς ὄν κακὸν καὶ μακρὰν διώ-κοντες; εἰ γὰρ οὐκ αἰσχροὺν ἔστι δουλεύειν τοῖς ἀπὸ Φιλίππου καὶ Ἀλεξάνδρου τοὺς ἀφ' Ἡρακ-λέους, πλοῦν πολὺν κερδανούμεν Ἀντιγόνῳ παρα-δόντες ἑαυτοὺς, ὃν εἰκὸς ἔστι Πτολεμαίου διαφέρειν 3 ὅσον Αἰγυπτίων Μακεδόνας. εἰ δὲ ὑφ' ὧν κεκρατήμεθα τοῖς ὅπλοις οὐκ ἀξιούμεν ἄρχεσθαι, τί τὸν μὴ νενικηκότα δεσπότην ποιοῦμεν αὐτῶν, ἵνα ἀνθ' ἐνὸς δυνεῖν κακίους φανῶμεν, Ἀντίγονον μὲν φεύγοντες, Πτολεμαῖον δὲ κολακεύοντες; ἢ διὰ τὴν μητέρα φήσομεν εἰς Αἴγυπτον ἦκειν; καλὸν μεντὰν αὐτῇ θέαμα γένοιο καὶ ζηλωτὸν ἐπιδεικνυ-μένη ταῖς Πτολεμαίου γυναιξίν αἰχμάλωτον ἐκ 4 βασιλέως καὶ φυγάδα τὸν υἱόν. οὐχ ἕως ἔτι τῶν ἰδίων ξιφῶν ἄρχομεν καὶ τὴν Λακωνικὴν ἀφορῶμεν, ἐνταῦθα τῆς τύχης ἀπαλλάξαντες ἑαυτοὺς ἀπολογησόμεθα τοῖς ἐν Σελασίᾳ κειμένοις ὑπὲρ τῆς Σπάρτης, ἀλλ' ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ καθεδούμεθα πυνθανόμενοι τίνα τῆς Λακεδαίμονος σατράπην Ἀντίγονος ἀπολέλοιπε;

¹ As they were before the reforms of Cleomenes.

Τοιαῦτα τοῦ Θηρυκίωνος εἰπόντος ὁ Κλεομένης ἀπεκρίνατο, “Τῶν ἀνθρωπίνων τὸ ῥᾶστον, ὦ πονηρέ, καὶ πᾶσιν ἐν ἐτοίμῳ διώκων, ἀπο-θανεῖν, ἀνδρείος εἶναι δοκεῖς, φεύγων αἰσχίονα 5 φυγὴν τῆς πρότερον; πολεμίοις μὲν γὰρ ἐνέδωκαν ἤδη καὶ κρείττονες ἡμῶν, ἢ τύχῃ σφαλέντες ἢ βιασθέντες ὑπὸ πλήθους· ὁ δὲ πρὸς πόνους καὶ ταλαιπωρίας ἢ ψόγους καὶ δόξας ἀνθρώπων ἀπα-

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

unreasoningly sail, fleeing an evil that is near and pursuing one that is afar off? For if it is not shameful that the descendants of Heracles should be in subjection to the successors of Philip and Alexander, we shall spare ourselves a long voyage by surrendering to Antigonus, who is likely to surpass Ptolemy as much as Macedonians surpass Egyptians. But if we cannot consent to be ruled by those who have conquered us in arms, why should we make him our master who has not defeated us, thus showing ourselves inferior to two instead of one by running away from Antigonus and joining the flatterers of Ptolemy? Or, shall we say that it is on thy mother's account that we come to Egypt? Surely thou wilt make a noble spectacle for her, and one to awaken envy, when she displays her son to the wives of Ptolemy, a captive instead of a king, and a runaway. Let us rather, while we are still masters of our own swords and can gaze upon the land of Laconia, here rid ourselves of Fortune's yoke, and make our peace with those who at Sellasia died in defence of Sparta, instead of sitting idly down in Egypt and asking every now and then whom Antigonus has left as satrap of Lacedaemon."

Such were the words of Therycion, and to them Cleomenes replied: "It is the easiest possible step thou urgest, wretched man, and one that any man may take, this dying; and dost thou think thyself brave when thou art making a flight more shameful than the one preceding it? Better men than we have given in to their enemies before this, having been betrayed by Fortune or overwhelmed by numbers. But he who in the face of toils and hardships, or of the censorious judgments of men, gives up the fight, γορεύων ἠτᾶται τῆς αὐτοῦ μαλακίας. δεῖ γὰρ τὸν αὐθαίρετον θάνατον οὐ φυγὴν εἶναι πράξεων, ἀλλὰ πρᾶξιν. αἰσχρὸν γὰρ καὶ ζῆν¹ μόνοις 820 ἑαυτοῖς καὶ ἀποθνήσκειν· ἐφ' ὃ νῦν σὺ παρακαλεῖς ἡμᾶς, σπεύδων ἀπαλλαγῆναι τῶν παρόντων, καλὸν δὲ οὐδὲν οὐδὲ χρησίμον ἄλλο διαπραττόμενος. ἐγὼ δὲ καὶ σὲ καὶ ἑμαυτὸν οἶομαι δεῖν 6 τὰς ὑπὲρ τῆς πατρίδος ἐλπίδας μὴ καταλιπεῖν· ὅπου δ' ἂν ἡμᾶς ἐκεῖναι καταλίπωσι, ῥᾶστα βουλομένοις ἀποθανεῖν ὑπάρξει."

Πρὸς ταῦτα Θηρυκίων οὐδὲν ἀντειπὼν, ὅτε πρῶτον ἔσχε καιρὸν ἀποστῆναι τοῦ Κλεομένους, ἐκτραπόμενος παρὰ τὸν αἰγιαλὸν ἔσφαξεν ἑαυτόν.

XXXII. Ὁ δὲ Κλεομένης ἀπὸ τῶν Αἰγιαλῶν ἀναχθεὶς τῇ Λιβύῃ προσέβαλε, καὶ διὰ τῶν βασιλικῶν παραπεμπόμενος ἦκεν εἰς Ἀλεξάνδρειαν. ὀφθεῖς δὲ τῷ Πτολεμαίῳ, κατ' ἀρχὰς μὲν ἐτύγχανε κοινῶς φιλανθρώπου καὶ μετρίου πρὸς αὐτὸν ἐπεὶ δὲ γνώμης διδοὺς πείραν ἀνὴρ ἐφαίνετο ἔμφρων, καὶ τῆς καθ' ἡμέραν ὀμιλίας αὐτοῦ τὸ Λακωνικὸν καὶ ἀφελὲς τὴν χάριν ἐλευθεριον εἶχε, καὶ τὴν εὐγένειαν οὐδαμῇ καταισχύνων οὐδὲ 2 καμπτόμενος ὑπὸ τῆς τύχης, τῶν πρὸς ἡδονὴν καὶ κολακείαν διαλεγόμενων πιθανώτερος ἐφαίνετο, πολλὴ μὲν αἰδῶς καὶ μετάνοια τὸν Πτολεμαῖον εἶχεν ἀνδρὸς ἀμελήσαντα τοιοῦτου καὶ προέμενον τῷ Ἀντιγόνῳ, δόξαν ἅμα κεκτημένῳ τηλικαύτην καὶ δύναμιν, ἀναλαμβάνων δὲ τιμαῖς καὶ φιλοφροσύναις τὸν Κλεομένην παρεθάρρυνεν ὡς μετὰ νεῶν καὶ χρημάτων ἀποστελῶν αὐτὸν εἰς τὴν Ἑλλάδα καὶ καταστήσων εἰς τὴν βασι-

¹ καὶ ζῆν Blass and Ziegler, after Richards.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

is vanquished by his own weakness. For a self-inflicted death ought to be, not flight from action, but an action in itself. For it is shameful to die, as well as to live, for one's self alone. And yet it is to this that thou now invitest me in thine eagerness to be rid of present troubles, though beyond that thou wilt effect nothing that is honourable or useful. I, however, think it right that neither thou nor I should abandon our hopes for our country; when these abandon us, death will be very easy if we wish it."

To this Therycion made no reply, but as soon as he got an opportunity to leave Cleomenes, he turned aside along the sea-beach and slew himself.

XXXII. But Cleomenes, putting to sea from Aegialia, landed in Libya, and under the escort of the royal officials came to Alexandria. After coming into the presence of Ptolemy, at first he met with only ordinary and moderate kindness from him; but when he had given proof of his sentiments and shown himself to be a man of good sense, and when, in his daily intercourse, his Laconian simplicity retained the charm which a free spirit imparts, while he in no wise brought shame upon his noble birth or suffered the blows of Fortune to bow him down, but showed himself more winning than those whose conversation sought only to please and flatter, then Ptolemy was filled with great respect for him, and deeply repented that he had neglected such a man and abandoned him to Antigonus, who had thereby won great glory and power. Ptolemy therefore sought to regain Cleomenes by honours and kindnesses, and kept encouraging him with assurances that he would send him back to Greece with ships and treasure and restore

3 λείαν. ἐδίδου δὲ καὶ σύνταξιν αὐτῷ τέσσαρα καὶ εἴκοσι τάλαντα καθ' ἕκαστον ἐνιαυτόν. ἀφ' ὧν ἐκεῖνος αὐτὸν καὶ τοὺς φίλους εὐτελῶς καὶ σωφρόνως διοικῶν, τὰ πλεῖστα κατανήλισκεν εἰς φιλανθρωπίας καὶ μεταδόσεις τῶν ἀπὸ τῆς Ἑλλάδος εἰς Αἴγυπτον ἐκπεπτωκότων.

- XXXIII. Ὁ μὲν οὖν πρεσβύτερος Πτολεμαῖος πρὶν ἐκτελέσαι τῷ Κλεομένει τὴν ἐκπεμψιν ἐτελεύτησε· τῆς δὲ βασιλείας εὐθὺς εἰς πολλὴν ἀσέλγειαν καὶ παροιμίαν καὶ γυναικοκρατίαν
- 2 ἐμπεσοῦσης ἡμελεῖτο καὶ τὰ τοῦ Κλεομένου. ὁ μὲν γὰρ βασιλεὺς αὐτὸς οὕτω διέφθαρτο τὴν ψυχὴν ὑπὸ γυναικῶν καὶ πότων ὥστε, ὅποτε νήφος μάλιστα καὶ σπουδαιότατος αὐτοῦ γένοιτο, τελετὰς τελεῖν καὶ τύμπανον ἔχων ἐν τοῖς βασιλείοις ἀγείρειν, τὰ δὲ μέγιστα τῆς ἀρχῆς πράγματα διοικεῖν Ἀγαθόκλειαν τὴν ἐρωμένην τοῦ βασιλέως καὶ τὴν ταύτης μητέρα καὶ πορνοβοσκὸν
- 3 Οἰνάνθην. ὅμως δ' οὖν ἔδοξέ τις ἐν ἀρχῇ καὶ τοῦ Κλεομένου χρειὰ γεγονέναι. δεδιὼς γὰρ Μάγαν τὸν ἀδελφὸν Πτολεμαῖος, ὡς ἰσχύοντα διὰ τῆς μητρὸς ἐν τῷ στρατιωτικῷ, τὸν Κλεομένη προσελάμβανε καὶ μετεδίδου τῶν ἀπορρήτων συνεδρίων, βουλευόμενος ἀνελεῖν τὸν ἀδελφόν. ὁ δέ, καίπερ ἀπάντων τοῦτο πράττειν κελευόντων, μόνος ἀπηγόρευσεν, εἰπὼν ὡς μᾶλλον, εἰ δυνατὸν ἦν, ἔδει φύσαι τῷ βασιλεῖ πλείονας ἀδελφοὺς πρὸς ἀσφάλειαν καὶ διαμονὴν τῶν πραγμάτων. Σωσιβίου δὲ τοῦ πλείστου ἐν τοῖς φίλοις δυναμένου φήσαντος οὐκ εἶναι τὰ τῶν μισθοφόρων αὐτοῖς βέβαια τοῦ Μάγα ζῶντος, ἀμελεῖν ἐκέλευσεν ὁ Κλεομένης

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

him to his kingdom. He also gave him an annual pension of twenty-four talents. With this money Cleomenes maintained himself and his friends in a simple and modest manner, and spent the greater part in good offices and contributions to the refugees from Greece who were in Egypt.

XXXIII. Well, then, the elder Ptolemy¹ died before sending Cleomenes off as he had promised; and since the court at once plunged into excessive wantonness and drunkenness, and women wielded the power, the affairs of Cleomenes were neglected. For the king himself was so corrupted in spirit by wine and women that, in his soberest and most serious moments, he would celebrate religious rites and head processions in his palace, timbrel in hand, while the most important affairs of the government were managed by Agathocleia, the mistress of the king, her mother, and a pimp, Oenanthe. But in spite of all this, at the outset Cleomenes seemed to be of some use. For Ptolemy was afraid of his brother Magas, believing that Magas had a strong following among the soldiers owing to his mother's influence, and he therefore took Cleomenes into his following and gave him a place in his privy council, all the while plotting to kill his brother. But Cleomenes, although all other counsellors urged the king to take this step, alone advised against it, saying that it were better, were it possible, to get the king more brothers to increase the security and stability of his affairs. And when Sosibius, who had the most influence among the king's ministers, declared that they could not be sure of the mercenaries as long as Magas was alive, Cleomenes bade him have no concern on that

¹ Ptolemy III., surnamed Euergetes, died in 220 B.C., and was followed by Ptolemy IV., surnamed Philopator.

ἔνεκά γε τούτου· πλείους γὰρ ἢ τρισχιλίους τῶν ξένων εἶναι Πελοποννησίους προσέχοντας αὐτῷ, 5 κὰν μόνον νεύση, προθύμως μετὰ τῶν ὄπλων παρεσομένους. οὗτος ὁ λόγος τότε μὲν οὐ μικρὰν τῷ Κλεομένει καὶ πίστιν εὐνοίας καὶ δόκησιν ἰσχύος προσέθηκεν, ὕστερον δέ, τοῦ Πτολεμαίου τῆς ἀσθενείας ἐπιτεινούσης τὴν δειλίαν, καὶ καθ-6 ἀπερ εἴωθεν ἐν τῷ μηδὲν φρονεῖν, τοῦ πάντα δεδοικέναι καὶ πᾶσιν ἀπιστεῖν ἀσφαλεστάτου δοκοῦντος εἶναι, φοβερὸν ἐποίει τὸν Κλεομένη τοῖς αὐλικοῖς, ὡς ἰσχύοντα παρὰ τοῖς ξένοις· καὶ πολλῶν ἦν ἀκούειν λεγόντων ὅτι “Οὗτος ὁ λέων ἐν τούτοις τοῖς προβάτοις ἀναστρέφεται.” τῷ γὰρ ὄντι τοιοῦτον διέφαιεν ἦθος ἐν τοῖς βασιλικοῖς, ὑποβλέπων ἀτρέμα καὶ παρεπισκοπῶν τὰ 821 πραττόμενα.

XXXIV. Ναῦς μὲν οὖν αἰτῶν καὶ στρατιὰν ἀπέπε· πυνθανόμενος δὲ τεθνῦναι τὸν Ἄντιγονον, Αἰτωλικῶ δὲ πολέμῳ συμπεπλέχθαι τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς, τὰ δὲ πράγματα ποθεῖν αὐτὸν καὶ παρακαλεῖν,¹ ἐν ταραχῇ καὶ διασπασμῷ τῆς
 Πελοποννήσου γεγενημένης, ἠξίου μὲν μόνος ἀπο-2 σταλῆναι μετὰ τῶν φίλων, ἔπειθε δὲ οὐδένα, τοῦ μὲν βασιλέως οὐκ εἰσακούοντος, ἀλλ’ ἐν γυναιξὶ καὶ θιάσοις καὶ κώμοις συνέχοντος ἑαυτὸν, ὁ δὲ τῶν ὄλων προεστηκῶς καὶ προβουλεύων Σωσίβιος μένοντα μὲν τὸν Κλεομένη παρὰ γνώμην ἠγεῖτο δυσμεταχείριστον εἶναι καὶ φοβερὸν, ἀφε-θέντα δὲ τολμηρὸν, ἄνδρα καὶ μεγαλοπράγμονα καὶ τῆς βασιλείας νοσοῦσης θεατὴν γεγενημένου.

¹ παρακαλεῖν Ziegler ; παρακαλεῖν ἐκεῖσε Bekker : παρακαλεῖν ἐκεῖνον (with the MSS.).

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

point at least; for more than three thousand of the mercenaries were Peloponnesians and attached to himself, and if he but gave them a nod they would readily come to his side in arms. At the time this speech won for Cleomenes no little faith in his good will and belief in his strength; but afterwards, when Ptolemy's weakness intensified his cowardice, and, as is wont to happen where there is no sound judgment, his best course seemed to him to lie in fearing everybody and distrusting all men, it led the courtiers to be afraid of Cleomenes, on the ground that he had a strong following among the mercenaries; and many of them were heard to say: "There goes the lion up and down among these sheep." And such, in fact, he clearly was among the courtiers, eyeing with quiet contempt and closely watching what was going on.

XXXIV. For ships, therefore, and an army, he gave up asking; but on learning that Antigonus was dead¹ and that the Achaeans were involved in a war with the Aetolians, and that affairs yearned and called for him now that Peloponnesus was rent asunder and in confusion, he demanded to be sent away with his friends merely; but he could persuade no one. The king would not give him a hearing, but was absorbed with women and Dionysiac routs and revels; and Sosibius, the prime minister and chief counsellor, thought that if Cleomenes remained against his will he might be hard to manage, indeed, and an object of fear, but that if he were sent away he would make some bold attempt, being a man of large undertakings, and one who had been an eye-witness of the distempers of the realm.

¹ Cf. chapter xxx. 2.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

3 οὐδὲ γὰρ αἱ δωρεαὶ κατεπραῦνον αὐτόν, ἀλλ' ὥσπερ τὸν Ἄπιν ἐν ἀφθόνοις δαισιώμενον καὶ τρυφᾶν δοκοῦντα τοῦ κατὰ φύσιν βίου καὶ δρόμων ἀφέτων καὶ σκιρτήσεων ἕμερος ἔχει, καὶ δηλὸς ἐστὶ δυσανασχετῶν τὴν ἐν ταῖς χερσὶ τῶν ἱερέων διατριβήν, οὕτως ἐκείνον οὐδὲν ἤρεσκε τῶν μαλθακῶν,

ἀλλὰ φθινύθεσκε φίλον κῆρ,

ὥσπερ Ἀχιλλεύς,

αὐθι μένων, ποθέεσκε δ' αὐτὴν τε πτόλεμόν τε.

XXXV. Τοιοῦτων δὲ τῶν κατ' αὐτὸν ὄντων πραγμάτων ἀφικνεῖται Νικαγόρας ὁ Μεσσήσιος εἰς Ἀλεξάνδρειαν, ἀνὴρ μισῶν μὲν τὸν Κλεομένην, προσποιούμενος δὲ φίλος εἶναι· χωρίον δὲ ποτε καλὸν αὐτῷ πεπρακὼς καὶ δι' ἀσχολίαν, ὡς ἔοικε, διὰ πολέμους οὐκ ἀπειληφῶς τὸ ἀργύριον. τοῦτον οὖν ἐκβαίνοντα τότε τῆς ὀλκάδος ἰδὼν ὁ Κλεομένης (ἔτυχε γὰρ ἐν τῇ κρηπίδι τοῦ λιμένος περιπατῶν) ἠσπάζετο προθύμως καὶ τίς αὐτὸν 2 εἰς Αἴγυπτον ἄγοι πρόφασις ἠρώτα. τοῦ δὲ Νικαγόρου φιλοφρόνως ἀντασπαζομένου καὶ φήσαντος ἵππους ἄγειν τῷ βασιλεῖ καλοῦς τῶν πολεμιστηρίων, γελάσας ὁ Κλεομένης, “Ἐβουλόμην ἄν,” ἔφη, “σε μᾶλλον ἤκειν ἄγοντα σαμβυκιστρίας καὶ κιναίδους· ταῦτα γὰρ νῦν μάλιστα κατεπείγει τὸν βασιλέα.” καὶ ὁ Νικαγόρας τότε μὲν ἐμειδίασεν· ἡμέραις δὲ ὕστερον ὀλίγαις ὑπομνήσας τοῦ χωρίου τὸν Κλεομένην νῦν γοῦν ἐδεῖτο τὴν τιμὴν ἀπολαβεῖν, ὡς οὐκ ἂν ἐνοχλήσας,

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

For not even gifts would soften him, but just as the sacred bull Apis, though living in plenty and believed to be having a luxurious time, feels a desire for the life that was his by nature, for coursings without restraint, and leaps and bounds, and is manifestly disgusted with his treatment at the hands of the priests, so Cleomenes took no pleasure in his life of ease and luxury,

—“but kept pining away in his dear heart,”

like Achilles,¹

“As he lingered there, and kept yearning for war-cry and battle.”

XXXV. While matters stood thus with him, Nicagoras the Messenian came to Alexandria, a man who hated Cleomenes, but pretended to be a friend. He had at one time sold Cleomenes a fine estate, and owing to the constant demands of war upon the king, as it would seem, had not received the money for it. And so now, when Cleomenes, who chanced to be taking a walk along the quay, saw Nicagoras landing from his vessel, he greeted him heartily and asked what errand brought him to Egypt. Nicagoras returned his greeting in a friendly manner, and said that he was bringing horses for the king, some fine ones for use in war. At this, Cleomenes gave a laugh and said: “I could wish that thou hadst rather brought sambuca-girls and catamites; for these now most interest the king.” At the time Nicagoras merely smiled; but a few days later he reminded Cleomenes of the estate, and asked that now at any rate he might get the money for it, saying that he would not have troubled him about the matter if he had not

¹ Iliad, i. 491 f.

εἰ μὴ περὶ τὴν τῶν φορτίων διάθεσιν μετρίως¹ 3 ἐζημιούτο. τοῦ δὲ Κλεομένουσ φήσαντος οὐδὲν αὐτῷ περιεῖναι τῶν δεδομένων, λυπηθεῖσ ὁ Νικαγόρασ ἐκφέρει τῷ Σωσιβίῳ τὸ σκῶμμα τοῦ Κλεομένουσ. ὁ δὲ καὶ τοῦτο μὲν ἀσμένωσ ἔλαβεν, ἐκ δὲ μείζονοσ αἰτίας τὸν βασιλέα παροξύναι ζητῶν ἔπεισε τὸν Νικαγόραν ἐπιστολὴν γράψαντα κατὰ τοῦ Κλεομένουσ ἀπολιπεῖν, ὡσ ἐγνωκότοσ, εἰ 4 ρήνην κατασχεῖν. ὁ μὲν οὖν Νικαγόρασ ταῦτα γράψασ ἀπέπλευσε· τοῦ δὲ Σωσιβίου μετὰ τέσ-σαρασ ἡμέρασ τὴν ἐπιστολὴν πρὸσ τὸν Πτολεμαῖον ἀνευγκόντοσ ὡσ ἀρτίωσ αὐτῷ δεδομένην καὶ παροξύναντοσ τὸ μειράκιον, ἔδοξεν εἰσ οἰκίαν μεγάλην εἰσαγαγεῖν τὸν Κλεομένην, καὶ τὴν ἄλλην ὁμοίωσ παρέχοντασ δίαιταν ἐξόδων εἶργειν.

XXXVI. Ἦν μὲν οὖν καὶ ταῦτα λυπηρὰ τῷ
 Κλεομένει, μοχθηροτέρασ δὲ τὰσ περὶ τοῦ μέλλοντοσ ἐλπίδασ ἔσχεν ἐκ τοιαύτησ συντυχίασ.
 Πτολεμαῖοσ ὁ Χρυσέρμου φίλοσ ὦν τοῦ βασιλέωσ πάντα τὸν χρόνον ἐπιεικῶσ διείλεκτο τῷ Κλεομένει, καὶ συνήθειά τισ ὑπῆρχεν αὐτοῖσ καὶ παρ-2 ρησία πρὸσ ἀλλήλοσ. οὗτοσ οὖν τότε, τοῦ Κλεομένουσ δεηθέντοσ ἐλθεῖν πρὸσ αὐτόν, ἦλθε μὲν καὶ διελέχθη μέτρια, τὸ ὑποπτον ἐξαιρῶν καὶ περὶ τοῦ βασιλέωσ ἀπολογούμενοσ· ἀπιὼν δὲ πάλιν ἐκ τῆσ οἰκίασ, καὶ μὴ προνοήσασ ἐξόπισθεν ἄχρι τῶν θυρῶν ἐπακολουθοῦντα τὸν Κλεομένην, πικρῶσ ἐπετίμησε τοῖσ φύλαξιν ὡσ δὴ μέγα θηρίον καὶ δυστήρητον ἀμελῶσ φυλάττουσι καὶ 822

¹ μετρίωσ Bekker and Blass correct to οὐ μετρίωσ, after Reiske.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

met with a considerable loss in the disposition of his cargo; and when Cleomenes declared that he had nothing left of the moneys that had been given him, Nicagoras was vexed, and reported to Sosibius the pleasantry of Cleomenes. Sosibius was glad to get even this matter, but he desired to have some larger accusation with which to exasperate the king, and therefore persuaded Nicagoras to write and leave behind him a letter accusing Cleomenes of planning, in case he got triremes and soldiers from Ptolemy, to seize Cyrene. So Nicagoras wrote a letter to this effect and sailed away; and Sosibius, after four days had passed, brought the letter to Ptolemy, pretending that he had just received it, and so exasperated the young man that it was decided to remove Cleomenes into a large house, and while treating him in other ways just as before, to prevent his egress.

XXXVI. Even this usage was grievous to Cleomenes, but his hopes for the future received a greater shock from the following incident. Ptolemy the son of Chrysermus, a friend of King Ptolemy, had all the while been on friendly terms with Cleomenes, and they were quite intimate and outspoken with one another. This Ptolemy, then, now that Cleomenes begged a visit from him, came and conversed in a reasonable way with him, seeking to remove his suspicions and excusing the conduct of the king; but when he was leaving the house and did not perceive that Cleomenes was following on behind him as far as the doors, he bitterly reproached the guards for the careless and easy watch they kept upon a great wild beast that was so hard to keep.

- 3 ραθύμως. τούτων ὁ Κλεομένης αὐτήκοος γενόμενος, καὶ πρὶν αἰσθέσθαι τὸν Πτολεμαῖον ἀναχωρήσας ἔφρασε τοῖς φίλοις. εὐθύς οὖν παντες ἄς πρότερον εἶχον ἐλπίδας ἐκβαλόντες, πρὸς ὄργην ἐβουλεύσαντο τοῦ Πτολεμαίου τὴν ἀδικίαν ἀμυνάμενοι καὶ τὴν ὕβριν ἀξίως τῆς Σπάρτης ἀποθανεῖν, καὶ μὴ περιμένειν ὥσπερ ἱερεῖα πια-4 θέντας κατακοπήναι· δεινὸν γάρ, εἰ τὰς πρὸς Ἀντίγονον, ἄνδρα πολεμιστὴν καὶ δραστήριον, διαλύσεις ὑπεριδὼν Κλεομένης κάθηται μητραγύρτου βασιλέως σχολὴν ἀναμένων; ὅταν πρῶτον ἀπόθηται τὸ τύμπανον καὶ καταπαύσῃ τὸν θίασον, ἀποκτενοῦντος αὐτόν.

- XXXVII. Ἐπεὶ δὲ ἔδοξε ταῦτα καὶ κατὰ τύχην ὁ Πτολεμαῖος εἰς Κάνωβον ἐξώρμησε, πρῶτον μὲν διέδωκαν λόγον ὡς παραλύοιτο τῆς φυλακῆς ὑπὸ τοῦ βασιλέως· ἔπειτα ἔκ τινος ἔθους βασιλικοῦ τοῖς μέλλουσιν ἐξ εἰρκτῆς ἀπολύεσθαι δείπνου τε πεμπομένου καὶ ξενίων, οἱ φίλοι πολλὰ τοιαῦτα τῷ Κλεομένει παρασκευάσαντες ἔξωθεν εἰσέπεμψαν, ἐξαπατῶντες τοὺς φύλακας οἰομένους ὑπὸ τοῦ βασιλέως ἀπεστάλ-
 2 θαι. καὶ γὰρ ἔθνε καὶ μετεδίδου τούτων ἀφθόνως αὐτοῖς, καὶ ἐπιτιθεῖς στεφάνους καὶ κατακλιθεῖς εἰστιάτο μετὰ τῶν φίλων. λέγεται δὲ τάχιον ἢ διεγνώκει πρὸς τὴν πρᾶξιν ὀρμήσαι, συναισθόμενος οἰκέτην ἓνα τῶν συνειδότεων τὴν πρᾶξιν ἔξω παρὰ γυναικὶ κεκοιμημένον ἧς ἦρα. καὶ φοβηθεῖς μῆνυσιν, ἐπειδὴ μέσον ἡμέρας ἦν καὶ τοὺς φύλακας ἤσθετο καθεύδοντας ὑπὸ τῆς μέθης, ἐνδυσάμενος τὸν χιτῶνα καὶ τὴν ῥαφὴν ἐκ τοῦ δεξιοῦ

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

Cleomenes heard this with his own ears, and without Ptolemy's being aware of his presence went back and told his friends. At once, then, they all abandoned the hopes they had been cherishing and wrathfully determined to avenge themselves on Ptolemy for his injustice and insolence, and die in a manner worthy of Sparta, instead of waiting like sacrificial victims to be first fattened and then smitten down. For it was an intolerable thing that Cleomenes, after scorning to come to terms with Antigonus, a man who fought well and wrought much, should sit idly down and await the leisure of a beggarly priest of a king, who, as soon as he could lay aside his timbrel and stop his dancing, would slay him.

XXXVII. Such being their resolve, and Ptolemy, as chance would have it, making a visit to Canopus, in the first place word was sent about that Cleomenes had been set free by the king; and next, in view of a custom which the king had of sending presents and a banquet to those who were going to be released from imprisonment, the friends of Cleomenes in the city prepared and sent in to him an abundance of such things, thus completely deceiving the guards, who thought the king had sent them. For Cleomenes made a sacrifice and gave the guards a bountiful share of his provisions, and then took his place at table with garlands on his head and feasted with his friends. We are told, too, that he set out upon his enterprise sooner than he had intended, because he learned that a slave who was privy to it had passed the night outside in company with a mistress. So fearing that his plans would be revealed, when noon came and he perceived that his guards were sleeping off their wine, he put on his tunic, opened the seam

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

παραλυσάμενος ὤμου, γυμνῶ τῷ ξίφει μετὰ τῶν φίλων ἐξεπήδησεν ἐνεσκευασμένων ὁμοίως, δεκα-3 τριῶν ὄντων. Ἰππίτας δὲ χωλὸς ὢν τῇ μὲν πρώτη συνεξέπεσεν ὀρμῇ προθύμως, ὡς δὲ ἑώρα σχολαίτερον πορευομένους δι' αὐτόν, ἐκέλευσεν ἀνελεῖν καὶ μὴ διαφθεῖρειν τὴν πρῶξιν, ἄχρηστον ἄνθρωπον περιμένοντας. ἔτυχε δὲ τῶν Ἀλεξαν-δρέων τις ἵππον ἄγων παρὰ τὰς θύρας· τοῦτον ἀφελόμενοι καὶ τὸν Ἰππίταν ἀναβαλόντες, ἐφέ-4 ροντο δρόμῳ διὰ τῶν στενωπῶν καὶ παρεκάλουν τὸν ὄχλον ἐπὶ τὴν ἐλευθερίαν. τοῖς δὲ τοσοῦτον, ὡς ἔοικεν, ἀλκῆς μετῆν ὅσον ἐπαινεῖν καὶ θαυμά-ζειν τὴν τοῦ Κλεομένουσ τὸλμαν, ἀκολουθεῖν δὲ καὶ βοηθεῖν οὐδεὶς ἐθάρρει.

Τὸν μὲν οὖν τοῦ Χρυσέρμου Πτολεμαῖον ἐκ τῆς αὐλῆς ἐξίόντα τρεῖς εὐθύς προσπεσόντες ἀπέ-κτειναν· ἐτέρου δὲ Πτολεμαίου τοῦ φυλάσσαντος τὴν πόλιν ἐλαύνοντος ἄρματι πρὸς αὐτούς, ὀρμή-σαντες ἐναντίοι τοὺς μὲν ὑπηρέτας καὶ δορυφόρους διεσκέδασαν, αὐτὸν δὲ κατασπάσαντες ἀπὸ τοῦ 5 ἄρματος ἀπέκτειναν. εἶτα πρὸς τὴν ἄκραν ἐχώρουν, ἀναρρήξαι διανοούμενοι τὸ δεσμωτήριον καὶ χρήσασθαι τῷ πλήθει τῶν δεδεμένων. ἔφθασαν δὲ φραξάμενοι καλῶς οἱ φύλακες, ὥστε καὶ ταύτης ἀποκρουσθέντα τῆς πείρας τὸν Κλεομένη διαφέρεσθαι καὶ πλανᾶσθαι κατὰ τὴν πόλιν, οὐδενὸς αὐτῷ προσχωροῦντος, ἀλλὰ φευγόντων 6 καὶ φοβουμένων ἀπάντων. οὕτως οὖν ἀποστὰς καὶ πρὸς τοὺς φίλους εἰπών, “Οὐδὲν ἦν ἄρα θαυμαστὸν ἄρχειν γυναῖκας ἀνθρώπων φευγόντων τὴν ἐλευθερίαν,” παρεκάλεσε πάντας ἀξίως αὐτοῦ καὶ τῶν πεπραγμένων τελευτᾶν. καὶ πρῶτος μὲν

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

over his right shoulder, and with drawn sword sprang forth, accompanied by his friends, who were likewise arrayed, thirteen in number. Hippitas, who was lame, joined in making the first onset with all his soul, but when he saw that he was a hindrance to the progress of his companions, he bade them kill him, and not ruin the enterprise by waiting for a useless fellow. As it chanced, however, an Alexandrian was leading a horse past the doors, so they seized the animal, put Hippitas on its back, and then rushed at full speed through the narrow streets of the city, summoning the throng to win their freedom. These had enough courage, as it would seem, to admire and praise the daring of Cleomenes, but not a man was bold enough to follow and help him.

Well, then, as Ptolemy the son of Chrysermus was coming out of the palace, three of them straightway fell upon him and slew him; and as another Ptolemy, who had the city in his charge, was driving towards them in a chariot, they rushed to meet him, scattered his servants and mercenaries, dragged him from his chariot, and slew him. Then they proceeded to the citadel, purposing to break open the prison and avail themselves of the multitude of prisoners. But the guards were too quick for them and barred the way securely, so that Cleomenes, baffled in this attempt also, roamed up and down through the city, not a man joining with him but everybody filled with fear and flying from him. So, then, he desisted from his attempt, and saying to his friends, "It is no wonder, after all, that women rule over men who run away from freedom," he called upon them all to die in a manner worthy of their king and their past achievements. So Hippitas first, at 7 Μεγάλην πόλιν καταλαβόντος. τοῦτον δὲ κάλλιστον ὥρα καὶ πρὸς τὴν ἀγωγὴν εὐφύεστατον τῶν νέων γενόμενον ἐρώμενον ἐσχηκῶς ὁ βασιλεὺς ἐκέλευσεν, ὅταν αὐτὸν τε καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους ἴδη πεπτωκότας, οὕτω τελευτᾶν. ἤδη δὲ κειμένων 823 ἀπάντων ἐπιπορευόμενος ὁ Παντεὺς καὶ τῷ ξιφιδίῳ παραπτώμενος καθ' ἕκαστον ἀπεπειρᾶτο μή τις διαλαυθάνοι ζῶν. ἐπεὶ δὲ καὶ τὸν Κλεομένη νύξας παρὰ τὸ σφυρὸν εἶδε συστρέψαντα τὸ πρόσωπον, ἐφίλησεν αὐτόν, εἶτα παρεκάθισε· καὶ τέλος ἔχοντος ἤδη περιβαλὼν τὸν νεκρὸν ἑαυτὸν ἐπικατέσφαξε.

Ἰππίτας ὑπὸ τῶν νεωτέρων τινὸς ἐπλήγη δεηθείς, ἔπειτα τῶν ἄλλων ἕκαστος εὐκόλως καὶ ἀδεῶς ἑαυτὸν ἀποσφάττει, πλὴν Παντέως τοῦ πρώτου

XXXVIII. Κλεομένης μὲν οὖν ἐκκαίδεκα τῆς Σπάρτης βασιλεύσας ἔτη καὶ τοιοῦτος ἀνὴρ γενόμενος οὕτω κατέστρεψε. τῆς δὲ φήμης εἰς τὴν πόλιν ὄλην σκεδασθείσης ἢ μὲν Κρατησίκλεια, καίπερ οὔσα γενναία γυνή, προὔδωκε τὸ φρόνημα πρὸς τὸ τῆς συμφορᾶς μέγεθος, καὶ περιβαλοῦσα
 2 τὰ παιδιά τοῦ Κλεομένους ὠλοφύρετο. τῶν δὲ παιδίων τὸ πρεσβύτερον ἀποπηδήσαν, οὐδενὸς ἂν προσδοκῆσαντος, ἀπὸ τοῦ τέγους ἐπὶ κεφαλὴν ἔρριψεν ἑαυτό· καὶ κακῶς μὲν ἔσχεν, οὐ μὴν ἀπέθανεν, ἀλλ' ἤρθη βοῶν καὶ ἀγανακτοῦν ἐπὶ τῷ διακωλύεσθαι τελευτᾶν.

Ὁ δὲ Πτολεμαῖος, ὡς ἔγνω ταῦτα, προσέταξε τὸ μὲν σῶμα τοῦ Κλεομένους κρεμάσαι καταβυρσώσαντας, ἀποκτεῖναι δὲ τὰ παιδιά καὶ τὴν
 3 μητέρα καὶ τὰς περὶ αὐτὴν γυναῖκας. ἐν δὲ

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

his own request, was smitten down by one of the younger men, then each of the others calmly and cheerfully slew himself, except Panteus, the man who led the way in the capture of Megalopolis.¹ He had once been the king's favourite, because in his youth he was most fair, and in his young manhood most amenable to the Spartan discipline; and now his orders were to wait until the king and the rest of the band were dead, and then to die himself. At last all the rest lay prostrate on the ground, and Panteus, going up to each one in turn and pricking him with his sword, sought to discover whether any spark of life remained. When he pricked Cleomenes in the ankle and saw that his face twitched, he kissed him, and then sat down by his side; at last the end came, and after embracing the king's dead body, he slew himself upon it.

XXXVIII. Such, then, was the end of Cleomenes, who had been for sixteen years king of Sparta, and had shown himself the man whom I have described. The report of his death spread over the entire city, and Cratesicleia, although she was a woman of noble spirit, lost her composure in view of the magnitude of her misfortunes, and throwing her arms about the children of Cleomenes, wailed and lamented. But the elder of the two boys, forestalling all prevention, sprang away and threw himself headlong from the roof; he was badly injured, but did not die, and was taken up crying out resentfully because he was not permitted to end his life.

But Ptolemy, when he learned of these things, gave orders that the body of Cleomenes should be flayed and hung up, and that his children, his mother, and the women that were with her, should be killed.

¹ See chapter xxiii. 4.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ταύταις ἦν καὶ Παντέως γυνὴ καλλίστη καὶ γεν-ναιοτάτη τὸ εἶδος. ἔτι δὲ αὐτοῖς νεογάμοις οὖσιν ἐν ἀκμαῖς ἐρώτων αἱ τύχαι συνέβησαν. εὐθύς μὲν οὖν συνεκπλευσαι τῷ Παντεῖ βουλομένην αὐτὴν οὐκ εἶασαν οἱ γονεῖς, ἀλλὰ βία κατακλεί-4 σαντες ἐφύλαττον· ὀλίγῳ δὲ ὕστερον ἵππον ἑαυτῇ παρασκευάσασα καὶ χρυσίδιον οὐ πολὺ νυκτὸς ἀπέδρα, καὶ διώξασα συντόνως ἐπὶ Ταίναρον, ἐκείθεν ἐπέβη νεὸς εἰς Αἴγυπτον πλεύουσης· καὶ διεκομίσθη πρὸς τὸν ἄνδρα καὶ συνδιήνεγκεν αὐτῷ τὸν ἐπὶ ξένης βίον ἀλύπως καὶ ἰλαρῶς.
 αὕτη τότε τὴν Κρατησίκλειαν ὑπὸ τῶν στρατιω-τῶν ἐξαγομένην ἐχειραγῶγει, τὸν τε πέπλον αὐτῆς ὑπολαμβάνουσα, καὶ θαρρεῖν παρακαλούσα μηδὲν τι μηδ' αὐτὴν ἐκπεπληγμένην τὸν 5 θάνατον, ἀλλ' ἐν μόνον αἰτουμένην, πρὸ τῶν παιδίων ἀποθανεῖν. ἐπεὶ δὲ ἦλθον εἰς τὸν τόπον ἐν ᾧ ταῦτα δρᾶν εἰώθεσαν οἱ ὑπηρέται, πρῶτον μὲν τὰ παῖδια, τῆς Κρατησικλείας ὀρώσης, ἔσ-φαττον, εἶτα ἐκείνην, ἐν τούτῳ μόνον ἐπὶ τηλι-κούτοις φθεγξαμένην πάθεισιν, “ὦ τέκνα, ποῖ ἐμόλετε”; ἡ δὲ Παντέως γυνή, περιζωσαμένη τὸ ἱμάτιον, εὖρωστος οὔσα καὶ μεγάλη τῶν ἀπο-θνησκουσῶν ἐκάστην σιωπῇ καὶ μεθ' ἡσυχίας ἐθεράπευε καὶ περιέστελλεν ἐκ τῶν ἐνδεχομένων.
 6 τέλος δὲ μετὰ πάσας ἑαυτὴν κοσμήσασα, καὶ καταγαγούσα τὴν περιβολήν, καὶ μηδένα προσελθεῖν εἶασασα μηδὲ ἰδεῖν ἄλλον ἢ τὸν ἐπὶ τῆς σφαγῆς τεταγμένον, ἡρωϊκῶς κατέστρεψεν, οὐδενὸς δεηθείσα κοσμοῦντος καὶ περικαλύπτουτος μετὰ τὴν τελευταίην. οὕτω παρέμεινε τῷ θανάτῳ τὸ κόσμιον τῆς ψυχῆς, καὶ διεφύλαξεν ἦν ζῶσα φρουρὰν τῷ σώματι περιέθηκεν.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

Among these women was the wife of Panteus, most noble and beautiful to look upon. The pair were still but lately married, and their misfortunes came upon them in the hey-day of their love. Her parents, indeed, would not permit her to sail away with Panteus immediately, although she wished to do so, but shut her up and kept her under constraint; a little later, however, she procured herself a horse and a small sum of money, ran away by night, made all speed to Taenarum, and there embarked upon a ship bound for Egypt. She was conveyed to her husband, and with him bore their life in a strange land without complaint and cheerfully. She it was who now took the hand of Cratesicleia as she was led forth by the soldiers, held up her robe for her, and bade her be of good courage. And Cratesicleia herself was not one whit dismayed at death, but asked one favour only, that she might die before the children died. However, when they were come to the place of execution, first the children were slain before her eyes, and then Cratesicleia herself was slain, making but this one cry at sorrows so great: "O children, whither are ye gone?" Then the wife of Panteus, girding up her robe, vigorous and stately woman that she was, ministered to each of the dying women calmly and without a word, and laid them out for burial as well as she could. And finally, after all were cared for, she arrayed herself, let down her robes from about her neck, and suffering no one besides the executioner to come near or look upon her, bravely met her end, and had no need of anyone to array or cover up her body after death. Thus her decorum of spirit attended her in death, and she maintained to the end that watchful care of her body which she had set over it in life.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

XXXIX. Ἡ μὲν οὖν Λακεδαίμων, ἐφαμίλλως ἀγωνισαμένη τῷ γυναικείῳ δράματι πρὸς τὸ ἀνδρεῖον, ἐν τοῖς ἐσχάτοις καιροῖς ἐπέδειξε τὴν ἀρετὴν ὑβρισθῆναι μὴ δυναμένην ὑπὸ τῆς τύχης. ὀλίγαις δὲ ὕστερον ἡμέραις οἱ τὸ σῶμα τοῦ Κλεομένουσ ἀνεσταυρωμένον παραφυλάττοντες εἶδον εὐμεγέθη δράκοντα τῇ κεφαλῇ περιπεπλεγμένον καὶ ἀποκρύπτοντα τὸ πρόσωπον, ὥστε μηδὲν
2 ὄρνεον ἐφίπτασθαι σαρκοφάγον. ἐκ δὲ τούτου δεισιδαιμονία προσέπεσε τῷ βασιλεῖ καὶ φόβος, ἄλλων καθαρμῶν ταῖς γυναιξίν ἀρχὴν παρασχών, ὡς ἀνδρὸς ἀνηρημένου θεοφιλοῦσ καὶ κρείττονος τὴν φύσιν. οἱ δὲ Ἀλεξανδρεῖσ καὶ προσετρέποντο φοιτῶντες ἐπὶ τὸν τόπον, ἦρωα τὸν Κλεομένην καὶ θεῶν παῖδα προσαγορεύοντες, ἄχρι οὗ
3 κατέπαυσαν αὐτοῦσ οἱ σοφώτεροι, διδόντες λόγον ὡσ μελίττασ μὲν βόεσ, σφήκασ δὲ ἵπποισ κατασαπέντεσ ἐξανθοῦσι, κάνθαροισ δὲ ὄνων τὸ αὐτὸ παθόντων ζωογονοῦνται, τὰ δὲ ἀνθρώπινα σώματα, τῶν περὶ τὸν μυελὸν ἰχώρων συρροήν τινα καὶ σύστασιν ἐν ἑαυτοῖσ λαβόντων, ὄφεισ ἀναδίδωσι. καὶ τοῦτο κατιδόντεσ οἱ παλαιοὶ μάλιστα τῶν ζώων τὸν δράκοντα τοῖσ ἦρωσι συνφκείωσαν.

824

AGIS AND CLEOMENES

XXXIX. So, then, Sparta, bringing her women's tragedy into emulous competition with that of her men, showed the world that in the last extremity Virtue cannot be outraged by Fortune. And a few days afterwards those who were keeping watch upon the body of Cleomenes where it hung, saw a serpent of great size coiling itself about the head and hiding away the face so that no ravening bird of prey could light upon it. In consequence of this, the king was seized with superstitious fear, and thus gave the women occasion for various rites of purification, since they felt that a man had been taken off who was of a superior nature and beloved of the gods. And the Alexandrians actually worshipped him, coming frequently to the spot and addressing Cleomenes as a hero and a child of the gods; but at last the wiser men among them put a stop to this by explaining that, as putrefying oxen breed bees, and horses wasps, and as beetles are generated in asses which are in the like condition of decay, so human bodies, when the juices about the marrow collect together and coagulate, produce serpents. And it was because they observed this that the ancients associated the serpent more than any other animal with heroes.

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS
GRACCHUS .

ΤΙΒΕΡΙΟΣ ΚΑΙ ΓΑΙΟΣ ΓΡΑΙΧΟΙ

Τ. ΓΡΑΓΧΟΣ

Ι. Ἡμεῖς δὲ τὴν πρώτην ἱστορίαν ἀποδεω-κότες ἔχομεν οὐκ ἐλάττονα πάθη τούτων ἐν τῇ Ῥωμαϊκῇ συζυγίᾳ θεωρῆσαι, τὸν Τιβερίου καὶ
Γαίου βίον ἀντιπαραβάλλοντες. οὗτοι Τιβερίου Γράγχου παῖδες ἦσαν, ᾧ τιμητῆ τε Ῥωμαίων γενομένῳ καὶ δις ὑπατεύσαντι καὶ θριάμβους δύο καταγαγόντι λαμπρότερον ἦν τὸ ἀπὸ τῆς ἀρετῆς 2 ἀξίωμα. διὸ καὶ τὴν Σκηπίωνος τοῦ καταπολεμήσαντος Ἀντίβαν θυγατέρα Κορνηλίαν, οὐκ ὦν φίλος, ἀλλὰ καὶ διάφορος τῷ ἀνδρὶ γεγονώς, λαβεῖν ἠξιώθη μετὰ τὴν ἐκείνου τελευτήν. λέ-γεται δὲ ποτε συλλαβεῖν αὐτὸν ἐπὶ τῆς κλίνης ζεῦγος δρακόντων, τοὺς δὲ μάντεις σκεψαμένους τὸ τέρας ἄμφω μὲν οὐκ εἶαν ἀνελεῖν οὐδὲ ἀφεῖναι, περὶ δὲ θατέρου διαιρεῖν, ὡς ὁ μὲν ἄρρην τῷ
Τιβερίῳ φέροι θάνατον ἀναιρεθεῖς, ἡ δὲ θήλεια
3 τῇ Κορνηλίᾳ. τὸν οὖν Τιβέριον καὶ φιλοῦντα τὴν γυναῖκα, καὶ μᾶλλον αὐτῷ προσήκειν ὄντι πρεσβυτέρῳ τελευτᾶν ἠγούμενον ἔτι νέας οὔσης ἐκείνης, τὸν μὲν ἄρρενα κτεῖναι τῶν δρακόντων, ἀφεῖναι δὲ τὴν θήλειαν· εἶτα ὕστερον οὐ πολλῷ

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

TIBERIUS GRACCHUS

I. Now that we have duly finished the first part of our story, we have to contemplate fates no less tragic than those of Agis and Cleomenes in the lives of the Roman couple, Tiberius and Caius, which we set in parallel. They were sons of Tiberius Gracchus, who, although he had been censor at Rome, twice consul, and had celebrated two triumphs, derived his more illustrious dignity from his virtue. Therefore, after the death¹ of the Scipio who conquered Hannibal, although Tiberius had not been his friend, but actually at variance with him, he was judged worthy to take Scipio's daughter Cornelia in marriage. We are told, moreover, that he once caught a pair of serpents on his bed, and that the soothsayers, after considering the prodigy, forbade him to kill both serpents or to let both go, but to decide the fate of one or the other of them, declaring also that the male serpent, if killed, would bring death to Tiberius, and the female, to Cornelia. Tiberius, accordingly, who loved his wife, and thought that since she was still young and he was older it was more fitting that he should die, killed the male serpent, but let the female go. A short time afterwards, as the story

¹ In 183 B.C.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

χρόνῳ τελευτήσαι, δεκαδύο παῖδας ἐκ τῆς Κορηλίας αὐτῷ γεγονότας καταλιπόντα.

- 4 Κορηλία δὲ ἀναλαβοῦσα τοὺς παῖδας καὶ τὸν οἶκον, οὕτω σώφρονα καὶ φιλότεκνον καὶ μεγαλόψυχον αὐτὴν παρέσχευεν ὥστε μὴ κακῶς δόξαι βεβουλεῦσθαι τὸν Τιβέριον ἀντὶ τοιαύτης γυναικὸς ἀποθανεῖν ἐλόμενον, ἣ γε καὶ Πτολεμαίου τοῦ βασιλέως κοινουμένου τὸ διάδημα καὶ μνω-5 μένου τὸν γάμον αὐτῆς ἠρνήσατο, καὶ χηρεύουσα τοὺς μὲν ἄλλους ἀπέβαλε παῖδας, μίαν δὲ τῶν θυγατέρων, ἣ Σκηπίωνι τῷ νεωτέρῳ συνώκησε, καὶ δύο υἱούς, περὶ ὧν τάδε γέγραπται, Τιβέριον καὶ Γάϊον, διαγενομένους οὕτω φιλοτίμως ἐξέ-θρεψεν ὥστε πάντων εὐφυστάτους Ῥωμαίων ὁμολογουμένως γεγονότας πεπαιδεῦσθαι δοκεῖν βέλτιον ἢ πεφυκέναι πρὸς ἀρετὴν.

II. Ἐπεὶ δέ, ὥσπερ ἡ τῶν πλασσομένων καὶ γραφομένων Διοσκούρων ὁμοιότης ἔχει τινὰ τοῦ πυκτικοῦ πρὸς τὸν δρομικὸν ἐπὶ τῆς μορφῆς διαφοράν, οὕτω τῶν νεανίσκων ἐκείνων ἐν πολλῇ τῇ πρὸς ἀνδρείαν καὶ σωφροσύνην, ἔτι δὲ ἐλευθεριότητα καὶ λογιότητα καὶ μεγαλοψυχίαν ἐμφερεῖα μεγάλαι περὶ τὰ ἔργα καὶ τὰς πολιτείας οἶον ἐξήνθησαν καὶ διεφάνησαν ἀνομοιότητες, οὐ χειρόν εἶναι μοι δοκεῖ ταύτας προεκθέσθαι.

- 2 Πρῶτον μὲν οὖν ἰδέα προσώπου καὶ βλέμματι
καὶ κινήματι πρᾶος καὶ καταστηματικὸς ἦν ὁ

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

goes, he died,¹ leaving Cornelia with twelve children by him.

Cornelia took charge of the children and of the estate, and showed herself so discreet, so good a mother, and so magnanimous, that Tiberius was thought to have made no bad decision when he elected to die instead of such a woman. For when Ptolemy² the king offered to share his crown with her and sought her hand in marriage, she refused him, and remained a widow. In this state she lost most of her children, but three survived; one daughter, who married Scipio the Younger, and two sons, Tiberius and Caius, whose lives I now write. These sons Cornelia reared with such scrupulous care that although confessedly no other Romans were so well endowed by nature, they were thought to owe their virtues more to education than to nature.

II. Now, just as, in spite of the likeness between Castor and Pollux as they are represented in sculpture and painting, there is a certain difference of shape between the boxer and the runner, so in the case of these young Romans, along with their strong resemblance to one another in bravery and self-command, as well as in liberality, eloquence, and magnanimity, in their actions and political careers great unlikenesses blossomed out, as it were, and came to light. Therefore I think it not amiss to set these forth before going further.

In the first place, then, as regards cast of features and look and bearing, Tiberius was gentle and sedate, ¹ He was consul for the second time in 163 B.C. The year of his death is unknown. This story is told and commented on by Cicero in De divinatione i. 18, 36; ii. 29, 62.

² Probably Ptolemy VI., surnamed Philometor, king of Egypt 181-146 B.C.

Τιβέριος, ἔντογος δὲ καὶ σφοδρὸς ὁ Γαίος, ὥστε καὶ δημηγορεῖν τὸν μὲν ἐν μιᾷ χώρᾳ βεβηκότα κοσμίως, τὸν δὲ Ῥωμαίων πρῶτον ἐπὶ τοῦ βήματος περιπάτω τε χρήσασθαι καὶ περισπάσαι τὴν τήβεννον ἐξ ὤμου λέγοντα, καθάπερ Κλέωνα τὸν Ἀθηναῖον ἰστόρηται περισπάσαι τε τὴν περιβολὴν καὶ τὸν μηρὸν ἀλοῆσαι πρῶτον τῶν 825
 3 δημηγορούντων. ἔπειτα ὁ λόγος τοῦ μὲν Γαίου φοβερὸς καὶ περιπαθῆς εἰς δεινῶσιν, ἡδίων δὲ ὁ τοῦ Τιβερίου καὶ μᾶλλον ἐπαγωγὸς οἴκτου· τῇ δὲ λέξει καθαρὸς καὶ διαπεπονημένος ἀκριβῶς ἐκείνος, ὁ δὲ Γαίου πιθανὸς καὶ γεγανωμένος. οὕτω δὲ καὶ περὶ δίαιταν καὶ τράπεζαν εὐτελής καὶ ἀφελῆς ὁ Τιβέριος, ὁ δὲ Γαίος τοῖς μὲν ἄλλοις παραβαλεῖν σῶφρων καὶ αὐστηρὸς, τῇ δὲ πρὸς τὸν ἀδελφὸν διαφορᾷ νεοπρεπῆς καὶ περιέργος, ὡς
 4 οἱ περὶ Δρούσου ἠλεγχον ὅτι δελφίνας¹ ἀργυροῦς ἐπρίατο τιμῆς εἰς ἐκάστην λίτραν δραχμῶν χιλίων καὶ διακοσίων πεντήκοντα. τῷ δὲ ἦθει κατὰ τὴν τοῦ λόγου διαφορὰν ὁ μὲν ἐπιεικῆς καὶ πρᾶος, ὁ δὲ τραχὺς καὶ θυμοειδής, ὥστε καὶ παρὰ γνώμην ἐν τῷ λέγειν ἐκφερόμενον πολλάκις ὑπ' ὀργῆς τὴν τε φωνὴν ἀποξύνειν καὶ βλασφημεῖν καὶ
 5 συνταράττειν τὸν λόγον. ὅθεν καὶ βοήθημα τῆς ἐκτροπῆς ἐποιήσατο ταύτης τὸν Δικίννιον, οἰκέτην οὐκ ἀνόητον, ὃς ἔχων φωνασκικὸν ὄργανον, ᾧ τοὺς φθόγγους ἀναβιβάζουσιν, ὅπισθεν ἐστῶς τοῦ Γαίου λέγοντος, ὀπηνίκα τραχυνόμενον αἰσθοῖτο τῇ φωνῇ καὶ παραρρηγνύμενον δι' ὀργήν, ἐνεδίδου τόνου μαλακόν, ᾧ τὸ σφοδρὸν εὐθύς ἐκείνος ἄμα

¹ δελφίνας Blass, Fuhr, and Ziegler, with the MSS. : δέλφικας (Delphic tables, or tripods), after Amyot.

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

while Caius was high-strung and vehement, so that even when haranguing the people the one stood composedly in one spot, while the other was the first Roman to walk about upon the rostra and pull his toga off his shoulder as he spoke. So Cleon the Athenian is said to have been the first of the popular orators to strip away his mantle and smite his thigh.¹ In the second place, the speech of Caius was awe-inspiring and passionate to exaggeration, while that of Tiberius was more agreeable and more conducive to pity. The style also of Tiberius was pure and elaborated to a nicety, while that of Caius was persuasive and ornate. So also as regards their table and mode of life, Tiberius was simple and plain, while Caius, although temperate and austere as compared with others, in contrast with his brother was ostentatious and fastidious. Hence men like Drusus found fault with him because he bought silver dolphins at twelve hundred and fifty drachmas the pound. Again, their tempers were no less different than their speech. Tiberius was reasonable and gentle, while Caius was harsh and fiery, so that against his better judgment he was often carried away by anger as he spoke, raising his voice to a high pitch and uttering abuse and losing the thread of his discourse. Wherefore, to guard against such digressions, he employed an intelligent servant, Licinius, who stood behind him when he was speaking, with a sounding instrument for giving the tones of the voice their pitch. Whenever this servant noticed that the voice of Caius was getting harsh and broken with anger, he would give out a soft key-note, on hearing which Caius would at once remit the vehemence of his passion and of τοῦ πάθους καὶ τῆς φωνῆς ἀνιείς ἐπραύνητο καὶ παρείχεν ἑαυτὸν εὐανάκλητον.

¹ See the Nicias, viii. 3.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

III. Αἱ μὲν οὖν διαφοραὶ τοιαῦταί τινες ἦσαν αὐτῶν· ἀνδραγαθία δὲ πρὸς τοὺς πολεμίους καὶ πρὸς τοὺς ὑπηκόους δικαιοσύνη καὶ πρὸς τὰς ἀρχὰς ἐπιμέλεια καὶ πρὸς τὰς ἡδονὰς ἐγκράτεια, ἀπαράλλακτος. ἦν δὲ πρεσβύτερος ἐνιαυτοῖς ἐννέα ὁ Τιβέριος· καὶ τοῦτο τὴν ἑκατέρου πολιτείαν ἀπηρητημένην τοῖς χρόνοις ἐποίησε καὶ τὰς πράξεις οὐχ ἥκιστα διελυμήνατο, μὴ συνακμασαντων μῆδὲ συμβαλόντων εἰς τὸ αὐτὸ τὴν δύναμιν, μεγάλην ἂν ἐξ ἀμφοῖν ὁμοῦ καὶ ἀνυπέβλητον γενομένην. λεκτέον οὖν ἰδίᾳ περὶ ἑκατέρου καὶ περὶ τοῦ πρεσβυτέρου πρότερον.

IV. Ἐκείνος τοίνυν εὐθύς ἐκ παίδων γενόμενος οὕτως ἦν περιβόητος ὥστε τῆς τῶν Αὐγούρων λεγομένης ἱερωσύνης ἀξιωθῆναι δι' ἀρετὴν μᾶλλον ἢ διὰ τὴν εὐγένειαν. ἐδήλωσε δὲ Ἄππιος Κλαύδιος, ἀνὴρ ὑπατικὸς καὶ τιμητικὸς καὶ προγεγραμμένος κατ' ἀξίωμα τῆς Ῥωμαίων βουλῆς καὶ πολὺ φρονήματι τοὺς καθ' αὐτὸν ὑπεραίρων. ἐστιωμένων γὰρ ἐν ταῦτῳ τῶν ἱερέων, προσαγορεύσας τὸν Τιβέριον καὶ φιλοφρονηθεὶς, αὐτὸς ἐμῆτο τῇ θυγατρὶ
 2 νυμφίον. δεξαμένου δὲ ἀσμένως ἐκείνου καὶ τῆς κατανέσεως οὕτω γενομένης, εἰσιὼν ὁ Ἄππιος οἴκαδε πρὸς αὐτὸν ἀπὸ τῆς θύρας εὐθύς ἐκάλει τὴν γυναῖκα μεγάλη τῇ φωνῇ βοῶν, “ὦ Ἀντιστία, τὴν Κλαυδίαν ἡμῶν ἀνδρὶ καθωμολόγηκα.” κακείνη θαυμάσασα, “Τίς,” εἶπεν, “ἢ σπουδῆ ἢ τί τὸ τάχος; εἰ δὲ Τιβέριον αὐτῇ Γράγχον εὐρήκεις¹

¹ εἰ δὲ . . . εὐρήκεις Bekker has εἰ μὴ . . . εὐρίσκεῖς; Blass and Fuhr εἰ μὴ εὐρήκεις (unless thou hadst found), after Stephanus.

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

his speech, grow gentle, and show himself easy to recall.

III. The differences between them, then, were of this nature; but as regards bravery in the face of the enemy, just dealings with subject peoples, scrupulous fidelity in public office, and restraint in pleasurable indulgence, they were exactly alike. Tiberius, however, was nine years older than his brother; and this set a different period for the political activity of each, and more than anything else vitiated their undertakings. They did not rise to eminence at the same time, and so did not combine their powers into one. Such an united power would have proved irresistibly great. We must therefore give an account of each by himself, and of the elder first.

IV. Tiberius, then, as soon as he got past boyhood, was so widely known as to be thought worthy of a place among the priests called Augurs; and this was due to his virtues rather than to his excellent birth, as was clearly shown by Appius Claudius. For Appius, who had been consul and censor, had been made Dean of the Roman senate¹ by virtue of his dignity, and in loftiness of spirit far surpassed his contemporaries, at a banquet of the augurs² addressed Tiberius with words of friendship, and asked him to become the husband of his daughter. Tiberius gladly accepted the invitation, and the betrothal was thus arranged, and when Appius returned home, from the doorway where he stood he called his wife and cried in a loud voice: "Antistia, I have betrothed our Claudia." And Antistia, in amazement, said: "Why so eager, or why so fast? If thou hadst only found

¹ Princeps Senatus.

² Presumably at the induction of Tiberius into office.

3 νυμφίον.” οὐκ ἀγνοῶ δὲ ὅτι τοῦτό τινες ἐπὶ τὸν πατέρα τῶν Γράγχων Τιβέριον καὶ Σκηπίωνα τὸν Ἀφρικανὸν ἀναφέρουσιν, ἀλλ’ οἱ πλείους ὡς ἡμεῖς γράφομεν ἱστοροῦσι, καὶ Πολύβιος μετὰ τὴν Σκηπίωνος Ἀφρικανοῦ τελευτὴν τοὺς οἰκείους φησὶν ἐκ πάντων προκρίναντας τὸν Τιβέριον δοῦναι τὴν Κορηλίαν, ὡς ὑπὸ τοῦ πατρὸς ἀνέκδοτον καὶ ἀνέγγυον ἀπολειφθεῖσαν.

4 Ὁ δ’ οὖν νεώτερος Τιβέριος στρατευόμενος ἐν Λιβύῃ μετὰ τοῦ δευτέρου Σκηπίωνος, ἔχοντος αὐτοῦ τὴν ἀδελφὴν, ὁμοῦ συνδιαιτώμενος ὑπὸ σκηνῆν τῷ στρατηγῷ ταχὺ μὲν αὐτοῦ τὴν φύσιν κατέμαθε, πολλὰ καὶ μεγάλα πρὸς ζῆλον ἀρετῆς καὶ μίμησιν ἐπὶ τῶν πράξεων ἐκφόρουσαν, ταχὺ δὲ τῶν νέων πάντων ἐπρώτευσεν εὐταξία καὶ

5 ἀνδρεία· καὶ τοῦ γε τείχους ἐπέβη τῶν πολεμίων πρῶτος, ὡς φησι Φάννιος, λέγων καὶ αὐτὸς τῷ Τιβερίῳ συνεπιβῆναι καὶ συμμετασχεῖν ἐκείνης τῆς ἀριστείας. πολλὴν δὲ καὶ παρῶν εὐνοίαν εἶχεν ἐν τῷ στρατοπέδῳ καὶ πόθον ἀπαλλαττόμενος αὐτοῦ κατέλιπε.

V. Μετὰ δὲ τὴν στρατείαν ἐκείνην αἰρεθεὶς ταμίας ἔλαχε τῶν ὑπάτων Γαίῳ Μαγκίνῳ συστρατεύειν ἐπὶ Νομαντίνους, ἀνθρώπῳ μὲν οὐ πονηρῷ, βαρυποτμοτάτῳ δὲ Ῥωμαίων στρατηγῷ. διὸ καὶ μᾶλλον ἐν τύχαις παραλόγοις καὶ πράγμασιν ἐναντίοις τοῦ Τιβερίου διέλαμψεν οὐ μόνον τὸ συνετὸν καὶ ἀνδρείον, ἀλλ’, ὃ θαυμάσιον ἦν, αἰδῶς τε πολλὴ καὶ τιμὴ τοῦ ἀρχοντος, ὑπὸ τῶν κακῶν οὐδ’ ἑαυτόν, εἰ στρατηγός ἐστιν, ἐπιγι-
2 νώσκοντος. ἠττηθεὶς γὰρ μάχαις μεγάλαις ἐπε-

826

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

Tiberius Gracchus for betrothal to her!" I am aware that some¹ refer this story to Tiberius the father of the Gracchi and Scipio Africanus Major, but the majority of writers tell it as I do, and Polybius says² that after the death of Scipio Africanus the relatives of Cornelia chose out Tiberius in preference to all others and gave her to him, as one who had been left by her father unaffianced and unbetrothed.

The younger Tiberius, accordingly, serving in Africa under the younger Scipio,³ who had married his sister, and sharing his commander's tent, soon learned to understand that commander's nature (which produced many great incentives towards the emulation of virtue and its imitation in action), and soon led all the young men in discipline and bravery; yes, he was first to scale the enemies' wall, as Fannius says, who writes also that he himself scaled the wall with Tiberius and shared in that exploit. While he remained with the army Tiberius was the object of much good will, and on leaving it he was greatly missed.

V. After this campaign he was elected quaestor, and had the fortune to serve in a war against Numantia under the consul Caius Mancinus,⁴ who was not bad as a man, but most unfortunate of the Romans as a general. Therefore in the midst of unexpected misfortunes and adverse circumstances not only did the sagacity and bravery of Tiberius shine forth all the more, but also—and this was astonishing—the great respect and honour in which he held his commander, who, under the pressure of disasters, forgot even that he was a general. For after he had

¹ Cf. Livy. xxxviii. 57.

² Cf. Polybius, xxxii. 13.

³ In the campaign of 146 B.C., which ended with the destruction of Carthage.

⁴ Consul in 137 B.C.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

χείρησε μὲν ἀναξευγύναι νυκτός, ἐκλιπὼν τὸ στρατόπεδον· αἰσθομένων δὲ τῶν Νομαντίνων καὶ τὸ μὲν στρατόπεδον εὐθύς λαβόντων, τοῖς δὲ ἀνθρώποις ἐπιπεσόντων φεύγουσι καὶ τοὺς ἐσχάτους φονευόντων, τὸ δὲ πᾶν ἐγκυκλουμένων στρατευμα καὶ συνωθούντων εἰς τόπους χαλεποὺς καὶ διάφευξιν οὐκ ἔχοντας, ἀπογνοὺς τὴν ἐκ τοῦ βιάζεσθαι σωτηρίαν ὁ Μαγκίνος ἐπεκηρυκεύετο

3 περὶ σπονδῶν καὶ διαλύσεων πρὸς αὐτούς· οἱ δὲ πιστεύειν ἔφασαν οὐδενὶ πλὴν μόνῳ Τιβερίῳ, καὶ τοῦτον ἐκέλευον ἀποστέλλειν πρὸς αὐτούς. ἐπέπόνθησαν δὲ τοῦτο καὶ δι' αὐτὸν τὸν νεανίσκον (ἦν γὰρ αὐτοῦ πλείστος λόγος ἐπὶ στρατιᾶς), καὶ μεμνημένοι τοῦ πατρὸς Τιβερίου, ὃς πολεμήσας Ἰβηρσι καὶ πολλοὺς καταστρεψάμενος εἰρήνην ἔθετο πρὸς τοὺς Νομαντίνους καὶ ταύτην ἐμπεδούντα τὸν δῆμον ὀρθῶς καὶ δικαίως αἰεὶ παρέσχευ.

4 οὕτω δὴ πεμφθεὶς ὁ Τιβέριος καὶ συγγενόμενος τοῖς ἀνδράσι, καὶ τὰ μὲν πείσας, τὰ δὲ δεξάμενος ἐσπείσατο, καὶ δισμυρίους ἔσωσε περιφανῶς Ῥωμαίων πολίτας, ἄνευ θεραπείας καὶ τῶν ἔξω τάξεως ἐπομένων.

VI. Τὰ δὲ ἐν τῷ χάρακι ληφθέντα χρήματα πάντα κατέσχον οἱ Νομαντῖνοι καὶ διεπόρθησαν. ἐν δὲ τούτοις καὶ πινακίδες ἦσαν τοῦ Τιβερίου, γράμματα καὶ λόγους ἔχουσαι τῆς ταμειυτικῆς ἀρχῆς, ἃς περὶ πολλοῦ ποιούμενος ἀπολαβεῖν, ἤδη τοῦ στρατοῦ προκεχωρηκότος ἀνέστρεψε πρὸς τὴν πόλιν, ἔχων μεθ' ἑαυτοῦ τρεῖς ἢ τέτταρας

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

been defeated in great battles, he attempted to abandon his camp and withdraw his forces by night; but the Numantines became aware of his attempt and promptly seized his camp. Then they fell upon his men as they fled, slew those who were in the rear, encompassed his whole army, and crowded them into regions that were full of difficulties and afforded no escape. Mancinus, despairing of forcing his way to safety, sent heralds to the enemy proposing a truce and terms of peace; but the enemy declared that they had confidence in no Roman save only Tiberius, and ordered that he should be sent to them. They had this feeling towards the young man not only on his own account (for he was held in very high esteem by the Numantine soldiery), but also because they remembered his father Tiberius, who waged war against the Spaniards,¹ and subdued many of them, but made a peace with the Numantines, to the observance of which with integrity and justice he always held the Roman people. So Tiberius was sent and held conference with the enemy, and after getting them to accept some conditions, and himself accepting others, effected a truce, and thereby manifestly saved the lives of twenty thousand Roman citizens, besides attendants and camp followers.

VI. However, all the property captured in the camp was retained by the Numantines and treated as plunder. Among this were also the ledgers of Tiberius, containing written accounts of his official expenses as quaestor. These he was very anxious to recover, and so, when the army was already well on its way, turned back towards the city, attended by

In 180-179 B.C.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- 2 ἐταίρους. ἐκκαλέσας δὲ τῶν Νομαντίνων τοὺς ἄρχοντας ἠξίου κομίσασθαι τὰς δέλτους, ὡς μὴ παράσχοι τοῖς ἐχθροῖς διαβολὴν οὐκ ἔχων ἀπολογίσασθαι περὶ τῶν ὠκονομημένων. ἠσθέντες οὖν οἱ Νομαντῖνοι τῇ συντυχίᾳ τῆς χρείας παρεκάλουν αὐτὸν εἰσελθεῖν εἰς τὴν πόλιν· ὡς δὲ εἰστήκει βουλευόμενος, ἐγγὺς προσελθόντες ἐνεφύοντο ταῖς χερσί, καὶ λιπαρεῖς ἦσαν δεόμενοι μηκέτι νομίζειν αὐτοὺς πολεμίους, ἀλλ' ὡς φίλοις χρῆσθαι καὶ
- 3 πιστεύειν. ἔδοξεν οὖν τῷ Τιβερίῳ ταῦτα ποιεῖν, τῶν τε δέλτων περιεχομένῳ καὶ δεδοικότε παροξύνειν ὡς ἀπιστουμένους τοὺς Νομαντῖνους. εἰσελθόντι δὲ εἰς τὴν πόλιν πρῶτον μὲν ἄριστον παρέθεσαν, καὶ πᾶσαν ἐποίησαντο δέησιν ἐμφαγεῖν τι κοινῇ μετ' αὐτῶν καθήμενον· ἔπειτα τὰς δέλτους ἀπέδωκαν, καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἂ βούλοιτο χρημάτων λαβεῖν ἐκέλευον. ὁ δ' οὐδὲν ἢ τὸν λιβανωτὸν ᾧ πρὸς τὰς δημοσίας ἐχρήτο θυσίας λαβῶν, ἀπήλθεν ἀσπασάμενος καὶ φιλοφρονηθεὶς τοὺς ἄνδρας.

VII. Ἐπεὶ δὲ εἰς Ῥώμην ἐπανῆλθεν, ἡ μὲν ὅλη πρᾶξις ὡς δεινὴ καὶ καταισχύνουσα τὴν Ῥώμην αἰτίαν εἶχε καὶ κατηγορίαν, οἱ δὲ τῶν στρατιωτῶν οἰκεῖοι καὶ φίλοι μέγα μέρος ὄντες τοῦ δήμου συνέτρεχον πρὸς τὸν Τιβέριον, τὰ μὲν αἰσχρὰ τῶν γεγενομένων ἀναφέροντες εἰς τὸν ἄρχοντα, δι' αὐτὸν δὲ σώζεσθαι τοσοῦτους πολίτας φάσκοντες.

- 2 οἱ μέντοι δυσχεραίνοντες τὰ πεπραγμένα μιμεῖσθαι τοὺς προγόνους ἐκέλευον· καὶ γὰρ ἐκείνοι 827

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

three or four companions. After summoning forth the magistrates of Numantia, he asked them to bring him his tablets, that he might not give his enemies opportunity to malign him by not being able to give an account of his administration. The Numantines, accordingly, delighted at the chance to do him a favour, invited him to enter the city; and as he stood deliberating the matter, they drew near and clasped his hands, and fervently entreated him no longer to regard them as enemies, but to treat and trust them as friends. Tiberius, accordingly, decided to do this, both because he set great store by his tablets, and because he feared to exasperate the Numantines by showing them distrust. After he had entered the city, in the first place the Numantines set out a meal for him, and entreated him by all means to sit down and eat something in their company; next, they gave him back his tablets, and urged him to take whatever he wanted of the rest of his property. He took nothing, however, except the frankincense which he was wont to use in the public sacrifices, and after bidding them farewell with every expression of friendship, departed.

VII. When he came back to Rome, the whole transaction was blamed and denounced as a terrible disgrace to the city, although the relatives and friends of the soldiers, who formed a large part of the people, came flocking to Tiberius, imputing the disgrace in what had happened to his commander, but insisting that it was due to Tiberius that the lives of so many citizens had been saved. Those, however, who were displeased at what had been done urged for imitation the example of their ancestors, who flung to the enemy unarmed the generals

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

τοὺς ἀγαπήσαντας ὑπὸ Σαυνιτῶν ἀφεθῆναι στρατηγοὺς αὐτοὺς τε τοῖς πολεμίοις γυμνοὺς προσἔρριψαν, καὶ τοὺς ἐφαψαμένους καὶ μετασχόντας τῶν σπονδῶν, οἷον ταμίας καὶ χιλιάρχους, ὁμοίως προὔβαλον, εἰς ἐκείνους τὴν ἐπιουρκίαν καὶ τὴν 3 διάλυσιν τῶν ὁμολογημένων τρέποντες. ἔνθα δὲ καὶ μάλιστα τὴν πρὸς τὸν Τιβέριον εὐνοίαν καὶ σπουδὴν ἐξέφηεν ὁ δῆμος. τὸν μὲν γὰρ ὕπατον ἐψηφίσαντο γυμνὸν καὶ δεδεμένον παραδοῦναι τοῖς Νομαντίνοις, τῶν δὲ ἄλλων ἐφείσαντο πάντων διὰ Τιβέριον. δοκεῖ δὲ καὶ Σκηπίων βοηθῆσαι, μέγιστος ὢν τότε καὶ πλείστον δυνάμενος Ῥωμαίων· ἀλλ' οὐδὲν ἤττον ἐν αἰτίαις ἦν ὅτι τὸν Μαγκίνιον οὐ περιέσωσεν, οὐδὲ τὰς σπονδὰς ἐμπε-δωθῆναι τοῖς Νομαντίνοις ἐσπούδασε δι' ἀνδρὸς 4 οἰκείου καὶ φίλου τοῦ Τιβερίου γενομένης. τὸ δὲ πλείστον ἔοικεν ἐκ φιλοτιμίας καὶ τῶν ἐπαιρόντων τὸν Τιβέριον φίλων καὶ σοφιστῶν ἐκγενέσθαι τὰ τῆς διαφορᾶς. ἀλλ' αὕτη γε πρὸς οὐδὲν ἀνήκεστον οὐδὲ φαῦλον ἐξέπεσε. δοκεῖ δ' ἂν μοι μηδαμῶς περιπεσεῖν ὁ Τιβέριος οἷς ἔπαθεν, εἰ παρῆν αὐτοῦ τοῖς πολιτεύμασι Σκηπίων ὁ Ἀφρικανός· νῦν δὲ ἐκείνου περὶ Νομαντίαν ὄντος ἤδη καὶ πολεμοῦντος ἤψατο τῆς περὶ τοὺς νόμους πολιτείας ἐκ τοιαύτης αἰτίας.

VIII. Ῥωμαῖοι τῆς τῶν ἀστυγειτόνων χώρας ὄσσην ἀπετέμοντο πολέμῳ, τὴν μὲν ἐπίπρασκον,

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

themselves who had been satisfied to be let go by the Samnites, and in like manner cast forth those who had taken hand and share in the treaty, as for instance the quaestors and military tribunes, turning upon their heads the guilt of perjury and violation of the pact.¹ In the present affair, indeed, more than at any other time, the people showed their good will and affection towards Tiberius. For they voted to deliver up the consul unarmed and in bonds to the Numantines, but spared all the other officers for the sake of Tiberius. It would seem, too, that Scipio, who was then the greatest and most influential man at Rome, helped to save them; but none the less he was blamed² for not saving Mancinus, and for not insisting that the treaty with the Numantines, which had been made through the agency of his kinsman and friend Tiberius, should be kept inviolate. It would appear that the disagreement between the two men arose chiefly through the ambition of Tiberius and from the friends and sophists who urged him on. But this disagreement certainly resulted in no mischief past remedy. And in my opinion Tiberius would never have met with his great misfortunes if Scipio Africanus had been present at Rome during his political activity. But as it was, Scipio was already at Numantia³ and waging war there when Tiberius began to agitate for his agrarian laws. The occasion of this was as follows.

VIII. Of the territory which the Romans won in war from their neighbours, a part they sold, and a

¹ In 321 B.C. Cf. Cicero, De off., iii. 30, 109.

² By Tiberius and his friends.

³ Scipio was sent against Numantia in 134 B.C., and took and destroyed the city in the following year, in which year also Tiberius was killed.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- τὴν δὲ ποιούμενοι δημοσίαν ἐδίδοσαν νέμεσθαι τοῖς ἀκτήμοσι καὶ ἀπόροις τῶν πολιτῶν, ἀποφορὰν οὐ πολλὴν εἰς τὸ δημόσιον τελοῦσιν.
- 2 ἀρξαμένων δὲ τῶν πλουσίων ὑπερβάλλειν τὰς ἀποφορὰς καὶ τοὺς πένητας ἐξελαυνόντων, ἐγράφη νόμος οὐκ ἔων πλέθρα γῆς ἔχειν πλείονα τῶν πεντακοσίων. καὶ βραχὺν μὲν χρόνον ἐπέσχε τὴν πλεονεξίαν τὸ γράμμα τοῦτο, καὶ τοῖς πένησιν ἐβοήθησε κατὰ χώραν μένουσιν ἐπὶ τῶν μεμισθωμένων καὶ νεμομένοις ἦν ἕκαστος ἐξ ἀρχῆς
- 3 εἶχε μοῖραν. ὕστερον δὲ τῶν γειτνιώντων πλουσίων ὑποβλήτοις προσώποις μεταφερόντων τὰς μισθώσεις εἰς ἑαυτοὺς, τέλος δὲ φανερώς ἤδη δι' ἑαυτῶν τὰ πλείστα κατεχόντων, ἐξωσθέντες οἱ πένητες οὔτε ταῖς στρατείαις ἔτι προθύμους παρείχον ἑαυτοὺς, ἡμέλουν τε παίδων ἀνατροφῆς, ὥστε ταχὺ τὴν Ἰταλίαν ἄπασαν ὀλιγανδρίας ἐλευθέρων αἰσθέσθαι, δεσμοτηρίων δὲ βαρβαρικῶν ἐμπεπλησθαι, δι' ὧν ἐγεώργουν οἱ πλούσιοι τὰ χωρία,
- 4 τοὺς πολίτας ἐξελάσαντες. ἐπεχείρησε μὲν οὖν τῇ διορθώσει Γάϊος Λαίλιος ὁ Σκηπίωνος ἐταῖρος, ἀντικρουσάντων δὲ τῶν δυνατῶν φοβηθεὶς τὸν θόρυβον καὶ παυσάμενος ἐπεκλήθη σοφὸς ἢ φρόνιμος· ἐκάτερον γὰρ ἐδόκει σημαίνειν ὁ σαπίνης. ὁ Τιβέριος δὲ δήμαρχος ἀποδειχθεὶς εὐθύς ἐπ' αὐτὴν ὥρμησε τὴν πρᾶξιν, ὡς μὲν οἱ πλείστοι λέγουσι, Διοφάνους τοῦ ῥήτορος καὶ Βλοσσίου
- 5 τοῦ φιλοσόφου παρορμησάντων αὐτόν, ὧν ὁ μὲν Διοφάνης φυγὰς ἦν Μιτυληναῖος, ὁ δὲ αὐτόθεν

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

part they made common land, and assigned it for occupation to the poor and indigent among the citizens, on payment of a small rent into the public treasury. And when the rich began to offer larger rents and drove out the poor, a law was enacted forbidding the holding by one person of more than five hundred acres of land. For a short time this enactment gave a check to the rapacity of the rich, and was of assistance to the poor, who remained in their places on the land which they had rented and occupied the allotment which each had held from the outset. But later on the neighbouring rich men, by means of fictitious personages, transferred these rentals to themselves, and finally held most of the land openly in their own names. Then the poor, who had been ejected from their land, no longer showed themselves eager for military service, and neglected the bringing up of children, so that soon all Italy was conscious of a dearth of freemen, and was filled with gangs of foreign slaves, by whose aid the rich cultivated their estates, from which they had driven away the free citizens. An attempt was therefore made to rectify this evil, and by Caius Laelius the comrade of Scipio; but the men of influence opposed his measures, and he, fearing the disturbance which might ensue, desisted, and received the surname of Wise or Prudent (for the Latin word "sapiens" would seem to have either meaning). Tiberius, however, on being elected tribune of the people, took the matter directly in hand. He was incited to this step, as most writers say, by Diophanes the rhetorician and Blossius the philosopher. Diophanes was an exile from Mitylene, but Blossius

ἐξ Ἰταλίας Κυμαῖος, Ἀντιπάτρου τοῦ Ταρσέως γεγονώς ἐν ἄστει συνήθης καὶ τετιμημένος ὑπ' αὐτοῦ προσφωνήσεσι γραμμάτων φιλοσόφων.
ἐνιοι δὲ καὶ Κορινθίαν συνεπαιτιῶνται τὴν μη-τέρα πολλάκις τοὺς υἱοὺς ὀνειδίζουσιν ὅτι Ῥωμαῖοι Σκηπίωνος αὐτὴν ἔτι πενθεράν, οὐπω δὲ
6 μητέρα Γράγχων προσαγορεύουσιν. ἄλλοι δὲ Σπόριόν τινα Ποστούμιον αἴτιον γενέσθαι λέγουσιν, ἡλικιώτην τοῦ Τιβερίου καὶ πρὸς δόξαν ἐφάμιλλον αὐτῷ περὶ τὰς συνηγορίας, ὃν, ὡς ἐπανήλθεν ἀπὸ τῆς στρατιᾶς, εὐρῶν πολὺ τῇ δόξῃ καὶ τῇ δυνάμει παρηλλαχότα καὶ θαυμαζόμενον, ἠθέλησεν, ὡς ἔοικεν, ὑπερβαλέσθαι πολιτεύματος παραβόλου καὶ μεγάλην προσδοκίαν ἔχοντος 828 7 ἀψάμενος. ὁ δ' ἀδελφὸς αὐτοῦ Γάϊος ἐν τινι βιβλίῳ γέγραφεν εἰς Νομαντίαν πορευόμενον διὰ τῆς Τυρρηνίας τὸν Τιβέριον, καὶ τὴν ἐρημίαν τῆς χώρας ὀρώντα καὶ τοὺς γεωργοῦντας ἢ νέμοντας οἰκέτας ἐπεισάκτους καὶ βαρβάρους, τότε πρῶτον ἐπὶ νοῦν βαλέσθαι τὴν μυρίων κακῶν ἄρξασαν αὐτοῖς πολιτείαν. τὴν δὲ πλείστην αὐτὸς ὁ δημος ὀρμὴν καὶ φιλοτιμίαν ἐξῆψε, προκαλούμενος διὰ γραμμάτων αὐτὸν ἐν στοαῖς καὶ τοίχοις καὶ μνήμασι καταγραφομένων ἀναλαβεῖν τοῖς πένησι τὴν δημοσίαν χῶραν.

IX. Οὐ μὴν ἐφ' αὐτοῦ γε συνέθηκε τὸν νόμον, τοῖς δὲ πρωτεύουσιν ἀρετῇ καὶ δόξῃ τῶν πολιτῶν συμβούλοις χρησάμενος, ὧν καὶ Κράσσος ἦν ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς καὶ Μούκιος Σκαιβόλας ὁ νομοδείκτης

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

was a native Italian from Cumae, had been an intimate friend of Antipater of Tarsus at Rome, and had been honoured by him with the dedication of philosophical treatises. But some put part of the blame upon Cornelia the mother of Tiberius, who often reproached her sons because the Romans still called her the mother-in-law of Scipio, but not yet the mother of the Gracchi. Others again say that a certain Spurius Postumius was to blame. He was of the same age as Tiberius, and a rival of his in reputation as an advocate; and when Tiberius came back from his campaign and found that his rival had far outstripped him in reputation and influence and was an object of public admiration, he determined, as it would seem, to outdo him by engaging in a bold political measure which would arouse great expectations among the people. But his brother Caius, in a certain pamphlet,¹ has written that as Tiberius was passing through Tuscany on his way to Numantia, and observed the dearth of inhabitants in the country, and that those who tilled its soil or tended its flocks there were imported barbarian slaves, he then first conceived the public policy which was the cause of countless ills to the two brothers. However, the energy and ambition of Tiberius were most of all kindled by the people themselves, who posted writings on porticoes, house-walls, and monuments, calling upon him to recover for the poor the public land.

IX. He did not, however, draw up his law by himself, but took counsel with the citizens who were foremost in virtue and reputation, among whom were Crassus the pontifex maximus, Mucius Scaevola the ¹ Probably a political pamphlet in the form of a letter. Cf. Cicero, de div. ii. 29, 62.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- ὑπατεῶν τότε καὶ Κλαύδιος Ἀππίος ὁ κηδεστὴς
 2 τοῦ Τιβερίου. καὶ δοκεῖ νόμος εἰς ἀδικίαν καὶ πλεονεξίαν τοσαύτην μηδέποτε πραότερος γρα-φῆναι καὶ μαλακώτερος. οὓς γὰρ ἔδει δίκην τῆς ἀπειθείας δοῦναι καὶ μετὰ ζημίας ἦν παρὰ τοὺς νόμους ἐκαρποῦντο χώραν ἀφείναι, τούτους ἐκέ-λευσε τιμὴν προσλαμβάνοντας ἐκβαίνειν ὧν ἀδίκως ἐκέκτηντο, καὶ παραδέχεσθαι τοὺς βοη-3 θείας δεομένους τῶν πολιτῶν. ἀλλὰ καίπερ οὕτω τῆς ἐπανορθώσεως οὔσης εὐγνώμονος, ὁ μὲν δῆμος ἠγάπα, παρῆς τὰ γεγενημένα, παύσασθαι τὸ λοιπὸν ἀδικούμενος, οἱ δὲ πλούσιοι καὶ κτηματικοὶ πλεονεξία μὲν τὸν νόμον, ὀργῇ δὲ καὶ φιλονεικία τὸν νομοθέτην δι' ἔχθους ἔχοντες, ἐπεχείρουν ἀποτρέπειν τὸν δῆμον, ὡς γῆς ἀναδασμὸν ἐπὶ συγχύσει τῆς πολιτείας εἰσάγοντος τοῦ Τιβερίου καὶ πάντα πράγματα κινούντος.
- 4 Ἄλλ' οὐδὲν ἐπέβαινον· ὁ γὰρ Τιβέριος πρὸς καλὴν ὑπόθεσιν καὶ δικαίαν ἀγωνιζόμενος λόγῳ καὶ φαυλότερα κοσμήσαι δυναμένῳ πράγματα δεινὸς ἦν καὶ ἄμαχος, ὅποτε τοῦ δήμου τῷ βήματι περικεχυμένου καταστάς λέγοι περὶ τῶν πενήτων, ὡς τὰ μὲν θηρία τὰ τὴν Ἰταλίαν νεμόμενα καὶ φωλεὸν ἔχει καὶ κοιταῖόν ἐστὶν αὐτῶν ἐκάστῳ 5 καὶ καταδύσεις,¹ τοῖς δὲ ὑπὲρ τῆς Ἰταλίας μαχομένοις καὶ ἀποθνήσκουσιν ἀέρος καὶ φωτός, ἄλλου δὲ οὐδενὸς μέτεστιν, ἀλλ' ἄοικοι καὶ ἀνί-δρυτοι μετὰ τέκνων πλανῶνται καὶ γυναικῶν, οἱ δὲ αὐτοκράτορες ψεύδονται τοὺς στρατιώτας ἐν ταῖς μάχαις παρακαλοῦντες ὑπὲρ τάφων καὶ

¹ καταδύσεις Bekker and many other editors have κατάδυσσις, after Stephanus and Reiske.

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

jurist, who was then consul, and Appius Claudius, his father-in-law. And it is thought that a law dealing with injustice and rapacity so great was never drawn up in milder and gentler terms. For men who ought to have been punished for their disobedience and to have surrendered with payment of a fine the land which they were illegally enjoying, these men it merely ordered to abandon their unjust acquisitions upon being paid their value, and to admit into ownership of them such citizens as needed assistance. But although the rectification of the wrong was so considerate, the people were satisfied to let bygones be bygones if they could be secure from such wrong in the future; the men of wealth and substance, however, were led by their greed to hate the law, and by their wrath and contentiousness to hate the law-giver, and tried to dissuade the people by alleging that Tiberius was introducing a re-distribution of land for the confusion of the body politic, and was stirring up a general revolution.

But they accomplished nothing; for Tiberius, striving to support a measure which was honourable and just with an eloquence that would have adorned even a meaner cause, was formidable and invincible, whenever, with the people crowding around the rostra, he took his stand there and pleaded for the poor. "The wild beasts that roam over Italy," he would say, "have every one of them a cave or lair to lurk in; but the men who fight and die for Italy enjoy the common air and light, indeed, but nothing else; houseless and homeless they wander about with their wives and children. And it is with lying lips that their imperators exhort the soldiers in their battles to ιερώων ἀμύνεσθαι τοὺς πολεμίους· οὐδενὶ γὰρ ἐστὶν οὐ βωμὸς πατρῶος, οὐκ ἤριον προγονικὸν τῶν τοσοῦτων Ῥωμαίων, ἀλλ' ὑπὲρ ἀλλοτρίας τρυφῆς καὶ πλοῦτου πολεμοῦσι καὶ ἀποθνήσκουσι, κύριοι τῆς οἰκουμένης εἶναι λεγόμενοι, μίαν δὲ βῶλον ἰδίαν οὐκ ἔχοντες.

- X. Τούτους ἀπὸ φρονήματος μεγάλου καὶ πάθους ἀληθινοῦ τοὺς λόγους κατιόντας¹ εἰς τὸν δῆμον ἐνθουσιῶντα καὶ συνεξανιστάμενον οὐδεὶς ὑφίστατο τῶν ἐναντίων. ἔασαντες οὖν τὸ ἀντιλέγειν ἐπὶ Μάρκον Ὀκτάβιον τρέπονται τῶν δημάρχων ἕνα, νεανίαν ἐμβριθῆ τὸ ἦθος καὶ
- 2 κόσμιον, ἑταῖρον δὲ τοῦ Τιβερίου καὶ συνήθη. διὸ τὸ μὲν πρῶτον αἰδούμενος ἐκείνῳ ἀνεδύετο· πολλῶν δὲ καὶ δυνατῶν δεομένων καὶ λιπαρούντων ὥσπερ ἐκβιαθεὶς ἀντικαθίστατο τῷ Τιβερίῳ καὶ διεκρούετο τὸν νόμον. ἔστι δὲ τοῦ κωλύοντος ἐν τοῖς δημάρχοις τὸ κράτος· οὐδὲν γὰρ οἱ πολλοὶ
- 3 κελεύοντες περαίνουσιν ἐνὸς ἐνισταμένου. πρὸς τοῦτο παροξυνθεὶς ὁ Τιβέριος τὸν μὲν φιλάνθρωπον ἐπανείλετο νόμον, τὸν δὲ ἠδίῳ τε τοῖς πολλοῖς καὶ σφοδρότερον ἐπὶ τοὺς ἀδικούντας εἰσέφερεν ἤδη, κελεύων ἐξίστασθαι τῆς χώρας ἣν ἐκέκτηντο παρὰ τοὺς προτέρους νόμους.
- 4 Ἦσαν οὖν ὁμοῦ τι καθ' ἐκάστην ἡμέραν ἀγῶνες αὐτῷ πρὸς τὸν Ὀκτάβιον ἐπὶ τοῦ βήματος, ἐν οἷς, καίπερ ἐξ ἄκρας σπουδῆς καὶ φιλονεικίας ἀντερείδοντες, οὐδὲν εἰπεῖν λέγονται περὶ ἀλλήλων φαῦλον, οὐδὲ ῥῆμα προπεσεῖν θατέρου πρὸς defend sepulchres and shrines from the enemy ; for not a man of them has an hereditary altar, not one of all these many Romans an ancestral tomb, but they fight and die to support others in wealth and luxury, and though they are styled masters of the world, they have not a single clod of earth that is their own."

829

¹ κατιόντας Bekker has κατατείνοντα, after Coraës, from the variant κατατείνοντας.

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

X. Such words as these, the product of a lofty spirit and genuine feeling, and falling upon the ears of a people profoundly moved and fully aroused to the speaker's support, no adversary of Tiberius could successfully withstand. Abandoning therefore all counter-pleading, they addressed themselves to Marcus Octavius, one of the popular tribunes, a young man of sober character, discreet, and an intimate companion of Tiberius. On this account Octavius at first tried to hold himself aloof, out of regard for Tiberius ; but he was forced from his position, as it were, by the prayers and supplications of many influential men, so that he set himself in opposition to Tiberius and staved off the passage of the law. Now, the decisive power is in the hands of any tribune who interposes his veto ; for the wishes of the majority avail nothing if one tribune is in opposition. Incensed at this procedure, Tiberius withdrew his considerate law, and introduced this time one which was more agreeable to the multitude and more severe against the wrongdoers, since it simply ordered them to vacate without compensation the land which they had acquired in violation of the earlier laws.

Almost every day, therefore, there were forensic contests between Tiberius and Octavius, in which, as we are told, although both strove together with the utmost earnestness and rivalry, neither abused the other or let fall a single word about the other which

τὸν ἕτερον δι' ὄργην ἀνεπιτήδειον. οὐ γὰρ μόνον ἐν βακχεύμασιν,¹ ὡς ἔοικεν, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐν φιλοτιμίαις καὶ ὀργαῖς τὸ πεφυκέναι καλῶς καὶ πεπαιδευσθαι σωφρόνως ἐφίστησι καὶ κατακοσμεῖ
 5 τὴν διάνοιαν. ἐπεὶ δὲ ἑώρα τὸν Ὀκτάβιον ἐνεχόμενον τῷ νόμῳ καὶ κατέχοντα τῆς δημοσίας χώρας συχνὴν ὁ Τιβέριος, ἐδεῖτο παρεῖναι τὴν φιλονεικίαν, ὑφιστάμενος αὐτῷ τὴν τιμὴν ἀποδώσειν ἐκ τῶν ἰδίων, καίπερ οὐ λαμπρῶν ὄντων. οὐκ ἀνασχομένου δὲ τοῦ Ὀκταβίου, διαγράμματι τὰς ἄλλας ἀρχὰς ἀπάσας ἐκώλυσε χρηματίζειν,
 6 ἄχρι ἂν ἡ περὶ τοῦ νόμου διενεχθῆ ψήφος· τῷ δὲ τοῦ Κρόνου ναῷ σφραγίδας ἰδίας ἐπέβαλεν, ὅπως οἱ ταμίαι μηδὲν ἐξ αὐτοῦ λαμβάνοιεν μηδ' εἰσφέροιεν, καὶ τοῖς ἀπειθήσασι τῶν στρατηγῶν ζημίαν ἐπεκήρυξεν, ὥστε πάντας ὑποδείσαντας ἀφεῖναι
 7 τὴν ἐκάστῳ προσήκουσαν οἰκονομίαν. ἐντεῦθεν οἱ κτηματικοὶ τὰς μὲν ἐσθῆτας μετέβαλον καὶ περιήεσαν οἰκτροὶ καὶ ταπεινοὶ κατὰ τὴν ἀγοράν, ἐπεβούλευον δὲ τῷ Τιβερίῳ κρύφα καὶ συνίστασαν ἐπ' αὐτὸν τοὺς ἀναιρήσοντας, ὥστε κἀκεῖνον οὐδενὸς ἀγνοοῦντος ὑποζώννυσθαι ξιφίδιον ληστρικόν, ὃ δόλωνα καλοῦσιν.

XI. Ἐνστάσης δὲ τῆς ἡμέρας καὶ τὸν δῆμον αὐτοῦ καλοῦντος ἐπὶ τὴν ψήφον, ἠρπάσθησαν ὑπὸ τῶν πλουσίων αἱ ὑδρίαι, καὶ τὰ γινόμενα πολλὴν εἶχε σύγχυσιν. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ τῶν περὶ Τιβέριον πλήθει βιάσασθαι δυναμένων καὶ συστρεφομένων ἐπὶ τοῦτο, Μάλλιος καὶ Φούλβιος,

¹ καὶ γὰρ ἐν βακχεύμασιν
 οὐδ' ἢ γε σώφρων οὐ διαφθαρήσεται (Euripides, Bacchae, 310 f. (Kirchhoff)).

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

anger made unseemly. For not only "in Bacchic revelries," as it appears, but also in the exercise of rivalry and wrath, a noble nature and a sound training restrain and regulate the mind. Moreover, when Tiberius observed that Octavius himself was amenable to the law as a large holder of the public land, he begged him to remit his opposition, promising to pay him the value of the land out of his own means, although these were not splendid. But Octavius would not consent to this, and therefore Tiberius issued an edict forbidding all the other magistrates to transact any public business until such time as the vote should be cast either for or against his law. He also put his private seal upon the temple of Saturn, in order that the quaestors might not take any money from its treasury or pay any into it, and he made proclamation that a penalty would be imposed upon such praetors as disobeyed, so that all magistrates grew fearful and ceased performing their several functions. Thereupon the men of property put on the garb of mourning and went about the forum in pitiful and lowly guise; but in secret they plotted against the life of Tiberius and tried to raise a band of assassins to take him off, so that Tiberius on his part—and everybody knew it—wore a concealed short-sword such as brigands use (the name for it is "dolo").

XI. When the appointed day was come and Tiberius was summoning the people to the vote, the voting urns were stolen away by the party of the rich, and great confusion arose. However, the supporters of Tiberius were numerous enough to force the issue, and were banding together for this purpose, when

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἄνδρες ὑπατικοί, προσπεσόντες τῷ Τιβερίῳ καὶ χειρῶν ἀπτόμενοι καὶ δακρύνοντες ἐδέοντο παύσα-2 σθαι. τοῦ δὲ καὶ τὸ μέλλον ὅσον οὐπω δεινὸν ἤδη συμφρονούντος, καὶ δι' αἰδῶ τῶν ἀνδρῶν πυθο-μένου τί κελεύουσι πράττειν αὐτόν, οὐκ ἔφασαν ἀξιόχρεω εἶναι πρὸς τηλικαύτην συμβουλίαν, ἐπιτρέψαι δὲ τῇ βουλῇ κελεύοντες καὶ δεόμενοι συνέπεισαν.

Ὡς δὲ οὐδὲν ἐπέραινε ἡ βουλή συνελθοῦσα διὰ τοὺς πλουσίους ἰσχύοντας ἐν αὐτῇ, τρέπεται πρὸς ἔργον οὐ νόμιμον οὐδὲ ἐπιεικές, ἀφελῆσθαι τῆς ἀρχῆς τὸν Ὀκτάβιον, ἀμηχανῶν ἄλλως ἐπα-3 γαγεῖν τῷ νόμῳ τὴν ψῆφον. καὶ πρῶτον μὲν ἐδεῖτο φανερώς αὐτοῦ, λόγους τε προσφέρων φιλανθρώπους καὶ χειρῶν ἀπτόμενος, ἐνδοῦναι καὶ χαρίσασθαι τῷ δήμῳ δίκαια μὲν ἀξιούντι, μικρὰ δὲ ἀντὶ μεγάλων πόνων καὶ κινδύνων ληψομένῳ. διωθουμένου δὲ τοῦ Ὀκταβίου τὴν ἔντευξιν, ὑπειπὼν ὁ Τιβέριος ὡς οὐκ ἔστιν ἄρχοντας ἀμφο-τέρους καὶ περὶ πραγμάτων μεγάλων ἀπ' ἴσης ἐξουσίας διαφερομένους ἄνευ πολέμου διεξελθεῖν τὸν χρόνον, ἐν ἴαμα τούτου μόνον ὀρᾶν ἔφη τὸ 4 παύσασθαι τῆς ἀρχῆς τὸν ἕτερον. καὶ περὶ αὐτοῦ γε προτέρου τὸν Ὀκτάβιον ἐκέλευσε τῷ δήμῳ ψῆ-φον ἀναδοῦναι· καταβήσεσθαι γὰρ εὐθύς ἰδιώτης γενόμενος, ἂν τοῦτο δόξῃ τοῖς πολίταις. τοῦ δὲ Ὀκταβίου μὴ θέλοντος αὐτὸς ἔφη περὶ ἐκείνου ψῆφον ἀναδώσειν, ἐὰν μὴ μεταγνῶ βουλευσάμενος.

XII. Καὶ τότε μὲν ἐπὶ τούτοις διέλυσε τὴν

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

Manlius and Fulvius, men of consular dignity, fell down before Tiberius, clasped his hands, and with tears besought him to desist. Tiberius, conscious that the future was now all but desperate, and moved by respect for the men, asked them what they would have him do. They replied that they were not competent to advise in so grave a crisis, and urged him with entreaties to submit the case to the senate. To this Tiberius consented.

But the senate in its session accomplished nothing, owing to the prevailing influence of the wealthy class in it, and therefore Tiberius resorted to a measure which was illegal and unseemly, the ejection of Octavius from his office; but he was unable in any other way to bring his law to the vote. In the first place, however, he begged Octavius in public, addressing him with kindly words and clasping his hands, to give in and gratify the people, who demanded only their just rights, and would receive only a trifling return for great toils and perils. But Octavius rejected the petition, and therefore Tiberius, after promising that, since they were colleagues in office with equal powers and differed on weighty measures, it was impossible for them to complete their term of office without open war, said he saw only one remedy for this, and that was for one or the other of them to give up his office. Indeed, he urged Octavius to put to the people a vote on his own case first, promising to retire at once to private life if this should be the will of the citizens. But Octavius was unwilling, and therefore Tiberius declared that he would put the case of Octavius unless Octavius should change his mind upon reflection.

XII. With this understanding, he dissolved the

- ἐκκλησίαν· τῇ δ' ὑστεραία τοῦ δήμου συνελθόντος ἀναβὰς ἐπὶ τὸ βῆμα πάλιν ἐπειρᾶτο πείθειν τὸν Ὀκτάβιον ὡς δὲ ἦν ἀμετάπειστος, εἰσήνεγκε νόμον ἀφαιρούμενον αὐτοῦ τὴν δημαρχίαν, καὶ τοὺς πολίτας εὐθύς ἐκάλει τὴν ψῆφον ἐπιφέροντας.
- 2 οὐσῶν δὲ πέντε καὶ τριάκοντα φυλῶν, ὡς αἱ δεκαεπτὰ τὴν ψῆφον ἐπενηνόχισαν καὶ μιᾶς ἔτι προσγενομένης ἔδει τὸν Ὀκτάβιον ἰδιώτην γενέσθαι, κελεύσας ἐπισχεῖν αὐθις ἐδεῖτο τοῦ Ὀκταβίου καὶ περιέβαλεν αὐτὸν ἐν ὄψει τοῦ δήμου καὶ κατησπάζετο, λιπαρῶν καὶ δεόμενος μῆθ' ἑαυτὸν 830 ἄτιμον περιῦδειν γενόμενον μῆτ' ἐκείνῳ βαρέος οὕτω καὶ σκυθρωποῦ πολιτεύματος αἰτίαν προσάψαι.
- 3 Τούτων τῶν δεήσεων οὐ παντελῶς ἄτεγκτον οὐδ' ἀτενῆ λέγουσιν ἀκροᾶσθαι τὸν Ὀκτάβιον, ἀλλὰ καὶ δακρύων ὑποπίμπλασθαι τὰ ὄμματα καὶ σιωπᾶν ἐπὶ πολὺν χρόνον. ὡς μέντοι πρὸς τοὺς πλουσίους καὶ τοὺς κτηματικούς συνεστῶτας ἀπέβλεψεν, αἰδεσθεῖς δοκεῖ καὶ φοβηθεῖς τὴν παρ' ἐκείνοις ἀδοξίαν ὑποστήναι πᾶν δεινὸν οὐκ ἀγεννῶς καὶ κελεύσαι πράττειν ὃ βούλεται τὸν
- 4 Τιβέριον. οὕτω δὲ τοῦ νόμου κυρωθέντος ὁ μὲν Τιβέριος τῶν ἀπελευθέρων τινὶ προσέταξεν ἀπὸ τοῦ βήματος ἐλκύσαι τὸν Ὀκτάβιον· ἐχρήτο δὲ ὑπηρέταις ἀπελευθέρους ἰδίους, καὶ τοῦτο τὴν ὄψιν οἰκτροτέραν τοῦ Ὀκταβίου παρέσχευ ἐλκομένου
- 5 πρὸς ὕβριν. ὁ δὲ δῆμος ἐφώρμησεν αὐτῷ, καὶ τῶν πλουσίων συνδραμόντων καὶ διασχόντων τὰς χεῖρας, ὁ μὲν Ὀκτάβιος ἐσώθη μόλις ἔξαρπαγείς καὶ διαφυγὼν τὸν ὄχλον, οἰκέτην δὲ αὐτοῦ πιστὸν

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

assembly for that day; but on the following day, after the people had come together, he mounted the rostra and once more attempted to persuade Octavius. When, however, Octavius was not to be persuaded, Tiberius introduced a law depriving him of his tribuneship, and summoned the citizens to cast their votes upon it at once. Now, there were five and thirty tribes, and when seventeen of them had cast their votes, and the addition of one more would make it necessary for Octavius to become a private citizen, Tiberius called a halt in the voting, and again entreated Octavius, embracing and kissing him in the sight of the people, and fervently begging him not to allow himself to be dishonoured, and not to attach to a friend responsibility for a measure so grievous and severe.

On hearing these entreaties, we are told, Octavius was not altogether untouched or unmoved; his eyes filled with tears and he stood silent for a long time. But when he turned his gaze towards the men of wealth and substance who were standing in a body together, his awe of them, as it would seem, and his fear of ill repute among them, led him to take every risk with boldness and bid Tiberius do what he pleased. And so the law was passed, and Tiberius ordered one of his freedmen to drag Octavius from the rostra; for Tiberius used his freedmen as officers, and this made the sight of Octavius dragged along with contumely a more pitiful one. Moreover, the people made a rush at him, and though the men of wealth ran in a body to his assistance and spread out their hands against the crowd, it was with difficulty that Octavius was snatched away and safely rescued from the crowd; and a trusty servant of his who ἔμπροσθεν ἐστῶτα καὶ προτεταγμένον ἐξετύφλωσαν, ἄκοντος τοῦ Τιβερίου, καὶ πρὸς τὸν θόρουβον, ὡς ἦσθετο τὰ γινόμενα, πολλῇ σπουδῇ καταδραμόντος.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- XIII. Ἐκ τούτου κυροῦνται μὲν ὁ περὶ τῆς χώρας νόμος, αἰροῦνται δὲ τρεῖς ἄνδρες ἐπὶ τὴν διάκρισιν καὶ διανομήν, αὐτὸς Τιβέριος καὶ Κλαύδιος Ἀππίος ὁ πενθερὸς καὶ Γάϊος Γράγγχος ὁ ἀδελφός, οὐ παρῶν οὗτος, ἀλλὰ ὑπὸ Σκηπίωνι
- 2 πρὸς Νομαντίαν στρατευόμενος. ταῦτα τοῦ Τιβερίου διαπραξαμένου καθ' ἡσυχίαν μηδενὸς ἐνισταμένου, καὶ πρὸς τούτοις δῆμαρχον ἀντικαταστήσαντος οὐδένα τῶν ἐπιφανῶν, ἀλλὰ Μούκιόντινα, πελάτην αὐτοῦ, πρὸς πάντα δυσχεραίνοντες οἱ δυνατοὶ καὶ φοβούμενοι τοῦ Τιβερίου τὴν αὐξήσιν ἐν τῇ βουλῇ προεπηλάκιζον αὐτόν, αἰτουμένῳ μὲν, ὡς ἔθος ἐστίν, ἐκ δημοσίου σκηνήν,
 - 3 ὅπως ἔχοι διανεμῶν τὴν χώραν, οὐ δόντες, ἐτέρων ἐπ' ἐλάττωσι χρεῖαις πολλάκις λαβόντων, ἀνάλωμα δὲ εἰς ἐκάστην ἡμέραν ἐννέα ὀβολοὺς τάξαντες, εἰσηγουμένου ταῦτα Ποπλίου Νασικᾶ καὶ δεδωκότος ἑαυτὸν εἰς τὴν πρὸς ἐκείνους ἔχθραν ἀφειδῶς· πλείστην γὰρ ἐκέκτητο γῆν δημοσίαν, καὶ χαλεπῶς ἔφερεν ἐκβαίνειν αὐτῆς ἀναγκαζόμενος.
 - 4 Ὁ δὲ δῆμος ἔτι μᾶλλον ἐξεκάετο· καὶ φίλου τινὸς τῷ Τιβερίῳ τελευτήσαντος αἰφνιδίως καὶ σημείων τῷ νεκρῷ μοχθηρῶν ἐπιδραμόντων, βοῶντες ὑπὸ φαρμάκων ἀνηρῆσθαι τὸν ἄνθρωπον stood in front of his master and protected him, had his eyes torn out, against the protest of Tiberius, who, when he perceived what was going on, ran down with great haste to appease the tumult.

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

XIII. After this the agrarian law was passed, and three men were chosen for the survey and distribution of the public land, Tiberius himself, Appius Claudius his father-in-law, and Caius Gracchus his brother, who was not at Rome, but was serving under Scipio in the expedition against Numantia. These measures were carried out by Tiberius quietly and without opposition, and, besides, he procured the election of a tribune in the place of Octavius. The new tribune was not a man of rank or note, but a certain Mucius, a client of Tiberius. The aristocrats, however, who were vexed at these proceedings and feared the growing power of Tiberius, heaped insult upon him in the senate. When he asked for the customary tent at public expense, for his use when dividing up the public land, they would not give it, although other men had often obtained one for less important purposes; and they fixed his daily allowance for expenses at nine obols.¹ These things were done on motion of Publius Nasica, who surrendered completely to his hatred of Tiberius. For he was a very large holder of public land, and bitterly resented his being forced to give it up.

But the people were all the more inflamed; and when a friend of Tiberius died suddenly and his body broke out all over with evil spots, they ran in throngs to the man's funeral, crying out that he had been poisoned to death, and they carried the bier them-

¹ That is, in Roman money, nine sestertii, equivalent to about twenty pence, or forty cents.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἐπὶ τὴν ἐκφορὰν συνέδραμον καὶ τὸ λέχος ἦσαντο καὶ θαπτομένῳ παρέστησαν, οὐ φαύλως ὑπονοῆσαι 5 τὴν φαρμακείαν δόξαντες. ἐρράγη γὰρ ὁ νεκρὸς καὶ διεφθορότων ὑγρῶν πλήθος ἐξέβλυσεν, ὥστε ἀποσβέσαι τὴν φλόγα· καὶ φερόντων ἄλλην αὖθις οὐκ ἐκάετο πρὶν εἰς ἕτερον τόπον μετακομισθῆναι, καὶ πολλὰ πραγματευσαμένων μόλις ἤψατο τὸ πῦρ αὐτοῦ. πρὸς ταῦτα τοὺς πολλοὺς ἔτι μᾶλλον ὁ Τιβέριος παροξύνων μετέβαλε τὴν ἐσθήτα, καὶ τοὺς παῖδας προαγαγὼν ἐδεῖτο τοῦ δήμου τούτων κῆδεσθαι καὶ τῆς μητρός, ὡς αὐτὸς ἀπεγνωκῶς ἑαυτόν.

XIV. Ἐπεὶ δὲ τοῦ Φιλομήτορος Ἀττάλου τελευτήσαντος Εὐδήμος ὁ Περγαμηνὸς ἀνήνεγκε διαθήκην ἐν ἣ κληρονόμος ἐγγράπτο τοῦ βασιλέως ὁ Ῥωμαίων δῆμος, εὐθύς ὁ Τιβέριος δημαγωγῶν εἰσήνεγκε νόμον ὅπως τὰ βασιλικὰ χρήματα κομισθέντα τοῖς τὴν χώραν διαλαγχάνουσι τῶν πολιτῶν ὑπάρχουσι πρὸς κατασκευὴν καὶ γεωργίας 2 ἀφορμήν. περὶ δὲ τῶν πόλεων, ὅσαι τῆς Ἀττάλου βασιλείας ἦσαν, οὐδὲν ἔφη τῇ συγκλήτῳ βουλευέσθαι προσήκειν, ἀλλὰ τῷ δήμῳ γνώμην αὐτὸς προθήσειν. ἐκ τούτου μάλιστα προσέ- 831 κρουσε τῇ βουλῇ· καὶ Πομπηῖος μὲν ἀναστὰς ἔφη γειντιᾶν τῷ Τιβερίῳ καὶ διὰ τοῦτο γινώσκειν Εὐδήμον αὐτῷ τὸν Περγαμηνὸν τῶν βασιλικῶν διάδημα δεδωκότα καὶ πορφύραν, ὡς μέλλοντι 3 βασιλεύειν ἐν Ῥώμῃ, Κόιντος δὲ Μέτελλος ὠνει-δισε τὸν Τιβέριον ὅτι τοῦ μὲν πατρὸς αὐτοῦ

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

selves, and stood by at the last ceremonies. And their suspicions of poison were thought to be not without reason. For the dead body burst open and a great quantity of corrupt humours gushed forth, so that the flame of the funeral pyre was extinguished. And when fresh fire was brought, again the body would not burn, until it was carried to another place, where, after much trouble, the fire at last took hold of it. Upon this, Tiberius, that he might exasperate the multitude still more, put on a garb of mourning, brought his children before the assembly, and begged the people to care for them and their mother, saying that he despaired of his own life.

XIV. And now Attalus Philometor died,¹ and Eudemus of Pergamum brought to Rome the king's last will and testament, by which the Roman people was made his heir. At once Tiberius courted popular favour by bringing in a bill which provided that the money of King Attalus, when brought to Rome, should be given to the citizens who received a parcel of the public land, to aid them in stocking and tilling their farms. And as regarded the cities which were included in the kingdom of Attalus, he said it did not belong to the senate to deliberate about them, but he himself would submit a pertinent resolution to the people. By this proceeding he gave more offence than ever to the senate; and Pompeius, rising to speak there, said that he was a neighbour of Tiberius, and therefore knew that Eudemus of Pergamum had presented Tiberius with a royal diadem and purple robe, believing that he was going to be king in Rome. Moreover, Quintus Metellus upbraided Tiberius with the reminder that whenever τιμητεύοντος, ὅσάκις ἀναλῶσι μετὰ δεῖπνον οἴκαδε, τὰ φῶτα κατεσβέννυσαν οἱ πολῖται, φοβούμενοι μὴ πορρωτέρω τοῦ μετρίου δόξωσιν ἐν συνουσίαις εἶναι καὶ πότοις, τούτῳ δὲ παραφαίνουσι νυκτὸς οἱ θρασύτατοι καὶ ἀπορώτατοι τῶν δημοτῶν.

¹ In 133 B.C.

4 Τίτος δ' Ἄννιος, οὐκ ἐπιεικῆς μὲν οὐδὲ σώφρων ἄνθρωπος, ἐν δὲ λόγοις πρὸς τὰς ἐρωτήσεις καὶ τὰς ἀποκρίσεις ἄμαχος εἶναι δοκῶν, εἰς ὀρισμὸν τινα προῦκαλεῖτο τὸν Τιβέριον, ἧ μὴν ἱερὸν ὄντα καὶ ἄσυλον ἐκ τῶν νόμων ἠτιμωκέναι τὸν συνάρχοντα. θορυβούντων δὲ πολλῶν ἐκπηδήσας ὁ Τιβέριος τὸν τε δῆμον συνεκάλει καὶ τὸν Ἄννιον

5 ἀχθῆναι κελεύσας ἐβούλετο κατηγορεῖν. ὁ δὲ καὶ τῷ λόγῳ καὶ τῇ δόξῃ πολὺ λειπόμενος εἰς τὴν ἑαυτοῦ δεινότητα κατεδύετο, καὶ παρεκάλει μικρὰ πρὸ τῶν λόγων ἀποκρίνασθαι τὸν Τιβέριον. συγχωροῦντος δὲ ἐρωτᾶν ἐκείνου καὶ σιωπῆς γενομένης εἶπεν ὁ Ἄννιος, “Ἄν σὺ μὲν ἀτιμοῦν με βούλη καὶ προπηλακίζεις, ἐγὼ δὲ τινα τῶν σῶν ἐπικαλέσωμαι συναρχόντων, ὁ δὲ ἀναβῆ βοθητήσων, σὺ δὲ ὀργισθῆς, ἄρά γε αὐτοῦ τὴν ἀρχὴν ἀφαιρήσῃ;”

6 πρὸς ταύτην λέγεται τὴν ἐρώτησιν οὕτω διαπορηθῆναι τὸν Τιβέριον ὥστε πάντων ὄντα καὶ τὸ λέγειν ἐτοιμότατον καὶ τὸ θαρρεῖν ἰταμώτατον ἀποσιωπήσαι.

XV. Τότε μὲν οὖν διέλυσε τὴν ἐκκλησίαν· αἰσθανόμενος δὲ τῶν πολιτευμάτων τὸ περὶ τὸν Ὀκτάβιον οὐ τοῖς δυνατοῖς μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοῖς πολλοῖς ἐκπαθέστερον (μέγα γάρ τι καὶ καλὸν

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

his father, during his censorship, was returning home after a supper, the citizens put out their lights, for fear they might be thought to be indulging immoderately in entertainments and drinking bouts, whereas Tiberius himself was lighted on his way at night by the neediest and most reckless of the populace. Titus Annius, too, a man of no high character or sobriety, but held to be invincible in arguments carried on by question and answer, challenged Tiberius to a judicial wager,¹ solemnly asserting that he had branded with infamy his colleague, who was sacred and inviolable by law. As many senators applauded this speech, Tiberius dashed out of the senate-house, called the people together, and ordered Annius to be brought before them, with the intention of denouncing him. But Annius, who was far inferior to Tiberius both in eloquence and in reputation, had recourse to his own particular art, and called upon Tiberius to answer a few questions before the argument began. Tiberius assented to this and silence was made, whereupon Annius said: "If thou wish to heap insult upon me and degrade me, and I invoke the aid of one of thy colleagues in office, and he mount the rostra to speak in my defence, and thou fly into a passion, come, wilt thou deprive that colleague of his office?" At this question, we are told, Tiberius was so disconcerted that, although he was of all men most ready in speech and most vehement in courage, he held his peace.

XV. For the present, then, he dissolved the assembly; but perceiving that the course he had taken with regard to Octavius was very displeasing, not only to the nobles, but also to the multitude (for

¹ Cf. the Cato Major, xxii. 5.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἐδόκει τὸ τῶν δημάρχων ἀξίωμα μέχρι τῆς ἡμέρας ἐκείνης διατετηρημένον ἀνηρησθαι καὶ καθυβρί-σθαι), λόγον ἐν τῷ δήμῳ διεξήλθεν, οὐ μικρὰ παραθέσθαι τῶν ἐπιχειρημάτων οὐκ ἄτοπον ἦν, ὥστε ὑπονοηθῆναι τὴν πιθανότητα καὶ πυκνό-2 τητα τοῦ ἀνδρός. ἔφη γὰρ ἱερὸν τὸν δήμαρχον εἶναι καὶ ἄσυλον, ὅτι τῷ δήμῳ καθωσίωται καὶ τοῦ δήμου προέστηκεν. ἂν οὖν μεταβαλόμενος τὸν δήμον ἀδικῆ καὶ τὴν ἰσχὺν κολούῃ καὶ παραιρῆται τὴν ψῆφον, αὐτὸς ἑαυτὸν ἀπεστέρηκε
 3 τῆς τιμῆς ἐφ' οἷς ἔλαβεν οὐ ποιῶν· ἐπεὶ καὶ τὸ Καπετώλιον κατασκάπτοντα καὶ τὸ νεώριον ἐμ-πιπράντα δήμαρχον εἶαν δεήσει. καὶ ταῦτα μὲν ποιῶν δήμαρχός ἐστι πονηρός· εἰ δὲ καταλύῃ τὸν δήμον, οὐ δήμαρχος ἐστι. πῶς οὖν οὐ δεινὸν εἰ τὸν μὲν ὑπάτον ὁ δήμαρχος ἄξει, τὸν δὲ δήμαρχον οὐκ ἀφαιρήσεται τὴν ἐξου-σίαν ὁ δῆμος ὅταν αὐτῇ κατὰ τοῦ δεδωκότος 4 χρήται; καὶ γὰρ ὑπάτον καὶ δήμαρχον ὁμοίως ὁ δῆμος αἰρεῖται. καὶ μὴν ἢ γε βασιλεία πρὸς τῷ πᾶσαν ἀρχὴν ἔχειν ἐν ἑαυτῇ συλλα-βούσα καὶ ταῖς μεγίσταις ἱεουργίαις καθωσίωται πρὸς τὸ θεῖον· ἀλλὰ Ταρκύνιον ἐξέβαλεν ἢ πόλις ἀδικοῦντα, καὶ δι' ἐνὸς ἀνδρός ὕβριον ἢ πάτριος ἀρχῆ καὶ κτίσασα τὴν Ῥώμην κατελύθη. τί δὲ οὕτως ἄγιον ἐν Ῥώμῃ καὶ σεμνὸν ὡς αἱ περιέπουσαι παρθένοι καὶ φυλάττουσαι τὸ ἄφθιτον πῦρ; ἀλλ' εἴ τις ἂν ἀμάρτη αὐτῶν, ζῶσα κατο-180

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

it was thought that the high and honourable dignity of the tribunate, so carefully guarded up to that time, had been insulted and destroyed), he made a lengthy speech before the people, a few of the arguments of which it will not be out of place to lay before the reader, that he may get a conception of the man's subtlety and persuasiveness. A tribune, he said, was sacred and inviolable, because he was consecrated to the people and was a champion of the people. "If, then," said Tiberius, "he should change about, wrong the people, maim its power, and rob it of the privilege of voting, he has by his own acts deprived himself of his honourable office by not fulfilling the conditions on which he received it; for otherwise there would be no interference with a tribune even though he should try to demolish the Capitol or set fire to the naval arsenal. If a tribune does these things, he is a bad tribune; but if he annuls the power of the people, he is no tribune at all. Is it not, then, a monstrous thing that a tribune should have power to hale a consul to prison, while the people cannot deprive a tribune of his power when he employs it against the very ones who bestowed it? For consul and tribune alike are elected by the people. And surely the kingly office, besides comprehending in itself every civil function, is also consecrated to the Deity by the performance of the most solemn religious rites; and yet Tarquin was expelled by the city for his wrong-doing, and because of one man's insolence the power which had founded Rome and descended from father to son was overthrown. Again, what institution at Rome is so holy and venerable as that of the virgins who tend and watch the undying fire? And yet if one of these

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ρύσσεται· τὸ γὰρ ἄσυλον οὐ φυλάττουσιν ἀσεβούσαι εἰς τοὺς θεοὺς, ὃ διὰ τοὺς θεοὺς ἔχουσιν.
 5 οὐκ οὐδὲ δῆμαρχος ἀδικῶν τὸν δῆμον¹ ἔχειν τὴν διὰ τὸν δῆμον ἀσυλίαν δίκαιός ἐστιν· ἢ γὰρ ἰσχύει δυνάμει, ταύτην ἀναιρεῖ. καὶ μὴν εἰ δι-καίως ἔλαβε τὴν δημαρχίαν, τῶν πλείστων φυλῶν ψηφισαμένων, πῶς οὐχὶ κἂν ἀφαιρεθείη 6 δικαιότερον πασῶν ἀποψηφισαμένων; ἱερὸν δὲ 832 καὶ ἄσυλον οὐδὲν οὕτως ἐστὶν ὡς τὰ τῶν θεῶν ἀναθήματα· χρῆσθαι δὲ τούτοις καὶ κινεῖν καὶ μεταφέρειν ὡς βούλεται, τὸν δῆμον οὐδεὶς κεκώλυκεν. ἐξῆν οὖν αὐτῷ καὶ τὴν δημαρχίαν ὡς ἀνάθημα μετενεγκεῖν εἰς ἕτερον. ὅτι δὲ οὐκ ἄσυλον οὐδὲ ἀναφαίρετον ἡ ἀρχή, δῆλόν ἐστι τῷ πολλάκις ἔχοντας ἀρχὴν τινὰς ἐξόμνησθαι καὶ παραιτεῖσθαι δι' αὐτῶν.

XVI. Τοιαῦτα μὲν ἦν τὰ κεφάλαια τῆς τοῦ Τιβερίου δικαιολογίας. ἐπεὶ δὲ συνωρῶντες οἱ φίλοι τὰς ἀπειλὰς καὶ τὴν σύστασιν ᾤοντο δεῖν ἐτέρας περιέχεσθαι δημαρχίας εἰς τὸ μέλλον, αὐθις ἄλλοις νόμοις ἀνελάμβανε τὸ πλῆθος, τοῦ τε χρόνου τῶν στρατειῶν ἀφαιρῶν, καὶ διδούς ἐπικαλεῖσθαι τὸν δῆμον ἀπὸ τῶν δικαστῶν, καὶ τοῖς κρίνουσι τότε, συγκλητικοῖς οὖσι, κατα-2 μιγνύς ἐκ τῶν ἰππέων τὸν ἴσον ἀριθμόν, καὶ πάντα τρόπον ἤδη τῆς βουλῆς τὴν ἰσχύν κολουῶν

¹ τὸν δῆμον Cobet : δῆμον.

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

breaks her vows, she is buried alive ; for when they sin against the gods, they do not preserve that inviolable character which is given them for their service to the gods. Therefore it is not just that a tribune who wrongs the people should retain that inviolable character which is given him for service to the people, since he is destroying the very power which is the source of his own power. And surely, if it is right for him to be made tribune by a majority of the votes of the tribes, it must be even more right for him to be deprived of his tribuneship by a unanimous vote. And again, nothing is so sacred and inviolate as objects consecrated to the gods ; and yet no one has hindered the people from using such objects, or moving them, or changing their position in such manner as may be desired. It is therefore permissible for the people to transfer the tribunate also, as a consecrated thing, from one man to another. And that the office is not inviolable or irremovable is plain from the fact that many times men holding it resign it under oath of disability, and of their own accord beg to be relieved of it."

XVI. Such were the chief points in the justification of his course which Tiberius made. And now his friends, observing the threats and the hostile combination against him, thought that he ought to be made tribune again for the following year. Once more, therefore, Tiberius sought to win the favour of the multitude by fresh laws, reducing the time of military service, granting appeal to the people from the verdicts of the judges, adding to the judges, who at that time were composed of senators only, an equal number from the equestrian order, and in every way at length trying to maim the power of the senate

πρὸς ὀργὴν καὶ φιλονεικίαν μᾶλλον ἢ τὸν τοῦ δικαίου καὶ συμφέροντος λογισμόν. ἐπεὶ δὲ τῆς ψήφου φερομένης ἤσθοντο τοὺς ἐναντίους κρα-τούντας (οὐ γὰρ παρῆν ἅπας ὁ δῆμος), πρῶτον μὲν εἰς βλασφημίας τραπόμενοι τῶν συναρχόντων εἶλκον τὸν χρόνον· ἔπειτα τὴν ἐκκλησίαν ἀφῆκαν, 3 εἰς τὴν ὑστεραίαν ἀπαντᾶν κελεύσαντες. καὶ πρῶτον μὲν εἰς τὴν ἀγορὰν καταβὰς ὁ Τιβέριος ικέτευε τοὺς ἀνθρώπους ταπεινὸς καὶ δεδακρυμένος, ἔπειτα δεδοικέναι φήσας μὴ νυκτὸς ἐκκόψωσι τὴν οἰκίαν οἱ ἐχθροὶ καὶ διαφθείρωσιν αὐτόν, οὕτω τοὺς ἀνθρώπους διέθηκεν ὥστε περὶ τὴν οἰκίαν αὐτοῦ παμπόλλους τινὰς αὐλίσασθαι καὶ διανυκτερεῦσαι παραφυλάττοντας.

XVII. " Ἀμα δ' ἡμέρα παρῆν ὁ τὰς ὄρνιθας αἰς διαμαντεύονται κομίζων, καὶ προέβαλλε τροφήν αὐταῖς. αἱ δ' οὐ προῆλθον, εἰ μὴ μία μόνη, διασείσαντος εὖ μάλα τοῦ ἀνθρώπου τὸ ἀγγεῖον· οὐδὲ αὐτὴ δὲ τῆς τροφῆς ἔθιγεν, ἀλλ' ἐπάρασα τὴν ἀριστερὰν πτέρυγα καὶ παρατείνασα τὸ σκέλος πάλιν εἰς τὸ ἀγγεῖον κατέφυγε. τοῦτο καὶ τοῦ προτέρου σημείου τὸν Τιβέριον ἀνέμνησεν.
2 ἦν γὰρ αὐτῷ κράνος ὧ πρὸς τὰς μάχας ἐχρήτο, κεκοσμημένον ἐκπρεπῶς καὶ διάσημον· εἰς τοῦτο καταδύντες ὄφεις ἔλαθον ἐντεκόντες ὠά, καὶ ταῦτα ἐξεγλύψαντο. διὸ καὶ μᾶλλον ὁ Τιβέριος τοῖς περὶ τὰς ὄρνιθας ἐταράττετο. προῆει δὲ ὅμως, ἄνω τὸν δῆμον ἠθροῖσθαι περὶ τὸ Καπετώ-3 λιον πυνθανόμενος· καὶ πρὶν ἐξελθεῖν προσέπταισε πρὸς τὸν οὐδόν, σφοδρᾶς οὕτω πληγῆς γενομένης ὥστε τὸν μὲν ὄνυχα τοῦ μεγάλου δακ-

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

from motives of anger and contentiousness rather than from calculations of justice and the public good. And when, as the voting was going on, the friends of Tiberius perceived that their opponents were getting the better of the contest, since all the people were not present, in the first place they resorted to abuse of his fellow tribunes, and so protracted the time; next, they dismissed the assembly, and ordered that it should convene on the following day. Then Tiberius, going down into the forum, at first supplicated the citizens in a humble manner and with tears in his eyes; next, he declared he was afraid that his enemies would break into his house by night and kill him, and thereby so wrought upon his hearers that great numbers of them took up their station about his house and spent the night there on guard.

XVII. At break of day there came to the house the man who brought the birds with which auspices are taken, and threw food before them. But the birds would not come out of the cage, with the exception of one, though the keeper shook the cage right hard; and even the one that came out would not touch the food, but raised its left wing, stretched out its leg, and then ran back into the cage. This reminded Tiberius of an omen that had happened earlier. He had a helmet which he wore in battle, exceptionally adorned and splendid; into this serpents crawled unnoticed, laid eggs there and hatched them out. For this reason Tiberius was all the more disturbed by the signs from the birds. But nevertheless he set out, on learning that the people were assembled on the Capitol; and before he got out of the house, he stumbled against the threshold. The blow was so severe that the nail of his great toe τύλου ραγήναι, τὸ δὲ αἷμα διὰ τοῦ ὑποδήματος ἔξω φέρεσθαι. μικρὸν δὲ αὐτοῦ προελθόντος ὤφθησαν ὑπὲρ κεράμου μαχόμενοι κόρακες ἐν ἀριστερᾷ· καὶ πολλῶν, ὡς εἰκός, ἀνθρώπων παρερχομένων, κατ' αὐτὸν τὸν Τιβέριον λίθος ἀπωσθεὶς ὑπὸ θατέρου τῶν κοράκων ἔπεσε παρὰ τὸν πόδα. τοῦτο καὶ τοὺς θρασυτάτους τῶν περὶ

 4 αὐτὸν ἐπέστησεν· ἀλλὰ Βλόσσιος ὁ Κυμαῖος παρὼν αἰσχύνην ἔφη καὶ κατήφειαν ἂν εἶναι¹ πολλήν εἰ Τιβέριος, Γράγγου μὲν υἱός, Ἀφρικανοῦ δὲ Σκηπίωνος θυγατριδοῦς, προστάτης δὲ τοῦ Ῥωμαίων δήμου, κόρακα δείσας οὐχ ὑπακούσειε τοῖς πολίταις καλοῦσι· τοῦτο μέντοι τὸ αἰσχρὸν οὐκ ἐν γέλωτι θήσεσθαι τοὺς ἐχθρούς, ἀλλ' ὡς τυραννοῦντος καὶ τρυφῶντος ἤδη κατα-
 5 βοήσεσθαι πρὸς τὸν δῆμον. ἅμα δὲ καὶ προσέθεον πολλοὶ τῷ Τιβερίῳ παρὰ τῶν ἐν Καπετωλίῳ φίλων, ἐπείγεσθαι κελεύοντες, ὡς τῶν ἐκεῖ καλῶς ἐχόντων. καὶ τὰ γε πρῶτα λαμπρῶς ἀπήντα τῷ Τιβερίῳ, φανέντι μὲν εὐθύς ἀραμένων βοὴν φίλιον, ἀναβαίνοντα δὲ προθύμως δεχομένων καὶ περὶ αὐτόν, ὡς μηδεὶς πελάσειεν ἀγνώς, παραταπτομένων.

XVIII. Ἀρξαμένου δὲ πάλιν τοῦ Μουκίου τὰς φυλὰς ἀναγορεύειν, οὐδὲν ἐπεραίνετο τῶν 833 εἰωθότων διὰ τὸν ἀπὸ τῶν ἐσχάτων θόρυβον, ὠθουμένων καὶ ὠθούντων τοὺς ἐναντίους εἰσβιαζομένους καὶ ἀναμιγνυμένους. ἐν δὲ τούτῳ Φούλβιος Φλάκκος ἀπὸ βουλῆς ἀνὴρ εἰς ἐμφανὲς καταστάς, ὡς οὐκ ἦν φθεγγόμενον ἐφικέσθαι, was broken and the blood ran out through his shoe. He had gone on but a little way when ravens were seen fighting on the roof of a house to his left hand ; and though there were many people, as was natural, passing by, a stone dislodged by one of the ravens fell at the foot of Tiberius himself. This caused even the boldest of his followers to pause ; but Blossius of Cumae, who was present, said it would be a shame and a great disgrace if Tiberius, a son of Gracchus, a grandson of Scipio Africanus, and a champion of the Roman people, for fear of a raven should refuse to obey the summons of his fellow citizens ; such shameful conduct, moreover, would not be made a mere matter of ridicule by his enemies, but they would decry him to the people as one who was at last giving himself the airs of a tyrant. At the same time also many of his friends on the Capitol came running to Tiberius with urgent appeals to hasten thither, since matters there were going well. And in fact things turned out splendidly for Tiberius at first ; as soon as he came into view the crowd raised a friendly shout, and as he came up the hill they gave him a cordial welcome and ranged themselves about him, that no stranger might approach.

¹ ἂν εἶναι Cobet and Fuhr : [παρ]εἶναι.

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

XVIII. But after Mucius began once more to summon the tribes to the vote, none of the customary forms could be observed because of the disturbance that arose on the outskirts of the throng, where there was crowding back and forth between the friends of Tiberius and their opponents, who were striving to force their way in and mingle with the rest. Moreover, at this juncture Fulvius Flaccus, a senator, posted himself in a conspicuous place, and since it was impossible to make his voice heard so

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

2 διεσήμημε τῇ χειρὶ φράσαι τι βουλόμενον αὐτὸν ἰδίᾳ τῷ Τιβερίῳ. καὶ κελεύσαντος ἐκείνου δια-σχεῖν τὸ πλῆθος, ἀναβὰς μόλις καὶ προσελθὼν ἀπήγγειλεν ὅτι τῆς βουλῆς συγκαθεζομένης οἱ πλούσιοι, τὸν ὑπατον μὴ πείθοντες, αὐτοὶ δια-νοοῦνται καθ' αὐτοὺς ἀποκτινύναι τὸν Τιβέριον, πολλοὺς ἐπὶ τοῦτο δούλους καὶ φίλους ὀπλισμένους ἔχοντες.

XIX. Ὡς οὖν ταῦτα τοῖς περὶ αὐτὸν ἐξήγγ-2 ειλεν ὁ Τιβέριος, οὗτοι μὲν εὐθὺς τὰς τε τηβέν- νους περιεζώννυντο, καὶ τὰ τῶν ὑπηρετῶν δόρατα συγκλῶντες οἷς ἀνείργουσι τὸν ὄχλον, διελάμβανον ὡς ἀμννούμενοι τοῖς κλάσμασι τοὺς ἐπερ-2 χομένους. τῶν δὲ ἀπωτέρω θαυμαζόντων τὰ γνωόμενα καὶ πυνθανομένων, ὁ Τιβέριος ἤψατο τῇ χειρὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς, ἐνδεικνύμενος τῇ ὄψει τὸν κίνδυνον, ἐπεὶ τῆς φωνῆς οὐκ ἐπήκουον. οἱ δὲ ἐναντίοι τοῦτο ἰδόντες ἔθεον πρὸς τὴν βουλήν, ἀπαγγέλλοντες αἰτεῖν διάδημα τὸν Τιβέριον· καὶ 3 τούτου σημεῖον εἶναι τὸ τῆς κεφαλῆς ἐπιθιγγά- νειν. πάντες μὲν οὖν ἐθορυβήθησαν· ὁ δὲ Νασικᾶς ἠξίου τὸν ὑπατον τῇ πόλει βοηθεῖν καὶ καταλύειν τὸν τύραννον. ἀποκριναμένου δὲ πρῶως ἐκείνου βίας μὲν οὐδεμιᾶς ὑπάρξειν οὐδὲ ἀναιρήσειν οὐδένα τῶν πολιτῶν ἄκριτον, εἰ μέντοι ψηφίσαιτό τι τῶν παρανόμων ὁ δῆμος ὑπὸ τοῦ Τιβερίου πεισθεὶς ἢ βιασθεὶς, τοῦτο κύριον μὴ φυλάξειν, ἀναπηδήσας ὁ Νασικᾶς, “Ἐπεὶ τοῖνυν,” ἔφη, “προδίδωσιν ὁ ἄρχων τὴν πόλιν, οἱ βουλό-

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

far, indicated with his hand that he wished to tell Tiberius something meant for his ear alone. Tiberius ordered the crowd to part for Flavius, who made his way up to him with difficulty, and told him that at a session of the senate the party of the rich, since they could not prevail upon the consul to do so, were purposing to kill Tiberius themselves, and for this purpose had under arms a multitude of their friends and slaves.

XIX. Tiberius, accordingly, reported this to those who stood about him, and they at once girded up their togas, and breaking in pieces the spear-shafts with which the officers keep back the crowd, distributed the fragments among themselves, that they might defend themselves against their assailants. Those who were farther off, however, wondered at what was going on and asked what it meant. Whereupon Tiberius put his hand to his head, making this visible sign that his life was in danger, since the questioners could not hear his voice. But his opponents, on seeing this, ran to the senate and told that body that Tiberius was asking for a crown; and that his putting his hand to his head was a sign having that meaning. All the senators, of course, were greatly disturbed, and Nasica demanded that the consul should come to the rescue of the state and put down the tyrant. The consul replied with mildness that he would resort to no violence and would put no citizen to death without a trial; if, however, the people, under persuasion or compulsion from Tiberius, should vote anything that was unlawful, he would not regard this vote as binding. Thereupon Nasica sprang to his feet and said: "Since, then, the chief magistrate betrays the state, do ye

- 4 μνοι τοῖς νόμοις βοηθεῖν ἀκολουθεῖτε.” καὶ ταῦτα λέγων ἅμα καὶ τὸ κράσπεδον τοῦ ἱματίου θέμενος ἐπὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς, ἐχώρει πρὸς τὸ Καπετώλιον. ἕκαστος δὲ τῶν ἐπομένων αὐτῷ τῇ χειρὶ τὴν τήβεννον περιελίξας ἐώθει τοὺς ἐμποδῶν, οὐδενὸς ἐνισταμένου πρὸς τὸ ἀξίωμα τῶν ἀνδρῶν, ἀλλὰ φευγόντων καὶ πατούντων ἀλλήλους.
- 5 Οἱ μὲν οὖν περὶ αὐτοὺς ῥόπαλα καὶ σκυτάλας ἐκόμιζον οἴκοθεν· αὐτοὶ δὲ τῶν δίφρων καταγνυμένων ὑπὸ τοῦ φεύγοντος ὄχλου τὰ κλάσματα καὶ τοὺς πόδας λαμβάνοντες ἀνέβαινον ἐπὶ τὸν Τιβερίον, ἅμα παίοντες τοὺς προτεταγμένους. καὶ τούτων μὲν ἦν τροπὴ καὶ φόνος· αὐτοῦ δὲ τοῦ Τιβερίου φεύγοντος ἀντελάβετό τις τῶν ἱματίων.
- 6 ὁ δὲ τὴν τήβεννον ἀφείς καὶ φεύγων ἐν τοῖς χιτῶσιν ἐσφάλη καὶ κατηνέχθη περὶ τινος τῶν πρὸ αὐτοῦ πεπτωκότας. ἀνιστάμενον δὲ αὐτὸν ὁ μὲν ἐμφανῶς καὶ πρῶτος εἰς τὴν κεφαλὴν πατάξας ποδὶ δίφρου Πόπλιος ἦν Σατυρήσιος εἰς τῶν συναρχόντων· τῆς δὲ δευτέρας ἀντεποιεῖτο πληγῆς Λεύκιος Ῥούφος, ὡς ἐπὶ καλῷ τινι σεμνυνόμενος. τῶν δὲ ἄλλων ἀπέθανον ὑπὲρ τριακοσίους ξύλοις καὶ λίθοις συγκοπέντες, σιδήρῳ δὲ οὐδεὶς.

XX. Ταύτην πρώτην ἱστοροῦσιν ἐν Ῥώμῃ στάσιν, ἀφ’ οὗ τὸ βασιλεύεσθαι κατέλυσαν, αἵματι καὶ φόνῳ πολιτῶν διακριθῆναι· τὰς δὲ ἄλλας οὔτε μικρὰς οὔτε περὶ μικρῶν γενομένας ἀνθυπέκοντες ἀλλήλοις, φόβῳ μὲν οἱ δυνατοὶ τῶν πολλῶν, αἰδούμενοι δὲ τὴν βουλὴν ὁ δῆμος, ἔπαυον. ἐδόκει δὲ καὶ τότε μὴ χαλεπῶς ἂν ἐνδοῦναι παρηwho wish to succour the laws follow me." With these words he covered his head with the skirt of his toga and set out for the Capitol. All the senators who followed him wrapped their togas about their left arms and pushed aside those who stood in their path, no man opposing them, in view of their dignity, but all taking to flight and trampling upon one another.

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

Now, the attendants of the senators carried clubs and staves which they had brought from home; but the senators themselves seized the fragments and legs of the benches that were shattered by the crowd in its flight, and went up against Tiberius, at the same time smiting those who were drawn up to protect him. Of these there was a rout and a slaughter; and as Tiberius himself turned to fly, someone laid hold of his garments. So he let his toga go and fled in his tunic. But he stumbled and fell to the ground among some bodies that lay in front of him. As he strove to rise to his feet, he received his first blow, as everybody admits, from Publius Satyreius, one of his colleagues, who smote him on the head with the leg of a bench; to the second blow claim was made by Lucius Rufus, who plumed himself upon it as upon some noble deed. And of the rest more than three hundred were slain by blows from sticks and stones, but not one by the sword.

XX. This is said to have been the first sedition at Rome, since the abolition of royal power, to end in bloodshed and the death of citizens; the rest, though neither trifling nor raised for trifling objects, were settled by mutual concessions, the nobles yielding from fear of the multitude, and the people out of respect for the senate. And it was thought that even γορηθείς ὁ Τιβέριος, ἔτι δὲ ῥᾶον εἶξαι δίχα φόνου 2 καὶ τραυμάτων ἐπιούσιν· οὐ γὰρ πλείονες ἢ τρισχίλιοι περὶ αὐτὸν ἦσαν. ἀλλ' ἔοικεν ὀργῇ τῶν πλουσίων καὶ μίσει πλέον ἢ δι' ἧς ἐσκήπ-τοντο προφάσεις ἢ σύστασις ἐπ' αὐτὸν γενέσθαι· καὶ τούτου μέγα τεκμήριον ὡμῶς καὶ παρανόμως ὑβρισθεὶς ὁ νεκρός. οὐ γὰρ ἐπέτρεψαν ἀνελέσθαι 834 τὸ σῶμα τῷ ἀδελφῷ δεομένῳ καὶ θάψαι νυκτός, ἀλλὰ μετὰ τῶν ἄλλων νεκρῶν εἰς τὸν ποταμὸν 3 ἔρριψαν. καὶ τοῦτο πέρας οὐκ ἦν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν φίλων αὐτοῦ τοὺς μὲν ἐξεκέρυττον ἀκρίτους, τοὺς δὲ συλλαμβάνοντες ἀπεκτίννυσαν· ἐν οἷς καὶ Διοφάνης ὁ ῥήτωρ ἀπώλετο. Γάϊον δὲ τινα Βίλλιον εἰς ἀγγεῖον καθείρξαντες καὶ συνεμβα-λόντες ἐχίδνας καὶ δράκοντας οὕτω διέφθειραν.

 ὁ δὲ Κυμαῖος Βλόσσιος ἀνήχθη μὲν ἐπὶ τοὺς ὑπάτους, ἐρωτώμενος δὲ περὶ τῶν γεγενομένων ὡμολόγει πεπονηκέναι πάντα Τιβερίου κελεύοντος.
 4 εἰπόντος δὲ τοῦ Νασικᾶ πρὸς αὐτόν, “Τί οὖν, εἴ σε Τιβέριος ἐκέλευσεν ἐμπρῆσαι τὸ Καπετώλιον;”
 τὸ μὲν πρῶτον ἀντέλεγεν ὡς οὐκ ἂν τοῦτο Τιβερίου κελεύσαντος· πολλάκις δὲ καὶ πολλῶν τὸ αὐτὸ πυνθανομένων, “Ἄλλ' ἐκείνου γε προστάσ-στοντος,” ἔφη, “κἀμοὶ τοῦτο πρᾶξαι καλῶς εἶχεν· οὐ γὰρ ἂν Τιβέριος τοῦτο προσέταξεν, εἰ μὴ τῷ δήμῳ συνέφερον.” οὗτος μὲν οὖν διαφυγὼν ὕστε-

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

on this occasion Tiberius would have given way without difficulty had persuasion been brought to bear upon him, and would have yielded still more easily if his assailants had not resorted to wounds and bloodshed; for his adherents numbered not more than three thousand. But the combination against him would seem to have arisen from the hatred and anger of the rich rather than from the pretexts which they alleged; and there is strong proof of this in their lawless and savage treatment of his dead body. For they would not listen to his brother's request that he might take up the body and bury it by night, but threw it into the river along with the other dead. Nor was this all; they banished some of his friends without a trial and others they arrested and put to death. Among these Diophanes the rhetorician also perished. A certain Caius Villius they shut up in a cage, and then put in vipers and serpents, and in this way killed him. Blossius of Cumae was brought before the consuls, and when he was asked about what had passed, he admitted that he had done everything at the bidding of Tiberius. Then Nasica said to him, "What, then, if Tiberius had ordered thee to set fire to the Capitol?" Blossius at first replied that Tiberius would not have given such an order; but when the same question was put to him often and by many persons, he said: "If such a man as Tiberius had ordered such a thing, it would also have been right for me to do it; for Tiberius would not have given such an order if it had not been for the interest of the people."¹ Well, then, Blossius was acquitted, and afterwards went to ρον ᾤχετο πρὸς Ἀριστόνικον εἰς Ἀσίαν, καὶ τῶν ἐκείνου πραγμάτων διαφθαρέντων ἑαυτὸν ἀνείλεν.

¹ For the story of Blossius, cf. Cicero, De am. 11. 37; Valerius Maximus, iv. 7. 1.

4

- XXI. Ἡ δὲ βουλὴ θεραπεύουσα τὸν δῆμον ἐκ τῶν παρόντων οὔτε πρὸς τὴν διανομὴν ἔτι τῆς χώρας ἠναντιοῦτο, καὶ ἀντὶ τοῦ Τιβερίου προὔθηκε τοῖς πολλοῖς ὀριστὴν ἐλέσθαι. λαβόντες δὲ τὰς ψήφους εἴλοντο Πόπλιον Κράσσον, οἰκείου ὄντα Γράγχω· θυγάτηρ γὰρ αὐτοῦ Λικιννία Γαίω
- 2 Γράγχω συνώκει. καίτοι Νέπως ὁ Κορνηλίος φησιν οὐ Κράσσου, Βρούτου δὲ τοῦ θριαμβεύσαντος ἀπὸ Λυσιτανῶν θυγατέρα γῆμαι Γαίον· ἀλλὰ οἱ πλείους ὡς ἡμεῖς γράφομεν ἱστοροῦσιν. ἐπεὶ δὲ χαλεπῶς μὲν ὁ δῆμος εἶχε τῷ θανάτῳ τοῦ Τιβερίου καὶ φανερὸς ἦν ἀμύνης περιμένων καιρὸν, ἤδη δὲ καὶ δίκαι τῷ Νασικᾷ προανεσείοντο, δέισασα περὶ τοῦ ἀνδρὸς ἡ βουλὴ ψηφίζεται μηδὲν δεομένη πέμπειν αὐτὸν εἰς Ἀσίαν.
- 3 οὐ γὰρ ἀπεκρύπτοντο κατὰ τὰς ἀπαντήσεις οἱ ἄνθρωποι τὴν δυσμένειαν, ἀλλ' ἐξηγριαίνοντο καὶ κατεβόων ὅπου προστύχοιεν, ἐναγῆ καὶ τύραννον καὶ μεμιαγκότα φόνῳ σώματος ἀσύλου καὶ ἱεροῦ τὸ ἀγιώτατον καὶ φρικωδέστατον ἐν τῇ πόλει τῶν ἱερῶν ἀποκαλοῦντες. οὕτω μὲν ὑπεξῆλθε τῆς Ἰταλίας ὁ Νασικᾶς, καίπερ ἐνδεδεμένος ταῖς μεγίσταις ἱερουργίαις· ἦν γὰρ ὁ μέγιστος καὶ πρῶτος τῶν ἱερέων. ἔξω δὲ ἀλύων καὶ πλανώμενος ἀδόξως οὐ μετὰ πολὺν χρόνον κατέστρεψε
- 4 περὶ Πέργαμον. οὐ δεῖ δὲ θαναμάζειν εἰ Νασικᾶν

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

Aristonicus¹ in Asia, and when the cause of Aristonicus was lost, slew himself.

XXI. But the senate, trying to conciliate the people now that matters had gone so far, no longer opposed the distribution of the public land, and proposed that the people should elect a commissioner in place of Tiberius. So they took a ballot and elected Publius Crassus, who was a relative of Gracchus; for his daughter Licinia was the wife of Caius Gracchus. And yet Cornelius Nepos² says that it was not the daughter of Crassus, but of the Brutus who triumphed over the Lusitanians, whom Caius married; the majority of writers, however, state the matter as I have done. Moreover, since the people felt bitterly over the death of Tiberius and were clearly awaiting an opportunity for revenge, and since Nasica was already threatened with prosecutions, the senate, fearing for his safety, voted to send him to Asia, although it had no need of him there. For when people met Nasica, they did not try to hide their hatred of him, but grew savage and cried out upon him wherever he chanced to be, calling him an accursed man and a tyrant, who had defiled with the murder of an inviolable and sacred person the holiest and most awe-inspiring of the city's sanctuaries. And so Nasica stealthily left Italy, although he was bound there by the most important and sacred functions; for he was pontifex maximus. He roamed and wandered about in foreign lands ignominiously, and after a short time ended his life at Pergamum. Now, it is no wonder that the people so much hated

¹ The pretender to the throne of Attalus Philometor (xiv. 1). He was defeated and taken prisoner by the Romans in 130 B. C.

² In a lost biography.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

μεμίσηκεν οὕτως ὁ δῆμος, ὅπου καὶ Σκηπίων ὁ Ἀφρικανός, οὐ δοκοῦσι Ῥωμαῖοι μηδένα δικαιότερον μηδὲ μᾶλλον ἀγαπήσαι, παρὰ μικρὸν ἦλθεν ἐκπεσεῖν καὶ στέρεσθαι τῆς πρὸς τὸν δῆμον εὐνοίας, ὅτι πρῶτον μὲν ἐν Νομαντία τὴν τελευταίην τοῦ Τιβερίου πυθόμενος ἀνεφώνησεν ἐκ τῶν Ὀμηρικῶν· ὡς ἀπόλοιτο καὶ ἄλλος ὃ τις τοιαῦτά γε ῥέζοι,

- 5 ἔπειτα τῶν περὶ Γαίον καὶ Φούλβιον αὐτοῦ δι' ἐκκλησίας πυθνομένων τί φρονοίη περὶ τῆς Τιβερίου τελευταίας, οὐκ ἀρεσκομένην τοῖς ὑπ' ἐκείνου πεπολιτευμένοις ἀπόκρισιν ἔδωκεν. ἐκ τούτου γὰρ ὁ μὲν δῆμος ἀντέκρουσεν αὐτῷ λέγοντι, μηδέπω τοῦτο ποιήσας πρότερον, αὐτὸς δὲ τὸν δῆμον εἰπεῖν κακῶς προήχθη. περὶ μὲν τούτων ἐν τῷ Σκηπίωνος βίῳ τὰ καθ' ἕκαστα γέγραπται.

Γ. ΓΡΑΓΧΟΣ

1. Γαῖος δὲ Γράγχος ἐν ἀρχῇ μὲν ἠ δεδιὼς τοὺς ἐχθροὺς ἢ φθόνου συνάγων ἐπ' αὐτοὺς ὑπεξέστη τε τῆς ἀγορᾶς καὶ καθ' ἑαυτὸν ἡσυχίαν ἔχων διέτριβεν, ὡς ἂν τις ἐν τε τῷ παρόντι ταπεινὰ πράττων καὶ τὸ λοιπὸν οὕτως ἀπραγμόνως βιωσόμενος, ὥστε καὶ λόγον τισὶ καθ' 835 αὐτοῦ παρασχεῖν ὡς δυσχεραίνοντος καὶ προβεβλημένου τὴν τοῦ Τιβερίου πολιτείαν. ἦν δὲ

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

Nasica, when even Scipio Africanus, than whom no one would seem to have been more justly or more deeply loved by the Romans, came within a little of forfeiting and losing the popular favour because, to begin with, at Numantia, when he learned of the death of Tiberius, he recited in a loud voice the verse of Homer¹:—

“So perish also all others who on such wickedness venture,” and because, in the second place, when Caius and Fulvius asked him in an assembly of the people what he thought about the death of Tiberius, he made a reply which showed his dislike of the measures advocated by him. Consequently the people began to interrupt him as he was speaking, a thing which they had never done before, and Scipio himself was thereby led on to abuse the people. Of these matters I have written circumstantially in my Life of Scipio.²

CAIUS GRACCHUS

I. Caius Gracchus, at first, either because he feared his enemies, or because he wished to bring odium upon them, withdrew from the forum and lived quietly by himself, like one who was humbled for the present and for the future intended to live the same inactive life, so that some were actually led to denounce him for disliking and repudiating his brother's political measures. And he was also ¹ Odyssey, i. 47 (Athena, of Aegisthus).

² One of the lost biographies.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- καὶ μεράκιον παντάπασιν· ἐννέα γὰρ ἐνιαυτοῖς ἐλείπετο τὰδελφοῦ καθ' ἡλικίαν, ἐκεῖνος δὲ οὐπω τριάκοντα γεγονῶς ἀπέθανεν. ἐπεὶ δὲ προϊόντος τοῦ χρόνου τὸν τε τρόπον ἡσυχῇ διέβαιναν ἀργίας καὶ μαλακίας καὶ πότων καὶ χρηματισμῶν ἀλλότριον ὄντα, καὶ τὸν λόγον ὥσπερ ὠκύπτερα κατασκευαζόμενος ἐπὶ τὴν πολιτείαν δῆλος ἦν
- 3 οὐκ ἡρεμήσων, δίκην τέ τιμι τῶν φίλων φεύγοντι Βεττίῳ συνειπών, τοῦ δήμου συνενθουσιῶντος ὑφ' ἡδονῆς καὶ βακχεύοντος περὶ αὐτόν, ἀπέδειξε τοὺς ἄλλους ῥήτορας παίδων μηδὲν διαφέροντας, εἰς φόβον αὐθις οἱ δυνατοὶ καθίσταντο, καὶ πολὺς ἦν ἐν αὐτοῖς λόγος ὡς οὐκ εἰσούσιν ἐπὶ δημαρχίαν τὸν Γάϊον προελθεῖν.
- 4 Συντυγχάνει δὲ ἀπὸ ταυτομάτου λαχεῖν αὐτὸν εἰς Σαρδῶ ταμίαν Ὀρέστη τῷ ὑπάτῳ· καὶ τοῦτο τοῖς μὲν ἐχθροῖς καθ' ἡδονὴν ἐγεγόνει, τὸν δὲ Γάϊον οὐκ ἐλύπησεν. ἅτε γὰρ ὢν πολεμικὸς καὶ χεῖρον οὐδὲν πρὸς στρατείας ἡσηκμένος ἢ δίκας, ἐτι δὲ τὴν πολιτείαν καὶ τὸ βῆμα φρίττων, ἀντέχειν δὲ καλοῦντι τῷ δήμῳ καὶ τοῖς φίλοις οὐ δυνάμενος, παντάπασι τὴν ἀποδημίαν ἐκείνην
- 5 ἠγάπησε. καίτοι κρατεῖ δόξα πολλὴ τοῦτου ἄκρατον γενέσθαι δημαγωγόν, καὶ πολὺ τοῦ Τιβερίου λαμπρότερον πρὸς τὴν ἀπὸ τῶν ὄχλων δόξαν. οὐκ ἔχει δὲ οὕτω τὸ ἀληθές· ἀλλ' εἰοικεν ὑπ' ἀνάγκης τινὸς μᾶλλον οὗτος ἢ προαιρέσεως
- 6 ἐμπεσεῖν εἰς τὴν πολιτείαν. ἱστορεῖ δὲ καὶ Κικέρων ὁ ῥήτωρ ὡς ἄρα φεύγοντι πᾶσαν ἀρχὴν τῷ Γαίῳ καὶ μεθ' ἡσυχίας ἡρημένῳ ζῆν ὁ ἀδελφὸς ὄναρ φανείς καὶ προσαγορεύσας, "Τί δῆτα,"

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

quite a stripling, for he was nine years younger than his brother, and Tiberius was not yet thirty when he died. But as time went on he gradually showed a disposition that was averse to idleness, effeminacy, wine-bibbing, and money-making; and by preparing his oratory to waft him as on swift pinions to public life, he made it clear that he was not going to remain quiet; and in defending Vettius, a friend of his who was under prosecution, he had the people about him inspired and frantic with sympathetic delight, and made the other orators appear to be no better than children. Once more, therefore, the nobles began to be alarmed, and there was much talk among them about not permitting Caius to be made tribune.

By accident, however, it happened that the lot fell on him to go to Sardinia as quaestor for Orestes the consul.¹ This gave pleasure to his enemies, and did not annoy Caius. For he was fond of war, and quite as well trained for military service as for pleading in the courts. Moreover, he still shrank from public life and the rostra, but was unable to resist the calls to this career which came from the people and his friends. He was therefore altogether satisfied with this opportunity of leaving the city. And yet a strong opinion prevails that he was a demagogue pure and simple, and far more eager than Tiberius to win the favour of the multitude. But this is not the truth; nay, it would appear that he was led by a certain necessity rather than by his own choice to engage in public matters. And Cicero the orator also relates² that Caius declined all office and had chosen to live a quiet life, but that his brother appeared to him in a dream and addressed him, saying: "Why, pray, dost

¹ In 126 B.C.

² De dir. i. 26, 56.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

φαίη, “Γαίε, βραδύνεις; οὐκ ἔστιν ἀπόδρασις, ἀλλ’ εἰς μὲν ἡμῖν ἀμφοτέροις βίος, εἰς δὲ θάνατος ὑπὲρ τοῦ δήμου πολιτευομένοις πέπρωται.”

- II. Γενόμενος οὖν ὁ Γαῖος ἐν Σαρδόνι πᾶσαν ἀρετῆς ἀπόδειξιν ἐδίδου, καὶ πολὺ πάντων διέφερε τῶν νέων ἐν τοῖς πρὸς τοὺς πολεμίους ἀγῶσι καὶ ἐν τοῖς πρὸς τοὺς ὑπηκόους δικαίοις καὶ ἐν τῇ πρὸς τὸν στρατηγὸν εὐνοίᾳ καὶ τιμῇ, σωφροσύνη δὲ καὶ λιτότητι καὶ φιλοπονίᾳ παρήλλαττε καὶ
- 2 τοὺς πρεσβυτέρους. ἰσχυροῦ δὲ καὶ νοσώδους ἅμα χειμῶνος ἐν Σαρδόνι γενομένου καὶ τοῦ στρατηγοῦ τὰς πόλεις ἐσθῆτα τοῖς στρατιώταις αἰτοῦντος, ἔπεμψαν εἰς Ῥώμην παραιτούμενοι. δεξαμένης δὲ τῆς βουλῆς τὴν παραίτησιν αὐτῶν καὶ τὸν στρατηγὸν ἄλλοθεν ἀμφιέζειν τοὺς στρατιώτας κελευούσης, ἀποροῦντος δὲ ἐκείνου καὶ τῶν στρατιωτῶν κακοπαθούντων, ἐπελθὼν τὰς πόλεις ὁ Γαῖος αὐτοὺς ἀφ’ ἑαυτῶν ἐποίησεν ἐσθῆτα
- 3 πέμψαι καὶ βοηθῆσαι τοῖς Ῥωμαίοις. ταῦτα πάλιν εἰς Ῥώμην ἀπαγγελλόμενα καὶ δοκοῦντα δημαγωγίας προάγωνες εἶναι διετάραττε τὴν βουλήν. καὶ πρῶτον μὲν ἐκ Λιβύης παρὰ Μικίψα τοῦ βασιλέως πρέσβεις παραγενομένους, καὶ λέγοντας ὡς ὁ βασιλεὺς χάριτι Γαίου Γράγχου πέμψειεν εἰς Σαρδόνα σίτον τῷ στρατηγῷ, δυσχεραίνοντες ἐξέβαλον· ἔπειτα δόγμα ποιοῦνται τοῖς μὲν στρατιώταις διαδοχὴν ἀποσταλῆναι, τὸν δὲ Ὀρέστην ἐπιμένειν, ὡς δὴ καὶ τοῦ Γαίου διὰ τὴν
- 4 ἀρχὴν παραμενοῦντος. ὁ δὲ τούτων αὐτῷ προσπεσόντων εὐθὺς ἐξέπλευσε πρὸς ὄργην, καὶ φανείς ἐν Ῥώμῃ παρ’ ἐλπίδας οὐ μόνον ὑπὸ τῶν ἐχθρῶν thou hesitate, Caius? There is no escape; one life is fated for us both, and one death, as champions of the people."

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

II. After reaching Sardinia, then, Caius gave proof of every excellence, and far surpassed all the other young men in conflicts with the enemy, in just dealings with the subject peoples, and in the good will and respect which he showed towards his commander, while in self-restraint, frugality, and industry, he excelled even his elders. The winter in Sardinia proved to be rigorous and unhealthy, and the Roman commander made a requisition upon the cities of clothing for his soldiers, whereupon the cities sent to Rome and begged to be relieved from the exaction. The senate granted their petition and ordered the commander to get clothing for his soldiers in some other way. The commander was at a loss what to do, and the soldiers were suffering; so Caius made a circuit of the cities and induced them of their own free will to send clothing and other assistance to the Romans. This was reported to Rome, where it was thought to be a prelude to a struggle for popular favour, and gave fresh concern to the senate. So, to begin with, when ambassadors of King Micipsa came from Africa, and announced that out of regard for Caius Gracchus the king had sent grain to the Roman commander in Sardinia, the senators were displeased and turned them away. In the second place, they passed a decree that fresh troops should be sent to relieve the soldiers in Sardinia, but that Orestes should remain, with the idea that Caius also would remain with him by virtue of his office. But Caius, when this came to his ears, straightway sailed off in a passion, and his unexpected appearance in Rome αἰτίαν εἶχεν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοῖς πολλοῖς ἀλλόκοτον ἔδοκει τὸ ταμίαν ὄντα προαποστῆναι τοῦ ἄρχοντος.

 οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ κατηγορίας αὐτῷ γενομένης ἐπὶ τῶν τιμητῶν, αἰτησάμενος λόγον οὕτω μετέστησε τὰς γνώμας τῶν ἀκουσάντων ὡς ἀπελθεῖν ἡδικῆσθαι 5 τὰ μέγιστα δόξας. ἐστρατεῦσθαι μὲν γὰρ ἔφη δώδεκα ἔτη, τῶν ἄλλων δέκα στρατευσόμενων ἐν 836 ἀνάγκαις, ταμιεύων δὲ τῷ στρατηγῷ παραμε-μενηκέναι τριετίαν, τοῦ νόμου μετ' ἐνιαυτὸν ἐπαν-ελθεῖν διδόντος· μόνος δὲ τῶν στρατευσασμένων πλήρες τὸ βαλάντιον εἰσηνηνοχῶς κενὸν ἐξενηνο-χέναι, τοὺς δὲ ἄλλους ἐκπιόντας ὃν εἰσήνεγκαν οἶνον, ἀργυρίου καὶ χρυσίου μεστοὺς δεῦρο τοὺς ἀμφορεῖς ἤκειν κομίζοντας.

III. Ἐκ τούτου πάλιν ἄλλας αἰτίας αὐτῷ καὶ δίκας ἐπήγον ὡς τοὺς συμμάχους ἀφιστάντι καὶ κεκοινωνηκότι τῆς περὶ Φρέγελλαν ἐνδειχθείσης συνωμοσίας. ὁ δὲ πᾶσαν ὑποψίαν ἀπολυσάμενος καὶ φανείς καθαρὸς εὐθύς ἐπὶ δημαρχίαν ὥρμησε, τῶν μὲν γνωρίμων ἀνδρῶν ὁμαλῶς ἀπάντων ἐναντιουμένων πρὸς αὐτόν, ὄχλου δὲ τοσοῦτου συρρέοντος εἰς τὴν πόλιν ἐκ τῆς Ἰταλίας καὶ συναρχαιρεσιάζοντος ὡς πολλοῖς μὲν οἰκῆσεις ἐπιλιπεῖν, τοῦ δὲ πεδίου μὴ δεξαμένου τὸ πλῆθος ἀπὸ τῶν τεγῶν καὶ τῶν κεράμων τὰς φωνὰς συνη-2 χεῖν. τοσοῦτον δ' οὖν ἐξεβιάσαντο τὸν δῆμον οἱ δυνατοὶ καὶ τῆς ἐλπίδος τοῦ Γαίου καθεῖλον, ὅσον

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

not only was censured by his enemies, but also made the people think it strange that he, quaestor as he was, had left his post before his commander. However, when he was denounced before the censors, he begged leave to speak, and wrought such a change in the opinions of his hearers that he left the court with the reputation of having been most grossly wronged. For he said that he had served in the army twelve years, although other men were required to serve there only ten, and that he had continued to serve as quaestor under his commander for more than two years, although the law permitted him to come back after a year. He was the only man in the army, he said, who had entered the campaign with a full purse and left it with an empty one; the rest had drunk up the wine which they took into Sardinia, and had come back to Rome with their wine-jars full of gold and silver.

III. After this, other fresh charges and indictments were brought against him, on the ground that he had caused the allies to revolt and had been privy to the conspiracy at Fregellae,¹ information of which was brought to Rome. But he cleared himself of all suspicion, and having established his entire innocence, immediately began a canvass for the tribuneship. All the men of note, without exception, were opposed to him, but so great a throng poured into the city from the country and took part in the elections that many could not be housed, and since the Campus Martius could not accommodate the multitude, they gave in their voices from the house-tops and tilings. So far, however, did the nobility prevail against the people and disappoint the hopes of Caius that he was not

¹ Fregellae revolted, and was destroyed in 125 B.C.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

οὐχ, ὡς προσεδόκησε, πρῶτον, ἀλλὰ τέταρτον ἀναγορευθῆναι. παραλαβὼν δὲ τὴν ἀρχὴν εὐθύς ἦν ἀπάντων πρῶτος, ἰσχύων τε τῷ λέγειν, ὡς ἄλλος οὐδεὶς, καὶ τοῦ πάθους αὐτῷ παρρησίαν πολλὴν διδόντος ἀνακλειομένῳ τὸν ἀδελφόν.

3 ἐνταῦθα γὰρ ἐξ ἀπάσης προφάσεως περιῆγε τὸν δῆμον, ἀναμιμνήσκων τῶν γεγονότων καὶ παρατιθεὶς τὰ τῶν προγόνων, ὡς ἐκείνοι μὲν καὶ Φαλίσκοις ἐπολέμησαν ὑπὲρ Γενυκίου τινὸς δημάρχου λαιδορηθέντος, καὶ Γαίου Βετουρίου θάνατον κατέγνωσαν, ὅτι δημάρχῳ πορευομένῳ δι' ἀγορᾶς οὐχ ὑπεξέστη μόνος· “Τμῶν δὲ ὀρώντων,” ἔφη, “Τιβέριον ξύλοις συνέκοπτον οὔτοι, καὶ διὰ μέσης τῆς πόλεως ἐσύρετο νεκρὸς ἐκ Καπετωλίου ρίφη-

4 σόμενος εἰς τὸν ποταμόν· οἱ δὲ ἀλίσκομενοι τῶν φίλων ἀπέθηνσκον ἄκριτοι. καίτοι πάτριόν ἐστιν ἡμῖν, εἴ τις ἔχων δίκην θανατικὴν μὴ ὑπακούει, τούτου πρὸς τὰς θύρας ἔωθεν ἐλθόντα σαλπικτὴν ἀνακαλεῖσθαι τῇ σάλπιγγι, καὶ μὴ πρότερον ἐπιφέρειν ψῆφον αὐτῷ τοὺς δικαστάς. οὕτως εὐλαβεῖς καὶ πεφυλαγμένοι περὶ τὰς κρίσεις ἦσαν.”

IV. Τοιούτοις λόγοις προανασείσας τὸν δῆμον (ἦν δὲ καὶ μεγαλοφρονότατος, καὶ ῥωμαλεώτατος ἐν τῷ λέγειν), δύο νόμους εἰσέφερε, τὸν μὲν, εἴ τινος ἄρχοντος ἀφηρῆτο τὴν ἀρχὴν ὁ δῆμος, οὐκ ἔῶντα τούτῳ δευτέρας ἀρχῆς μετουσίαν εἶναι· τὸν

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

returned first, as he expected, but fourth. But after entering upon his office¹ he was at once first of all the tribunes, since he had an incomparable power in oratory, and his affliction gave him great boldness of speech in bewailing the fate of his brother. For to this subject he would bring the people round on every pretext, reminding them of what had happened in the case of Tiberius, and contrasting the conduct of their ancestors, who went to war with the people of Falerii on behalf of Genucius, a tribune whom they had insulted, and condemned Caius Veturius to death because he was the only man who would not make way for a tribune passing through the forum. "But before your eyes," he said, "these men beat Tiberius to death with clubs, and his dead body was dragged from the Capitol through the midst of the city to be thrown into the Tiber; moreover, those of his friends who were caught were put to death without trial. And yet it is ancient usage among us that if anyone who is arraigned on a capital charge does not answer to his summons, a trumpeter shall go to the door of this man's house in the morning and summon him forth by sound of trumpet, and until this has been done the judges shall not vote on his case. So careful and guarded were the men of old in capital cases."

IV. Having first stirred up the people with such words as these (and he had a very loud voice, and was most vigorous in his speaking), he introduced two laws, one providing that if the people had deprived any magistrate of his office, such magistrate should not be allowed to hold office a second time;

¹ For the year 123 B.C., ten years after Tiberius had entered upon the same office.

δέ, εἴ τις ἄρχων ἄκριτον ἐκκεκηρύχοι πολίτην,
 2 κατ' αὐτοῦ διδόντα κρίσιν τῷ δήμῳ. τούτων τῶν νόμων ἄντικρυς ὁ μὲν Μάρκον Ὀκτάβιον ἠτίμου τὸν ὑπὸ Τιβερίου τῆς δημαρχίας ἐκπεσόντα, τῷ δ' ἐνείχετο Ποπίλλιος· οὗτος γὰρ στρατηγῶν τοὺς τοῦ Τιβερίου φίλους ἐξεκέρυξε. καὶ Ποπίλλιος μὲν οὐχ ὑποστάς τὴν κρίσιν ἔφυγεν ἐξ Ἰταλίας· τὸν δὲ ἕτερον νόμον Γάϊος αὐτὸς ἐπανείλετο, φήσας τῇ μητρὶ Κορνηλίᾳ δευθείσῃ χαρίζεσθαι
 3 τὸν Ὀκτάβιον. καὶ ὁ δῆμος ἠγάσθη καὶ συνεχώρησε, τιμῶν τὴν Κορνηλίαν οὐδὲν ἦττον ἀπὸ τῶν παίδων ἢ τοῦ πατρός, ἧς γε καὶ χαλκῆν εἰκόνα στήσας ὕστερον ἐπέγραψε Κορνηλίαν μητέρα Γράγχων. ἀπομνημονεύεται δὲ καὶ τοῦ Γαίου πολλὰ ῥητορικῶς καὶ ἀγοραίως ὑπὲρ αὐτῆς εἰρημένα πρὸς τινα τῶν ἐχθρῶν. “Σὺ γάρ,” ἔφη, “Κορνη-
 4 λίαν λαιδορεῖς τὴν Τιβέριον τεκοῦσαν;” ἐπεὶ δὲ διαβεβλημένος ἦν εἰς μαλακίαν ὁ λαιδορηθείς· “Τίνα δέ,” εἶπεν, “ἔχων παρρησίαν συγκρίνεις Κορνηλίᾳ σεαυτόν; ἔτεκες γὰρ ὡς ἐκείνη; καὶ μὴν πάντες ἴσασι Ῥωμαῖοι πλείω χρόνον ἐκείνην ἀπ' ἀνδρὸς οὔσαν ἢ σὲ τὸν ἄνδρα.” τοιαύτη μὲν ἢ πικρία τῶν λόγων ἦν αὐτοῦ, καὶ πολλὰ λαβεῖν ἐκ τῶν γεγραμμένων ἐστὶν ὅμοια.

V. Τῶν δὲ νόμων οὗς εἰσέφερε τῷ δήμῳ χαρίζο- 837
 μενος καὶ καταλύων τὴν σύγκλητον, ὁ μὲν ἦν κληρουχικὸς ἀνανέμων¹ τοῖς πένησι τὴν δημοσίαν, ὁ δὲ στρατιωτικὸς ἐσθῆτά τε κελεύων δημοσίαν

¹ ἀνανέμων Coraës and Bekker, after Du Soul, for the MSS. ἄμα νέμων. Ziegler adopts διανέμων, proposed by Sint.² and Cobet.

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

and another providing that if any magistrate had banished a citizen without trial, such magistrate should be liable to public prosecution. Of these laws, one had the direct effect of branding with infamy Marcus Octavius, who had been deposed from the tribunate by Tiberius; and by the other Popillius was affected, for as praetor he had banished the friends of Tiberius. Popillius, indeed, without standing his trial, fled out of Italy; but the other law was withdrawn by Caius himself, who said that he spared Octavius at the request of his mother Cornelia. The people were pleased at this and gave their consent, honouring Cornelia no less on account of her sons than because of her father; indeed, in after times they erected a bronze statue of her, bearing the inscription: "Cornelia, Mother of the Gracchi." There are on record also many things which Caius said about her in the coarse style of forensic speech, when he was attacking one of his enemies: "What," said he, "dost thou abuse Cornelia, who gave birth to Tiberius?" And since the one who had uttered the abuse was charged with effeminate practices, "With what effrontery," said Caius, "canst thou compare thyself with Cornelia? Hast thou borne such children as she did? And verily all Rome knows that she refrained from commerce with men longer than thou hast, though thou art a man." Such was the bitterness of his language, and many similar examples can be taken from his writings.

V. Of the laws which he proposed by way of gratifying the people and overthrowing the senate, one was agrarian, and divided the public land among the poor citizens; another was military, and ordained that clothing should be furnished to the soldiers at χορηγείσθαι καὶ μηδὲν εἰς τοῦτο τῆς μισθοφορᾶς ὑφαιρεῖσθαι τῶν στρατευομένων, καὶ νεώτερον ἐτῶν ἑπτακαίδεκα μὴ καταλέγεσθαι στρατιώτην·

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

 ὁ δὲ συμμαχικὸς ἰσοψήφους ποιῶν τοῖς πολίταις 2 τοὺς Ἰταλιώτας. ὁ δὲ σιτικὸς ἐπεωνίζων τοῖς πένησι τὴν ἀγοράν. ὁ δὲ δικαστικὸς, ᾧ τὸ πλεῖστον ἀπέκοψε τῆς τῶν συγκλητικῶν δυνάμεως.
 μόνοι γὰρ ἔκρινον τὰς δίκας, καὶ διὰ τοῦτο φοβεροὶ τῷ τε δήμῳ καὶ τοῖς ἰππεύσιν ἦσαν, ὁ δὲ τριακοσίους τῶν ἰππέων προσκατέλεξεν αὐτοῖς οὐσι 3 τριακοσίοις, καὶ τὰς κρίσεις κοινὰς τῶν ἑξακοσίων ἐποίησε. τοῦτον τὸν νόμον εἰσφέρων τὰ τε ἄλλα λέγεται σπουδάσαι διαφερόντως, καὶ τῶν πρὸ αὐτοῦ πάντων δημαγωγῶν πρὸς τὴν σύγκλητον ἀφορώντων καὶ τὸ καλούμενον κομίτιον, πρῶτος τότε στραφεὶς ἔξω πρὸς τὴν ἀγορὰν δημηγορῆσαι, καὶ τὸ λοιπὸν οὕτω ποιεῖν ἔξ ἐκείνου, μικρᾷ παρ-εγκλίσει καὶ μεταθέσει σχήματος μέγα πρᾶγμα κινήσας καὶ μετενεγκῶν τρόπον τινὰ τὴν πολιτείαν ἐκ τῆς ἀριστοκρατίας εἰς τὴν δημοκρατίαν, ὡς τῶν πολλῶν δέον, οὐ τῆς βουλῆς, στοχάζεσθαι τοὺς λέγοντας.

VI. Ἐπεὶ δὲ οὐ μόνον ἐδέξατο τὸν νόμον τοῦτον
 ὁ δῆμος, ἀλλὰ κακείνῳ τοὺς κρίνοντας ἐκ τῶν ἰππέων ἔδωκε καταλέξαι, μοναρχικὴ τις ἰσχὺς ἐγεγόνει περὶ αὐτόν, ὥστε καὶ τὴν σύγκλητον

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

the public cost, that nothing should be deducted from their pay to meet this charge, and that no one under seventeen should be enrolled as a soldier; another concerned the allies, and gave the Italians equal suffrage rights with Roman citizens; another related to the supplies of grain, and lowered the market price to the poor; and another dealt with the appointment of judges. This last law most of all curtailed the power of the senators; for they alone could serve as judges in criminal cases, and this privilege made them formidable both to the common people and to the equestrian order. The law of Gracchus, however, added to the membership of the senate, which was three hundred, three hundred men from the equestrian order, and made service as judges a prerogative of the whole six hundred. In his efforts to carry this law Caius is said to have shown remarkable earnestness in many ways, and especially in this, that whereas all popular orators before him had turned their faces towards the senate and that part of the forum called the "comitium," he now set a new example by turning towards the other part of the forum as he harangued the people, and continued to do this from that time on, thus by a slight deviation and change of attitude stirring up a great question, and to a certain extent changing the constitution from an aristocratic to a democratic form; for his implication was that speakers ought to address themselves to the people, and not to the senate.

VI. The people not only adopted this law, but also entrusted to its author the selection of the judges who were to come from the equestrian order, so that he found himself invested with something like monarchical power, and even the senate

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- ἀνέχεσθαι συμβουλευόντος αὐτοῦ. συνεβούλευε δὲ αἰεὶ τι τῶν ἐκείνη προπόντων εἰσηγούμενος·
- 2 οἷον ἦν καὶ τὸ περὶ τοῦ σίτου δόγμα μετριώτατον καὶ κάλλιστον, ὃν ἔπεμψε μὲν ἐξ Ἰβηρίας Φάβιος ἀντιστράτηγος, ἐκείνος δ' ἔπεισε τὴν βουλήν ἀποδομένην τὸν σίτον ἀναπέμψαι ταῖς πόλεσι τὸ ἀργύριον, καὶ προσεπαιτιάσασθαι τὸν Φάβιον ὡς ἐπαχθῆ καὶ ἀφόρητον ποιούντα τὴν ἀρχὴν τοῖς ἀνθρώποις· ἐφ' ᾧ μεγάλην ἔσχε δόξαν μετὰ εὐνοίας ἐν ταῖς ἐπαρχίαις.
- 3 Ἐγραψε δὲ καὶ πόλεις ἀποικίδας ἐκπέμπεσθαι καὶ τὰς ὁδοὺς ποιεῖσθαι καὶ κατασκευάζεσθαι σιτοβόλια, τούτοις ἅπασιν πραττομένοις αὐτὸν ἄρχοντα καὶ διοικητὴν ἐφιστάς, καὶ πρὸς οὐδὲν ἀποτρύμενος τῶν τοσοῦτων καὶ τηλικούτων, ἀλλὰ καὶ θαυμαστῶ τιμὴν τάχει καὶ πόνῳ τῶν γινομένων ὡς μόνον ἕκαστον ἐξεργαζόμενος, ὥστε καὶ τοὺς πάνυ μισοῦντας αὐτὸν καὶ δεδοικότας ἐκπλήττεσθαι τὸ διὰ πάντων ἀνύσιμον καὶ τελεσιουργόν.
- 4 οἱ δὲ πολλοὶ καὶ τὴν ὄψιν αὐτὴν ἐθαύμαζον, ἐξηρητημένον ὀρώντες αὐτοῦ πλῆθος ἐργολάβων, τεχνιτῶν, πρεσβευτῶν, ἀρχόντων, στρατιωτῶν, φιλολόγων, οἷς πᾶσιν ἐντυγχάνων μετὰ εὐκολίας καὶ τὸ σεμνὸν ἐν τῷ φιλανθρώπῳ διαφυλάττων, καὶ νέμων αὐτοῦ τὸ ἀρμόττον οἰκείως ἐκάστῳ, χαλεποὺς ἀπεδείκνυε συκοφάντας τοὺς φοβερόν αὐτὸν ἢ φορτικὸν ὄλωσ ἢ βίαιον ἀποκαλοῦντας. οὕτω δεινότερος ἦν ἐν ταῖς ὁμιλίαις καὶ ταῖς

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

consented to follow his counsel. But when he counselled them, it was always in support of measures befitting their body; as, for instance, the very equitable and honourable decree concerning the grain which Fabius the pro-praetor sent to the city from Spain. Caius induced the Senate to sell the grain and send the money back to the cities of Spain, and further, to censure Fabius for making his government of the province intolerably burdensome to its inhabitants. This decree brought Caius great reputation as well as popularity in the provinces.

He also introduced bills for sending out colonies, for constructing roads, and for establishing public granaries, making himself director and manager of all these undertakings, and showing no weariness in the execution of all these different and great enterprises; nay, he actually carried out each one of them with an astonishing speed and power of application, as if it were his sole business, so that even those who greatly hated and feared him were struck with amazement at the powers of achievement and accomplishment which marked all that he did. And as for the multitude, they were astonished at the very sight, when they beheld him closely attended by a throng of contractors, artificers, ambassadors, magistrates, soldiers, and literary men, with all of whom he was on easy terms, preserving his dignity while showing kindness, and rendering properly to every man the courtesy which was due from him, whereby he set in the light of malignant slanderers those who stigmatised him as threatening or utterly arrogant or violent. Thus he was a more skilful popular leader in his private intercourse with men πράξειςιν ἢ τοῖς ἀπὸ τοῦ βήματος λόγοις δημαγωγός.

VII. Ἐσπούδασε δὲ μάλιστα περὶ τὴν ὁδοποιίαν, τῆς τε χρείας ἅμα καὶ τοῦ πρὸς χάριν καὶ κάλλος ἐπιμεληθείς. εὐθείαι γὰρ ἦγοντο διὰ τῶν χωρίων ἀτρεμεῖς, καὶ τὸ μὲν ἐστόρνυτο πέτρα ξεστή, τὸ δὲ ἄμμου χώμασι νακτῆς ἐπυκνιούτο. πιμπλαμένων δὲ τῶν κοίλων καὶ ζευγνυμένων γεφύραις ὅσα χεῖμαρροι διέκοπτον ἢ φάραγγες, ὕψος τε τῶν ἐκατέρωθεν ἴσον καὶ παράλληλον λαμβανόντων, ὁμαλὴν καὶ καλὴν ὄψιν εἶχε δι' ὅλου τὸ ἔργον. 838

2 πρὸς δὲ τούτοις διαμετρήσας κατὰ μίλιον ὁδὸν πᾶσαν (τὸ δὲ μίλιον ὀκτῶ σταδίων ὀλίγον ἀποδεῖ) κίονας λιθίνους σημεῖα τοῦ μέτρου κατέστησεν. ἄλλους δὲ λίθους ἔλαττον ἀπέχοντας ἀλλήλων ἐκατέρωθεν τῆς ὁδοῦ διέθηκεν, ὡς εἴη ῥαδίως τοῖς ἵππους ἔχουσιν ἐπιβαίνειν ἀπ' αὐτῶν ἀναβολέως μὴ δεομένοις.

VIII. Ἐπὶ τούτοις τοῦ δήμου μεγαλύνοντος αὐτὸν καὶ πᾶν ὀτιοῦν ἐτοίμως ἔχοντας ἐνδείκνυσθαι πρὸς εὐνοίαν, ἔφη ποτὲ δημηγορῶν αὐτὸς αἰτήσῃν χάριν, ἣν λαβὼν μὲν ἀντὶ παντὸς ἔξῃ, εἰ δὲ ἀποτύχοι, μηδὲν ἐκείνοις μεμψιμοιρήσῃ. τοῦτο ῥηθὲν ἔδοξεν αἰτησίς ὑπατείας εἶναι, καὶ προσδοκίαν πᾶσιν ὡς ἅμα μὲν ὑπατείαν, ἅμα δὲ 2 δημαρχίαν μετιῶν παρέσχεν. ἐνστάτων δὲ τῶν ὑπατικῶν ἀρχαιρεσίων καὶ μετέρων ὄντων ἀπάντων ὠφθη Γάϊον Φύννιον κατὰ γων εἰς τὸ πεδίου and in his business transactions than in his speeches from the rostra.

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

VII. But he busied himself most earnestly with the construction of roads, laying stress upon utility, as well as upon that which conduced to grace and beauty. For his roads were carried straight through the country without deviation, and had pavements of quarried stone, and substructures of tight-rammed masses of sand. Depressions were filled up, all intersecting torrents or ravines were bridged over, and both sides of the roads were of equal and corresponding height, so that the work had everywhere an even and beautiful appearance. In addition to all this, he measured off every road by miles (the Roman mile falls a little short of eight furlongs) and planted stone pillars in the ground to mark the distances. Other stones, too, he placed at smaller intervals from one another on both sides of the road, in order that equestrians might be able to mount their horses from them and have no need of assistance.

VIII. Since the people extolled him for all these services and were ready to show him any token whatsoever of their good will, he said to them once in a public harangue that he was going to ask a favour of them, which, if granted, he should value supremely, but if it were refused, he should find no fault with them. This utterance was thought to be a request for a consulship, and led everybody to expect that he would sue for a consulship and a tribuneship at the same time. But when the consular elections were at hand and everybody was on the tip-toe of expectation, he was seen leading Caius Fannius down into the Campus Martius and joining in the canvass for καὶ συναρχαιρεσιάζων ἐκείνῳ μετὰ τῶν φίλων. τοῦτο ῥοπήν ἤνεγκε τῷ Φαννίῳ μεγάλην. καὶ κείνος μὲν ὑπατος, Γάϊος δὲ δήμαρχος ἀπεδείχθη τὸ δεύτερον, οὐ παραγγέλλων οὐδὲ μετιών, ἀλλὰ τοῦ δήμου σπουδάσαντος.

- 3 Ἐπεὶ δὲ ἑώρα τὴν μὲν σύγκλητον ἐχθρὰν ἀντικρυσ, ἀμβλὺν δὲ τῇ πρὸς αὐτὸν εὐνοίᾳ τὸν Φάννιον, αὐθις ἑτέροις νόμοις ἀπηρτήσατο τὸ πλῆθος, ἀποικίας μὲν εἰς Τάραντα καὶ Καπύην πέμπεσθαι γράφων, καλῶν δὲ ἐπὶ κοινωνίᾳ πολιτείας τοὺς Λατίνους. ἡ δὲ βουλή δείσασα μὴ παντάπασιν ἄμαχος γένηται, καινὴν καὶ ἀσυνήθη πείραν ἐπήγε τοῖς πολλοῖς ἀποτροπῆς, ἀντιδημαγωγούσα καὶ
- 4 χαριζομένη παρὰ τὸ βέλτιστον. ἦν γὰρ εἰς τῶν τοῦ Γαίου συναρχόντων Λίβιος Δροῦσος, ἀνὴρ οὔτε γεγωνῶς τινος Ῥωμαίων οὔτε τεθραμμένους χεῖρον, ἤθει¹ δὲ καὶ λόγῳ καὶ πλούτῳ τοῖς μάλιστα τιμωμένοις καὶ δυναμένοις ἀπὸ τούτων ἐνάμιλλος. ἐπὶ τούτῳ οὖν οἱ γνωριμώτατοι τρέπονται, καὶ παρεκάλουν αὐτὸν ἄψασθαι τοῦ Γαίου καὶ μετ' αὐτῶν ἐπὶ τὸν ἄνδρα συστήναι, μὴ βιαζόμενον μηδὲ ἀντικρούοντα τοῖς πολλοῖς, ἀλλὰ πρὸς ἡδονὴν ἄρχοντα καὶ χαριζόμενον ὑπὲρ ὧν καὶ ἀπεχθάνεσθαι καλῶς εἶχεν.

IX. Ἐπιδούς οὖν ὁ Λίβιος εἰς ταῦτα τῇ βουλῇ τὴν ἑαυτοῦ δημαρχίαν νόμους ἔγραψεν οὔτε τῶν

¹ ἤθει. Coraës and Bekker retain the old vulgate ἤδη.

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

him along with his friends. This turned the tide strongly in favour of Fannius. So Fannius was elected consul, and Caius tribune for the second time, though he was not a candidate and did not canvass for the office; but the people were eager to have it so.

However, he soon saw that the senate was hostile to him out and out, and that the good will of Fannius towards him had lost its edge, and therefore again began to attach the multitude to himself by other laws, proposing to send colonies to Tarentum and Capua, and inviting the Latins to a participation in the Roman franchise. But the senate, fearing that Gracchus would become altogether invincible, made a new and unusual attempt to divert the people from him; they vied with him, that is, in courting the favour of the people, and granted their wishes contrary to the best interests of the state. For one of the colleagues of Caius was Livius Drusus, a man who was not inferior to any Roman either in birth or rearing, while in character, eloquence, and wealth he could vie with those who were most honoured and influential in consequence of these advantages. To this man, accordingly, the nobles had recourse, and invited him to attack Caius and league himself with them against him, not resorting to violence or coming into collision with the people, but administering his office to please them and making them concessions where it would have been honourable to incur their hatred.

IX. Livius, accordingly, put his influence as tribune at the service of the senate to this end, and drew up laws which aimed at what was neither honourable καλῶν τινος οὔτε τῶν λυσιτελῶν ἐχομένους, ἀλλὰ ἐν μόνον, ὑπερβαλέσθαι τὸν Γάϊον ἡδονῇ καὶ χάριτι τῶν πολλῶν, ὥσπερ ἐν κωμῳδίᾳ, σπεύδων καὶ διαμιλλώμενος. ᾧ καὶ καταφανεστάτην ἐποίησεν ἑαυτὴν ἢ σύγκλητος οὐ δυσχεραίνουσαι τοῖς τοῦ Γαίου πολιτεύμασιν, ἀλλὰ αὐτὸν ἐκείνου ἀνελεῖν ἢ ταπεινῶσαι παντάπασι βουλομένην.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

2 τὸν μὲν γὰρ ὑποικίας δύο γράψαντα καὶ τοὺς χαριεστάτους τῶν πολιτῶν εἰσάγοντα δημοκοπεῖν ἤτιῶντο, Λιβίῳ δὲ δώδεκα κατοικίζοντι καὶ τρισχιλίους εἰς ἐκάστην ἀποστέλλοντι τῶν ἀπόρων συναλαμβάνοντο. κακείνῳ μὲν, ὅτι χώραν διένειμε τοῖς πένησι προστάξας ἐκάστῳ τελεῖν ἀποφορὰν εἰς τὸ δημόσιον, ὡς κολακεύοντι τοὺς πολλοὺς ἀπηχθάνοντο, Λίβιος δὲ καὶ τὴν ἀποφορὰν ταύτην

3 τῶν νειμαμένων ἀφαιρῶν ἤρεσκεν αὐτοῖς. ἔτι δὲ ὁ μὲν τοῖς Λατίνοις ἰσοψηφίαν διδούς ἐλύπει, τοῦ δέ, ὅπως μὴδὲ ἐπὶ στρατείας ἐξῆ τινα Λατίνων ῥάβδοις αἰκίσασθαι γράψαντος ἐβοήθουν τῷ νόμῳ. καὶ μέντοι καὶ αὐτὸς ὁ Λίβιος αἰὲν δημηγορῶν ἔλεγεν ὡς γράφοι ταῦτα τῇ βουλῇ δοκοῦντα κηδο-

4 μένη τῶν πολλῶν· ὃ δὲ καὶ μόνον ἀπὸ τῶν πολιτευμάτων αὐτοῦ χρήσιμον ὑπῆρχεν. ἡμερώτερον γὰρ ἔσχε πρὸς τὴν βουλὴν ὁ δῆμος· καὶ τοὺς γνωριμωτάτους αὐτοῦ πρότερον ὑφορωμένου καὶ

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

nor advantageous; nay, he had the emulous eagerness of the rival demagogues of comedy to achieve one thing, namely, to surpass Caius in pleasing and gratifying the people.¹ In this way the senate showed most plainly that it was not displeased with the public measures of Caius, but rather was desirous by all means to humble or destroy the man himself. For when Caius proposed to found two colonies, and these composed of the most respectable citizens, they accused him of truckling to the people; but when Livius proposed to found twelve, and to send out to each of them three thousand of the needy citizens, they supported him. With Caius, because he distributed public land among the poor for which every man of them was required to pay a rental into the public treasury, they were angry, alleging that he was seeking thereby to win favour with the multitude; but Livius met with their approval when he proposed to relieve the tenants even from this rental. And further, when Caius proposed to bestow upon the Latins equal rights of suffrage, he gave offence; but when Livius brought in a bill forbidding that any Latin should be chastised with rods even during military service, he had the senate's support. And indeed Livius himself, in his public harangues, always said that he introduced these measures on the authority of the senate, which desired to help the common people; and this in fact was the only advantage which resulted from his political measures. For the people became more amicably disposed towards the senate; and whereas before this they had suspected and hated the nobles, Livius softened and μισούντος ἐξέλυσε καὶ κατεπράυνε τὴν μνησικακίαν καὶ χαλεπότητα ταύτην ὁ Λίβιος, ὡς ἐκ 839 τῆς ἐκείνων ὀρμώμενος γνώμης ἐπὶ τὸ δημαγωγεῖν καὶ χαρίζεσθαι τοῖς πολλοῖς.

¹ An allusion to the rival demagogues in the Knights of Aristophanes.

X. Μεγίστη δὲ τῷ Δροῦσῳ πίστις εὐνοίας πρὸς τὸν δῆμον ἐγένετο καὶ δικαιοσύνης τὸ μηδὲν αὐτῷ μηδ' ὑπὲρ ἑαυτοῦ φαίνεσθαι γράφοντα. καὶ γὰρ οἰκιστὰς ἐτέρους ἐξέπεμπε τῶν πόλεων καὶ διοικήσεσι χρημάτων οὐ προσήει, τοῦ Γαῖου τὰ πλεῖστα καὶ μέγιστα τῶν τοιούτων αὐτῷ
 2 προστιθέντος. ἐπεὶ δὲ Ῥουβρίου τῶν συναρχόντων ἑνὸς οἰκίζεσθαι Καρχηδόνα γράψαντος ἀνηρημένην ὑπὸ Σκηπίωνος, κλήρω λαχὼν ὁ Γάιος ἐξέπλευσεν εἰς Λιβύην ἐπὶ τὸν κατοικισμόν, ἔτι μᾶλλον ἐπιβὰς ὁ Δροῦσος ἀπόντος αὐτοῦ τὸν δῆμον ὑπελάμβανε καὶ προσήγετο, μάλιστα ταῖς
 3 κατὰ τοῦ Φουλβίου διαβολαῖς. ὁ δὲ Φούλβιος οὗτος ἦν τοῦ Γαῖου φίλος, καὶ συνάρχων ἐπὶ τὴν διανομὴν τῆς χώρας ἡρημένος· ἦν δὲ θορυβώδης, καὶ μισούμενος μὲν ὑπὸ τῆς βουλῆς ἄντικρυς, ὑποπτος δὲ καὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις ὡς τὰ συμμαχικὰ διακινῶν καὶ παροξύνων κρύφα τοὺς Ἰταλιώτας πρὸς ἀπόστασιν. οἷς ἀναποδείκτως καὶ ἀνελέγκτως λεγομένοις αὐτὸς προσετίθει πίστιν ὁ
 4 Φούλβιος οὐχ ὑγιαινούσης οὐδὲ εἰρηνικῆς ὧν προαιρέσεως. τοῦτο μάλιστα κατέλυε τὸν Γάιον ἀπολαύοντα τοῦ μίσους. καὶ ὅτε Σκηπίων ὁ

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

dissipated their remembrance of past grievances and their bitter feelings by alleging that it was the sanction of the nobles which had induced him to enter upon his course of conciliating the people and gratifying the wishes of the many.

X. But the strongest proof that Livius was well disposed towards the people and honest, lay in the fact that he never appeared to propose anything for himself or in his own interests. For he moved to send out other men as managers of his colonies, and would have no hand in the expenditure of moneys, whereas Caius had assigned to himself most of such functions and the most important of them. And now Rubrius, one of his colleagues in the tribuneship, brought in a bill for the founding of a colony on the site of Carthage, which had been destroyed by Scipio, and Caius, upon whom the lot fell, sailed off to Africa as superintendent of the foundation. In his absence, therefore, Livius made all the more headway against him, stealing into the good graces of the people and attaching them to himself, particularly by his calumniations of Fulvius. This Fulvius was a friend of Caius, and had been chosen a commissioner with him for the distribution of the public land; but he was a turbulent fellow, and was hated outright by the senators. Other men also suspected him of stirring up trouble with the allies and of secretly inciting the Italians to revolt. These things were said against him without proof or investigation, but Fulvius himself brought them into greater credence by a policy which was unsound and revolutionary. This more than anything else was the undoing of Caius, who came in for a share of the hatred against Fulvius. And when Scipio Africanus

Ἄφρικανὸς ἐξ οὐδενὸς αἰτίου προφανοῦς ἐτελεύτησε καὶ σημειῖά τινα τῷ νεκρῷ πληγῶν καὶ βίας ἐπιδραμεῖν ἔδοξεν, ὡς ἐν τοῖς περὶ ἐκείνου γέ-γραπται, τὸ μὲν πλεῖστον ἐπὶ τὸν Φούλβιον ἦλθε τῆς διαβολῆς, ἐχθρὸν ὄντα καὶ τὴν ἡμέραν ἐκείνην ἐπὶ τοῦ βήματος τῷ Σκηπίωνι λελοιδωρημένον, δ ἤψατο δὲ καὶ τοῦ Γαίου ὑπόνοια. καὶ δεινὸν
οὕτως ἔργον ἐπ' ἀνδρὶ τῷ πρώτῳ καὶ μεγίστῳ Ῥωμαίων τολμηθὲν οὐκ ἔτυχε δίκης οὐδὲ εἰς ἔλεγχον προῆλθεν· ἐνέστησαν γὰρ οἱ πολλοὶ καὶ κατέλυσαν τὴν κρίσιν ὑπὲρ τοῦ Γαίου φοβηθέντες, μὴ περιπετῆς τῇ αἰτίᾳ τοῦ φόνου ζητουμένου γένηται. ταῦτα μὲν οὖν ἐγεγόνει πρότερον.

XI. Ἐν δὲ τῇ Λιβύῃ περὶ τὸν τῆς Καρχηδόνας κατοικισμὸν, ἣν ὁ Γάιος Ἰουνωνίαν, ὅπερ ἐστὶν Ἑραΐαν, ὠνόμασε, πολλὰ κωλύματα γενέσθαι παρὰ τοῦ δαιμονίου λέγουσιν. ἥ τε γὰρ πρώτη σημαία, πνεύματος ἄφαρπάζοντος αὐτήν, τοῦ δὲ φέροντος ἐγκρατῶς ἀντεχομένου, συνετρίβη, καὶ τὰ ἱερὰ τοῖς βωμοῖς ἐπικείμενα διεσκέδασεν ἀνέ-μου θύελλα καὶ διέρριψεν ὑπὲρ τοὺς ὄρους τῆς γεγενημένης ὑπογραφῆς, αὐτοὺς δὲ τοὺς ὄρους ἀνέσπασαν ἐπελθόντες λύκοι καὶ μακρὰν ὄχοντο 2 φέροντες. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ πάντα συντάξας καὶ διακοσμήσας ὁ Γάιος ἡμέραις ἑβδομήκοντα ταῖς πάσαις ἐπανῆλθεν εἰς Ῥώμην, πιέζεσθαι τὸν Φούλβιον ὑπὸ τοῦ Δρούσου πυνθανόμενος, καὶ τῶν πραγμάτων τῆς αὐτοῦ παρουσίας δεομένων.

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

died without any apparent cause, and certain marks of violence and blows were thought to be in evidence all over his dead body, as I have written in his Life,¹ most of the consequent calumny fell upon Fulvius, who was Scipio's enemy, and had abused him that day from the rostra, but suspicion attached itself also to Caius. And a deed so monstrous, and perpetrated upon a man who was the foremost and greatest Roman, went unpunished, nay, was not even so much as probed; for the multitude were opposed to any judicial enquiry and thwarted it, because they feared that Caius might be implicated in the charge if the murder were investigated. However, this had happened at an earlier time.²

XI. In Africa, moreover, in connection with the planting of a colony on the site of Carthage, to which colony Caius gave the name Junonia (that is to say, in Greek, Heraea), there are said to have been many prohibitory signs from the gods. For the leading standard was caught by a gust of wind, and though the bearer clung to it with all his might, it was broken into pieces; the sacrificial victims lying on the altars were scattered by a hurricane and dispersed beyond the boundary-marks in the plan of the city, and the boundary-marks themselves were set upon by wolves, who tore them up and carried them a long way off. Notwithstanding this, Caius settled and arranged everything in seventy days all told, and then returned to Rome, because he learned that Fulvius was being hard pressed by Drusus, and because matters there required his presence. For

¹ See the Tiberius Gracchus, ad fin., and cf. the Romulus, xxvii. 4 f.

² In 129 B.C., six years before Caius became tribune.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Λεύκιος γὰρ Ὀπίμιος, ἀνὴρ ὀλιγαρχικὸς καὶ δυνατὸς ἐν τῇ βουλῇ, πρότερον μὲν ἐξέπεσεν ὑπατεῖαν παραγγέλλων, τοῦ Γαίου τὸν Φάννιον προαγαγόντος, ἐκείνον δὲ καταρχαιρεσιάσαντος·
 3 τότε δὲ πολλῶν βοηθούτων ἐπίδοξος ἦν ὑπατεῦσαι, ὑπατεύων δὲ καταλύσειν τὸν Γάϊον, ἤδη τρόπον τινα τῆς δυνάμεως αὐτοῦ μαραινομένης καὶ τοῦ δήμου μεστοῦ γεγονότος τῶν τοιούτων πολιτευμάτων διὰ τὸ πολλοὺς τοὺς πρὸς χάριν δημαγωγούντας εἶναι καὶ τὴν βουλήν ὑπέικειν ἐκούσαν.

XII. Ἐπανελθὼν δὲ πρῶτον μὲν ἐκ τοῦ Παλατίου μετώκησεν εἰς τὸν ὑπὸ τὴν ἀγορὰν τόπον ὡς δημοτικώτερον, ὅπου πλείστους τῶν ταπεινῶν καὶ πενήτων συνέβαινε οἰκεῖν· ἔπειτα τῶν νόμων ἐξέθηκε τοὺς λοιποὺς ὡς ἐπάξων τὴν ψῆφον αὐτοῖς. ὄχλου δὲ πανταχόθεν αὐτῷ συιόντος ἔπεισεν ἢ βουλή τὸν ὑπατον Φάννιον ἐκβαλεῖν
 2 τοὺς ἄλλους πλὴν Ῥωμαίων ἅπαντας. γενομένου 840 δὲ κηρύγματος ἀήθους καὶ ἀλλοκότου, μηδένα τῶν συμμάχων μηδὲ τῶν φίλων ἐν Ῥώμῃ φανῆναι περὶ τὰς ἡμέρας ἐκείνας, ἀντεξέθηκεν ὁ Γάϊος διάγραμμα κατηγορῶν τοῦ ὑπάτου, καὶ τοῖς συμμάχοις, ἂν μένωσι, βοηθήσειν ἐπαγγελλλόμενος. οὐ μὴν ἐβοήθησεν, ἀλλὰ ὀρῶν ἓνα τῶν ξένων αὐτοῦ καὶ συνήθων ἐλκόμενον ὑπὸ τῶν ὑπηρετῶν τῶν τοῦ Φαννίου, παρήλθε καὶ οὐ προσήμυνεν, εἴτε τὴν ἰσχὺν ἐπιλείπουσαν ἤδη δεδιῶς ἐλέγχειν,

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

Lucius Opimius, a man of oligarchical principles and influential in the senate, who had previously failed in a candidacy for the consulship (when Caius had brought forward Fannius and supported his canvas for the office),¹ now had the aid and assistance of many, and it was expected that he would be consul, and that as consul he would try to put down Caius, whose influence was already somewhat on the wane, and with whose peculiar measures the people had become sated, because the leaders who courted their favour were many and the senate readily yielded to them.

XII. On returning to Rome, in the first place Caius changed his residence from the Palatine hill to the region adjoining the forum, which he thought more democratic, since most of the poor and lowly had come to live there; in the next place, he promulgated the rest of his laws, intending to get the people's vote upon them. But when a throng came together from all parts of Italy for his support, the senate prevailed upon the consul Fannius to drive out of the city all who were not Romans. Accordingly, a strange and unusual proclamation was made, to the effect that none of the allies and friends of Rome should appear in the city during those days; whereupon Caius published a counter edict in which he denounced the consul, and promised the allies his support, in case they should remain there. He did not, however, give them his support, but when he saw one of his comrades and guest-friends dragged off by the lictors of Fannius, he passed by without giving him any help, either because he feared to give a proof that his power was already on the decline, or because εἶτε μὴ βουλόμενος, ὡς ἔλεγεν, ἀψιμαχίας αὐτὸς καὶ συμπλοκῆς ἄρχὰς ζητοῦσι τοῖς ἐχθροῖς παρασχεῖν.

¹ See chapter viii. 2.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- 3 Συνέτυχε δὲ αὐτῷ καὶ πρὸς τοὺς συνάρχοντας ἐν ὀργῇ γενέσθαι διὰ τοιαύτην αἰτίαν. ἔμελλεν ὁ δῆμος θεᾶσθαι μονομάχους ἐν ἀγορᾷ, καὶ τῶν ἀρχόντων οἱ πλείστοι θεωρητήρια κύκλω κατασκευάσαντες ἐξεμίσθουν. ταῦτα ὁ Γάιος ἐκέλευεν αὐτοὺς καθαιρεῖν, ὅπως οἱ πένητες ἐκ τῶν τόπων
- 4 ἐκείνων ἀμισθὶ θεάσασθαι δύνωνται. μηδενὸς δὲ προσέχοντος ἀναμείνας τὴν πρὸ τῆς θεᾶς νύκτα, καὶ τῶν τεχνιτῶν ὅσους εἶχεν ἐργολάβους ὑφ' ἑαυτῷ παραλαβὼν, τὰ θεωρητήρια καθεῖλε καὶ τῷ δήμῳ σχολάζοντα μεθ' ἡμέραν ἀπέδειξε τὸν τόπον. ἐφ' ᾧ τοῖς μὲν πολλοῖς ἀνὴρ ἔδοξεν εἶναι, τοὺς δὲ συνάρχοντας ὡς ἰταμὸς καὶ βίαιος ἐλύπησεν. ἐκ τούτου καὶ τὴν τρίτην ἔδοξε δημαρχίαν ἀφηρῆσθαι, ψήφων μὲν αὐτῷ πλείστων γενομένων, ἀδίκως δὲ καὶ κακούργως τῶν συναρχόντων ποιησαμένων τὴν ἀναγόρευσιν καὶ ἀνάδειξιν.
- 5 ἀλλὰ ταῦτα μὲν ἀμφισβήτησιν εἶχεν. ἤνεγκε δὲ οὐ μετρίως ἀποτυχῶν, καὶ πρὸς γε τοὺς ἐχθροὺς ἐπεγγελῶντας αὐτῷ λέγεται θρασύτερον τοῦ δέοντος εἰπεῖν ὡς Σαρδόνιον γέλωτα γελῶσιν, οὐ γιγνώσκοντες ὅσον αὐτοῖς σκότος ἐκ τῶν αὐτοῦ περικέχυται πολιτευμάτων.

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

he was unwilling, as he said, by his own acts to afford his enemies the occasions which they sought for a conflict at close quarters.

Moreover, it chanced that he had incurred the anger of his colleagues in office, and for the following reason. The people were going to enjoy an exhibition of gladiators in the forum, and most of the magistrates had constructed seats for the show round about, and were offering them for hire. Caius ordered them to take down these seats, in order that the poor might be able to enjoy the spectacle from those places without paying hire. But since no one paid any attention to his command, he waited till the night before the spectacle, and then, taking all the workmen whom he had under his orders in public contracts, he pulled down the seats, and when day came he had the place all clear for the people. For this proceeding the populace thought him a man, but his colleagues were annoyed and thought him reckless and violent. It was believed also that this conduct cost him his election to the tribunate for the third time, since, although he got a majority of the votes, his colleagues were unjust and fraudulent in their proclamation and returns. This, however, was disputed. But he took his failure overmuch to heart, and what is more, when his enemies were exulting over him, he told them, it is said, with more boldness than was fitting, that they were laughing with sardonic laughter, and were not aware of the great darkness that enveloped them in consequence of his public measures.¹

¹ Blass compares the laughter of the doomed suitors in Odyssey, xx. 346 ff.—the fatuous smile of men whose fate is sealed, though they are unaware of it.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- XIII. Ἐπεὶ δὲ καὶ τὸν Ὀπίμιον καταστήσαντες ὑπάτου τῶν νόμων πολλοὺς διέγραφον καὶ τὴν Καρχηδόνα ἐκίνουν διάταξιν, ἐρεθίζοντες τὸν Γάιον, ὡς ἂν αἰτίαν ὀργῆς παρασχῶν ἀναιρεθείη, τὸν μὲν πρῶτον χρόνον ἐκαρτέρει, τῶν δὲ φίλων καὶ μάλιστα τοῦ Φουλβίου παροξύνοντος ὤρμησε πάλιν συνάγειν τοὺς ἀντιταξομένους πρὸς τὸν
- 2 ὑπάτου. ἐνταῦθα καὶ τὴν μητέρα λέγουσιν αὐτῷ συστασιάσαι, μισθουμένην ἀπὸ τῆς ξένης κρύφα καὶ πέμπουσιν εἰς Ῥώμην ἄνδρας, ὡς δὴ θεριστάς· ταῦτα γὰρ ἐν τοῖς ἐπιστολίοις αὐτῆς ἠνιγμένα γεγράφθαι πρὸς τὸν υἱόν. ἕτεροι δὲ καὶ πάνυ τῆς Κορνηλίας δυσχεραίνουσης ταῦτα πράττεσθαι λέγουσιν.
- 3 Ἡ δ' οὖν ἔμελλον ἡμέρα τοὺς νόμους λύσειν οἱ περὶ τὸν Ὀπίμιον, κατείληπτο μὲν ὑπὸ ἀμφοτέρων ἔωθεν εὐθύς τὸ Καπετώλιον, θύσαντος δὲ τοῦ ὑπάτου τῶν ὑπηρετῶν τις αὐτοῦ Κόϊντος Ἀντύλλιος διαφέρων ἐτέρωσε τὰ σπλάγχνα πρὸς τοὺς περὶ τὸν Φούλβιον εἶπε· “ Δότε τόπον ἀγαθοῖς, κακοὶ πολῖται.” τινὲς δὲ φασιν ἅμα τῇ φωνῇ ταύτῃ καὶ τὸν βραχίονα γυμνὸν οἶον ἐφ' ὕβρει
- 4 σχηματίζοντα παρενεγκεῖν. ἀποθνήσκει γοῦν εὐθύς ὁ Ἀντύλλιος ἐκεῖ μεγάλοις γραφείοις κεντούμενος, ἐπ' αὐτῷ τούτῳ πεποιεῖσθαι λεγομένοις. καὶ τὸ μὲν πλῆθος διεταράχθη πρὸς τὸν φόνον, ἐναντία δὲ τοὺς ἡγεμόνας ἔσχε διάθεσις. ὁ μὲν γὰρ Γάιος ἤχθητο καὶ κακῶς ἔλεγε τοὺς

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

XIII. The enemies of Caius also effected the election of Opimius as consul, and then proceeded to revoke many of the laws which Caius had secured and to meddle with the organization of the colony at Carthage. This was by way of irritating Caius, that he might furnish ground for resentment, and so be got rid of. At first he endured all this patiently, but at last, under the instigations of his friends, and especially of Fulvius, he set out to gather a fresh body of partisans for opposition to the consul. Here, we are told, his mother also took active part in his seditious measures, by secretly hiring from foreign parts and sending to Rome men who were ostensibly reapers; for to this matter there are said to have been obscure allusions in her letters¹ to her son. Others, however, say that Cornelia was very much displeased with these activities of her son.

Be that as it may, on the day when Opimius and his supporters were going to annul the laws, the Capitol had been occupied by both factions since earliest morning, and after the consul had offered sacrifice, one of his servants, Quintus Antyllius, as he was carrying from one place to another the entrails of the victims, said to the partisans of Fulvius: "Make way for honest citizens, ye rascals!" Some say, too, that along with this speech Antyllius bared his arm and waved it with an insulting gesture. At any rate he was killed at once and on the spot, stabbed with large writing styles said to have been made for just such a purpose. The multitude were completely confused by the murder, but it produced an opposite state of mind in the leaders of the two factions. Caius was distressed, and upbraided his followers for περὶ αὐτὸν ὡς αἰτίαν δεομένοις πάλαι καθ' ἑαυτῶν τοῖς ἐχθροῖς δεδωκότας, ὁ δὲ Ὀπίμιος ὥσπερ ἐνδόσιμον λαβὼν ἐπήρτο καὶ παρῶξυνε τὸν δῆμον ἐπὶ τὴν ἄμυναν.

¹ Cf. Cicero, Brutus, 58, 211.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- XIV. Καὶ τότε μὲν ὄμβρου γενομένου διελύθησαν· ἅμα δὲ ἡμέρα τὴν μὲν βουλήν ὁ ὕπατος συναγαγὼν ἔνδον ἐχρημάτιζεν, ἕτεροι δὲ τὸ τοῦ Ἀντυλλίου σῶμα γυμνὸν ἐπὶ κλίνης προθέμενοι δι' ἀγορᾶς παρὰ τὸ βουλευτήριον ἐπίτηδες παρεκόμιζον, οἰμωγῇ χρώμενοι καὶ θρήνῳ, γιγνώσκοντος μὲν τοῦ Ὀπιμίου τὰ πραττόμενα, προσποιουμένου δὲ θαυμάζειν, ὥστε καὶ τοὺς βουλευτὰς
- 2 προελθεῖν. κατατεθείσης δὲ τῆς κλίνης εἰς μέσον οἱ μὲν ἐσχετλίαζον ὡς ἐπὶ δεινῷ καὶ μεγάλῳ πάθει, τοῖς δὲ πολλοῖς ἐπήει μισεῖν καὶ προβάλλεσθαι τοὺς ὀλιγαρχικούς, ὡς Τιβέριον μὲν Γράγχον ἐν Καπετωλίῳ φονεύσαντες αὐτοὶ δήμαρχον ὄντα καὶ τὸν νεκρὸν προσεξέβαλον, ὁ δ'
- 3 ὑπηρέτης Ἀντύλλιος, οὐ δίκαια μὲν ἴσως πεπονθώς, τὴν δὲ πλείστην αἰτίαν εἰς τὸ παθεῖν αὐτῷ παρασχών, ἐν ἀγορᾷ πρόκειται, καὶ περιέστηκεν ἢ Ῥωμαίων βουλή θρηνοῦσα καὶ συνεκκομίζουσα μισθωτὸν ἄνθρωπον, ἐπὶ τῷ τὸν ἔτι λειπόμενον ἀνελεῖν τῶν τοῦ δήμου κηδομένων. ἐκ τούτου
- 4 πάλιν εἰς τὸ βουλευτήριον ἀπελθόντες ἐψηφίσαντο καὶ προσέταξαν Ὀπιμίῳ τῷ ὑπάτῳ σῶζειν τὴν πόλιν ὅπως δύναίτο, καὶ καταλύειν τοὺς τυράννους.

841

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

having given their enemies ground for accusing them which had long been desired ; but Opimius, as though he had got something for which he was waiting, was elated, and urged the people on to vengeance.

XIV. A shower of rain fell just then, and the assembly was dissolved ; but early next morning the consul called the senate together indoors and proceeded to transact business, while others placed the body of Antyllius without covering upon a bier, and carried it, as they had agreed to do, through the forum and past the senate-house, with wailings and lamentations. Opimius knew what was going on, but pretended to be surprised, so that even the senators went out into the forum. After the bier had been set down in the midst of the throng, the senators began to inveigh against what they called a heinous and monstrous crime, but the people were moved to hatred and abuse of the oligarchs, who, they said, after murdering Tiberius Gracchus on the Capitol with their own hands, tribune that he was, had actually flung away his dead body besides ; whereas Antyllius, a mere servant, who perhaps had suffered more than he deserved, but was himself chiefly to blame for it, had been laid out in the forum, and was surrounded by the Roman senate, which shed tears and shared in the obsequies of a hireling fellow, to the end that the sole remaining champion of the people might be done away with. Then the senators went back into the senate-house, where they formally enjoined upon the consul Opimius to save the city as best he could,¹ and to put down the tyrants.

The consul therefore ordered the senators to take

¹ The formal decree of martial law : consul videret ne quid respublica detrimenti caperet (Cicero, In Cat. i. 2, 4).

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

τοὺς συγκλητικούς, καὶ τῶν ἱππέων ἐκάστῳ παράγγελμα δόντος ἄγειν ἔωθεν οἰκέτας δύο καθωπλισμένους, ὁ μὲν Φούλβιος ἀντιπαρεσκευά-ζετο καὶ συνήγειν ὄχλον, ὁ δὲ Γάϊος ἐκ τῆς ἀγορᾶς ἀπερχόμενος ἔστη κατὰ τὸν τοῦ πατρὸς ἀνδριάντα, καὶ πολὺν χρόνον ἐμβλέψας εἰς αὐτὸν οὐδὲν ἐφ-5 θέγγετο, δακρύσας δὲ καὶ στενάξας ἀπήει. τοῦτο πολλοῖς τῶν ἰδόντων οἰκτεῖται τὸν Γάϊον ἐπήλθε· καὶ κακίσαντες αὐτοὺς ὡς ἐγκαταλείποντες τὸν ἄνδρα καὶ προδιδόντες ἤκου ἐπὶ τὴν οἰκίαν καὶ παρενυκτέρευον ἐπὶ τῶν θυρῶν, οὐχ ὁμοίως τοῖς τὸν Φούλβιον φυλάττουσιν. ἐκεῖνοι μὲν γὰρ ἐν κρότοις καὶ ἀλαλαγμοῖς πίνοντες καὶ θρασυνό-μενοι διετέλεσαν, αὐτοῦ τοῦ Φουλβίου πρῶτου μεθυσκομένου καὶ πολλὰ φορτικῶς παρ' ἡλικίαν
 6 φθεγγομένου καὶ πράττοντος· οἱ δὲ περὶ τὸν Γάϊον, ὡς ἐπὶ συμφορᾷ κοινῇ τῆς πατρίδος ἡσυχίαν ἄγοντες καὶ περισκοπούμενοι τὸ μέλλον, ἐν μέρει φυλάττοντες καὶ ἀναπαυόμενοι διῆγον.

XV. Ἄμα δὲ ἡμέρα τὸν μὲν Φούλβιον ἐκ τοῦ πότου καθεύδοντα μόλις ἐπεγείραντες ὠπλίζοντο τοῖς περὶ τὴν οἰκίαν αὐτοῦ λαφύροις, ἃ Γαλάτας νενικηκῶς ὄτε ὑπάτευεν εἰλήφει, καὶ μετὰ πολλῆς ἀπειλῆς καὶ κραυγῆς ἐχώρουν καταληψόμενοι τὸν Ἀβεντῖνον λόφον. ὁ δὲ Γάϊος ὀπλίσασθαι μὲν οὐκ ἠθέλησεν, ἀλλ' ὥσπερ εἰς ἀγορὰν ἐν τηβέννῳ 2 προῆει, μικρὸν ὑπεξωσμένος ἐγχειρίδιον, ἐξιώντι δὲ αὐτῷ περὶ τὰς θύρας ἡ γυνὴ προσπεσοῦσα καὶ περιπτύξασα τῶν χειρῶν τῇ μὲν αὐτὸν ἐκείνου, τῇ δὲ τὸ παιδίον, “Οὐκ ἐπὶ τὸ βῆμά σε,” εἶπεν, “ὦ Γάϊε, προπέμπω δήμαρχον, ὡς πρότερον, καὶ νομο-

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

up arms, and every member of the equestrian order was notified to bring next morning two servants fully armed; Fulvius, on the other hand, made counter preparations and got together a rabble, but Caius, as he left the forum, stopped in front of his father's statue, gazed at it for a long time without uttering a word, then burst into tears, and with a groan departed. Many of those who saw this were moved to pity Caius; they reproached themselves for abandoning and betraying him, and went to his house, and spent the night at his door, though not in the same manner as those who were guarding Fulvius. For these passed the whole time in noise and shouting, drinking, and boasting of what they would do, Fulvius himself being the first to get drunk, and saying and doing much that was unseemly for a man of his years; but the followers of Caius, feeling that they faced a public calamity, kept quiet and were full of concern for the future, and passed the night sleeping and keeping watch by turns.

XV. When day came, Fulvius was with difficulty roused from his drunken sleep by his partisans, who armed themselves with the spoils of war about his house, which he had taken after a victory over the Gauls during his consulship, and with much threatening and shouting went to seize the Aventine hill. Caius, on the other hand, was unwilling to arm himself, but went forth in his toga, as though on his way to the forum, with only a short dagger on his person. As he was going out at the door, his wife threw herself in his way, and with one arm round her husband and the other round their little son, said: "Not to the rostra, O Caius, do I now send thee forth, as formerly, to serve as tribune and law-giver, nor yet to θέτην, οὐδ' ἐπὶ πόλεμον ἔνδοξον, ἵνα μοι καὶ πα-θῶν τι τῶν κοινῶν ἀπολίπης τιμώμενον γοῦν πένθος, ἀλλὰ τοῖς Τιβερίου φονεῦσιν ὑποβάλλεις ἑαυτόν, ἄνοπλον μὲν καλῶς, ἵνα πάθῃς τι μᾶλλον ἢ δράσης, πρὸς οὐδὲν δὲ τοῖς κοινοῖς ὄφελος ἀπολεῖ.

3 κεκράτηκεν ἤδη τὰ χεῖρω· βία καὶ σιδήρῳ τὰς δίκας πράττουσιν. εἰ περὶ Νομαντίαν ὃ σὸς ἀδελφὸς ἔπεσεν, ὑπόσπονδος ἂν ἡμῖν ἀπεδόθη νεκρὸς· νῦν δὲ ἴσως κἀγὼ ποταμοῦ τινος ἢ θαλάττης ἰκέτις ἔσομαι φῆναί ποτε τὸ σὸν σῶμα φρουρούμενον. τί γὰρ ἢ νόμοις ἔτι πιστὸν ἢ
4 θεοῖς μετὰ τὸν Τιβερίου φόνον;” τοιαῦτα τῆς Δικιυνίας ὀδυρομένης, ἀτρέμα τὰς περιβολὰς ἀπολυσάμενος αὐτῆς ὁ Γάιος ἐχώρει σιωπῇ μετὰ τῶν φίλων. ἢ δὲ τοῦ ἱματίου λαβέσθαι γλιχο-μένη καταρρνεῖσα πρὸς τοῦδαφος ἔκειτο πολλὴν χρόνον ἄναυδος, μέχρι οὐ λιποθυμήσασαν αὐτὴν οἱ θεράποντες ἀράμενοι πρὸς Κράσσον ὥχοντο τὸν ἀδελφὸν κομίζοντες.

XVI. Ὁ δὲ Φούλβιος, ὡς ἐγένοντο πάντες ἄθροοι, πεισθεὶς ὑπὸ τοῦ Γαίου πέμπει τῶν υἱῶν τὸν νεώτερον ἔχοντα κηρύκειον εἰς ἀγοράν. ἦν δὲ 842 κάλλιστος ὁ νεανίσκος ὀφθῆναι· καὶ τότε κατα-στάς κοσμίως καὶ μετ' αἰδοῦς δεδακρυμένος ἐποιή-σατο συμβατικὸς λόγους πρὸς τὸν ὑπατον καὶ 2 τὴν σύγκλητον. οἱ μὲν οὖν πολλοὶ τῶν παρόντων οὐκ ἀηδῶς πρὸς τὰς διαλύσεις εἶχον· ὁ δὲ Ὀπίμιος οὐ δι' ἀγγέλων ἔφη χρῆναι πείθειν τὴν σύγκλητον, ἀλλὰ καταβάντας ὡς ὑπευθύνους πολίτας ἐπὶ κρίσιν καὶ παραδόντας αὐτοὺς οὕτως παρατεῖσθαι τὴν ὀργήν· τῷ δὲ μεираκίῳ καὶ διηγόρευσε ἐπὶ τούτοις κατιέναι πάλιν ἢ μὴ

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

a glorious war, where, shouldst thou die (and all men must die), thou wouldst at all events leave me an honoured sorrow ; but thou art exposing thyself to the murderers of Tiberius, and thou doest well to go unarmed, that thou mayest suffer rather than inflict wrong ; but thy death will do the state no good. The worst has at last prevailed ; by violence and the sword men's controversies are now decided. If thy brother had only fallen at Numantia, his dead body would have been given back to us by terms of truce ; but as it is, perhaps I too shall have to supplicate some river or sea to reveal to me at last thy body in its keeping. Why, pray, should men longer put faith in laws or gods, after the murder of Tiberius?" While Licinnia was thus lamenting, Caius gently freed himself from her embrace and went away without a word, accompanied by his friends. Licinnia eagerly sought to clutch his robe, but sank to the ground and lay there a long time speechless, until her servants lifted her up unconscious and carried her away to the house of her brother Crassus.

XVI. When all were assembled together, Fulvius, yielding to the advice of Caius, sent the younger of his sons with a herald's wand into the forum. The young man was very fair to look upon ; and now, in a decorous attitude, modestly, and with tears in his eyes, he addressed conciliatory words to the consul and the senate. Most of his audience, then, were not disinclined to accept his terms of peace ; but Opimius declared that the petitioners ought not to try to persuade the senate by word of messenger ; they should rather come down and surrender themselves for trial, like citizens amenable to the laws, and then beg for mercy ; he also told the young man plainly to come

- 3 κατιέναι. Γάϊος μὲν οὖν, ὡς φασιν, ἐβούλετο βαδίζειν καὶ πείθειν τὴν σύγκλητον· οὐδενὸς δὲ τῶν ἄλλων συγχωροῦντος, αὐθις ἔπεμψεν ὁ Φούλβιος τὸν παῖδα διαλεξόμενον ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν ὅμοια τοῖς προτέροις. ὁ δὲ Ὀπίμος σπεύδων μάχην συνάψαι τὸ μὲν μειράκιον εὐθὺς συνέλαβε καὶ παρέδωκεν εἰς φυλακὴν, τοῖς δὲ περὶ τὸν Φούλβιον ἐπῆει μετὰ πολλῶν ὀπλιτῶν καὶ τοξοτῶν Κρητῶν,
- 4 οἱ μάλιστα βάλλοντες αὐτοὺς καὶ κατατραυματίζοντες συνετάραξαν. γενομένης δὲ τῆς τροπῆς ὁ μὲν Φούλβιος εἰς τι βαλανεῖον ἡμελημένον καταφυγὼν καὶ μετὰ μικρὸν ἀνευρεθεὶς κατεσφάγη μετὰ τοῦ πρεσβυτέρου παιδός, ὁ δὲ Γάϊος ὠφθῆ μὲν ὑπ' οὐδενὸς μαχόμενος, ἀλλὰ δυσανασχετῶν τοῖς γινομένοις ἀνεχώρησεν εἰς τὸ τῆς Ἀρτέμιδος ἱερόν· ἐκεῖ δὲ βουλόμενος ἑαυτὸν ἀνελεῖν ὑπὸ τῶν πιστοτάτων ἐταίρων ἐκωλύθη, Πομπωνίου καὶ Λικινίου· παρόντες γὰρ οὗτοι τό τε ξίφος ἀφείλουτο καὶ πάλιν φεύγειν ἐπῆραν αὐτόν. ἔνθα δὴ λέγεται καθεσθεῖς εἰς γόνυ καὶ τὰς χεῖρας ἀνατείνας πρὸς τὴν θεὸν ἐπεύξασθαι τὸν Ῥωμαίων δῆμον ἀντὶ τῆς ἀχαριστίας ἐκείνης καὶ προδοσίας μηδέποτε παύσασθαι δουλεύοντα· φανερώς γὰρ οἱ πλείστοι μετεβάλλοντο κηρύγματι δοθείσης ἀδείας.

XVII. Φεύγοντι δ' οὖν τῷ Γαίῳ τῶν ἐχθρῶν ἐπιφερομένων καὶ καταλαμβανόντων περὶ τὴν ξυλίνην γέφυραν, οἱ μὲν δύο φίλοι προχωρεῖν ἐκείνον κελεύσαντες αὐτοὶ τοὺς διώκοντας ὑπέστησαν καὶ μαχόμενοι πρὸ τῆς γεφύρας οὐδένα

2 παρήκαν ἕως ἀπέθανον. τῷ δὲ Γαίῳ συνέφευγεν

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

back again on these terms or not come back at all. Caius, accordingly, as we are told, was willing to come and try to persuade the senate; but no one else agreed with him, and so Fulvius sent his son again to plead in their behalf as before. But Opimius, who was eager to join battle, at once seized the youth and put him under guard, and then advanced on the party of Fulvius with numerous men-at-arms and Cretan archers. And it was the archers who, by discharging their arrows and wounding their opponents, were most instrumental in throwing them into confusion. After the rout had taken place, Fulvius fled for refuge into an unused bath, where he was shortly discovered and slain, together with his elder son. Caius, however, was not seen to take any part in the battle, but in great displeasure at what was happening he withdrew into the temple of Diana. There he was minded to make away with himself, but was prevented by his most trusty companions, Pomponius and Licinius; for they were at hand, and took away his sword, and urged him to flight again. Then, indeed, as we are told, he sank upon his knees, and with hands outstretched towards the goddess prayed that the Roman people, in requital for their great ingratitude and treachery, might never cease to be in servitude; for most of them were manifestly changing sides, now that proclamation of immunity had been made.

XVII. So then, as Caius fled, his foes pressed hard upon him and were overtaking him at the wooden bridge over the Tiber, but his two friends bade him go on, while they themselves withstood his pursuers, and, fighting there at the head of the bridge, would suffer no man to pass, until they were killed. Caius had with him in his flight a single servant, by name

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

εἰς οἰκίτης ὄνομα Φιλοκράτης, πάντων μὲν, ὥσπερ ἐν ἀμίλλῃ, παρακελευομένων, οὐδενὸς δὲ βοη-θούντος, οὐδὲ ἵππου αἰτουμένῳ παρασχεῖν ἐθελή-σαντος· ἐπέκειντο γὰρ ἐγγὺς οἱ διώκοντες. ὁ δὲ φθάνει μικρὸν εἰς ἱερὸν ἄλσος Ἐριννύων καταφυγών, κακεῖ διαφθείρεται, τοῦ Φιλοκράτους ἀνε-3 λόντος ἐκείνου, εἶτα ἑαυτὸν ἐπισφάξαντος. ὡς δὲ ἔνιοί φασιν, ἀμφοτέροι μὲν ὑπὸ τῶν πολεμίων κατελήφθησαν ζῶντες, τοῦ δὲ θεράποντος τὸν δεσπότην περιβαλόντος οὐδεὶς ἐκείνου ἠδυνήθη πατάξαι πρότερον ἢ τοῦτον ὑπὸ πολλῶν παιό-μενον ἀναιρεθῆναι. τὴν δὲ κεφαλὴν τοῦ Γαῖου λέγουσιν ἄλλον μὲν ἀποκόψαι καὶ κομίζειν, ἀφελῆσθαι δὲ τούτου φίλον Ὀπιμίῳ τινα, Σεπ-τουμουλήϊον· ἦν γὰρ προκεκηρυγμένον ἐν ἀρχῇ τῆς μάχης ἰσοστάσιον χρυσίον τοῖς ἀνενεγκούσι 4 τὴν Γαῖου καὶ Φουλβίου κεφαλὴν. ἀνηνέχθη δὲ ὑπὸ τοῦ Σεπτουμουλητίου περιπεπαρμένη δόρατι πρὸς τὸν Ὀπίμιον, καὶ ζυγοῦ κομισθέντος ἐντεθεῖσα λίτρας ἑπτακαίδεκα καὶ δίμοιρον εἴλκυσε, τοῦ Σεπτουμουλητίου καὶ περὶ τοῦτο μιαιροῦ γενο-μένου καὶ κακουργήσαντος· ἐξελὼν γὰρ τὸν ἐγκέ-φalon ἐνέτηξε μόλυβδον. οἱ δὲ τοῦ Φουλβίου 5 τὴν κεφαλὴν κομίσαντες (ἦσαν γὰρ τῶν ἀσημοτέρων) οὐδὲν ἔλαβον. τὰ δὲ σώματα καὶ τούτων καὶ τῶν ἄλλων εἰς τὸν ποταμὸν ἐρρίφη, τρισ-χιλίων ἀναιρεθέντων· καὶ τὰς οὐσίας αὐτῶν ἀπέδοντο πρὸς τὸ δημόσιον. ἀπείπαν δὲ πενθεῖν ταῖς γυναιξί, τὴν δὲ Γαῖου Λικιννίαν καὶ τῆς προικὸς ἀπεστέρησαν. ὠμότατον δὲ προσειργάσαντο τοῦ Φουλβίου τὸν νεώτερον υἱόν, οὔτε

843

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

Philocrates; and though all the spectators, as at a race, urged Caius on to greater speed, not a man came to his aid, or even consented to furnish him with a horse when he asked for one, for his pursuers were pressing close upon him. He barely succeeded in escaping into a sacred grove of the Furies, and there fell by the hand of Philocrates, who then slew himself upon his master. According to some writers, however, both were taken alive by the enemy, and because the servant had thrown his arms about his master, no one was able to strike the master until the slave had first been dispatched by the blows of many. Someone cut off the head of Caius, we are told, and was carrying it along, but was robbed of it by a certain friend of Opimius, Septimuleius; for proclamation had been made at the beginning of the battle that an equal weight of gold would be paid the men who brought the head of Caius or Fulvius. So Septimuleius stuck the head of Caius on a spear and brought it to Opimius, and when it was placed in a balance it weighed seventeen pounds and two thirds, since Septimuleius, besides showing himself to be a scoundrel, had also perpetrated a fraud; for he had taken out the brain and poured melted lead in its place. But those who brought the head of Fulvius were of the obscurer sort, and therefore got nothing. The bodies of Caius and Fulvius and of the other slain were thrown into the Tiber, and they numbered three thousand; their property was sold and the proceeds paid into the public treasury. Moreover, their wives were forbidden to go into mourning, and Licinnia, the wife of Caius, was also deprived of her marriage portion. Most cruel of all, however, was the treatment of the younger son of Fulvius, who had neither lifted a hand χειρας ανταράμενον οὐτ' ἐν τοῖς μαχομένοις γενόμενον, ἀλλὰ ἐπὶ σπονδὰς ἐλθόντα πρὸ τῆς μάχης 6 συλλαβόντες καὶ μετὰ τὴν μάχην ἀνελόντες. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ καὶ τούτου καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἀπάντων μᾶλλον ἠνίασε τοὺς πολλοὺς τὸ κατασκευασθὲν Ὀμοιοίας ἱερὸν ὑπὸ τοῦ Ὀπιμίου· σεμνύνεσθαι γὰρ ἐδόκει καὶ μέγα φρονεῖν καὶ τρόπον τινα θριαμβεύειν ἐπὶ φόνοις τοσούτοις πολιτῶν. διὸ καὶ νυκτὸς ὑπὸ τὴν ἐπιγραφὴν τοῦ νεῶ παρενέγραψάν τινες τὸν στίχον τούτον· “Ἔργον ἀπονοίας ναὸν ὀμοιοίας ποιεῖ.”

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

XVIII. Οὗτος μέντοι πρῶτος ἐξουσία δικτάτορος ἐν ὑπατεία χρησάμενος καὶ κατακτείνας ἀκρίτους ἐπὶ τρισχιλίοις πολίταις Γάϊον Γράγχον καὶ Φούλβιον Φλάκκον, ὧν ὁ μὲν ἦν ὑπατικός καὶ θριαμβικός, ὁ δὲ τῆς καθ' αὐτὸν ἡλικίας ἀρετῆ καὶ δόξῃ πεπρωτευκῶς, οὐκ ἀπέσχετο κλοπῆς, ἀλλὰ πεμφθεὶς ὡς Ἰουγούρθαν τὸν Νομάδα πρεσβευτῆς διεφθάρη χρήμασιν ὑπ' αὐτοῦ· καὶ δίκην ὀφλῶν αἰσχίστην δωροδοκίας ἐν ἀτιμίᾳ κατεγήρασε μισούμενος καὶ προπηλακιζόμενος ὑπὸ τοῦ 2 δήμου, παρ' αὐτὰ μὲν τὰ πραχθέντα ταπεινοῦ γενομένου καὶ συσταλέντος, ὀλίγῳ δὲ ὕστερον ἐκφήναντος ὅσον εἶχεν ἡμέρου καὶ πόθου τῶν Γράγχων. εἰκόνας τε γὰρ αὐτῶν ἀναδείξαντες ἐν φανερῷ προϋτίθεντο, καὶ τοὺς τόπους ἐν οἷς ἐφανεύθησαν ἀφιερῶσαντες ἀπήρχοντο μὲν ὧν ὠραι φέρουσι πάντων, ἔθνον δὲ καὶ καθ' ἡμέραν πολλοὶ καὶ προσέπιπτον, ὥσπερ θεῶν ἱεροῖς ἐπιφοιτῶντες.

XIX. Καὶ μέντοι καὶ ἡ Κορνηλία λέγεται τά

TIBERIUS AND CAIUS GRACCHUS

against the nobles nor been present at the fighting, but had come to effect a truce before the battle and had been arrested; after the battle he was slain. However, what vexed the people more than this or anything else was the erection of a temple of Concord by Opimius¹; for it was felt that he was priding himself and exulting and in a manner celebrating a triumph in view of all this slaughter of citizens. Therefore at night, beneath the inscription on the temple, somebody carved this verse :—" A work of mad discord produces a temple of Concord."

XVIII. And yet this Opimius, who was the first consul to exercise the power of a dictator, and put to death without trial, besides three thousand other citizens, Caius Gracchus and Fulvius Flaccus, of whom one had been consul and had celebrated a triumph, while the other was the foremost man of his generation in virtue and reputation—this Opimius could not keep his hands from fraud, but when he was sent as ambassador to Jugurtha the Numidian was bribed by him, and after being convicted most shamefully of corruption, he spent his old age in infamy, hated and abused by the people, a people which was humble and cowed at the time when the Gracchi fell, but soon afterwards showed how much it missed them and longed for them. For it had statues of the brothers made and set up in a conspicuous place, consecrated the places where they were slain, and brought thither offerings of all the first-fruits of the seasons, nay, more, many sacrificed and fell down before their statues every day, as though they were visiting the shrines of gods.

XIX. And further, Cornelia is reported to have

¹ Opimius restored the temple of Concord which had been built by Camillus (see the Camillus, xlii. 4).

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

τε ἄλλα τῆς συμφορᾶς εὐγενῶς καὶ μεγαλοψύχως ἐνεγκεῖν, καὶ περὶ τῶν ἱερῶν ἐν οἷς ἀνηρέθησαν εἰπεῖν ὡς ἀξίους οἱ νεκροὶ τάφους ἔχουσιν. αὕτη δὲ περὶ τοὺς καλουμένους Μισσηνοὺς διέτριβεν, 2 οὐδὲν μεταλλάξασα τῆς συνήθους διαίτης. ἦν δὲ πολύφίλος καὶ διὰ φιλοξενίαν εὐτράπεζος, αἰετὸν μὲν Ἑλλήνων καὶ φιλολόγων περὶ αὐτὴν ὄντων, ἀπάντων δὲ τῶν βασιλέων καὶ δεχομένων παρ' αὐτῆς δῶρα καὶ πεμπόντων. ἡδίστη μὲν οὖν ἦν αὕτη τοῖς ἀφικνουμένοις καὶ συνοῦσι διηγουμένη τὸν τοῦ πατρὸς Ἀφρικανοῦ βίον καὶ δίαιταν, θαυμασιωτάτη δὲ τῶν παίδων ἀπενθῆς καὶ ἀδάκρυτος μνημονεύουσα, καὶ πάθη καὶ πράξεις αὐτῶν, ὥσπερ ἀρχαίων τινῶν, ἐξηγουμένη τοῖς 3 πυνθανομένοις. ὅθεν ἔδοξεν ἐνίοις ἔκτους ὑπὸ γῆρας ἢ μεγέθους κακῶν γεγονέναι καὶ τῶν ἀτυχημάτων ἀναισθητος, αὐτοῖς ὡς ἀληθῶς ἀναισθητοῖς οὖσιν ὅσον ἐξ εὐφυΐας καὶ τοῦ γεγονέναι καὶ τετράφθαι καλῶς ὄφελός ἐστι πρὸς ἀλυπίαν ἀνθρώποις, καὶ ὅτι τῆς ἀρετῆς ἢ τύχης φυλαττομένης μὲν τὰ κακὰ πολλάκις περίεστιν, ἐν δὲ τῷ πταῖσαι τὸ φέρειν εὐλογίστως οὐ παραιρεῖται.

ΑΓΙΔΟΣ ΚΑΙ ΚΛΕΟΜΕΝΟΥΣ ΚΑΙ ΓΡΑΓΧΩΝ ΣΥΓΚΡΙΣΙΣ

I. Ἡμῖν δὲ καὶ ταύτης πέρας ἐχούσης τῆς διηγήσεως ὑπολείπεται λαβεῖν ἐκ παραλλήλου τῶν βίων τὴν ἀποθεώρησιν. τοὺς μὲν οὖν Γράγ-

AGIS AND CLEOMENES AND THE GRACCHI

borne all her misfortunes in a noble and magnanimous spirit, and to have said of the sacred places where her sons had been slain that they were tombs worthy of the dead which occupied them. She resided on the promontory called Misenum, and made no change in her customary way of living. She had many friends, and kept a good table that she might show hospitality, for she always had Greeks and other literary men about her, and all the reigning kings interchanged gifts with her. She was indeed very agreeable to her visitors and associates when she discoursed to them about the life and habits of her father Africanus, but most admirable when she spoke of her sons without grief or tears; and narrated their achievements and their fate to all enquirers as if she were speaking of men of the early days of Rome. Some were therefore led to think that old age or the greatness of her sorrows had impaired her mind and made her insensible to her misfortunes, whereas, really, such persons themselves were insensible how much help in the banishment of grief mankind derives from a noble nature and from honourable birth and rearing, as well as of the fact that while Fortune often prevails over virtue when it endeavours to ward off evils, she cannot rob virtue of the power to endure those evils with calm assurance.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES AND THE GRACCHI COMPARED

I. Now that I have brought this story of the Gracchi also to an end, it remains for me to take a survey of all four lives in parallel. As for the Gracchi, χους οὐδ' οἱ πάνυ τὰλλα κακῶς λέγοντες καὶ μισοῦντες ἐτόλμησαν εἰπεῖν ὡς οὐκ εὐφύεστατοι πρὸς ἀρετὴν ἐγένοντο Ῥωμαίων ἀπάντων, καὶ 2 τροφῆς τε καὶ παιδεύσεως ἐκπρεποῦς ἔτυχον· ἡ δὲ Ἄγιδος καὶ Κλεομένους φύσις ἐρρωμενεστέρα φαίνεται τῆς ἐκείνων γενομένη, παρ' ὅσον οὔτε παιδείας μεταλαμβάνοντες ὀρθῆς, ἔθεσί τε καὶ διαίταις ἐντραφέντες ὑφ' ὧν οἱ πρεσβύτεροι πάλαι διεφθό-3 ρεισαν, αὐτοὺς ἡγεμόνας εὐτελείας καὶ σωφρο-σύνης παρέσχον. ἔτι δὲ οἱ μὲν, ὅτε λαμπρότατον εἶχεν ἡ Ῥώμη καὶ μέγιστον ἀξίωμα καὶ καλῶν ἔργων ζῆλον, ὥσπερ διαδοχὴν ἀρετῆς πατρῴας καὶ προγονικῆς ἠσχύνθησαν ἐγκαταλιπεῖν· οἱ δὲ καὶ πατέρων ἀναντία προηρημένων γεγονότες, καὶ τὴν πατρίδα μοχθηρὰ πράττουσαν καὶ νοσοῦσαν παραλαβόντες, οὐδέν τι διὰ ταῦτα τὴν πρὸς τὸ

 4 καλὸν ἀπήμβλυναν ὀρμῆν. καὶ μὴν τῆς γε Γράγχων ἀφιλοχρηματίας καὶ πρὸς ἀργύριον ἐγκρατείας μέγιστόν ἐστιν ὅτι λημμάτων ἀδίκων καθαρὸς ἐν ἀρχαῖς καὶ πολιτείαις διεφύλαξαν ἑαυτούς· Ἄγις δὲ κὰν διηγανάκτησεν ἐπὶ τῷ μηδὲν ἀλλότριον λαβεῖν ἐπαινούμενος, ὃς τὴν οὐσίαν τὴν ἑαυτοῦ τοῖς πολίταις ἐπέδωκεν, ἄνευ τῶν ἄλλων κτημάτων ἑξακόσια τάλαντα νομίματος ἔχουσαν. πηλίκον οὖν ἐνόμιζε κακὸν εἶναι τὸ κερδαίνειν ἀδίκως ὃ καὶ δικαίως πλέον ἔχειν ἑτέρου πλεονεξίαν ἠγούμενος;

II. Ἡ γε μὴν ἐπιβουλή καὶ τόλμα τῶν καινο-

AGIS AND CLEOMENES AND THE GRACCHI

then, not even those who utterly revile and hate them on other grounds have ventured to deny that of all Romans they were best equipped by nature for the practice of virtue, and enjoyed a rearing and training which were preëminent; but Agis and Cleomenes would appear to have had even sturdier natural gifts than theirs, in so far as, though they did not receive a correct training, and were reared in those customs and ways of living by which their elders had long ago been corrupted, they nevertheless made themselves leaders in simplicity and self-restraint. And further, the Gracchi, at a time when Rome had her greatest and most splendid repute and an ardour for noble deeds, were prevented by a sense of shame from abandoning what was like an inheritance of virtue from ancestors near and remote; Agis and Cleomenes, on the other hand, though they were sons of fathers who had adopted opposite principles to theirs, and found their country in a wretched plight and full of distempers, did not suffer these things to blunt the edge of their zeal for what was noble. Moreover, the chief proof that the Gracchi scorned wealth and were superior to money lies in the fact that they kept themselves clear from unrighteous gains during their official and political life; whereas Agis would have been incensed to receive praise for not taking anything that was another's, since he freely gave to his fellow citizens his own property, which amounted to six hundred talents in ready money alone, to say nothing of other valuables. How great a baseness, then, would unlawful gain have been held to be by one in whose eyes even the lawful possession of more than another was rapacity?

II. Again, the enterprise and boldness of their

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

τομουμένων πολὺ τῷ μεγέθει παρήλλαττεν. ἐπολιτεύοντο γὰρ ὁ μὲν ὀδῶν κατασκευὰς καὶ πόλεων κτίσεις, καὶ τὸ πάντων νεανικώτατον ἦν Τιβερίω μὲν ἀνασῶσαι δημοσίους ἀγρούς, Γαίῳ δὲ μίξαι τὰ δικαστήρια προσεμβάλλοντι τῶν ἵππικῶν τρια-2 κοσίους· ὁ δὲ Ἄγιδος καὶ Κλεομένους νεωτερισμός, τὸ μικρὰ καὶ κατὰ μέρος τῶν ἡμαρτημένων ἰᾶσθαι καὶ ἀποκόπτειν ὕδραν τινὰ τέμνοντος, ὡς φησιν ὁ Πλάτων, ἡγησάμενος εἶναι, τὴν ἅμα πάντα ἀπαλλάξαι κακὰ καὶ μετασκευάσαι δυναμένην 3 μεταβολὴν ἐπήγε τοῖς πράγμασιν. ἀληθέστερον δ' ἴσως εἰπεῖν ἐστὶν ὅτι τὴν πάντα ἀπεργασα-μένην κακὰ μεταβολὴν ἐξήλαυεν, ἀπάγων καὶ καθιστὰς εἰς τὸ οἰκεῖον σχῆμα τὴν πόλιν. ἐπεὶ καὶ τοῦτο ἂν τις εἴποι, τῇ μὲν Γράγγων πολιτείᾳ τοὺς μεγίστους ἐνίστασθαι Ῥωμαίων, οἷς δὲ Ἄγισ ἐνεχείρησε, Κλεομένης δὲ τὸ ἔργον ἐπέθηκε, τῶν παραδειγμάτων τὸ κύλλιστον ὑπέκειτο καὶ μεγαλοπρεπέστατον, αἱ πάτριαι ῥήτραι περὶ σωφροσύνης καὶ ἰσότητος, ὧν τούτοις μὲν ὁ Λυκούργος, ἐκείνῳ¹ 4 δὲ ὁ Πύθιος βεβαιωτής. ὁ δὲ μέγιστον, ὅτι τοῖς μὲν ἐκείνων πολιτεύμασιν εἰς οὐδὲν ἡ Ῥώμη μείζον ἐπέδωκε τῶν ὑπαρχόντων, ἐκ δὲ ὧν ὁ Κλεομένης ἔπραξεν, ὀλίγου χρόνου τὴν Σπάρτην τῆς Πελο-ποννήσου κρατοῦσαν ἢ Ἑλλάδος ἐπέειδε καὶ τοῖς τότε μέγιστον δυναμένοις διαγωνιζομένην ἀγῶνα

¹ ἐκείνῳ Blass, Fuhr, and Ziegler, after Madvig: ἐκείνοισι.

AGIS AND CLEOMEMES AND THE GRACCHI attempted reforms were certainly very different in magnitude. For in their political activities Caius had in view the construction of roads and the founding of cities, and the boldest of all the projects of the Romans were, in the case of Tiberius the recovery of the public lands, and in that of Caius the reconstitution of the courts of justice by the addition of three hundred men from the equestrian order; whereas Agis and Cleomenes in their reforms, considering that the application of trifling and partial remedies and excisions to the disorders of the state was nothing more than cutting off a Hydra's heads (as Plato says¹), tried to introduce into the constitution a change which was able to transform and get rid of all evils at once; though perhaps it is more in accordance with the truth to say that they banished the change which had wrought all sorts of evils, by bringing back the state to its proper form and establishing it therein. Besides, this also can be said, that the policies of the Gracchi were opposed by the greatest Romans, whereas those which Agis instituted and Cleomenes consummated were based upon the fairest and most imposing precedents, namely, the ancient rhetras or unwritten laws concerning simplicity of life and equality of property, for which Lycurgus was voucher to them, and the Pythian Apollo to Lycurgus.² But the most important consideration is that through the political activity of the Gracchi Rome made no advance in greatness, whereas, in consequence of the achievements of Cleomenes, within a short time Greece beheld Sparta mistress of the Peloponnesus and carrying on a struggle for the supremacy with those who then had the greatest power, the object of

¹ Republic, p. 426 e.

² See the Lycurgus, xiii.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

τὸν περὶ τῆς ἡγεμονίας, οὐ τέλος ἦν ἀπαλλαγεῖσαν Ἰλλυρικῶν ὄπλων καὶ Γαλατικῶν τὴν Ἑλλάδα κοσμεῖσθαι πάλιν ὑφ' Ἡρακλείδαις.

III. Οἶμαι δὲ καὶ τὰς τελευτὰς τῶν ἀνδρῶν ἐμφαίνειν τινὰ τῆς ἀρετῆς διαφορὰν. ἐκεῖνοι μὲν γὰρ μαχόμενοι πρὸς τοὺς πολίτας, εἶτα φεύγοντες ἐτελεύτησαν· τούτων δὲ Ἄγρις μὲν ὑπὲρ τοῦ μηδένα κτείνειν τῶν πολιτῶν ὀλίγου δεῖν ἐκὼν ἀπέθανε, Κλεομένης δὲ προπηλακισθεὶς καὶ ἀδικηθεὶς ὤρμησε μὲν ἀμύνασθαι, τοῦ δὲ καιροῦ μὴ παρασχόντος
2 αὐτὸν εὐτόλμως ἀνείλε. πάλιν δὲ τὰναντία σκοποῦσιν Ἄγρις μὲν οὐδὲν ἀπεδείξατο στρατηγίας ἔργον, ἀλλὰ προανηρέθη, ταῖς δὲ Κλεομένουσιν νίκαις πολλαῖς καὶ καλαῖς γενομέναις παραβαλεῖν ἔστι Τιβερίου τὴν ἐν Καρχηδόνι τοῦ τείχους κατάληψιν, οὐ μικρὸν ἔργον, καὶ τὰς ἐν Νομαντία σπονδάς, αἷς δισμυρίους Ῥωμαίων στρατιώτας οὐκ ἔχοντας ἄλλην ἐλπίδα σωτηρίας περιεποίησε· καὶ Γάιος δὲ πολλὴν μὲν αὐτόθι, πολλὴν δὲ ἐν Σαρδόνι στρατευόμενος ἀνδραγαθίαν ἔφηνεν, ὥστε τοῖς πρώτοις ἂν ἐναμίλλους Ῥωμαίων γενέσθαι στρατηγοῖς, εἰ μὴ προανηρέθησαν.

IV. Τῆς δὲ πολιτείας ὁ μὲν Ἄγρις ἔοικεν ἄψασθαι μαλακώτερον, ἐκκρουσθεὶς ὑπὸ Ἀγησιλάου καὶ ψευδάμενος τὸν ἀναδασμὸν τοῖς πολίταις, καὶ 845 ὄλως ἐλλιπῆς καὶ ἀτελής ὢν προείλετο καὶ κατήγγειλεν ὑπὸ ἀτολμίας διὰ τὴν ἡλικίαν γενόμενος· ὁ δὲ Κλεομένης τούναντίον θρασύτερον καὶ βιαϊό-which struggle was to set Greece free from Illyrian and Gaulish troops and array her once more under descendants of Heracles.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES AND THE GRACCHI

III. I think, too, that the way in which the men died makes manifest a difference in their high excellence. For the Gracchi fought against their fellow citizens, and then died as they sought to make their escape; but in the case of the Greeks, Agis would not kill a single citizen, and therefore died what one might almost call a voluntary death, and Cleomenes, after setting out to avenge himself for insults and wrongs, found the occasion unfavourable and with a good courage slew himself. But again, when we take the opposite view of their relative merits, Agis displayed no deed worthy of a great commander, but was cut off untimely, and with the many honourable victories won by Cleomenes we can compare the capture of the wall at Carthage by Tiberius, which was no trifling deed, and his truce at Numantia, by which twenty thousand Roman soldiers who had no other hope of salvation were spared; and Caius, too, manifested great bravery in military service at home, and great bravery in Sardinia, so that the brothers might have vied successfully with the foremost Roman generals, had they not been cut off untimely.

IV. In their civic activities, however, Agis would seem to have taken hold of things with too little spirit; he was baffled by Agesilaüs, and broke his promise to the citizens about the re-distribution of lands, and in a word abandoned and left unfinished the designs which he had deliberately formed and announced, owing to a lack of courage due to his youth. Cleomenes, on the contrary, undertook his change of the constitution with too

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- τερον ἐπὶ τὴν μεταβολὴν ἦλθε τῆς πολιτείας, ἀποκτείνοντας τοὺς ἐφόρους παρανόμως, οὓς καὶ προσαγαγέσθαι τοῖς ὅπλοις κρατοῦντα καὶ μεταστῆσαι ῥάδιον ἦν, ὥσπερ οὐκ ὀλίγους ἄλλους
- 2 μετέστησεν ἐκ τῆς πόλεως. τὸ γὰρ ἄνευ τῆς ἐσχάτης ἀνάγκης ἐπιφέρειν σίδηρον οὔτε ἰατρικὸν οὔτε πολιτικόν, ἀλλ' ἀτεχνίας μὲν ἀμφοτέρα, τούτῳ δὲ καὶ τὸ ἀδικεῖν μετ' ὠμότητος πρόσεστι. τῶν δὲ Γράγγων οὐδέτερος μὲν ἤρξατο σφαγῆς ἐμφυλίου, Γάϊος δὲ λέγεται μηδὲ βαλλόμενος ὀρμησαί πρὸς ἄμυναν, ἀλλὰ λαμπρότατος ὢν ἐν τοῖς πολεμικοῖς ἀργότατος ἐν τῇ στάσει γενέσθαι.
- 3 καὶ γὰρ προήλθεν ἄοπλος καὶ μαχομένων ἀνεχώρησε, καὶ ὄλως πλείονα τοῦ μή τι δρᾶσαι πρόνοιαν ἢ τοῦ μὴ παθεῖν ἔχων ἐωρᾶτο. διὸ καὶ τὴν φυγὴν αὐτῶν οὐκ ἀτολμίας σημείον, ἀλλ' εὐλαβείας ποιητέον. ἔδει γὰρ ὑπεῖξαι τοῖς ἐπιφερομένοις ἢ μένουσας ὑπὲρ τοῦ μὴ παθεῖν τῷ δρᾶν ἀμύνασθαι.

V. Τῶν τοίνυν ἐγκλημάτων τῶν κατὰ Τιβερίου μεγιστόν ἐστιν ὅτι τὸν συνάρχοντα τῆς δημαρχίας ἐξέβαλε καὶ δευτέραν αὐτὸς δημαρχίαν μετήει. Γαίῳ δὲ τὸν Ἀντυλλίου φόνον οὐ δικαίως οὐδὲ ἀληθῶς προσετρίβοντο· διεφθάρη γὰρ ἄκοντος αὐτοῦ καὶ ἀγανακτοῦντος. Κλεομένης δέ, ἵνα τὰς σφαγὰς τῶν ἐφόρων εἰσώσῃ, ἠλευθέρωσε μὲν

2 ἅπαντας τοὺς οἰκέτας, ἐβασίλευσε δὲ τῷ μὲν ἔργῳ μόνος, τῷ δὲ ὀνόματι δεύτερος, Εὐκλείδαν τὸν

AGIS AND CLEOMENES AND THE GRACCHI

much rashness and violence, killing the ephors in unlawful fashion, when it would have been easier to win them over to his views or remove them by superiority in arms, just as he removed many others from the city. For a resort to the knife, except under extremest necessity, is not the mark either of a good physician or statesman, but in both cases shows a lack of skill, and in the case of the statesman there is added both injustice and cruelty. Neither of the Gracchi, however, initiated civil slaughter, and Caius, we are told, would not resort to self-defence even when his life was threatened, but though he was a most brilliant soldier in the field, he showed himself most inactive in civil strife. For he went forth from his house unarmed and withdrew when the battle began, and in a word was seen to be more intent upon not doing any harm to others than upon not suffering harm himself. Therefore we must hold that the flight of the brothers was not a mark of cowardice, but of caution. For they were obliged either to yield to their assailants, or, in case they held their ground, to defend themselves actively against harm.

V. Again, the greatest of the accusations against Tiberius is that he deposed his colleague from the tribuneship and canvassed for a second tribuneship himself; and as for Caius, the murder of Antyllus was unjustly and falsely attributed to him, for it happened contrary to his wishes and much to his displeasure. But Cleomenes, not to mention again his slaughter of the ephors, set free all the slaves, and was king by himself in point of fact, though nominally with another, after he had chosen his brother Eucleidas, a man from the same house, as his col-

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἀδελφὸν ἐκ μιᾶς οἰκίας αὐτῷ προσελόμενος, Ἀρχίδαμον δέ, ᾧ προσήκον ἦν ἀπὸ τῆς ἐτέρας οἰκίας ὄντι συμβασιλεύειν, ἔπεισε μὲν ἐκ Μεσσήνης κατελθεῖν, ἀποθανόντος δὲ τὸν φόνου οὐκ ἐπέξε-
 3 ἀναιρέσεως. καίτοι Λυκούργος, ὃν προσεποιεῖτο μιμῆσθαι, τὴν μὲν βασιλείαν ἐκὼν ἀπέδωκε τῷ παιδί τῷ ἀδελφοῦ Χαρίλλῳ, φοβούμενος δὲ μῆ, κἂν ἄλλως ἀποθάνῃ τὸ μεираκίον, αἰτία τις ἐπ' αὐτὸν ἔλθῃ, πολὺν χρόνον ἔξω πλανηθεὶς οὐ πρό-
 4 τερον ἐπανῆλθεν ἢ παῖδα τῷ Χαρίλλῳ γενέσθαι διάδοχον τῆς ἀρχῆς. ἀλλὰ Λυκούργῳ μὲν οὐδὲ ἄλλος τις Ἑλλήνων παραβλητὸς οὐδεὶς· ὅτι δὲ τοῖς Κλεομένους πολιτεύμασι καινοτομίαι καὶ
 5 παρανομίαι μείζονες ἔνεισι, δεδήλωται. καὶ μὴν οἷ γε τὸν τρόπον αὐτῶν ψέγοντες τούτοις μὲν ἐξ ἀρχῆς τυραννικὸν καὶ πολεμοποιὸν αἰτιῶνται γενέσθαι, τῇ δὲ ἐκείνων φύσει φιλοτιμίας ἀμετ-
 6 ρίαν, ἄλλο δὲ οὐδὲν οἱ φθονοῦντες ἐπικαλεῖν εἶχον· ἐκριπισθέντας δὲ τῷ πρὸς τοὺς ἐνισταμένους ἀγῶνι καὶ θυμῷ παρὰ τὴν αὐτῶν φύσιν ὥσπερ πνοαῖς, ἐφεῖναι περὶ τὰ ἔσχατα τὴν πολιτείαν
 7 ὠμολόγουν. ἐπεὶ τῆς γε πρώτης ὑποθέσεως τί κάλλιον ἢ δικαιότερον ἦν, εἰ μὴ κατὰ βίαν καὶ δυναστείαν ἐπιχειρήσαντες ἐξῶσαι τὸν νόμον οἱ πλούσιοι περιέστησαν ἀμφοτέροις ἀγῶνας, τῷ μὲν φοβουμένῳ ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ, τῷ δὲ ἐκδικοῦντι τὸν

AGIS AND CLEOMENES AND THE GRACCHI

league ; and he persuaded Archidamus, who belonged to the other house and should have been his colleague on the throne, to come back to Sparta from Messene, and upon his death, by not following up the murder, he fixed upon himself the blame for his taking off. And yet Lycurgus, whom he professed to imitate, voluntarily surrendered the royal power to Charillus his brother's son, and because he feared lest, if the young man should die by another's hand, some blame might attach to himself, he wandered a long time in foreign parts, and would not come back until a son had been born to Charillus who should succeed to his office.¹ However, with Lycurgus no other Greek is worthy to be compared ; but that the political measures of Cleomenes were marked by greater innovations and illegalities than those of the Gracchi, is evident. And indeed those who are inclined to criticize their characters accuse the two Greeks of having been from the outset over fond of power and strife, and the two Romans of having been by nature immoderately ambitious, though their detractors could bring no other charge against them ; nay, it was agreed that they were caught up by the fury of the contest with their opponents and by a passion contrary to their own natural bent, as by blasts of wind, and so let the state drive into extremest danger. For what could be more just and honourable than their original design ? And they would have succeeded in it, had not the party of the rich, by their violent and partisan attempts to abrogate the agrarian law, involved both of them in fierce struggles, Tiberius through fear for his own life, and Caius in an effort to avenge his brother, who had been slain without justice or ¹ See the Lycurgus, iii. 5.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἀδελφὸν ἄνευ δίκης καὶ δόγματος οὐδὲ ὑπ' ἄρχοντος ἀναιρεθέντα;

- 6 Συνορᾶς μὲν οὖν καὶ αὐτὸς ἐκ τῶν εἰρημένων τὴν διαφορὰν· εἰ δὲ δεῖ καὶ καθ' ἕκαστον ἀποφήνασθαι, Τιβέριον μὲν ἀρετῇ πεπρωτευκέναι τίθημι πάντων, ἐλάχιστα δὲ ἡμαρτηκέναι τὸ μειράκιον Ἄγιν, πράξει δὲ καὶ τόλμη Γαίιον οὐκ ὀλίγω Κλεομένους ὕστερον γεγονέναι.

AGIS AND CLEOMENES AND THE GRACCHI

senatorial decree and without the concurrence even of a magistrate.

From what has been said, then, my reader will perceive for himself the difference between these men; but if I am to express my opinion of them individually, I should say that Tiberius led them all in exemplary virtues, that the youthful Agis committed the fewest errors, and that in achievement and courage Caius fell far short of Cleomenes.

PHILOPOEMEN

ΦΙΛΟΠΟΙΜΗΝ

1. Κλέανδρος ἦν ἐν Μαντινείᾳ γένους τε πρώτου 356
καὶ δυναθεὶς ἐν τοῖς μάλιστα τῶν πολιτῶν, τύχη δὲ χρησάμενος καὶ τὴν ἑαυτοῦ φυγῶν ἦκεν εἰς Μεγάλην πόλιν οὐχ ἥκιστα διὰ τὸν Φιλοποίμενος πατέρα Κραῦγιν, ἄνδρα πάντων ἔνεκα λαμπρόν, 2 ἰδίᾳ δὲ πρὸς ἐκείνουν οἰκείως ἔχοντα. ζῶντος μὲν οὖν αὐτοῦ πάντων ἐτύγχανε, τελευτήσαντος δὲ τὴν ἀμοιβὴν τῆς φιλοξενίας ἀποδιδούς ἔθρεψεν αὐτοῦ τὸν υἱὸν ὀρφανὸν ὄντα, καθάπερ φησὶν
"Ὀμηρος ὑπὸ τοῦ Φοίνικος τὸν Ἀχιλλέα τραφῆναι, γενναίαν τινὰ καὶ βασιλικὴν τοῦ ἠθους εὐθύς ἐξ ἀρχῆς πλάσιν καὶ αὔξησιν λαμβάνοντος. ἤδη δὲ τοῦ Φιλοποίμενος ἀντίπαιδος ὄντος Ἐκδημος καὶ Μεγαλοφάνης οἱ Μεγαλοπολίται διεδέξαντο τὴν ἐπιμέλειαν, Ἀρκεσιλάφ συνήθεις ἐν Ἀκαδημείᾳ γεγονότες καὶ φιλοσοφίαν μάλιστα τῶν καθ' ἑαυτοὺς ἐπὶ πολιτείαν καὶ πράξεις προαγαγόντες.
3 οὗτοι καὶ τὴν ἑαυτῶν πατρίδα τυραννίδος ἀπήλ-λαξαν, τοὺς ἀποκτενοῦντας Ἀριστόδημον κρύφα παρασκευάσαντες, καὶ Νικοκλέα τὸν Σικωνίων τύραννον Ἀράτῳ συνεξέβαλον, καὶ Κυρηναίους

PHILOPOEMEN

I. CLEANDER was a man of the highest lineage and greatest influence among the citizens of Mantinea, but he met with reverses and was exiled from his native city. He then betook himself to Megalopolis, chiefly because of Craugis, the father of Philopoemen, a man in every way illustrious, and attached to him by ties of personal friendship. As long as Craugis lived, Cleander's wants were all supplied, and when Craugis died, Cleander, wishing to requite him for his hospitality, undertook the rearing of his orphan son, just as Homer says that Achilles was reared by Phoenix,¹ so that the boy's character took on from the very outset a noble and kingly mould and growth. But as soon as Philopoemen had ceased to be a boy, Ecdemus and Megalophanes, of Megalopolis, were put in charge of him.² They had been comrades of Arcesilaüs at the Academy, and beyond all men of their day had brought philosophy to bear upon political action and affairs of state. They freed their own native city from tyranny, by secretly procuring men to kill Aristodemus; they joined with Aratus in expelling Nicocles the tyrant of Sicyon;³ and at the request of the people of Cyrene, whose city was full

¹ Cf. Iliad, ix. 438 ff.

² A brief biography of Philopoemen may be found in Pausanias, viii. 49-51. It agrees, in the main, with that of Plutarch. Philopoemen was born about 252 B.C.

³ See the Aratus, ii.-x.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

δεηθείσι, τεταραγμένων τῶν κατὰ τὴν πόλιν καὶ νοσοῦντων, πλεύσαντες εὐνομίαν ἔθεντο καὶ διεκό-
 4 σμησαν ἄριστα τὴν πόλιν. αὐτοὶ γε μὴν ἐν τοῖς ἄλλοις ἔργοις καὶ τὴν Φιλοποίμενος ἐποιοῦντο παιδείουσιν, ὡς κοινὸν ὄφελος τῇ Ἑλλάδι τὸν ἄνδρα τοῦτου ὑπὸ φιλοσοφίας ἀπεργασόμενοι. καὶ γὰρ ὡσπερ ὀψίγονον ἐν γῆρα ταῖς τῶν παλαιῶν ἡγεμόνων ἐπιτεκούσα τοῦτου ἀρεταῖς ἡ Ἑλλὰς ἠγάπησε διαφερόντως καὶ συνηύξησε τῇ δόξῃ τὴν δύναμιν. Ῥωμαίων δέ τις ἐπαινῶν ἔσχατον αὐτὸν Ἑλλήνων προσεῖπεν, ὡς οὐδένα μέγαν μετὰ τοῦτου ἔτι τῆς Ἑλλάδος ἄνδρα γευναμένης οὐδὲ αὐτῆς ἄξιον.

II. Ἦν δὲ τὸ μὲν εἶδος οὐκ αἰσχρὸς, ὡς ἐνιοὶ νομίζουσιν· εἰκόνα γὰρ αὐτοῦ διαμένουσαν ἐν Δελφοῖς ὀρώμεν· τὴν δὲ τῆς ξένης τῆς Μεγαρικῆς ἄγνοϊαν συμβῆναι λέγουσι δι' εὐκολίαν τινὰ καὶ ἀφέλειαν αὐτοῦ. πυνθανομένη γὰρ ἔρχεσθαι πρὸς αὐτοὺς τὸν στρατηγὸν τῶν Ἀχαιῶν ἐθορυβεῖτο παρασκευάζουσα δεῖπνον, οὐ παρόντος κατὰ τύχην
 2 τοῦ ἀνδρός. ἐν τούτῳ δὲ τοῦ Φιλοποίμενος εἰσελθόντος χλαμύδιον εὐτελὲς ἔχοντος, οἰομένη τινὰ τῶν ὑπηρετῶν εἶναι καὶ πρόδρομον παρεκάλει τῆς διακουρίας συνεφάψασθαι. καὶ ὁ μὲν εὐθύς ἀπορρίψας τὴν χλαμύδα τῶν ξύλων ἔσχιζεν· ὁ δὲ ξένος ἐπεισελθὼν καὶ θεασάμενος, “Τί τοῦτο,” ἔφη, “ὦ Φιλοποίμην;” “Τί γὰρ ἄλλο,” ἔφη δωρίζων ἐκεῖνος, “ἢ κακῶς ὄψεως δίκας δίδωμι;”
 3 τοῦ δὲ ἄλλου σώματος τὴν φύσιν ἐπισκώπτων ὁ

PHILOPOEMEN

of confusion and political distemper, they sailed thither, introduced law and order, and arranged matters in the city most happily. They themselves, however, counted the education of Philopoemen also among their many achievements, believing that their philosophical teachings had made him a common benefit to Greece. For since he was the child, as it were, of her late old age and succeeded to the virtues of her ancient commanders, Greece loved him surpassingly, and as his reputation grew, increased his power. And a certain Roman, in praising him, called him the last of the Greeks,¹ implying that Greece produced no great man after him, nor one worthy of her.

II. In looks he was not, as some suppose, ill-favoured; for a statue of him is still to be seen at Delphi; and the mistake of his Megarian hostess was due, as we are told, to a certain indifference and simplicity on his part. This woman, learning that the general of the Achaeans was coming to her house, in great confusion set about preparing supper; besides, her husband chanced to be away from home. Just then Philopoemen came in, wearing a simple soldier's cloak, and the woman, thinking him to be one of his servants who had been sent on in advance, invited him to help her in her housework. So Philopoemen at once threw off his cloak and fell to splitting wood. Then his host came in, and seeing him thus employed, said: "What does this mean, Philopoemen?" "What else," said Philopoemen in broad Doric, "than that I am paying a penalty for my ill looks?" And once Titus Flamininus, making fun of certain parts of his

¹ See the Aratus, xxiv. 2.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Τίτος εἶπεν, “ὦ Φιλοποίμην, ὡς καλὰς χεῖρας ἔχεις καὶ σκέλη· γαστέρα δ' οὐκ ἔχεις.” ἦν γὰρ ἐκ τῶν μέσων στενωτέρος. τὸ μέντοι σκῶμμα πρὸς τὴν δύναμιν αὐτοῦ μᾶλλον ἐλέχθη. καὶ γὰρ ὀπλίτας ἔχων ἀγαθοὺς καὶ ἰππεῖς χρημάτων πολλάκις οὐκ εὐπόρει. ταῦτα μὲν οὖν ἐν ταῖς σχολαῖς περὶ τοῦ Φιλοποίμενος λέγεται.

III. Τοῦ δ' ἦθους τὸ φιλότιμον οὐκ ἦν παντάπασι φιλονεικίας καθαρὸν οὐδ' ὀργῆς ἀπηλλαγμένον· ἀλλὰ καίπερ Ἐπαμεινώνδου βουλόμενος εἶναι μάλιστα ζηλωτής, τὸ δραστήριον καὶ συνετὸν αὐτοῦ καὶ ὑπὸ χρημάτων ἀπαθὲς ἰσχυρῶς ἐμμεῖτο, τῷ δὲ πράφῃ καὶ βαθεῖ καὶ φιλανθρώφῃ παρὰ τὰς πολιτικὰς διαφορὰς ἐμμένειν οὐ δυνάμενος δι' ὀργὴν καὶ φιλονεικίαν μᾶλλον ἐδόκει στρατιω-2 τικῆς ἢ πολιτικῆς ἀρετῆς οἰκείος εἶναι. καὶ γὰρ ἐκ παίδων εὐθύς ἦν φιλοστρατιώτης, καὶ τοῖς πρὸς τοῦτο χρησίμοις μαθήμασιν ὑπήκουε προ-θύμως, ὀπλομαχεῖν καὶ ἰππεύειν. ἐπεὶ δὲ καὶ παλαίειν εὐφυῶς ἐδόκει καὶ παρεκάλουν αὐτὸν ἐπὶ τὴν ἄθλησιν ἔνιοι τῶν φίλων καὶ τῶν ἐπιτρώπων, ἠρώτησεν αὐτοὺς μή τι πρὸς τὴν στρατιωτικὴν ἄσκησιν ὑπὸ τῆς ἀθλήσεως βλαβήσοιτο.
 3 τῶν δὲ φασμένων, ὅπερ ἦν, ἀθλητικὸν στρατιωτικὸν σῶμα καὶ βίον διαφέρειν τοῖς πᾶσι, μάλιστα δὲ δίαιταν ἐτέραν καὶ ἄσκησιν εἶναι, τῶν μὲν ὑπνω τε πολλῶ καὶ πλησμοναῖς ἐνδελεχέσι καὶ κινήσεσι τεταγμέναις καὶ ἡσυχίαις αὐξόντων τε καὶ διαφυλαττούντων τὴν ἔξιν ὑπὸ πάσης ῥοπῆς καὶ παρεκ-βάσεως τοῦ συνήθους ἀκροσφαλῆ πρὸς μεταβολὴν οὖσαν, τὰ δὲ πάσης μὲν πλάνης ἔμπειρα καὶ

PHILOPOEMEN

figure, said : " Philopoemen, what fine arms and legs thou hast ; but belly thou hast not " ; for Philopoemen was quite slender at the waist. This piece of fun, however, was aimed the rather at his resources. For though he had excellent men-at-arms and horsemen, he was often at a loss for money. However, these stories are told of Philopoemen in the schools of philosophy.

III. But the love of distinction which marked his character was not altogether free from contentiousness nor devoid of anger ; and although he desired to pattern himself most of all after Epaminondas, it was the energy, sagacity, and indifference to money in Epaminondas which he strenuously imitated, while his proneness to anger and contentiousness made him unable to maintain that great leader's mildness, gravity, and urbanity in political disputes, so that he was thought to be endowed with military rather than with civic virtues. For from his very boyhood he was fond of a soldier's life, and readily learned the lessons which were useful for this, such as those in heavy-armed fighting and horsemanship. He was also thought to be a good wrestler, but when some of his friends and directors urged him to take up athletics, he asked them if athletics would not be injurious to his military training. They told him (and it was the truth) that the habit of body and mode of life for athlete and soldier were totally different, and particularly that their diet and training were not the same, since the one required much sleep, continuous surfeit of food, and fixed periods of activity and repose, in order to preserve or improve their condition, which the slightest influence or the least departure from routine is apt to change for the worse ; whereas the πάσης ἀνωμαλίας προσήκον εἶναι, μάλιστα δὲ 4 φέρειν ῥαδίως μὲν ἔνδειαν εἰθισμένα, ῥαδίως δὲ ἀγρυπνίαν, ἀκούσας ὁ Φιλοποίμην οὐ μόνον αὐτὸς ἔφυγε τὸ πρᾶγμα καὶ κατεγέλασεν, ἀλλὰ καὶ στρατηγῶν ὕστερον ἀτιμίαις καὶ προπηλακισμοῖς, ὅσον ἦν ἐπ' αὐτῷ, πᾶσαν ἄθλησιν ἐξέβαλεν ὡς τὰ χρησιμώτατα τῶν σωμάτων εἰς τοὺς ἀναγκαίους ἀγῶνας ἄχρηστα ποιούσαν.

IV. Ἀπαλλαγείς δὲ διδασκάλων καὶ παιδα-γωγῶν ἐν μὲν ταῖς πολιτικαῖς στρατείαις, ἃς ἐποιοῦντο κλωπείας ἔνεκα καὶ λεηλασίας εἰς τὴν Λακωνικὴν ἐμβάλλοντες, εἴθισεν αὐτὸν πρῶτον μὲν ἐκστρατεούντων, ὕστατον δὲ ἀπερχομένων βαδίζειν. σχολῆς δὲ οὔσης ἢ κυνηγῶν διεπόνει τὸ σῶμα καὶ κατεσκεύαζε κούφον ἄμα καὶ ῥωμα-2 λέον, ἢ γεωργῶν. ἦν γὰρ ἀγρὸς αὐτῷ καλὸς ἀπὸ σταδίων εἴκοσι τῆς πόλεως. εἰς τοῦτον ἐβάδιζε καθ' ἡμέραν μετὰ τὸ ἄριστον ἢ μετὰ τὸ δεῖπνον, καὶ καταβαλὼν ἑαυτὸν ἐπὶ στιβαδίου τοῦ τυχόντος ὥσπερ ἕκαστος τῶν ἐργατῶν ἀνεπαύετο. πρῶτ' δὲ ἀναστὰς καὶ συνεφαψάμενος ἔργου τοῖς ἀμπελουργοῦσιν ἢ βοηλατοῦσιν, αὐθις εἰς πόλιν ἀπῆει καὶ περὶ τὰ δημόσια τοῖς φίλοις καὶ τοῖς ἄρχουσι συνησχολεῖτο.

3 Τὰ μὲν οὖν ἐκ τῶν στρατειῶν προσιόντα καταἀλίσκεν εἰς ἵππους καὶ ὄπλα καὶ λύσεις αἰχμαλώτων, τὸν δὲ οἶκον ἀπὸ τῆς γεωργίας αὖξιν ἐπειράτο δικαιοτάτῳ τῶν χρηματισμῶν, οὐδὲ τοῦτο ποιούμενος πάρεργον, ἀλλὰ καὶ πάνυ προσήκειν

358

PHILOPOEMEN

soldier ought to be conversant with all sorts of irregularity and all sorts of inequality, and above all should accustom himself to endure lack of food easily, and as easily lack of sleep. On hearing this, Philopoemen not only shunned athletics himself and derided them, but also in later times as a commander banished from the army all forms of them, with every possible mark of reproach and dishonour, on the ground that they rendered useless for the inevitable struggle of battle men who would otherwise be most serviceable.

IV. And when, set free from teachers and tutors, he took part in the incursions into Spartan territory which his fellow-citizens made for the sake of booty and plunder, he accustomed himself to march first as they went out, but last as they came back. And when he had leisure, he would give his body hard exercise in hunting, thus rendering it agile and at the same time sturdy, or in cultivating the soil. For he had a fine farm twenty furlongs from the city. To this he would go every day after dinner or after supper, and would throw himself down upon an ordinary pallet-bed, like anyone of his labourers, to sleep for the night. Then, early in the morning, he would rise and go to work along with his vine-dressers or his herdsmen, after which he would go back again to the city and busy himself about public matters with his friends or with the magistrates.

As for what he got from his campaigning, he used to spend it on horses, or armour, or the ransoming of captives; but his own property he sought to increase by agriculture, which is the justest way to make money. Nor did he practise agriculture merely as a side issue, but he held that the man who purposed to

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

οιόμενος οικεία κεκτῆσθαι τὸν ἀλλοτρίων ἀφεξόμενον. ἠκροῶτο δὲ λόγων καὶ συγγράμμασι φιλοσόφων ἐνετύγχανεν, οὐ πᾶσιν, ἀλλ' ἀφ' ὧν ἐδόκει
 4 πρὸς ἀρετὴν ὠφελεῖσθαι. καὶ τῶν Ὀμηρικῶν ὅσα τὰς πρὸς ἀνδρείαν ἐγείρειν καὶ παροξύνειν ἐνόμιζε φαντασίας, τούτοις προσεῖχε. τῶν δ' ἄλλων ἀναγνωσμάτων μάλιστα τοῖς Εὐαγγέλου τακτικοῖς ἐνεφύετο καὶ τὰς περὶ Ἀλέξανδρον ἱστορίας κατεῖχε, τοὺς λόγους ἐπὶ τὰ πρῶγματα καταστρέφειν οἰόμενος, εἰ μὴ σχολῆς ἕνεκα καὶ λαλιᾶς
 5 ἀκάρπου περαίνοντο. καὶ γὰρ τῶν τακτικῶν θεωρημάτων τὰς ἐπὶ τοῖς πινακίοις διαγραφὰς ἐῶν χαίρειν, ἐπὶ τῶν τόπων αὐτῶν ἐλάμβανεν ἔλεγχον καὶ μελέτην ἐποιεῖτο, χωρίων συγκλινίας καὶ πεδίων ἀποκοπᾶς, καὶ ὅσα περὶ ρεῖθροις ἢ τάφροις ἢ στενωποῖς πάθη καὶ σχήματα διασπώμενης καὶ πάλιν συστελλομένης φάλαγγος. ἐπισκοπῶν αὐτὸς πρὸς αὐτὸν ἐν ταῖς ὁδοιπορίαις καὶ
 6 τοῖς μεθ' ἑαυτοῦ προβύλλων. ἔοικε γὰρ οὗτος ὁ ἀνὴρ περαιτέρω τῆς ἀνάγκης ἐμφιλοκαλῆσαι τοῖς στρατιωτικοῖς, καὶ τὸν πόλεμον ὡς ποικιλωτάτην ὑπόθεσιν τῆς ἀρετῆς ἀσπάζασθαι, καὶ ὅλως καταφρονεῖν τῶν ἀπολειπομένων ὡς ἀπράκτων.

V. Ἦδη δὲ αὐτοῦ τριάκοντα ἔτη γεγονότος Κλεομένης ὁ βασιλεὺς Λακεδαιμονίων νυκτὸς ἐξαίφνης προσπεσὼν τῇ Μεγάλῃ πόλει καὶ τὰς φυλακὰς βιασάμενος ἐντὸς παρήλθε καὶ τὴν ἀγορὰν κατέλαβεν. ἐκβοηθήσας δὲ Φιλοποίμην τοὺς keep his hands from the property of others ought by all means to have property of his own. He also listened to the discourses and applied himself to the writings of philosophers—not all of them, but those whom he thought helpful to him in his progress towards virtue. And as for the poems of Homer, whatever in them was thought by him to rouse and stimulate the activities of the soul which made for valour, to this he would apply himself. Among other writings, however, he was most of all devoted to the "Tactics" of Evangelus, and was familiar with the histories of Alexander, thinking that literature was conducive to action, unless it were prosecuted merely to while away the time and afford themes for fruitless small talk. Indeed, he would ignore the charts and diagrams for the illustration of tactical principles, and get his proofs and make his studies on the ground itself. The ways in which places slope to meet one another, and level plains come to an abrupt end, and all the vicissitudes and shapes of a phalanx when it is elongated and contracted again in the vicinity of ravines or ditches or narrow defiles, these he would investigate by himself as he wandered about, and discuss them with his companions. For it would seem that he brought more zeal than was necessary to the study of military science, setting his affections on war as affording a most manifold basis for the practice of virtue, and despising as unsuccessful men those who left it to others.

PHILOPOEMEN

V. He was now thirty years of age, when Cleomenes, King of the Lacedaemonians, suddenly attacked Megalopolis by night, forced the guard, made his way into the city, and occupied the market-place. Philopoemen came to the help of the citizens, but had not

μὲν πολεμίους οὐ κατίσχυσεν ἐξελάσαι, καίπερ ἔρρωμένως καὶ παραβόλως διαγωνισάμενος, τοὺς δὲ πολίτας τρόπον τινὰ τῆς πόλεως ἐξέκλεψε, προσμαχόμενος τοῖς ἐπιδιώκουσι καὶ τὸν Κλεομένην περισπῶν ἐφ' ἑαυτόν, ὡς χαλεπῶς καὶ μόλις ὕστατος ἀπελθεῖν, ἀποβαλὼν τὸν ἵππον καὶ
 2 τραυματίας γενόμενος. ἐπεὶ δὲ προσέπεμψεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Κλεομένης εἰς Μεσσήνην ἀπελθοῦσι τὴν τε πόλιν μετὰ τῶν χρημάτων ἀποδιδούς καὶ τὴν χώραν, ὁρῶν ὁ Φιλοποίμην τοὺς πολίτας ἀσμένως δεχομένους καὶ σπεύδοντας ἐπανελθεῖν ἐνέστη καὶ διεκώλυσε τῷ λόγῳ, διδάσκων ὡς οὐκ ἀποδίδωσι τὴν πόλιν Κλεομένης, προσκτᾶται δὲ τοὺς πολίτας ἐπὶ τῷ καὶ τὴν πόλιν ἔχειν βεβαιότερον· οὐ γὰρ ἔξειν αὐτὸν ὅπως οἰκίας καὶ τείχη κενὰ φυλάξει καθήμενος, ἀλλὰ καὶ τούτων ὑπ' ἐρημίας ἐκπεσεῖσθαι. ταῦτα λέγων τοὺς μὲν πολίτας ἀπέτρεψε, τῷ δὲ Κλεομένει πρόφασιν παρέσχε λυμῆνασθαι καὶ καταβαλεῖν τὰ πλείστα τῆς πόλεως καὶ χρημάτων εὐπορήσαντι μεγάλων ἀπελθεῖν.

VI. Ἐπεὶ δὲ Ἀντίγονος ὁ βασιλεὺς βοηθῶν ἐπὶ τὸν Κλεομένην μετὰ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν ἐστράτευσε, καὶ τὰς περὶ Σελλασίαν ἄκρας καὶ τὰς ἐμβολὰς κατέχοντος αὐτοῦ παρέταξε τὴν δύναμιν ἐγγὺς ἐπιχειρεῖν καὶ βιάζεσθαι διανοούμενος, ἦν μὲν ἐν τοῖς ἵππεῦσι μετὰ τῶν ἑαυτοῦ πολιτῶν τεταγμένος ὁ Φιλοποίμην, καὶ παραστάτας εἶχεν Ἰλλυριοὺς, οἷς τὰ λήγοντα τῆς παρατάξεως συνεπέφρακτο

¹ See the Cleomenes, xxiv.

² Cf. the Cleomenes, xxvii. and xxviii. The battle of Sellasia was fought in 221 B.C.

PHILOPOEMEN

force enough to drive the enemy out, although he fought with vigour and daring. He did, however, steal the citizens out of the city, as it were, by attacking their pursuers and drawing Cleomenes against himself, so that with the greatest difficulty he got away last of all, after losing his horse and receiving a wound. Moreover, when Cleomenes sent to them at Messene, whither they had gone, and offered to give them back their city with its valuables and their territory, Philopoemen, seeing that the citizens would be glad to accept the offer and were eager to go back home, opposed and dissuaded them from it, showing them that Cleomenes was not so much offering to restore their city as he was trying to win over to himself its citizens, that so he might have the city also more securely in his possession; for he would not be able, Philopoemen said, to remain there and guard empty houses and walls, but the solitude would force him to abandon these also. By this speech Philopoemen diverted the citizens from their purpose, but furnished Cleomenes with an excuse for devastating and demolishing the greater part of the city and marching off loaded with booty.¹

VI. Soon, however, Antigonus the king marched with the Achaeans to give aid against Cleomenes, and finding that his enemy was occupying the heights and passes about Sellasia, he drew up his forces near by with the purpose of attacking him and forcing a passage.² Philopoemen was stationed among the Macedonian cavalry with his own fellow-citizens,³ and had as a support the Illyrians, a large body of ³ According to Polybius, ii. 66. 7, a thousand Achaeans and as many Megalopolitans were stationed with the Macedonian cavalry.

2 πολλοῖς οὔσι καὶ μαχίμοις. εἶρητο δὲ αὐτοῖς ἐφεδρεύουσιν ἡσυχίαν ἔχειν ἄχρι ἂν ἀπὸ θατέρου κέρως ὑπὸ τοῦ βασιλέως ἀρθῆ φοινικὶς ὑπὲρ σαρίσης διατεταμένη. τῶν δὲ ἡγεμόνων τοῖς Ἰλλυριοῖς πειρωμένων ἐκβιάζεσθαι τοὺς Λακεδαιμονίους, καὶ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν, ὥσπερ προσετέτακτο, τὴν ἐφεδρείαν ἐν τάξει διαφυλαττόντων, Εὐκλείδας ὁ τοῦ Κλεομένου ἀδελφὸς καταμαθὼν τὸ γινόμενον διάσπασμα περὶ τοὺς πολεμίους ταχὺ τοὺς ἐλαφροτάτους τῶν ψιλῶν περιέπεμψεν, ἐξόπισθεν τοῖς Ἰλλυριοῖς ἐπιπεσεῖν κελεύσας καὶ περισπᾶν ἐρήμους τῶν ἵππέων ἀπολελειμμένους.

3 Γινομένων δὲ τούτων καὶ τῶν ψιλῶν τοὺς Ἰλλυριοὺς περισπῶντων καὶ διαταραπτόντων, συνιδὼν ὁ Φιλοποίμην οὐ μέγα ὄν ἔργον ἐπιθέσθαι τοῖς ψιλοῖς καὶ τὸν καιρὸν ὑφηγούμενον τοῦτο, πρῶτον μὲν ἔφραζε τοῖς βασιλικοῖς, ὡς δὲ οὐκ ἔπειθεν, ἀλλὰ μαίνεσθαι δοκῶν κατεφρονεῖτο, οὐδέπω μεγάλης οὐδὲ ἀξιοπίστου πρὸς τηλικούτο στρατήγημα δόξης περὶ αὐτὸν οὔσης, αὐτὸς ἐμβάλλει 359

4 συνεπισπασάμενος τοὺς πολίτας. γενομένης δὲ ταραχῆς τὸ πρῶτον, εἶτα φυγῆς καὶ φόνου πολλοῦ τῶν ψιλῶν, βουλόμενος ἔτι μᾶλλον ἐπιρρῶσαι τοὺς βασιλικούς καὶ προσμίξαι κατὰ τάχος θορυβουμένοις τοῖς πολεμίοις τὸν μὲν ἵππον ἀφήκεν, αὐτὸς δὲ πρὸς χωρία σκολιὰ καὶ μεστὰ ρείθρων καὶ φαράγγων πεζὸς ἐν ἱππικῷ θώρακι καὶ σκευῇ βαρυτέρα χαλεπῶς καὶ ταλαιπῶρως ἀμιλλώμενος διελαύνεται διαμπερὲς ὁμοῦ τοὺς μηροὺς ἐκατέρους

PHILOPOEMEN

good fighters, who closed up the line of battle. They had been ordered to lie quietly in reserve until, from the other wing, a signal should be made by the king with a scarlet coat stretched upon a spear. But the Illyrians, at the command of their officers, tried to force back the Lacedaemonians, while the Achaeans, as they had been ordered to do, kept quietly waiting at their post. Therefore Eucleidas, the brother of Cleomenes, who noticed the gap thus made in the enemies' line, quickly sent round the most agile of his light-armed troops, with orders to attack the Illyrians in the rear and rout them, now that they had lost touch with the cavalry.

These orders were carried out, and the light-armed troops were driving the Illyrians before them in confusion, when Philopoemen perceived that it would be no great task to attack the light-armed troops, and that the occasion prompted this step. At first he pointed this out to the king's officers. Then, when they were not to be persuaded by him, but looked down upon him as a madman (since his reputation was not yet great enough to justify his being entrusted with so important a manœuvre), he took matters into his own hands, formed his fellow-citizens into a wedge, and charged upon the enemy. At first the light-armed troops were thrown into confusion, then put to rout with great slaughter. And now Philopoemen, wishing to encourage still further the king's troops and bring them swiftly upon the enemy thus thrown into disorder, quitted his horse, and with grievous difficulty forced his way along on foot, in his horseman's breastplate and heavy equipment, towards ground that was irregular and full of water-courses and ravines. Here he had both his thighs pierced

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἐνὶ μεσαγκύλῳ, καιρίας μὲν οὐ γενομένης, ἰσχυρᾶς δὲ τῆς πληγῆς, ὥστε τὴν αἰχμὴν ἐπὶ θάτερα 5 διῶσαι. τὸ μὲν οὖν πρῶτον ἐνσχεθεὶς ὥσπερ δεσμῶ παντάπασιν ἀπόρως εἶχε· τὸ γὰρ ἔναμμα τῆς ἀγκύλης χαλεπὴν ἐποίει τοῦ ἀκοντίσματος ἀνελκομένου διὰ τῶν τραυμάτων τὴν πάροδον· ὡς δὲ ὤκνουν οἱ παρόντες ἄψασθαι καὶ τῆς μάχης ἀκμὴν ὀξείαν ἐχούσης ἐσφάδαζεν ὑπὸ θυμοῦ καὶ φιλοτιμίας πρὸς τὸν ἀγῶνα, τῇ παραβάσει καὶ τῇ παραλλάξει τῶν σκελῶν διὰ μέσου κλάσας τὸ ἀκόντισμα χωρὶς ἐκέλευσεν ἐλκύσαι τῶν ἀγμάτων 6 ἑκάτερον. οὕτω δὲ ἀπαλλαγεὶς καὶ σπασάμενος τὸ ξίφος ἐχώρει διὰ τῶν προμάχων ἐπὶ τοὺς πολεμίους, ὥστε πολλὴν προθυμίαν καὶ ζῆλον ἀρετῆς παρασχεῖν τοῖς ἀγωνιζομένοις. νικήσας οὖν ὁ Ἀντίγονος ἀπεπειράτο τῶν Μακεδόνων, ἐρωτῶν διὰ τί, μὴ κελεύσαντος αὐτοῦ, τὸ ἵππικὸν 7 ἐκίνησαν. τῶν δὲ ἀπολογουμένων ὡς παρὰ γνώμην βιασθεῖεν εἰς χεῖρας ἐλθεῖν τοῖς πολεμίοις μειρα-κίου Μεγαλοπολιτικοῦ προεμβалόντος, γελάσας ὁ Ἀντίγονος “Ἐκείνο τοίνυν τὸ μειράκιον,” εἶπεν, “ἔργον ἡγεμόνος μεγάλου πεποίηκεν.”

VII. Ἐκ τούτου δόξαν ἔσχεν, ὥσπερ εἰκός, ὁ Φιλοποίμην. καὶ τοῦ μὲν Ἀντιγόνου σπουδάσαντος ὅπως στρατεύοιτο μετ’ αὐτοῦ, καὶ διδόντος ἡγεμονίαν καὶ χρήματα, παρητήσατο, μάλιστα τὴν ἑαυτοῦ φύσιν καταμαθὼν πρὸς τὸ ἀρχεσθαι δυσκόλως καὶ χαλεπῶς ἔχουσιν, ἀργεῖν δὲ καὶ σχολάζειν οὐ βουλόμενος ἀσκήσεως ἕνεκα καὶ μελέτης τῶν πολεμικῶν εἰς Κρήτην ἔπλευσεν ἐπὶ
 2 στρατείαν. καὶ κεῖ συχρὸν χρόνον ἐγγυμνασάμενος through by a thonged javelin. The wound was not fatal, though severe, and the head of the weapon came out on the other side. At first, then, he was held fast as by a fetter, and was altogether helpless ; for the fastening of the thong made it difficult to draw the weapon back through the wound. But since those about him hesitated to attempt this, and since, now that the battle was at its hottest, the ardour of his ambition made him impatient to join in the struggle, by moving his legs backward and forward he broke the shaft of the weapon in two in the middle, and then ordered each fragment to be drawn out separately. Thus set free, he drew his sword and made his way through the front ranks against the enemy, thereby greatly animating the combatants and inspiring them with a desire to emulate his valour. After his victory, therefore, Antigonus put his Macedonians to the question, and asked them why, without his orders, they had brought the cavalry into action. They defended themselves by saying that they had been forced against their will to attack the enemy, because a young man of Megalopolis had first led a charge against them. At this, Antigonus gave a laugh and said : "Well, then, that young man behaved like a great commander."

PHILOPOEMEN

VII. This naturally brought Philopoemen into high repute. Antigonus was eager that he should take service under him, and offered him command and pay. These Philopoemen declined, chiefly because he well knew that it was naturally unpleasant and hard for him to be under another man's orders. Not wishing, however, to be inactive and idle, for the sake of training and practice in war he sailed to Crete in search of military service. In Crete he practised ἀνδράσι μαχίμοις καὶ ποικίλοις μεταχειρίσασθαι πόλεμον, ἔτι δὲ σῶφροσι καὶ κεκολασμένοις περὶ δίαιταν, ἐπανήλθεν οὕτω λαμπρὸς εἰς τοὺς Ἀχαι-3 οὺς ὥστε εὐθύς ἵππαρχος ἀποδειχθῆναι. παραλαβὼν δὲ τοὺς ἵππεῖς φαύλοις μὲν ἵππαρίοις ἐκ τοῦ προστυχόντος, ὅτε συμβαίνοι στρατεία, προσχρωμένους, αὐτοὺς δὲ τὰς πολλὰς τῶν στρατειῶν ἀποδιδράσκοντας, ἑτέρους δὲ πέμποντας ἀνθ' ἑαυτῶν, δεινὴν δὲ ἀπειρίαν μετὰ ἀτολμίας πάντων οὖσαν, περιορῶντας δὲ ταῦτα τοὺς ἄρχον-4 τας αἰεὶ διὰ τε τὸ πλείστον ἐν τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς τοὺς ἵππεῖς δύνασθαι καὶ μάλιστα κυρίους εἶναι τιμῆς καὶ κολάσεως, οὐχ ὑπεῖξεν οὐδὲ ἀγῆκεν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὰς πόλεις ἐπιὼν καὶ κατ' ἄνδρα τῶν νέων ἕκαστον ἐπὶ τὴν φιλοτιμίαν συνεξορμῶν, καὶ κολάζων τοὺς ἀνάγκης δεομένους, μελέταις τε καὶ πομπαῖς καὶ πρὸς ἀλλήλους ἀμίλλαις χρώμενος, ὅπου πλείστοι 5 θαυμαστὴν καὶ προθυμίαν παρέστησε καί, ὃ μέγιστον ἦν ἐν τοῖς τακτικοῖς, ἐλαφροὺς καὶ ὄξει 360 πρὸς τε τὰς κατ' οὐλαμὸν ἐπιστροφὰς καὶ περι-σπασμοὺς καὶ τὰς καθ' ἵππον ἐπιστροφὰς καὶ κλίσεις ἀπειργάσατο, καὶ συνείθισεν ὡς ἐνὶ σώματι κινουμένῳ καθ' ὄρμην ἐκούσιον εἰκέναι τὴν ὅλου τοῦ συστήματος ἐν ταῖς μεταβολαῖς εὐχέριαν.

 6 Συστάσης δὲ τῆς περὶ τὸν Λάρισσον αὐτοῖς ποταμὸν ἰσχυρὰς μάχης πρὸς Αἰτωλοὺς καὶ Ἡλείους, ὃ τῶν Ἡλείων ἵππαρχος Δαμόφαντος himself for a long time among men who were not only warlike and versed in many kinds of warfare, but also still moderate and restrained in their ways of living, and he came back to the Achaeans with such distinction that they at once made him commander of their cavalry.¹ But he found that the horsemen whom he was to command used worthless animals acquired at random, whenever a campaign was to be undertaken; that they shirked most campaigns themselves, and sent others out in their places; that they were all characterized by a shocking lack of experience, together with its resultant cowardice; and that their commanders always overlooked these things because the knights had the greatest power and influence among the Achaeans and the chief voice in the assignment of rewards and punishments. Philopoemen, however, did not yield or give way to them. He went round to the different cities and roused the spirit of ambition in each young man individually, punished those who needed compulsion, introduced drills, parades, and competitive contests in places where there would be large bodies of spectators and thus in a short time inspired them all with an astonishing vigour and zeal, and, what is of the greatest importance in tactics, rendered them agile and swift in wheeling and deploying by squadrons, and in wheeling and turning by single trooper, making the dexterity shown by the whole mass in its evolutions to be like that of a single person moved by an impulse from within.

PHILOPOEMEN

Moreover, in the fierce battle which they fought at the river Larissus against Aetolians and Eleians, the commander of the Eleian cavalry, Damophantus,

¹ For the year 209-208 B.C.

ᾠρμησεν ἐπὶ τὸν Φιλοποίμενα προεξελάσας. δεξάμενος δὲ τὴν ὄρμην ἐκείνος αὐτοῦ καὶ φθάσας τῷ δόρατι παίει καὶ καταβάλλει τὸν Δαμόφαντον. 7 εὐθύς δὲ τούτου πεσόντος ἔφυγον οἱ πολέμοιοι, καὶ λαμπρὸς ἦν ὁ Φιλοποίμην, ὡς οὔτε κατὰ χεῖρα τῶν νέων τινὸς οὔτε συνέσει τῶν πρεσβυτέρων ἀπολειπόμενος, ἀλλὰ καὶ μάχεσθαι καὶ στρατηγεῖν ἰκανώτατος.

VIII. Τὸ δὲ κοινὸν τῶν Ἀχαιῶν πρῶτος μὲν Ἄρατος εἰς ἀξίωμα καὶ δύναμιν ἤρεν, ἐκ ταπεινοῦ καὶ διερριμμένου κατὰ πόλεις συναγαγὼν καὶ πολιτευσάμενος Ἑλληνικὴν καὶ φιλάνθρωπον πολιτείαν· ἔπειτα, ὥσπερ ἐν τοῖς ὕδασι, ἀρξαμένων ὀλίγων ὑφίστασθαι καὶ μικρῶν σωμαίων, ἤδη τὰ ἐπιρρέοντα τοῖς πρώτοις ἐνισχόμενα καὶ περιπίπτοντα πῆξιν ἰσχυρὰν καὶ στερεότητα 2 ποιεῖ δι' ἀλλήλων, οὕτω τῆς Ἑλλάδος ἀσθενοῦς καὶ εὐδιαλύτου φερομένης κατὰ πόλεις ἐν τῷ τότε χρόνῳ πρῶτον συστάντες οἱ Ἀχαιοί, καὶ τῶν κύκλῳ πόλεων τὰς μὲν ἐκ τοῦ βοηθεῖν καὶ συνελυθεροῦν ἀπὸ τῶν τυράννων ὑπολαμβάνοντες, τὰς δὲ ὁμοιοῖα καὶ πολιτεία καταμιγνύντες εἰς ἑαυτοὺς, ἐν σῶμα καὶ μίαν δύναμιν κατασκευάσαι 3 διενοοῦντο τὴν Πελοπόννησον. ἀλλ' Ἄρατου μὲν ζῶντος ἔτι τοῖς Μακεδόνων ὅπλοις ὑπεδύοντο τὰ πολλά, θεραπεύοντες Πτολεμαίου, εἶτ' αὐθις Ἀντίγονον καὶ Φίλιππον ἐν μέσαις ἀναστρεφομένους ταῖς Ἑλληνικαῖς πράξεσιν· ἐπεὶ δὲ Φιλοποίμην εἰς τὸ πρωτεύειν προῆλθεν, ἤδη καθ' ἑαυτοὺς rode out from the ranks and charged upon Philopoemen. But Philopoemen received his onset, was first to drive home a spear-thrust, and threw Damophantus to the ground. Their leader fallen, the enemy at once took to flight, and Philopoemen was in high renown, as one who yielded to none of the young men in personal prowess, and to none of the elder men in sagacity, but both in fighting and in commanding was most capable.

PHILOPOEMEN

VIII. The commonwealth of the Achaeans was first raised to dignity and power by Aratus, who consolidated it when it was feeble and disrupted, and inaugurated an Hellenic and humane form of government. Then, just as in running waters, after a few small particles have begun to take a fixed position, others presently are swept against the first, adhere and cling to them, and thus form a fixed and solid mass by mutual support, so the Achaeans, at a time when Greece was weak and easily dissolved and drifting along by individual cities, first united themselves together, and then, by receiving into their number some of the cities round about which they had aided and assisted in shaking off their tyrants, and by uniting others with themselves in a harmonious civil polity, they purposed to form the Peloponnesus into a single political body and one power. As long, however, as Aratus lived, they were dependent for the most part on Macedonian armies, paying court to Ptolemy, and then again to Antigonus and Philip, all of whom busied themselves in the affairs of Greece. But when Philopoemen was advanced to leadership among them,¹ they were at last capable of contending ¹ In 207 B.C. ; Aratus had died in 213.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἀξιόμαχοι τοῖς ἰσχύουσι πλεῖστον ὄντες ἐπαύ-4 σαντο χρώμενοι προστάταις ἐπεισάκτοις. Ἄρατος μὲν γάρ, ἀργότερος εἶναι δοκῶν πρὸς τοὺς πολε-μικοὺς ἀγῶνας, ὁμιλία καὶ πραότητι καὶ φιλίας βασιλικαῖς τὰ πλεῖστα κατειργάσατο τῶν πραγμάτων, ὡς ἐν τοῖς περὶ ἐκείνου γέγραπται, Φιλο-ποίμην δὲ ἀγαθὸς πολεμιστῆς ὦν καὶ διὰ τῶν ὄπλων ἐνεργός, ἔτι δ' εὐτυχῆς καὶ κατορθωτικὸς εὐθύς ἐν ταῖς πρώταις γενόμενος μάχαις, ἅμα τῇ δυνάμει τὸ φρόνημα τῶν Ἀχαιῶν ἠϋξήσε νικᾶν ἐθισθέντων μετ' αὐτοῦ καὶ κατευτυχεῖν ἐν τοῖς πλείστοις ἀγῶσι.

IX. Πρῶτον μὲν οὖν τὰ περὶ τὰς τάξεις καὶ τοὺς ὀπλισμοὺς φαύλως ἔχοντα τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς ἐκίνησεν. ἐχρῶντο μὲν γὰρ θυρεοῖς μὲν εὐπετέσι διὰ λεπτότητα καὶ στενωτέροις τοῦ περιστέλλειν τὰ σώματα, δόρασι δὲ μικροτέροις πολὺ τῶν σαρισῶν· καὶ διὰ τοῦτο πλήκται καὶ μάχιμοι πόρρωθεν ἦσαν ὑπὸ κουφότητος, προσμίξαντες 2 δὲ τοῖς πολεμίοις ἔλαττον εἶχον· εἶδος δὲ τάξεως καὶ σχήματος εἰς σπείραν οὐκ ἦν σύννηθες, φάλαγγι δὲ χρώμενοι μήτε προβολὴν ἐχούση μήτε συνασπισμὸν ὡς ἡ Μακεδόνων, ραδίως ἐξεθλίβοντο καὶ διεσπῶντο. ταῦτα ὁ Φιλοποίμην διδάξας ἔπεισεν αὐτοὺς ἀντὶ μὲν θυρεοῦ καὶ δόρατος ἀσπίδα λαβεῖν καὶ σάρισαν, κράνεσι δὲ καὶ θώραξι καὶ περικνημῖσι πεφραγμένους μόνιμον καὶ βεβηκυῖαν ἀντὶ δρομικῆς καὶ πελταστικῆς μάχην ἀσκεῖν.

PHILOPOEMEN

alone with their most powerful neighbours, and ceased to rely upon foreign protectors. Aratus, indeed, who was thought to be too sluggish for warlike contests, accomplished most of his undertakings by conference, urbanity, and royal friendships, as I have written in his Life ;¹ whereas Philopoemen, who was a good warrior and effective with his weapons, besides proving himself fortunate and successful in his very first battles, increased not only the power but also the courage of the Achaeans, who were accustomed to be victorious under him and to win success in most of their contests.

IX. In the first place, however, he changed the faulty practice of the Achaeans in drawing up and arming their soldiers. For they used bucklers which were easily carried because they were so light, and yet were too narrow to protect the body ; and spears which were much shorter than the Macedonian pike. For this reason they were effective in fighting at a long distance, because they were so lightly armed, but when they came to close quarters with the enemy they were at a disadvantage. Moreover, a division of line and formation into cohorts was not customary with them, and since they employed a solid phalanx without either levelled line of spears or wall of interlocking shields such as the Macedonian phalanx presented, they were easily dislodged and scattered. Philopoemen showed them all this, and persuaded them to adopt long pike and heavy shield instead of spear and buckler, to protect their bodies with helmets and breastplates and greaves, and to practise stationary and steadfast fighting instead of the nimble movements of light-armed troops. After

¹ See the Aratus, x.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- 3 πείσας δὲ καθοπλίσασθαι τοὺς ἐν ἡλικίᾳ πρῶτον μὲν ἐπήρε θαρρεῖν ὡς ἀμάχους γεγονότας, ἔπειτα τὰς τρυφὰς αὐτῶν καὶ τὰς πολυτελείας ἄριστα μετεκόσμησεν. ἀφελεῖν γὰρ οὐκ ἦν παντάπασι ἐκ πολλοῦ νοσοῦντων τὸν κενὸν καὶ μάταιον ζῆλον, ἐσθήτας ἀγαπῶντων περιττὰς στρωμνάς τε βαπτομένων ἀλουργεῖς καὶ περὶ δεῖπνα φιλοτιμουμένω 361
- 4 καὶ τραπέζας. ὁ δὲ ὑρξάμενος ἐκτρέπειν ἀπὸ τῶν οὐκ ἀναγκαίων ἐπὶ τὰ χρήσιμα καὶ καλὰ τὴν φιλοκοσμίαν, ταχὺ πάντα ἐπέισε καὶ παρῶρμησε τὰς καθ' ἡμέραν περὶ σῶμα δαπάνης κολουσάντας ἐν ταῖς στρατιωτικαῖς καὶ πολεμικαῖς παρασκευ-
- 5 αῖς διαπρεπεῖς ὀρᾶσθαι κεκοσμημένους. ἦν οὖν ἰδεῖν τὰ μὲν ἐργαστήρια μεστὰ κατακοπτομένων κυλίκων καὶ Θηρικλείων, χρυσομένων δὲ θωράκων καὶ καταργυρουμένων θυρεῶν καὶ χαλινῶν, τὰ δὲ στάδια πῶλων δαμαζομένων καὶ νεανίσκων ὀπλομαχοῦντων, ἐν δὲ ταῖς χερσὶ τῶν γυναικῶν κράνη καὶ πτερὰ βαφαῖς κοσμούμενα καὶ χιτῶνων ἰππικῶν καὶ στρατιωτικῶν χλαμύδων διηνηθισμένων.
- 6 ἢ δ' ὄψις αὐτῆ τὸ θάρσος αὐξουσα καὶ παρακαλουσα τὴν ὀρμὴν ἐποίει φιλοπαράβολον καὶ πρό-
- 7 θυμον ἐπὶ τοὺς κινδύνους. ἢ μὲν γὰρ ἐν τοῖς ἄλλοις θεάμασι πολυτέλεια τρυφὴν ἐπάγεται καὶ μαλακίαν ἐνδίδωσι τοῖς χρωμένοις, ὥσπερ ὑπὸ νυγμῶν καὶ γαργαλισμῶν τῆς αἰσθήσεως συνεπι-κλώσης τὴν διάνοιαν, ἢ δ' εἰς τὰ τοιαῦτα ῥώννυσι καὶ μεγαλύνει τὸν θυμόν, ὥσπερ Ὀμηρος ἐποίησε τὸν Ἀχιλλεῖα τῶν καινῶν ὄπλων παρατεθέντων

PHILOPOEMEN

he had persuaded those of military age to arm themselves in this manner, in the first place he inspired them with confidence that they had thus become invincible, and then made most excellent reforms in their luxurious and extravagant ways of living. For it was not possible to remove altogether their empty and idle emulation from a people long addicted to it. They were fond of costly apparel, the coverings of their couches were dyed purple, and they vied with one another in banquets and table array. But he made a beginning by diverting their love of show from what was unnecessary to what was serviceable and honourable, and speedily persuaded and incited them all to check their daily expenditures upon bodily wants, and to find their chief adornment in military and warlike equipments. And so one might have seen the workshops filled with goblets and Therycleian plate ¹ which were being broken up, with breastplates being gilded, with shields and bridles being silvered over, while in the places of exercise colts were being broken in and young men were learning the use of heavy armour, and in the hands of women there were helmets and plumes for dyeing, and horsemen's tunics or soldiers' cloaks for embroidering. The sight of all this increased men's courage, called forth their energies, and made them venturesome and ready to incur dangers. For extravagance in other objects of display induces luxury and implants effeminacy in those who use them, since something like a pricking and tickling of the senses breaks down serious purpose; but when it is seen in the trappings of war it strengthens and exalts the spirit, just as Homer represented Achilles, when his ἐγγὺς ὑπὸ τῆς ὄψεως οἷον ὀργῶντα καὶ φλεγόμενον πρὸς τὴν δι' αὐτῶν ἐνέργειαν.

¹ See the Aemilius Paulus, xxxiii. 2.

Οὕτω δὲ κοσμήσας τοὺς νέους ἐγύμναζε καὶ διεπόνει, ταῖς κινήσεσι προθύμως ὑπακούοντας 8 καὶ φιλοτίμως. καὶ γὰρ ἡ τάξις θαυμαστῶς ἠγαπᾶτο ἄθραυστόν τι λαμβάνειν πύκνωμα δοκούσα, καὶ τὰ ὄπλα τοῖς σώμασιν ἐγίνετο χειροήθη καὶ κοῦφα, μεθ' ἡδονῆς διὰ λαμπρότητα καὶ κάλλος ἀπτομένων καὶ φορούντων, ἐναγωνίσασθαί τε βουλομένων καὶ διακριθῆναι τάχιστα πρὸς τοὺς πολεμίους.

X. Ἦν δὲ τότε τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς ὁ πρὸς Μαχανίδα πόλεμος τὸν Λακεδαιμονίων τύραννον, ἀπὸ πολλῆς καὶ μεγάλης δυνάμεως ἐπιβουλεύοντα πᾶσι Πελοποννησίοις. ὡς οὖν εἰς τὴν Μαντίνειαν ἐμβεβληκῶς ἀπηγγέλθη, κατὰ τάχος ὁ Φιλοποίμην ἐξήγαγε τὴν στρατιὰν ἐπ' αὐτόν. ἐγγὺς δὲ τῆς πόλεως παρετάξαντο πολλοῖς μὲν ξένοις ἐκάτεροι, 2 ἄλλοι δὲ ὁμοῦ τι ταῖς πολιτικαῖς δυνάμεσι. γενόμενου δὲ τοῦ ἀγῶνος ἐν χερσίν, ὁ Μαχανίδας τοῖς ξένοις τοὺς τῶν Ἀχαιῶν προτεταγμένους ἀκουτιστὰς καὶ Ταραντίνοὺς τρεψάμενος ἀντὶ τοῦ χωρεῖν εὐθύς ἐπὶ τοὺς μαχομένους καὶ παραρρηγνύναι τὸ συνεστηκὸς ἐξέπεσε διώκων καὶ παρήλλαξε τὴν φάλαγγα τῶν Ἀχαιῶν ἐν τᾷξει 3 μενόντων. ὁ δὲ Φιλοποίμην τηλικούτου πταίσματος ἐν ἀρχῇ γενομένου καὶ τῶν πραγμάτων ἀπολωλέναι κομιδῆ καὶ διεφθάρθαι δοκούντων, τοῦτο μὲν ὁμως προσεποιεῖτο παρορᾶν καὶ μηδὲν

PHILOPOEMEN

new armour was laid down near him, as exulting at the sight and all on fire to get to work with it.¹

After he had thus arrayed and adorned the young men, Philopoemen exercised and drilled them, and they eagerly and emulously obeyed his instructions. For the new order of battle pleased them wonderfully, since it seemed to secure a close array that could not be broken; and the armour which they used became light and manageable for them, since they wore or grasped it with delight because of its beauty and splendour, and wished to get into action with it and fight a decisive battle with their enemies as soon as possible.

X. At this time the Achaeans were carrying on war with Machanidas the tyrant of Sparta, who, relying upon his large and strong forces, was scheming to get control of the whole Peloponnesus. Accordingly, when word came that the tyrant had invaded the territory of Mantinea, Philopoemen quickly led his army out against him. They drew up in battle array near the city, both parties having many mercenaries and almost all their citizen soldiery. When battle was joined, Machanidas with his mercenaries routed the javelineers and Tarantines who had been stationed in front of the Achaean line, and then, instead of advancing directly against the main body of the enemy and breaking up their close array, he dashed off in pursuit of the fugitives, and so passed by the phalanx of the Achaeans, which remained drawn up in position. Then Philopoemen, although so great a disaster had occurred at the outset and his cause was thought to be utterly lost and ruined, professed to ignore and make light of it, and seeing what

¹ Iliad, xix. 15 ff.

ἡγείσθαι δεινόν, κατιδὼν δὲ τοὺς πολεμίους, ὅσον ἡμάρτανον ἐν τῇ διώξει, τῆς φάλαγγος ἀπορρηγνυμένους καὶ κενὴν χώραν διδόντας, οὐκ ἀπὴντησεν οὐδ' ἐνέστη φερομένοις αὐτοῖς ἐπὶ τοὺς 4 φεύγοντας, ἀλλ' ἐάσας παρελθεῖν καὶ διάσπασμα ποιῆσαι μέγα πρὸς τοὺς ὀπλίτας εὐθύς ἦγε τῶν Λακεδαιμονίων, ὁρῶν τὴν φάλαγγα γυμνὴν ἀπολελειμμένην, καὶ κατὰ κέρας παραδραμῶν ἐνέ-βαλε, μήτε ἄρχοντος αὐτοῖς παρόντος μήτε μάχεσθαι προσδεχομένοις· νικᾶν γὰρ ἠγοῦντο καὶ κρατεῖν παντάπασι, διώκοντα τὸν Μαχανίδα 5 ὁρῶντες. ὡσάμενος δὲ τούτους φόνῳ πολλῷ (λέγονται γὰρ ὑπὲρ τοὺς τετρακισχιλίους ἀποθανεῖν) ὤρμησεν ἐπὶ τὸν Μαχανίδα ἐκ τῆς διώξεως ἀναστρέφοντα μετὰ τῶν ξένων. τάφρου δὲ μεγάλῃς καὶ βαθείας ἐν μέσῳ διειργούσης, παρεξή-λαυνον ἀλλήλοις ἐκατέρωθεν, ὁ μὲν διαβῆναι καὶ 6 φυγεῖν, ὁ δὲ τοῦτο κωλύσαι βουλόμενος. ἦν δὲ ὄψις οὐχ ὡς στρατηγῶν μαχομένων, ἀλλ' ὥσπερ θηρίῳ πρὸς ἀλκὴν ὑπ' ἀνάγκης τρεπομένῳ δεινοῦ κυνηγέτου τοῦ Φιλοποίμενος συνεστῶτος. ἔνθα ὁ μὲν ἵππος τοῦ τυράννου ῥωμαλέος ὢν καὶ θυμοειδῆς καὶ τοῖς μύωψιν αἶμαχθεὶς ἐκατέρωθεν ἐπετόλμησε τῇ διαβάσει, καὶ προσβαλὼν τῇ τάφρῳ τὸ στῆθος ἐβιάζετο τοῖς προσθίοις πέραν ἐρεῖσασθαι 7 σκέλεσιν. ἐν δὲ τούτῳ Σιμίης καὶ Πολύαινος, οἵπερ αἰεὶ τῷ Φιλοποίμενι παρήσαν μαχομένῳ καὶ συνήσπιζον, ὁμοῦ προσήλαυνον ἀμφοτέροι τὰς αἰχμὰς κλίναντες ἐναντίας. φθάνει δὲ αὐτοὺς ὁ Φιλοποίμην ἀπαντήσας τῷ Μαχανίδα, καὶ τὸν ἵππον αὐτοῦ μετεωρίζοντα τὴν κεφαλὴν πρὸ τοῦ 362

PHILOPOEMEN

a great mistake the enemy had made by going off in pursuit, thus breaking away from his phalanx and leaving a vacant space there, did not oppose or resist their chase after the fugitives, but let them pass him by and make a great gap. Then he led straight against the Lacedaemonian heavy-armed, seeing that their phalanx had been left exposed, and fell upon them in a flank attack, while their commander was away and they were not expecting to fight; for they thought they were victorious and getting the upper hand altogether, since they saw Machanidas pursuing. After Philopoemen had routed these with great slaughter (more than four thousand of them are said to have fallen), he set out against Machanidas, who was returning with his mercenaries from the pursuit. But a broad and deep ditch stretched between them, along which the two leaders rode opposite each other, one wishing to get across and escape, the other to prevent this. The spectacle was not that of two commanders fighting, but that of a powerful hunter attacking a wild beast that has been forced to turn at bay, and Philopoemen was the hunter. And now the tyrant's horse, which was vigorous and high-spirited and felt the bloody spurs in his sides, essayed to make the leap across, and striking against the edge of the ditch with his breast, was struggling with his fore-feet to extricate himself. At this point Simmias and Polyaeus, who were always at Philopoemen's side when he was fighting and protected him with their shields, rode up both at the same time and levelled their spears at the horse. But Philopoemen was before them in attacking Machanidas, and seeing that the tyrant's horse was lifting its head up in front of its rider's body, he

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

σώματος ὀρῶν μικρὸν ἐνέκλινε τὸν ἴδιον, καὶ δια-λαβὼν τὸ ξυστὸν ἐκ χειρὸς ὠθεῖ καὶ περιτρέπει 8 τὸν ἄνδρα συνεπερείσας. τοῦτο ἔχων τὸ σχῆμα χαλκοῦς ἐν Δελφοῖς ἔστηκεν ὑπὸ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν θαυμασάντων μάλιστα καὶ τὴν πράξιν αὐτοῦ καὶ τὴν στρατηγίαν ἐκείνην.

XI. Λέγεται δὲ τῆς τῶν Νεμείων πανηγύρεως συνεστῶσης¹ στρατηγοῦντα τὸν Φιλοποίμενα τὸ δεύτερον καὶ νενικηκότα μὲν οὐ πάλαι τὴν ἐν Μαντινεῖα μάχην, τότε δὲ σχολὴν ἄγοντα διὰ τὴν ἑορτὴν, πρῶτον μὲν ἐπιδείξει τοῖς Ἑλλησι κεκοσμημένην τὴν φάλαγγα καὶ κινουμένην, ὡσπερ εἶθιστο, τοὺς τακτικούς ῥυθμούς μετὰ 2 τάχους καὶ ῥώμης· ἔπειτα κιθαρῳδῶν ἀγωνιζο-μένων εἰς τὸ θέατρον παρελθεῖν ἔχοντα τοὺς νεανίσκους ἐν ταῖς στρατιωτικαῖς χλαμύσι καὶ τοῖς φοινικοῖς ὑποδύταις, ἀκμάζοντάς τε τοῖς σώμασιν ἅπαντας καὶ ταῖς ἡλικίαις παραλλήλους, αἰδῶ δὲ πολλὴν πρὸς τὸν ἄρχοντα καὶ φρόνημα νεανικὸν ὑποφαίνοντας ἐκ πολλῶν καὶ καλῶν ἀγῶνων· ἄρτι δ' αὐτῶν εἰσεληλυθότων κατὰ τύχην Πυλάδην τὸν κιθαρῳδὸν ἄδοντα τοὺς Τιμοθέου Πέρσας ἐνάρξασθαι

Κλεινὸν ἐλευθερίας τεύχων μέγαν Ἑλλάδι κόσμον·

3 ἅμα δὲ τῇ λαμπρότητι τῆς φωνῆς τοῦ περὶ τὴν ποίησιν ὄγκου συμπρέψαντος ἐπίβλεψιν γενέσθαι τοῦ θεάτρου πανταχόθεν εἰς τὸν Φιλοποίμενα καὶ κρότου μετὰ χαρᾶς, τῶν Ἑλλήνων τὸ παλαιὸν

¹ συνεστῶσης Bekker has ἐνεστῶσης, after Bryan.

PHILOPOEMEN

gave his own horse a little swerve to one side, and then, clasping his spear firmly in the middle, pushed it home with all his weight and overturned his enemy. This is the attitude in which he is represented by a bronze statue set up at Delphi by the Achaeans, who admired especially both his deed of prowess and his generalship on that day.

XI. Moreover, we are told that at the celebration of the Nemean games,¹ when he was general of the Achaeans for the second time and had recently won his victory at Mantinea,² but was at leisure the while on account of the festival, Philopoemen in the first place displayed before the assembled Greeks his phalanx, with its splendid array, and performing its tactical evolutions, as it was wont to do, with speed and vigour. Then, while the minstrels were contending for the prize, he came into the theatre with his young men. They wore their soldiers' cloaks and their purple tunics, were all in the prime of their strength and of the same age, and showed not only great respect for their commander, but also that high spirit which young men have after many honourable contests. And just as they made their entrance it chanced that Pylades the minstrel was chanting the opening verse of the Persians of Timotheus—

“Glorious the crown of freedom which he fashioneth for Hellas”;

whereupon, as the splendid voice of the singer fitly sustained the majesty of the poet's words, all the spectators turned their eyes upon Philopoemen and gave him glad applause; for in their hopes the ¹ In the summer of 205 B.C.

² In the spring of 206 B.C.

ἀξίωμα ταῖς ἐλπίσιν ἀναλαμβάνοντων καὶ τοῦ τότε φρονήματος ἔγγιστα τῷ θαρρεῖν γινομένων.¹

XII. Παρὰ δὲ τὰς μάχας καὶ τοὺς κινδύνους, ὥσπερ οἱ πῶλοι τοὺς συνήθεις ἐπιβάτας ποθοῦντες, εἰς ἄλλον φέρωσι, πτύρονται καὶ ξενοπαθοῦσιν, οὕτως ἡ δύναμις τῶν Ἀχαιῶν ἐτέρου στρατηγούτου ἠθύμει καὶ πρὸς ἐκείνον ἐπάπταινε καὶ μόνον ὀφθέντος εὐθύς ὀρθῆ καὶ δραστήριος ἦν διὰ τὸ θαρρεῖν, ἅτε δὴ καὶ τοὺς ἐναντίους αἰσθανόμενοι πρὸς ἓνα τοῦτον τῶν στρατηγῶν ἀντιβλέπειν οὐ δυναμένους, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὴν δόξαν αὐτοῦ καὶ τοῦνομα δεδοικότας, ὡς ἦν φανερὸν ἐξ ὧν ἔπρασσον. Φίλιππος μὲν γὰρ ὁ τῶν Μακεδόνων βασιλεὺς οἰόμενος, ἂν ἐκποδῶν ὁ Φιλοποίμην γένηται, πάλιν ὑποπτήξει αὐτῷ τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς, ἐπέμψεν εἰς Ἄργος κρύφα τοὺς ἀναιρήσοντας αὐτόν· ἐπιγνωσθείσης δὲ τῆς ἐπιβουλῆς παντάπασιν ἐξεμισήθη καὶ διεβλήθη πρὸς τοὺς Ἕλληνας. Βοιωτοὶ δὲ πολιορκοῦντες Μέγαρα καὶ λήψεσθαι ταχέως ἐλπίζοντες, ἐξαίφνης λόγου προσπεσόντος αὐτοῖς, ὅς. οὐκ ἦν ἀληθῆς, Φιλοποίμενα βοηθοῦντα τοῖς πολιορκουμένοις ἐγγὺς εἶναι, τὰς κλίμακας ἀφέντες ἤδη προσερηρισμένας τοῖς τείχεσιν ᾗχοντο φεύγοντες. Νάβιδος δὲ τοῦ μετὰ Μαχανίδα τυραννοῦντος Λακεδαιμονίων Μεσσήνην ἄφνω καταλαβόντος, ἐτύγχανε μὲν ἰδιώτης ὧν τότε ὁ Φιλοποίμην καὶ δυνάμει οὐδεμιᾶς κύριος, ἐπεὶ δὲ τὸν στρατηγούντα τῶν Ἀχαιῶν Λύσιππον οὐκ ἔπειθε βοηθεῖν τοῖς Μεσ-

¹ γινομένων Bekker after Coraës : γενομένων.

PHILOPOEMEN

Greeks were recovering their ancient dignity, and in their courage they were making the nearest approach to the high spirit of their fathers.

XII. But when it came to perils and battles, just as young horses long for their accustomed riders, and if they have others on their backs, are shy and wild, so the Achaean army, when someone other than Philopoemen was commander-in-chief,¹ would be out of heart, would keep looking eagerly for him, and if he but came in sight, would at once be alert and efficient because of the courage he inspired. For they perceived that he was the one general whom their enemies were unable to face, and whose name and fame they feared, as was evident from what they did. For Philip the king of Macedon, thinking that if Philopoemen could be got out of the way the Achaeans would again submit abjectly to his sway, secretly sent men to Argos who were to assassinate him; but the plot became known, and Philip was utterly condemned and hated among the Greeks. Again, the Boeotians were besieging Megara and had hopes of its speedy capture, when suddenly a report reached their ears (and it was a false report) that Philopoemen was coming to the aid of the besieged and was close at hand; so they abandoned their scaling-ladders, which were already planted against the walls of the city, and fled away. And once again, when Nabis, who succeeded Machanidas as tyrant of Sparta, suddenly seized Messene, it chanced that Philopoemen was out of office and had no force under his command; but since Lysippus, the commander-in-chief of the Achaeans, could not be persuaded by him to go to the rescue of the ¹ As a rule, the same man could not be general of the Achaean league two years in succession.

σηνίοις, ἀπολωλέναι κομιδῇ φάσκοντα τὴν πόλιν ἔνδον γεγονότων τῶν πολεμίων, αὐτὸς ἐβοήθει τοὺς ἑαυτοῦ πολίτας ἀναλαβὼν οὔτε νόμον οὔτε χειροτονίαν περιμείναντας, ἀλλ' ὡς διὰ παντὸς ἄρχοντι τῷ κρείττονι κατὰ φύσιν ἐπομένους.
 5 ἤδη δ' αὐτοῦ πλησίον ὄντος ἀκούσας ὁ Νάβις οὐχ ὑπέστη, καίπερ ἐν τῇ πόλει στρατοπεδεύων, ἀλλ' ὑπεκδύς διὰ πυλῶν ἐτέρων κατὰ τάχος ἀπήγαγε τὴν δύναμιν, εὐτυχία χρῆσασθαι δοκῶν εἰ διαφύγοι καὶ διέφυγε, Μεσσήνη δ' ἠλευθέρωτο.

XIII. Ταῦτα μὲν οὖν κατὰ τοῦ Φιλοποίμενος· ἢ δ' εἰς Κρήτην αὐθις ἀποδημία Γορτυνίων δεηθέντων, ὡς χρῆσαιντο πολεμούμενοι στρατηγῷ, διαβολὴν ἔσχεν, ὅτι τῆς πατρίδος αὐτοῦ πολεμουμένης ὑπὸ Νάβιδος ἀπὴν φυγομαχῶν ἢ φιλοτιμούμενος ἀκαίρως πρὸς ἐτέρους. καίτοι συντόμως οὕτως ἐπολεμήθησαν Μεγαλοπολίται κατὰ τὸν χρόνον ἐκείνον ὥστε τοῖς μὲν τείχεσιν ἐνοικεῖν, σπείρειν δὲ τοὺς στενωπούς, περικεκομμένης¹ τῆς χώρας καὶ τῶν πολεμίων σχεδὸν 2 ἐν ταῖς πύλαις στρατοπεδεύοντων. ὁ δὲ Κρησὶ πολεμῶν τηνικαῦτα καὶ στρατηγῶν διαπόντιος ἐγκλήματα παρείχε καθ' ἑαυτοῦ τοῖς ἐχθροῖς ὡς ἀποδιδράσκων τὸν οἶκον πόλεμον. ἦσαν δέ τινες οἱ λέγοντες, ἐτέρους τῶν Ἀχαιῶν ἡρημένων ἄρχοντας, ἰδιώτην ὄντα τὸν Φιλοποίμενα χρῆσαι τὴν ἑαυτοῦ σχολὴν ἐφ' ἡγεμονία δεηθεῖσι τοῖς

¹ περικεκομμένης Coraës and Bekker, with the vulgate :
 περικεκομμένους.

PHILOPOEMEN

Messenians, because, as he said, the city was utterly lost now that the enemy were inside, Philopoemen himself went to their rescue, taking with him his fellow-citizens of Megalopolis, who did not wait for any law or commission, but followed the man whom nature had made superior as though he were always in command. And when Nabis heard that Philopoemen was already close at hand, he did not wait for him to come up, although he was encamped in the city, but stole out by an opposite gate and led his forces off as fast as he could, thinking that he would be fortunate if he should escape; and he did escape, and Messene was set free.

XIII. All these things, then, made for the honour of Philopoemen; but his going away to Crete again at the request of the Gortynians, who wanted him to be their general in their war, brought calumny upon him, and it was said that when his native city was at war with Nabis, he was away, either to avoid fighting or to show kindness out of all season to others. And yet so continuously were the Megalopolitans under hostile attack all that time that they lived upon their walls and planted their grain in the streets, since their fields were ravaged and the enemy were encamped almost in their gates. Philopoemen, however, was waging war in Crete all that while, and serving as general across the sea, and so afforded his enemies a chance to accuse him of running away from the war at home. But there were some who said that since the Achaeans chose other men as their generals and Philopoemen was without public office, he merely put the leisure which belonged to him at the service of the Gortynians when they

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- 3 Γορτυνίοις. ἦν γὰρ ἀλλότριος σχολῆς, καθάπερ ἄλλο τι κτῆμα τὴν στρατηγικὴν καὶ πολεμικὴν ἀρετὴν ἔχειν διὰ παντὸς ἐν χρήσει καὶ τριβῇ βουλόμενος, ὡς καὶ τῷ περὶ Πτολεμαίου ποτὲ ῥηθέντι τοῦ βασιλέως ἀπεδήλωσεν. ἐκείνον γὰρ ἐγκωμιαζόντων τινῶν ὡς εὖ μὲν ἐξασκούντα τὸ στράτευμα καθ' ἡμέραν, εὖ δὲ γυμνάζοντα καὶ φιλοπόνως διὰ τῶν ὄπλων τὸ σῶμα, “Καὶ τίς ἄν,” ἔφη, “βασιλέα θαυμάσειεν ἐν τούτῳ τῆς ἡλικίας μὴ ἐπιδεικνύμενον, ἀλλὰ μελετώντα;”
- 4 Χαλεπῶς δ' οὖν οἱ Μεγαλοπολίται φέροντες ἐπὶ τούτῳ καὶ προδεδόσθαι νομίζοντες ἐπεχείρησαν ἀποξενοῦν αὐτόν· οἱ δ' Ἀχαιοὶ διεκώλυσαν Ἀρίσταινον πέμψαντες εἰς Μεγάλην πόλιν στρατηγόν, ὃς καίπερ ὢν διάφορος τῷ Φιλοποίμει περὶ τὴν πολιτείαν, οὐκ εἶασε τελεσθῆναι τὴν καταδίκην.
- 5 ἐκ δὲ τούτου παρορώμενος ὑπὸ τῶν πολιτῶν ὁ Φιλοποίμην ἀπέστησε πολλὰς τῶν περιοικίδων κωμῶν, λέγειν διδάξας ὡς οὐ συνετέλουν οὐδὲ ἦσαν ἐξ ἀρχῆς ἐκείνων, καὶ λεγούσαις ταῦτα φανερώς συνηγωνίσασατο καὶ συγκατεστασίασε τὴν πόλιν ἐπὶ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν. ταῦτα μὲν οὖν ὕστερον.
- 6 Ἐν δὲ τῇ Κρήτῃ συνεπολέμει τοῖς Γορτυνίοις, οὐχ ὡς Πελοποννήσιος ἀνὴρ καὶ Ἀρκὰς ἀπλοῦν τινα καὶ γενναῖον πόλεμον, ἀλλὰ τὸ Κρητικὸν ἦθος ἐνδύς καὶ τοῖς ἐκείνων σοφίσμασι καὶ δόλοις κλωπείαις τε καὶ λοχισμοῖς χρώμενος ἐπ' αὐτοὺς asked him to be their leader. For he was averse to inactivity, and wished to keep his skill as a commander in war, like any other possession, all the while in use and exercise. And he made this evident by what he once said about King Ptolemy. When certain persons were extolling that monarch because he carefully drilled his army day by day, and carefully and laboriously exercised himself in arms, "And yet who," said Philopoemen, "can admire a king of his years for always practising but never performing anything?"

PHILOPOEMEN

The Megalopolitans, nevertheless, were displeased at this absence, and looking upon it in the light of a betrayal, undertook to make him an exile; but the Achaeans prevented this by sending to Megalopolis Aristaenus, their commander-in-chief, who, although politically at variance with Philopoemen, would not suffer sentence of condemnation to be passed upon him. In consequence of this displeasure, Philopoemen was ignored by his fellow-citizens, and therefore induced many of their outlying villages to secede from them, instructing them to say that they were not tributary to the city and had not originally belonged to it; and when they made this plea, he openly supported them in their contention and helped them to raise a faction against the city in the assembly of the Achaeans. This, however, was at a later time.

In Crete he waged war in the service of the Gortynians; not the straightforward and honourable warfare of a Peloponnesian and Arcadian, but one in which he adopted the Cretan practices, and turning their tricks and wiles and stolen marches and ambushes against themselves, speedily showed them

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ταχὺ παῖδας ἀπέδειξεν ἀνόητα καὶ κενὰ πρὸς ἐμπειρίαν ἀληθινὴν πανουργούντας.

- XIV. Ἐπὶ τούτοις δὲ θαυμασθεῖς καὶ λαμπρὸς παρὰ τῶν ἐκεῖ πράξεων ἀνακομισθεῖς εἰς Πελοπόννησον εὔρε τὸν μὲν Φίλιππον ὑπὸ τοῦ Τίτου καταπεπολεμημένοι, τὸν δὲ Νάβιν ὑπὸ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν καὶ τῶν Ῥωμαίων πολεμούμενον. ἐφ' ὃν εὐθύς αἰρεθεῖς ἄρχων καὶ ναυμαχία παραβαλόμενος τὸ τοῦ Ἐπαμεινώνδου παθεῖν ἔδοξε, πολὺ τῆς περὶ αὐτὸν ἀρετῆς καὶ δόξης ἐν τῇ θαλάσῃ
- 2 κάκιον ἀγωνισάμενος. πλὴν Ἐπαμεινώνδαν μὲν ἔνιοι λέγουσιν ὀκνοῦντα γεῦσαι τῶν κατὰ θάλασσαν ὠφελειῶν τοὺς πολίτας, ὅπως αὐτῷ μὴ λάθωσιν ἀντὶ μονίμων ὀπλιτῶν, κατὰ Πλάτωνα, 364 ναῦται γενόμενοι καὶ διαφθαρέντες, ἄπρακτον ἐκ τῆς Ἀσίας καὶ τῶν νήσων ἀπελθεῖν ἐκουσίως.
- 3 Φιλοποίμην δὲ τὴν ἐν τοῖς πεζοῖς ἐπιστήμην καὶ διὰ θαλάττης ἀρκέσειν αὐτῷ πρὸς τὸ καλῶς ἀγωνίσασθαι πεπεισμένους, ἔγνω τὴν ἄσκησιν ἡλίκου μέρος ἐστὶ τῆς ἀρετῆς καὶ πόσῃ ἐπὶ πάντα τοῖς ἔθισθεῖσι δύναμιν προστίθησιν. οὐ γὰρ μόνον ἐν τῇ ναυμαχίᾳ διὰ τὴν ἀπειρίαν ἔλαττον ἔσχεν, ἀλλὰ καὶ ναῦν τινα, παλαιὰν μὲν, ἔνδοξον δέ, δι' ἐτῶν τεσσαράκοντα κατασπάσας ἐπλήρωσεν, ὥστε μὴ στεγούσης κινδυνεύσαι τοὺς πλέοντας.

¹ In the battle of Cynoscephalae, 197 B.C. See the Flaminius, xiii.

PHILOPOEMEN

that they were children opposing foolish and vain mischievousness to genuine military experience.

XIV. Having thus won admiration, and having come back to Peloponnesus with a brilliant reputation from his exploits in Crete, he found that Philip had been defeated and subdued by Titus Flamininus,¹ and that the Achaeans and the Romans were waging war upon Nabis. He was at once chosen general against Nabis, and by hazarding the issue on a naval battle would seem to have fared as Epaminondas once did, since he fought on the sea in a manner which fell far short of his great reputation. Epaminondas, however, as some say, was reluctant to give his fellow-citizens a taste of the advantages accruing from naval superiority, in order that they might not surprise him by becoming, instead of "steadfast hoplites," to use Plato's words,² degenerate mariners; and therefore he purposely came back from Asia and the islands without achieving anything.³ Philopoemen, on the other hand, was persuaded that his skill in handling land forces would suffice to give him success in fighting also on the sea, and therefore learned to his cost how large a part of superior excellence consists in practice, and how much additional power it gives to men who have accustomed themselves to all methods of fighting. For not only was he worsted in the sea-fight, owing to his lack of experience, but he actually launched an old but famous ship after forty years of disuse, and manned her, the result being that her seams took in water and her crew came into peril of their lives.

² Laws, iv. p. 706. Cf. the Themistocles, iv. 3.

³ In 364 B.C., two years before his death, Epaminondas successfully inaugurated a naval policy for Thebes, which enabled her to cope with Athens on the sea.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- 4 Πρὸς ταῦτα γινώσκων καταφρονούντας αὐτοῦ τοὺς πολεμίους ὡς παντάπασι πεφευγότος ἐκ τῆς θαλάττης, καὶ πολιορκούντας ὑπερηφάνως τὸ Γύθιον, εὐθύς ἐπέπλευσεν αὐτοῖς οὐ προσδοκῶσιν, ἀλλ' ἐκκελυμένοις διὰ τὴν νίκην. καὶ νυκτὸς ἐκβιβάσας τοὺς στρατιώτας καὶ προσαγαγών, πῦρ ἐνήκε ταῖς σκηναῖς καὶ τὸ στρατόπεδον κατέ-
- 5 καυσε καὶ πολλοὺς διέφθειρεν. ὀλίγαις δ' ὕστερον ἡμέραις καθ' ὁδὸν ἐν δυσχωρίαις τισὶν ἄφνω τοῦ Νάβιδος ἐπιφανέντος αὐτῷ καὶ φοβήσαντος τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς ἀνέλπιστον ἡγουμένους τὴν σωτηρίαν ἐκ τόπων χαλεπῶν καὶ γεγονότων ὑποχειρίων τοῖς πολεμίους, ὀλίγον χρόνον ἐπιστὰς καὶ περιλαβὼν ὄψει τὴν τοῦ χωρίου φύσιν ἐπέδειξε τὴν τακτικὴν τῶν ἄκρων τῆς πολεμικῆς τέχνην οὖσαν οὕτω μικρὰ κινήσας τὴν ἑαυτοῦ φάλαγγα καὶ πρὸς τὰ παρόντα μεθαρμόσας ἀθορύβως καὶ ῥαδίως διεκρούσατο τὴν ἀπορίαν, καὶ προσβαλὼν τοῖς
- 6 πολεμίους τροπὴν ἰσχυρὰν ἐποίησεν. ἐπεὶ δὲ οὐ πρὸς τὴν πόλιν ἐώρα φεύγοντας, ἀλλὰ τῆς χώρας ἄλλον ἄλλη διασπειρόμενον (ὕλῳδης δὲ καὶ περιβουνοσ ἦν πᾶσα καὶ δύσιππος ὑπὸ ρείθρων καὶ φαράγγων), τὴν μὲν δίωξιν ἐπέσχε καὶ κατεστρατοπέδευσεν ἔτι φωτὸς ὄντος· τεκμαιρόμενος δὲ τοὺς πολεμίους ἐκ τῆς φυγῆς καθ' ἓνα καὶ δύο πρὸς τὴν πόλιν ὑπάξειν σκοταίους, ἔλλοχίζει τοῖς περὶ τὸ ἄστυ ρείθροις καὶ λόφοις πολλοὺς ἔχοντας
- 7 ἐγχειρίδια τῶν Ἀχαιῶν. ἐνταῦθα πλείστους ἀποθανεῖν συνέβη τῶν τοῦ Νάβιδος· ἅτε γὰρ οὐκ

PHILOPOEMEN

Understanding that in consequence of this disaster his enemies despised him, thinking that he had altogether given up activity on the sea, and that they were insolently besieging Gythium, he promptly sailed against them when they did not expect it and were careless because of their victory. He landed his soldiers by night and led them to the attack, set fire to the enemy's tents, burned down his camp, and slew many of his men. A few days afterward, as he was marching through a rough country, Nabis came suddenly upon him and threw the Achaeans into a fright; they despaired of saving themselves from a position which was difficult and already commanded by the enemy. But Philopoemen waited a little while, surveyed the nature of the ground, and then demonstrated that skill in drawing up an army is the crowning feature in the art of war. For by changing his order of battle a little and adapting it to the present exigency, with no confusion and no trouble he evaded the difficulty, and charging upon the enemy put them to utter rout. Then, observing that they were not fleeing towards the city, but scattering themselves hither and thither through the region (which was woody, entirely surrounded by hills, and impracticable for cavalry owing to water-courses and ravines), he checked his pursuit and encamped while it was still light. But judging that the enemy after their flight would steal back to the city by ones and twos under cover of the night, he placed large numbers of his Achaeans armed with swords in ambush among the water-courses and hills about the city. Here very many of the followers of Nabis met their death; for since they did not make ἀθρόαν ποιούμενοι τὴν ἀναχώρησιν, ἀλλ' ὡς ἐκάστοις αἱ φυγαὶ συνετύγχανον, ὥσπερ ὄρνιθες ἠλίσκοντο περὶ τὴν πόλιν εἰς τὰς τῶν πολεμίων χεῖρας καταίροντες.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

XV. Ἐπὶ τούτοις ἀγαπώμενος καὶ τιμώμενος ἐκπρεπῶς ὑπὸ τῶν Ἑλλήνων ἐν τοῖς θεάτροις φιλότιμον ὄντα τὸν Τίτον ἡσυχῇ παρελύπει. καὶ γὰρ ὡς Ῥωμαίων ὑπατος ἀνδρὸς Ἀρκάδος ἡξίου θαυμάζεσθαι μᾶλλον ὑπὸ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν, καὶ ταῖς εὐεργεσίαις ὑπερβάλλειν οὐ παρὰ μικρὸν ἡγείτο, δι' ἐνὸς κηρύγματος ἐλευθερώσας τὴν Ἑλλάδα, ὄση Φιλίππῳ καὶ Μακεδόσιν ἐδούλευσεν.

- 2 Ἐκ δὲ τούτου καταλύεται μὲν ὁ Τίτος τῷ Νάβιδι τὸν πόλεμον, ἀποθνήσκει δὲ ὁ Νάβις ὑπὸ Αἰτωλῶν δολοφονηθείς. τεταραγμένης δὲ τῆς Σπάρτης ὁ Φιλοποίμην ἀρπάσας τὸν καιρὸν ἐπιπίπτει μετὰ δυνάμεως, καὶ τῶν μὲν ἀκόντων, τοὺς δὲ συμπίσας προσηγάγετο καὶ μετεκόμισεν εἰς
- 3 τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς τὴν πόλιν. οὐ γενομένου θαυμαστῶς μὲν εὐδοκίμησε παρὰ τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς, προσκτησάμενος αὐτοῖς ἀξίωμα πόλεως τηλικαύτης καὶ δύναμιν (οὐ γὰρ ἦν μικρὸν Ἀχαῖας μέρος γενέσθαι τὴν Σπάρτην), ἀνέλαβε δὲ καὶ Λακεδαιμονίων τοὺς ἀρίστους, φύλακα τῆς ἐλευθερίας
- 4 ἐκείνων ἐλπίσαντας ἔξειν. διὸ καὶ τὴν Νάβιδος οἰκίαν καὶ οὐσίαν ἐξαργυρισθεῖσαν καὶ γενομένην

¹ Cf. the Flaminius, chapter x.

² Cf. the Flaminius, ix. 5.

PHILOPOEMEN

their return in a body, but as the chances of flight disposed them severally, they fell into the hands of their enemies and were caught like birds about the city.

XV. In consequence of this exploit Philopoemen was beloved by the Greeks and conspicuously honoured by them in their theatres, thus giving secret umbrage to Titus Flamininus, who was an ambitious man. For as Roman consul he thought himself more worthy of the Achaeans' admiration than a man of Arcadia, and he considered that his benefactions far exceeded those of Philopoemen, since by a single proclamation he had set free all those parts of Greece which had been subject to Philip and the Macedonians.¹

After this Flamininus made peace with Nabis,² and Nabis was treacherously put to death by the Aetolians.³ Sparta was therefore in a state of confusion, and Philopoemen, seizing his opportunity, fell upon the city with an armed force, and partly by compulsion, partly by persuasion, brought it over to his purposes and made it a member of the Achaean league. This achievement brought him an amazing repute among the Achaeans, since through his efforts they had acquired a city of so great dignity and power (and indeed it was no slight matter that Sparta had become a member of the Achaean league); moreover, Philopoemen carried with him the principal men among the Spartans, who hoped to have in him a guardian of their liberties. Therefore, after they had confiscated the house and property of Nabis and obtained thereby a ³ In 192 B.C. Nabis had called in the Aetolians to help him against the Achaeans and Romans (Livy, xxxv. 35-37).

εἴκοσι καὶ ἑκατὸν ταλάντων ἐψηφίσαντο δωρεὰν αὐτῷ δοῦναι, πρεσβείαν ὑπὲρ τούτων πέμψαντες.
 ἔνθα δὴ καὶ διεφάνη καθαρῶς ἐκεῖνος ὁ ἀνὴρ οὐ δοκῶν μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ ὢν ἄριστος. πρῶτον μὲν γὰρ οὐδεὶς ἐβούλετο τῶν Σπαρτιατῶν ἀνδρὶ τοι- 365 οὔτῳ διαλέγεσθαι περὶ δωροδοκίας, ἀλλὰ δεδοικότες καὶ ἀναδυόμενοι προεβάλλοντο τὸν ξένον αὐτοῦ 5 Τιμόλαον. ἔπειτα δὲ αὐτὸς ὁ Τιμόλαος, ὡς ἦλθεν εἰς Μεγάλην πόλιν, ἐστιαθεὶς παρὰ τῷ Φιλοποί-μени καὶ τὴν σεμνότητα τῆς ὀμιλίας αὐτοῦ καὶ τὴν ἀφέλειαν τῆς διαίτης καὶ τὸ ἦθος ἐγγύθεν οὐδαμῇ προσιτὸν οὐδὲ εὐάλωτον ὑπὸ χρημάτων κατανοήσας, ἀπεσιώπησε περὶ τῆς δωρεᾶς, ἐτέραν δέ τινα πρόφασιν τῆς πρὸς αὐτὸν ὁδοῦ ποιησάμενος ᾤχετο ἀπιῶν. καὶ πάλιν ἐκ δευτέρου 6 πεμφθεὶς ταῦτὸν ἔπαθε. τρίτη δὲ ὁδῷ μόλις ἐντυχῶν ἐδήλωσε τὴν προθυμίαν τῆς πόλεως. ὁ δὲ Φιλοποίμην ἠδέως ἀκούσας ἤκεν αὐτὸς εἰς Λακεδαίμονα, καὶ συνεβούλευσεν αὐτοῖς μὴ τοὺς φίλους καὶ ἀγαθοὺς δεκάζειν, ὧν προῖκα τῆς ἀρετῆς ἔξεστιν ἀπολαύειν, ἀλλὰ τοὺς πονηροὺς καὶ τὴν πόλιν ἐν τῷ συνεδρίῳ καταστασιάζοντας ὠνεῖσθαι καὶ διαφθεῖρειν, ἵνα τῷ λαβεῖν ἐπιστομισθέντες ἦττον ἐνοχλοῖεν αὐτοῖς· βέλτιον γὰρ εἶναι τῶν ἐχθρῶν παραιεῖσθαι τὴν παρρησίαν

¹ See the Aristides, iii. 4.

PHILOPOEMEN

hundred and twenty talents, they voted to make a present of the money to Philopoemen, and to send an embassy to Megalopolis on the matter. Here, indeed, it became perfectly clear that Philopoemen not only seemed to be, but actually was, a most excellent man.¹ For, to begin with, no Spartan was willing to confer with a man of his character about the acceptance of a gift, but they were all so reluctant and afraid to do it that they entrusted the business to a guest-friend of his, Timolaüs. And in the second place, Timolaüs himself, when he came to Megalopolis, having been entertained at the house of Philopoemen, and having learned thoroughly how dignified he was in his converse with others, how simple his ways of living, and how his character was nowhere to be approached and much less easy to be overcome by bribes, held his peace about the gift of money, and after giving some other excuse for his visit to him, went back home. And when he was sent a second time on the same errand, he did as before. On his third visit, however, he at last got so far as to acquaint Philopoemen with the earnest desire of his city. Then Philopoemen, who was pleased by what he heard, went in person to Sparta, and counselled the people there not to try to bribe good men who were their friends, and by whose virtues they could profit without payment of money, but rather to buy up and corrupt the bad men who were ruining the city by their factious conduct in the assembly, to the end that such might have their mouths stopped in consequence of their venality, and so be less annoying to their fellow-citizens; for it was better, he said, to take away freedom of speech from their enemies rather than

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἡ τῶν φίλων. οὕτως μὲν ἦν πρὸς χρήματα λαμπρός.

XVI. Ἐπεὶ δὲ πάλιν τοὺς Λακεδαιμονίους νεωτερίζειν ἀκούσας ὁ στρατηγὸς τῶν Ἀχαιῶν Διοφάνης ἐβούλετο κολάζειν, οἱ δὲ εἰς πόλεμον καθιστάμενοι διετάρασσον τὴν Πελοπόννησον, ἐπειρᾶτο πραῦνειν καὶ καταπαύειν τὸν Διοφάνη τῆς ὀργῆς ὁ Φιλοποίμην, διδάσκων τὸν καιρόν, ὡς Ἀντιόχου τοῦ βασιλέως καὶ Ῥωμαίων ἐν τῇ Ἑλλάδι τηλικούτοις αἰωρουμένων στρατοπέδοις ἐκείσε χρῆ τὸν ἄρχοντα τὴν γνώμην ἔχειν, τὰ δὲ οἰκεία μὴ κινεῖν, ἀλλὰ καὶ παριδεῖν τι καὶ παρα-
2 κούσαι τῶν ἀμαρτανομένων. οὐ προσέχοντος δὲ τοῦ Διοφάνους, ἀλλ' εἰς τὴν Λακωνικὴν ἐμβαλόντος ἅμα τῷ Τίτῳ καὶ βαδιζόντων εὐθύς ἐπὶ τὴν πόλιν, ἀγανακτήσας ὁ Φιλοποίμην, ἔργον οὐ νόμιμον, οὐδ' ἀπηκριβωμένον ἐκ τῶν δικαίων, ἀλλὰ μέγα καὶ μεγάλῳ φρονήματι τολμήσας, εἰς τὴν Λακεδαίμονα παρήλθε καὶ τὸν τε στρατηγὸν τῶν Ἀχαιῶν καὶ τὸν ὑπατον τῶν Ῥωμαίων ἰδιώτης ὧν ἀπέκλεισε, τὰς δ' ἐν τῇ πόλει ταραχὰς ἔπαυσε καὶ κατέστησε τοὺς Λακεδαιμονίους πάλιν εἰς τὸ κοινόν, ὥσπερ ἐξ ἀρχῆς ἦσαν.

3 Χρόνῳ δὲ ὕστερον ἐγκαλέσας τι τοῖς Λακεδαιμονίοις στρατηγῶν ὁ Φιλοποίμην τὰς μὲν φυγὰς κατήγαγεν εἰς τὴν πόλιν, ὀγδοήκοντα δὲ Σπαρτιάτας ἀπέκτεινε, ὡς Πολύβιός φησιν, ὡς δὲ from their friends. Such was his splendid spirit in matters of money.

¹ Philopoemen was for the sixth time general in 188 B.C.

PHILOPOEMEN

XVI. Soon, however, Diophanes, the general of the Achaean league, hearing that the Lacedaemonians were once more agitating for a change, determined to punish them, and the Lacedaemonians, determining upon war, were throwing the Peloponnesus into confusion. Here Philopoemen tried to mollify Diophanes and put a stop to his wrath, showing him what the occasion demanded, and that since King Antiochus and the Romans were hovering about in Greece with armies so great, it behoved the general of the league to pay attention to them, and not to stir up domestic troubles, but even to be somewhat oblivious to the transgressions of his colleagues. Diophanes, however, paid no heed to this advice, but invaded Laconia along with Titus Flamininus, and marched directly upon the city of Sparta. Incensed at this, Philopoemen ventured upon an act which was not lawful, nor even exactly just, but great and prompted by a great spirit. He went on past them into Sparta, and, private man though he was, shut out therefrom both the general of the Achaean league and the Roman consul, put an end to the disorders in the city, and brought the Lacedaemonians back again into the league, as they were at the outset.

At a later time, however, when he had some ground for accusation against the Lacedaemonians, as general of the league¹ Philopoemen brought back its exiles to the city, and put to death eighty Spartans, according to Polybius,² or according to ¹ In a passage not extant. Livy gives the same number (xxxviii. 33).

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- 4 Ἄριστοκράτης, πενήκοντα καὶ τριακοσίους. τὰ δὲ τείχη καθεῖλε, χώραν δὲ πολλὴν ἀποτεμόμενος προσέειπε τοῖς Μεγαλοπολίταις, ὅσοι δὲ ἦσαν ὑπὸ τῶν τυράννων ἀποδεδειγμένοι πολῖται τῆς Σπάρτης, μετώκιζεν ἅπαντας ἀπάγων εἰς Ἀχαΐαν πλὴν τρισχιλίων· τούτους δὲ ἀπειθοῦντας καὶ μὴ βουλομένους ἀπελθεῖν ἐκ τῆς Λακεδαιμόνος ἐπώλησεν, εἶθ' οἶον ἐφυβρίζων ἀπὸ τῶν χρημάτων τούτων ἐν Μεγάλῃ πόλει στοὰν ὠκοδόμησεν.
- 5 ἐμπιπλάμενος δὲ τῶν Λακεδαιμονίων καὶ παρ' ἀξίαν πεπραχόσιν ἐπεμβαίνων, τὸ περὶ τὴν πολιτείαν ἔργον ὠμότατον ἐξειργάσατο καὶ παρανομώτατον. ἀνείλε γὰρ καὶ διέφθειρε τὴν Λυκούργειον ἀγωγὴν, ἀναγκάσας τοὺς παῖδας αὐτῶν καὶ τοὺς ἐφήβους τὴν Ἀχαϊκὴν ἀντὶ τῆς πατρίου παιδείαν μεταβαλεῖν, ὡς οὐδέποτε μικρὸν ἐν τοῖς Λυκούργου νόμοις φρονήσοντας.
- 6 Τότε μὲν οὖν ὑπὸ συμφορῶν μεγάλων ὥσπερ νεῦρα τῆς πόλεως ἐκτεμεῖν τῷ Φιλοποίμενι παρασχόντες, ἐγένοντο χειροήθεις καὶ ταπεινοί, χρόνῳ δ' ὕστερον αἰτησάμενοι παρὰ Ῥωμαίων τὴν μὲν Ἀχαϊκὴν ἔφυγον πολιτείαν, ἀνέλαβον δὲ καὶ κατεστήσαντο τὴν πάτριον, ὡς ἦν ἀνυστὸν ἐκ κακῶν καὶ φθορᾶς τηλικαύτης.

XVII. Ἐπεὶ δὲ Ῥωμαίοις ὁ πρὸς Ἀντίοχον ἐν 366 τῇ Ἑλλάδι συνέστη πόλεμος, ἦν μὲν ἰδιώτης ὁ Φιλοποίμην, ὀρών δὲ τὸν Ἀντίοχον αὐτὸν ἐν Χαλκίδι καθήμενον περὶ γάμους καὶ παρθένων

¹ In 184 B.C. (Livy, xxxix. 34).

PHILOPOEMEN

Aristocrates, three hundred and fifty. He also tore down the walls of the city, and cutting off a large part of its territory, annexed it to Megalopolis; moreover, in the case of those who had been made citizens of Sparta by the tyrants, he removed them all into Achaia, with the exception of three thousand who would not obey him and were unwilling to go away from Sparta. These he sold into slavery, and then, as if in mockery of their fate, erected a portico in Megalopolis with the money which they brought. And now, glutting his anger at the Lacedaemonians and unworthily trampling upon them in their misery, he treated their constitution in the most cruel and most lawless fashion. For he took away and abolished the system of training which Lycurgus had instituted, and compelled their boys and their young men to adopt the Achaean in place of their hereditary discipline, being convinced that while they were under the laws of Lycurgus they would never be humble.

For the time being, then, owing to their great calamities, the Spartans suffered Philopoemen to cut away, as it were, the sinews of their city, and became tractable and submissive; but a while afterwards,¹ having obtained permission from the Romans, they abandoned the Achaean polity, and resumed and re-established that which had come down from their fathers, so far as was possible after their many misfortunes and great degeneration.

XVII. When the Romans went to war with Antiochus in Greece,² Philopoemen was without command, and seeing that Antiochus himself was sitting idly down in Chalcis and spending his time

¹ In 191 B.C. Cf. the Flamininus, xv.

- ἔρωτας οὐ καθ' ὥραν σχολάζοντα, τοὺς δὲ Σύρους ἐν ἀταξίᾳ πολλῇ καὶ χωρὶς ἡγεμόνων ἐν ταῖς πόλεσι πλαζομένους καὶ τρυφῶντας, ἤχθετο μὴ στρατηγῶν τότε τῶν Ἀχαιῶν, καὶ Ῥωμαίοις ἔλεγε φθονεῖν τῆς νικῆς. “Ἐγὼ γὰρ ἄν,” ἔφη, “στρατηγῶν ἐν τοῖς καπηλείοις κατέκοψα τούτους
 2 πάντας.” ἐπεὶ δὲ νικήσαντες οἱ Ῥωμαῖοι τὸν Ἀντίοχον ἐνεφύοντο τοῖς Ἑλληνικοῖς μᾶλλον ἤδη, καὶ περιεβάλλοντο τῇ δυνάμει τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς ὑποκατακλινομένων αὐτοῖς τῶν δημαγωγῶν, ἡ δ' ἰσχὺς ἐπὶ πάντα πολλῇ μετὰ τοῦ δαίμονος ἐχώρει, καὶ τὸ τέλος ἐγγὺς ἦν εἰς ὃ τὴν τύχην ἔδει περιφερομένην ἐξικέσθαι, καθάπερ ἀγαθὸς κυβερνήτης πρὸς κύμα διερειδόμενος ὁ Φιλοποίμην τὰ μὲν ἐνδιδόναι καὶ παρείκειν ἠναγκάζετο τοῖς καιροῖς, περὶ δὲ τῶν πλείστων διαφερόμενος τοὺς τῷ λέγειν καὶ πράττειν ἰσχύοντας ἀντισπᾶν ἐπειρᾶτο πρὸς τὴν ἐλευθερίαν.
- 3 Ἀρισταίνου δὲ τοῦ Μεγαλοπολίτου δυναμένου μὲν ἐν τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς μέγιστον, τοὺς δὲ Ῥωμαίους αἰὲν θεραπεύοντος καὶ τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς μὴ οἰομένου δεῖν ἐναντιοῦσθαι μηδὲ ἀχαριστεῖν ἐκείνοις, ἐν τῷ συνεδρίῳ λέγεται τὸν Φιλοποίμην σιωπᾶν ἀκούοντα καὶ βαρέως φέρειν, τέλος δὲ ὑπ' ὀργῆς δυσανασχετοῦντα πρὸς τὸν Ἀρίσταινον εἰπεῖν
 4 “ὦ ἄνθρωπε, τί σπεύδεις τὴν πεπρωμένην τῆς Ἑλλάδος ἐπιδεῖν;” Μανίου δὲ τοῦ Ῥωμαίων ὑπάτου νενικηκότος μὲν Ἀντίοχον, αἰτουμένου δὲ

PHILOPOEMEN

in a courtship and marriage which were not suited to his years,¹ while his Syrian troops, in great disorder and without leaders, were wandering about among the cities and living luxuriously, he was distressed because he was not general of the Achaeans at that time, and kept saying that he begrudged the Romans their victory. "For if I had been general," he said, "I would have cut off all these fellows in their taverns." But soon the Romans, after conquering Antiochus, applied themselves more closely to the affairs of Greece. They encompassed the Achaean league with their power, since the popular leaders gradually inclined to their support; their strength, under the guidance of the heavenly powers, grew great in all directions; and the consummation was near to which the fortunes of Greece must come in their allotted revolution. Here Philopoemen, like a good helmsman contending against a high sea, was in some points compelled to give in and yield to the times; but in most he continued his opposition, and tried to draw to the support of freedom the men who were powerful in speech or action.

Aristaenus the Megalopolitan² was a man of the greatest influence among the Achaeans, but he always paid court to the Romans and thought that the Achaeans ought not to oppose or displease them in any way. As this man was once speaking in the assembly, we are told that Philopoemen listened to him a while in silent indignation, but at last, overcome by anger, said to him: "My man, why art thou eager to behold the fated end of Greece?" Again, Manius, the Roman consul, after his victory

¹ Cf. the Flamininus, xvi. i. ² Cf. chapter xiii. 4.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

παρὰ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν ὅπως ἐάσωσι τοὺς Λακεδαιμονίων φυγάδας κατελθεῖν, καὶ Τίτου ταῦτῳ τῷ Μανίῳ περὶ τῶν φυγάδων ἀξιούντος, διεκώλυσεν ὁ Φιλοποίμην οὐ τοῖς φυγάσι πολεμῶν, ἀλλὰ βουλόμενος δι' αὐτοῦ καὶ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν, ἀλλὰ μὴ Τίτου μηδὲ Ῥωμαίων χάριτι τοῦτοπραχθῆναι καὶ στρατηγῶν εἰς τοῦπιὸν αὐτὸς κατήγαγε τοὺς φυγάδας. οὕτως εἶχέ τι πρὸς τὰς ἐξουσίας ὑπὸ φρονήματος δύσερι καὶ φιλόνεικον.

XVIII. Ἦδη δὲ γεγονὼς ἔτος ἐβδομηκοστόν, ὀγδοοὺν δὲ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν στρατηγῶν, ἤλπιζεν οὐ μόνον ἐκείνην τὴν ἀρχὴν ἀπολέμῳσ διαίξειν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοῦ βίου τὸ λοιπὸν αὐτῷ μεθ' ἡσυχίας καταβιώναι τὰ πράγματα παρέξειν. ὥς γὰρ αἱ νόσοι ταῖς τῶν σωμάτων ῥώμαις συναπομαραίνεσθαι δοκοῦσιν, οὕτως ἐν ταῖς Ἑλληνικαῖς πόλεσιν ἐπιλειπούσης τῆς δυνάμεως ἔληγε τὸ φιλόνεικον. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ Νέμεσις τις ὥσπερ ἀθλητὴν εὐδρομούντα πρὸς τέρμασι τοῦ βίου κατέβαλε. λέγεται γὰρ ἐν τινι συλλόγῳ τῶν παρόντων ἐπαινούντων ἄνδρα δεινὸν εἶναι δοκοῦντα περὶ στρατηγίαν εἰπεῖν τὸν Φιλοποίμενα, “ Καὶ πῶς ἄξιον ἐκείνου λόγον ἔχειν τοῦ ἀνδρός, ὅστις ἤλω ζῶν ὑπὸ τῶν πολεμίων;” μεθ' ἡμέρας δὲ ὀλίγας Δεινοκράτης ὁ Μεσσήνιος, ἄνθρωπος ἰδίᾳ τε τῷ Φιλοποίμενι προσκεκρουκῶς καὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις ἐπαχθῆς διὰ πονηρίαν καὶ ἀκολασίαν, τὴν τε Μεσσήνην ἀπέover Antiochus, asked the Achaeans to permit the exiles from Sparta to go back home, and Titus Flamininus joined Manius in making this request. But Philopoemen successfully opposed the request, not out of hostility to the exiles, but from a desire that they should owe this favour to himself and the Achaeans, and not to Flamininus and the Romans; indeed, as general for the following year he restored the exiles to their city.¹ To such a degree did his lofty spirit lead him to strive and contend against men in power.

¹ Cf. chapter xiii. 3.

PHILOPOEMEN

XVIII. But being now seventy years of age, and for the eighth time general of the Achaeans,² he hoped not only to pass that year of office without war, but also that affairs would permit him to spend the rest of his life in peace and quiet. For as our diseases seem to lose their virulence as our bodily strength declines, so among the Greek cities the spirit of contention lapsed as their power waned. Nevertheless, some divine displeasure threw him down, like an all but victorious runner, at the very goal of his life. For it is recorded that at some conference, when others present were lavishing praise upon one who was reputed to be a redoubtable general, Philopoemen contemptuously said: "Yet why should any account be made of this man, who has been taken alive by his enemies?" And a few days afterwards Deinocrates the Messenian, a man who had a private quarrel with Philopoemen³ and was obnoxious to everybody else because of his baseness and unbridled life, induced Messene to ² In 182 B.C. Plutarch passes over the years 187-183, during which the Achaean league and Philopoemen came increasingly into collision with the Roman power.

³ Cf. the Flamininus, xvii. 3.

στησε τῶν Ἀχαιῶν, καὶ κώμην τὴν καλουμένην Κολωνίδα προσηγγέθη μέλλων καταλαμβάνειν.
 ὁ δὲ Φιλοποίμην ἔτυχε μὲν ἐν Ἀργεὶ πυρέσσων, πυθόμενος δὲ ταῦτα συνέτεινεν εἰς Μεγάλην πόλιν
 ἡμέρα μιᾷ σταδίους πλείονας ἢ τετρακοσίους.
 4 κακείθεν εὐθύς ἐβοήθει τοὺς ἰππεῖς ἀναλαβών, οἵπερ ἦσαν ἐνδοξότατοι μὲν τῶν πολιτῶν, νέοι δὲ κομιδῇ, δι' εὐνοίαν τοῦ Φιλοποίμενος καὶ ζήλου ἐθελονταὶ συστρατεύοντες. ἰππασίμενοι δὲ πρὸς τὴν Μεσσήνην καὶ περὶ τὸν Εὐάνδρου λόφον 5 ἀπαντῶντι τῷ Δεινοκράτει συμπεσόντες ἐκείνον 367 μὲν ἐτρέψαντο, τῶν δὲ πεντακοσίων, οἱ τὴν χώραν τῶν Μεσσηνίων παρεφύλαττον, ἐξαίφνης ἐπιφερο-μένων καὶ τῶν πρότερον ἠττημένων, ὡς τούτους κατείδον, αὐθις ἀνὰ τοὺς λόφους ἀθροιζομένων, δείσας ὁ Φιλοποίμην κυκλωθῆναι καὶ τῶν ἰππέων φειδόμενος ἀνεχώρει διὰ τόπων χαλεπῶν, αὐτὸς οὐραγῶν καὶ πολλάκις ἀντεξελαύνων τοῖς πολεμίοις καὶ ὄλως ἐπισπώμενος ἐφ' ἑαυτόν, οὐ τολμώντων ἀντεμβαλεῖν ἐκείνων, ἀλλὰ κραυγαῖς 6 καὶ περιδρομαῖς χρωμένων ἄποθεν. ἀφιστάμενος οὖν πολλάκις διὰ τοὺς νεανίσκους καὶ καθ' ἓνα παραπέμπων ἔλαθεν ἐν πολλοῖς ἀπομονωθεῖς πολεμίοις. καὶ συνάψαι μὲν εἰς χεῖρας οὐδεὶς ἐτόλμησεν αὐτῷ, πόρρωθεν δὲ βαλλόμενος καὶ βιαζόμενος πρὸς χωρία πετρώδη καὶ παράκρημα χαλεπῶς μετεχειρίζετο καὶ κατέξαινε τὸν ἵππον.
 7 αὐτῷ δὲ τὸ μὲν γήρας ὑπὸ ἀσκήσεως πολλῆς ἐλαφρὸν ἦν καὶ πρὸς οὐδὲν ἐμπόδιον εἰς τὸ

PHILOPOEMEN

revolt from the Achaean league, and was reported about to seize the village called Colonis. Philopomen at the time lay sick of a fever at Argos, but on learning these facts, he hastened to Megalopolis in a single day, a journey of more than four hundred furlongs. From there he at once set out for the rescue, taking with him the horsemen. These were the city's most prominent men, but altogether young, and serving as volunteers under Philopomen out of good will and admiration for him. They rode off towards Messene and encountered Deinocrates, who came to meet them at Evander's hill. Him they put to flight; but the five hundred men who were guarding the open country of Messene suddenly attacked them, and when those who had before been worsted saw this, they collected together along the hills. Then Philopomen, fearing that he would be enveloped, and trying to spare his horsemen, withdrew over difficult ground, bringing up the rear himself and frequently riding out against the enemy, and trying to draw their attacks entirely upon himself. They did not venture, however, to return his attacks, but merely shouted and threatened his flanks. Withdrawing from the line frequently, then, to spare his young men, and sending them one by one into safety, before he was aware of it he was left alone among numerous enemies. Even then no one ventured to come to close quarters with him, but he was pelted with missiles from a distance and forced upon rocky and precipitous places, so that he had difficulty in managing his horse and kept tearing him with the spur. His age, owing to his generous exercise, was not burdensome, and in no way impeded his escape; but at that time his body

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

σωθῆναι, τότε δὲ καὶ διὰ τὴν ἀρρωστίαν τοῦ σώματος ἔνδεους γεγονότος καὶ διὰ τὴν ὄδοιπορίαν κατακόπου, βαρὺν ὄντα καὶ δυσκίνητον ἤδη σφαλεῖς ὁ ἵππος εἰς τὴν γῆν κατέβαλε. σκληροῦ δὲ τοῦ πτώματος γενομένου καὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς παθούσης ἔκειτο πολὺν χρόνον ἄναυδος, ὥστε καὶ τοὺς πολεμίους τεθνάναι δόξαντας αὐτὸν ἐπιχειρεῖν στρέφειν τὸ σῶμα καὶ σκυλεύειν. ἐπεὶ δὲ τὴν κεφαλὴν ἐπάρας διέβλεψεν, ἀθρόοι περιπεσόντες ἀπέστρεφον αὐτοῦ τὰς χεῖρας ὀπίσω καὶ δῆσαντες ἤγον, ὕβρει χρώμενοι πολλῇ καὶ λοιδορία κατ' ἀνδρὸς οὐδὲ ὄναρ ἂν ποτε παθεῖν ὑπὸ Δεινοκράτους ταῦτα προσδοκήσαντος.

XIX. Οἱ δ' ἐν τῇ πόλει τῇ μὲν ἀγγελία θαυμαστῶς ἐπαρθέντες ἠθροίζοντο περὶ τὰς πύλας· ὡς δὲ εἶδον ἐλκόμενον τὸν Φιλοποίμενα παρ' ἀξίαν τῆς τε δόξης καὶ τῶν ἔμπροσθεν ἔργων καὶ τροπαίων, ἠλέησαν οἱ πλείστοι καὶ συνήλγησαν, ὥστε καὶ δακρῦσαι καὶ τὴν ἀνθρωπίνην ἐκφλαυρίσαι δύναμιν ὡς ἄπιστον καὶ τὸ μηδὲν οὔσαν.

2 οὕτω δὲ κατὰ μικρὸν εἰς πολλοὺς φιλόανθρωπος ἐχώρει λόγος ὡς μνημονευτέον εἶη τῶν πρόσθεν εὐεργεσιῶν, καὶ τῆς ἐλευθερίας ἣν ἀπέδωκεν αὐτοῖς Νάβιν ἐξελεύσας τὸν τύραννον. ὀλίγοι δὲ ἦσαν οἱ τῷ Δεινοκράτει χαριζόμενοι στρεβλοῦν τὸν ἄνδρα καὶ κτείνειν ἐκέλευον ὡς βαρὺν πολέμον καὶ δυσμείλικτον, αὐτῷ τε Δεινοκράτει φοβερώτερον εἰ διαφύγοι καθυβρισμένος ὑπ'

3 αὐτοῦ καὶ γεγονὰς αἰχμάλωτος. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ κομίσαντες αὐτὸν εἰς τὸν καλούμενον Θησαυρόν, οἴκημα κατὰγειοι οὔτε πνεῦμα λαμβάνον οὔτε φῶς ἔξωθεν οὔτε θύρας ἔχον, ἀλλὰ μεγάλῳ λίθῳ

PHILOPOEMEN

was enfeebled by sickness and worn out with a long journey, so that he was heavy and stiff, and at length his horse stumbled and threw him to the ground. His fall was a heavy one and his head was hurt, and he lay for a long time speechless, so that his enemies thought him dead and tried to turn his body over and strip it of its armour. But when he raised his head and opened his eyes, they threw themselves in a throng upon him, tied his hands behind his back, and led him away, treating with great insolence and contumely a man who could never have even dreamed that he would suffer such a fate at the hands of Deinocrates.

XIX. The people of Messene, wonderfully elated at the news, gathered in throngs at the gates. But when they saw Philopoemen dragged along in a manner unworthy of his fame and of his former exploits and trophies, most of them were struck with pity and felt sympathy for him, so that they actually shed tears and spoke with bitterness of the inconstancy and vanity of human greatness. And so, little by little, many were led to say humanely that they ought to remember his former benefactions, and especially how he had restored to them their freedom by expelling the tyrant Nabis. But there were a few who, to gratify Deinocrates, urged that the captive should be tortured and put to death as a stern and implacable enemy, and one more than ever to be feared by Deinocrates himself in case he made his escape after having been taken prisoner and loaded with insults by him. However, they carried Philopoemen into the Thesaurus, as it was called, a subterranean chamber which admitted neither air nor light from outside and had no door, περιαγομένῳ κατακλειόμενον, ἐνταῦθα κατέθεντο, καὶ τὸν λίθον ἐπιρράξαντες ἄνδρας ἐνόπλους κύκλῳ περιέστησαν.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- 4 Οἱ δ' ἵππεῖς τῶν Ἀχαιῶν ἐκ τῆς φυγῆς ἀναλαβόντες αὐτούς, ὡς οὐδαμοῦ φανερός ἦν ὁ Φιλοποίμην, ἀλλ' ἐδόκει τεθνάναι, πολλὸν μὲν χρόνον ἐπέστησαν ἀνακαλούμενοι τὸν ἄνδρα καὶ διδόντες ἀλλήλοις λόγον ὡς αἰσχρὰν σωτηρίαν καὶ ἄδικον σῶζονται προέμενοι τοῖς πολεμίοις τὸν στρατηγὸν
- 5 ἀφειδήσαντα τοῦ ζῆν δι' αὐτούς, ἔπειτα προϊόντες ἅμα καὶ πολυπραγμονοῦντες ἐπύθοντο τὴν σύλληψιν αὐτοῦ καὶ διήγγελλον εἰς τὰς πόλεις τῶν Ἀχαιῶν. οἱ δὲ συμφορὰν ποιούμενοι μεγάλην ἀπαιτεῖν μὲν ἔγνωσαν τὸν ἄνδρα παρὰ τῶν Μεσσηνίων πρεσβείαν πέμψαντες, αὐτοὶ δὲ παρεσκευάζοντο στρατεύειν.

- XX. Οὗτοι μὲν οὖν ταῦτα ἔπραττον. Ὁ δὲ Δεινοκράτης μάλιστα τὸν χρόνον ὡς σωτήριον τῷ Φιλοποίμηνι δεδοικῶς καὶ φθάσαι τὰ παρὰ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν βουλόμενος, ἐπεὶ νύξ ἐπῆλθε καὶ τὸ πλῆθος ἀπεχώρησε τῶν Μεσσηνίων, ἀνοίξας τὸ δεσμοτήριον εἰσέπεμψε δημόσιον οἰκέτην φάρμακον κομίζοντα, προσενεγκεῖν καὶ παραστήναι 368
- 2 μέχρι ἂν ἐκπῆ κελεύσας. ἔτυχε μὲν οὖν ἐν τῷ χλαμυδίῳ κατακείμενος, οὐ καθεύδων, ἀλλὰ λύπη καὶ θορύβῳ κατεχόμενος, ἰδὼν δὲ φῶς καὶ παρεστῶτα πλησίον τὸν ἄνθρωπον ἔχοντα τὴν κύλικα τοῦ φαρμάκου, συναγαγὼν μόλις ἑαυτὸν ὑπ' ἀσθενείας ἀνεκάθιζε. καὶ δεξάμενος ἠρώτησεν εἰ

PHILOPOEMEN

but was closed by dragging a huge stone in front of it. Here they placed him, and after planting the stone against it, set a guard of armed men round about.

Meanwhile the horsemen of the Achaeans recovered themselves after their flight, and when Philopoemen was nowhere to be seen, but was thought to be dead, they stood for a long time calling aloud upon their leader and reproaching one another for having won an unlawful and shameful safety by abandoning to the enemy their general, who had been prodigal of his life for their sakes. Then they went forward in a body, and by diligent effort learned of his capture, and sent word of it to the cities of the Achaeans. The Achaeans felt that they had suffered a great calamity, and determined to send an embassy and demand Philopoemen from the Messenians, while they themselves prepared an expedition against the city.

XX. The Achaeans, then, were thus engaged. But Deinocrates, who feared that delay was the one thing most likely to save Philopoemen, and wished to forestall the efforts of the Achaeans, when night came on and the multitude of Messene had dispersed, opened the prison and sent in a public official with poison, ordering him to give it to Philopoemen and to stand by his side until he had drunk it. Now, Philopoemen was lying down wrapped in his soldier's cloak, not sleeping, but overwhelmed with trouble and grief. When, however, he saw a light and a man standing by him holding the cup of poison, he pulled himself together as much as his weakness permitted and sat up. Then taking the cup he asked the man if he had heard anything

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

3 τι περὶ τῶν ἰππέων καὶ μάλιστα Λυκόρτα πεπυσμένος ἐστίν. εἰπόντος δὲ τάνθρώπου διαπεφευγέναι τοὺς πολλοὺς, ἐπένευσε τῇ κεφαλῇ, καὶ διαβλέψας πρῶως πρὸς τὸν ἄνθρωπον, “Εὐ λέγεις,” εἶπεν, “εἰ μὴ πάντα κακῶς πεπράχαμεν.”
 ἄλλο δὲ μηδὲν εἰπὼν μηδὲ φθεγξάμενος ἐξέπτε καὶ πάλιν αὐτὸν ἀπέκλινεν, οὐ πολλὰ πράγματα τῷ φαρμάκῳ παρασχών, ἀλλ’ ἀποσβεσθεὶς ταχὺ διὰ τὴν ἀσθένειαν.

XXI. Ὡς οὖν ὁ περὶ τῆς τελευτῆς λόγος ἦκεν εἰς τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς, τὰς μὲν πόλεις αὐτῶν κοινῇ κατήφεια καὶ πένθος εἶχεν, οἱ δ’ ἐν ἡλικίᾳ μετὰ τῶν προβούλων συνελθόντες εἰς Μεγάλην πόλιν οὐδ’ ἠντιοῦν ἀναβολὴν ἐποίησαντο τῆς τιμωρίας, ἀλλ’ ἐλόμενοι στρατηγὸν Λυκόρταν εἰς τὴν Μεσση-νίαν ἐνέβαλον καὶ κακῶς ἐποίουν τὴν χώραν, ἄχρι
 2 οὐ συμφρονήσαντες ἐδέξαντο τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς. καὶ Δεινοκράτης μὲν αὐτὸς αὐτὸν φθάσας διεχρήσατο, τῶν δὲ ἄλλων ὅσοις μὲν ἀνελεῖν ἔδοξε Φιλο-ποίμενα δι’ αὐτῶν¹ ἀπέθνησκον, ὅσοις δὲ καὶ βασανίσαι, τούτους ἐπ’ αἰκίαις ἀπολουμένους συνελάμβανεν ὁ Λυκόρτας. τὸ δὲ σῶμα καύ-σαντες αὐτοῦ καὶ τὰ λείψανα συνθέντες εἰς ὑδρίαν ἀνεξεύγνυσαν, οὐκ ἀτάκτως οὐδὲ ὡς ἔτυχεν, ἀλλ’ ἐπινίκιον πομπὴν τινα ἅμα ταῖς ταφαῖς 3 μίξαντες. ἦν μὲν γὰρ ἐστεφανωμένους ἰδεῖν, ἦν δὲ τοὺς αὐτοὺς καὶ δακρύνοντας, ἦν δὲ τοὺς ἐχθροὺς δεσμίους ἀγομένους. αὐτὴν δὲ τὴν ὑδρίαν ὑπὸ πλήθους ταινιῶν τε καὶ στεφάνων μόλις ὀρωμένην ἐκόμιζεν ὁ τοῦ στρατηγοῦ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν παῖς

¹ δι’ αὐτῶν Bekker and Blass have δι’ αὐτῶν (died by their own hands), with Stephanus.

PHILOPOEMEN

about the horsemen, and particularly about Lycortas, and on being told by him that the greater part of them had escaped, he nodded his head, and with a kindly look at the man said to him: "That is good news, if we have not wholly lost." Without another word and even without a sigh he drained the cup and laid himself down again. He did not give the poison much to do, but breathed his last speedily, so weak was he.

XXI. Accordingly, when the report of his death reached the Achaeans, their cities were filled with general dejection and grief, and the men of military age, together with the members of the council, assembled at Megalopolis. With no delay whatsoever they proceeded to take revenge. They chose Lycortas general, invaded Messenia, and ravaged the country, until the Messenians with one consent received them into their city. Deinocrates anticipated their vengeance by making away with himself, but all the others who had voted to put Philopoemen to death they slew, and as for those who would have had him tortured also, these Lycortas seized and held for a more excruciating death. Then they burned Philopoemen's body, collected his ashes in an urn, and set out for home, not in loose or promiscuous order, but with a blending of triumphal procession and funeral rites. For their heads were wreathed with garlands while their eyes were full of tears, and they led their foes along with them in chains. The urn itself, almost hidden from sight by a multitude of fillets and wreaths, was borne by Polybius, the son of the Achaean general, and about

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- Πολύβιος καὶ περὶ αὐτὸν οἱ πρῶτοι τῶν Ἀχαιῶν. οἱ δὲ στρατιῶται ὀπλισμένοι μὲν αὐτοί, τοῖς δ' ἵπποις κεκοσμημένοις ἐπηκολούθουν, οὔτε, οἶον ἐπὶ πένθει τοσοῦτῳ, κατηφεῖς οὔτε τῇ νίκη
- 4 γαυριῶντες. ἐκ δὲ τῶν διὰ μέσου πόλεων καὶ κωμῶν ἀπαντῶντες, ὥσπερ αὐτὸν ἀπὸ στρατείας ἐπανιόντα δεξιούμενοι, τῆς ὑδρίας ἐφήπτοντο, καὶ συμπροήγον εἰς Μεγάλην πόλιν. ὡς οὖν συνανεμίχθησαν αὐτοῖς οἱ πρεσβύτεροι μετὰ γυναικῶν καὶ παιδῶν, ὀλοφυρμὸς ἤδη διὰ παντὸς ἐχώρει τοῦ στρατεύματος εἰς τὴν πόλιν ἐπιποθοῦσαν τὸν ἄνδρα καὶ βαρέως φέρουσαν, οἰομένην συναποβεβληκῆναι τὸ πρωτεύειν ἐν τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς.
- 5 Ἐτάφη μὲν οὖν, ὡς εἰκός, ἐνδόξως, καὶ περὶ τὸ μνημεῖον οἱ τῶν Μεσσηνίων αἰχμάλωτοι κατελεύσθησαν. οὐσῶν δὲ πολλῶν μὲν εἰκόνων αὐτοῦ, μεγάλων δὲ τιμῶν, ἃς αἱ πόλεις ἐψηφίσαντο, Ῥωμαῖος ἀνὴρ ἐν τοῖς περὶ Κόρινθον ἀτυχήμασι τῆς Ἑλλάδος ἐπεχείρησεν ἀνελεῖν ἀπάσας καὶ διώκειν αὐτόν, ἐνδεικνύμενος, ὥσπερ ἔτι ζῶντα,
- 6 Ῥωμαίοις πολέμιον καὶ κακόνουν γενέσθαι. λόγων δὲ λεχθέντων καὶ Πολυβίου πρὸς τὸν συκοφάντην ἀντειπόντος οὔθ' ὁ Μόμμιος οὔτε οἱ πρέσβεις ὑπέμειναν ἀνδρὸς ἐνδόξου τιμὰς ἀφανίσαι, καίπερ οὐκ ὀλίγα τοῖς περὶ Τίτον καὶ Μάνιον ἐναντιωθέντος, ἀλλὰ τῆς χρείας τὴν ἀρετὴν ἐκείνοι καὶ τὸ

¹ In 146 B.C., at the close of Rome's war with the Achaean league.

PHILOPOEMEN

him were the chief men of the Achaeans. The soldiers followed after, in full armour themselves, and with their horses decorated; they were neither dejected in view of their great affliction nor exultant over their victory. Moreover, the people from the cities and villages on the way came to meet them, as if receiving Philopoemen on his return from an expedition; they laid their hands upon his urn, and accompanied him to Megalopolis. And so when they had been joined by the old men and by the women and children, a lamentation at once spread through the entire army and into the city, which longed for the presence of Philopoemen and was grievously cast down at his death, feeling that with him it had lost its supremacy among the Achaeans.

He was buried, then, as was fitting, with conspicuous honours, and at his tomb the captive Messenians were stoned to death. Many statues of him were erected and many honours decreed him by the cities. All these a Roman, in the disastrous days of Greece following the fall of Corinth,¹ attempted to have removed, and he attacked the memory of Philopoemen himself, accusing him, as if still alive, of having been a malevolent enemy of the Romans. After the proposal had been discussed and Polybius had spoken in opposition to Philopoemen's detractor, neither Mummius nor the members of the commission² would consent that the honours paid to an illustrious man should be obliterated, although he had made no little opposition to Flamininus and Manius. These judges distinguished, as ² A commission of ten, appointed by the Roman senate to settle the affairs of Greece. It was before this body that Philopoemen's memory was attacked and defended.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

καλόν, ὡς ἔοικε, τοῦ λυσιτελοῦς διώριζον, ὀρθῶς καὶ προσηκόντως τοῖς μὲν ὠφελούσι μισθὸν καὶ χάριν παρὰ τῶν εὖ παθόντων, τοῖς δ' ἀγαθοῖς τιμὴν ὀφείλεσθαι παρὰ τῶν ἀγαθῶν ἀεὶ νομίζοντες.

Ταῦτα περὶ Φιλοποίμενος.

PHILOPOEMEN

it would appear, between virtue and necessity, between honour and advantage. They rightly and fitly considered that benefactors ought always to receive reward and gratitude from their beneficiaries, and good men honour from the good.

So much concerning Philopoemen.

TITUS FLAMININUS

VOL. X.

V

ΤΙΤΟΣ

1. Ὄν δὲ παραβάλλομεν αὐτῷ, Τίτος Κοϊντίος 369 Φλαμινῖνος, ιδέαν μὲν ὁποῖος ἦν πάρεστι θεάσασθαι τοῖς βουλομένοις ἀπὸ τῆς ἐν Ῥώμῃ χαλκῆς εἰκόνας, ἣ κεῖται παρὰ τὸν μέγαν Ἀπόλλωνα τὸν ἐκ Καρχηδόνας ἀντικρὺ τοῦ ἵπποδρόμου, γράμμασιν Ἑλληνικοῖς ἐπιγεγραμμένη, τὸ δὲ ἦθος ὀξύς λέγεται γενέσθαι καὶ πρὸς ὄργην καὶ πρὸς χάριν.
2 οὐ μὴν ὁμοίως, ἀλλ' ἐλαφρὸς μὲν ἐν τῷ κολάζειν καὶ οὐκ ἐπίμονος, πρὸς δὲ τὰς χάριτας τελεσιουργὸς καὶ τοῖς εὐεργετηθεῖσι διὰ παντὸς ὥσπερ εὐεργέταις εὖνους, καὶ πρόθυμος, ὡς κάλλιστα τῶν κτημάτων, τοὺς εὖ πεπονθότας ὑπ' αὐτοῦ περιέπειν ἀεὶ καὶ σώζειν. φιλοτιμότατος δὲ καὶ φιλοδοξότατος ὧν ἐβούλετο τῶν ἀρίστων καὶ μεγίστων πράξεων αὐτουργὸς εἶναι, καὶ τοῖς δεο-μένοις εὖ παθεῖν μᾶλλον ἢ τοῖς εὖ ποιῆσαι δυναμένοις ἔχαιρε, τοὺς μὲν ὕλην τῆς ἀρετῆς, τοὺς δὲ ὥσπερ ἀντιπάλους πρὸς δόξαν ἠγούμενος.
- 3 Παιδευθεὶς δὲ παιδείαν τὴν διὰ τῶν ἐθῶν τῶν στρατιωτικῶν, πολλοὺς τότε καὶ μεγάλους τῆς

TITUS FLAMININUS

I. IN parallel with Philopoemen we shall put Titus Quintius Flamininus. What his outward appearance was may be seen by those who wish it from the bronze statue of him at Rome. It stands by the side of the great Apollo from Carthage, opposite the Circus,¹ and has upon it an inscription in Greek characters. As to his disposition, he is said to have been quick to show anger as well as to confer favours, though not in like extent. For he was gentle in his punishments and not persistent, whereas in his favours he was unremitting, always well disposed towards his beneficiaries as though they were his benefactors, and eager to protect at all times and preserve those who had ever met with kindness at his hands, as though they were his choicest possessions. But since he was covetous of honour and fame, he desired that his noblest and greatest achievements should be the result of his own efforts, and he took more pleasure in those who wanted to receive kindness than in those who were able to bestow it, considering that the former were objects upon which he could exercise his virtue, while the latter were his rivals, so to speak, in the struggle for fame.

From his earliest years he was trained in the arts of war, since at that time Rome was carrying on

¹ The Circus Flamininus is meant, which was erected in 221 B. C. by the censor Flamininus Nepos.

Ῥώμης ἀγωνιζομένης ἀγῶνας καὶ τῶν νέων εὐθύς ἐξ ἀρχῆς ἐν τῷ στρατεύεσθαι στρατηγεῖν διδασκομένων, πρῶτον μὲν ἐν τῷ πρὸς Ἀντίβαν πολέμῳ χιλίαρχος ὑπατεύοντι Μαρκέλλῳ συνεστρατεύ-
 4 σατο. καὶ Μάρκελλος μὲν ἐνέδρα περιπεσὼν ἐτελεύτησε, Τίτος δὲ τῆς περὶ Τάραντα χώρας καὶ Τύραντος αὐτοῦ τὸ δεύτερον ἠλωκότος ἔπαρχος ἀποδειχθεὶς εὐδοκίμησεν οὐχ ἡττον ἐπὶ τοῖς δικαίοις ἢ κατὰ τὴν στρατείαν. διὸ καὶ πεμπομένων ἀποίκων εἰς δύο πόλεις, Νάρνειάν τε καὶ Κῶνσαν, ἄρχων ἡρέθη καὶ οἰκιστής.

II. Τοῦτο δὲ αὐτὸν ἐπῆρε μάλιστα τὰς διὰ μέσου καὶ συνήθεις τοῖς νέοις ἀρχὰς ὑπερβάντα, δημαρχίαν καὶ στρατηγίαν καὶ ἀγορανομίαν, εὐθύς αὐτὸν ὑπατείας ἀξιούν· καὶ κατῆι τοὺς ἀπὸ τῶν κληρουχιῶν ἔχων προθύμους. τῶν δὲ περὶ Φούλβιον καὶ Μάνιον δημάρχων ἐνισταμένων καὶ δεινὸν εἶναι λεγόντων ἄνδρα νέον εἰς τὴν μεγίστην ἀρχὴν εἰσβιάζεσθαι παρὰ τοὺς νόμους, οἶον ἀτέλεστον ἔτι τῶν πρώτων ἱερῶν καὶ μυστηρίων τῆς
 2 πολιτείας, ἣ μὲν σύγκλητος ἀπέδωκε τῷ δήμῳ τὴν ψῆφον, ὃ δὲ δῆμος ἀπέδειξε αὐτὸν ὑπατου μετὰ Σέξτου Αἰλίου, καίπερ οὐπω τριάκοντα ἔτη γεγονότα. κλήρῳ δὲ λαγχάνει τὸν πρὸς Φίλιππον καὶ Μακεδόνας πόλεμον, εὐτυχία τινὶ τῶν Ῥωμαίων συλλαχῶν πράγμασι καὶ ἀνθρώποις οὐ πάντα πολέμῳ καὶ βίᾳ χρωμένου δεομένοις ἄρχοντος,

TITUS FLAMININUS

many great contests and her young men from the very outset were taught by service as soldiers how to command soldiers. To begin with, then, he served as military tribune in the war against Hannibal under Marcellus the consul. Marcellus fell into an ambush and lost his life,¹ but Titus was appointed governor of the country about Tarentum and of Tarentum itself, now captured for the second time. Here he won a good name, no less for his administration of justice than for his conduct in the field. For this reason he was also chosen director-in-chief of the colonists sent out to the two cities of Narnia and Cosa.

II. This success more than anything else so exalted his ambition that he ignored the intervening offices which young men generally sought, the offices of tribune, praetor, and aedile, and thought himself worthy at once of a consulship; so he became a candidate for that office, with the eager support of his colonists. But the tribunes Fulvius and Manius opposed his course, and said that it was a monstrous thing for a young man to force his way into the highest office contrary to the laws, before he had been initiated, as it were, into the first rites and mysteries of government. The senate, however, referred the matter to the votes of the people, and the people elected him consul² along with Sextus Aelius, although he was not yet thirty years old. The lot assigned him to the war with Philip and the Macedonians, and it was a marvellous piece of good fortune for the Romans that he was thus designated for a field of activity where the people did not require a leader relying entirely upon war and

¹ In 208 B.C. Cf. the Marcellus, xxviii. f. ² In 198 B.C.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- ἀλλὰ πειθοῖ καὶ ὁμιλίᾳ μᾶλλον ἀλωσίμοις.
 3 Φιλίππῳ γὰρ ἦν στόμωμα μὲν εἰς μάχην ἀπο-χρῶν ἢ Μακεδόνων ἀρχή, ῥώμη δὲ πολέμου τριβὴν ἔχοντας καὶ χορηγία καὶ καταφυγὴ καὶ ὄργανον ὅλως τῆς φάλαγγος ἢ τῶν Ἑλλήνων δύναμις, ὧν μὴ διαλυθέντων ἀπὸ τοῦ Φιλίππου μιᾶς μάχης οὐκ ἦν ἔργον ὁ πρὸς αὐτὸν πόλεμος.
 4 ἢ δ' Ἑλλὰς οὐπω πολλὰ συνενηγεμένη Ῥωμαίοις, ἀλλὰ τότε πρῶτον ἐπιμιγνυμένη ταῖς πράξεσιν, εἰ μὴ φύσει τε χρηστός ἦν ὁ ἄρχων καὶ λόγῳ μᾶλλον ἢ πολέμῳ χρώμενος, ἐντυγχάνοντί τε 370 προσῆν πιθανότης καὶ πραότης ἐντυγχανομένη καὶ τόπος πλείστος ὑπὲρ τῶν δικαίων, οὐκ ἂν οὕτως ῥαδίως ἀντὶ τῶν συνήθων ἀλλόφυλον ἀρχὴν ἠγάπησε. ταῦτα μὲν οὖν ἐπὶ τῶν πράξεων αὐτοῦ δηλοῦται.

- III. Πυνθανόμενος δὲ ὁ Τίτος τοὺς πρὸ ἑαυτοῦ στρατηγούς, τοῦτο μὲν Σουλπίκιον, τοῦτο δὲ Πόπλιον, ὄψε τῆς ὥρας ἐμβαλόντας εἰς Μακε-δονίαν καὶ τοῦ πολέμου βραδέως ἀψαμένους κατατετριφθῆναι τοπομαχοῦντας καὶ διαπληκτιζομένους ἀκροβολισμοῖς ὑπὲρ ὀδῶν καὶ σιτολογίας 2 πρὸς τὸν Φίλιππον, οὐκ ᾤετο δεῖν, ὥσπερ ἐκείνοι καταναλώσαντες οἴκοι τὸν ἐνιαυτὸν ἐν τιμαῖς καὶ πολιτείαις ὕστερον ἐξώρμησαν ἐπὶ τὰς στρατείας, οὕτως καὶ αὐτὸς ἐνιαυτὸν ἐπικερδᾶναι τῇ ἀρχῇ, τὸν μὲν ὑπατεύσας, τῷ δὲ πολεμήσας, ἀλλ' ὁμοῦ 326

TITUS FLAMININUS

violence, but were rather to be won over by persuasion and friendly intercourse. For the realm of Macedonia afforded Philip a sufficiently strong force for actual battle, but in a war of long duration his phalanx was dependent for its vigour, its support, its places of refuge, and in a word for its entire effectiveness, upon the states of Greece, and unless these were detached from Philip, the war with him would not be a matter of a single battle. Greece, however, had not yet been brought into much contact with the Romans, and now for the first time was drawn into political relations with them. Unless, therefore, the Roman commander had been a man of native goodness who relied upon argument more than upon war, and unless he had been persuasive when he asked an audience and kind when he granted one, ever laying the greatest stress upon what was right and just, Greece would not so easily have been satisfied with a foreign supremacy instead of those to which she had been accustomed. However, this will be made clear in the story of his achievements.

III. Titus learned that the generals who had preceded him in this field, first Sulpicius, and then Publius Villius, had invaded Macedonia late in the season, had prosecuted the war slowly, and had wasted time in manœuvring for position or in long range skirmishes with Philip to secure roads and provisions. These men had squandered the year of their consulship at home in the honours and political activities of their office, and afterwards had set out on their campaigns. But Titus did not think it right to imitate them and thus add a year to his term of office, acting as magistrate during one, and

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

φιλοτιμούμενος ἐνεργὸν τῷ πολέμῳ τὴν ἀρχὴν παρασχεῖν, τὰς μὲν ἐν τῇ πόλει τιμὰς καὶ προ-3 ἐδρίας ὑφῆκεν, αἰτησάμενος δὲ παρὰ τῆς βουλῆς τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτῷ Λεύκιον ἄρχοντα νεῶν συστρα-τεύειν, καὶ τῶν μετὰ Σκηπίωνος ἐν Ἰβηρίᾳ μὲν Ἄσδρούβαν, ἐν Λιβύῃ δὲ Ἄννιβαν αὐτὸν καταμεμαχημένων τοὺς ὑκμάζοντας ἔτι καὶ προθύμους ἀναλαβὼν ὥσπερ στόμωμα, τρισχιλίους γενομένους, εἰς τὴν Ἥπειρον ἀσφαλῶς διεπέρασε.
 4 καὶ τὸν Πόπλιον εὐρῶν μετὰ τῆς δυνάμεως ἀντιστρατοπεδεύοντα τῷ Φιλίππῳ τὰς περὶ τὸν Ἄψον ποταμὸν ἐμβολὰς καὶ τὰ στενὰ φυλάτ-τοντι πολλὴν ἤδη χρόνον, οὐδὲν δὲ περαίνοντα διὰ τὴν ὀχυρότητα τῶν χωρίων, παρέλαβε τὸ στράτευμα καὶ τὸν Πόπλιον ἀποπέμψας κατε-σκέπτετο τοὺς τόπους. εἰσὶ δὲ ὀχυροὶ μὲν οὐχ ἦττον τῶν περὶ τὰ Τέμπη, κάλλη δὲ δένδρων, ὡς ἐκείνοι, καὶ χλωρότητα ὕλης καὶ διατριβᾶς καὶ 5 λειμῶνας ἠδεῖς οὐκ ἔχουσιν. ὁρῶν δὲ μεγάλων καὶ ὑψηλῶν ἐκατέρωθεν εἰς μίαν φάραγγα με-γίστην καὶ βαθεῖαν συμφερομένων διεκπίπτων ὁ Ἄψος καὶ σχῆμα καὶ τάχος ἐξομοιοῦται πρὸς τὸν Πηνειόν, τὴν μὲν ἄλλην ἅπασαν ἀποκρύπτων ὑπώρειαν, ἐκτομῆν δὲ κρημνώδη καὶ στενὴν παρὰ τὸ ρεῖθρον ἀπολείπων ἀτραπὸν, οὐδὲ ἄλλως ῥα-δίαν στρατεύματι διελθεῖν, εἰ δὲ καὶ φυλάττοιτο, παντελῶς ἄπορον.

IV. Ἦσαν μὲν οὖν οἱ τὸν Τίτον ἄγειν κύκλῳ διὰ τῆς Δασσαρήτιδος κατὰ Λύκον εὐπορον

TITUS FLAMININUS

as general for a second. On the contrary, he was ambitious to prosecute the war at the same time that he served as consul, and therefore renounced his honours and special privileges in the city, and after asking the senate that his brother Lucius might accompany him on his expedition as naval commander, he took with him as the main part of his force those of Scipio's soldiers who were still in full vigour of body and spirit after conquering Hasdrubal in Spain and Hannibal himself in Africa (they were three thousand in number), and crossed safely into Epirus. He found Publius Villius encamped with his forces over against Philip, who for a long time now had been guarding the narrow passes along the river Apsus. Publius was making no progress, owing to the strength of his adversary's position, and Titus therefore took over his army, sent Publius home, and began an examination of the ground. It has no less natural strength than the Vale of Tempe, but is without the beautiful trees, green woods, agreeable haunts, and pleasant meadows which there abound. Great and lofty mountains on either side slope down and form a single very large and deep ravine, and through this the Apsus dashes with a volume and speed which make it the equal of the Peneius. Its water covers all the rest of the ground at the foot of the mountains, but leaves a cut, precipitous and narrow, for a path along past its current; this path would not be easy for an army to traverse at any time, and when guarded, it would be utterly impassable.

IV. There were some, therefore, who tried to have Titus lead his forces by a roundabout way through

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- ὀδὸν καὶ ῥαδίαν ἐπιχειροῦντες. ὁ δὲ δεδοικῶς μὴ πόρρω θαλάττης ἐμβαλὼν ἑαυτὸν εἰς τόπους γλίσχρους καὶ σπειρομένους πονηρῶς τοῦ Φιλίππου φυγομαχοῦντος ἀπορήση σιτίων καὶ πάλιν ἄπρακτος, ὥσπερ ὁ πρὸ αὐτοῦ στρατηγός, ἀναχωρεῖν ἀναγκασθῆ πρὸς τὴν θάλασσαν, ἔγνω προσβαλὼν ἀνὰ κράτος διὰ τῶν ἄκρων βιάσασθαι τὴν πάροδον. ἐπεὶ δὲ τὰ ὄρη τοῦ Φιλίππου τῆ φύλαγγι κατέχοντος, ἐκ τῶν πλαγίων πανταχόθεν ἐπὶ τοὺς Ῥωμαίους ἀκοντίων καὶ τοξευμάτων φερομένων, πληγαὶ μὲν ἐγίνοντο καὶ ἀγῶνες ὄξεις καὶ νεκροὶ παρ' ἀμφοτέρων ἐπιπτον, οὐδὲν δὲ τοῦ πολέμου πέρας ἐφαίνετο, προσῆλθον ἄνθρωποι τῶν αὐτόθι νεμόντων φράζοντές τινα κύκλωσιν ἀμελουμένην ὑπὸ τῶν πολεμίων, ἣ τὸν στρατὸν ἄξειν ὑπισχνοῦντο καὶ καταστήσειν
- 3 μίλιστα τριταῖον ἐπὶ τῶν ἄκρων. γνώστην δὲ τῆς πίστεως παρείχοντο καὶ βεβαιωτὴν Χάροπα τὸν Μαχάτα, πρωτεύοντα μὲν Ἡπειρωτῶν, εὖνον δὲ Ῥωμαίοις ὄντα καὶ κρύφα φόβῳ τοῦ Φιλίππου συναγωνιζόμενον. ὃ πιστεύσας ὁ Τίτος ἐκπέμπει χιλιάρχον ἓνα πεζοὺς ἔχοντα τετρακισχιλίους καὶ ἵππεις τριακοσίους. ἠγοῦντο δὲ οἱ νομεῖς ἐκεῖνοι δεδεμένοι· καὶ τὰς μὲν ἡμέρας ἀνεπαύοντο κοίλους προβαλλόμενοι καὶ ὑλώδεις τόπους, ὠδενον δὲ νύκτωρ πρὸς τὴν σελήνην· καὶ γὰρ ἦν διχόμητος.
- 4 Ὁ δὲ Τίτος τούτους ἀποστείλας τὰς μὲν ἄλλας 371 ἡμέρας διανέπαυε τὸν στρατὸν ὅσα μὴ περισπᾶν τοῖς ἀκροβολισμοῖς τοὺς πολεμίους, καθ' ἣν δὲ ἔμελλον ὑπερφανήσεσθαι τῶν ἄκρων οἱ περιῶντες,

TITUS FLAMININUS

Dassaretis towards Lycus, a safe and easy road. But he was afraid that if he went far away from the sea and got into regions that were poorly tilled and barren, while Philip avoided a battle, lack of provisions would compel him to come back again to the sea with his task undone, like the general who had preceded him. He therefore determined to attack with all his might, and force his passage through the heights. But Philip was occupying the mountains with his phalanx, and on the flanks of the Romans javelins and arrows came flying from all directions against them. Sharp encounters took place, men were wounded and men fell dead on both sides, and no end of the war was in sight. But at last some herdsmen of the vicinity came to Titus and told him of a roundabout path which the enemy was neglecting to guard; over this they promised to lead his army and bring it, in three days at the farthest, to a position on the heights. As surety and voucher for their good faith they brought Charops the son of Machatas, a leading man in Epirus, who was well-disposed to the Romans and was secretly co-operating with them through fear of Philip. In him Titus put confidence, and sent out a military tribune with four thousand foot-soldiers and three hundred horsemen. They were conducted by the herdsmen, who were in bonds. By day they rested under cover of caves or woody places, and they travelled in the night, by the light of the moon, which was at the full.

After sending off this detachment, Titus kept his army quiet for two days, except so far as he drew off the enemy's attention by skirmishes; but when the day came on which the enveloping party were expected to show themselves on the heights, at daybreak

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἄμ' ἡμέρα πᾶν μὲν βαρύν, πᾶν δὲ γυμνητικὸν ὄπλον ἐκίνει· καὶ τριχῆ νείμας τὴν δύναμιν αὐτὸς μὲν εἰς τὸ στενώτατον παρὰ τὸ ρεῖθρον ὀρθίας ἀνήγε τὰς σπείρας βαλλόμενος ὑπὸ τῶν Μακε-δόνων καὶ συμπλεκόμενος τοῖς ἀπαντῶσι περι-5 τὰς δυσχωρίας, τῶν δὲ ἄλλων ἐκατέρωθεν ἅμα πειρωμένων ἀμιλλᾶσθαι καὶ ταῖς τραχύτησιν ἐμφυομένων προθύμως, ὃ τε ἥλιος ἀνέσχε καὶ καπνὸς οὐ βέβαιος, ἀλλ' οἶον ὄρειος ὀμίχλη πόρ-ρωθεν ἀνατέλλων καὶ διαφαινόμενος τοὺς μὲν πολεμίους ἐλάνθανε, κατὰ νότου γὰρ ἦν αὐτοῖς, ἤδη τῶν ἄκρων ἐχομένων, οἱ δὲ Ῥωμαῖοι δόξαν
 ἔσχον ἀμφίβολον ἐν ἀγῶνι καὶ πόνῳ τὴν ἐλπίδα 6 πρὸς τὸ βουλόμενον λαμβάνοντες. ἐπεὶ δὲ μάλλον ἀξανόμενος καὶ διαμελαίνων τὸν ἀέρα καὶ πολὺς ἄνω χωρῶν ἐδηλοῦτο πυρσὸς εἶναι φίλιος, οἱ μὲν ἀλαλάξαντες ἐπέβαινον ἔρρωμένως καὶ συνέστελλον εἰς τὰ τραχύτατα τοὺς πολεμίους, οἱ δὲ ὀπισθεν ἀπὸ τῶν ἄκρων ἀντηλάλαξαν.

V. Φυγὴ μὲν οὖν ἦν εὐθύς ὀξεῖα πάντων, ἔπε-σον δὲ δισχιλίων οὐ πλείους· ἀφηροῦντο γὰρ αἱ δυσχωρίαι τὴν δίωξιν. χρήματα δὲ καὶ σκηναὶς καὶ θεραπείοντας οἱ Ῥωμαῖοι διαρπάσαντες ἐκρά-τουν τῶν στενῶν, καὶ διώδενον τὴν Ἥπειρον οὕτω κοσμίως καὶ μετ' ἐγκρατείας τοσαύτης ὥστε, τῶν πλοίων καὶ τῆς θαλάσσης μακρὰν ὄντας αὐτούς, καὶ τὸν ἐπιμήνιον σίτον μὴ μεμετρημένους οὐδ'

TITUS FLAMININUS

he put all his heavy-armed and all his light-armed troops in motion. Dividing his forces into three parts, he himself led his cohorts in column formation up into the narrowest part of the ravine along the stream, pelted with missiles by the Macedonians and engaging at close quarters with those who confronted him at each difficult spot; the other divisions, one on either side, strove to keep pace with him, and grappled eagerly with the difficulties presented by the rough ground. Meanwhile the sun rose, and a smoke—not clearly defined, but resembling a mountain mist—lifted itself and came into view from afar. The enemy did not notice it, for it was behind them, where the heights were already occupied, and the Romans were of doubtful mind about it, but as they struggled and laboured on, they let their wishes determine their hopes. But when the smoke increased in size and darkened the air, and ascending in great volume was clearly seen to be a fire-signal from their friends, then the Romans below raised shouts of triumph and dashed upon their foes and crowded them together into the roughest places, while the Romans behind the enemy sent down answering shouts from the heights.

V. At once, then, the enemy fled precipitately, but not more than two thousand of them fell;¹ for the difficulties of the ground made pursuit impossible. However, the Romans made spoil of their money, tents, and slaves, mastered the pass, and traversed all parts of Epirus, but in such an orderly manner and with so great restraint that, although they were far from their fleet and the sea, and although their monthly rations of grain had not been measured out

¹ So Livy, xxxii. 12.

εὐποροῦντας ἀγρορᾶς, ἀπέχεσθαι τῆς χώρας ἀμ-2 φιλαφεῖς ὠφελείας ἐχούσης. ὁ γὰρ Τίτος πυνθανόμενος τὸν Φίλιππον, ὡς ὅμοια φεύγοντι τὴν Θετταλίαν διερχόμενος τοὺς μὲν ἀνθρώπους ἐκ τῶν πόλεων ἀνίστησιν εἰς τὰ ὄρη, τὰς δὲ πόλεις καταπίμπρησι, τῶν δὲ χρημάτων τὰ λειπόμενα διὰ πλῆθος ἢ βάρος ἀρπαγὴν προτίθεται, τρόπον τινὰ τῆς χώρας ἐξιστάμενος ἤδη Ῥωμαίοις, ἐφι-3 λοτιμεῖτο καὶ παρεκάλει τοὺς στρατιώτας ὥσπερ οἰκείας καὶ παρακεχωρημένης κηδομένους βαδί-ζειν. καὶ μέντοι καὶ παρέιχεν αὐτοῖς τὰ γινόμενα τῆς εὐταξίας αἴσθησιν εὐθύς. προσεχώρουν μὲν γὰρ αἱ πόλεις ἀψαμένοις Θετταλίας, οἱ δ' ἐντὸς Πυλῶν Ἕλληνες ἐπόθουν καὶ διεπτόηντο ταῖς ὀρμαῖς πρὸς τὸν Τίτον, Ἀχαιοὶ δὲ τὴν Φιλίππου συμμαχίαν ἀπειπάμενοι πολεμεῖν ἐψηφίσαντο 4 μετὰ Ῥωμαίων πρὸς αὐτόν. Ὀπούντιοι δέ, καίπερ Αἰτωλῶν τότε Ῥωμαίοις συναγωνιζομένων προθυμότατα καὶ τὴν πόλιν ἀξιούντων παραλα-βεῖν καὶ φυλάττειν, οὐ προσέσχον, ἀλλὰ μεταπεμψάμενοι τὸν Τίτον ἐκείνῳ διεπίστευσαν ἑαυτοὺς καὶ παρέδωκαν.

Πύρρον μὲν οὖν λέγουσιν, ὅτε πρῶτον ἀπὸ σκοπῆς κατείδε τὸ στράτευμα τῶν Ῥωμαίων διακεκοσμημένον, εἰπεῖν οὐ βαρβαρικὴν αὐτῷ φανῆναι τὴν τῶν βαρβάρων παράταξιν· οἱ δὲ Τίτῳ πρῶτον ἐντυγχάνοντες ἠναγκάζοντο παρα-
 5 πλησίας ἀφιέναι φωνάς. ἀκούοντες γὰρ τῶν
 Μακεδόνων ὡς ἄνθρωπος ἄρχων βαρβάρου στρα-

TITUS FLAMININUS.

to them and they could buy little, they nevertheless refrained from plundering the country, which offered abundant booty. For Titus had learned that Philip, in passing through Thessaly like a fugitive, was driving the inhabitants from their cities into the mountains, burning down the cities, and allowing his soldiers to plunder the wealth which was too abundant or too heavy to be carried away, thus in a manner ceding the country already to the Romans. Titus was therefore ambitious, and exhorted his soldiers accordingly to spare the country in marching through it, and to treat it as though it had been handed over to them and were their own. And indeed the results showed them at once the advantages of this orderly conduct. For as soon as they reached Thessaly the cities came over to them, the Greeks south of Thermopylae were all eagerness and excitement to find Titus, and the Achaeans, renouncing their alliance with Philip, voted to join the Romans in making war upon him. The Opuntians, moreover, although the Aetolians, who were at that time fighting most zealously on the side of the Romans, asked permission to take Opus in charge and protect the city, would not grant the request, but sent for Titus and gave themselves with the fullest confidence into his hands.

Now, we are told that Pyrrhus, when for the first time he beheld from a look-out place the army of the Romans in full array, had said that he saw nothing barbaric in the Barbarians' line of battle;¹ and so those who for the first time met Titus were compelled to speak in a similar strain. For they had heard the Macedonians say that a commander

¹ Cf. the Pyrrhus, xvi. 5.

τιῶς ἔπεισι δι' ὄπλων πάντα καταστρεφόμενος καὶ δουλούμενος, εἶτα ὑπαντῶντες ἀνδρὶ τὴν τε ἡλικίαν νέῳ καὶ τὴν ὄψιν φιλανθρώπῳ, φωνὴν τε καὶ διῶλεκτον "Ἐλληνι καὶ τιμῆς ἀληθοῦς ἔραστῇ, θαυμασίως ἐκηλοῦντο, καὶ τὰς πόλεις ὑπιόντες ἐνεπίμπλασαν εὐνοίας τῆς πρὸς αὐτὸν
 6 ὡς ἐχούσας ἡγεμόνα τῆς ἐλευθερίας. ἐπεὶ δὲ καὶ Φιλίππῳ δοκοῦντι συμβατικῶς ἔχειν εἰς ταῦτόν ἐλθὼν προὔτεινεν εἰρήνην καὶ φιλίαν ἐπὶ τῷ τοὺς Ἐλληνας αὐτονόμους εἶναι καὶ τὰς φρουρὰς ἀπαλ- 371 λάττειν, ὁ δὲ οὐκ ἐδέξατο, παντάπασιν ἤδη τότε καὶ τοῖς θεραπεύουσι τὰ τοῦ Φιλίππου παρέστη Ῥωμαίους πολεμήσοντας ἤκειν οὐχ "Ἐλλησιν, ἀλλ' ὑπὲρ Ἑλλήνων Μακεδόσι.

VI. Τὰ μὲν οὖν ἄλλα προσεχώρει καθ' ἡσυχίαν
 αὐτῷ, τὴν δὲ Βοιωτίαν ἀπολέμῳς ἐπιπορευομένῳ Θηβαίων ἀπήντησαν οἱ πρῶτοι, φρονούντες μὲν τὰ τοῦ Μακεδόνοιο διὰ Βραχύλλην, ἀσπαζόμενοι δὲ καὶ τιμῶντες τὸν Τίτον, ὡς φιλίας πρὸς ἀμφο-2 τέρους ὑπαρχούσης. ὁ δ' ἐντυχὼν αὐτοῖς φιλαν-θρώπῳς καὶ δεξιωσάμενος προῆγεν ἡσυχῇ καθ' ὁδόν, τὰ μὲν ἐρωτῶν καὶ πυνθανόμενος, τὰ δὲ διηγούμενος, καὶ παράγων ἐπίτηδες ἄχρι τοὺς 3 στρατιώτας ἀναλαβεῖν ἐκ τῆς πορείας. οὕτω δὲ προάγων συνεισηλλθε τοῖς Θηβαίοις εἰς τὴν πόλιν, οὐ πάνυ μὲν ἡδομένοις, ὀκνοῦσι δὲ κωλύειν, ἐπεὶ

TITUS FLAMININUS

of a barbarian host was coming against them, who subdued and enslaved everywhere by force of arms ; and then, when they met a man who was young in years, humane in aspect, a Greek in voice and language, and a lover of genuine honour, they were wonderfully charmed, and when they returned to their cities they filled them with kindly feelings towards him and the belief that in him they had a champion of their liberties. After this Titus had a meeting with Philip (who seemed disposed to make terms), and proffered him peace and friendship on condition that he allowed the Greeks to be independent and withdraw his garrisons from their cities ; but this proffer Philip would not accept. Then at last it became quite clear even to the partisans of Philip that the Romans were come to wage war, not upon the Greeks, but upon the Macedonians in behalf of the Greeks.

VI. Accordingly, the other parts of Greece came over to the side of Titus without any trouble ; but as he was entering Boeotia without hostile demonstrations, the leading men of Thebes came to meet him. They were in sympathy with the Macedonian cause through the efforts of Brachyllas, but welcomed Titus and showed him honour, professing to be on friendly terms with both parties. Titus met and greeted them kindly, and then proceeded quietly on his journey, sometimes asking questions for his own information and sometimes discoursing at length, and purposely diverting them until his soldiers should come up from their march. Then he led them forward and entered the city along with the Thebans, who were not at all pleased thereat, but hesitated to oppose him, since a goodly number of στρατιώται γε μέτριοι τὸ πλῆθος εἶποντο. καὶ μέντοι παρελθὼν ὁ Τίτος, ὡς οὐκ ἔχων τὴν πόλιν, ἔπειθεν ἐλέσθαι τὰ Ῥωμαίων, Ἀττάλου τοῦ βασιλέως συναγορεύοντος αὐτῷ καὶ συνεξορμῶντος τοὺς Θηβαίους. ἀλλ' Ἀτταλος μὲν, ὡς ἔοικε, τοῦ γήρως προθυμότερον ἑαυτὸν τῷ Τίτῳ ῥήτορα παρασχεῖν φιλοτιμούμενος, ἐν αὐτῷ τῷ λέγειν προσπεσόντος ἰλίγγου τινὸς ἢ ῥεύματος ἄφνω τὴν αἴσθησιν ἐπιληφθεὶς ἔπεσε, καὶ μετ' οὐ πολὺ ταῖς ναυσὶν εἰς Ἀσίαν ἀποκομισθεὶς ἐτελεύτησεν· οἱ δὲ Βοιωτοὶ προσεχώρησαν τοῖς Ῥωμαίοις.

- VII. Φιλίππου δὲ πρέσβεις πέμψαντος εἰς Ῥώμην ἀπέστειλε καὶ ὁ Τίτος παρ' αὐτοῦ τοὺς πράξοντας ὅπως ἐπιψηφίσηται ἢ σύγκλητος χρόνον αὐτῷ τοῦ πολέμου μένοντος, εἰ δὲ μὴ, δι' ἐκείνου τὴν εἰρήνην γενέσθαι. φιλότιμος γὰρ ὢν ἰσχυρῶς ἐδεδίει πεμφθέντος ἐπὶ τὸν πόλεμον
- 2 ἑτέρου στρατηγοῦ τὴν δόξαν ἀφαιρεθῆναι. διαπραξαμένων δὲ τῶν φίλων αὐτῷ μήτε τὸν Φίλιππον ὢν ἔχρηζε τυχεῖν καὶ τοῦ πολέμου τὴν ἡγεμονίαν ἐκείνῳ φυλαχθῆναι, δεξάμενος τὸ δόγμα καὶ ταῖς ἐλπίσιν ἐπαρθεὶς εὐθύς εἰς Θετταλίαν ἐπὶ τὸν Φιλίππου πόλεμον ὤρμησεν, ὑπὲρ ἑξακισχιλίου καὶ δισμυρίου ἔχων στρατιώτας, ὧν Αἰτωλοὶ πεζοὺς ἑξακισχιλίους καὶ ἵππεῖς τετρακοσίους παρεῖχον. ἦν δὲ καὶ τοῦ Φιλίππου τὸ στράτευμα τῷ πλῆθει παραπλήσιον.
- 3 Ἐπεὶ δὲ βαδίζοντες ἐπ' ἀλλήλους καὶ γενόμενοι περὶ τὴν Σκοτοῦσαν ἐνταῦθα διακινδυνεύειν ἔμελ-

¹ Cf. Livy, xxxiii. 1 f.

² So Livy, xxxiii. 4.

TITUS FLAMININUS .

soldiers were in his following. Titus, however, just as though the city were not in his power, came before their assembly and tried to persuade them to side with the Romans, and Attalus the king seconded him in his appeals and exhortations to the Thebans. But Attalus, as it would appear, in his eagerness to play the orator for Titus, went beyond his aged strength, and in the very midst of his speech, being seized with a vertigo or an apoplexy, suddenly fainted and fell, and shortly afterwards was conveyed by his fleet to Asia, where he died. The Boeotians allied themselves with the Romans.

VII. Philip now sent an embassy to Rome, and Titus therefore dispatched thither his own representatives, who were to induce the senate to vote him an extension of command in case the war continued, or, if it did not, the power to make peace. For he was covetous of honour, and was greatly afraid that he would be robbed of his glory if another general were sent to carry on the war. His friends managed matters so successfully for him that Philip failed to get what he wanted and the command in the war was continued to Titus. On receiving the decree of the senate, he was lifted up in his hopes and at once hastened into Thessaly to prosecute the war against Philip. He had over twenty-six thousand soldiers, of whom six thousand infantry and four hundred cavalry were furnished by the Aetolians.¹ Philip's army also was of about the same size.²

The two armies advanced against each other until they came into the neighbourhood of Scotussa, and there they proposed to decide the issue by battle.³

¹ On the same battlefield Pelopidas had been defeated and slain by Alexander of Pherae, in 364 B.C. Cf. the Pelopidas, xxxii.

στρατιῶται γε μέτριοι τὸ πλῆθος εἶποντο. καὶ μέντοι παρελθὼν ὁ Τίτος, ὡς οὐκ ἔχων τὴν πόλιν, ἔπειθεν ἐλῆσθαι τὰ Ῥωμαίων, Ἀττάλου τοῦ βασιλέως συναγορεύοντος αὐτῷ καὶ συνεξορμῶντος τοὺς Θηβαίους. ἀλλ' Ἀττάλος μὲν, ὡς ἔοικε, τοῦ γήρως προθυμότερον ἑαυτὸν τῷ Τίτῳ ῥήτορα παρασχέιν φιλοτιμούμενος, ἐν αὐτῷ τῷ λέγειν προσπεσόντος ἰλίγγου τινὸς ἢ ῥεύματος ἄφνω τὴν αἴσθησιν ἐπιληφθεὶς ἔπεσε, καὶ μετ' οὐ πολὺ ταῖς ναυσὶν εἰς Ἀσίαν ἀποκομισθεὶς ἐτελεύτησεν· οἱ δὲ Βοιωτοὶ προσεχώρησαν τοῖς Ῥωμαίοις.

- VII. Φιλίππου δὲ πρέσβεις πέμψαντος εἰς Ῥώμην ἀπέστειλε καὶ ὁ Τίτος παρ' αὐτοῦ τοὺς πράξοντας ὅπως ἐπιψηφίσηται ἢ σύγκλητος χρόνον αὐτῷ τοῦ πολέμου μένοντος, εἰ δὲ μὴ, δι' ἐκείνου τὴν εἰρήνην γενέσθαι. φιλότιμος γὰρ ὢν ἰσχυρῶς ἐδεδίει πεμφθέντος ἐπὶ τὸν πόλεμον
- 2 ἑτέρου στρατηγοῦ τὴν δόξαν ἀφαιρεθῆναι. διαπραξαμένων δὲ τῶν φίλων αὐτῷ μήτε τὸν Φίλιππον ὢν ἔχρηζε τυχεῖν καὶ τοῦ πολέμου τὴν ἡγεμονίαν ἐκείνῳ φυλαχθῆναι, δεξάμενος τὸ δόγμα καὶ ταῖς ἐλπίσιν ἐπαρθεὶς εὐθύς εἰς Θετταλίαν ἐπὶ τὸν Φιλίππου πόλεμον ὤρμησεν, ὑπὲρ ἑξακισχιλίου καὶ δισμυρίου ἔχων στρατιώτας, ὢν Αἰτωλοὶ πεζοὺς ἑξακισχιλίου καὶ ἵππεῖς τετρακοσίουσ παρέιχον. ἦν δὲ καὶ τοῦ Φιλίππου τὸ στράτευμα τῷ πλήθει παραπλήσιον.
- 3 Ἐπεὶ δὲ βαδίζοντες ἐπ' ἀλλήλους καὶ γενόμενοι περὶ τὴν Σκοτοῦσαν ἐνταῦθα διακινδυνεύειν ἔμελ-

¹ Cf. Livy, xxxiii. 1 f.

² So Livy, xxxiii. 4.

soldiers were in the city as though the city were not theirs, and they were with their assembly and with the Romans, and he was in his appeal and But Attalus, as it would play the orator for strength, and in the seized with a verge and fell, and shut his fleet to Asia, where themselves with the Roman

VII. Philip now Titus therefore dis- sentatives, who were him an extension of continued, or, if it did For he was covetous of afraid that he would general were sent to managed matters so failed to get what the war was continued decree of the and at once war against Philip soldiers, of whom hundred cavalry Philip's army also

The two they came into there they

On the slain by Alexander xxxiii.

λον, οὐχ, ὅπερ εἰκὸς ἦν, πρὸς δέους ἔλαβον οἱ στρατοὶ τὴν ἀλλήλων γειτνίασιν, ἀλλὰ καὶ μᾶλλον ὄρμῃς καὶ φιλοτιμίας ἐπληροῦντο, Ῥωμαῖοι μὲν, εἰ Μακεδόνων κρατήσουσιν, ὧν ὄνομα δι' Ἀλέξανδρον ἀλκῆς καὶ δυνάμεως πλείστον ἦν παρ' αὐτοῖς, Μακεδόνες δὲ Ῥωμαίους Περσῶν ἡγούμενοι διαφέρειν ἤλπιζον, εἰ περιγένοιτο, λαμπρό-
 4 τερὸν ἀποδείξειν Ἀλεξάνδρου Φίλιππον. ὁ μὲν οὖν Τίτος παρεκάλει τοὺς στρατιώτας ἄνδρας ἀγαθοὺς γενέσθαι καὶ προθύμους, ὡς ἐν τῷ καλλίστῳ θεάτρῳ τῇ Ἑλλάδι μέλλοντας ἀγωνίζεσθαι πρὸς τοὺς ἀρίστους τῶν ἀνταγωνιστῶν· ὁ δὲ Φίλιππος, εἴτε ἀπὸ τύχης εἴτε ὑπὸ σπουδῆς παρὰ τὸν καιρὸν ἀγνοήσας, ἦν γάρ τι πολυάνδριον ὑψηλὸν ἔξω τοῦ χάρακος, ἐπὶ τοῦτο προβὰς ἤρξατο μὲν, οἷα πρὸ μάχης φιλεῖ, διαλέγεσθαι καὶ παρορμᾶν, ἀθυμίας δὲ δεινῆς πρὸς τὸν οἰωνὸν ἐμπεσούσης διαταραχθεὶς ἐπέσχε τὴν ἡμέραν ἐκείνην.

VIII. Τῇ δ' ὑστεραία περὶ τὸν ὄρθρον, ἐκ μαλακῆς καὶ νοτίου νυκτός, εἰς ὀμίχλην τῶν νεφῶν τρεπομένων, ἀνεπίμπλατο ζόφου βαθέος πᾶν τὸ πεδίον, καὶ κατῆι παχὺς ἐκ τῶν ἄκρων ἀῆρ εἰς τὸ μεταξὺ τῶν στρατοπέδων, εὐθύς ἀρχομένης ἡμέρας ἀποκρύπτων τοὺς τόπους. οἱ δὲ ὑπ' ἀμφοτέρων ἀποσταλέντες ἐφεδρείας ἕνεκα καὶ κατασκοπῆς ἐν πάνυ βραχεῖ περιπεσόντες ἀλλή-
 • λοις ἐμάχοντο περὶ τὰς καλουμένας Κυνὸς κεφαλῆς, αἱ λόφων οὔσαι πυκνῶν καὶ παραλλήλων

TITUS FLAMININUS

Their mutual proximity did not inspire them with fear, as might have been expected; on the contrary, they were filled with ardour and ambition. For the Romans hoped to conquer the Macedonians, whose reputation for prowess and strength Alexander had raised to a very high pitch among them; and the Macedonians, who considered the Romans superior to the Persians, hoped, in case they prevailed over them, to prove Philip a more brilliant commander than Alexander. Accordingly, Titus exhorted his soldiers to show themselves brave men and full of spirit, assured that they were going to contend against the bravest of antagonists in that fairest of all theatres, Greece; and Philip, too, began a speech of exhortation to his soldiers, as is the custom before a battle. But, either by chance or from ignorance due to an inopportune haste, he had ascended for this purpose a lofty mound outside his camp, beneath which many men lay buried in a common grave, and a dreadful dejection fell upon his listeners in view of the omen, so that he was deeply troubled and refrained from battle that day.

VIII. Towards morning on the following day, after a mild and damp night, the clouds turned to mist, the whole plain was filled with profound darkness, a dense air came down from the heights into the space between the two camps, and as soon as day advanced all the ground was hidden from view. The parties sent out on either side for purposes of ambush and reconnoissance encountered one another in a very short time and went to fighting near what are called the Cynoscephalae, or Dog's Heads. These are the sharp tops of hills lying close alongside one another, ἄκραι λεπταὶ δι' ὁμοιότητα τοῦ σχήματος οὕτως 373.

 2 ὠνομάσθησαν. γενομένων δὲ οἶον εἰκὸς ἐν τόποις σκληροῖς μεταβολῶν κατὰ τὰς φυγὰς καὶ διώξεις, ἑκάτεροι τοῖς πονοῦσιν αἰεὶ καὶ ὑποχωροῦσιν ἐπιπέμποντες βοήθειαν ἐκ τῶν στρατοπέδων, καὶ ἤδη τοῦ ἀέρος ἀνακαθαιρομένου καθορῶντες τὰ γινόμενα πανστρατιᾷ συνέβαλον.

Τῷ μὲν οὖν δεξιῷ περιῆν ὁ Φίλιππος, ἐκ τόπων καταφερῶν ὅλην ἐπερείσας τὴν φάλαγγα τοῖς Ῥωμαίοις, τὸ βάρος τοῦ συνασπισμοῦ καὶ τὴν τραχύτητα τῆς προβολῆς τῶν σαρισῶν οὐχ ὑπο-3 μεινάντων· τοῦ δ' εὐωνύμου διασπασμὸν ἀνὰ τοὺς λόφους καὶ περίκλασιν λαμβάνοντος, ὁ Τίτος, τὸ μὲν ἠττώμενον ἀπογνοῦς, πρὸς δὲ θάτερον ὀξέως παρελίσσας, προσέβαλε τοῖς Μακεδόσι συστήναι μὲν εἰς φάλαγγα καὶ πυκνώσαι τὴν τάξιν εἰς βάθος, ἥπερ ἦν ἀλκὴ τῆς ἐκείνων δυνάμεως, κωλυμένοις διὰ τὴν ἀνωμαλίαν καὶ τραχύτητα τῶν χωρίων, πρὸς δὲ τὸ κατ' ἄνδρα συμπλέκεσθαι 4 βαρεῖ καὶ δυσέργῳ χρωμένοις ὀπλισμῷ. ζῶφ γὰρ ἢ φάλαγξ ἔοικεν ἀμάχῳ τὴν ἰσχύν, ἕως ἔν ἐστι σῶμα καὶ τηρεῖ τὸν συνασπισμὸν ἐν τάξει μᾶ.
 διαλυθείσης δὲ καὶ τὴν καθ' ἕνα ῥώμην ἀπόλλυσι τῶν μαχομένων ἕκαστος διὰ τε τὸν τρόπον τῆς ὀπλίσεως καὶ ὅτι παντὸς ὅλου τοῖς παρ' ἀλλήλων μέρεσι μᾶλλον ἢ δι' αὐτὸν ἰσχύει. τραπομένων δὲ τούτων οἱ μὲν ἐδίωκον τοὺς φεύγοντας, οἱ δὲ τοὺς μαχομένους τῶν Μακεδόνων παρεκδραμόντες

TITUS FLAMININUS

and got their name from a resemblance in their shape. As was natural on a field so difficult, there were alternations of flight and pursuit, each party sending out aid from their camps to those who from time to time were getting the worst of it and retreating, until at last, when the air cleared up and they could see what was going on, they engaged with all their forces.¹

With his right wing, then, Philip had the advantage, since from higher ground he threw his entire phalanx upon the Romans, who could not withstand the weight of its interlocked shields and the sharpness of its projecting pikes; but his left wing was broken up and scattered along the hills, and Titus, despairing of his defeated wing, rode swiftly along to the other, and with it fell upon the Macedonians. These were unable to hold their phalanx together and maintain the depth of its formation (which was the main source of their strength), being prevented by the roughness and irregularity of the ground, while for fighting man to man they had armour which was too cumbersome and heavy. For the phalanx is like an animal of invincible strength as long as it is one body and can keep its shields locked together in a single formation; but when it has been broken up into its parts, each of its fighting men loses also his individual force, as well because of the manner in which he is armed as because his strength lies in the mutual support of the parts of the whole body rather than in himself. This wing of the Macedonians being routed, some of the Romans pursued the fugitives, while others dashed out upon the flank of the ¹ For a fuller description of the battle, cf. Livy, xxxiii. 7-10 (Polybius, xviii. 20-27).

ἕκ πλαγίων ἔκτεινον, ὥστε ταχὺ καὶ τοὺς νικῶντας περισπᾶσθαι καὶ φεύγειν τὰ ὄπλα καταβάλλ-5 λοντας. ἔπεσον μὲν οὖν ὀκτακισχιλίων οὐκ ἐλάττους, ἐάλωσαν δὲ περὶ πεντακισχιλίους. τοῦ δὲ τὸν Φίλιππον ἀσφαλῶς ἀπελθεῖν τὴν αἰτίαν ἔλαβον Αἰτωλοί, περὶ ἄρπαγὴν γενόμενοι καὶ πόρθησιν τοῦ χάρακος ἔτι τῶν Ῥωμαίων διω-κόντων, ὥστε μὴτὲν εὐρεῖν ἐκείνους ἐπανελθόντας.

IX. Πρῶτον μὲν οὖν ἐγένοντο λοιδορίαὶ καὶ διαφοραὶ πρὸς ἀλλήλους αὐτοῖς· ἐκ δὲ τούτων μᾶλλον αἰεὶ τὸν Τίτον ἐλύπουν ἑαυτοῖς ἀνατιθέντες τὸ νίκημα καὶ τῇ φήμῃ προκαταλαμβάνοντες τοὺς Ἕλληνας, ὥστε καὶ γράφεσθαι καὶ ᾄδεσθαι προ-2 τέρους ἐκείνους ὑπὸ ποιητῶν καὶ ἰδιωτῶν ὑμνούντων τὸ ἔργον. ὧν μάλιστα διὰ στόματος ἦν τουτοὶ τὸ ἐπίγραμμα·

Ἄκλαυστοι καὶ ἄθαπτοι, ὀδοιπόρε, τῷδ' ἐπὶ νώτῳ
 Θεσσαλίας τρισσαὶ κείμεθα μυριάδες, Αἰτωλῶν δμηθέντες ὑπ' Ἄρεος ἠδὲ Λατίνων, οὓς Τίτος εὐρείης ἤγαγ' ἀπ' Ἰταλίας, Ἡμαθίη μέγα πῆμα. τὸ δὲ θρασὺ κείνο Φιλίππου πνεῦμα θεῶν ἐλάφων ὄχρετ' ἐλαφρότερον.

3 Τοῦτο ἐποίησε μὲν Ἀλκαῖος ἐφυβρίζων Φιλίππῳ καὶ τὸν ἀριθμὸν τῶν ἀποθανόντων ἐπιφνευσάμενος, λεγόμενον δὲ πολλαχοῦ καὶ ὑπὸ πολλῶν μᾶλλον ἠνία τὸν Τίτον ἢ τὸν Φίλιππον. ὁ μὲν γὰρ ἀντικωμωδῶν τὸν Ἀλκαῖον τῷ ἐλεγείῳ παρέβαλεν·

TITUS FLAMININUS

enemy who were still fighting and cut them down, so that very soon their victorious wing also faced about, threw away their weapons, and fled. The result was that no fewer than eight thousand Macedonians were slain, and five thousand were taken prisoners. Philip, however, got safely away, and for this the Aetolians were to blame, who fell to sacking and plundering the enemy's camp while the Romans were still pursuing, so that when the Romans came back to it they found nothing there.

IX. This, to begin with, gave rise to mutual quarrels and recriminations; but afterwards the Aetolians vexed Titus more and more by ascribing the victory to themselves and prepossessing the minds of the Greeks with the fame of it, so that they were mentioned first in the writings and songs of poets and historians who celebrated the event. Of these the one most in vogue was the following epigram in elegiac verses :—

“Unwept and without graves are we, O traveller, who on this ridge of Thessaly lie dead, in number thirty thousand, subdued by the sword of the Aetolians, and of the Latins whom Titus led from spacious Italy, Emathia's great bane. And the bold spirit that Philip had displayed was gone; it showed itself more agile than swift deer.”

This poem was composed by Alcaeus in mockery of Philip, and its author exaggerated the number of the slain; however, being recited in many places and by many persons, it gave more annoyance to Titus than to Philip. For Philip simply made fun of Alcaeus with an answering elegiac distich :—

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Ἄφλοιος καὶ ἄφυλλος, ὄδοιπόρε, τῷδ' ἐπὶ νώτῳ
Ἄλκαίῳ σταυρὸς πῆγνυται ἠλίβατος·

- 4 τὸν δὲ Τίτον φιλοτιμούμενον πρὸς τοὺς Ἕλληνας οὐ μετρίως παρώξυνε τὰ τοιαῦτα. διὸ καὶ τὰ ὑπόλοιπα τῶν πραγμάτων ἔπραττε καθ' ἑαυτὸν, ἐλάχιστα φροντίζων τῶν Αἰτωλῶν. οἱ δὲ ἤχθοντο, καὶ προσδεξαμένου λόγους αὐτοῦ καὶ πρεσβείαν ἐπὶ συμβάσεσι παρὰ τοῦ Μακεδόνοσ, τοῦτο ἐκείνοι¹ περιϊόντες ἐπὶ τὰς ἄλλας πόλεις ἐβόων, πωλεῖσθαι τὴν εἰρήνην Φιλίππῳ, παρὸν ἐκκόψαι τὸν πόλεμον ἄρδην καὶ ἀνελεῖν ἀρχὴν ὑφ' ἧς
- 5 πρώτης ἐδουλώθη τὸ Ἑλληνικόν. ταῦτα τῶν Αἰτωλῶν λεγόντων καὶ διαταραττόντων τοὺς συμμάχους, αὐτὸς ὁ Φίλιππος ἐλθὼν πρὸς τὰς 374
διαλύσεις ἀνέιλε τὴν ὑποψίαν, ἐπιτρέψας τῷ Τίτῳ καὶ Ῥωμαίοις τὰ καθ' αὐτόν. καὶ οὕτω καταλύεται τὸν πόλεμον ὁ Τίτος· καὶ τὴν μὲν Μακεδονικὴν ἀπέδωκεν αὐτῷ βασιλείαν, τῆς δὲ Ἑλλάδος προσέταξεν ἀποστήναι, χιλίοις δὲ τάλαντοις ἐξημίωσε, τὰς δὲ ναῦς πάσας παρέιλετο πλὴν δέκα, τῶν δὲ παίδων τὸν ἕτερον, Δημήτριον, ὁμηρεύσοντα λαβὼν εἰς Ῥώμην ἀπέστειλεν, ἄριστα τῷ καιρῷ χρησάμενος καὶ προλαβὼν τὸ μέλλον.
- 6 Ἄννιβον γὰρ τοῦ Λίβυος, ἀνδρὸς ἐχθίστου τε Ῥωμαίοις καὶ φυγάδος, ἤδη τότε πρὸς Ἀντίοχον ἤκοντος τὸν βασιλέα καὶ παροξύνοντος αὐτὸν εἰς

¹ τοῦτο ἐκείνοι Coraës, with the MSS. : τοῦτο ἐκείνο after Reiske.

TITUS FLAMININUS

“ Leafless and without bark, O traveller, on this ridge A cross is planted for Alcaeus, and it towers in the sun ” ;

but Titus was ambitious to stand well with the Greeks, and such things irritated him beyond measure. For this reason he conducted the rest of his business by himself, and made very little account of the Aetolians. They on their part were displeased at this, and when Titus received an embassy from the Macedonian king with proposals for an agreement, they went round to the other cities vociferously charging him with selling peace to Philip, when it was in his power to eradicate the war entirely and destroy a power by which the Greek world had first been enslaved. While the Aetolians were making these charges and trying to make trouble among the Roman allies, Philip himself removed all grounds for suspicion by coming to terms and putting himself and his realm in the hands of Titus and the Romans. And in this manner Titus¹ put an end to the war; he returned to Philip his kingdom of Macedonia, but ordained that he should keep aloof from Greece, exacted from him an indemnity of a thousand talents, took away all his ships except ten, and taking one of his sons, Demetrius, to serve as hostage, sent him off to Rome, thus providing in the best manner for the present and anticipating the future.

For Hannibal the African, a most inveterate enemy of Rome and an exile from his native country, had already at that time² come to the court of King

¹ Rather, the ten commissioners sent from Rome to settle the affairs of Greece (chapter x. 1). Cf. Livy, xxxiii. 30 (Polybius xviii. 44).

² In 196 B.C., according to Nepos, Hannibal, vii. 6. According to Livy (xxxiii. 47), it was in the following year.

τὸ πρόσθεν προίεναι τῇ τύχῃ τῆς δυνάμεως εὐρουσύνης, ἤδη καὶ καθ' ἑαυτὸν ὑπὸ πραγμάτων μεγάλων, ἃ κατεργασάμενος μέγας ἐπωνομάσθη, πρὸς τὴν ἀπάντων ἡγεμονίαν ἀποβλέποντα, μά-7 λιστα δὲ κατὰ Ῥωμαίων ἀνιστάμενον, εἰ μὴ τοῦτο προῖδὼν ὁ Τίτος ἐμφρόνως ἐνέδωκε πρὸς τὰς διαλύσεις, ἀλλὰ τὸν Φιλιππικὸν ὁ Ἀντιοχικὸς κατειλήφει πόλεμος ἐν τῇ Ἑλλάδι, καὶ συνέστησαν ὑπ' αἰτιῶν ἀμφοτέροι κοινῶν οἱ μέγιστοι τῶν τότε καὶ δυνατώτατοι βασιλέων ἐπὶ τὴν Ῥώμην, ἔσχεν ἂν ἀγῶνας ἐξ ὑπαρχῆς καὶ 8 κινδύνους τῶν πρὸς Ἀννίβαν οὐκ ἐλάττους. νῦν δὲ τῶν πολέμων μέσσην κατὰ καιρὸν ἐμβαλὼν τὴν εἰρήνην ὁ Τίτος, καὶ πρὶν ἄρξασθαι τὸν μέλλοντα διακόψας τὸν παρόντα, τοῦ μὲν τὴν ἐσχάτην ἐλπίδα, τοῦ δὲ τὴν πρώτην ὑφεῖλεν.

Χ. Ἐπεὶ δὲ οἱ δέκα πρέσβεις, οὓς ἡ σύγκλητος ἔπεμψε τῷ Τίτῳ, συνεβούλευον τοὺς μὲν ἄλλους Ἑλληνας ἐλευθεροῦν, Κόρινθον δὲ καὶ Χαλκίδα καὶ
 Δημητριάδα διατηρεῖν ἐμφρούρους ἕνεκα τῆς πρὸς Ἀντίοχον ἀσφαλείας, ἐνταῦθα δὲ ταῖς κατηγορίαις λαμπροὶ λαμπρῶς τὰς πόλεις ἀνερρήγγυσαν Αἰτωλοί, τὸν μὲν Τίτον κελεύοντες τὰς πέδας τῆς Ἑλλάδος λύειν (οὕτω γὰρ ὁ Φίλιππος εἰώθει τὰς 2 προειρημένους πόλεις ὀνομάζειν), τοὺς δ' Ἑλληνας ἐρωτῶντες εἰ κλοιὸν ἔχοντες βαρύτερον μὲν, λειότερον δὲ τοῦ πάλαι τὸν νῦν, χαίρουσι, καὶ θαυμάζουσι τὸν Τίτον ὡς εὐεργέτην, ὅτι τοῦ ποδὸς λύσας τὴν Ἑλλάδα τοῦ τραχήλου δέδεκεν. ἐφ' οἷς ἀχθόμενος ὁ Τίτος καὶ βαρέως φέρων, καὶ δεόμενος τοῦ συνεδρίου, τέλος ἐξέπεισε καὶ ταύτας

TITUS FLAMININUS

Antiochus, and was trying to incite him to further achievements while fortune gave his power successful course. Antiochus himself also, in consequence of the magnitude of his achievements, by which he had won the title of Great, was already fixing his eyes on universal dominion, and had a particular hostility to the Romans. Therefore, had not Titus, in view of all this, made favourable terms of peace, and had the war with Antiochus in Greece found the war with Philip still in progress there, and had a common cause brought these two greatest and most powerful kings of the time into alliance against Rome, that city would have undergone fresh struggles and dangers not inferior to those which marked her war with Hannibal. But as it was, by interposing an opportune peace between the two wars, and by cutting short the existing war before the threatening war began, Titus took away the last hope from Philip, and the first from Antiochus.

X. And now the ten commissioners, who had been sent to Titus by the senate, advised him to give the rest of the Greeks their freedom, but to retain Corinth, Chalcis, and Demetrias under garrisons, as a safeguard against Antiochus. Thereupon the Aetolians stirred up the cities with the most vociferous denunciations, ordering Titus to strike off the shackles of Greece (for that is what Philip was wont to call these three cities), and asking the Greeks whether they were glad to have a fetter now which was smother than the one they had worn before, but heavier; and whether they admired Titus as a benefactor because he had unshackled the foot of Greece and put a collar round her neck. Titus was troubled and distressed at this, and by labouring with the commission τὰς πόλεις ἀνεῖναι τῆς φρουρᾶς, ὅπως ὀλόκληρος ἡ χάρις ὑπάρξῃ παρ' αὐτοῦ τοῖς Ἕλλησιν.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- 3 Ἴσθμίων οὖν ἀγομένων πλῆθος μὲν ἀνθρώπων ἐν τῷ σταδίῳ καθῆστο τὸν γυμνικὸν ἀγῶνα θεωμένων, οἷα δὴ διὰ χρόνων πεπαυμένης μὲν πολέμων τῆς Ἑλλάδος ἐπ' ἐλπίσιν ἐλευθερίας, σαφεῖ δὲ εἰρήνῃ πανηγυριζούσης· τῇ σάλπιγγι δὲ σιω-
- 4 πῆς εἰς ἅπαντας διαδοθείσης, προελθὼν εἰς μέσον ὁ κῆρυξ ἀνείπεν ὅτι Ῥωμαίων ἡ σύγκλητος καὶ Τίτος Κοϊντίος στρατηγὸς ὑπατος καταπολεμήσαντες βασιλέα Φίλιππον καὶ Μακεδόνας, ἀφιασιν ἀφρουρήτους· καὶ ἐλευθέρους καὶ ἀφορολογήτους, νόμοις χρωμένους τοῖς πατρίοις, Κορινθίους, Λοκρούς, Φωκεῖς, Εὐβοέας, Ἀχαιοὺς Φθιώτας, Μάγνητας, Θετταλοὺς, Περραιβοὺς. τὸ μὲν οὖν πρῶτον οὐ πάνυ πάντες οὐδὲ σαφῶς ἐπήκουσαν, ἀλλ' ἀνώμαλος καὶ θορυβώδης κίνησις ἦν ἐν τῷ σταδίῳ θαυμαζόντων καὶ διαπυ-
- 5 θανομένων καὶ πάλιν ἀνείπειν κελευόντων· ὡς δ' αὐθις ἡσυχίας γενομένης ἀναγαγὼν ὁ κῆρυξ τὴν φωνὴν προθυμότερον εἰς ἅπαντας ἐγεγῶνει καὶ διήλθε τὸ κήρυγμα, κραυγὴ μὲν ἄπιστος τὸ μέγεθος διὰ χαρὰν ἐχώρει μέχρι θαλάττης, ὀρθὸν δὲ ἀνείσθηκει τὸ θέατρον, οὐδεὶς δὲ λόγος ἦν τῶν ἀγωνιζομένων, ἔσπευδον δὲ πάντες ἀναπηδῆσαι καὶ δεξιῶσασθαι καὶ προσεῖπειν τὸν σωτῆρα τῆς 375 Ἑλλάδος καὶ πρόμαχον.
- 6 Τὸ δὲ πολλάκις λεγόμενον εἰς ὑπερβολὴν τῆς φωνῆς καὶ μέγεθος ὤφθη τότε. κύρακες γὰρ

TITUS FLAMININUS

finally persuaded it to free these cities also from their garrisons, in order that his gift to the Greeks might be whole and entire.

Accordingly, at the Isthmian games, where a great throng of people were sitting in the stadium and watching the athletic contests (since, indeed, after many years Greece had at last ceased from wars waged in hopes of freedom, and was now holding festival in time of assured peace), the trumpet signalled a general silence, and the herald, coming forward into the midst of the spectators, made proclamation that the Roman senate and Titus Quintus Flamininus proconsular general, having conquered King Philip and the Macedonians, restored to freedom, without garrisons and without imposts, and to the enjoyment of their ancient laws, the Corinthians, the Locrians, the Phocians, the Euboeans, the Achaeans of Phthiotis, the Magnesians, the Thessalians, and the Perrhaebians. At first, then, the proclamation was by no means generally or distinctly heard, but there was a confused and tumultuous movement in the stadium of people who wondered what had been said, and asked one another questions about it, and called out to have the proclamation made again; but when silence had been restored, and the herald in tones that were louder than before and reached the ears of all, had recited the proclamation, a shout of joy arose, so incredibly loud that it reached the sea. The whole audience rose to their feet, and no heed was paid to the contending athletes, but all were eager to spring forward and greet and hail the saviour and champion of Greece.

And that which is often said of the volume and power of the human voice was then apparent to the ὑπερπετόμενοι κατὰ τύχην ἔπεσον εἰς τὸ στάδιον. αἰτία δὲ ἢ τοῦ ἀέρος ῥῆξις· ὅταν γὰρ ἢ φωνὴ πολλὴ καὶ μεγάλη φέρηται, διασπώμενος ὑπ' αὐτῆς οὐκ ἀντερείδει τοῖς πετομένοις, ἀλλ' ὀλίστημα ποιεῖ καθάπερ κενεμβατοῦσιν, εἰ μὴ νῆ Δία πληγῇ τινι μᾶλλον ὡς ὑπὸ βέλους διελαυνόμενα πίπτει καὶ ἀποθνήσκει. δύναται δὲ καὶ περιδίνησις εἶναι τοῦ ἀέρος, οἶον ἐλιγμὸν ἐν πελάγει καὶ παλιρρῦμην τοῦ σάλου διὰ μέγεθος λαμβάνοντος.

XI. Ὁ δ' οὖν Τίτος, εἰ μὴ τάχιστα τῆς θέας διαλυθείσης ὑπιδόμενος τὴν φορὰν τοῦ πλήθους καὶ τὸν δρόμον ἐξέκλινεν, οὐκ ἂν ἐδόκει περιγενέσθαι τοσοῦτων ὁμοῦ καὶ πάντοθεν αὐτῷ περιχεομένων. ὡς δ' ἀπέκαμον περὶ τὴν σκηνὴν αὐτοῦ βοῶντες ἤδη νυκτὸς οὔσης, αὐθις οὔστινας ἴδοιεν ἢ φίλους ἢ πολίτας ἀσπαζόμενοι καὶ περιπλεκόμενοι, πρὸς δεῖπνα καὶ πότους ἐτρέποντο
 2 μετ' ἀλλήλων. ἐν ᾧ καὶ μᾶλλον, ὡς εἰκός, ἠδομένοις ἐπῆει λογίζεσθαι καὶ διαλέγεσθαι περὶ τῆς Ἑλλάδος, ὅσους πολεμήσασα πολέμους διὰ τὴν ἐλευθερίαν οὔπω τύχοι βεβαιότερον οὐδὲ ἡδιον αὐτῆς, ἐτέρων προαγωνισαμένων ὀλίγου δεῖν ἀναίμακτος αὐτῇ καὶ ἀπενθῆς φερομένη τὸ κάλλιστον καὶ περιμαχητότατον ἄθλον. ἦν δ' ἄρα σπάνιον μὲν ἀνδρεία καὶ φρόνησις ἐν ἀνθρώποις, σπανιώτατον δὲ τῶν ἄλλων ἀγαθῶν ὁ δίκαιος.
 3 οἱ γὰρ Ἀγησίλαοι καὶ Λύσανδροι καὶ οἱ Νικίαι

TITUS FLAMININUS

eye. For ravens which chanced to be flying overhead fell down into the stadium. The cause of this was the rupture of the air; for when the voice is borne aloft loud and strong, the air is rent asunder by it and will not support flying creatures, but lets them fall, as if they were over a vacuum, unless, indeed, they are transfixed by a sort of blow, as of a weapon, and fall down dead.¹ It is possible, too, that in such cases there is a whirling motion of the air, which becomes like a waterspout at sea with a reflux flow of the surges caused by their very volume.

XI. Be that as it may, had not Titus, now that the spectacle was given up, at once foreseen the rush and press of the throng and taken himself away, it would seem that he could hardly have survived the concourse of so many people about him at once and from all sides. But when they were tired of shouting about his tent, and night was already come, then, with greetings and embraces for any friends and fellow citizens whom they saw, they betook themselves to banqueting and carousing with one another. And here, their pleasure naturally increasing, they were moved to reason and discourse about Greece, saying that although she had waged many wars for the sake of her freedom, she had not yet obtained a more secure or more delightful exercise of it than now, when others had striven in her behalf, and she herself, almost without a drop of blood or a pang of grief, had borne away the fairest and most enviable of prizes. Verily, they would say, valour and wisdom are rare things among men, but the rarest of all blessings is the just man. For men like Agesilaüs, or Lysander, or Nicias, or Alcibiades could indeed

¹ Cf. the Pompey, xxv. 7.

καὶ οἱ Ἀλκιβιάδαι πολέμους μὲν εὖ διέπειν καὶ μάχας νικᾶν κατὰ τε γῆν καὶ θάλασσαν ἄρχοντες ἠπίσταντο, χρῆσθαι δὲ πρὸς χάριν εὐγενῆ καὶ τὸ καλὸν οἷς κατώρθουν οὐκ ἔγνωσαν, ἀλλ' εἰ τὸ Μαραθῶνιόν τις ἔργον ἀφέλοι καὶ τὴν ἐν Σαλαμῖνι ναυμαχίαν καὶ Πλαταιᾶς καὶ Θερμοπύλας καὶ τὰ πρὸς Εὐρυμέδοντι καὶ τὰ περὶ Κύπρον Κίμωνος ἔργα, πάσας τὰς μάχας ἢ Ἑλλάς ἐπὶ δουλείᾳ μεμάχεται πρὸς αὐτήν, καὶ πᾶν τρόπαιον αὐτῆς συμφορὰ καὶ ὄνειδος ἐπ' αὐτὴν ἔστηκε, τὰ πλείστα κακία καὶ φιλονεικία 4 τῶν ἡγουμένων περιτραπίεσης. ἀλλόφυλοι δὲ ἄνδρες, ἐναύσματα μικρὰ καὶ γλίσχρα κοινωνήματα παλαιοῦ γένους ἔχειν δοκοῦντες, ἀφ' ὧν καὶ λόγῳ τι καὶ γνώμῃ τῶν χρησίμων ὑπάρξει τῇ Ἑλλάδι θαυμαστὸν ἦν, οὗτοι τοῖς μεγίστοις κινδύνοις καὶ πόνοις ἐξελόμενοι τὴν Ἑλλάδα δεσποτῶν χαλεπῶν καὶ τυράννων ἐλευθεροῦσι.

XII. Ταῦτα δὴ τοὺς Ἑλληνας ὑπέειπε καὶ τὰ τῶν ἔργων ὁμολογοῦντα τοῖς κηρύγμασιν. ἅμα γὰρ ἐξέπεμπεν ὁ Τίτος Λέντλου μὲν εἰς Ἀσίαν Βαργυλιήτας ἐλευθερώσοντα, Στερτίνιον δὲ εἰς Θράκην τὰς αὐτόθι πόλεις καὶ νήσους ἀπαλλάξοντα τῶν Φιλίππου φρουρῶν. Πόπλιος δὲ Οὐίλλιος ἔπλει διαλεξόμενος Ἀντιόχῳ περὶ τῆς
 2 τῶν ὑπ' αὐτὸν Ἑλλήνων ἐλευθερίας. αὐτὸς δὲ ὁ Τίτος εἰς Χαλκίδα παρελθὼν, εἶτα πλεύσας ἐκεῖθεν ἐπὶ Μαγνησίαν, ἐξῆγγε τὰς φρουρὰς καὶ τὰς πολιτείας ἀπεδίδου τοῖς δήμοις. ἀγωνοθέτης δὲ Νεμείων ἀποδειχθεὶς ἐν Ἀργεὶ τὴν τε πανηγυριν ἄριστα διέθηκε, καὶ πάλιν ἐκεῖ τοῖς Ἑλλησι τὴν ἐλευθερίαν ὑπὸ κήρυκος ἀνεῖπεν.

TITUS FLAMININUS

conduct wars well, and understood how to be victorious commanders in battles by land and sea, but they would not use their successes so as to win legitimate favour and promote the right. Indeed, if one excepts the action at Marathon, the sea-fight at Salamis, Plataea, Thermopylae, and the achievements of Cimon at the Eurymedon and about Cyprus, Greece has fought all her battles to bring servitude upon herself, and every one of her trophies stands as a memorial of her own calamity and disgrace, since she owed her overthrow chiefly to the baseness and contentiousness of her leaders. Whereas men of another race, who were thought to have only slight sparks and insignificant traces of a common remote ancestry, from whom it was astonishing that any helpful word or purpose should be vouchsafed to Greece—these men underwent the greatest perils and hardships in order to rescue Greece and set her free from cruel despots and tyrants.

XII. So ran the thoughts of the Greeks; and the acts of Titus were consonant with his proclamations. For at once he sent Lentulus to Asia to set Bargylia free, and Stertinius to Thrace to deliver the cities and islands there from Philip's garrisons. Moreover, Publius Villius sailed to have a conference with Antiochus concerning the freedom of the Greeks who were under his sway. Titus himself also paid a visit to Chalcis, and then sailed from there to Magnesia, removing their garrisons and restoring to the peoples their constitutions. He was also appointed master of ceremonies for the Nemean games at Argos, where he conducted the festival in the best possible manner, and once more publicly proclaimed freedom to the

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- 3 ἐπιφοιτῶν τε ταῖς πόλεσιν εὐνομίαν ἄμα καὶ δίκην πολλὴν ὁμόνοιάν τε καὶ φιλοφροσύνην πρὸς ἀλλήλους παρεῖχε, καταπαύων μὲν τὰς στάσεις, κατάγων δὲ τὰς φυγὰς, ἀγαλλόμενος δὲ τῷ πείθειν καὶ διαλλάσσειν τοὺς Ἕλληνας οὐχ ἦπτον ἢ τῷ κεκρατηκέναι τῶν Μακεδόνων, ὥστε μικρότατον ἤδη τὴν ἐλευθερίαν δοκεῖν ὦν εὐεργετοῦντο.
- 4 Ξενοκράτην μὲν οὖν τὸν φιλόσοφον, ὅτε Λυ- 37f κούργος αὐτὸν ὁ ῥήτωρ ὑπὸ τῶν τελωνῶν ἀγόμενον πρὸς τὸ μετοίκιον ἀφείλετο καὶ τοῖς ἄγουσιν ἐπέθηκε δίκην τῆς ἀσελγείας, λέγεται τοῖς παισὶν ἀπαντήσαντα τοῦ Λυκούργου, “ Καλὴν γε ὑμῶν, ὦ παῖδες,” φάναι, “ τῷ πατρὶ χάριν ἀποδίδωμι· πάντες γὰρ αὐτὸν ἐπαινοῦσιν ἐφ’ οἷς ἔπραξε,” Τίτῳ δὲ καὶ Ῥωμαίοις ὦν τοὺς Ἕλληνας εὐεργέτησαν οὐκ εἰς ἐπαίνους μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ πίστιν ἐν πᾶσιν ἀνθρώποις καὶ δύναμιν ἢ χάρις ἀπῆντα
- 5 δικαίως. οὐ γὰρ προσδεχόμενοι μόνον τοὺς ἡγεμόνας αὐτῶν, ἀλλὰ καὶ μεταπεμπόμενοι καὶ καλοῦντες ἐνεχειρίζον αὐτούς. οὐδὲ δῆμοι καὶ πόλεις, ἀλλὰ καὶ βασιλεῖς ὑφ’ ἐτέρων ἀδικούμενοι βασιλέων κατέφευγον εἰς τὰς ἐκείνων χεῖρας, ὥστε ἐν βραχεῖ χρόνῳ, τάχα πού καὶ θεοῦ συνεφαπτομένου, πάντα αὐτοῖς ὑπήκοα γενέσθαι. καὶ αὐτὸς δὲ μέγιστον ἐφρόνησεν ἐπὶ
- 6 τῇ τῆς Ἑλλάδος ἐλευθερώσει. ἀνατιθεὶς γὰρ εἰς Δελφοὺς ἀσπίδας ἀργυρᾶς καὶ τὸν ἑαυτοῦ θυρεὸν ἐπέγραψε·

TITUS FLAMININUS

Greeks. Then he visited the different cities, establishing among them law and order, abundant justice, concord, and mutual friendliness. He quieted their factions and restored their exiles, and plumed himself on his persuading and reconciling the Greeks more than on his conquest of the Macedonians, so that their freedom presently seemed to them the least of his benefactions.

Xenocrates the philosopher, as the story runs, was once being haled away to prison by the tax-collectors for not having paid the alien's tax, but was rescued out of their hands by Lycurgus the orator, who also visited the officials with punishment for their impudence. Xenocrates afterwards met the sons of Lycurgus, and said: "My boys, I am making a noble return to your father for his kindness towards me; for all the world is praising him for what he did." In the case of Titus and the Romans, however, gratitude for their benefactions to the Greeks brought them, not merely praises, but also confidence among all men and power, and justly too. For men not only received the officers appointed by them, but actually sent for them and invited them and put themselves in their hands. And this was true not only of peoples and cities, nay, even kings who had been wronged by other kings fled for refuge into the hands of Roman officials, so that in a short time—and perhaps there was also divine guidance in this—everything became subject to them. But Titus himself took most pride in his liberation of Greece. For in dedicating at Delphi some silver bucklers and his own long shield, he provided them with this inscription:—

Ζηνὸς ἰὼ κραιπναῖσι γεγαθότες ἵπποσύναισι κούροι, ἰὼ Σπάρτας Τυνδαρίδαι βασιλεῖς, Αἰνεάδας Τίτος ὕμμιν ὑπέρτατον ὄπασε δῶρον, Ἑλλήνων τεύξας παισὶν ἐλευθερίαν.

7 ἀνέθηκε δὲ καὶ χρυσοῦν τῷ Ἀπόλλωνι στέφανον ἐπιγράψας.

Τόνδε τοι ἄμβροσίοισιν ἐπὶ πλοκάμοισιν ἔοικε¹
 κεῖσθαι, Λατοῖδα, χρυσοφαῆ στέφανον, ὃν² πόρεν Αἰνεαδᾶν ταγὸς μέγας. ἀλλ', Ἐκάεργε,
 ἀλκᾶς τῷ θείῳ κῦδος ὄπαζε Τίτῳ.

8 Τῇ δ' οὖν³ Κορινθίων πόλει πρὸς τοὺς Ἕλληνας τὸ αὐτὸ δις ἤδη συμβέβηκε· καὶ γὰρ Τίτος ἐν Κορίνθῳ τότε καὶ Νέρων αὐθις καθ' ἡμᾶς ἐν
 Κορίνθῳ παραπλησίως Ἰσθμίων ἀγομένων τοὺς Ἕλληνας ἐλευθέρους καὶ αὐτονόμους ἀφήκαν, ὁ μὲν διὰ κήρυκος, ὡς εἴρηται, Νέρων δὲ αὐτὸς ἐπὶ τῆς ἀγορᾶς ἀπὸ βήματος ἐν τῷ πλήθει δημηγο-ρήσας. ἀλλὰ ταῦτα μὲν ὕστερον.

XIII. Ὁ δὲ Τίτος τότε καλλίστου καὶ δικαιο-τάτου τοῦ πρὸς Νάβιν ἀρξάμενος πολέμου, τὸν Λακεδαιμονίων ἐξωλέστατον καὶ παρανομώτατον τύραννον, ἐν τῷ τέλει διεψεύσατο τὰς τῆς Ἑλλάδος ἐλπίδας, ἐλεῖν παρασχὼν οὐκ ἐθειλήσας, ἀλλὰ σπείσάμενος καὶ προέμενος τὴν Σπάρτην ἀναξίως δουλεύουσιν, εἴτε δείσας μὴ τοῦ πολέμου μῆκος λαμβάνοντος ἄλλος ἀπὸ Ῥώμης ἐπελθὼν στρα-

¹ ἔοικε an anonymous correction adopted by Sintenis² and Blass; Coraës and Bekker retain the vulgate ἔθηκε.

² ὃν Bekker corrects to ὅς, after Jacobs.

³ δ' οὖν Bekker and Blass: γοῦν.

TITUS FLAMININUS

“O ye sons of Zeus, whose joy is in swift horsemanship, O ye Tyndaridae, princes of Sparta, Titus, a descendant of Aeneas, has brought you a most excellent gift, he who for the sons of the Greeks wrought freedom.”

He also dedicated a golden wreath to Apollo, and it bore this inscription :—

“This will fitly lie on thine ambrosial locks, O son of Leto, this wreath with sheen of gold ; it is the gift of a great leader whose descent is from Aeneas. Therefore, O Far-darter, bestow upon the god-like Titus the glory due to his prowess.”

It follows, then, that the city of Corinth has twice now been the scene of the same benefaction to the Greeks ; for it was in Corinth that Titus at this time, and at Corinth that Nero again in our own times—in both cases at the Isthmian games—made the Greeks free and self-governing, Titus by voice of herald, but Nero in a public address which he delivered in person, on a tribunal in the market-place amidst the multitude. This, however, came at a later time.¹

XIII. Titus now began a most honourable and righteous war, the war against Nabis, that most pernicious and lawless tyrant of Sparta, but in the end he disappointed the hopes of Greece. For though it was in his power to capture the tyrant, he refused to do so, and made peace with him, thus leaving Sparta to the fate of an unworthy servitude. He was led to this step either by his fear that a protraction of the war would bring another general from Rome

¹ In 67 A.D.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

τηγὸς ἀνέληται τὴν δόξαν, εἴτε φιλονεκία καὶ 2 ζηλοτυπία τῶν Φιλοποίμενος τιμῶν, ὃν ἔν τε τοῖς ἄλλοις ἅπασιν ἄνδρα δεινότατον τῶν Ἑλλήνων ὄντα καὶ περὶ ἐκείνον τὸν πόλεμον ἔργα θαυμαστὰ τόλμης καὶ δεινότητος ἀποδειξάμενον ἴσα τῷ Τίτῳ κυδαίνοντες Ἀχαιοὶ καὶ τιμῶντες ἐν τοῖς θεάτροις ἐλύπουν ἐκείνον, οὐκ ἀξιούντα Ῥωμαίων ὑπάτῳ προπολεμοῦντι τῆς Ἑλλάδος ἄνθρωπον Ἀρκάδα, μικρῶν καὶ ὁμόρων πολέμων στρατηγόν, ὅμοια
 3 θαυμάζεσθαι παρ' αὐτοῖς. οὐ μὴν ἄλλ' αὐτὸς ὁ Τίτος ὑπὲρ τούτων ἀπελογεῖτο, καταθέσθαι τὸν πόλεμον ὡς ἐώρα σὺν κακῷ μεγάλῳ τῶν ἄλλων Σπαρτιατῶν ἀπολούμενον τὸν τύραννον.

Τῶν δὲ Ἀχαιῶν αὐτῷ πολλὰ πρὸς τιμὴν ψηφισαμένων οὐδὲν ἐδόκει πρὸς τὰς εὐεργεσίας ἐξισοῦσθαι πλὴν μιᾶς δωρεᾶς, ἣν ἐκείνος ἀντὶ 4 πάντων ἠγάπησεν. ἦν δὲ τοιάδε. Ῥωμαίων οἱ δυστυχήσαντες ἐν τῷ πρὸς Ἀντίβαν πολέμῳ πολλαχοῦ μὲν ὄνιοι γενόμενοι καὶ διασπαρέντες ἐδούλευον· ἐν δὲ τῇ Ἑλλάδι χίλιοι καὶ διακόσιοι τὸ πλῆθος ἦσαν, αἰεὶ μὲν οἰκτροὶ τῆς μεταβολῆς, τότε δὲ καὶ μᾶλλον, ὡς εἰκός, ἐντυγχάνοντες οἱ μὲν υἱοῖς, οἱ δὲ ἀδελφοῖς, οἱ δὲ συνθήεσιν, ἐλευθέ-5 ροις δοῦλοι καὶ νικῶσιν αἰχμάλωτοι. τούτους ὁ 377 μὲν Τίτος οὐκ ἀφείλετο τῶν κεκτημένων, καίπερ ἀνιώμενος ἐπ' αὐτοῖς, οἱ δὲ Ἀχαιοὶ λυτρωσάμενοι

¹ Cf. the Philopoemen, xv. 1-3.

TITUS FLAMININUS

to succeed him and rob him of his glory, or by his jealous displeasure at the honours paid to Philopoemen. For in all other matters Philopoemen was a most capable man among the Greeks, and in that war particularly he displayed astonishing deeds of ability and daring, so that he was extolled by the Achaeans as much as Titus, and equally honoured in their theatres. This annoyed Titus, who thought it out of keeping that a man of Arcadia, who had held command in small border wars, should receive just as much admiration from the Achaeans as a Roman consul, who was waging war in behalf of Greece.¹ However, Titus himself had this to say in defence of his course, namely, that he put an end to the war when he saw that the destruction of the tyrant would involve the rest of the Spartans also in serious disaster.²

The Achaeans voted Titus many honours, none of which seemed commensurate with his benefactions except one gift, and this caused him as much satisfaction as all the rest put together. And this was the gift: The Romans who were unhappily taken prisoners in the war with Hannibal had been sold about hither and thither, and were serving as slaves. In Greece there were as many as twelve hundred of them. The change in their lot made them pitiful objects always, but then even more than ever, naturally, when they fell in with sons, or brothers, or familiar friends, as the case might be, slaves with freemen and captives with victors. These men Titus would not take away from their owners, although he was distressed at their condition, but the Achaeans

² Titus offered this defence of his course to the congress of Greek states at Corinth (Livy, xxxiv. 48 f.).

πέντε μνῶν ἕκαστον ἄνδρα καὶ συναγαγόντες εἰς ταῦτὸ πάντα ἤδη περὶ πλοῦν ὄντι τῷ Τίτῳ παρέδωκαν, ὥστε αὐτὸν εὐφραϊνόμενον ἀποπλεῖν, ἀπὸ καλῶν ἔργων καλὰς ἀμοιβὰς καὶ πρεπούσας ἀνδρῶν 6 μεγάλων καὶ φιλοπολίτην κεκομισμένον· ὃ δὲ δοκεῖ πρὸς τὸν θρίαμβον αὐτῷ πάντων ὑπάρξει λαμπρότατον. οἱ γὰρ ἄνδρες οὗτοι, καθάπερ ἔθος ἐστὶ τοῖς οἰκέταις ὅταν ἐλευθερωθῶσιν, ξύρεσθαί τε τὰς κεφαλὰς καὶ πιλία φορεῖν, ταῦτα δράσαντες αὐτοὶ θριαμβεύοντι τῷ Τίτῳ παρείποντο.

XIV. Καλλίῳ δὲ καὶ τὰ λάφυρα πομπευόμενα παρέιχεν ὄψιν, Ἑλληνικὰ κράνη καὶ πέλται Μακεδονικαὶ καὶ σάρισαι. τό τε τῶν χρημάτων πλῆθος οὐκ ὀλίγον ἦν, ὡς ἀναγράφουσιν οἱ περὶ Τουδιτανὸν ἐν τῷ θριάμβῳ κομισθῆναι χρυσοῦ μὲν συγκεχωνεμένου λίτρας τρισχιλίας ἑπτακοσίας δεκατρεῖς, ἀργύρου δὲ τετρακισμυρίας
 2 τρισχιλίας διακοσίας ἐβδομήκοντα, φιλιππέιους δὲ χρυσοῦς μυρίους τετρακισχιλίους πεντακοσίους δεκατέσσαρας, χωρὶς δὲ τούτων τὰ χίλια τάλαντα Φίλιππος ὤφειλεν. ἀλλὰ ταῦτα μὲν ὕστερον ἐπίεσθησαν Ῥωμαῖοι, μάλιστα τοῦ Τίτου συμπράξαντος, ἀφείναι τῷ Φιλίππῳ, καὶ σύμμαχον ἐψηφίσαντο, καὶ τὸν υἱὸν ἀπήλλαξαν αὐτῷ τῆς ὀμηρείας.

XV. Ἐπεὶ δὲ ὁ Ἄντιοχος εἰς τὴν Ἑλλάδα ναυσὶ πολλαῖς καὶ στρατῷ περαιωθεὶς ἀφίστη τὰς πόλεις καὶ διεστασίαζεν, Αἰτωλῶν αὐτῷ συνεπιλαμβανομένων καὶ πάσαι διακειμένων πρὸς ransomed them all at five minas¹ the man, collected them together, and made a present of them to Titus just as he was about to embark, so that he sailed for home with a glad heart; his noble deeds had brought him a noble recompense, and one befitting a great man who loved his fellow citizens. This appears to have furnished his triumph with its most glorious feature. For these men shaved their heads and wore felt caps, as it is customary for slaves to do when they are set free, and in this habit followed the triumphal car of Titus.

¹ The mina was one sixtieth part of a talent, or one hundred drachmas.

TITUS FLAMININUS

XIV. But a more beautiful show was made by the spoils of war which were displayed in the procession—Greek helmets and Macedonian bucklers and pikes. Besides, the amount of money exhibited was large. Tuditanus records that there were carried in the procession three thousand seven hundred and thirteen pounds of gold bullion, forty-three thousand two hundred and seventy pounds of silver, and fourteen thousand five hundred and fourteen gold coins bearing Philip's effigy.² And apart from this money Philip owed his fine of a thousand talents.³ This fine, however, the Romans were afterwards persuaded to remit to Philip, and this was chiefly due to the efforts of Titus; they also made Philip their ally, and sent back his son whom they held as hostage.

XV. Presently, however, Antiochus crossed into Greece⁴ with many ships and a large army, and began to stir the cities into faction and revolt. The Aetolians made common cause with him, a people which had long been most inimically disposed towards ² These "Philip's" were nearly equivalent to sovereigns. Cf. Livy's description of the triumph (xxxiv. 52).

³ Cf. chapter ix. 5. ⁴ In the autumn of 192 B.C.

τὸν Ῥωμαίων δῆμον ἐχθρῶς καὶ πολεμικῶς, ὑπό-θεσιν τοῦ πολέμου καὶ πρόφασιν διδόντων ἐλευ-θεροῦν τοὺς Ἕλληνας οὐδὲν δεομένους (ἐλεύθεροι 2 γὰρ ἦσαν), ἀλλ' εὐπρεπεστέρας αἰτίας ἀπορία τῷ καλλίστῳ τῶν ὀνομάτων χρῆσθαι διδασκόντων, καὶ σφόδρα δέισαντες οἱ Ῥωμαῖοι τὴν ἀνύστασιν καὶ δόξαν αὐτοῦ τῆς δυνάμεως, στρατηγὸν μὲν ὑπατον τοῦ πολέμου Μάνιον Ἀκίλιον κατέπεμψαν, πρεσβευτὴν δὲ Τίτον διὰ τοὺς Ἕλληνας, ὧν τοὺς μὲν εὐθὺς ὄφθεις ἐποίησε βεβαιοτέρους, τοὺς δὲ ἀρχομένους νοσεῖν ὥσπερ τι¹ ἐν καιρῷ φάρμακον ἐνδιδοὺς τὴν πρὸς αὐτὸν εὐνοίαν ἔστησε καὶ 3 διεκώλυσε ἐξαμαρτεῖν. ὀλίγοι δὲ αὐτὸν ἐξέφυγον ἤδη προκατειλημμένοι καὶ διεφθαρμένοι παντάπασι ὑπὸ τῶν Αἰτωλῶν, οὓς καίπερ ὀργισθεῖς καὶ παροξυνθεῖς ὅμως μετὰ τὴν μάχην περιεποίησεν. Ἀντίοχος γὰρ ἠττηθεῖς ἐν Θερμοπύλαις καὶ φυγὼν εὐθὺς εἰς Ἀσίαν ἀπέπλευσε, Μάνιος δ' ὁ ὑπατος τοὺς μὲν αὐτὸς ἐπιὼν τῶν Αἰτωλῶν ἐπολιόρκει, τοὺς δὲ τῷ βασιλεῖ Φιλίππῳ συνεχώ-4 ρησεν ἐξαιρεῖν. ἀγομένων δὲ καὶ φερομένων ὑπὸ τοῦ Μακεδόνοιο τοῦτο μὲν Δολόπων καὶ Μαγνήτων, τοῦτο δὲ Ἀθαμάνων καὶ Ἀπεραντῶν, αὐτοῦ δὲ τοῦ Μανίου τὴν μὲν Ἡράκλειαν διαπεπορθηκότος, τὴν δὲ Ναύπακτον Αἰτωλῶν ἐχόντων πολιορκούντος, οἰκτείρων τοὺς Ἕλληνας ὁ Τίτος διέπλευσεν

¹ ὥσπερ τι Coraës, Bekker, and Blass, after Stephanus : ὥσπερ τις.

TITUS FLAMININUS

the Romans, and they suggested to him, as a pretext that would account for the war, that he should offer the Greeks their freedom. The Greeks did not want to be set free, for they were free already; but for lack of a more appropriate ground for his action the Aetolians taught Antiochus to make use of that fairest of all names. The Romans, greatly alarmed by reports of defection among the Greeks and of the power of Antiochus, sent out Manius Acilius as consular general for the war, but made Titus his lieutenant to please the Greeks. The mere sight of him confirmed some of these in their loyalty to Rome, while to others, who were beginning to be infected with disloyalty, he administered a timely medicine, as it were, in the shape of good will towards himself, and thus checked their malady and prevented them from going wrong. A few, however, escaped his influence, having been already won over beforehand and totally corrupted by the Aetolians, but even these, in spite of his vexation and anger, were spared by him after the battle. For Antiochus was defeated at Thermopylae¹ and put to flight, and at once sailed back to Asia; while Manius the consul went against some of the Aetolians himself and besieged them, leaving others to King Philip to destroy. And so it came about that the Dolopians and Magnesians here, the Athamanians and Aperantians there, were harried and plundered by the Macedonians, while Manius himself, after sacking Heracleia, was engaged in the siege of Naupactus, which the Aetolians held. Then Titus, out of pity for the Greeks, sailed across from Peloponnesus to ¹ In 191 B.C. For a description of the battle, cf. Livy, xxxvi. 14-21.

ἐκ Πελοποννήσου πρὸς τὸν ὕπατον. καὶ πρῶτον μὲν ἐπετίμησεν εἰ νενικηκῶς αὐτὸς τὰ ἔπαθλα τοῦ πολέμου Φίλιππον ἐὰν φέρεσθαι, καὶ τριβόμενος περὶ μιᾶ πόλει κάθηται δι' ὀργήν, ἔθνη δὲ οὐκ 5 ὀλίγα καὶ βασιλείας Μακεδόνες αἰροῦσιν. ἔπειτα τῶν πολιορκουμένων, ὡς εἶδον αὐτόν, ἀπὸ τοῦ τείχους ἀνακαλοῦντων καὶ χεῖρας ὀρεγόντων καὶ δεομένων, τότε μὲν οὐδὲν εἰπών, ἀλλὰ στραφεὶς καὶ δακρύσας ἀπῆλθεν, ὕστερον δὲ διαλεχθεὶς τῷ Μανίῳ καὶ καταπαύσας τὸν θυμὸν αὐτοῦ διεπρά-ξατο τοῖς Αἰτωλοῖς ἀνοχὰς δοθῆναι, καὶ χρόνον ἐν ᾧ πρεσβεύσαντες εἰς Ῥώμην μετρίου τινὸς τυχεῖν ἀξιώσουσι.

XVI. Πλείστον δὲ ἀγῶνα καὶ πόνον αὐτῷ 378
 παρῆχον αἱ περὶ Χαλκιδέων δεήσεις πρὸς τὸν Μάνιον, ἐν ὀργῇ γεγονότων διὰ τὸν γάμον ὃν παρ' αὐτῶν ἔγημεν Ἀντίοχος ἤδη τοῦ πολέμου συνε-στῶτος, οὐ καθ' ὥραν οὐδὲ κατὰ καιρὸν, ἀλλ' ἐρασθεὶς ἀνὴρ πρεσβύτερος κόρης, ἢ θυγάτηρ μὲν ἦν Κλεοπτολέμου, καλλίστη δὲ λέγεται παρθένων 2 γενέσθαι. τοῦτο τοὺς Χαλκιδεῖς ἐποίησε βασιλί-σαι προθυμότατα καὶ τὴν πόλιν αὐτῷ πρὸς τὸν πόλεμον ὀρμητήριον παρασχεῖν. ἐκεῖνος μὲν οὖν ὡς τάχιστα μετὰ τὴν μάχην φεύγων προσέμιξε τῇ Χαλκίδι, τὴν τε κόρην ἀναλαβὼν καὶ τὰ χρήματα καὶ τοὺς φίλους εἰς Ἀσίαν ἀπέπλευσε· τὸν δὲ Μάνιον εὐθύς ἐπὶ τοὺς Χαλκιδεῖς σὺν ὀργῇ

TITUS FLAMININUS

the consul. At first he chided Manius because, although the victory was his own, he was permitting Philip to carry off the prizes of the war, and to gratify his anger was wasting time in the siege of a single city, while the Macedonians were subduing many nations and kingdoms. Then, when the besieged citizens caught sight of him from their walls and called aloud upon him and stretched out their hands to him imploringly, he turned away, burst into tears, and left the place, without saying anything more at the time; afterwards, however, he had an interview with Manius, put an end to his wrath, and induced him to grant the Aetolians a truce, and time in which to send an embassy to Rome with a plea for moderate terms.

XVI. But the hardest toils and struggles fell to Titus when he interceded with Manius in behalf of the Chalcidians. They had incurred the consul's wrath because of the marriage which Antiochus had made in their city after the war had already begun, a marriage which was not only unseasonable, but unsuitable for the king's years, since he was an elderly man and had fallen in love with a girl (the girl was a daughter of Cleoptolemus, and is said to have been most beautiful among maidens).¹ This marriage induced the Chalcidians to take the king's side most zealously and allow their city to be his base of operations for the war. Antiochus, therefore, fleeing with all speed after the battle at Thermopylae, came to Chalcis, and taking with him his girl-wife, his treasure, and his friends, sailed back to Asia; but Manius immediately marched against Chalcis in a rage. He was accompanied, however, by Titus, who πορευόμενον ὁ Τίτος παρακολουθῶν ἐμάλαττε καὶ παρητείτο καὶ τέλος ἔπεισε καὶ κατεπράυνεν, αὐτοῦ τε καὶ τῶν ἐν τέλει Ῥωμαίων δεόμενος.

¹ Cf. the Philopoemen, xvii. 1.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- 3 Οὕτω διασωθέντες οἱ Χαλκιδεῖς τὰ κάλλιστα καὶ μέγιστα τῶν παρ' αὐτοῖς ἀναθημάτων τῷ Τίτῳ καθιέρωσαν, ὧν ἐπιγραφὰς ἔστι τοιαύτας ἄχρι νῦν ὄραν· “Ὁ δῆμος Τίτῳ καὶ Ἡρακλεῖ τὸ γυμνάσιον,” ἐτέρωθι δὲ πάλιν, “Ὁ δῆμος Τίτῳ 4 καὶ Ἀπόλλωνι τὸ Δελφίνιον.” ἔτι δὲ καὶ καθ' ἡμᾶς ἱερεὺς χειροτονητὸς ἀπεδείκνυτο Τίτου, καὶ θύσαντες αὐτῷ τῶν σπονδῶν γενομένων ἄδουσι παιᾶνα πεποιημένον, οὐ τᾶλλα διὰ μῆκος ἡμεῖς παρέντες ἀνεγράψαμεν ἢ παυόμενοι τῆς ᾠδῆς λέγουσι· πίστιν δὲ Ῥωμαίων σέβομεν, τὰν μεγαλευκτοτάταν ὄρκοις φυλάσσειν·

μέλπετε κούραι,
Ζῆνα μέγαν Ῥώμαν τε Τίτον θ' ἅμα Ῥωμαίων τε πίστιν·
ἰήϊε Παιάν, ὦ Τίτε σῶτερ.

- XVII. Ἦσαν δὲ καὶ παρὰ τῶν ἄλλων Ἑλλήνων¹ τιμαὶ πρέπουσαι, καὶ τὸ τὰς τιμὰς ἀληθινὰς ποιοῦν, εὐνοια θυμαστὴ δι' ἐπιείκειαν ἤθους. καὶ γὰρ εἴ τισιν ἐκ πραγμάτων ἢ φιλοτιμίας ἔνεκα, καθάπερ Φιλοποίμενι καὶ πάλιν Διοφάνει στρατηγούντι τῶν Ἀχαιῶν, προσέκρουσεν, οὐκ ἦν βαρὺς οὐδ' εἰς ἔργα διατείνων ὁ θυμὸς, ἀλλ' ἐν λόγῳ παρρησίαν τινὰ πολιτικὴν ἔχοντι παυόμενος.
2 πικρὸς μὲν οὖν οὐδενί, πολλοῖς δὲ ὀξὺς ἐδόκει καὶ

¹ τῶν ἄλλων Ἑλλήνων Coraës and Blass, after Bryan: τῶν Ἑλλήνων.

TITUS FLAMININUS

tried to mollify and intercede with him and at last won him over and calmed him down by entreaties addressed both to him and the other Romans in authority.

Having been thus saved by Titus, the Chalcidians dedicated to him the largest and most beautiful of the votive offerings in their city, and on them such inscriptions as these are still to be seen: "This gymnasium is dedicated by the people to Titus and Heracles," and again in another place, "This Delphinium is dedicated by the people to Titus and Apollo." Moreover, even down to our own day a priest of Titus is duly elected and appointed, and after sacrifice and libations in his honour, a set hymn of praise to him is sung: it is too long to be quoted entire, and so I will give only the closing words of the song:

"And the Roman faith we revere, which we have solemnly vowed to cherish; sing, then, ye maidens, to great Zeus, to Rome, to Titus, and to the Roman faith: hail, Paean Apollo! hail, Titus our saviour!"

XVII. He also received from the rest of the Greeks fitting honours, and these were made sincere by the astonishing good will which his equitable nature called forth. For even if the conduct of affairs or the spirit of rivalry brought him into collision with any of them, as, for instance, with Philopoemen, and again with Diophanes the general of the Achaeans, his resentment was not heavy, nor did it carry him into violent acts, but when it had vented itself in the outspoken language of free public debate, there was an end of it. However, he was never bitter,

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

κοῦφος εἶναι τὴν φύσιν, ἄλλως δὲ συγγενέσθαι πάντων ἡδιστος καὶ εἰπεῖν ἐπίχαρις μετὰ δεινότητος. Ἀχαιοὺς μὲν γὰρ σφετεριζομένους τὴν Ζακυνθίων νῆσον ὑποτρέπων ἔφη κινδυνεύσειν, ἂν ὥσπερ αἱ χελῶναι πορρωτέρω τὴν κεφαλὴν τῆς Πελοποννήσου προτείνωσι· Φιλίππου δέ, ὀπηνίκα περὶ σπονδῶν καὶ εἰρήνης τὸ πρῶτον εἰς λόγους συνῆσαν, εἰπόντος μετὰ πολλῶν ἤκειν ἐκείνου, αὐτὸν δὲ μόνον, ὑπολαβὼν ὁ Τίτος, “ Αὐτὸν γάρ,” ἔφη, “ μόνον ἐποίησας ἀποκτείνας τοὺς φίλους 3 καὶ συγγενεῖς.” ἐπεὶ δὲ Δεινοκράτης ὁ Μεσσήνιος ἐν Ῥώμῃ παρὰ πότον μεθυσθεὶς ὠρχήσατο λαβὼν ἰμάτιον γυναικεῖον, τῇ δ' ὑστεραία τὸν Τίτον ἠξίου βοηθεῖν αὐτῷ διανοουμένῳ τὴν Μεσσήνην ἀφιστάναι τῶν Ἀχαιῶν, ταῦτα μὲν ἔφη σκέψεσθαι, θαυμάζειν δὲ ἐκείνου, εἰ τηλικαύταις ἐπικεχει-ρηκῶς πράξειςιν ὀρχεῖσθαι δύναται παρὰ πότον
 4 καὶ ἄδειν. πρὸς δὲ τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς τῶν παρὰ Ἀντιόχου πρέσβων πλήθος τι¹ τῆς βασιλικῆς στρατιᾶς καταλεγόντων καὶ καταριθμουμένων πολλὰς προσηγορίας, ὁ Τίτος ἔφη δειπνοῦντος αὐτοῦ παρὰ τῷ ξένῳ καὶ μεμφομένου τὸ πλήθος τῶν κρεῶν καὶ θαυμάζοντος πόθεν οὕτω ποικίλης ἀγορᾶς εὐπόρησεν, εἰπεῖν τὸν ξένον, ὡς ὕεια πάντα ἐστὶ τῇ σκευασίᾳ διαφέροντα καὶ τοῖς ἠδύσμασι.
 5 “ Μὴ τοίνυν,” ἔφη, “ μηδὲ ὑμεῖς, ὦ ἄνδρες Ἀχαιοί,

¹ πλήθος τι Coraës and Bekker have πλήθος τε, after Bryan.

TITUS FLAMININUS

although many imputed hastiness and levity to his nature, and in general he was a most agreeable companion and able to say a graceful thing with force. For instance, when he was trying to dissuade the Achaeans from appropriating the island of Zacynthos, he said it would be dangerous for them, like a tortoise, to stick their head out of its Peloponnesian shell.¹ Again, when he held his first conference with Philip concerning a truce and peace, and Philip remarked that Titus had come with many attendants while he himself had come alone, Titus answered, "Yes, thou hast made thyself alone by slaying thy friends and kindred."² Again, when Deinocrates the Messenian, who had taken too much wine at a drinking-party in Rome, and after putting on a woman's robe had executed a dance, on the following day asked Titus to assist him in his plan to separate Messene from the Achaean league, Titus said he would consider the matter; "But I am amazed," said he, "that when thou hast matters of so great moment in hand, thou canst dance and sing at a drinking-party."³ And once more, when an embassy from Antiochus was recounting to the Achaeans the vast multitude of the king's forces and enumerating them all by their various appellations, Titus said that once, when he was dining with a friend, he criticised the multitude of meats that were served, wondering where he had obtained so varied a supply; whereupon his host told him they were all swine's flesh, and differed only in the way they were cooked and dressed. "And so in your case," said he, "men of

¹ Cf. Livy, xxxvi. 32; Plutarch, Morals, p. 197 b.

² Cf. Morals, p. 197 a (Polybius, xviii. 7).

³ Cf. the Philopoemen, xviii. ff. (Polybius, xxiii. 5).

θαυμίζετε τὴν Ἀντιόχου δύναμιν λογχοφόρους καὶ ξυστοφόρους καὶ πεζεταίρους ἀκούοντες πάντες γὰρ οὗτοι Σύροι εἰσὶν ὄπλαριοις διαφέροντες.”

XVIII. Μετὰ δὲ τὰς Ἑλληνικὰς πράξεις καὶ 379
τὸν Ἀντιοχικὸν πόλεμον ἀπεδείχθη τιμητής, ἥτις ἐστὶν ἀρχὴ μεγίστη καὶ τρόπον τινὰ τῆς πολιτείας ἐπιτελείωσις. καὶ συνῆρχε μὲν αὐτῷ Μαρκέλλου τοῦ πεντάκις ὑπάτευσαντος υἱός, ἐξέβαλον δὲ τῆς βουλῆς τῶν οὐκ ἄγαν ἐπιφανῶν τέσσαρας, προσεδέξαντο δὲ πολίτας ἀπογραφομένους πάντας, ὅσοι γονέων ἐλευθέρων ἦσαν, ἀναγκασθέντες ὑπὸ τοῦ δημάρχου Τερεντίου Κουλέωνος, ὃς ἐπηρεάζων τοῖς ἀριστοκρατικοῖς ἔπεισε τὸν δῆμον ταῦτα ψηφίσασθαι.

- 2 Ἐὼν δὲ γνωριμωτάτων κατ' αὐτὸν ἀνδρῶν καὶ μεγίστων ἐν τῇ πόλει διαφερομένων πρὸς ἀλλήλους, Ἀφρικανοῦ Σκηπίωνος καὶ Μάρκου Κάτωνος, τὸν μὲν προέγραψε τῆς βουλῆς, ὡς ἄριστον ἄνδρα καὶ πρῶτον, Κάτωνι δ' εἰς ἔχθραν ἦλθε συμφορᾷ τοιαύτῃ χρησάμενος. ἀδελφὸς ἦν Γίτῳ Λεύκιος Φλαμινῖνος, οὔτε τὰ ἄλλα προσεικῶς ἐκείνῳ τὴν φύσιν ἔν τε ταῖς ἡδοναῖς ἀνελεύθερος δεινῶς
3 καὶ ὀλιγωρότατος τοῦ πρέποντος. τούτῳ συνῆν μειρακίσκος ἐρώμενος, ὃν καὶ στρατιᾶς ἄρχων ἐπήγετο καὶ διέπων ἐπαρχίας εἶχεν αἰεὶ περὶ αὐτόν. ἐν οὖν πόντῳ τινὶ θρυπτόμενος πρὸς τὸν

¹ Cf. Morals, p. 197 c (Livy, xxxv. 49).

TITUS FLAMININUS

Achaia, do not be astonished when you hear of the Spear-bearers and Lance-bearers and Foot-companions in the army of Antiochus; for they are all Syrians and differ only in the way they are armed." ¹

XVIII. After his achievements in Greece and the war with Antiochus, Titus was appointed censor.² This is the highest office at Rome, and in a manner the culmination of a political career. Titus had as colleague in this office a son of the Marcellus³ who had been five times consul, and the two censors ejected from the senate four men of lesser note, and received into citizenship all who offered themselves for enrolment, provided they were born of free parents. To this step they were forced by the tribune Terentius Culeo, who wanted to spite the nobility and so persuaded the people to vote the measure.

The two men of his time who were most notable and had the greatest influence in the city, Scipio Africanus and Marcus Cato, were at variance with one another. Of these, Titus appointed Scipio to be Dean of the Senate,⁴ believing him to be its best and foremost man; but with Cato he came into hostile relations, owing to the following unfortunate circumstances. Titus had a brother, Lucius, who was unlike him in all other ways, and especially in his shameful addiction to pleasure and his utter contempt of decency. This brother had as companion a young boy whom he loved, and took him about and kept him always in his train, whether he was commanding an army or administering a province. At some drinking party, then, this boy was playing the coquet

² In 189 B.C. ³ Cf. chapter i. 3.

⁴ Cf. the Tiberius Gracchus, iv: 1; Cato the Elder, xvii. 1.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

Λεύκιον οὕτως ἔφη σφόδρα φιλεῖν αὐτόν, ὥστε θεῶν μονομάχων ἀπολιπεῖν οὐπω γεγονώς ἀνθρώπου φονευομένου θεατῆς, τὸ πρὸς ἐκείνον ἠδὲ τοῦ πρὸς αὐτὸν ἐν πλείονι λόγῳ θέμενος. ὁ δὲ Λεύκιος ἤσθεις “Οὐδέν,” ἔφη, “δεινόν· ἰάσομαι γὰρ ἐγώ 4 σου τὴν ἐπιθυμίαν.” καὶ κελεύσας ἓνα τῶν κατα-δίκων ἐκ τοῦ δεσμοτηρίου προαχθῆναι, καὶ τὸν ὑπηρέτην μεταπεμφάμενος, ἐν τῷ συμποσίῳ προσἔταξεν ἀποκόψαι τοῦ ἀνθρώπου τὸν τράχηλον.
 Οὐαλλέριος δὲ Ἀντίας οὐκ ἐρωμένῳ φησίν, ἀλλ’ ἐρωμένη τοῦτο χαρίσασθαι τὸν Λεύκιον. ὁ δὲ Λίβιος ἐν λόγῳ Κάτωνος αὐτοῦ γεγράφθαι φησίν, ὡς Γαλάτην αὐτόμολον ἐλθόντα μετὰ παίδων καὶ γυναικὸς ἐπὶ τὰς θύρας δεξάμενος εἰς τὸ συμπόσιον ὁ Λεύκιος ἀπέκτεινεν ἰδίᾳ χειρὶ τῷ ἐρωμένῳ χαρι-5 ζόμενος. τοῦτο μὲν οὖν εἰκὸς εἰς δεινώσιν εἰρῆσθαι τῆς κατηγορίας ὑπὸ τοῦ Κάτωνος· ὅτι δὲ οὐκ αὐτόμολος ἦν, ἀλλὰ δεσμώτης ὁ ἀναιρεθεὶς καὶ ἐκ τῶν καταδίκων, ἄλλοι τε πολλοὶ καὶ Κικέρων ὁ ῥήτωρ ἐν τῷ περὶ γήρωσ αὐτῷ Κάτωνι τὴν διήγησιν ἀναθεὶς εἴρηκεν.

XIX. Ἐπὶ τούτῳ Κάτων τιμητῆς γενόμενος καὶ καθαίρων τὴν σύγκλητον ἀπήλασε τῆς βουλῆς τὸν Λεύκιον, ὑπατικοῦ μὲν ἀξιώματος ὄντα, συνατιμοῦσθαι δὲ τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ δοκοῦντος αὐτῷ. διὸ καὶ προελθόντες εἰς τὸν δῆμον ἀμφότεροι ταπεινοὶ

¹ Cf. Livy, xxxix. 43.

TITUS FLAMININUS

with Lucius, and said he loved him so ardently that he had come away from a show of gladiators in order to be with him, although he had never in all his life seen a man killed; and he had done so, he said, because he cared more for his lover's pleasure than for his own. Lucius was delighted at this, and said: "Don't worry about that! I will give thee thy heart's desire." Then ordering a man who had been condemned to death to be brought forth from his prison, and sending for a lictor, he commanded him to strike off the man's head there in the banquet-hall. Valerius Antias, however, says it was not a lover, but a mistress whom Lucius thus sought to gratify.¹ And Livy says that in a speech of Cato himself it is written that a Gaulish deserter had come to the door with his wife and children, and that Lucius admitted him into the banquet-hall and slew him with his own hand to gratify his lover. This feature, however, was probably introduced by Cato to strengthen the force of his denunciation; for that it was not a deserter, but a prisoner, who was put to death, and one who had been condemned to die, is the testimony of many others, and especially of Cicero the orator in his treatise "On Old Age," where he puts the story in the mouth of Cato himself.²

XIX. In view of this, when Cato became censor³ and was purging the senate of its unworthy members, he expelled from it Lucius Flamininus, although he was a man of consular dignity, and although his brother Titus was thought to be involved in his disgrace. Therefore the two brothers came before the people in lowly garb and bathed in tears, and ² Cf. Cato the Elder, xvii. 1-4; Livy, xxxix. 42.

³ In 184 B.C.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

καὶ δεδακρυμένοι μέτρια δεῖσθαι τῶν πολιτῶν ἐδόκουν, ἀξιοῦντες αἰτίαν εἰπεῖν τὸν Κάτωνα καὶ λόγον, ᾧ χρησάμενος οἶκον ἔνδοξον ἀτιμία τοσαύτη

2 περιβέβληκεν. οὐδὲν οὖν ὑποστειλάμενος ὁ Κάτων προῆλθε, καὶ καταστὰς μετὰ τοῦ συνάρχοντος ἠρώτησε τὸν Τίτον εἰ γινώσκει τὸ συμπόσιον. ἰρνούμενου δὲ ἐκείνου, διηγησάμενος εἰς ὄρισμόν προεκαλεῖτο τὸν Λεύκιον εἰ τί φησι τῶν εἰρημένων μὴ ἀληθὲς εἶναι. τοῦ δὲ Λευκίου σιωπήσαντος, ὁ μὲν δῆμος ἔγνω δικαίαν γεγονέναι τὴν ἀτιμίαν καὶ τὸν Κάτωνα προέπεμψε λαμπρῶς ἀπὸ τοῦ

3 βήματος, ὁ δὲ Τίτος τῇ συμφορᾷ τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ περιπαθῶν συνέστη μετὰ τῶν πάλαι μισούντων τὸν Κάτωνα καὶ πύσας μὲν ἄς ἐκεῖνος ἐποίησατο τῶν δημοσίων ἐκδόσεις καὶ μισθώσεις καὶ ὠνάς ἠκύρωσε καὶ ἀνέλυσε ἐν τῇ βουλῇ κρατήσας, πολλὰς δὲ καὶ μεγάλας δίκας κατ' αὐτοῦ παρεσκεύασεν, οὐκ οἶδ' ὅπως εὖ καὶ πολιτικῶς πρὸς ἄρχοντα νόμιμον καὶ πολίτην ἄριστον ὑπὲρ ἀνδρὸς οἰκείου μὲν, ἀναξίου δὲ καὶ τὰ προσήκοντα

4 πεπονθότος ἀνήκεστον ἔχθραν ἀράμενος. οὐ μὴν 380 ἀλλὰ τοῦ Ῥωμαίων ποτὲ δήμου θεῶν ἔχοντος ἐν τῷ θεάτρῳ καὶ τῆς βουλῆς, ὥσπερ εἶωθε, κόσμῳ προκαθημένης, ὀφθεῖς ὁ Λεύκιος ἐπ' ἐσχάτοις που καθήμενος ἀτίμως καὶ ταπεινῶς οἶκτον ἔσχε· καὶ τὸ πλῆθος οὐκ ἠνέσχετο τὴν ὄψιν, ἀλλ' ἐβόων μεταβῆναι κελεύοντες, ἕως μετέβη, δεξαμένων αὐτὸν εἰς ἑαυτοὺς τῶν ὑπατικῶν.

TITUS FLAMININUS

made what seemed a reasonable request of their fellow citizens, namely, that Cato should state the reasons which had led him to visit a noble house with a disgrace so great. Without any hesitation, then, Cato came forward, and standing with his colleague before Titus, asked him if he knew about the banquet. Titus said he did not, whereupon Cato related the incident and formally challenged Lucius to say whether any part of the story told was not true. But Lucius was dumb, and the people therefore saw that he had been justly disgraced, and gave Cato a splendid escort away from the rostra. Titus, however, was so affected by the misfortune of his brother that he leagued himself with those who had long hated Cato, and after getting the upper hand in the senate, revoked and annulled all the public rentals and leases and contracts which Cato had made, besides bringing many heavy indictments against him.¹ That he acted the part of a good man or a good citizen I cannot affirm, in thus cherishing an incurable hatred against a lawful magistrate and a most excellent citizen on account of a man who, though a kinsman, was nevertheless unworthy and had suffered only what he deserved. However, as the Roman people was once enjoying a spectacle in the theatre, and the senate, according to custom, had seats of honour in the foremost rows, Lucius was seen sitting somewhere in the rear among the poor and lowly, and excited men's pity. The multitude could not bear the sight, but kept shouting to him to change his place, until he did change his place, and was received among their own number by the men of consular rank.

¹ Cf. Cato the Elder, xix. 2 ; Livy, xxxix. 44.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- XX. Τὸ δ' οὖν φύσει Τίτου φιλότιμον, ἄχρι μὲν ἱκανὴν εἶχεν ὕλην περὶ τοὺς εἰρημένους πολέμους διατρίβοντας, εὐδοκίμει· καὶ γὰρ ἐχιλιάρχησεν αὐθις μετὰ τὴν ὑπατείαν, οὐδενὸς ἐπείγοντος· ἀπαλλαγείς δὲ τοῦ ἄρχειν καὶ πρεσβύτερος ὦν ἠλέγχετο μᾶλλον, ἐν οὐκ ἔχοντι πράξεις ἔτι τῷ λοιπῷ βίῳ σπαργῶντα πρὸς δόξαν καὶ νεανίζοντα
- 2 τῷ πάθει κατέχειν ἑαυτὸν οὐ δυνάμενος. τοιαύτη γάρ τιμι καὶ τὸ περὶ Ἀννίβαν φορᾶ ἐδόκει πράξας ἐπαχθῆς γενέσθαι τοῖς πολλοῖς. ὁ γὰρ Ἀννίβας οἰκοθεν μὲν ἐκ Καρχηδόνας ὑπεκδρᾶς Ἀντιόχῳ συνην, ἐκείνου δὲ μετὰ τὴν ἐν Φρυγίᾳ μάχην εἰρήνης ἀγαπητῶς τυχόντος, αὐθις φεύγων καὶ πλανηθεὶς πολλὰ τέλος ἐν τῇ Βιθυνίᾳ κατέστη Προυσίαν θεραπεύων, οὐδενὸς Ῥωμαίων ἀγνοοῦντος, ἀλλὰ παρορώντων ἀπάντων δι' ἀσθένειαν καὶ γῆρας ὥσπερ ἐρριμμένον ὑπὸ τῆς τύχης.
- 3 Τίτος δὲ πρεσβευτῆς δι' ἑτέρας δὴ τινὰς πράξεις ὑπὸ τῆς βουλῆς πρὸς τὸν Προυσίαν ἀφικόμενος καὶ τὸν Ἀννίβαν ἰδὼν αὐτόθι δεισιπρόθετος, ἠγανάκτησεν εἰ ζῆ, καὶ πολλὰ τοῦ Προυσίου δεομένου καὶ λιπαροῦντος ὑπὲρ ἀνδρὸς ἰκέτου καὶ συνήθους οὐ παρήκε. χρησμοῦ δέ τινος, ὡς ἔοικε, παλαιοῦ περὶ τῆς Ἀννίβου τελευτῆς οὕτως ἔχοντος,

Λίβυσσα κρύψει βῶλος Ἀννίβου δέμας,

¹ The battle at Magnesia, in Lydia, 191 B.C. Under the terms of peace, Antiochus was to deliver Hannibal to the Romans. Cf. Livy, xxxvii. 45.

TITUS FLAMININUS

XX. Now, the native ambition of Titus, as long as it had sufficient material to gratify it in the wars which I have mentioned, met with praise, as, for instance, when he served a second time as military tribune after having been consul, though there was no necessity for it; but after he had ceased to hold office and was well on in years, he met the rather with censure, because, although the portion of life which still remained to him did not admit of great activity, he was unable to restrain his passion for glory and his youthful ardour. For by some such fierce impulse, as it would seem, he was led to his treatment of Hannibal, which made him odious to most people. Hannibal had secretly fled from his native Carthage and spent some time at the court of Antiochus; but when Antiochus, after the battle in Phrygia,¹ had gladly accepted terms of peace, Hannibal took to flight once more, and after many wanderings, finally settled down at the court of Prusias in Bithynia. No one at Rome was ignorant of this, but all ignored him on account of his weakness and old age, regarding him as a castaway of Fortune. Titus, however, who had been sent by the senate as ambassador to the court of Prusias on some other business,² and saw that Hannibal was staying there, was incensed that he should be alive, and although Prusias made many fervent intercessions in behalf of a man who was a suppliant and familiar friend, would not relent. There was an ancient oracle, as it would appear, concerning Hannibal's death, and it ran as follows:—

“Libyssan earth shall cover the form of Hannibal.”

² According to Livy (xxxix. 51), Hannibal's presence in Bithynia was part of Rome's complaint against Prusias.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ὁ μὲν ἄρα Λιβύην ὑπενόει καὶ τὰς ἐν Καρχηδόνι 4 ταφίαις, ὡς ἐκεῖ καταβιωσόμενος· ἐν δὲ Βιθυνία τόπος ἐστὶ θινώδης ἐπὶ θαλάσσης καὶ πρὸς αὐτῷ κώμη τις μεγάλη Λίβυσσα καλεῖται. περὶ ταύ-την ἔτυχε διατρίβων Ἀννίβας. αἰεὶ δὲ ἀπιστῶν τῇ τοῦ Προυσίου μαλακία καὶ φοβούμενος τοὺς Ῥωμαίους τὴν οἰκίαν ἔτι πρότερον ἐξόδοις ἑπτὰ καταγείοις συντετρημένην ἐκ τῆς ἑαυτοῦ διαίτης εἶχεν, ἄλλου κατ' ἄλλο τῶν ὑπονόμων, πόρρω δὲ 5 πάντων ἀδήλως ἐκφερόντων. ὡς οὖν ἤκουσε τότε τὸ πρόσταγμα τοῦ Τίτου, φεύγει μὲν ὥρμησε διὰ τῶν ὑπονόμων, ἐντυχῶν δὲ φυλακαῖς βασιλικαῖς ἔγνω δι' αὐτοῦ τελευτᾶν. ἔνιοι μὲν οὖν λέγουσιν ὡς ἰμίτιον τῷ τραχήλῳ περιβαλὼν καὶ κελεύσας οἰκέτην ὄπισθεν εἰείσαντα κατὰ τοῦ ἰσχίου τὸ γόνυ καὶ σφοδρῶς ἀνακλάσαντα συντεῖναι καὶ περιστρέψαι, μέχρι ἂν ἐκθλίψαι τὸ πνεῦμα, διαφθείρειεν αὐτόν· ἔνιοι δὲ μιμησάμενον Θεμι-6 στοκλέα καὶ Μίδαυ αἶμα ταύρειον πιεῖν· Λίβιος δὲ φησι φάρμακον ἔχοντα κεράσαι καὶ τὴν κύλικα δεξάμενον εἰπεῖν· “Ἀναπαύσωμεν ἤδη ποτὲ τὴν πολλὴν φροντίδα Ῥωμαίων, οἳ μακρὸν ἠγήσαντο καὶ βαρὺ μισουμένου γέροντος ἀναμείναι θάνατον.
 οὐ μὴν οὐδὲ Τίτος ἀξιοζήλωτον ἀποίσεται νίκη οὐδὲ τῶν προγόνων ἀξίαν, οἳ Πύρρῳ πολεμοῦντι καὶ κρατοῦντι τὴν μέλλουσαν ὑποπέμψαντες κατεμήνυσαν φαρμακείαν.”

TITUS FLAMININUS

Hannibal thought this referred to Libya and a burial at Carthage, and believed that he would end his days there ; but there is a sandy tract in Bithynia on the sea-shore, and on its border a large village called Libyssa. Near this village Hannibal was living. But he had always distrusted the weakness of Prusias and feared the Romans, and therefore even before this time his house had been provided with seven underground exits leading from his own chamber. These ran in different directions beneath the surface of the ground, but all had secret issues far away. Accordingly, when he now heard of the behest of Titus, he set out to make his escape by way of the underground passages, but encountered guards of the king, and therefore determined to take his own life. Some say that he wound his cloak about his neck and then ordered a servant to plant his knee in the small of his back, pull the rope towards him with all his might until it was twisted tight, and so to choke and kill him ; some, too, say that he drank bull's blood in imitation of Themistocles¹ and Midas ; but Livy says² that he had poison which he ordered to be mixed, and took the cup with these words : " Let us now at last put an end to the great anxiety of the Romans, who have thought it too long and hard a task to wait for the death of a hated man. Nevertheless, Titus will not bear away an enviable victory, nor one worthy of his forefathers, who sent secret information to Pyrrhus, when he was at war with them and a victor over them, of the poisoning that was going to be attempted."³

¹ Cf. the Themistocles, xxxi. 5.

² Livy, xxxix. 51. ³ Cf. the Pyrrhus, xxi. 1-3.

XXI. Οὕτω μὲν τὸν Ἀννίβαν ἀποθανεῖν λέγουσιν. ἀπαγγελθέντων δὲ τούτων πρὸς τὴν σύγκλητον, οὐκ ὀλίγοις ἐπαχθῆς ἔδοξεν ὁ Τίτος καὶ περιττὸς ἄγαν καὶ ὠμός, ὥσπερ ὄρνιν ὑπὸ γήρωσ ἀπτῆνα καὶ κόλουρον ἀφειμένον ζῆν χειροθήη τὸν Ἀννίβαν ἀποκτείνας, οὐδενὸς ἐπείγοντος, ἀλλὰ διὰ δόξαν, ὡς ἐπώνυμος τοῦ θανάτου
 2 γένοιτο. καὶ τὴν Ἀφρικανοῦ Σκηπίωνος ἐκτιθέντες πραότητα καὶ μεγαλοψυχίαν ἔτι μᾶλλον ἐθαύμαζον, ὡς ἀήττητον ὄντα καὶ φοβερὸν ἐν Λιβύῃ καταπολεμήσας Ἀννίβαν οὔτε ἐξήλασεν 381
 οὔτε ἐξήτησατο παρὰ τῶν πολιτῶν, ἀλλὰ καὶ πρὸ τῆς μάχης εἰς λόγους ἔλθων ἐδεξιώσατο καὶ μετὰ τὴν μάχην σπενδόμενος οὐδὲν ἐπετόλμησεν οὐδ'
 3 ἐπενέβη τῇ τύχῃ τοῦ ἀνδρός. λέγεται δὲ αὐθις ἐν Ἐφέσῳ συμβαλεῖν αὐτούς· καὶ πρῶτον μὲν ἐν τῷ συμπεριπατεῖν τοῦ Ἀννίβου τὴν προσήκουσαν ἐν ἀξιώματι τάξιν ἐκείνῳ¹ προλαβόντος ἀνέχεσθαι καὶ περιπατεῖν ἀφελῶς τὸν Ἀφρικανόν, ἔπειτα λόγου περὶ στρατηγῶν ἐμπεσόντος καὶ τοῦ Ἀννίβου κράτιστον ἀποφνημαμένου γεγονέναι τῶν στρατηγῶν Ἀλέξανδρον, εἶτα Πύρρον, τρίτον δὲ αὐτόν, ἡσυχῇ μειδιάσαντα τὸν Ἀφρικανὸν εἰπεῖν, “Τί δ’, εἰ μὴ σε ἐγὼ νενικήκει;” καὶ τὸν Ἀννίβαν,
 4 “Οὐκ ἄν, ὦ Σκηπίων,” φάναι, “τρίτον ἐμαυτόν, ἀλλὰ πρῶτον ἐποιούμην τῶν στρατηγῶν.”

Ταῦτα δὴ τοῦ Σκηπίωνος οἱ πολλοὶ θαυμάζοντες

¹ ἐκείνῳ Coraüs and Bekker, after Reiske: εἶναι. Blass corrects to προσήκουσαν ἐν ἀ. τάξιν.

TITUS FLAMININUS

XXI. Such are the accounts of the death of Hannibal. When the story of it was brought to the senate, many of them thought the conduct of Titus odious, officious, and cruel; for he had killed Hannibal when he was like a bird permitted to live a tame and harmless life because too old to fly and without a tail, and there had been no necessity for his doing this, but he did it to win fame, that his name might be associated with the death of Hannibal. Men also pointed to the clemency and magnanimity of Scipio Africanus and admired it all the more, since after defeating a Hannibal who had not been conquered before and was filling Africa with fear, he neither drove him from the country nor demanded his surrender by his fellow citizens, nay, he actually gave him a kindly greeting when he held conference with him before the battle, and after the battle, in making terms of peace, he did not insult or trample upon the fortunes of his foe.¹ Moreover, we are told that the two men met again at Ephesus, and in the first place, that when, as they were walking about together, Hannibal took the side which more properly belonged to Scipio as the superior, Scipio suffered it and walked about without paying any heed to it; and again, that when they fell to discussing generals and Hannibal declared Alexander to have been the mightiest of generals, and next to him Pyrrhus, and third himself, Scipio asked with a quiet smile, "And what wouldst thou have said if I had not conquered thee?" To which Hannibal replied, "In that case, Scipio, I should not have counted myself third, but first of generals."²

Such conduct on the part of Scipio most people

¹ Cf. Livy, xxx. 29 ff.

² Cf. Livy, xxxv. 14.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- ἐκάκιζον τὸν Τίτον ὡς ἀλλοτρίῳ νεκρῷ προσε-νεγκόντα τὰς χεῖρας. ἔνιοι δὲ ἦσαν οἱ τὸ πεπραγμένον ἐπαινούντες καὶ τὸν Ἀννίβαν, ἕως ἔξῃ, 5 πῦρ ἠγούμενοι δεόμενον τοῦ ριπίζοντος· μηδὲ γὰρ ἀκμάζοντος αὐτοῦ τὸ σῶμα Ῥωμαίοις καὶ τὴν χεῖρα φοβερὰν, ἀλλὰ τὴν δεινότητα καὶ τὴν ἐμπειρίαν γεγονέναι μετὰ τῆς ἐμφύτου πικρίας καὶ δυσμενείας, ὧν οὐδὲν ἀφαιρεῖν τὸ γῆρας, ἀλλ' ὑπομένειν τὴν φύσιν ἐν τῷ ἦθει, τὴν δὲ τύχην οὐ διαμένειν ὁμοίαν, ἀλλὰ μεταπίπτουσιν ἐκκαλεῖ-σθαι ταῖς ἐλπίσι πρὸς τὰς ἐπιθέσεις τοὺς αἰεὶ τῷ 6 μισεῖν πολεμοῦντας. καὶ τὰ ὕστερά πως ἔτι μᾶλλον ἐμαρτύρησε τῷ Τίτῳ, τοῦτο μὲν Ἀριστόνικος ὁ τοῦ κιθαρωδοῦ διὰ τὴν Εὐμενοῦς δόξαν ἐμπλήσας ἅπασαν ἀποστάσεων καὶ πολέμων τὴν Ἀσίαν, τοῦτο δὲ Μιθριδάτης μετὰ Σύλλαν καὶ Φιμβρίαν καὶ τοσοῦτον ὄλεθρον στρατευμάτων καὶ στρατηγῶν αὐθις ἐπὶ Λεύκολλον ἐκ γῆς ὁμοῦ καὶ θαλάττης ἀναστὰς τηλικούτος.
- 7 Οὐ μὴν οὐδὲ Γαίου Μαρίου ταπεινότερος Ἀννί-βας ἔκειτο. τῷ μὲν γὰρ βασιλεὺς φίλος ὑπῆρχε καὶ βίος ἦν συνήθης καὶ διατριβαὶ περὶ ναῦς καὶ ἵππους καὶ στρατιωτῶν ἐπιμέλειαν· τὰς δὲ Μαρίου τύχας Ῥωμαῖοι γελῶντες ἀλωμένου καὶ πτωχεύ-οντος ἐν Λιβύῃ μετὰ μικρὸν ἐν Ῥώμῃ σφαττό-μενοι καὶ μαστιγούμενοι προσεκύουν. οὕτως

¹ In 131-130 B.C.

² In 68-84 B.C.

TITUS FLAMININUS

admired, and they blamed Titus for having laid violent hands on one whom another had slain. But some there were who praised what he had done and thought that Hannibal, as long as he was alive, was a consuming fire which needed only to be fanned; for when he was in his prime, they said, it was not his body nor his arm that had been formidable to the Romans, but his ability and experience coupled with his ingrained bitterness and hostility, and from these naught is subtracted by old age, but the natural characteristics remain unchanged: whereas fortune does not remain the same, but changes sides, and summons with hope to fresh undertakings those whom hatred makes perpetual foes. And subsequent events were perhaps still more a justification of Titus; for Aristonicus, the son of a harpist's daughter, used his reputed connexion with Eumenes to fill all Asia with wars and rebellions,¹ and Mithridates, notwithstanding his defeats by Sulla and Fimbria and his great losses in armies and generals,² rose once more to be a formidable antagonist of Lucullus by land and sea.³

However, not even Hannibal was reduced to a lower level than Caius Marius. For Hannibal had a king as his friend, and his days as usual were occupied with ships and horses and the care of soldiers; whereas Marius in his misfortunes was a laughing-stock to the Romans as he wandered about and begged his way in Africa, though after a little while he was in Rome with his axes at their necks and his rods at their backs, and they were humbly begging his mercy. So true is it that nothing in the present

³ In 74-67 B.C. The argument is that if so great dangers to Rome were latent in Asia, the presence of Hannibal there was a menace.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

οὐδὲν οὔτε μικρὸν οὔτε μέγα τῶν παρόντων πρὸς τὸ μέλλον ἐστίν, ἀλλὰ μία τοῦ μεταβάλλειν 8 τελευτὴ καὶ τοῦ εἶναι. διὸ καὶ φασιν ἔνιοι Τίτον οὐκ ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ ταῦτα πράξαι, πεμφθῆναι δὲ πρεσβευτὴν μετὰ Λευκίου Σκηπίωνος, οὐδὲν ἄλλο τῆς πρεσβείας ἐχούσης ἔργον ἢ τὸν Ἀνίβου θάνατον.

Ἐπεὶ δὲ οὐδεμίαν ἔτι τούτων κατόπιν οὔτε πολιτικὴν τοῦ Τίτου πράξιν οὔτε πολεμικὴν ἱστορήκαμεν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τελευτῆς ἔτυχεν εἰρηρικῆς, ὧρα τὴν σύγκρισιν ἐπισκοπεῖν.

ΦΙΛΟΠΟΙΜΕΝΟΣ ΚΑΙ ΤΙΤΟΥ ΣΥΓΚΡΙΣΙΣ

I. Μεγέθει μὲν οὖν τῶν εἰς τοὺς Ἕλληνας εὐεργεσιῶν οὔτε Φιλοποίμενα Τίτῳ παραβάλλειν οὔτε πάνυ πολλοὺς τῶν Φιλοποίμενος ἀμεινόνων ἀνδρῶν ἀξιὸν ἐστίν. τοῖς μὲν γὰρ Ἕλλησι πρὸς Ἕλληνας οἱ πόλεμοι, τῷ δὲ οὐχ Ἕλλησι καὶ ὑπὲρ Ἑλλήνων· καὶ ὅτε Φιλοποίμην ἀμχανῶν τοῖς ἑαυτοῦ πολίταις ἀμύνειν πολεμουμένοις εἰς Κρήτην ἀπῆρε, τότε νικήσας Τίτος ἐν μέσῃ τῇ Ἑλλάδι Φίλιππον ἡλευθέρου καὶ τὰ ἔθνη καὶ πόλεις
2 ἀπάσας. εἰ δὲ τις ἐξετάζοι τὰς μάχας ἑκατέρου, πλείους Ἕλληνας Φιλοποίμην Ἀχαιῶν στρατηγῶν ἢ Μακεδόνας Τίτος Ἕλλησι βοηθῶν ἀνείλε.

Τὰ τοίνυν ἀμαρτήματα τοῦ μὲν φιλοτιμίας,

PHILOPOEMEN AND TITUS COMPARED

is either small or great in view of what may happen in the future, but change, like life, can only end with death. For this reason some say that Titus did not take this step on his own account, but that he was sent as ambassador with Lucius Scipio, and their embassy had no other object than the death of Hannibal.

We do not find that Titus was active after this, either as statesman or soldier, and his end was a peaceful one. It is therefore time to think of our comparison.

COMPARISON OF PHILOPOEMEN AND TITUS

I. ACCORDINGLY, in the magnitude of their benefactions to the Greeks, neither Philopoemen nor any one of the Greeks who were better men than Philopoemen is worthy of comparison with Titus. For they were Greeks and waged their wars against Greeks; whereas Titus was not a Greek and waged war in behalf of Greeks; and at a time when Philopoemen was unable to defend his own countrymen from the attacks of their enemies, and had gone off into Crete, at that very time Titus won a victory over Philip in the heart of Greece and set her peoples and all her cities free. And if we examine into the battles which each fought, we shall find that the Greeks slain by Philopoemen as general of the Achaeans were more in number than the Macedonians slain by Titus as helper of the Greeks.

And then as to their errors, in the one they were τοῦ δὲ φιλονεικίας γέγονε, καὶ πρὸς ὄργην ὁ μὲν εὐκίνητος, ὁ δὲ καὶ δυσπαραίτητος. Τίτος μὲν 382 γὰρ καὶ Φιλίππῳ τὸ ἀξίωμα τῆς βασιλείας ἐφύλαξε καὶ πρὸς Αἰτωλοὺς εὐγνωμόνησε, Φιλοποίμην δὲ τῆς πατρίδος δι' ὄργην ἀφείλετο τὴν 3 περιοικίδα συντέλειαν. ἔτι δὲ ὁ μὲν τοῖς εὐπαθοῦσιν ἀεὶ βέβαιος, ὁ δὲ θυμῷ λῦσαι χάριν ἔτοιμος. Λακεδαιμονίῳν γὰρ εὐεργέτης πρότερον ὢν ὕστερον καὶ τὰ τείχη κατέσκαψε καὶ τὴν χώραν περιέκοψε καὶ τέλος αὐτὴν μετέβαλε καὶ διέφθειρε τὴν πολιτείαν. ἐδόκει δὲ καὶ τὸν βίον ὄργῃ προέσθαι καὶ φιλονεικία, μὴ κατὰ καιρὸν, ἀλλ' ὀξύτερον τοῦ δέοντος εἰς Μεσσήνην ἐπειχθεῖς, οὐχ ὥσπερ Τίτος πάντα λογισμῷ καὶ πρὸς ἀσφάλειαν στρατηγήσας.

II. Ἄλλὰ πλήθει γε πολέμων καὶ τροπαίων ἢ Φιλοποίμενος ἐμπειρία βεβαιοτέρα. τῷ μὲν γὰρ τὰ πρὸς Φίλιππον ἐκρίθη δυοῖν ἀγῶνοι, ὁ δὲ μυρίας μάχας κατορθώσας οὐδεμίαν ἀμφισβήτησιν τῇ τύχῃ πρὸς τὴν ἐπιστήμην ἀπολέλοιπεν. ἔτι δὲ ὁ μὲν τῇ Ῥωμαίων ἀκμὴν ἐχούσῃ δυνάμει χρησάμενος, ὁ δὲ τῆς Ἑλλάδος ἤδη φθινούσης ἐπακμάσας, δόξαν ἔσχεν, ὥστε τοῦ μὲν ἴδιον, τοῦ δὲ κοινὸν ἔργον εἶναι τὸ κατορθούμενον· ὁ μὲν γὰρ ἤρχεν ἀγαθῶν, ὁ δὲ ἄρχων ἀγαθοὺς ἐποίει. 2 καὶ μὴν τό γε πρὸς Ἑλληνας τούτῳ γενέσθαι τοὺς ἀγῶνας οὐκ εὐτυχῇ μὲν, ἰσχυρὰν δὲ τῆς ἀρετῆς 388

PHILOPOEMEN AND TITUS COMPARED

due to ambition, in the other to a spirit of contention. For Titus preserved Philip's royal dignity and showed favour to the Aetolians; whereas the anger of Philopoemen led him to rob his native city of its supremacy over the surrounding villages. And further, the one was always constant towards his beneficiaries, while the other, to indulge his wrath, was ever ready to cancel a kindness. For instance, though he had once been a benefactor of Sparta, he afterwards tore down her walls, reduced her territory, and finally altered and destroyed her very constitution. And it would appear that he threw away his life in a fit of anger and contentiousness, by hastening to attack Messene before occasion offered and more quickly than was feasible; for he did not, like Titus, conduct all his military operations with deliberation and a due regard for safety.

II. But surely the multitude of his wars and trophies put the military experience of Philopoemen on a firmer basis. For the campaign of Titus against Philip was decided by two conflicts, whereas Philopoemen was successful in countless battles and left no room for the claim that his victories were due to fortune rather than to skill. And besides, Titus, in his quest of fame, availed himself of the culminating power of Rome; whereas Philopoemen flourished when Greece was already in declension. Therefore the success of Philopoemen was his own work, while that of Titus was the result of a community of effort; for the latter was commander of good soldiers, while the former, as commander, had to make his soldiers good. And surely the fact that Philopoemen's conflicts were with Greeks furnished a proof of his valour which was convincing even ἀπόδειξιν παρείχεν· οἷς γὰρ ὅμοια τᾶλλα, τῷ προὔχειν ἀρετῇ κρατούσι. καὶ γὰρ δὴ πολεμκωτάτοις Ἑλλήνων Κρησὶ καὶ Λακεδαιμονίοις πολεμήσας, τῶν μὲν πανουργοτάτων δόλφ, τῶν δ' ἄλκιμωτάτων τόλμη περιεγένετο.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

- 3 Πρὸς δὲ τούτοις Τίτος μὲν ἐξ ὑποκειμένων ἐνίκα, χρώμενος ὀπλισμοῖς καὶ τάξεσιν αἷς παρέλαβε, Φιλοποίμην δὲ αὐτὸς ἐπεισενεγκῶν καὶ μεταβαλὼν τὸν περὶ ταῦτα κόσμον, ὥστε τὸ νικητικώτατον ὑφ' οὗ μὲν οὐκ ὄν εὐρήσθαι, τῷ δὲ ὑπάρχον βοηθεῖν. κατὰ χεῖρα τοίνυν Φιλοποίμενος μὲν ἔργα πολλὰ καὶ μεγάλα, θατέρου δὲ οὐδέν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν Αἰτωλῶν τις αὐτὸν Ἀρχέδημος ἐπέσκωπτεν ὡς, ὅτε αὐτὸς ἐσπασμένος τὴν μάχαιραν ἔθει δρόμῳ πρὸς τοὺς μαχομένους καὶ τοὺς συνεστῶτας τῶν Μακεδόνων, τοῦ Τίτου τὰς χεῖρας εἰς τὸν οὐρανὸν ὑπτίας ἀνατείναντος ἐστῶτος καὶ προσευχομένου.

III. Καὶ μὴν Τίτῳ μὲν ἄρχοντι συνέβη καὶ πρεσβεύοντι πάντα πρᾶξαι τὰ καλὰ, Φιλοποίμην δὲ οὐ χείρονα παρέσχευ οὐδὲ ἀπρακτότερον ἑαυτὸν ἰδιώτην ἢ στρατηγὸν τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς. ἰδιώτης μὲν γὰρ ὢν Νάβιν ἐξέβαλεν ἐκ Μεσσήνης καὶ Μεσσηνίους ἠλευθέρωσεν, ἰδιώτης δὲ Διοφάνην τὸν στρατηγὸν καὶ Τίτον ἐπερχομένους ἀπέκλεισε τῆς

- 2 Σπάρτης καὶ Λακεδαιμονίους διέσωσεν. οὕτως

PHILOPOEMEN AND TITUS COMPARED

though unfortunate: for where other things are equal, they prevail who surpass in valour. And so it was that although he carried on war with the most warlike of the Greeks, namely, the Cretans and Lacedaemonians, he surpassed the first in wiles, though they were most crafty, and the second in daring, though they were most brave.

In addition to this it may be said that Titus won his victories by using what lay ready to his hand, since he availed himself of styles of armour and formation which had come down to him, whereas Philopoemen won his successes by making contributions and changes of his own in these matters, so that in the one case what was most essential for victory did not exist and had to be discovered, while in the other it lay ready for service. In the way of personal prowess, moreover, Philopoemen performed much that was great, but Titus nothing at all; nay, an Aetolian named Archedemus mocked at him because, when he himself had drawn his sword and was running at full speed against the Macedonians who were holding together and fighting, Titus was standing with his hands stretched up towards heaven and praying for help.

III. And further, Titus was either a commander or an ambassador when he did all his noble deeds, whereas Philopoemen showed himself no less active and effective for the Achaeans when he was a private citizen than when he was their general. For it was as a private citizen that he expelled Nabis from Messene and set the Messenians free, and as a private citizen that he shut the gates of Sparta against the coming of Diophanes the general and Titus, and so saved the Lacedaemonians.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

ἡγεμονικὴν φύσιν ἔχων οὐ κατὰ τοὺς νόμους, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν νόμων ἄρχειν ἠπίστατο πρὸς τὸ συμφέρον, οὐ δεόμενος παρὰ τῶν ἀρχομένων λαβεῖν τὸ ἄρχειν, ἀλλὰ χρώμενος αὐτοῖς, ὅπου καιρὸς εἴη, τὸν ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν φρονούντα μᾶλλον ἢ τὸν ὑπ' αὐτῶν ἡρημένον ἡγούμενος στρατηγόν.

- 3 Γενναῖα μὲν οὖν Τίτου τὰ πρὸς τοὺς Ἕλληνας ἐπιεικὴ καὶ φιλόφρονα, γενναίωτα δὲ Φιλοποίμενος τὰ πρὸς τοὺς Ῥωμαίους ὕψιστά τε καὶ φιλελεύθερα· ῥᾶον γὰρ χαρίζεσθαι τοῖς δεομένοις ἢ λυπεῖν ἀντιτείνοντα τοὺς δυνατωτέρους. ἐπεὶ δὲ οὕτως ἐξεταζομένων δυσθεώρητος ἡ διαφορά, σκόπει, μὴ τῷ μὲν Ἕλληνι τὸν ἐμπειρίας πολεμικῆς καὶ στρατηγίας στέφανον, τῷ δὲ Ῥωμαίῳ τὸν δικαιοσύνης καὶ χρηστότητος ἀποδιδόντες οὐ φαύλως δαιτῶν δόξομεν.

PHILOPOEMEN AND TITUS COMPARED

Having this natural gift of leadership, he not only knew how to use it in accordance with the laws, but also how to dominate the laws for the common good; he did not think it necessary to be appointed commander by the people, but took them under his command when occasion required it, considering that he who took wise counsel in their behalf, rather than he who had been elected by them, was their real general.

Nobly generous, then, was the clemency and humanity which Titus showed to the Greeks, but more nobly generous was the firmness and love of freedom with which Philopoemen opposed the Romans; for it is easier to confer favours on suppliants than it is to vex with opposition those who are more powerful. But since, after this examination, the difference between the two men is hard to define, I leave it to my reader to say whether, if we award to the Greek the crown for military experience and generalship, and to the Roman that for justice and goodness of heart, we shall not make a fair decision.

A PARTIAL DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

A PARTIAL DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

A

- Acrotatus, 11, elder son of Cleomenes King of the Lacedaemonians, died before coming to the throne.
- Acrotatus, 11, grandson of above, became King of the Lacedaemonians ca. 265 B.C.; defeated and slain at Megalopolis, 11.
- Agathocleia, Mistress of Ptolemy IV Philopator, her influence, 125.
- Agesilaüs, uncle of King Agis, supported him in his reforms, 15; his motives corrupt, 17; appointed ephor, 29; his deception of Agis, 31; tampered with the calendar, 35; driven into exile, 37.
- Agesilaüs, king of the Lacedaemonians, his descendants in the royal line, 9.
- Agesipolis, 9, king of the Lacedaemonians in 395 B.C.
- Agesipolis, 9, king of the Lacedaemonians after Cleombrotus.
- Ageastrata, 11, mother of King Agis; supported him in his reforms, 17; her death, 47.
- Agistis, wife of King Agis, married Cleomenes, son of King Leonidas, 51; his great love for her, her death, 99.
- Agis, 9, third in descent from Agesilaüs, slain by Antipater at Megalopolis in 330 B.C.
- Agis, 9, king of the Lacedaemonians, sixth in descent from Agesilaüs.
- Agis, 9, king of the Lacedaemonians from 244 B.C.; his qualities and achievements, passim in his Life.
- Amphares, betrayal of Agis, 41.
- Antigonos Dason, king of Macedon, intervened in Peloponnesian affairs by invitation of Aratus, 83; captured Argos, 97; victory over Cleomenes at Sellasia, 113, 267; captured Sparta, 119.
- Antiochus II, king of Syria, made war with the Romans in Greece in 191 B.C., 303, 349; defeated by Titus Flamininus, 365.
- Antipater, second son of Cassander, regent of Alexander, attempt to corrupt Phocion, 5; slew Agis at Megalopolis in 330 B.C., 9.
- Aratus, general of the Achaean League, was assisted by Agis in opposing the Aetolian invasion of the Peloponnesus, 33; attempt to bring Sparta into the League, 55; captured Mantinea, 61; refused the generalship of the League after the defeat at Dymae, 81; invited the intervention of Antigonos, 83; dependence of the League upon Macedonian help during his life, 275.
- Arceilaüs, betrayed Agis, 41.
- Archidamia, 11, grandmother of King Agis; supported him in his reforms, 17; her death, 47.
- Archidamus, son of Agesilaüs king of the Lacedaemonians, slain by the Messapians at Mandurium in Italy in 338 B.C., 9.
- Archidamus, brother of King Agis, placed on the throne of Sparta by Aratus, but put to death by the murderers of Agis, 61.
- Areus, 11, son of Acrotatus, king of the Lacedaemonians, 11; fell in battle at Corinth about 265 B.C.
- Argos, occupied by Cleomenes, 89;

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

- successfully revolted from Cleomenes and joined Antigonus, 95, 97.
- Aristomenes, king of the Messenians, wounded and slew the Spartan king Theopompus in battle, 49.
- Attalus Philometor, king of Pergamum, made the Roman people his heir, 177.

B

- Belbina, precinct of Athena on the borders of Arcadia and Lacedaemon, 57.

C

- Cassandra, daughter of Priam, supposed to give oracles as Pasi-phæ at Thalamæ in Laconia, 21.
- Centaurs, begotten by Ixion, who embraced a cloud, not Hera, 3.
- Chalcis, saved by Titus Flamininus, 367.
- Chilonis, daughter of Leonidas and wife of King Cleombrotus, her loyalty to both father and husband, 37.
- Claudius, Appius, marries his daughter to Tiberius Claudius, 151.
- Cleombrotus, 9, king of the Lacedaemonians after his brother Agesipolis.
- Cleombrotus, only Spartan king to be slain in battle, 49.
- Cleombrotus, son-in-law of Leonidas, became king of the Lacedaemonians in his stead ca. 242 B.C., 29; was deposed, 37; his life spared by the supplications of his wife Chilonis, 40.
- Cleomenes, 9, king of the Lacedaemonians after his brother Agesipolis.
- Cleomenes, son of Leonidas, married the wife of Agis, 51; came to the throne of Sparta in 235 B.C., 53; his character and achievements, passim in his Life.
- Cleonymus, 11, son of Cleomenes king of the Lacedaemonians, did not succeed to the throne.

- Corinth, occupied by Cleomenes, 92.
- Cornelia, mother of the Gracchi, her demeanour after the death of her sons, 241.
- Cratesiclea, mother of Cleomenes, 61; went to Egypt as hostage, 99; executed by Ptolemy, 139.
- Cynoscephalæ, defeat of Philip V by Titus Flamininus, 341 ff.

D

- Daphne, daughter of Amyclas, fleeing from Apollo, was metamorphosed into a tree, becoming the oracular Pasi-phæ, 21.
- Demochares, betrayer of Agis, 41.
- Diophanes, general of the Achaean League, opposed to Philopoemen, 301.
- Drusus, Livius, popular tribune with Caius Gracchus, took the side of the Senate in the conflict with Caius, 215.
- Dymæ, battle at, between Cleomenes and the Arcadians, 81.

E

- Ectrephes, ephor at Sparta, cut out two of the nine strings in the harp of Phrynis, 25.
- Epitadeus, ephor at Sparta, changed the law regulating inheritance, 13.
- Eudamidas, 9, king of the Lacedaemonians after the death of Agis in 330 B.O.
- Eudamidas, 9, king of the Lacedaemonians after Archidamus.

F

- Flamininus, Titus, defeated Philip V of Macedon at Cynoscephalæ, 293; became jealous of Philopoemen, 297; his character and achievements, passim in his Life.

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

Fulvius Flaccus, friend and supporter of Caius Gracchus, 219; murdered by the agents of Opius, 235 ff.; his high character, 239.

G

Gracchus, Caius, character and achievements, passim in his Life.
Gracchus, Tiberius, character and achievements, passim in his Life.

H

Hannibal, Carthaginian general, stirred Antiochus against the Romans, 347; his death through the persecution of Titus Flamininus, 381.

Hera, loved by Ixion, 3.

Hippomedon, supported the reforms of King Agis, 17.

I

Ixion, embraced a cloud instead of Hera and begat the Centaurs, 3.

L

Laelius, Caius, attempted without success to remedy the social and economic condition of the Romans, 161.

Leonidas, king of the Lacedaemonians, eighth in descent from the Pausanias who defeated Mardonius at Plataea in 483 B.C., 9.

Leonidas, 11, became king of the Lacedaemonians ca. 256 B.C., luxury-loving and weak; assisted the rich in opposing the reforms of Agis, 19, 24; was indicted for having children by a foreign woman, 27; deposed as king about 242 B.C., 29; was brought back to Sparta by his partisans, 37; expelled the ephors from office, 41.

Leuctra, rout of the Arcadians by Cleomenes there, 61.

Lycurgus, founder of the Spartan institutions, 13; his memory detested by Spartans in later times, 15.

Lysander, supported the reforms of King Agis, 15; became ephor, and introduced a bill for the abolition of debts, 19; indicted Leonidas, 25; was indicted in turn, 29.

M

Machanidas, tyrant of Sparta, defeated and killed by Philopoemen at Mantinea, 281 ff.

Mancinus, Caius, campaign against Numantia, 153.

Mandrocleidas, supported the reforms of King Agis, 15; indicted for this, 29.

Megalopolis, captured by Cleomenes, 103.

Megistoneüs, step-father of King Cleomenes of Sparta, assisted the latter in overthrowing the ephors, 65.

N

Nabis, tyrant of Sparta, yielded to Philopoemen at Messene, 289; defeated Philopoemen at sea, 293; was defeated at Sparta by Philopoemen, 295; assassinated, 297.

Nasica, P. Cornelius Scipio, leader of the Senate in the murder of Tiberius Gracchus, 193; incurred thereby the popular hatred, 195.

Nicanor, Messenian, enemy of King Cleomenes of Sparta, plotted against him in Egypt, 129.

O

Octavius, Marcus, popular tribune, opposed the measures of Tiberius Gracchus, 167; was ejected from his office by Tiberius, 173.

DICTIONARY OF PROPER NAMES

Opimius, Lucius, as consul led in the opposition to Calus Gracchus, 223, 227, 229, 233; restored the Temple of Concord, 239; guilty of corruption, 239.

him asylum after his defeat at Sellasia, 123.
Ptolemy IV, Philopator, his character and his attitude toward King Cleomenes of Sparta, 125.

P

Pasiphaë, her temple and oracle at Thalamæ in Laconia; she was daughter of Atlas and mother by Zeus of Hermes, or else was another name for Cassandra, daughter of Priam, or else identical with Daphne, 21.

Pausanias, 9, king of the Lacedæmonians, defeated Mardonius at Plataea in 488 B.C.; his successors on the throne down to Agis, 9.

Pausanias, 9, son of Pleistoanax, king of the Lacedæmonians, went in exile to Tegea.

Pherecydes, though a foreigner, was honoured in Sparta, 25.

Phillip V, king of Macedon, opposed Philopoemen, 287; the campaign of Titus Flamininus against him, 329 ff., 339 ff.; his defeat at Cynoscephalæ, 341 ff.

Philopoemen, successor of Aratus as leader of the Achaean League, his character and achievements, passim in his Life; aroused the jealousy of Titus Flamininus, 361; kept Megalopolis faithful to the League, 105, 265.

Phrynis, harpist, was obliged in Sparta to modify his harp of nine strings, 25.

Pleistoanax, king of the Lacedæmonians after his father Pausanias, 9.

Ptolemy II, Euergetes, aided King Cleomenes of Sparta, 99; gave

S

Sellasia, decisive defeat of King Cleomenes there by Antigonus, 113, 267.

Sosibius, minister of Ptolemy IV, Philopator, hostile to King Cleomenes of Sparta, 125.

Sparta, the two lines of kings in descent from Agesilaüs and Pausanias, 9 ff.; after its overthrow of Athens became wealthy and corrupt, 11; decline in Spartan families and concentration of the wealth in the hands of a few, 15; its wealth in the hands of the women, 17; economic and social condition when Cleomenes came to the throne in 235 B.C., 54; defeated by Philopoemen and forced into the Achaean League, 297.

T

Terpander, though an alien, was honoured at Sparta, 25.

Thalamæ, in Laconia, seat of the oracle of Pasiphaë, 21.

Thales, though a foreigner, was honoured at Sparta, 25.

Theopompus, king of the Lacedæmonians, wounded (or slain) by Aristomenes in battle, 49.

X

Xenares, friend of King Cleomenes of Sparta, 55.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

WITH AN ENGLISH TRANSLATION BY BERNADOTTE PERRIN

IN ELEVEN VOLUMES

XI

ARATUS, ARTAXERXES, GALBA AND OTHO

INDEX TO ALL THE LIVES BY

J. W. COHOON

CAMBRIDGE, MASSACHUSETTS
HARVARD UNIVERSITY PRESS

LONDON
WILLIAM HEINEMANN LTD

MCMLXII

First printed 1926
Reprinted 1943, 1954, 1962

Printed in Great Britain

CONTENTS

	PAGE
ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES IN THIS EDITION . . .	vi
TRADITIONAL ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES . . .	vii
ARATUS	1
ARTAXERXES	127
GALBA	205
OTHO	275
INDEX	321

ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES IN THIS EDITION IN THE CHRONOLOGICAL SEQUENCE OF THE GREEK LIVES.

VOLUME I.

- (1) Theseus and Romulus.
Comparison.
- (2) Lycurgus and Numa.
Comparison.
- (3) Solon and Publicola.
Comparison.

VOLUME II.

- (4) Themistocles and Camillus.
- (9) Aristides and Cato the Elder.
Comparison.
- (13) Cimon and Lucullus.
Comparison.

VOLUME III.

- (5) Pericles and Fabius Max-
imus.
Comparison.
- (14) Nicias and Crassus.
Comparison.

VOLUME IV.

- (6) Alcibiades and Coriola-
nus.
Comparison.
- (12) Lysander and Sulla.
Comparison.

VOLUME V.

- (16) Agesilaüs and Pompey.
Comparison.
- (8) Pelopidas and Marcellus.
Comparison.

VOLUME VI.

- (22) Dion and Brutus.
Comparison.
- (7) Timoleon and Aemilius
Paulus.
Comparison.

VOLUME VII.

- (20) Demosthenes and Cicero.
Comparison.
- (17) Alexander and Julius Caesar.

VOLUME VIII.

- (15) Sertorius and Eumenes.
Comparison.
- (18) Phocion and Cato the Younger.

VOLUME IX.

- (21) Demetrius and Antony.
Comparison.
- (11) Pyrrhus and Caius Marius.

VOLUME X.

- (19) Agis and Cleomenes, and Tiberius and Caius
Gracchus.
Comparison.
- (10) Philopoemen and Flam-
inius.
Comparison.

VOLUME XI.

- (23) Aratus.
- (24) Artaxerxes
- (25) Galba.
- (26) Otho.

THE TRADITIONAL ORDER OF THE PARALLEL LIVES.

- (1) Theseus and Romulus.
- (2) Lycurgus and Numa.
- (3) Solon and Publicola.
- (4) Themistocles and Camillus.
- (5) Pericles and Fabius Maximus.
- (6) Alcibiades and Coriolanus.
- (7) Timoleon and Aemilius Paulus.
- (8) Pelopidas and Marcellus.
- (9) Aristides and Cato the Elder.
- (10) Philopoemen and Flaminius.
- (11) Pyrrhus and Caius Marius.
- (12) Lysander and Sulla.
- (13) Cimon and Lucullus.
- (14) Nicias and Crassus.
- (15) Sertorius and Eumenes.
- (16) Agesilaüs and Pompey.
- (17) Alexander and Julius Caesar.
- (18) Phocion and Cato the Younger.
- (19) Agis and Cleomenes, and Tiberius and Caius
Gracchus.
- (20) Demosthenes and Cicero.
- (21) Demetrius and Antony.
- (22) Dion and Brutus.
.
- (23) Aratus.
- (24) Artaxerxes.
- (25) Galba.
- (26) Otho.

ARATUS

ΑΡΑΤΟΣ

Ι. Παροιμίαν τινὰ παλαιάν, ὧ Πολύκρατες, Paris Edition.
a. 1624
P.² 1027
δείσας μοι δοκεῖ τὸ δύσφημον αὐτῆς, ὁ φιλόσοφος Χρῦσιππος, οὐχ ὄν ἔχει τρόπον, ἀλλ' ὡς αὐτὸς ᾤετο βέλτιον εἶναι, διατίθεται,

τίς πατέρ' αἰνήσει, εἰ μὴ εὐδαίμονες υἱοί ;

Διονυσόδωρος δὲ ὁ Τροιζήνιος ἐλέγχων αὐτὸν ἀντεκτίθησι τὴν ἀληθινὴν οὕτως ἔχουσαν· τίς πατέρ' αἰνήσει, εἰ μὴ κακοδαίμονες υἱοί ;

- 2 καὶ φησι τοὺς ἀφ' αὐτῶν οὐδενὸς ἀξίους ὄντας, ὑποδουμένους δὲ προγόνων τινῶν ἀρεταῖς¹ καὶ πλεονάζοντας ἐν τοῖς ἐκείνων ἐπαίνοις ὑπὸ τῆς παροιμίας ἐπιστομίζεσθαι. ἀλλ' ᾧ γε φύσει τὸ γενναῖον ἐπιπρέπει ἐκ πατέρων, κατὰ Πίνδαρον,² ὥσπερ σοὶ πρὸς τὸ κάλλιστον ἀφομοιοῦντι τῶν οἴκοθεν παραδειγμάτων τὸν βίον, εὐδαιμον ἂν εἴη τὸ μεμνήσθαι τῶν ἀπὸ γένους ἀρίστων, ἀκούοντας
3 περὶ αὐτῶν ἀεὶ τι καὶ λέγοντας. οὐ γὰρ ἰδίῳ

¹ ἀρεταῖς Sint. and Ziegler with S^g; Bekker has ἀρετάς, with inferior MSS.

² Pyth. viii. 44f. (φυᾶ . . . ἐκ πατέρων παισὶ λῆμα).

ARATUS

I. There is an ancient proverb, Polycrates,¹ which the philosopher Chrysippus puts not as it really is, but as he thought better :—

“Who will praise a father, except happy sons?”

But Dionysodorus of Troezen corrects him, and restores the true form thus :—

“Who will praise a father, except unhappy sons?”

And he says that the proverb stops the mouths of those who, being worthless in themselves, take refuge in the virtues of certain ancestors and are forever praising them. But surely for a man in whom, to use Pindar's words, “the noble spirit naturally displays itself as inherited from sires,” and who, like thee, patterns his life after the fairest examples in his family line,—for such men it will be good fortune to be reminded of their noblest progenitors, ever and anon hearing the story of them, or telling it themselves. For it is not that they lack

¹ A friend of Plutarch, not otherwise known, to whom he thus dedicates this Life. See the note on the Theseus, i. 1.

ἀπορία καλῶν ἐξαρτῶσιν ἀλλοτρίων ἐπαίνων τὴν δόξαν, ἀλλὰ τοῖς ἐκείνων τὰ οἰκεία συνάπτοντες, ὡς καὶ τοῦ γένους καὶ τοῦ βίου καθηγεμόνας εὐφημοῦσι. διὸ καὶ γὰρ τὸν Ἀράτου τοῦ σοῦ πολίτου καὶ προπάτορος βίον, ὃν οὔτε τῇ δόξῃ τῇ περὶ σεαυτὸν οὔτε τῇ δυνάμει καταισχύρεις, ἀπέσταλκά σοι συγγραψάμενος, οὐχ ὡς οὐχὶ πάντων ἀκριβέστατά σοι μεμεληκὸς ἐξ ἀρχῆς ἐπίστασθαι
 4 τὰς ἐκείνου πράξεις, ἀλλ' ὅπως οἱ παῖδές σου Πολυκράτης καὶ Πυθοκλῆς οἰκείοις παραδείγμασιν ἐντρέφονται, τὰ μὲν ἀκούοντες, τὰ δὲ ἀναγινώσκοντες, ἅπερ αὐτοὺς μιμῆσθαι προσήκει. φιλαύτου γὰρ ἀνδρός, οὐ φιλοκάλου, παντὸς αἰεὶ βέλτιστον ἡγεῖσθαι.

II. Ἡ Σικυωνίων πόλις, ἐπεὶ τὸ πρῶτον ἐκ τῆς ἀκράτου καὶ Δωρικῆς ἀριστοκρατίας ὥσπερ ἄρμονίας συγχυθείσης εἰς στάσεις ἐνέπεσε καὶ φιλοτιμίας δημαγωγῶν, οὐκ ἐπαύσατο νοσοῦσα καὶ παραττομένη καὶ τύραννον ἐκ τυράννου μεταβάλλουσα, μέχρι οὗ Κλέωνος ἀναιρεθέντος εἴλοντο Τιμοκλείδαν ἄρχοντα καὶ Κλεινίαν, ἄνδρας ἐνδόξους τὰ μάλιστα καὶ ἐν δυνάμει τῶν πολιτῶν
 2 ὄντας. ἤδη δὲ τινα τῆς πολιτείας κατάστασιν ἔχειν δοκούσης Τιμοκλείδας μὲν ἀπέθανεν, Ἀβαντίδας δὲ ὁ Πασέου τυραννίδα πράττων ἐαυτῷ τὸν Κλεινίαν ἀπέκτεινε καὶ τῶν φίλων καὶ οἰκείων τοὺς μὲν ἐξέβαλε, τοὺς δὲ ἀνείλεν. ἐζήτηε δὲ καὶ τὸν υἱὸν αὐτοῦ, Ἄρατον, ἀνελεῖν, ἐπταετῆ
 3 καταλελειμμένον. ἐν δὲ τῇ περὶ τὴν οἰκίαν τα-

1028

¹ In 264 B.C.

noble qualities of their own and make their reputation dependent on their praises of others, nay rather, they associate their own careers with the careers of their great ancestors, whom they hail both as founders of their line and as directors of their lives. And therefore, now that I have written the life of Aratus, who was thy countryman and forefather, and to whom thou thyself art no discredit in either reputation or influence, I send it to thee, not as though thou hadst not been at pains from the beginning to have the most precise knowledge of thy great ancestor's career, but in order that thy sons Polycrates and Pythocles may be reared, now by hearing and now by reading, after examples found in their own family line—examples which it well becomes them to imitate. For it is the lover of himself, and not the lover of goodness, who thinks himself always superior to others.

II. The city of Sicyon, as soon as it had fallen away from its pure Doric form of aristocracy (which was now like a harmony dissolved) and had become a prey to factions and the ambitious schemes of demagogues, was without cease distempered and agitated, and kept changing one tyrant for another, until, after the murder of Cleon, Timocleides and Cleinias were chosen chief magistrates, men of the highest repute and influence among the citizens. But no sooner did the government appear to be somewhat settled than Timocleides died, and Abantidas the son of Paseas, attempting to make himself tyrant, slew Cleinias,¹ and, of the friends and kinsmen of Cleinias, banished some and killed others. He tried to kill also the son of Cleinias, Aratus, left fatherless at the age of seven. But in the confusion ραχῇ συνεκπεσὼν τοῖς φεύγουσιν ὁ παῖς, καὶ πλανώμενος ἐν τῇ πόλει περίφοβος καὶ ἀβοήθητος, κατὰ τύχην ἔλαθεν εἰς οἰκίαν παρελθὼν γυναικός, ἀδελφῆς μὲν Ἀβαντίδου, Προφάντῳ δὲ τῷ Κλεινίου ἀδελφῷ γεγαμημένης, ὄνομα Σωσοῦς. αὕτη δὲ καὶ τὸ ἦθος οὔσα γενναία καὶ σὺν θεῷ τινι τὸ παιδίον οἰομένη καταπεφευγέναι πρὸς αὐτὴν ἀπέκρυψεν ἔνδον, εἶτα νυκτὸς εἰς Ἄργος ὑπεξέπεμψεν.

III. Οὕτῳ δ' ἐκκλαπέντι τῷ Ἀράτῳ καὶ διαφυγόντι τὸν κίνδυνον εὐθὺς μὲν ἐνεφύετο καὶ συνηύξετο τὸ σφοδρὸν καὶ διάπυρον μῖσος ἐπὶ τοὺς τυράννους. τρεφόμενος δὲ παρὰ τοῖς ἐν Ἄργει ξένοις καὶ φίλοις πατρώοις ἐλευθερίως, καὶ τὸ σῶμα βλαστάνον ὀρώων εἰς εὐεξίαν καὶ μέγεθος, ἐπέδωκεν ἑαυτὸν ἀσκήσει τῇ περὶ παλαίστραν, ὥστε καὶ πένταθλον ἀγωνίσασθαι καὶ
 2 στεφάνων τυχεῖν. ἐπιφαίνεται δ' ἀμέλει καὶ ταῖς εἰκόσιν ἀθλητικῇ τις ἰδέα, καὶ τὸ συνετὸν τοῦ προσώπου καὶ βασιλικὸν οὐ παντάπασιν ἀρνείται τὴν ἀδηφαγίαν καὶ τὸ σκαφεῖον. ὅθεν ἐνδεέστερον ἴσως ἢ πολιτικῶ προσήκον ἦν ἀνδρὶ περὶ τὸν λόγον ἐσπούδασε· καίτοι γεγονέναι κομψότερον εἰπεῖν ἢ δοκεῖ τισιν ἐκ τῶν ὑπομνημάτων κρίνουσιν, ἃ παρέργως καὶ ὑπὸ χεῖρα διὰ τῶν ἐπιτυχόντων ὀνομάτων ἀμιλλησάμενος κατέλιπε.
 3 Χρόνῳ δὲ ὕστερον Ἀβαντίδαν μὲν οἱ περὶ Δεινίαν καὶ Ἀριστοτέλη τὸν διαλεκτικόν, εἰωθότα τοῖς λόγοις αὐτῶν κατ' ἀγορὰν σχολαζόντων ἐκά-which prevailed about the house the boy made his escape with the fugitives, and wandering about in the city, full of fear and helpless, by chance got unnoticed into the house of a woman who was a sister of Abantidas, but had married Prophantus the brother of Cleinias. Her name was Soso. This woman, who was of a noble nature, and thought it a divine dispensation that the boy had taken refuge with her, hid him in the house, and at night sent him secretly off to Argos.

¹ A contest involving the five arts of running, leaping, hurling the spear, boxing, and wrestling.

III. Thus was Aratus stolen away from the peril that threatened him, and at once that vehement and glowing hatred of tyrants for which he was noted became a part of his nature and grew with his growth. He was reared in liberal fashion among the guests and friends of his father's house at Argos, and since he saw that his bodily growth promised high health and stature, he devoted himself to the exercises of the palaestra, going so far as to win wreaths of victory in contesting the pentathlum.¹ And indeed even his statues have plainly an athletic look, and the sagacity and majesty of his countenance do not altogether disown the athlete's full diet and wielding of the mattock. Wherefore his cultivation of oratory was perhaps less intense than became a man in public life; and yet he is said to have been a more ornate speaker than some think who judge from the Commentaries which he left; these were a bye-work, and were composed in haste, off-hand, and in the words that first occurred to him in the heat of contest.

Some time after the escape of Aratus, Abantidas was slain by Deinias and Aristotle the logician. The tyrant was wont to attend all their public disputations στοτε παρῆναι καὶ συμφιλονεικεῖν, ἐμβαλόντες εἰς τοιαύτην διατριβὴν καὶ κατασκευάσαντες ἐπιβουλήν ἀνεῖλον, Πασέαν δὲ τὸν Ἀβαντίδου πατέρα τὴν ἀρχὴν ὑπολαβόντα Νικοκλῆς δολοφονήσας ἑαυτὸν ἀνέδειξε τύραννον. τοῦτον ἐμφερέστατον λέγουσι τὴν ὄψιν Περιάνδρῳ τῷ Κυψέλου γενέσθαι, καθάπερ Ἀλκμαίῳ μὲν τῷ Ἀμφιάρεω τὸν Πέρσην Ὀρόντην, Ἐκτορι δὲ τὸν Λακεδαιμόνιον νεαιίσκον, ὃν ἱστορεῖ Μυρτίλος ὑπὸ πλῆθους τῶν θεωμένων, ὡς τοῦτο ἔγνωσαν, καταπατηθῆναι.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

IV. Τοῦ δὲ Νικοκλέους τέσσαρας μῆνας τυραννοῦντος, ἐν οἷς πολλὰ κακὰ τὴν πόλιν ἐργασάμενος ἐκινδύνευσε ὑπὸ Αἰτωλῶν ἐπιβουλενομένην αὐτὴν ἀποβαλεῖν, ἤδη μειράκιον ὁ Ἄρατος ὢν ἀξίωμα λαμπρὸν εἶχε δι' εὐγένειαν καὶ φρόνημα, ὃ διέφαινε οὐ μικρὸν οὐδὲ ἀργόν, ἐμβριθὲς δὲ καὶ παρ' ἡλικίαν ἀσφαλεστέρα γνώμη κεκραμένον. ὅθεν οἱ τε φυγάδες μάλιστα τὸν νοῦν ἐκείνῳ προσεῖχον, ὃ τε Νικοκλῆς οὐκ ἡμέλει τῶν πραττομένων, ἀλλ' ἀδήλως ἀπεθεώρει καὶ παρεφύλαττεν αὐτοῦ τὴν ὁρμὴν, τόλμημα μὲν οὐδὲν τηλικούτου δεδιὼς οὐδὲ ἔργον οὐδὲν οὕτω παρακεκινδυνεμένον, ὑποπτεύων δὲ τοῖς βασιλεῦσιν αὐτὸν διαλέγεσθαι φίλοις οὔσι καὶ ξένοις πατρώοις. καὶ γὰρ ἀληθῶς ὁ Ἄρατος ἐπεχείρησε τὴν ὁδὸν ἐκείνην βαδίζειν. ὡς δὲ Ἀντίγονος μὲν ὑπισχνόμενος ἡμέλει καὶ παρῆγε¹ τὸν χρόνον, αἱ δὲ ἀπ'

¹ παρῆγε Coraës and Ziegler, with Ss: παρῆκε (let the time pass).

in the market-place and to take part in them; they encouraged him in this practice, laid a plot, and took his life. Paseas also, the father of Abantidas, after assuming the supreme power, was treacherously slain by Nicocles, who then proclaimed himself tyrant. This man is said to have borne a very close resemblance to Periander the son of Cypselus, just as Orontes the Persian did to Alcmaeon the son of Amphiaraius, and as the Spartan youth mentioned by Myrtilus did to Hector. Myrtilus tells us that when the throng of spectators became aware of this resemblance, the youth was trampled underfoot.

IV. Nicocles was tyrant of the city for four months, during which he wrought the city much harm, and narrowly escaped losing it to the Aetolians when they plotted to seize it. By this time¹ Aratus, now a young man, was held in marked esteem on account of his high birth, and of his spirit. This was showing itself to be not insignificant nor yet unenterprising, but earnest, and tempered with a judgement safe beyond his years. Wherefore the exiles from Sicyon had their minds fixed most of all upon him, and Nicocles was not neglectful of what was going on, but kept secret watch and ward over his undertakings, not because he feared any deed of so great daring and hazard as that in which Aratus finally engaged, but because he suspected that Aratus was in communication with the kings who had been on terms of friendship and hospitality with his father. And in truth Aratus had attempted to travel along that path. But since Antigonus² neglected his promises and prolonged the time, and since the hopes derived

¹ Antigonus Gonatas, king of Macedonia 283-239 B.C.

Αἰγύπτου καὶ παρὰ Πτολεμαίου μακρὰν ἦσαν ἐλπίδες, ἔγνω δι' αὐτοῦ καταλύειν τὸν τύραννον.

V. Πρώτοις δὲ κοινοῦται τὴν γνώμην Ἀριστομάχῳ καὶ Ἐκδήλῳ. τούτων ὁ μὲν ἐκ Σικυῶνος ἦν φυγίας, ὁ δὲ Ἐκδηλος Ἀρκὰς ἐκ Μεγάλης πόλεως, ἀνὴρ φιλόσοφος καὶ πρακτικός, Ἀρκεσιλάου τοῦ Ἀκαδημιακοῦ γεγονώς ἐν ἄστει συν-
2 ἦθης. δεξαμένων δὲ τούτων προθύμως διελέγετο τοῖς ἄλλοις φυγάσιν, ὧν ὀλίγοι μὲν αἰσχυρθέντες ἐγκαταλιπεῖν τὴν ἐλπίδα μετεῖχον τῶν πραττομένων, οἱ δὲ πολλοὶ καὶ τὸν Ἄρατον ἐπειρῶντο κατακωλύειν ὡς ἀπειρίᾳ πραγμάτων θρασυνόμενον.

3 Βουλευομένου δ' αὐτοῦ χωρίον τι τῆς Σικυωνίας καταλαβεῖν, ὅθεν ὠρμημένος διαπολεμήσει πρὸς τὸν τύραννον, ἦκεν εἰς Ἄργος ἀνὴρ Σικυώνιος ἐκ τῆς εἰρκτῆς ἀποδεδρακώς· ἦν δὲ τῶν φυγάδων ἐνὸς Ξενοκλέους ἀδελφός· καὶ τῷ Ἀράτῳ προσ-αχθεὶς ὑπὸ τοῦ Ξενοκλέους ἔλεγε τοῦ τείχους καθ' ὃν ὑπερβὰς αὐτὸς ἐσώθη τόπου, ἐντὸς μὲν ὀλίγου δεῖν ἐπίπεδον εἶναι, προσπεφυκότα χωρίοις πετρώδεσι καὶ ὑψηλοῖς, τὸ δὲ ἔξωθεν ὕψος ὑπὸ
4 κλιμάκων οὐ πάνυ ἀνέφικτον. ὡς δὲ ταῦτα ἤκουσεν ὁ Ἄρατος, ἐκπέμπει μετὰ τοῦ Ξενοκλέους οἰκέτας ἰδίους δύο, Σευθᾶν τε καὶ Τέχωννα, κατασκευομένους τὸ τείχος, ἐγνωκώς, εἰ δύναιτο, κρύφα καὶ πρὸς ἓνα κίνδυνον ὀξέως τὸ πᾶν ἀναρρῖψαι μᾶλλον ἢ μακρῷ πολέμῳ καὶ φανεροῖς ἀγῶσιν ἰδιώτης ἀντικαθίστασθαι πρὸς τύραννον.
5 ὡς δ' ἐπανῆλθον οἱ περὶ τὸν Ξενοκλέα τοῦ μὲν τείχους εἰληφότες μέτρα καὶ τοῦ τόπου τὴν φύσιν from Egypt and Ptolemy¹ were a long way off, he resolved to overthrow the tyrant by his own efforts.

V. The first to whom he imparted his design were Aristomachus and Ecdelus. Of these, the one was an exile from Sicyon, and Ecdelus was an Arcadian of Megalopolis, a student of philosophy and a man of action, who had been an intimate friend of Arcesilaüs the Academic at Athens. These men eagerly adopted his proposals, and he then began conversations with the other exiles. A few of these took part in the enterprise because they were ashamed to disappoint the hope placed in them, but the majority actually tried to stop Aratus, on the ground that his inexperience made him over-bold.

While he was planning to seize some post in the territory of Sicyon from which he might sally forth and make war upon the tyrant, there came to Argos a man of Sicyon who had run away from prison. He was a brother of Xenocles, one of the exiles; and when he had been brought to Aratus by Xenocles, he told him that the part of the city's wall over which he had climbed to safety was almost level with the ground on the inside, where it had been attached to steep and rocky places, and that on the outside it was not at all too high for scaling-ladders. When Aratus had heard this, he sent with Xenocles two servants of his own, Seuthas and Technon, to make an examination of the wall; for he was resolved, if he could, to hazard the whole enterprise on one secret and swift attempt, rather than in a long war and in open contests to match his private resources against those of a tyrant. So when Xenocles and his party came back with measurements of the wall ἀπαγγέλλοντες οὐκ ἄπορον οὐδὲ χαλεπὴν, τὸ δὲ λαθεῖν προσελθόντας ἐργῶδες εἶναι φάσκοντες ὑπὸ κηπουροῦ τινος κυναρίων, μικρῶν μὲν, ἐκτόπως δὲ μαχίμων καὶ ἀπαρηγορήτων, εὐθύς ἐνίστατο τὴν πρᾶξιν.

¹ Ptolemy Philadelphus, king of Egypt 283-247 B.C.

- VI. Ἡ μὲν οὖν τῶν ὄπλων παρασκευὴ συνήθησ ἦν, πάντων, ὡς ἔπος εἰπεῖν, τότε κλωπέαις χρωμένων καὶ καταδρομαῖς ἐπ' ἀλλήλους· τὰς δὲ κλίμακας Εὐφρίνωρ ὁ μηχανοποιὸς ἀναφανδὸν ἐπήξατο, τῆς τέχνης αὐτῷ τὸ ἀνύποπτον διδούσης, ἐπεὶ
- 2 καὶ αὐτὸς ἦν τῶν φυγάδων. ἄνδρας δὲ αὐτῷ τῶν μὲν ἐν Ἄργει φίλων ἕκαστος ἐξ ὀλίγων δέκα παρέσχεν, αὐτὸς δὲ τῶν ἰδίων οἰκετῶν τριάκοντα καθώπλισεν. ἐμισθώσατο δὲ καὶ διὰ πρώτου Ξενοφίλου τῶν ἀρχικλώπων οὐ πολλοὺς στρατιώτας, οἷς διεδόθη λόγος ὡς ἐπὶ τὰς ἵππους τὰς βασιλικὰς εἰς τὴν Σικυωνίαν ἔξοδος ἔσοιτο. καὶ προεπέμφθησαν οἱ πολλοὶ σποράδες ἐπὶ τὸν Πολυγνώτου πύργον, ἐκεῖ κελευσθέντες περιμεῖναι.
- 3 προεπέμφθη δὲ καὶ Καφισίας ὑπ' αὐτοῦ μετὰ τεσσάρων ἄλλων εὐζωνος, οὓς ἔδει πρὸς τὸν κηπουρὸν ἀφικέσθαι σκοταίους, φάσκοντας ὁδοιπόρους εἶναι, καὶ καταυλισαμένους αὐτόν τε συγκλείσαι καὶ τοὺς κύνας· οὐ γὰρ ἦν ἄλλη παρελθεῖν. τὰς δὲ κλίμακας διαλυτὰς οὔσας ἐμβαλόντες εἰς ἀχίνας καὶ κατακαλύψαντες ἐφ' ἀμαξῶν προαπέστειλαν.
- 4 Ἐν τούτῳ δὲ κατασκόπων τινῶν ἐν Ἄργει τοῦ Νικοκλέους φανέντων καὶ περιιέναι λεγομένων ἀδήλως καὶ παραφυλάττειν τὸν Ἄρατον, ἅμ' which they had taken, and with a report that the place was by nature not impassable nor even difficult (although they declared that it was hard to get to it undetected owing to a certain gardener's dogs, which were little beasts, but extraordinarily fierce and savage), Aratus at once undertook the business.

VI. Now the laying in of arms was nothing unusual, since almost everybody at that time indulged in robberies and predatory forays; and as for scaling-ladders, Euphranor the engineer made them openly, since his trade screened him from suspicion; and he too was one of the exiles. As for men, each of the friends of Aratus in Argos furnished him with ten out of the few they had, and he himself equipped thirty of his own servants with arms. Through Xenophilus, the foremost of the robber captains, he also hired a few soldiers, to whom it was given out that a foray was to be made into the territory of Sicyon to seize the horses of Antigonus. And most of them were sent on ahead in small bands to the tower of Polygnotus, with orders to wait there. Aratus also sent on in advance Caphisias, lightly armed, with four companions; their orders were to come to the gardener's when it was dark, pretending to be travellers, and after taking up quarters there for the night, to shut up him and his dogs; for there was no other way to get past them. The scaling-ladders, which could be taken apart, were packed in boxes, and thus concealed were sent on ahead in waggons.

In the meantime some spies of Nicocles appeared in Argos and were reported to be secretly going about and watching the movements of Aratus. As soon as it was day, therefore, Aratus left his house ἡμέρα προελθὼν καὶ φανερός ὢν ἐν ἀγορᾷ διέτριβε μετὰ τῶν φίλων· εἶτ' ἀλειψάμενος ἐν τῷ γυμνασίῳ καὶ παραλαβὼν τινας ἐκ τῆς παλαιίστρας τῶν εἰωθότων πίνειν καὶ ῥαθυμεῖν μετ' αὐτοῦ νεανίσκων ἀπῆγεν οἴκαδε· καὶ μετὰ μικρὸν ἑωρᾶτο τῶν οἰκετῶν αὐτοῦ δι' ἀγορᾶς ὁ μὲν στεφάνους φέρων, ὁ δὲ λαμπάδας ὠνούμενος, ὁ δὲ τοῖς εἰθισμένοις παρὰ πότον ψάλλειν καὶ αὐλεῖν γυναίκοις διαλεγόμενος. ταῦτα δὲ οἱ κατάσκοποι πάντα ὀρῶντες ἐξηπάτηντο καὶ πρὸς ἀλλήλους ἀναγελῶντες ἔλεγον· “ Οὐδὲν ἦν ἄρα τυράννου δειλότερον, εἰ καὶ Νικοκλῆς τηλικαύτην πόλιν ἔχων καὶ τοσαύτην δύναμιν ὀρρωδεῖ μειράκιον εἰς ἡδονὰς καὶ πότους μεθημερινούς τὰ τῆς φυγῆς ἐφόδια καταχρῶμενον.”

VII. Οἱ μὲν οὖν οὕτω παραλογισθέντες ἀπηλλάγησαν· ὁ δὲ Ἄρατος εὐθύς μετ' ἄριστον ἐξεληθὼν καὶ συνάψας πρὸς τὸν Πολυγνώτου πύργον τοῖς στρατιώταις εἰς Νεμέαν προῆγεν, ὅπου τὴν πρᾶξιν ἐξέφευγε τοῖς πολλοῖς τότε πρῶτον, ὑποσχέσεις τε καὶ παρακλήσεις ἐποιήσατο· καὶ σύνθημα παραδοὺς Ἀπόλλωνα ὑπερδέξιον προῆγεν ἐπὶ τὴν πόλιν, συμμέτρως τῇ περιφορᾷ τῆς σελήνης ἐπιταχύνων καὶ πάλιν ἀνιείς τὴν πορείαν, ὥστε τῷ μὲν φωτὶ χρῆσθαι καθ' ὁδόν, ἤδη δὲ δυομένης περὶ τὸν κῆπον εἶναι πλησίον τοῦ τείχους. ἐνταῦθα Καφισίας ἀπῆντησεν αὐτῷ, τῶν μὲν κυναρίων οὐ κρατήσας (ἔφθη γὰρ ἀποπηδήσαντα), τὸν δὲ κηπουρὸν ἐγκεκλεικῶς. ἀθύμους δὲ τοὺς πλείστους γενομένους καὶ κελεύοντας ἀπαλλάττεσθαι παρεθάρρυνεν ὁ Ἄρατος, ὡς ἀπάξων, ἂν οἱ κύνες ἄγαν ἐνοχλῶσιν αὐτοῖς. ἅμα and showed himself openly in the market-place, conversing with his friends; then he anointed himself in the gymnasium, took with him from the palaestra some of the young men who were wont to drink and make holiday with him, and went back home; and after a little one of his servants was seen carrying garlands through the market-place, another buying lights, and another talking with the women that regularly furnished music of harp and flute at banquets. When the spies saw all this, they were completely deceived, and with loud laughter said to one another: "Nothing, you see, is more timorous than a tyrant, since even Nicocles, though master of so great a city and so large a force, is in fear of a stripling who squanders on pleasures and mid-day banquets his means of subsistence in exile."

1030

VII. The spies, then, thus misled, left the city; but Aratus, immediately after the morning meal, sallied forth, joined his soldiers at the tower of Polygnotus, and led them on to Nemea. Here he disclosed his design, to most of them then for the first time, and made them exhortations and promises. Then, after giving out as watchword "Apollo Victorious," he led them forward against Sicyon, quickening or retarding his progress according to the revolution of the moon, so as to enjoy her light while on the march, and as soon as she was setting to be at the garden near the wall. There Caphisias came to meet him; he had not secured the dogs (for they had bounded off before he could do this), but had locked up the gardener. Most of his men were disheartened at this and urged Aratus to retire; but he tried to encourage them, promising to lead them back if the dogs should prove too troublesome for δὲ τοὺς τὰς κλίμακας φέροντας προπέμψας, ὧν Ἐκδηλος ἠγεῖτο καὶ Μνασίθεος, αὐτὸς ἐπηκολούθει σχολαίως, ἤδη τῶν κυναρίων εὐτόνως ὑλακτούντων καὶ συμπαρατρεχόντων τοῖς περὶ τὸν Ἐκδηλον. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ προσέμιξάν τε τῷ τείχει καὶ προσήρρισαν τὰς κλίμακας ἀσφαλῶς. ἀναβαινόντων δὲ τῶν πρώτων, ὁ τὴν ἑωθινήν φυλακὴν παραδιδούς ἐφώδευε κώδωνι, καὶ φῶτα πολλὰ καὶ θόρυβος ἦν τῶν ἐπιπορευομένων. οἱ δέ, ὥσπερ εἶχον, αὐτοῦ πτηξάντες ἐπὶ τῶν κλιμάκων τούτους μὲν οὐ χαλεπῶς ἔλαθον, ἄλλης δὲ φυλακῆς ἐναντίας ταύτῃ προσερχομένης εἰς τὸν ἔσχατον κίνδυνον ἦλθον. ὡς δὲ κάκεινην διέφυγον παρελθοῦσαν, εὐθύς ἀνέβαινον οἱ πρῶτοι Μνασίθεος καὶ Ἐκδηλος, καὶ τὰς ἐκατέρωθεν ὁδοὺς τοῦ τείχους διαλαβόντες ἀπέστελλον Τέχνηνα πρὸς Ἄρατον ἐπείγεσθαι κελεύοντες.

VIII. Ἦν δὲ οὐ πολὺ διίστημα ἀπὸ τοῦ κήπου πρὸς τὸ τεῖχος καὶ τὸν πύργον, ἐν ᾧ κύων μέγας ἐφρούρει θηρατικός. αὐτὸς μὲν οὖν οὐκ ἦσθετο τὴν ἔφοδον, εἴτε φύσει νωθῆς ὢν, εἴτε μεθ' ἡμέραν κατάκοπος γεγονώς. τῶν δὲ τοῦ κηπουροῦ κυναρίων κάτωθεν ἐκκαλουμένων αὐτὸν ὑπεφθέγγετο τυφλὸν καὶ ἄσημον τὸ πρῶτον, εἶτα μᾶλλον ἐπέτεινε παρερχομένων. καὶ κατεῖχεν ἤδη πολλὸς ὑλαγμὸς τὸ χωρίον, ὥστε τὸν πέραν φύλακα κραυγῇ μεγάλην πν. θάνεσθαι τοῦ κυνηγοῦ, πρὸς τίνα τραχέως οὕτως ὁ κύων ὑλακτεῖ, καὶ μὴ τι them. At the same time he sent forward the men who carried the scaling-ladders, under the command of Ecdelus and Mnasiheus, while he himself followed after them slowly, the dogs already barking vigorously and running along by the side of Ecdelus and his party. However, they reached the wall and planted their ladders against it without mishap. But as the first men were mounting the ladders, the officer who was to set the morning-watch began making his rounds with a bell, and there were many lights and the noise of the sentries coming up.¹ The invaders, however, crouched down just where they were on the ladders, and so escaped the notice of this party without any trouble; but since another watch was coming up to meet the first, they incurred the greatest danger. However, they escaped the notice of this guard also as it passed by, and then the leaders, Mnasiheus and Ecdelus, at once mounted to the top, and after occupying the approaches to the wall on either side, sent Technon to Aratus, urging him to hasten up.

¹ The sentries who had formed the night-watch came up at the sound of the bell, to be inspected, and then relieved by the morning-watch.

VIII. Now it was no great distance from the garden to the wall, and to the tower, in which a huge dog was on the watch, a hunter. The dog himself did not notice their approach, either because he was naturally sluggish, or because during the day he had become tired out. But when the gardener's whelps challenged him from below, he began to growl in response, faintly and indistinctly at first, then bayed out more loudly as they passed by. Presently the whole place resounded with barking, so that the watchman opposite called with a loud cry to the huntsman asking why his dog was baying so savagely and whether some mischief was not afoot. The hunts-γίνεται καινότερον. ὁ δ' ἀπὸ τοῦ πύργου αὐτῷ¹ ἀντεφώνησε μηδὲν εἶναι δεινόν, ἀλλὰ τὸν κύνα πρὸς τὸ φῶς τῶν τειχοφυλάκων καὶ τὸν ψόφον

 3 τοῦ κώδωνος παρωξύνθαι. τοῦτο μάλιστα τοὺς Ἄρατου στρατιώτας ἐπέρρωσεν, οἰομένους τὸν κυνηγὸν ἐπικρύπτειν κοινωνοῦντα τῇ πράξει, εἶναι δὲ πολλοὺς καὶ ἄλλους ἐν τῇ πόλει τοὺς συνεργοῦντας. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ τῷ τείχει προσβαλόν-των χαλεπὸς ἦν ὁ κίνδυνος καὶ μῆκος ἐλάμβανε, τῶν κλιμάκων κραδαινομένων εἰ μὴ καθ' ἓνα καὶ σχολαίως ἀναβαίνοιεν· ἡ δὲ ὥρα κατήπειγεν, ἤδη φθειγγομένων ἀλεκτρούϊων, καὶ ὅσον οὐπω τῶν 4 ἐξ ἀγροῦ τι φέρειν εἰωθότων πρὸς ἀγορὰν ἐπερχο-μένων. διὸ καὶ σπεύδων ὁ Ἄρατος ἀνέβαινε, τεσσαράκοντα τῶν πάντων ἀναβεβηκότων πρὸ αὐτοῦ· καὶ προσδεξάμενος ἔτι τῶν κάτωθεν ὀλίγους ἐπὶ τὴν οἰκίαν τοῦ τυράννου καὶ τὸ στρα-τήγιον ἀνήλθεν· ἐνταῦθα γὰρ οἱ μισθοφόροι παρενυκτέρευον. ἄφνω δὲ ἐπιπεσὼν αὐτοῖς καὶ συλλαβὼν ἅπαντας, οὐδένα δὲ ἀποκτείνας, εὐθὺς διεπέμπετο πρὸς τοὺς φίλους ἀνακαλούμενος 5 ἕκαστον ἀπ' οἰκίας. καὶ συνδραμόντων παν-ταχόθεν, ἡμέρα μὲν ὑπέλαμπεν ἤδη καὶ τὸ θέατρον ἦν ὄχλου μεστόν, ἔτι πρὸς τὴν ἄδηλον αἰωρουμένων φήμην καὶ σαφὲς οὐδὲν εἰδότων ὑπὲρ τῶν πραττομένων, πρὶν γε δὴ προελθὼν ὁ κήρυξ εἶπεν ὡς Ἄρατος ὁ Κλεινίου παρακαλεῖ τοὺς πολίτας ἐπὶ τὴν ἐλευθερίαν.

IX. Τότε δὲ πιστεύσαντες ἦκειν ἅ παλαι προσεδόκων, ὄρμησαν ἀθρόοι πρὸς τὰς θύρας τοῦ man answered him from the tower that there was nothing to fear, but that his dog had been excited by the lights of the sentries and the din of the bell. This more than anything else gave heart to the soldiers of Aratus. They thought that the huntsman was privy to their design and was trying to conceal it, and that there were many others also in the city who would assist them. However, when the rest of the company essayed the wall, their peril was grievous and protracted, since the ladders shook unless they mounted one by one and slowly; moreover, time was pressing, since cocks were already crowing, and directly the people who brought produce from the country to the market-place would be coming up. Therefore Aratus also mounted the wall in haste, after forty in all had mounted before him; and when he had been joined by a few more of those below, he went up against the tyrant's house and the praetorium, where the mercenary soldiers passed the night. And after falling upon these suddenly and capturing them all, but killing none, he straightway sent messages to his friends summoning them all from their homes, and they ran together from all quarters. Day was now breaking, and the theatre was thronged with people who still were in suspense because of the uncertain rumour that prevailed and in utter ignorance of what was afoot, until the herald came forward and made proclamation that Aratus the son of Cleinias invited the citizens to secure their freedom.

IX. Then, convinced that what they had long expected was come, they rushed in a body to the

¹ ἀπὸ . . . αὐτῶ bracketed by Sint.²; Ziegler reads πρὸς αὐτόν, with Stephanus.

- τυράννου πῦρ ἐπιφέροντες. ἤρθη δὲ φλόξ μεγάλη καὶ καταφανῆς μέχρι Κορίνθου τῆς οἰκίας ἀνα-φθείσης, ὥστε θαυμάσαντας τοὺς ἐν Κορίνθῳ παρὰ μικρὸν ὀρμῆσαι πρὸς τὴν βοήθειαν. ὁ μὲν οὖν Νικοκλῆς ἔλαθε διὰ τινων ὑπονόμων ὑπεκδύς 2 καὶ ἀποδρὰς ἐκ τῆς πόλεως, οἱ δὲ στρατιῶται καταπαύσαντες μετὰ τῶν Σικυωνίων τὸ πῦρ διήρπαζον τὴν οἰκίαν. καὶ οὔτε ταῦτα ἐκώλυσε ὁ Ἄρατος, τά τε λοιπὰ χρήματα τῶν τυράννων εἰς μέσον ἔθηκε τοῖς πολίταις. ἀπέθανε δὲ οὐδεὶς οὐδὲ ἐτρώθη τὸ παράπαν τῶν ἐπελθόντων οὐδὲ τῶν πολεμίων, ἀλλὰ καθαρὰν καὶ ἄθικτον αἵματος ἐμφυλίου τὴν πρᾶξιν ἢ τύχην διεφύλαξε.
- 3 Κατήγαγε δὲ φυγάδας τοὺς μὲν ὑπὸ Νικο-κλέους ἐκπεπτωκότας ὀγδοήκοντα, τοὺς δὲ ἐπὶ τῶν ἔμπροσθεν τυράννων οὐκ ἐλάττους πεντακοσίων, οἷς μακρὰ μὲν ἢ πλάνη καὶ ὁμοῦ τι πεντηκονταετῆς ἐγεγόνει. κατελθόντες δὲ οἱ πλείστοι πένητες, ὧν κύριοι πρότερον ἦσαν ἐπελαμβάνοντο, καὶ βαδίζοντες ἐπὶ τὰ χωρία καὶ τὰς οἰκίας δεινὴν ἀπορίαν τῷ Ἄρατῳ παρείχον, ἐπιβουλευομένην μὲν ἕξωθεν καὶ φθονουμένην ὑπ' Ἀντιγόνου τὴν πόλιν ὀρῶντι διὰ τὴν ἐλευθερίαν, ταραττομένην δὲ ὑφ' αὐτῆς καὶ στασιάζουσαν.
- 4 Ὅθεν ἐκ τῶν παρόντων ἄριστα κρίνας προσέ-μιξεν αὐτὴν φέρων τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς· καὶ Δωριεῖς ὄντες ὑπέδυσαν ἐκουσίως ὄνομα καὶ πολιτείαν τὴν Ἀχαιῶν οὔτε ἀξίωμα λαμπρὸν οὔτε μεγάλην ἰσχὺν ἐχόντων τότε. μικροπολίται γὰρ ἦσαν οἱ πολλοί, καὶ γῆν οὔτε χρηστὴν οὔτε ἄφθονον

residence of the tyrant, carrying firebrands. A great flame arose as the house caught fire, and it was visible as far as Corinth, so that the people of Corinth were astonished and were on the point of sallying forth to help. Nicocles, then, slipped out unnoticed by way of certain underground passages, and ran away from the city, and the soldiers, after extinguishing the fire with the aid of the Sicyonians, plundered his house. Nor did Aratus prevent this, but put the rest of the wealth of the tyrants at the disposition of the citizens. And not a man was killed or even wounded at all, either among the assailants or their enemies, but fortune preserved the enterprise free from the taint of civil bloodshed.

Aratus restored eighty exiles who had been banished by Nicocles, and those also who had fled the city during the reign of former tyrants, to the number of five hundred. These had long been wanderers, yes, for close to fifty years. And now that they had come back, most of them in poverty, they laid claim to the property which they had formerly held, and by going to their farms and houses threw Aratus into great perplexity. For he saw that the city was plotted against by outsiders and eyed with jealousy by Antigonus because it had regained its freedom, while it was full of internal disturbances and faction.

Wherefore, as things stood, he thought it best to attach the city promptly to the Achaean League; and so, though the people of Sicyon were Dorians, they voluntarily assumed the name and civil polity of the Achaeans, who at that time had neither brilliant repute nor great strength. For most of them lived in small cities, owned land that was ἐκέκτηντο, καὶ θαλάττη προσώκουν ἀλιμένω, τὰ πολλὰ κατὰ ραχίας ἐκφερομένη πρὸς τὴν ἠπειρον.

5 ἀλλὰ μάλιστα δὴ διέδειξαν οὗτοι τὴν Ἑλληνικὴν ἀλκὴν ἀπρόσμαχον οὔσαν, ὅσάκις τύχοι κόσμου καὶ συντάξεως ὁμοφρονούσης καὶ νοῦν ἔχοντος ἡγεμόνος, οἷ τῆς μὲν πάλαι τῶν Ἑλλήνων ἀκμῆς οὐδέν, ὡς εἰπεῖν, μέρος ὄντες, ἐν δὲ τῷ τότε μιᾷς ἀξιολόγου πόλεως σύμπαντες ὁμοῦ δύναμιν οὐκ 6 ἔχοντες, εὐβουλία καὶ ὁμονοία, καὶ ὅτι τῷ πρώτῳ κατ' ἀρετὴν ἐδύναντο μὴ φθονεῖν, ἀλλὰ πείθεσθαι καὶ ἀκολουθεῖν, οὐ μόνον αὐτοὺς ἐν μέσῳ πόλεων καὶ δυνάμεων τηλικούτων καὶ τυραννίδων διεφύλαξαν ἐλευθέρους, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν ἄλλων Ἑλλήνων ὡς πλείστους ἐλευθεροῦντες καὶ σώζοντες διετέλουν.

X. Ἦν δὲ Ἄρατος τῷ τρόπῳ πολιτικός, μεγαλόφρων, ἀκριβέστερος εἰς τὰ κοινὰ μᾶλλον τῶν ιδίῳν, πικρῶς μισοτύρανος, ἔχθρας ὄρω καὶ 2 φιλίας ἀεὶ τῷ κοινῷ συμφέροντι χρώμενος. ὅθεν οὐχ οὕτως δοκεῖ γεγονέναι φίλος ἀκριβῆς, ὡς ἐχθρὸς εὐγνώμων καὶ πρᾶος, ὑπὸ τῆς πολιτείας ἐπ' ἀμφοτέρα τῷ καιρῷ μεταβαλλόμενος, ὁμονοίας ἔθνῶν καὶ κοινωνίας πόλεων καὶ συνεδρίου καὶ θεάτρου μίαν φωνὴν ἀφιέντος ὡς οὐδενὸς ἄλλου τῶν καλῶν ἐραστής, πολέμῳ καὶ ἀγῶνι χρήσασθαι φανερώς ἀθαρσῆς καὶ δύσελπις, κλέψαι δὲ πράγματα καὶ συσκευάσασθαι κρύφα πόλεις 3 καὶ τυράννους ἐπηβολώτατος. διὸ καὶ πολλὰ τῶν ἀνελπίστων κατορθώσας ἐν οἷς ἐτόλμησεν, οὐκ ἐλάττονα δοκεῖ τῶν δυνατῶν ἐγκαταλιπεῖν

neither fertile nor extensive, and were neighbours to a sea that had no harbours and for the most part washed a precipitous and rocky shore. But this people more than any other showed the world that Greek prowess was invincible, whenever it enjoyed good order, harmonious discipline, and a sensible leader. For though they had taken almost no part in the ancient glories of Greece, and at this time, though counted all together, had not the power of a single considerable city, still, owing to their good counsels and their concord, and because they were able, in place of envying, to obey and follow the one who was pre-eminent among them for virtue, they not only preserved their own freedom in the midst of so great cities and powers and tyrannies, but also were continually saving and setting free very many of the other Greeks.

X. Aratus was by natural bent a statesman, high-minded, more exact in his public than in his private relations, a bitter hater of tyrants, and ever making a regard for the public weal determine his enmity or his friendship. Wherefore he seems to have proved not so much a strict friend, as a considerate and mild enemy, changing his ground in either direction according to the exigencies of the state, loving concord between nations, community of cities, and unanimity of council and assembly, beyond all other blessings. It was manifest that he resorted to open warfare and strife without courage and with little confidence, but that in stealing advantages and secretly managing cities and tyrants he was most proficient. Therefore, though he won many unexpected successes where he showed courage, he seems to have lost no fewer favourable opportunities through δι' εὐλάβειαν. οὐ γὰρ μόνον, ὡς ἔοικε, θηρίων τινῶν ὄψεις ἐνεργοὶ διὰ σκότους οὖσαι μεθ' ἡμέραν ἀποτυφλοῦνται ξηρότητι καὶ λεπτότητι τῆς περὶ τὸν ὀφθαλμὸν ὑγρότητος μὴ φερούσης τὴν πρὸς τὸ φῶς σύγκρασιν, ἀλλὰ καὶ δεινότης τίς ἐστὶν ἀνθρώπου καὶ σύνεσις ἐν τοῖς ὑπαίθροις καὶ διακεκηρυγμένοις εὐτάρακτος φύσει, πρὸς δὲ τὰς ἐπικρύφους καὶ λαθραίους ἀναθαρσοῦσα πράξεις.

 4 τὴν δὲ τοιαύτην ἀνωμαλίαν ἔνδεια λόγου φιλοσό-φου περὶ τὰς εὐφυΐας ἀπεργάζεται, τὴν ἀρετὴν, ὡς περὶ καρπὸν αὐτοφυῆ καὶ ἀγεώργητον, ἐκφερούσασ δίχα τῆς ἐπιστήμης. ταῦτα μὲν οὖν ἐξετα- 103
 ζέσθω τοῖς παραδείγμασιν.

XI. Ὁ δὲ Ἄρατος, ἐπεὶ κατέμιξε τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς ἑαυτὸν καὶ τὴν πόλιν, ἐν τοῖς ἵππευσι στρατευ-ὄμενος ἠγαπᾶτο δι' εὐπείθειαν ὑπὸ τῶν ἀρχόντων, ὅτι, καίπερ συμβολὰς τῷ κοινῷ μεγάλας δεδωκὼς τὴν ἑαυτοῦ δόξαν καὶ τὴν τῆς πατρίδος δύναμιν, ὡς ἐνὶ τῶν ἐπιτυχόντων χρῆσθαι παρείχεν αὐτῷ τὸν ἀεὶ στρατηγούντα¹ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν, εἴτε Δυ-μαῖος, εἴτε Τριταιεὺς, εἴτε μικροτέρας τινὸς ὧν 2 τύχοι πόλεως. ἦκε δὲ αὐτῷ καὶ χρημάτων δωρεὰ παρὰ τοῦ βασιλέως πέντε καὶ εἴκοσι τάλαντα.
 ταῦτα ἔλαβε μὲν ὁ Ἄρατος, λαβὼν δὲ τοῖς ἑαυτοῦ πολίταις ἐπέδωκεν ἀπορουμένοις εἷς τε τὰλλα καὶ λύτρωσιν αἰχμαλώτων.

XII. Ἐπεὶ δὲ οἱ φυγάδες ἦσαν ἀπαρηγόρητοι τοῖς ἔχουσι τὰς κτήσεις ἐνοχλοῦντες, ἢ τε πόλις ἐκινδύνευεν ἀνάστατος γενέσθαι, μίαν ὁρῶν ἐλπίδα τὴν Πτολεμαίου φιλανθρωπίαν ὤρμησεν ἐκπλεῦ-

¹ τὸν ἀεὶ στρατηγούντα Ziegler, with Sint.¹ and the MSS. :
 τῷ ἀεὶ στρατηγούντι.

over-caution. For not only in the case of certain wild beasts, as it would seem, is the vision strong by night but wholly blinded in the day-time (since the humour in their eyes is too dry and delicate to bear contact with the light), but there is also in some men a cleverness and sagacity which is prone to be confounded in transactions that are carried out under the open sky and proclaimed abroad by public criers, but when confronting hidden and secret enterprises recovers its courage. Such unevenness a lack of philosophy may cause in men of good natural parts; they produce virtue without scientific knowledge, and it is like spontaneous and uncultivated fruit. This can be proved by examples.

XI. Aratus, now, after uniting himself and his city with the Achaeans, served in the cavalry, and was beloved by his commanders on account of his ready obedience. For although he had made great contributions to the commonwealth in his own reputation and the power of his native city, he gave his services like those of any ordinary person to the one who from time to time was general of the Achaeans, whether he was a man of Dyme or of Tritaea, or of a meaner city. And there came to him also a gift of money from the king of Egypt, five-and-twenty talents. These Aratus accepted, but gave them at once to his fellow-citizens, who were in want of money, especially for the ransoming of such as had been taken prisoners.

XII. But the exiles were not to be dissuaded from molesting those who were in possession of their property, and the city was in danger of an upheaval. Aratus saw that his only hope was in the generosity of Ptolemy, and therefore determined to sail to

- σαι καὶ δεηθῆναι τοῦ βασιλέως ὅπως αὐτῷ
 2 χρήματα συμβάληται πρὸς τὰς διαλύσεις. ἀνήχθη μὲν οὖν ἀπὸ Μοθώνης ὑπὲρ Μαλέας, ὡς τῷ διὰ πόρου δρόμῳ χρησόμενος. πρὸς δὲ μέγα πνεῦμα καὶ πολλὴν θύλασσαν ἐκ πελάγους κατι-οῦσαν ἐνδόντος τοῦ κυβερνήτου, παραφερόμενος μόλις ἤψατο τῆς Ἀδρίας πολεμίας οὔσης. ἐκρα-τεῖτο γὰρ ὑπὸ Ἀντιγόνου καὶ φυλακὴν εἶχεν· ἦν φθίας ἀπέβη, καὶ τὴν ναῦν καταλιπὼν ἀπεχώρησε μακρὰν ἀπὸ θαλάσσης ἔχων ἓνα τῶν 3 φίλων σὺν αὐτῷ Τιμάνθην. καὶ καταβαλόντες ἑαυτοὺς εἰς τινα τόπον ὕλης γέμοντα χαλεπῶς ἐνυκτέρευον. ὀλίγῳ δὲ ὕστερον ὁ φρούραρχος ἐπελθὼν καὶ ζητῶν τὸν Ἄρατον ὑπὸ τῶν θερα-πόντων ἐξηπατήθη τῶν ἐκείνου, δεδιδαγμένων λέγειν ὡς εὐθὺς ἀποδρὰς εἰς Εὐβοίαν ἐξέπλευσε.
 τὰ μέντοι κομιζόμενα καὶ τὴν ναῦν καὶ τοὺς θεραποντας ἀπέφηνε πολέμια καὶ κατέσχε.
- 4 Μετὰ δὲ ἡμέρας οὐ πολλὰς ἐν ἀπόροις ὄντι τῷ Ἄρατῳ γίνεται τις εὐτυχία, Ῥωμαϊκῆς νεῶς παραβαλούσης κατὰ τὸν τοπὸν ἐν ᾧ τὰ μὲν ἐπὶ σκοπὴν ἀνιών, τὰ δὲ κρυπτόμενος διῆγεν. ἔπλει μὲν οὖν ἡ ναῦς εἰς Συρίαν, ἐπέβη δὲ πείσας τὸν ναύκληρον ἄχρι Καρίας διακομισθῆναι· καὶ διεκομίσθη κινδύνοις αὐθις οὐκ ἐλάττοσι χρησάμενος 5 κατὰ θάλατταν. ἐκ δὲ Καρίας χρόνῳ πολλῷ περαιωθείς εἰς Αἴγυπτον αὐτόθεν τε τῷ βασιλεῖ διακειμένῳ πρὸς αὐτὸν οἰκείως ἐνέτυχε, καὶ τεθερα-

Egypt and beg the king to furnish him with money for the settlement of these disputes. So he put to sea from Mothone above Malea, intending to make the shortest passage. But the steersman could not make head against a strong wind and high waves that came in from the open sea, and being carried out of his course got with difficulty to Adria,¹ which was a hostile place. For it was in the power of Antigonus, and held a garrison of his. Aratus anticipated arrest by landing, and forsaking the ship withdrew a long way from the sea, having with him one of his friends, Timanthes. They threw themselves into a place that was thickly covered with woods, and had a grievous night of it. A little later the commander of the garrison came to the ship in search of Aratus, and was deceived by his servants, who had been instructed to say that he had run away at once and had sailed off to Euboea. The ship, however, with its cargo and the servants of Aratus, was declared a prize of war and detained.

After a few days, while still in this helpless plight, Aratus met with a rare piece of good fortune, for a Roman ship put in at the place where he was staying, sometimes on a lookout-place, and sometimes hiding himself. The ship was bound for Syria, but after going on board Aratus persuaded the master of the vessel to convey him as far as Caria. Thither he was conveyed, encountering fresh perils by sea and perils as great as before. From Caria, after a long time, he made his way across to Egypt, and found the king both naturally well disposed towards him, and much grati-

¹ The text is probably corrupt. Bergk suggested Hydrea, an island off the N.E. coast of Peloponnesus. Others think of Andros, an island S.E. of Euboea.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

πευμένω γραφαῖς καὶ πίναξιν ἀπὸ τῆς Ἑλλάδος, ἐν οἷς κρίσιν ἔχων οὐκ ἄμουσον ὁ Ἄρατος αἰέτι τῶν τεχνικῶν καὶ περιπτῶν, μάλιστα δὲ Παμφίλου καὶ Μελάνθου, συνάγων καὶ κτώμενος ἀπέστειλεν.

XIII. Ἦνθει γὰρ ἔτι δόξα τῆς Σικυωνίας μούσης καὶ χρηστογραφίας, ὡς μόνης ἀδιάφθορον ἐχούσης τὸ καλόν, ὥστε καὶ Ἀπελλῆν ἐκείνου ἤδη θαυμαζόμενον ἀφικέσθαι καὶ συγγενέσθαι τοῖς ἀνδράσιν ἐπὶ ταλάντῳ, τῆς δόξης μᾶλλον ἢ τῆς τέχνης δεόμενον μεταλαβεῖν. διὸ τὰς μὲν ἄλλας εἰκόνας τῶν τυράννων ἀνεῖλεν εὐθύς ὁ Ἄρατος, ὅτε τὴν πόλιν ἠλευθέρωσε, περὶ δὲ τῆς Ἀριστράτου κατὰ Φίλιππον ἀκμάσαντος ἐβου-
 2 λεύσατο πολὺν χρόνον. ἐγράφη μὲν γὰρ ὑπὸ πάντων τῶν περὶ τὸν Μέλανθον ἄρματι νικηφόρῳ παρεστῶς ὁ Ἀρίστρατος, Ἀπελλοῦ συνεφασαμένου τῆς γραφῆς, ὡς Πολέμων ὁ περιηγητὴς ἰστόρηκεν. ἦν δὲ τὸ ἔργον ἀξιοθέατον, ὥστε γνάμπτεσθαι τὸν Ἄρατον ὑπὸ τῆς τέχνης, αὐθίς
 3 κελεύειν καθαιρεῖν. τὸν οὖν ζωγράφον Νεάλκη φίλον ὄντα τοῦ Ἀράτου παραιτεῖσθαι φασὶ καὶ δακρύειν, ὡς δ' οὐκ ἔπειθεν, εἰπεῖν ὅτι τοῖς τυράννοις πολεμητέον, οὐ τοῖς τῶν τυράννων. “Ἐάσωμεν οὖν τὸ ἄρμα καὶ τὴν Νίκην, αὐτὸν δέ σοι 1033 παρέξω τὸν Ἀρίστρατον ἐγὼ παραχωροῦντα τοῦ πίνακος.” ἐπιτρέψαντος οὖν τοῦ Ἀράτου δι-

¹ Philip II., 382-336 B.C.

fied because Aratus had sent him drawings and paintings from Greece. In these matters Aratus had a refined judgement, and was continually collecting and acquiring works of artistic skill and excellence, especially those of Pamphilus and Melanthus. These he would send to Ptolemy.

XIII. For the fame of Sicyon's refined and beautiful paintings was still in full bloom, and they alone were thought to have a beauty that was indestructible. Therefore even the great Apelles, when he was already admired, came to Sicyon and gave a talent that he might be admitted into the society of its artists, desiring to share their fame rather than their art. Hence it was that Aratus, although he at once destroyed the other portraits of the tyrants when he had given the city its freedom, deliberated a long time about that of Aristratus (who flourished in the time of Philip of Macedon¹). For it was the work of Melanthus and all his pupils, and Aristratus was painted standing by a chariot in which was a Victory; Apelles also had a hand in the painting, as we are told by Polemon the Topographer. And the work was a marvellous one, so that Aratus was moved by the artistic skill therein; but afterwards, such was his hatred of the tyrants, that he ordered it to be removed and destroyed. Accordingly, the painter Nealces, who was a friend of Aratus, interceded with him for the picture, as we are told, and with tears, and when he could not persuade him, said that war should be waged against the tyrants, but not against the treasures of the tyrants. "Let us therefore leave the chariot and the Victory, but Aristratus himself I will undertake to remove from the picture." Aratus

ἤλειψεν ὁ Νεάλκης τὸν Ἀρίστρατον, εἰς δὲ τὴν χώραν φοίνικα μόνον ἐνέγραψεν, ἄλλο δὲ οὐδὲν ἐτόλμησε παραβαλεῖν. τοὺς δὲ πόδας ἐξαλειφομένου τοῦ Ἀριστράτου διαλαθεῖν ὑπὸ τὸ ἄρμα λέγουσιν.

- 4 Ἐκ τε δὴ τούτων ὁ Ἄρατος ἠγαπᾶτο, καὶ διδοὺς
 πείραν ἔτι μᾶλλον ἤψατο τοῦ βασιλέως, καὶ δωρεὰν ἔλαβε τῇ πόλει πεντήκοντα καὶ ἑκατὸν τάλαντα. καὶ τούτων τεσσαράκοντα μὲν εὐθύς μεθ' ἑαυτοῦ κομίζων εἰς Πελοπόννησον κατήρε, τὰ δὲ λοιπὰ διελὼν εἰς δόσεις ὁ βασιλεὺς ὕστερον
 κατὰ μέρος ἀπέστειλεν.

XIV. Ἦν μὲν οὖν μέγα καὶ τὸ χρήματα τοσαῦτα πορίσαι τοῖς πολίταις, ὅσων μικρὸν μέρος ἄλλοι στρατηγοὶ καὶ δημαγωγοὶ λαμβάνοντες παρὰ βασιλέων ἠδίκουν καὶ κατεδουλοῦντο καὶ προέπινον αὐτοῖς τὰς πατρίδας, μείζων δὲ ἢ διὰ τῶν χρημάτων τούτων κατασκευασθεῖσα τοῖς μὲν ἀπόροις πρὸς τοὺς πλουσίους διάλυσις καὶ ὁμό-νοια, τῷ δὲ δήμῳ παντὶ σωτηρία καὶ ὑσφύλεια, θαυμαστὴ δὲ ἢ τοῦ ἀνδρὸς ἐν δυνάμει τοσαύτη 2 μετριότης. ἀποδειχθεὶς γὰρ αὐτοκράτωρ διαλλακτῆς καὶ κύριος ὅλως ἐπὶ τὰς φυγαδικὰς οἰκονομίας μόνος οὐχ ὑπέμεινεν, ἀλλὰ πεντεκαίδεκα τῶν πολιτῶν προσκατέλεξεν ἑαυτῷ, μεθ' ὧν πόνῳ πολλῷ καὶ μεγάλαις πραγματείαις κατειργάσατο καὶ συνήρμωσε φιλίαν καὶ εἰρήνην τοῖς πολίταις.
 ἐφ' οἷς οὐ μόνον κοινῇ σύμπαντες οἱ πολῖται τιμὰς ἀπέδσαν αὐτῷ πρεπούσας, ἀλλὰ καὶ κατ'

therefore yielded, and Nealces erased the figure of Aristratus, and in its place painted a palm-tree merely, not daring to introduce anything else. We are told, however, that the feet of the erased figure of Aristratus were left by an oversight beneath the chariot.

In consequence of this love of art Aratus was already beloved by the king, and in personal intercourse grew yet more upon him, and received for his city a gift of a hundred and fifty talents. Forty of these Aratus took with him at once and sailed to Peloponnesus; the rest the king divided into instalments, and sent them to him afterwards one by one.

XIV. Now it was a great achievement to procure so large a sum of money for his fellow-citizens; other generals and leaders of the people had taken but a fraction of this sum from kings in payment for wronging, enslaving, and betraying to them their native cities. But it was a far greater achievement by means of this money to have effected a harmonious adjustment of the disputes between rich and poor, and safety and security for the entire people. Moreover, we must admire the moderation of the man in the exercise of so great power. For when he was appointed independent arbiter, with absolute powers for settling the money affairs of the exiles, he would not accept the office alone, but associated with himself fifteen of his fellow-citizens, by whose aid, after much toil and great trouble, he established peace and friendship among his fellow-citizens.¹ For these services not only did the entire body of citizens bestow fitting public honours upon him, but the exiles also on their own account erected a bronze

¹ Cf. Cicero, De Off. ii. 23, 81ff.

ἰδίαν οἱ φυγάδες εἰκόνα χαλκῆν ἀναστήσαντες ἐπέγραψαν τόδε τὸ ἐλεγεῖον·

- 3 βουλαὶ μὲν καὶ ἄεθλα καὶ ἡ περὶ Ἑλλάδος ἀλκά τοῦδ' ἀνδρὸς στάλαις πλάθεται Ἡρακλέους· ἄμμες δ' εἰκόν', Ἄρατε, τεὰν νόστοιο τυχόντες στάσαμεν ἀντ' ἀρετᾶς ἠδὲ δικαιοσύνας σωτῆρος σωτήρσι θεοῖς, ὅτι πατρίδι τᾶ σᾶ δαιμόνιον¹ θείαν τ' ὄπασας εὐνομίαν.

- XV. Ταῦτα διαπραξάμενος ὁ Ἄρατος τοῦ μὲν πολιτικοῦ φθόνου μείζων ἐγεγόνει διὰ τὰς χάριτας, Ἀντίγονος δ' ὁ βασιλεὺς ἀνιώμενος ἐπ' αὐτῷ καὶ βουλόμενος ἢ μετάγειν ὄλως τῇ φιλίᾳ πρὸς αὐτὸν ἢ διαβάλλειν πρὸς τὸν Πτολεμαῖον, ἄλλας τε φιλανθρωπίας ἐνεδείκνυτο μὴ πάνυ προσιεμένῳ, καὶ θύων θεοῖς ἐν Κορίνθῳ μερίδας εἰς Σικυῶνα 2 τῷ Ἀράτῳ διέπεμπε. καὶ παρὰ τὸ δεῖπνον, ἐστιωμένων πολλῶν, εἰς μέσον φθεγξάμενος, “Ὀμιην,” ἔφη, “τὸν Σικυῶνιον τοῦτον νεανίσκον ἐλευθέριον εἶναι τῇ φύσει μόνον καὶ φιλοπολίτην· ὁ δὲ καὶ βίων ἔοικε καὶ πραγμάτων βασιλικῶν ἰκανὸς εἶναι κριτής. πρότερον γὰρ ἡμᾶς ὑπερεώρα ταῖς ἐλπίσιν ἔξω βλέπων καὶ τὸν Αἰγύπτιον ἐθαύμαζε πλοῦτον, ἐλέφαντας καὶ στόλους καὶ αὐλὰς ἀκούων, νυνὶ δὲ ὑπὸ σκηνὴν ἑωρακῶς πάντα τὰ ἐκεῖ πράγματα τραγωδίαν ὄντα καὶ σκηνογραφίαν 3 ὅλος ἡμῖν προσκεχώρηκεν. αὐτὸς τε οὖν ἀποδέχομαι τὸ μεираκιον ἐγνωκῶς εἰς ἅπαντα χρῆ-

¹ δαιμόνιον Sint.² and Ziegler, after Zeitz: δαίμον' ἴσον.

statue of him, and inscribed thereon the following elegiac verses :—

“The counsels, valorous deeds, and prowess in behalf of Hellas, which this man has displayed, are known as far as the Pillars of Heracles ; but we who achieved our return through thee, Aratus, for thy virtue and justice, have erected to the Saviour Gods this statue of our saviour, because to thy native city thou hast brought a sacred and heavenly reign of law.”

XV. These successful achievements placed Aratus beyond the jealousy of his fellow-citizens, owing to the gratitude which he inspired ; but Antigonus, the king, was annoyed by the policy of Aratus, and wished either to bring him over into complete friendship with himself or to alienate him from Ptolemy. He therefore showed him many kindnesses which were not at all welcome, and especially this, that as he was sacrificing to the gods at Corinth, he sent portions of the victims to Aratus at Sicyon. And at the banquet which followed, where many guests were present, he said, so that all could hear : “ I thought this Sicyonian youth was merely free-spirited and a lover of his fellow-citizens ; but he would seem to be a capable judge also of the lives and actions of kings. For formerly he was inclined to overlook us, fixing his hopes elsewhere, and he admired the wealth of Egypt, hearing tales of its elephants, and fleets, and palaces ; but now that he has been behind the scenes and seen that everything in Egypt is play-acting and painted scenery, he has come over entirely to us. Therefore I both welcome the young man myself, having determined to make every possible use of σθαι, καὶ ὑμᾶς ἀξιῶ φίλον νομίζειν." τούτους τοὺς λόγους ὑπόθεσιν λαβόντες οἱ φθονεροὶ καὶ κακοήθεις διημιλλῶντο ταῖς ἐπιστολαῖς ἀλλήλοις, πολλὰ καὶ δυσχερῆ κατὰ τοῦ Ἀράτου τῷ Πτολεμαίῳ γράφοντες, ὥστε κακείνου ἐγκαλοῦντα πέμψαι. ταῖς μὲν οὖν περιμαχίτοις καὶ διαπύροις τοξευομέναις ἔρωσι φιλίαις βασιλέων καὶ τυράννων τοσοῦτον προσῆν φθόνου καὶ κακοηθείας.

XVI. Ὁ δὲ Ἄρατος αἰρεθεὶς στρατηγὸς τὸ πρῶτον ὑπὸ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν τὴν μὲν ἀντιπέρας Λοκρίδα καὶ Καλυδωνίαν ἐπόρθησε, Βοιωτοῖς δὲ μετὰ μυρίων στρατιωτῶν βοηθῶν ὑστέρησε τῆς μάχης, ἣν ὑπὸ Αἰτωλῶν περὶ Χαιρώνειαν ἠττήθησαν, 1034 Ἄβοιωκρίτου τε τοῦ βοιωτάρχου καὶ χιλίων σὺν 2 αὐτῷ πεσόντων. ἐνιαυτῷ δὲ ὕστερον αὐτοῖς στρατηγῶν ἐνίστατο τὴν περὶ τὸν Ἀκροκόρινθον πρᾶξι, οὐ Σικυωνίων οὐδ' Ἀχαιῶν κηδόμενος, ἀλλὰ κοινίην τινα τῆς Ἑλλάδος ὅλης τυραννίδα, τὴν 3 Μακεδόνων φρουρὰν, ἐκεῖθεν ἐξελάσαι διανοούμενος. Χάρης μὲν γὰρ ὁ Ἀθηναῖος ἐν τινι μάχῃ πρὸς τοὺς βασιλέως στρατηγοὺς εὐτυχήσας ἔγραψε τῷ δήμῳ τῶν Ἀθηναίων ὡς νεικῆκοι τῆς ἐν Μαραθῶνι μάχης ἀδελφὴν ταύτην δὲ τὴν πρᾶξιν οὐκ ἂν ἀμάρτοι τις ἀδελφὴν προσειπὼν τῆς Πελοπίδου τοῦ Θηβαίου καὶ Θρασυβούλου τοῦ Ἀθηναίου τυραννοκτονίας, πλὴν ὅτι τῷ μὴ πρὸς Ἑλληνας, ἀλλὰ ἐπακτὸν ἀρχὴν γεγυμέναι 4 καὶ ἀλλόφυλον αὐτῆ διήνεγκεν. ὁ μὲν γὰρ Ἴσθ-him, and I ask you to consider him a friend." These words were seized upon by the envious and malevolent, who vied with one another in writing to Ptolemy many grievous charges against Aratus, so that the king sent an envoy and upbraided him. So great malice and envy attend upon the friendships of kings and tyrants, for which men strive and at which they aim with ardent passion.

XVI. Aratus now, having been chosen general of the Achaean League for the first time, ravaged the opposite territories of Locris and Calydonia, and went to the assistance of the Boeotians with an army of ten thousand men. He came too late, however, for the battle at Chaeroneia, in which the Boeotians were defeated by the Aetolians, with the loss of Aboecritus, their Boeotarch, and a thousand men. A year later,¹ being general again, he set on foot the enterprise for the recovery of Acrocorinthus,² not in the interests of Sicyonians or Achaeans merely, but purposing to drive from that stronghold what held all Hellas in a common subjection,—the Macedonian garrison. Chares the Athenian, having been successful in a battle with the king's generals, wrote to the people of Athens that he had won a battle which was "sister to that at Marathon"; and this enterprise of Aratus may be rightly called a sister of those of Pelopidas the Theban and Thrasybulus the Athenian, in which they slew tyrants, except that it surpassed them in being undertaken, not against Greeks, but against a foreign and alien power. For ¹ In 243 B.C., two years later. The office of general in the League could not be held by the same person in successive years. Cf. chap. xxiv. 4.

² The citadel of Corinth.

μός. ἐμφρυσσων τὰς θαλάσσας, εἰς ταὐτὸ συνάγει τὸ τοπῶ¹ καὶ συνάπτει τὴν ἡπειρον ἡμῶν, ὃ δὲ Ἄκροκόρινθος, ὑψηλὸν ὄρος, ἐκ μέσης ἀναπεφυκῶς τῆς Ἑλλάδος, ὅταν λάβῃ φρουράν, ἐνίσταται καὶ ἀποκόπτει τὴν ἐντὸς Ἴσθμοῦ πᾶσαν ἐπιμιξιῶν τε καὶ παρόδων καὶ στρατειῶν ἐργασίας 5 τε κατὰ γῆν καὶ κατὰ θάλατταν, καὶ ἓνα κύριον ποιεῖ τὸν ἄρχοντα καὶ κατέχοντα φρουρᾶ τὸ χωρίον, ὥστε μὴ παίζοντα δοκεῖν τὸν νεώτερον Φίλιππον, ἀλλ' ἀληθῶς, ἐκάστοτε πέδας τῆς Ἑλλάδος τὴν Κορινθίων πόλιν προσαγορεύειν.

XVII. Πᾶσι μὲν οὖν περιμάχητος ἦν ὁ τόπος αἰεὶ καὶ βασιλεῦσι καὶ δυνάσταις, ἡ δὲ Ἀντιγόνου σπουδὴ περὶ αὐτὸν οὐδὲν ἀπέλιπε πάθει τῶν ἐμμανεστάτων ἐρώτων, ἀλλ' ὅλος ἀνήρητο ταῖς φροντίσιν ὅπως ἀφαιρήσεται δόλω τοὺς ἔχοντας,
 2 ἐπεὶ φανερώς ἀνέλπιστος ἦν ἡ ἐπιχείρησις. Ἀλεξάνδρου γάρ, ὑφ' ὃν τὸ χωρίον ἦν, ἀποθανόντος (ὡς λέγεται) φαρμάκοις ὑπ' αὐτοῦ, Νικαίας δὲ τῆς ἐκείνου γυναικὸς ἐπὶ τῶν πραγμάτων γενομένης καὶ φυλαττούσης τὸν Ἄκροκόρινθον, εὐθύς ὑποπέμπων Δημήτριον τὸν υἱὸν αὐτῆς, καὶ γλυκείας ἐλπίδας ἐνδιδούς γάμων βασιλικῶν καὶ συμβιώσεως πρὸς οὐκ ἀηδὲς ἐντυχεῖν γυναικὶ
 3 πρεσβυτέρᾳ μειράκιον, αὐτὴν μὲν ἠρήκει, τῷ παιδὶ χρυσάμενος ὥσπερ ἄλλῳ τινὶ τῶν δελεασμάτων ἐπ' αὐτῆς, τὸν δὲ τόπον οὐ προἰεμένης, ἀλλ' ἐγκρατῶς φυλαττούσης, ἀμελεῖν προσποιούμενος ἔθνε γάμους αὐτῶν ἐν Κορίνθῳ, καὶ θέας ἐπετέλει καὶ

¹ τὸ τόπω Cairns: τῷ τόπω.

the Isthmus of Corinth, forming a barrier between the seas, brings together the two regions, and thus unites our continent; and when Acrocorinthus, which is a lofty hill springing up at this centre of Greece, is held by a garrison, it hinders and cuts off all the country south of the Isthmus from intercourse, transits, and the carrying on of military expeditions by land and sea, and makes him who controls the place with a garrison sole lord of Greece. Therefore it is thought that the younger Philip of Macedon¹ uttered no jest, but the truth, whenever he called the city of Corinth "the fetters of Greece."

XVII. Accordingly, the place was always an object of great contention among kings and dynasts, but the eagerness of Antigonus to secure it fell nothing short of the most frenzied passion, and he was wholly absorbed in schemes to take it by stratagem from its possessors, since an open attempt upon it was hopeless. For when Alexander,² in whose hands the place was, had died of poison given him (it is said) in obedience to Antigonus, and his wife Nicaea had succeeded to his power and was guarding the citadel, Antigonus at once sent his son Demetrius to her in furtherance of his schemes, and by inspiring her with pleasant hopes of a royal marriage and of wedded life with a young man who would be no disagreeable company for an elderly woman, he captured her, using his son for all the world like a bait for her. The citadel, however, she did not give up, but kept it under strong guard. Pretending, therefore, indifference to this, Antigonus celebrated the nuptials of the pair in Corinth, exhibiting

¹ Philip V., 237-179 B.C.

² The tyrant of Corinth.

πότους συνήγε καθ' ἡμέραν, ὡς ἂν τις μάλιστα παίζειν καὶ σχολάζειν τὴν διάνοιαν ὑφ' ἡδονῆς 4 καὶ φιλοφροσύνης ἀφεικῶς. ἐπεὶ δὲ καιρὸς ἦν, ἄδοντας Ἀμοιβέως ἐν τῷ θεάτρῳ, παρέπεμπε τὴν Νίκαιαν αὐτὸς ἐπὶ τὴν θέαν ἐν φορεῖῳ κεκοσμη-μένῳ βασιλικῶς, ἀγαλλομένην τε τῇ τιμῇ καὶ πορρωτάτῳ τοῦ μέλλοντος οὔσαν. γενόμενος δὲ τῆς ὁδοῦ κατὰ τὴν ἐκτροπὴν τὴν ἄνω φέρουσαν, ἐκείνην μὲν ἐκέλευσε προάγειν εἰς τὸ θέατρον, αὐτὸς δὲ χαίρειν μὲν Ἀμοιβέα, χαίρειν δὲ τοὺς γάμους εἴσας ἀνήγει πρὸς τὸν Ἀκροκόρινθον ἀμιλ-λώμενος παρ' ἡλικίαν· καὶ κεκλεισμένην τὴν πύ-λην εὐρών, ἔκοπτε τῇ βακτηρία κελεύων ἀνοίγειν.
 5 οἱ δ' ἔνδον ἀνέφξαν καταπλαγέντες. οὕτω δὲ τοῦ τόπου κρατήσας, οὐ κατέσχευεν αὐτόν, ἀλλ' ἔπινε παίζων ὑπὸ χαρᾶς ἐν τοῖς στενωποῖς, καὶ δι' ἀγορᾶς αὐλητρίδας ἔχων καὶ στεφάνους περικεί-μενος, ἰνὴρ γέρων καὶ τηλικαύταις πραγμάτων μεταβολαῖς κεχρημένος, ἐκώμαζε δεξιούμενος καὶ προσαγορεύων τοὺς ἀπαντῶντας. οὕτως ἄρα καὶ λύπης καὶ φόβου μᾶλλον ἐξίστησι καὶ σάλον παρέχει τῇ ψυχῇ τὸ χαίρειν ἄνευ λογισμοῦ παραγινόμενον.

XVIII. Ἄλλὰ γὰρ Ἀντίγονος μὲν, ὥσπερ εἴρη-ται, κτησάμενος τὸν Ἀκροκόρινθον ἐφύλαττε, μετὰ τῶν ἄλλων οἷς ἐπίστευε μάλιστα καὶ Περ- 1035
 σαῖον ἐπιστήσας ἄρχοντα τὸν φιλόσοφον. ὁ δὲ Ἄρατος ἔτι μὲν καὶ Ἀλεξάνδρου ζῶντος ἐπεχείρησε τῇ πράξει, γενομένης δὲ συμμαχίας τοῖς
 2 Ἀχαιοῖς πρὸς τὸν Ἀλέξανδρον ἐπαύσατο. τότε

spectacles and giving banquets every day, as one whom pleasure and kindness led to think chiefly of mirth and ease. But when the crucial moment came, and as Amoebeus was about to sing in the theatre, he escorted Nicaea in person to the spectacle. She was borne in a litter which had royal trappings, plumed herself on her new honour, and had not the remotest suspicion of what was to happen. Then, arrived at the diverging street that led up to the citadel, Antigonus gave orders that Nicaea should be borne on into the theatre, while he himself, bidding adieu to Amoebeus, and adieu to the nuptials, went up to Acrocorinthus with a speed that belied his years; and, finding the gate locked, he beat upon it with his staff and ordered it to be opened. And the guards within, stupefied, opened it. Thus master of the place, he could not contain himself for joy, but drank and disported himself in the streets, and with music-girls in his train and garlands on his head, old man that he was and acquainted with so great vicissitudes of fortune, revelled through the market-place, greeting and clasping hands with all who met him. Thus we see that neither grief nor fear transports and agitates the soul as much as joy that comes unexpectedly.

XVIII. Antigonus, then, having got Acrocorinthus into his power, as I have said, kept it under guard, putting men there whom he most trusted, and making Persaeus the philosopher their commander. Now Aratus, even while Alexander was still living, had set his hand to the enterprise, but an alliance was made between the Achaeans and Alexander, and he therefore desisted. At the time of which I speak, δὲ αὐθις ἐξ ὑπαρχῆς ἑτέραν ἔλαβε τῆς πράξεως ὑπόθεσιν τοιαύτην.

- Ἦσαν ἐν Κορίνθῳ τέσσαρες ἀδελφοὶ Σύροι τὸ γένος, ὧν εἷς ὄνομα Διοκλῆς ἐν τῷ φρουρίῳ μισθοφορῶν διέτριβεν. οἱ δὲ τρεῖς κλέψαντες βασιλικὸν χρυσίον ἦλθον εἰς Σικυῶνα πρὸς Αἰγίαν τινὰ τραπεζίτην, ᾧ διὰ τὴν ἐργασίαν ὁ Ἄρατος ἐχρῆτο. καὶ μέρος μὲν εὐθύς διέθεντο τοῦ χρυσίου, τὸ δὲ λοιπὸν εἰς αὐτῶν Ἐργίνος ἐπιφοιτῶν ἡσυχῇ
- 3 κατήλλαπτεν. ἐκ δὲ τούτου γενόμενος τῷ Αἰγία συνήθης, καὶ προαχθεὶς εἰς λόγον ὑπ' αὐτοῦ περὶ τῆς φρουρᾶς, ἔφη πρὸς τὸν ἀδελφὸν ἀναβαίνων πρὸς τὸ κρημνῶδες ἐντομὴν καθεωρακέσαι πλαγίαν, ἄγουσαν ἢ χθαμαλώτατον ἐπωκοδόμηται τῷ φρουρίῳ τὸ τεῖχος. προσπαίξαντος δὲ αὐτῷ τοῦ Αἰγίου καὶ εἰπόντος· “Εἶτα, ᾧ βέλτιστε, διὰ μικρὸν οὕτω χρυσίον ἀνασπᾶτε τὰς βασιλικὰς πράξεις, δυνάμενοι μίαν ὥραν πολλῶν ἀποδόσθαι χρημάτων; ἢ γὰρ οὐχὶ καὶ τοιχωρῦχοις καὶ προδόταις ἀλοῦσιν ἅπαξ ἀποθανεῖν ὑπάρχει;”
- 4 γελάσας ὁ Ἐργίνος τότε μὲν ὠμολόγησεν ἀποπειρᾶσθαι τοῦ Διοκλέους (τοῖς γὰρ ἄλλοις ἀδελφοῖς μὴ πάνυ τι πιστεύειν), ὀλίγαις δὲ ὕστερον ἡμέραις ἐπανελθὼν συντίθεται τὸν Ἄρατον ἄξειν πρὸς τὸ τεῖχος, ὅπου τὸ ὕψος οὐ μείζον ἢν πεντεκαίδεκα ποδῶν, καὶ τὰλλα συμπράξειν μετὰ τοῦ Διοκλέους.

XIX. Ὁ δὲ Ἄρατος ἐκείνοις μὲν ἐξήκοντα τάλαντα δώσειν κατορθώσας ὠμολόγησεν, ἦν δὲ ἀποτύχη, σωθῆ δὲ μετ' ἐκείνων, οἰκίαν ἑκατέρῳ καὶ τάλαντον. ἐπεὶ δὲ ἔδει παρὰ τῷ Αἰγία τὰ ἐξήκοντα τάλαντα κείσθαι τοῖς περὶ τὸν Ἐργίνον, however, a new and fresh basis for the enterprise was found by him in the following circumstances.

There were in Corinth four brothers, Syrians by race, one of whom, Diocles by name, was serving as a mercenary soldier in the citadel. The other three, after stealing some gold plate of the king's, came to Aegias, a banker in Sicyon with whom Aratus did business. A portion of the gold they disposed of to him at once, but the remainder was being quietly exchanged by one of them, Erginus, in frequent visits. Erginus thus became well acquainted with Aegias, and having been led by him into conversation about the garrison in the citadel, said that as he was going up to see his brother he had noticed in the face of the cliff a slanting fissure leading to where the wall of the citadel was at its lowest. Thereupon Aegias fell to jesting with him, and said: "Do you, then, best of men, thus for the sake of a little gold plate rifle the king's treasures, when it is in your power to sell a single hour's work for large sums of money? Don't you know that burglars as well as traitors, if they are caught, have only one death to die?" Erginus burst out laughing, and as a first step agreed to make trial of Diocles (saying that he had no confidence at all in his other brothers), and a few days afterwards came back and bargained to conduct Aratus to the wall at a spot where it was not more than fifteen feet in height, and to aid in the rest of the enterprise together with Diocles.

XIX. Aratus on his part agreed to give the men sixty talents if he was successful, and in case he failed, and he as well as they got off safely, to give each of them a house and a talent. Then, since the sixty talents had to be deposited with Aegias for ὁ δὲ Ἄρατος οὔτε αὐτὸς εἶχεν οὔτε ἐβούλετο δανειζόμενος αἰσθησιν ἐτέρῳ τῆς πράξεως παρασχεῖν, λαβὼν τῶν ἐκπωμάτων τὰ πολλὰ καὶ τὰ χρυσία τῆς γυναικὸς ὑπέθηκε τῷ Αἰγία πρὸς τὸ ἀργύριον. οὔτω γὰρ ἐπήρτο τῇ ψυχῇ καὶ τοσοῦτον ἔρωτα τῶν καλῶν πράξεων εἶχεν, ὥστε τὸν Φωκίωνα καὶ τὸν Ἐπαμεινώνδαν ἐπιστάμενος Ἑλλήνων δικαιοτάτους καὶ κρατίστους γεγονέναι δοκοῦντας ἐπὶ τῷ διώσασθαι δωρεὰς μεγάλας καὶ μὴ προέσθαι χρημάτων τὸ καλόν, αὐτὸς εἰς ταῦτα δαπανᾶσθαι κρύφα καὶ προεισφέρειν, ἐν οἷς ἐκινδύνευε μόνος ὑπὲρ πάντων οὐδὲ εἰδότες τὰ πρατόμενα, ἤρειτο. τίς γὰρ οὐκ ἂν θαυμάσειε καὶ συναγωνίσαιτο ἔτι νῦν τῇ μεγαλοψυχίᾳ τοῦ ἀνδρός, ὠνούμενου χρημάτων τοσοῦτων κίνδυνον τηλικούτου, καὶ τὰ τιμιώτατα δοκοῦντα τῶν κτημάτων ὑποτιθέντος, ὅπως παρειαχθεὶς νυκτὸς εἰς τοὺς πολεμίους διαγωνίσηται περὶ τῆς ψυχῆς, ἐνέχυρον λαβὼν τὴν ἐλπίδα τοῦ καλοῦ παρ' αὐτῶν, ἄλλο δὲ οὐδέν ;

XX. Οὐσαν δὲ καθ' αὐτὴν ἐπισφαλῆ τὴν πράξιν ἐπιπυλαστέραν ἐποίησεν ἁμαρτία τις εὐθύς ἐν ἀρχῇ συμβᾶσα δι' ἄγνοιαν. ὁ γὰρ οἰκέτης τοῦ Ἄρατου Τέχων ἐπέμφθη μὲν ὡς μετὰ τοῦ Διοκλέους κατασκευσόμενος τὸ τεῖχος, οὐπω δ' ἦν τῷ Διοκλεῖ πρότερον ἐντετυχηκῶς κατ' ὄψιν, ἀλλὰ τὴν μορφήν αὐτοῦ καὶ τὸ εἶδος δοκῶν κατέχειν ἐξ ὧν ὁ Ἐργίνος ἐπεσήμηεν οὐλοκόμηνη καὶ μελάγγρου καὶ ἀγένειον. ἐλθὼν οὖν¹ ὅπου συνετέ-

¹ ἀγένειον. ἐλθὼν οὖν Coraës and Ziegler, with the MSS. : ἀγένειον, ἐλθὼν.

Erginus, and Aratus neither had them himself nor was willing by borrowing them to give anyone else a suspicion of his undertaking, he took most of his plate and his wife's golden ornaments and deposited them with Aegias as security for the money. For he was so exalted in spirit and had so great a passion for noble deeds that, knowing as he did that Phocion and Epaninondas were reputed to have been the justest and best of Greeks because they spurned great gifts and would not betray their honour for money, he elected to expend his own substance secretly, as an advance, on an enterprise in which he alone was risking his life for the whole body of citizens, who did not even know what was going on. For who will not admire the magnanimity of the man, and yearn even now to lend a helping hand, who purchased at so high a price so great a danger, and pledged what he thought the most precious of his possessions in order that he might be introduced by night among his enemies and contend for his life, receiving as his security from his countrymen the hope of a noble action, and nothing else?

XX. Now the enterprise was dangerous in itself, but was made more dangerous still by a mistake which occurred at the very beginning through ignorance. For Technon, the servant of Aratus, had been sent to inspect the wall with Diocles, and had not yet met Diocles face to face, but thought he would know how he looked because Erginus had described him as curly-haired, of a swarthy complexion, and without a beard. Having come, therefore, to the place appointed, he was τακτο, τὸν Ἐργίνον ὡς ἀφιζόμενον μετὰ τοῦ Διοκλέους ἀνέμενε πρὸ τῆς πόλεως πρὸ τοῦ καλουμένου Ὀριθος. ἐν δὲ τούτῳ πρῶτος ἀδελφὸς Ἐργίνου καὶ Διοκλέους ὄνομα Διονύσιος οὐ συνειδὼς τὴν πρᾶξιν οὐδὲ κοινωνῶν, ὁμοιος δὲ τῷ Διοκλεῖ, προσήει κατὰ τύχην. ὁ δὲ Τέχνων πρὸς τὰ σημεῖα τῆς μορφῆς τῇ ὁμοιότητι κινήθεισ 1036 ἠρώτησε τὸν ἄνθρωπον εἴ τι συμβόλαιον αὐτῷ πρὸς Ἐργίνον εἶη. φήσαντος δὲ ἀδελφὸν εἶναι, παντάπασιν ὁ Τέχνων ἐπέισθη τῷ Διοκλεῖ διαλέγεσθαι· καὶ μήτε τοῦνομα πυθόμενος μήτ' ἄλλο μηδὲν προσμείνας τεκμήριον ἐμβάλλει τε τὴν δεξιὰν αὐτῷ καὶ περὶ τῶν συγκειμένων πρὸς τὸν Ἐργίνον ἐλάλει κἀκείνου ἀνέκρινεν. ὁ δὲ δεξιόμενος αὐτοῦ τὴν ἁμαρτίαν πανούργως ὠμολόγει τε πάντα καὶ πρὸς τὴν πόλιν ἀναστρέψας ὑπήγει 4 ἀνυπόπτως διαλεγόμενος. ἤδη δὲ πλησίον ἕντος αὐτοῦ καὶ μέλλοντος ὅσον οὐπω τὸν Τέχνωνα διαλαμβάειν, ἀπὸ τύχης αὐτὸ πάλιν ὁ Ἐργίνος αὐτοῖς ἀπήντησεν. αἰσθόμενος δὲ τὴν ἀπάτην καὶ τὸν κίνδυνον διὰ νεύματος ἐδήλωσε τῷ Τέχνωνι φεύγειν· καὶ ἀποπηδήσαντες ἀμφοτέροι δρόμῳ πρὸς τὸν Ἄρατον ἀπεσώθησαν. οὐ μὲν ἀπέκαμεταῖς ἐλπίσιν ἐκεῖνος, ἀλλ' ἔπεμψεν εὐθύς τὸν Ἐργίνον χρυσίον τε τῷ Διονυσίῳ κομίζοντα καὶ 5 δεησόμενον αὐτοῦ σιωπᾶν. ὁ δὲ καὶ τοῦτο ἐποίησε καὶ τὸν Διονύσιον ἄγων μεθ' ἑαυτοῦ πρὸς τὸν Ἄρατον ἦλθεν. ἐλθόντα δὲ αὐτὸν οὐκέτι διῆκαν, ἀλλὰ δήσαντες ἐφύλαττον ἐν οἰκίσκῳ κατακεκλεισμένον· αὐτοὶ δὲ παρεσκευάζοντο πρὸς τὴν ἐπίθεσιν.

XXI. Ἐπεὶ δὲ ἦν ἔτοιμα πάντα, τὴν μὲν ἄλλην waiting for Erginus to come there with Diocles, just outside the city, near what was called the Ornis. As he was waiting, however, the oldest brother of Erginus and Diocles, named Dionysius, who was not privy to the enterprise and took no part in it, but resembled Diocles, chanced to come up. So Technon, moved by the similarity in the marks of his outward appearance, asked him if he was connected at all with Erginus; and on his saying that he was a brother, Technon was altogether convinced that he was talking with Diocles, and without inquiring his name, or waiting for any other proof whatever, gave him his hand and began chatting with him and asking him questions about what had been agreed upon with Erginus. Dionysius took cunning advantage of his mistake, assented to all that he said, and turning his back towards the city led him along in unsuspecting conversation. But just as he was near the city, and was at the very point of seizing Technon, by a second chance Erginus met them. Erginus comprehended the trick and the danger, motioned Technon to fly, and both of them ran off and got safely to Aratus. Aratus, however, would not give up hope, but at once sent Erginus to bribe Dionysius and beg him to hold his tongue. Erginus not only did this, but actually brought Dionysius with him to Aratus. And now that Dionysius was there they would not let him go, but bound him and kept him indoors under lock and key, while they themselves prepared for their attack.

XXI. When all things were ready, Aratus ordered

- δύναμιν ἐκέλευσεν ἐπὶ τῶν ὄπλων νυκτερεύειν, ἀναλαβὼν δὲ λογάδας τετρακοσίους οὐδ' αὐτοὺς εἰδότας τὰ πραττόμενα, πλὴν ὀλίγων, ἤγε πρὸς τὰς πύλας παρὰ τὸ Ἡραῖον. ἦν δὲ τοῦ ἔτους ἡ περὶ θέρος ἀκμάζον ὥρα, τοῦ δὲ μηνὸς πανσέληνος, ἡ δὲ νύξ ἀνέφελος καὶ καταφανής, ὥστε καὶ φόβον τὰ ὄπλα παρέχειν ἀντιλάμποντα πρὸς
- 2 τὴν σελήνην, μὴ τοὺς φύλακας οὐ λάθωσιν. ἤδη δὲ τῶν πρώτων ἐγγὺς ὄντων ἀπὸ θαλάσσης ἀνέδραμε νέφη καὶ κατέσχε τὴν τε πόλιν αὐτὴν καὶ τὸν ἔξω τόπον ἐπίσκιον γενόμενον. ἐνταῦθα δὲ οἱ μὲν ἄλλοι συγκαθίσαντες ὑπελύοντο τὰς κρηπίδας· οὔτε γὰρ ψόφον ποιοῦσι πολὺν οὔτ' ὀλισθήματα λαμβάνουσι γυμνοῖς τοῖς ποσὶν ἀντιλαμβανόμενοι τῶν κλιμάκων· ὁ δὲ Ἐργίνος ἐπτὰ λαβὼν νεανίσκους ἐσταλμένους ὁδοιπορικῶς ἔλαθε
- 3 τῇ πύλῃ προσμίξας. καὶ τὸν πυλωρὸν ἀποκτινύουσι καὶ τοὺς μετ' αὐτοῦ φύλακας. ἅμα δὲ αἶτε κλίμακες προσετίθεντο καὶ κατὰ σπουδὴν ὁ Ἄρατος ὑπερβιβάσας ἑκατὸν ἄνδρας, τοὺς δ' ἄλλους ἔπεσθαι κελεύσας ὡς ἀνδύωνται τάχιστα, τὰς κλίμακας ἀναρπάσας ἐχώρει διὰ τῆς πόλεως μετὰ τῶν ἑκατὸν ἐπὶ τὴν ἄκραν, ἤδη περιχαρῆς διὰ τὸ λανθάνειν ὡς κατορθῶν.
- 4 Καὶ πῶς ἔτι πρόσωθεν αὐτοῖς ἀπήντα σὺν φωτὶ φυλακῇ τεσσάρων ἀνδρῶν οὐ καθορωμένοις· ἔτι γὰρ ἦσαν ἐν τῷ σκιαζομένῳ τῆς σελήνης· ἐκείνους δὲ προσιόντας ἐξ ἐναντίας καθορώσι. μικρὸν οὖν ὑποστείλας τειχίοις τισὶ καὶ οἰκοπέδοις, ἐνέδραν ἐπὶ τοὺς ἄνδρας καθίζει. καὶ τρεῖς μὲν αὐτῶν ἐμπεσόντες ἀποθνήσκουσιν, ὁ δὲ τέταρτος πληγεὶς ξίφει τὴν κεφαλὴν ἔφυγε, βοῶν ἔνδον εἶναι

the rest of his forces to pass the night under arms, and taking with him four hundred picked men, few of whom knew what was on foot themselves, led them towards the gate of Corinth near by the temple of Hera. It was midsummer, the moon was at its full, and the night was cloudless and clear, so that they feared lest the gleam of their arms in the moonlight should disclose them to the sentinels. But just as the foremost of them were near the wall, clouds ran up from the sea and enveloped the city itself and the region outside, which thus became dark. Then the rest of them sat down and took off their shoes, since men make little noise and do not slip if they are barefooted when they climb ladders; but Erginus, taking with him seven young men equipped as travellers, got unnoticed to the gate. Here they slew the gate-keeper and the sentries who were with him. At the same time the ladders were clapped to the wall, and after getting a hundred men over in all haste, Aratus ordered the rest to follow as fast as they could; then he pulled his ladders up after him and marched through the city with his hundred men against the citadel, being already full of joy at his escape from detection and confident of success.

A little farther on they encountered a watch of four men with a light; they were not seen by them, being still in the shade of the moon, but saw them coming up in the opposite direction. So they drew back a little for shelter beneath some walls and buildings, and set an ambush for the men. Three of them they killed in their attack, but the fourth, with a sword-wound in his head, took to flight, crying

5 τὸν πολέμιον. καὶ μετὰ μικρὸν αἶτε σάλπιγγες ἐπεσήμαινον, ἥ τε πόλις ἐξανίστατο πρὸς τὰ γινόμενα, πλήρεις τε ἦσαν οἱ στενωποὶ διαθεόντων, καὶ φῶτα πολλά, τὰ μὲν κάτωθεν ἤδη, τὰ δὲ ἄνωθεν ἀπὸ τῆς ἄκρας περιέλαμπε, καὶ κραυγὴ συνερρήγγυτο πανταχόθεν ἄσημος.

XXII. Ἐν τούτῳ δὲ ὁ μὲν Ἄρατος ἐμφὺς τῇ πορείᾳ παρὰ τὸ κρημνῶδες ἡμιλλᾶτο, βραδέως καὶ τάλαιπῶρος τὸ πρῶτον, οὐ κατακρατῶν, ἀλλ' ἀποπλανώμενος τοῦ τρίβου παντάπασιν ἐνδεδυκός καὶ πεοισκιάζομένου ταῖς τραχύτησι καὶ διὰ πολλῶν ἐλιγμῶν καὶ παραβολῶν περαίνοντος πρὸς τὸ τεῖχος. εἶτα θαυμάσιον οἶον ἢ σελήνη λέγεται διαστέλλουσα τὰ νέφη καὶ ὑπολαμπούσα,¹ τῆς ὁδοῦ τὸ χαλεπώτατον σαφηνίζειν, ἕως ἤψατο τοῦ τείχους καθ' ὃν ἔδει τόπον· ἐκεῖ δὲ πάλιν συνεσκίασε καὶ ἀπέκρυψε νεφῶν συνελθόντων.

2 Οἱ δὲ περὶ τὰς πύλας ἔξω περὶ τὸ Ἡραῖον ἀπολειφθέντες τοῦ Ἄρατου στρατιῶται, τριακόσιοι τὸ πλῆθος ὄντες, ὡς ποτε παρεισέπεσον εἰς τὴν πόλιν θορύβου τε παντοδαποῦ καὶ φώτων 1037 γέμουσαν, οὐ δυνηθέντες ἐξανευρεῖν τὸν αὐτὸν τρίβον οὐδ' εἰς ἴχνος ἐμβῆναι τῆς ἐκείνων πορείας, ἔπτηξαν ἀθρόοι πρὸς τινι παλινσκίῳ λαγόνι τοῦ κρημνοῦ συστείλαντες ἑαυτοὺς, καὶ διεκαρτέρου ἐνταῦθα περιπαθοῦντες καὶ δυσανασχετοῦντες.

3 βαλλομένων γὰρ ἀπὸ τῆς ἄκρας ἤδη τῶν περὶ τὸν Ἄρατον καὶ μαχομένων, ἀλαλαγμὸς ἐναγώνιος ἐχώρει κάτω, καὶ κραυγὴ περιήχει, διὰ τὴν ἀπὸ τῶν ὀρῶν ἀνάκλασιν συγκεχυμένη καὶ ἄδηλος out that the enemy were in the city. And presently the trumpets were sounding, the city was in an uproar over what was happening, the streets were full of people running up and down, many lights were flashing, some in the city below and some in the citadel above, and a confused shouting broke forth on all hands.

¹ ὑπολαμπούσα Coraës and Bekker, adopting an anonymous conjecture: ὑπολαβοῦσα.

XXII. Meanwhile Aratus was struggling up the steep with all his might, slowly and laboriously at first, unable to keep to the path and wandering from it, since it was everywhere sunk in the shadows of the jutting cliffs and had many twists and turns before it came out at the wall of the citadel. Then, marvellous to relate, the moon is said to have parted the clouds and shone out, making the most difficult part of the road plain, until he got to the wall at the spot desired; there the clouds came together again and everything was hidden in darkness.

But the soldiers of Aratus whom he had left at the gate outside near the temple of Hera, three hundred in number, when once they had burst into the city and found it full of lights and manifold tumult, were unable to discover the path which their comrades had taken or follow in their steps. So they crouched down and huddled themselves together in a shaded flank of the cliff, and there remained in great distress and impatience. For Aratus and his party were now assailed with missiles from the citadel and were fighting, the shouts of the combatants came down the slopes, and cries echoed round about which the reverberations from ὅθεν εἴληφε τὴν ἀρχήν. διαπορούντων δὲ αὐτῶν ἐφ' ὃ τι χρὴ τραπέσθαι μέρος, Ἀρχέλαος ὁ τῶν βασιλικῶν ἡγεμῶν στρατιώτας ἔχων πολλοὺς μετὰ κραυγῆς ἀνέβαινε καὶ σαλπύγγων, ἐπιφερόμενος τοῖς περὶ τὸν Ἄρατον, καὶ παρήλλαττε τοὺς 4 τριακοσίους. οἱ δὲ ὥσπερ ἐξ ἐνέδρας ἀναστάντες ἐμβάλλουσιν αὐτῷ καὶ διαφθείρουσιν οἷς ἐπέθεντο πρώτοις, τοὺς δὲ ἄλλους καὶ τὸν Ἀρχέλαον φοβήσαντες ἐτρέψαντο καὶ κατεδίωξαν ἄχρι τοῦ σκεδασθῆναι περὶ τὴν πόλιν διαλυθέντας. ἄρτι δὲ τούτων νενικηκότων Ἐργίνος ἀπὸ τῶν ἄνω μαχομένων ἦλθεν, ἀγγέλλων συμπεπλέχθαι τοῖς πολεμίοις τὸν Ἄρατον ἀμυνομένοις εὐρώστως, καὶ μέγαν ἀγῶνα περὶ αὐτὸ τὸ τεῖχος εἶναι, καὶ τάχους 5 δεῖν τῆς βοηθείας. οἱ δὲ εὐθύς ἐκέλευον ἡγεῖσθαι καὶ προσβαίνοντες ἅμα φωνῇ διεσήμενον ἑαυτοὺς, ἐπιθαρρύνοντες τοὺς φίλους· ἢ τε πανσέληνος ἀπέφαινε τὰ ὄπλα πλείονα φαινόμενα τοῖς πολεμίοις διὰ τὸ μῆκος τῆς πορείας, καὶ τὸ τῆς νυκτὸς ἠχῶδες τὸν ἀλαλαγμὸν ἀπὸ πολλαπλασιῶνων ἢ 6 τοσοῦτων ἐποίει δοκεῖν φέρεσθαι. τέλος δὲ συν-ερείσαντες ἐξωθοῦσι τοὺς πολεμίους καὶ καθ-υπέρτεροι τῆς ἄκρας ἦσαν καὶ τὸ φρούριον εἶχον, ἡμέρας ἤδη διαυγούσης, ὃ τε ἥλιος εὐθύς ἐπέλαμπε τῷ ἔργῳ, καὶ παρῆν ἐκ Σικυῶνος ἡ λοιπὴ δύναμις τῷ Ἀράτῳ, δεχομένων κατὰ πύλας τῶν Κορινθίων προθύμως καὶ τοὺς βασιλικοὺς συλλαμβανόντων.

XXIII. Ἐπεὶ δὲ ἀσφαλῶς ἐδόκει πάντα ἔχειν, κατέβαινε εἰς τὸ θέατρον ἀπὸ τῆς ἄκρας, πλήθους

the hills rendered confused and of uncertain origin. Then, as they were at a loss which way to turn, Archelaüs, the commander of the king's forces, having many soldiers with him, made up the ascent amid shouts and the blare of trumpets to attack Aratus and his party, and thus passed by the three hundred. These, rising up from ambush as it were, fell upon him, slew the first whom they attacked, put the rest, together with Archelaüs, to panic flight, and pursued them until they were scattered and dispersed about the city. And just as this victory had been won, Erginus came from the party fighting on the heights, with tidings that Aratus was engaged with the enemy, that these were defending themselves vigorously, that a great struggle was going on at the very wall, and there was need of speedy help. The three hundred at once ordered him to lead the way; and as they took to the ascent their cries signalled their coming and encouraged their friends; the light of the full moon also made their arms appear more numerous to the enemy than they really were, owing to the length of their line of march, and the echoes of the night gave the impression that the shouts proceeded from many times the number of men there really were. At last, with a united onset, they repulsed the enemy, mastered the citadel, and held its garrison in their power. Day was now breaking, the sun at once shone out upon their success, and the rest of the forces of Aratus came up from Sicyon, the Corinthians readily receiving them by the gates and helping them to seize the king's soldiers.

XXIII. When everything appeared to be safe Aratus came down from the citadel into the theatre

ἀπείρου συρρέοντος ἐπιθυμία τῆς τε ὄψεως αὐτοῦ καὶ τῶν λόγων οἷς ἔμελλε χρῆσθαι πρὸς τοὺς Κο-2 ρινθίους. ἐπιστήσας δὲ ταῖς παρόδοις ἐκατέρωθεν τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς, αὐτὸς ἀπὸ τῆς σκηνῆς εἰς μέσον προῆλθε, τεθωρακισμένος καὶ τῷ προσώπῳ διὰ τὸν κόπον καὶ τὴν ἀγρυπνίαν ἠλλοιωμένος, ὥστε τῆς ψυχῆς τὸ γαυρούμενον καὶ χαῖρον ὑπὸ τῆς 3 περὶ τὸ σῶμα βαρύτητος κατακρατεῖσθαι. τῶν δὲ ἀνθρώπων ἅμα τῷ προσελθεῖν αὐτὸν ἐκχυθέν-των ταῖς φιλοφροσύναις, μεταλαβὼν εἰς τὴν δεξιὰν τὸ δόρυ, καὶ τὸ γόνυ καὶ τὸ σῶμα τῇ ῥοπῇ μικρὸν ἐγκλίνας καὶ ἀπερειαμέμενος, εἰστίκει πο-λὺν χρόνον σιωπῇ δεχόμενος αὐτῶν τοὺς κρότους καὶ τὰς ἐπιβοήσεις, ἐπαινούντων μὲν τὴν ἀρετὴν, 4 ζηλούντων δὲ τὴν τύχην. ὡς δὲ ἐπαύσαντο καὶ κατέστησαν, συναγαγὼν ἑαυτὸν διεξῆλθε λόγον ὑπὲρ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν τῇ πράξει πρέποντα, καὶ συν-ἔπεισε τοὺς Κορινθίους Ἀχαιοὺς γενέσθαι, καὶ τῶν πυλῶν τὰς κλεῖς ἀπέδωκε τότε πρῶτον ἀπὸ τῶν Φιλιππικῶν καιρῶν ὑπ' ἐκείνοις γενομένας.
 τῶν δὲ Ἀντιγόνου στρατηγῶν Ἀρχέλαον μὲν 5 ἀφῆκεν ὑποχείριον γενόμενον, Θεόφραστον δὲ ἀν-εἶλεν οὐ βουλόμενον ἀπαλλάττεσθαι. Περσαῖος δὲ τῆς ἄκρας ἀλισκομένης εἰς Κεγχρεὰς διεξέπεσεν.
 ὕστερον δὲ λέγεται σχολάζων πρὸς τὸν εἰπόντα μόνον αὐτῷ δοκεῖν στρατηγὸν εἶναι τὸν σοφόν, “ Ἀλλὰ νῆ θεοῦς,” φάναι, “ τοῦτο μάλιστα κάμοι ποτε τῶν Ζήνωνος ἤρεσκε δογμάτων· νῦν δὲ μεταβάλλομαι νουθετηθεὶς ὑπὸ τοῦ Σικωνίου νεανίου.”
 ταῦτα μὲν περὶ Περσαίου πλείονες ἱστοροῦσιν.

whither an immense multitude streamed with an eager desire to see him and hear what he would say to the Corinthians. After stationing his Achaeans at both the side-entrances, he himself advanced from the back-scene into the orchestra, with his breastplate still on and his countenance altered by toil and loss of sleep, so that the exultation and joy of his spirit were overpowered by the weariness of his body. Since the multitude, when he came forward to address them, were profuse in their friendly expressions, taking his spear in his right hand and slightly inclining his knee and his body, he supported himself upon it and stood thus for a long time silently receiving their applause and acclamations, their praises of his valour and their congratulations on his success. But when they had ceased and quiet had ensued, he summoned his strength and in behalf of the Achaeans made a speech which befitted their exploit, and persuaded the Corinthians to join the Achaean League. He also gave them back the keys to their gates, of which they then became possessed for the first time since the time of Philip of Macedon. Of the officers of Antigonus, he dismissed Archelaüs, who had been taken prisoner, but Theophrastus, who would not quit his post, he slew; as for Persaeus, on the capture of the citadel he made his escape to Cenchreae. And at a later time, as we are told, when he was leading a life of leisure, and someone remarked that in his opinion the wise man only could be a good general, "Indeed," he replied, "there was a time when I too particularly liked this doctrine of Zeno's; but now, since the lesson I got from the young man of Sicyon, I am of another mind." This story of Persaeus is told by many writers.

XXIV. Ὁ δὲ Ἄρατος εὐθύς τό τε Ἑραῖον ὑφ' ἑαυτῷ καὶ τὸ Λέχαιον ἐποίησατο· καὶ νεῶν μὲν 1038 εἰκοσιπέντε βασιλικῶν ἐκυρίευσεν, ἵππους δὲ πεντακοσίους καὶ Σύρους τετρακοσίους ἀπέδοτο· τὸν τε Ἀκροκόρινθον ἐφύλαττον οἱ Ἀχαιοὶ τετρακοσίοις ὀπλίταις καὶ πεντήκοντα κυσὶ καὶ κυνηγοῖς ἴσοις ἐν τῷ φρουρίῳ τρεφομένοις.

- 2 Οἱ μὲν οὖν Ῥωμαῖοι τὸν Φιλοποίμενα θαυμάζοντες Ἑλλήνων ἔσχατον προσηγόρευον, ὡς μηδενὸς μεγάλου μετ' ἐκείνουν ἐν τοῖς Ἑλλησι γενομένου· ἐγὼ δὲ τῶν Ἑλληνικῶν πράξεων ταύτην ἔσχάτην καὶ νεωτάτην φαῖναι ἂν πεπραχθαι, τοῦτο μὲν τόλμη, τοῦτο δὲ τύχη ταῖς ἀρίσταις ἐνάμιλλον, ὡς ἐδήλωσεν εὐθύς τὰ γινόμενα.
- 3 Μεγαρεῖς τε γὰρ ἀποστάντες Ἀντιγόνου τῷ Ἀράτῳ προσέθεντο, καὶ Τροιζήνιοι μετὰ Ἐπιδαυρίων συνετάχθησαν εἰς τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς, ἔξοδόν τε πρώτην θεμενος εἰς τὴν Ἀττικὴν ἐνέβαλε, καὶ τὴν Σαλαμίνα διαβὰς ἐλεηλάτησεν, ὥσπερ ἔξ εἰρκτῆς λελυμένη τῇ δυνάμει τῶν Ἀχαιῶν ἐφ' ὃ τι βούλοιο χρώμενος. Ἀθηναίοις δὲ τοὺς ἐλευθέρους ἀφῆκεν ἄνευ λύτρων, ἀρχὰς ἀποστάσεως ἐνδιδούς
- 4 αὐτοῖς. Πτολεμαῖον δὲ σύμμαχον ἐποίησε τῶν Ἀχαιῶν, ἡγεμονίαν ἔχοντα πολέμου καὶ κατὰ γῆν καὶ θάλατταν. οὕτω δὲ ἴσχυσεν ἐν τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς, ὥστ', εἰ μὴ κατ' ἐνιαυτὸν ἐξῆν, παρ' ἐνιαυτὸν αἰρεῖσθαι στρατηγὸν αὐτόν, ἔργῳ δὲ καὶ γνώμῃ διὰ παντὸς ἄρχειν. ἐώρων γὰρ αὐτόν οὐ πλοῦτον, οὐ δόξαν, οὐ φιλίαν βασιλικήν, οὐ τὸ τῆς αὐτοῦ πατρίδος συμφέρον, οὐκ ἄλλο τι τῆς αὐξήσεως τῶν Ἀχαιῶν ἐπίπροσθεν ποιούμενον.

XXIV. As for Aratus, he at once made himself master of the temple of Hera and the harbour of Lechaem; he also seized five-and-twenty of the king's ships, and sold five hundred horses and four hundred Syrians; Acrocorinthus, too, was garrisoned by the Achaeans with four hundred men-at-arms, and fifty dogs with as many keepers were maintained in the citadel.

Now the Romans, in their admiration of Philopomen, call him "the last of the Greeks," implying that no great man arose among the Greeks after him; but I should say that this capture of Acrocorinthus was the very last and latest achievement of the Greeks, and that it rivalled their best, not only in daring, but also in happy results, as events at once showed. For Megara seceded from Antigonus and attached herself to Aratus; Troezen and Epidaurus were enrolled in the Achaean League; and Aratus, making a distant expedition for the first time, invaded Attica, and crossing the strait plundered Salamis, his Achaean forces, as though released from prison, obeying his every wish. But the freemen among his prisoners he sent back to the Athenians without ransom, thus laying a foundation for their revolt from Antigonus. He also made Ptolemy an ally of the Achaeans, with the leadership in war on land and sea. And he was so influential among the Achaeans that, since it was not permissible every year, they chose him general every other year, though, in fact, his wisdom made him their leader all the time. For they saw that he put first and foremost, not wealth, not fame, not friendship with kings, not his own native city's advantage, but only the growth in power of the Achaean League. For he considered

5 ἡγεῖτο γὰρ ἀσθενεῖς ἰδία τὰς πόλεις ὑπαρχούσας σώζεσθαι δι' ἀλλήλων ὥσπερ ἐνδεδεμέναις τῷ κοινῷ συμφέροντι, καὶ καθάπερ τὰ μέρη τοῦ σώματος ζῶντα καὶ συμπνέοντα διὰ τὴν πρὸς ἀλληλα συμφυΐαν, ὅταν ἀποσπασθῆ καὶ γένηται χωρίς, ἀτροφεῖ καὶ σήπεται, παραπλησίως τὰς πόλεις ἀπόλλυσθαι μὲν ὑπὸ τῶν διασπώντων τὸ κοινόν, αὔξεσθαι δὲ ὑπ' ἀλλήλων, ὅταν ὅλου τινὸς μεγάλου μέρη γεγόμεναι κοινῆς προνοίας τυγχάνωσιν.

XXV. Ὅρων δὲ τοὺς ἀρίστους τῶν προσοί-κων αὐτονομουμένους, Ἀργείοις δὲ δουλεύουσιν ἀχθόμενος, ἐπεβούλευεν ἀνελεῖν τὸν τύραννον αὐτῶν Ἀριστόμαχον, ἅμα τῇ τε πόλει θρεπτήρια τὴν ἐλευθερίαν ἀποδοῦναι φιλοτιμούμενος καὶ 2 τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς προσκομίσει τὴν πόλιν. οἱ μὲν οὖν τολμῶντες εὐρέθησαν, ὧν Αἰσχύλος προειστήκει καὶ Χαριμένης ὁ μάντις· ξίφη δὲ οὐκ εἶχον, ἀλλ' ἀπείρητο κεκτῆσθαι καὶ ζημίαι μεγάλαι τοῖς κεκτη-μένοις ἐπῆσαν ὑπὸ τοῦ τυράννου. κατασκευάσας οὖν ὁ Ἄρατος αὐτοῖς ἐν Κορίνθῳ μικρὰς παραξιφί-δας ἐνέρραψεν εἰς σάγματα· καὶ ταῦτα περιθεῖς ὑποζυγίοις σκευὴ τινὰ παρημελημένα κομίζουσιν 3 εἰς Ἄργος ἀπέστειλε. Χαριμένους δὲ τοῦ μάντεως προσλαβόντος ἐπὶ τὴν πρᾶξιν ἄνθρωπον, οἱ περὶ τὸν Αἰσχύλον ἠγανάκτησαν καὶ δι' ἑαυτῶν ἔπραττον, τοῦ Χαριμένου καταγόντες. αἰσθόμενος δὲ ἐκεῖνος ὀργῇ κατεμήνυσε τοὺς ἄνδρας ἤδη βαδίζοντας ἐπὶ τὸν τύραννον· ὧν οἱ πλεῖστοι φθάσαντες ἐξ ἀγορᾶς ἀπέφυγον καὶ διεξέπεσον εἰς Κόρινθον.

¹ Cf. chap. iii. 1.

that the Greek states which were weak would be preserved by mutual support when once they had been bound as it were by the common interest, and that just as the members of the body have a common life and breath because they cleave together in a common growth, but when they are drawn apart and become separate they wither away and decay, in like manner the several states are ruined by those who dis sever their common bonds, but are augmented by mutual support, when they become parts of a great whole and enjoy a common foresight.

XXV. And so, since he saw that the best of the neighbouring peoples were autonomous, and was distressed at the servitude of the Argives, he plotted to kill Aristomachus the tyrant of Argos, being ambitious to restore its freedom to the city as a reward for the rearing it had given him,¹ as well as to attach it to the Achaean League. Accordingly, men were found to dare the deed, of whom Aeschylus and Charimenes the seer were the chief. They had no swords, however, the tyrant having prohibited the possession of them under heavy penalties. Aratus, therefore, ordered small daggers to be made for them in Corinth and sewed them up in pack-saddles; these he put upon beasts of burden carrying ordinary wares and sent them into Argos. But Charimenes the seer took on a partner in the enterprise, at which Aeschylus and his friends were incensed and proceeded to act on their own account, ignoring Charimenes. When Charimenes was aware of this, he was angry and informed against the men just as they were setting out to attack the tyrant; most of them, however, succeeded in escaping from the market-place and fled to Corinth.

- 4 Οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ χρόνου βραχέος διελθόντος ἀπο-θνήσκει μὲν ὑπὸ δούλων Ἀριστόμαχος, ὑπο-λαμβάνει δὲ τὴν ἀρχὴν φθάσας Ἀρίστιππος, ἐξωλέστερος ἐκείνου τύραννος. ὅσοι δὴ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν ἐν ἡλικίᾳ παρόντες ἔτυχον, τούτους ἀναλαβὼν ὁ Ἄρατος ἐβοήθει πρὸς τὴν πόλιν ὀξέως, οἰόμενος εὐρήσειν τὰ τῶν Ἀργείων πρό-5 θυμα. τῶν δὲ πολλῶν ἤδη διὰ συνήθειαν ἐθελοδούλως ἐχόντων καὶ μηδενὸς ἀφισταμένου πρὸς αὐτόν, ἀνεχώρησεν ἔγκλημα κατεσκευακῶς τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς ὡς ἐν εἰρήνῃ πόλεμον ἐξενηνοχόσι. καὶ δίκην ἔσχον ἐπὶ τούτῳ παρὰ Μαντινεῦσιν, ἣν 1039
 Ἄρατου μὴ παρόντος Ἀρίστιππος εἶλε διώκων
 6 καὶ μνῶν ἐτιμήθη τριάκοντα. τὸν δὲ Ἄρατου αὐτὸν ἅμα καὶ μισῶν καὶ δεδοικῶς ἐπεβούλευεν ἀνελεῖν συνεργούντος Ἀντιγόνου τοῦ βασιλέως· καὶ πανταχοῦ σχεδὸν ἦσαν οἱ τοῦτο πράττοντες αὐτοῖς καὶ καιρὸν ἐπιτηροῦντες.
- 7 Ἄλλ' οὐδὲν οἶον ἀληθινὴ καὶ βέβαιος εὐνοια φυλακτῆριον ἀνδρὸς ἄρχοντος. ὅταν γὰρ ἐθισθῶ-σιν οἱ τε πολλοὶ καὶ οἱ δυνατοὶ μὴ τὸν ἡγούμενον, ἀλλ' ὑπὲρ τοῦ ἡγουμένου δεδιέναι, πολλοῖς μὲν ὄμμασιν ὄρα, διὰ πολλῶν δὲ ὤτων ἀκούει, καὶ προαισθάνεται τὰ γινόμενα. διὸ καὶ βούλομαι τὸν λόγον ἐπιστήσας ἐνταῦθά που διεξελεῖν περὶ τῆς Ἀριστίππου διαίτης, ἣν ἡ ζηλοτυπου-μένη τυραννὶς αὐτῷ καὶ ὁ τῆς μακαρίας καὶ περιβοήτου μοναρχίας ὄγκος περιέθηκεν.

XXVI. Ἐκείνος γὰρ Ἀντίγονον μὲν ἔχων

Nevertheless, after a little while Aristomachus was killed by slaves, and Aristippus, a more pernicious tyrant than he, soon succeeded in seizing the power. Aratus at once took all the Achaeans of military age who were at hand and went swiftly to the aid of the city, supposing that he would be welcomed by the Argives. But since most of them were by this time habituated to slavery and willing to endure it, so that not a man came over to his side, he retired, after involving the Achaeans in the charge of having gone to war in time of peace. They were prosecuted on this charge before the Mantineans, and in the absence of Aratus, Aristippus as plaintiff won his case and was awarded damages to the amount of thirty minas.¹ Aratus himself the tyrant both hated and feared, and so laid plots to kill him with the assistance of Antigonus the king; and almost everywhere there were men who undertook this deed for them and watched for an opportunity.

But there is no safeguard for a ruler like a sincere and steadfast goodwill on the part of the ruled. For when both the common people and the leading men are afraid, not of their leader, but for their leader, he sees with many eyes, hears with many ears, and so perceives betimes what is going on. Therefore I wish to stop my story at this point, in order to describe the life that Aristippus led. This was laid upon him by his office of tyrant, so envied of men, and by the pride and pomp of monarchy, which men celebrate and call blessed.

XXVI. For though he had Antigonus as ally, and

¹ Half a talent, equivalent to about £118, or $600, a merely nominal fine. Mantinea acted as arbitrator, perhaps by special agreement.

σύμμαχον, τρέφων δὲ πολλοὺς ἕνεκα τῆς τοῦ σώματος ἀσφαλείας, οὐδένα δὲ ἐν τῇ πόλει ζῶντα τῶν ἐχθρῶν ὑπολελοιπώς, τοὺς μὲν δορυφόρους καὶ φύλακας ἔξω παρεμβάλλειν ἐκέλευεν ἐν τῷ περιστύλῳ, τοὺς δὲ οἰκέτας, ὅποτε δειπνήσαι, τάχιστα πάντα ἐξελαύνων καὶ τὴν μέταυλον ἀποκλείων μετὰ τῆς ἐρωμένης αὐτὸς εἰς οἶκημα κατεδύετο μικρὸν ὑπερῶον, θύρα καταρρακτῆ κλειόμενον· ἣς ὑπεράνω τὴν κλίνην ἐπιτιθεὶς ἐκάθευδεν, ὡς εἰκὸς καθεύδειν τὸν οὕτως ἔχοντα, ταραχῶδῶς καὶ περιφόβως. τὸ δὲ κλιμάκιον ἢ τῆς ἐρωμένης μήτηρ ὑφαιρούσα κατέκλειεν εἰς ἕτερον οἶκημα, καὶ πάλιν ἅμ' ἡμέρα προσετίθει καὶ κατεκάλει τὸν θαυμαστὸν τύραννον, ὥσπερ ἐρπετὸν ἐκ φωλεοῦ κατερχόμενον. ὁ δὲ οὐχ ὄπλοις κατὰ βίαν, νόμῳ δὲ ὑπ' ἀρετῆς ἀκατάπαυστον ἀρχὴν περιπεποιημένος, ἐν ἱματίῳ καὶ χλαμυδίῳ τῷ τυχόντι, τῶν πώποτε τυράννων κοινὸς ἀποδεδειγμένος ἐχθρὸς, ἄχρι τῆς τήμερον ἡμέρας γένος εὐδοκιμώτατον ἀπολέλοιπεν ἐν τοῖς Ἕλλησιν. ἐκείνων δὲ τῶν τὰς ἄκρας καταλαμβανόντων καὶ τοὺς δορυφόρους τρεφόντων καὶ τὰ ὄπλα καὶ τὰς πύλας καὶ τοὺς καταρράκτας προβαλλομένων ὑπὲρ τῆς τοῦ σώματος ἀσφαλείας ὀλίγοι τὸν ἐκ πληγῆς θάνατον, ὥσπερ οἱ λαγωοί, διέφυγον· οἶκος δὲ ἢ γένος ἢ τάφος ἔχων τιμωμένην μνήμην οὐδενὸς λέλειπται.

XXVII. Πρὸς δ' οὖν τὸν Ἀρίστιππον ὁ Ἄρατος καὶ κρύφα πολλάκις καὶ φανερώς προσέπαισεν ἐπιχειρήσας καταλαμβάνειν τὸ Ἄργος. ἅπαξ δὲ κλίμακας προσθεὶς μετ' ὀλίγων ἐπὶ τὸ τεῖχος ἀνέβη παραβόλως, καὶ τοὺς βοηθοῦντας kept many guards to protect his person, and had left no single enemy alive in the city, yet he would order his spearmen and guards to bivouac outside in the colonnade; and as for his servants, as soon as supper was over he would drive them all out. Then he would lock the doors of the inner house, and betake himself with his mistress to a little upper room, which was closed by a trap-door; on this door he would place his couch and sleep, as one in his state of mind would naturally sleep, by fits and starts and in great fear. The ladder the mother of his mistress would take away and lock up in another room, and in the morning would put it in place again and call the wonderful tyrant, who would come down like a creeping thing out of its hole. Aratus, on the other hand, not by force of arms, but legally and in consequence of his virtues, had invested himself with an enduring power, and yet went about in ordinary tunic and cloak; he declared himself a public foe of any and every tyrant; and he left behind him a posterity of the highest repute among the Greeks down to this day.¹ But of the men who seize citadels, maintain spearmen, and depend upon arms and gates and trap-doors for the safety of their persons, only a few, like timorous hares, have escaped a violent death; while not one of them has left a house, or a family, or a tomb to keep his memory in honour.

XXVII. Against Aristippus, then, and in trying to seize Argos, Aratus made many open and secret attempts in vain. Once he set up scaling-ladders, at great hazard got upon the wall with a few followers, and killed the sentries that defended the

¹ Cf. chap. liv. ad fin.

- 2 ἐνταῦθα τῶν φυλάκων ἀπέκτεινεν. εἶτα ἡμέρας ἐπιφανείσης καὶ τοῦ τυράννου πανταχόθεν αὐτῷ προσβάλλοντος, οἱ μὲν Ἄργεῖοι, καθάπερ οὐχ ὑπὲρ τῆς ἐκείνῳ ἐλευθερίας τῆς μάχης οὔσης, ἀλλ' ὡς τὸν ἀγῶνα τῶν Νεμείων βραβεύοντες, ἴσοι καὶ δίκαιοι θεαταὶ καθήντο τῶν γινομένων, πολλὴν ἠσυχίαν ἄγοντες, ὁ δὲ Ἄρατος εὐρώστως ἀμυνόμενος λόγχῃ μὲν ἐκ χειρὸς διελαύνεται τὸν μηρόν, ἐκράτησε δὲ τῶν τόπων ἐν οἷς ἦν, καὶ οὐκ ἐξεώσθη μέχρι νυκτὸς ἐνοχλούμενος ὑπὸ τῶν πολεμίων.
- 3 εἰ δὲ καὶ τὴν νύκτα τῷ πόνῳ προσεταλαιπώρησεν, οὐκ ἂν διήμαρτεν· ὁ γὰρ τύραννος ἤδη περὶ δρασμὸν εἶχε καὶ πολλὰ τῶν ἰδίων ἐπὶ θάλασσαν προεξέπεμψε· νῦν δὲ τοῦτο μὲν οὐδενὸς ἐξαγγείλαντος πρὸς τὸν Ἄρατον, ὕδατος δὲ ἐπιλιπόντος, ἑαυτῷ δὲ χρήσασθαι διὰ τὸ τραῦμα μὴ δυνάμενος, ἀπήγαγε τοὺς στρατιώτας.

XXVIII. Ἐπεὶ δὲ ταύτην ἀπέγνω τὴν ὁδόν, ἐμβαλὼν φανερώς τῷ στρατοπέδῳ τὴν Ἀργολίδα χώραν ἐπόρθει· καὶ περὶ τὸν Χάρητα ποταμὸν ἰσχυρᾶς μάχης γενομένης πρὸς Ἀρίστιππον αἰτίαν ἔσχεν ὡς ἐγκαταλιπὼν τὸν ἀγῶνα καὶ προέμενος τὸ νίκημα. τῆς γὰρ ἄλλης δυνάμεως 104 ὁμολογουμένως ἐπικρατούσης καὶ τῷ διωγμῷ πολὺ προελθούσης εἰς τοῦμπροσθεν, αὐτὸς οὐχ οὕτως ἐκβιασθεὶς ὑπὸ τῶν καθ' αὐτόν, ὡς ἀπιστῶν τῷ κατορθώματι καὶ φοβηθεὶς, ἀνεχώρησε place. Then day came and the tyrant attacked him from all sides, while the Argives, as though it were not a battle to secure their liberties, but a contest in the Nemean games of which they were the judges, sat as just and impartial spectators of what was going on, without lifting a finger. Aratus, fighting sturdily, had his thigh transfixd by a spear-thrust, yet held his ground, and could not be dislodged at close quarters until night, though harassed by his enemies. And if through the night also he had maintained the struggle, he would not have failed in his attempt; for the tyrant was already bent on flight and had sent on many of his goods to the sea. As it was, however, no one told Aratus of this, and since water was failing him and he could not use his strength by reason of his wound, he led his soldiers away.

2 τεταραγμένος εἰς τὸ στρατόπεδον. ἐπεὶ δὲ ἀπὸ τῆς διώξεως ἐπανελθόντες οἱ λοιποὶ χαλεπῶς ἔφερον ὅτι τρεψάμενοι τοὺς πολεμίους καὶ πολὺ πλείονας ἐκείνων καταβαλόντες ἢ σφῶν αὐτῶν ἀπολέσαντες παραλελοίπασιν τοῖς ἡττη-

XXVIII. Then, since he despaired of success in this way, he openly invaded the territory of Argos with his army and ravaged it; and in a fierce battle with Aristippus at the river Chares, he was accused of abandoning the struggle and throwing away the victory. For although the rest of his forces admittedly had the upper hand and had gone far on ahead in pursuit, he himself, not so much because he was ousted from his position by his opponents, as out of mistrust of success and in utter fear, withdrew in disorder to his camp. But when the rest of his army came back from the pursuit and were indignant because, though they had routed the enemy and slain far more of them than they had lost of their own number, they had suffered the vanquished to μένοις στήσαι κατ' αὐτῶν τρόπαιον, αἰσχυνοθεῖς πάλιν ἔγνω διαμάχεσθαι περὶ τοῦ τροπαίου, καὶ μίαν ἡμέραν διαλιπὼν αὐθις ἐξέτασσε τὴν στρα-3 τιάν. ὡς δὲ ἦσθετο πλείονας γεγονότας καὶ θαρραλεώτερον ἀνθισταμένους τοὺς περὶ τὸν τύ-ραννον, οὐκ ἐτόλμησεν, ἀλλ' ἀπήλθε τοὺς νεκροὺς ὑποσπόνδους ἀνελόμενος. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ τῇ περὶ τὴν ὀμιλίαν καὶ πολιτείαν ἐμπειρία καὶ χάριτι τὴν διαμαρτίαν ταύτην ἀναμαχόμενος προσηγάγετο τὰς Κλεωναὺς τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς, καὶ τὸν ἀγῶνα τῶν Νεμείων ἤγαγεν ἐν Κλεωναῖς, ὡς πάτριον 4 ὄντα καὶ μᾶλλον προσήκοντα τούτοις. ἤγαγον δὲ καὶ Ἀργεῖοι, καὶ συνεχύθη τότε πρῶτον ἡ δεδομένη τοῖς ἀγωνισταῖς ἀσυλία καὶ ἀσφάλεια, πάντα τῶν Ἀχαιῶν, ὅσους ἔλαβον ἡγωνισμένους ἐν Ἀργεῖ, διὰ τῆς χώρας πορευομένους ὡς πολεμίους ἀποδομένων. οὕτω σφοδρὸς ἦν καὶ ἀπαρ-αίτητος ἐν τῷ μισεῖν τοὺς τυράννους.

XXIX. Ὀλίγω δὲ ὕστερον ἀκούσας τὸν Ἀρίστιππον ἐπιβουλεύειν μὲν ταῖς Κλεωναῖς, φοβεῖ-σθαι δὲ ἐκείνους ἐν Κορίνθῳ καθεζόμενον, ἤθροισεν ἐκ παραγγέλματος στρατείαν. καὶ σιτία κε-λεύσας πλείονων ἡμερῶν κομίζειν εἰς Κεγχρεὰς κατῆλθεν, ἐκκαλούμενος δι' ἀπάτης τὸν Ἀρίστιπ-πον ὡς αὐτοῦ μὴ παρόντος ἐπιθέσθαι τοῖς Κλεωναίοις· ὃ καὶ συνέβη. παρῆν γὰρ εὐθύς ἐξ
 2 Ἀργους ἔχων τὴν δύναμιν. ὁ δὲ Ἀρατος εἰς Κόρινθον ἤδη σκοταῖος ἐκ Κεγχρεῶν ὑποστρέψας,

¹ After the events narrated in xxxiv. ff.

erect a trophy over the victors, Aratus was ashamed and determined again to fight out the question of the trophy, and on the next day but one put his army once more in battle array. However, on perceiving that the forces of the tyrant were more numerous than before and more courageous in their resistance, he would not venture a decisive battle, but withdrew after being allowed to take up his dead under a truce. Nevertheless, by his skill in dealing with men and public affairs, and by the favour in which he stood, he retrieved this failure, brought Cleonae into the Achaean League, and celebrated the Nemean games in that city, on the ground that it had an ancient and more fitting claim upon them. But the games were also celebrated at Argos, and then for the first time the privilege of asylum and safe-conduct which had been granted to contestants in the games was violated, since the Achaeans treated as enemies and sold into slavery all contestants in the games at Argos whom they caught travelling through their territory. So fierce and implacable was Aratus in his hatred of tyrants.

XXIX. A little while after this,¹ Aratus heard that Aristippus was plotting against Cleonae, but feared to attack it while his enemy was posted at Corinth; he therefore assembled an army by public proclamation. And after ordering his troops to carry provisions for several days, he marched down to Cenchreae, by this stratagem inviting Aristippus to attack Cleonae in the belief that his enemy was not at hand; and this was actually what happened. For the tyrant set out at once from Argos with his forces. But Aratus, returning from Cenchreae to Corinth as soon as it was dark, and posting guards

- καὶ τὰς ὁδοὺς φυλακαῖς διαλαβών, ἤγε τοὺς Ἄχαιοὺς ἐπομένους οὕτω μὲν εὐτάκτως, οὕτω δὲ ταχέως καὶ προθύμως ὥστε μὴ μόνον ὀδεύοντας, ἀλλὰ καὶ παρελθόντας εἰς τὰς Κλεωνὰς ἔτι νυκτὸς οὔσης καὶ συνταξαμένους ἐπὶ μάχην ἀγνοεῖ-
- 3 σθαι καὶ λανθάνειν τὸν Ἀρίστιππον. ἅμα δὲ ἡμέρα τῶν πυλῶν ἀνοιχθεισῶν καὶ τῆς σάλπιγγος ἐγκελευσαμένης, δρόμῳ καὶ ἀλαλαγμῷ προσπεσῶν τοῖς πολεμίοις εὐθύς ἐτρέψατο, καὶ κατεῖχε διώκων ἢ μάλιστα φεύγειν ὑπενόει τὸν Ἀρίστιππον, ἐκτροπὰς πολλὰς τῶν χωρίων ἐχόν-
- 4 των. γενομένης δὲ τῆς διώξεως ἄχρι Μυκηνηῶν, ὁ μὲν τύραννος ὑπὸ Κρητὸς τινος, ὡς Δεινίας ἱστορεῖ, τοῦνομα Τραγίσκου, καταληφθεὶς ἀποσφάττεται, τῶν δὲ ἄλλων ἔπεσον ὑπὲρ χιλίους πεντακοσίους. ὁ δὲ Ἄρατος οὕτω λαμπρῶς εὐτυχῆσας καὶ μηδένα τῶν αὐτοῦ στρατιωτῶν ἀποβαλῶν, ὅμως οὐκ ἔλαβε τὸ Ἄργος οὐδὲ ἠλευθέρωσε, τῶν περὶ Ἀγίαν καὶ τὸν νεώτερον Ἀριστόμαχον μετὰ δυνάμεως βασιλικῆς παρεισπεσόντων καὶ κατασχόντων τὰ πρύγματα.
- 5 Τὸ μὲν οὖν πολὺ τῆς διαβολῆς καὶ λόγους καὶ σκώμματα καὶ βωμολοχίας παρείλετο τῶν κολακευόντων τοὺς τυράννους καὶ διεξιόντων, ἐκείνοις χαριζομένων, ὡς τοῦ στρατηγοῦ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν ἐκταράττειτο μὲν ἡ κοιλία παρὰ τὰς μάχας, κάρος δὲ προσπίπτει καὶ ἴλιγγος ἅμα τῷ παραστήναι τὸν σαλπικτήν, ἐκτάξας δὲ τὴν δύναμιν καὶ τὸ σύνθημα παρεγγυήσας, καὶ πυθόμενος τῶν ὑποστρατήγων καὶ λοχαγῶν, μὴ τις αὐτοῦ χρεῖα παρόντος (βεβλησθαι γὰρ τοὺς ἀστραγάλους), ἀπέρχοιτο καρδοκίσεων πόρρωθεν τὸ along all the roads, led his Achaeans towards Cleonae, and they followed him in such good order and with such swiftness and alacrity that not only while they were on the march, but also when they had got into Cleonae, before the night was over, and had arrayed themselves for battle, Aristippus knew nothing at all of it. Then, at daybreak, the gates were thrown open, the trumpet gave its loud signal, and dashing at a run and with shouts upon the enemy Aratus routed them at once, and kept on pursuing where he most suspected that Aristippus was in flight, the country having many diverging routes. The pursuit continued as far as Mycenae, where the tyrant was overtaken and slain by a certain Cretan named Tragiscus, as Deinias relates; and besides him there fell over fifteen hundred. But although Aratus had won so brilliant a success, and had lost not a single one of his own soldiers, he nevertheless did not take Argos nor set it free, since Agias and the younger Aristomachus burst into the city with troops of the king and took control of affairs.

This success, then, refuted much of the calumny heaped upon Aratus, as well as the scoffing and abusive stories of the flatterers of the tyrants, who would recount, to please their masters, how the general of the Achaeans always had cramps in the bowels when a battle was imminent, and how torpor and dizziness would seize him as soon as the trumpeter stood by to give the signal, and how, after he had drawn up his forces and passed the watchword along, he would ask his lieutenants and captains whether there was any further need of his presence (since the die was already cast), and then go off to await the issue anxiously at a distance. For 6 συμβησόμενον. ταῦτα γὰρ οὕτως ἴσχυσεν ὥστε καὶ τοὺς φιλοσόφους ἐν ταῖς σχολαῖς ζητοῦντας εἰ τὸ πάλ्लεσθαι τὴν καρδίαν καὶ τὸ χρῶμα τρέπεσθαι καὶ τὴν κοιλίαν ἐξυγραίνεσθαι παρὰ τὰ φαινόμενα δεινὰ δειλίας ἐστὶν ἢ δυσκρασίας τινὸς περὶ τὸ σῶμα καὶ ψυχρότητος, ὀνομάζειν αἰετὸν Ἄρατον ὡς ἀγαθὸν μὲν ὄντα στρατηγόν, αἰετὸν δὲ ταῦτα πάσχοντα παρὰ τοὺς ἀγῶνας.

XXX. Ὡς δ' οὖν τὸν Ἀρίστιππον ἀνεῖλεν, 1041
 εὐθύς ἐπεβούλευσε Λυδιδάδῃ τῷ Μεγαλοπολίτῃ τυραννοῦντι τῆς ἑαυτοῦ πατρίδος. ὁ δὲ οὐκ ὦν ἀγεννῆς οὐδὲ ἀφιλότιμος τὴν φύσιν, οὐδὲ ὥσπερ οἱ πολλοὶ τῶν μονάρχων ἀκρασία καὶ πλεονεξία πρὸς ταύτην ῥυεῖς τὴν ἀδικίαν, ἀλλ' ἐπαρθεῖς ἔρωτι δόξης ἔτι νέος καὶ λόγους ψευδεῖς καὶ κενοὺς λεγομένους περὶ τυραννίδος, ὡς μακαρίου καὶ θαυμαστοῦ πράγματος, εἰς μέγα φρόνημα παραδεξάμενος ἀνοήτως, καὶ καταστήσας ἑαυτὸν τύραννον ταχὺ μεστὸς ἦν τῆς ἐκ μοναρχίας βαρύτητος. 2 ἅμα δὲ ζηλῶν εὐημεροῦντα καὶ δεδοικῶς ἐπιβουλεύοντα τὸν Ἄρατον ὥρμησε καλλίστην ὄρμην μεταβαλόμενος, πρῶτον μὲν ἑαυτὸν ἐλευθερῶσαι μίσους καὶ φόβου καὶ φρουρᾶς καὶ δορυφόρων, εἶτα τῆς πατρίδος εὐεργέτης γενέσθαι καὶ μεταπεμφάμενος τὸν Ἄρατον ἀφήκε τὴν ἀρχήν, καὶ τὴν πόλιν εἰς τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς μετεκόμισεν. ἐφ' οἷς μεγαλύνοντες αὐτὸν οἱ Ἀχαιοὶ στρατηγὸν εἶλοντο.

3 Φιλοτιμούμενος δὲ εὐθύς ὑπερβαλεῖν δόξῃ τὸν Ἄρατον ἄλλας τε πολλὰς πράξεις οὐκ ἀναγκαίας εἶναι δοκούσας καὶ στρατείαν ἐπὶ Λακεδαιμονίους παρήγγελλεν. ἐνιστάμενος δὲ ὁ Ἄρατος αὐτῷ these stories were so prevalent that even in the schools of philosophy, when the query arises whether palpitation of the heart and change of colour and looseness of the bowels, in the presence of seeming peril, are the mark of cowardice, or of some faulty temperament and chilliness in the body, Aratus is always mentioned by name as one who was a good general, but always had these symptoms when a contest was impending.

XXX. Having thus made away with Aristippus, Aratus at once began to plot against Lydiades, who was tyrant in his native city of Megalopolis. This Lydiades was neither of mean birth nor naturally lacking in high ambition, nor, like most sole rulers, had he been driven by licence and rapacity into this iniquity, but he had been fired with a love of glory while still young, and had thoughtlessly associated with his high spirit the false and empty doctrines current concerning tyranny, to the effect that it was a wonderful and blessed thing. And now that he had made himself tyrant, he was quickly sated with the burdens which devolve upon the sole ruler. Therefore, at once envying the successes of Aratus and fearing his plots, he adopted a new and most admirable plan, first, to free himself from hatred and fear and guards and spearmen, and second, to become a benefactor of his native city. So he sent for Aratus, resigned his power, and made his city a member of the Achaean League. Wherefore the Achaeans exalted him and chose him general.

Lydiades was at once ambitious to surpass Aratus in reputation, and not only did many other things which were thought unnecessary, but also proclaimed an expedition against the Lacedaemonians. Aratus

φθονεῖν ἐδόκει· καὶ τό γε δεύτερον ὁ Λυδιάδης στρατηγὸς ἤρέθη, ἀντιπράττοντος ἄντικρυς Ἀράτου καὶ σπουδάζοντος ἑτέρω παραδοθῆναι τὴν ἀρχήν. αὐτὸς μὲν γάρ, ὡς εἴρηται, παρ' ἐνιαυτὸν
 4 ἦρχε. μέχρι μὲν οὖν τρίτης στρατηγίας ὁ Λυδιάδης εὖ φερόμενος διετέλει καὶ παρ' ἐνιαυτὸν ἦρχεν ἐναλλάξ τῷ Ἀράτῳ στρατηγῶν· φανερὰν δὲ ἐξενεγκάμενος ἔχθραν καὶ πολλὰκις αὐτοῦ κατηγορήσας ἐν τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς ἀπερρίφη καὶ παρώφθη, πεπλασμένῳ δοκῶν ἦθει πρὸς ἀλη-
 5 θινὴν καὶ ἀκέραιον ἀρετὴν ἀμιλλᾶσθαι. καὶ καθάπερ τῷ κόκκυγι φησιν Αἰσώπος, ἐρωτῶντι τοὺς λεπτοὺς ὄρνιθας ὅ τι φεύγοιεν αὐτόν, εἰπεῖν ἐκείνους ὡς ἔσται ποτὲ ἰέραξ, οὕτως ἔοικε τῷ Λυδιάδῃ παρακολουθεῖν ἐκ τῆς τυραννίδος ὑποψία βλάβπτουσα τὴν φύσιν αὐτοῦ τῆς μεταβολῆς.

XXXI. Ὁ δὲ Ἄρατος εὐδοκίμησε καὶ περὶ τὰς Αἰτωλικὰς πράξεις, ὅτε συμβαλεῖν μὲν αὐτοῖς πρὸ τῆς Μεγαρικῆς ὠρμημένων τῶν Ἀχαιῶν, καὶ τοῦ βασιλέως τῶν Λακεδαιμονίων Ἄγιδος ἀφικομένου μετὰ δυνάμεως καὶ συνεξορμῶντος ἐπὶ τὴν μάχην τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς, ἐναντιωθεὶς καὶ πολλὰ μὲν ὀνειδέη, πολλὰ δ' εἰς μαλακίαν καὶ ἀτολμίαν καὶ σκώμματα καὶ χλευασμὸν ὑπομείνας οὐ προήκατο τὸν τοῦ συμφέροντος λογισμὸν διὰ τὸ φαινόμενον αἰσχρὸν, ἀλλὰ παρεχώρησε τοῖς πολεμίοις ὑπερβαλοῦσι τὴν Γεράνειαν ἀμα-
 2 χεὶ παρελθεῖν εἰς Πελοπόννησον. ὡς μέντοι παρελθόντες ἐξαίφνης Πελλήνην κατέλαβον, οὐκέτ' ἦν ὁ αὐτός, οὐδ' ἔμελλε διατρίβων καὶ περιμέμων opposed him, but was thought to do so out of jealousy; and Lydiades was chosen general for the second time, though Aratus openly worked against him and was eager to have the office given to someone else. For Aratus himself, as I have said,¹ held the office every other year. Accordingly, until he was general for the third time, Lydiades continued to be held in favour, and held the office every other year in alternation with Aratus; but after displaying an open enmity to him and frequently denouncing him before the Achaeans, he was cast aside and ignored, since it was apparent that he was contending, with a fictitious character, against a genuine and unadulterated virtue. And just as the cuckoo, in the fable of Aesop, when he asks the little birds why they fly away from him, is told by them that he will one day be a hawk, so it would seem that since Lydiades had once been a tyrant he was never free from a suspicion, which did injustice to his real nature, that he would change again.

¹ Chap. xxiv. 4.

² About 241 B.C. Cf. the Agis, xiv. f.

XXXI. In the Aetolian war also Aratus won a good repute. For when the Achaeans were bent on an engagement with the Aetolians in front of Megara,² and Agis the king of the Lacedaemonians was come up with an army and joined in urging the Achaeans on to battle, Aratus opposed this counsel, and in spite of much vilification and much scoffing abuse for weakness and cowardice would not abandon, because of any seeming disgrace, which he judged to be for the general advantage, but allowed the enemy to cross the Geraneian range without a battle and pass on into Peloponnesus. When, however, after thus passing on, they suddenly seized Pellene, he was no longer the same man, nor would he wait at ἀθροισθῆναι καὶ συνελθεῖν εἰς ταὐτὸ πανταχόθεν τὴν δύναμιν, ἀλλ' εὐθὺς ὄρμησε μετὰ τῶν παρόν-των ἐπὶ τοὺς πολεμίους ἐν τῷ κρατεῖν ἀσθενε-3 στάτους δι' ἀταξίαν καὶ ὕβριν ὄντας. ἅμα γὰρ τῷ παρελθεῖν εἰς τὴν πόλιν οἱ μὲν στρατιῶται διασπαρέντες ἐν ταῖς οἰκίαις ἦσαν, ἐξωθοῦντες ἀλλήλους καὶ διαμαχόμενοι περὶ τῶν χρημάτων, ἡγεμόνες δὲ καὶ λοχαγοὶ τὰς γυναῖκας καὶ τὰς θυγατέρας τῶν Πελληνέων περιϊόντες ἤρπαζον, καὶ τὰ κράνη τὰ αὐτῶν ἀφαιροῦντες ἐκείναις περιετίθεσαν τοῦ μηδένα λαβεῖν ἄλλον, ἀλλὰ τῷ κράνει δῆλον εἶναι τὸν δεσπότην ἐκάστης. οὕτω δὲ διακειμένοις αὐτοῖς καὶ ταῦτα πράττουσιν ἐξαίφνης ὁ Ἄρατος ἐπιπεσὼν προσηγγέλθη. καὶ γενομένης ἐκπλήξεως, οἷαν εἰκὸς ἐν ἀταξίᾳ τοι-αύτῃ, πρὶν ἢ πάντας πυθέσθαι τὸν κίνδυνον οἱ πρῶτοι περὶ τὰς πύλας τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς καὶ τὰ προύστεια συμπεσόντες ἔφευγον ἤδη νενικημένοι, καὶ κατε- 104 πίμπλασαν ἐλαυνόμενοι προτροπάδην ἀπορίας τοὺς συνισταμένους καὶ προσβοηθούοντας.

XXXII. Ἐν τούτῳ δὲ τῷ ταραχῷ μία τῶν αἰχμαλώτων, Ἐπιγῆθους ἀνδρὸς ἐνδόξου θυγάτηρ, αὐτὴ δὲ κάλλει καὶ μεγέθει σώματος εὐπρεπής, ἔτυχε μὲν ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ καθεζομένη τῆς Ἀρτέμιδος, οὗ κατέστησεν αὐτὴν ὁ ἐπιλεκτάρχης ἔλων ἑαυτῷ
 καὶ περιθεὶς τὴν τριλοφίαν, ἄφνω δὲ ἐκδραμοῦσα 2 πρὸς τὸν θόρυβον, ὡς ἔστη πρὸ τῶν θυρῶν τοῦ ἱεροῦ καὶ κατέβλεψεν εἰς τοὺς μαχομένους ἄνωθεν ἔχουσα τὴν τριλοφίαν, αὐτοῖς τε τοῖς πολίταις

all in order that his forces might assemble and come together from all quarters, but at once set out with those he had against the enemy, whom the disorder and wantonness attendant upon their success had wholly weakened. For as soon as they had entered the city, the common soldiers had scattered themselves among the houses, jostling and fighting with one another over the booty, while the leaders and captains were going about and seizing the wives and daughters of the Pellenians, on whose heads they put their own helmets, that no one else might seize them, but that the helmet might show to whom each woman belonged. But while they were in this situation and thus engaged, word was suddenly brought them that Aratus had attacked. Dismay fell upon them, as was natural amid such disorder, and before all had learned of the danger the foremost of them, engaging with the Achaeans at the gates and in the suburbs, were already conquered and in full flight, and being driven in headlong rout, they filled with dismay those who were collecting together and coming to their aid.

XXXII. In the midst of this confusion, one of the captive women, daughter of Epigethes, a man of distinction, and herself conspicuous for beauty and stateliness of person, chanced to be sitting in the sanctuary of Artemis, where she had been placed by the captain of a picked corps, who had seized her for his prize and set his three-crested helmet upon her head. But suddenly she ran forth to view the tumult, and as she stood in front of the gate of the sanctuary and looked down upon the combatants from on high, with the three-crested helmet on her head, she seemed to the citizens themselves a vision θέαμα σεμνότερον ἢ κατ' ἄνθρωπον ἐφάνη, καὶ τοῖς πολεμίοις φάσμα θεῖον ὄραν δοκοῦσι φρίκην ἐνέβαλε καὶ θάμβος, ὥστε μηδένα τρέπεσθαι πρὸς ἀλκὴν.

Αὐτοὶ δὲ Πελληνεῖς λέγουσι τὸ βρέτας τῆς θεοῦ τὸν μὲν ἄλλον ἀποκεῖσθαι χρόνον ἄψαυστον, ὅταν δὲ κινήθην ὑπὸ τῆς ἱερείας ἐκφέρηται, μηδένα προσβλέπειν ἐναντίον, ἀλλ' ἀποτρέπεσθαι πάντας· οὐ γὰρ ἀνθρώποις μόνον ὄραμα φρικτὸν εἶναι καὶ χαλεπὸν, ἀλλὰ καὶ δένδρα ποιεῖν ἄφορα καὶ καρποὺς ἀπαμβλίσκειν, δι' ὧν ἂν κομίζηται.

3 τοῦτο δὴ τότε τὴν ἱερείαν ἐξενεγκαμένην καὶ τρέπουσαν αἰεὶ κατὰ τοὺς Αἰτωλοὺς ἀντιπρόσωπον ἐκφρονας καταστήσαι καὶ παρελέσθαι τὸν λογισμὸν. ὁ δὲ Ἄρατος οὐδὲν ἐν τοῖς ὑπομνήμασιν εἶρηκε τοιοῦτον, ἀλλὰ φησι τρεψάμενος τοὺς Αἰτωλοὺς καὶ φεύγουσι συνεισπεσὼν εἰς τὴν πόλιν ἐξελάσαι κατὰ κράτος, ἑπτακοσίους δὲ ἀποκτείνει. τὸ δὲ ἔργον ἐν τοῖς μεγίστοις διεβοήθη, καὶ Τιμάνθης ὁ ζωγράφος ἐποίησεν ἐμφαντικῶς τῇ διαθέσει τὴν μάχην ἔχουσαν.

XXXIII. Οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ πολλῶν ἐθνῶν καὶ δυναστῶν ἐπὶ τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς συνισταμένων εὐθύς ὁ Ἄρατος ἔπραττε φιλίαν πρὸς τοὺς Αἰτωλοὺς, καὶ Πανταλέοντι τῷ πλειῆστον Αἰτωλῶν δυναμένῳ συνεργῶ χρησάμενος οὐ μόνου εἰρήνην, ἀλλὰ καὶ συμμαχίαν τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς πρὸς τοὺς Αἰτωλοὺς ἐποίησε.

2 Τοὺς δὲ Ἀθηναίους σπουδάζων ἐλευθερώσαι διεβλήθη καὶ κακῶς ἤκουσεν ὑπὸ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν, ὅτι σπουδὰς πεπονημένων αὐτῶν πρὸς τοὺς Μακεδόνας καὶ ἀνοχὰς ἀγόντων ἐπεχείρησε τὸν Πειραιᾶ of more than human majesty, while the enemy thought they saw an apparition from heaven and were struck with amazement and terror, so that not a man of them thought of defending himself.

But the Pellenians themselves tell us that the image of the goddess usually stands untouched, and that when it is removed by the priestess and carried forth from the temple, no man looks upon it, but all turn their gaze away; for not only to mankind is it a grievous and terrible sight, but trees also, past which it may be carried, become barren and cast their fruit. This image, then, they say, the priestess carried forth from the temple at this time, and by ever turning it in the faces of the Aetolians robbed them of their senses and took away their reason. Aratus, however, in his Commentaries, makes no mention of such a thing, but says that after routing the Aetolians and bursting into the city with them as they fled, he drove them out by main force, and slew seven hundred of them. The action was extolled as among the greatest exploits, and Timanthes the painter made a picture of the battle which in its composition vividly portrayed the event.

XXXIII. Notwithstanding, since many peoples and dynasts were combining against the Achaeans, Aratus at once sought to make friends of the Aetolians, and with the assistance of Pautaleon, their most influential man, not only made peace, but also an alliance between them and the Achaeans.

But in his eagerness to set Athens free he incurred the bitter reproaches of the Achaeans, because, though they had made a truce and suspended hostilities with the Macedonians, he attempted to seize καταλαβείν. αὐτὸς δὲ ἄρνούμενος ἐν τοῖς ὑπο-μνήμασιν οἷς ἀπολέλοιπεν Ἐργίνον αἰτιάται, μεθ' 3 οὐ τὰ περὶ τὸν Ἀκροκόρινθον ἔπραξεν. ἐκείνον γὰρ ἰδίᾳ τῷ Πειραιεῖ προσβαλόντα καὶ τῆς κλί-μακος συντριβείσης διωκόμενον ὀνομάζειν καὶ καλεῖν συνεχῶς Ἄρατον ὥσπερ παρόντα, καὶ διαφυγεῖν οὕτως ἔξαπατήσαντα τοὺς πολεμίους. οὐ μὴν δοκεῖ πιθανῶς ἀπολογεῖσθαι. τὸν γὰρ Εργίνον, ἄνθρωπον ἰδιώτην καὶ Σύρον, ἀπ' οὐδενὸς ἢν εἰκότος ἐπὶ νοῦν βαλέσθαι τὴν τηλικαύτην πρᾶξιν, εἰ μὴ τὸν Ἄρατον εἶχεν ἡγεμόνα καὶ παρ' ἐκείνου 4 τὴν δύναμιν καὶ τὸν καιρὸν εἰλήφει πρὸς τὴν ἐπίθεσιν. ἐδήλωσε δὲ καὶ αὐτὸς ὁ Ἄρατος οὐ δις οὐδὲ τρίς, ἀλλὰ πολλάκις, ὥσπερ οἱ δυσέρωτες, ἐπιχειρήσας τῷ Πειραιεῖ καὶ πρὸς τὰς διαμαρτίας οὐκ ἀποκαμών, ἀλλὰ τῷ παρὰ μικρὸν αἰεὶ καὶ σύνεγγυς ἀποσφάλλεσθαι τῶν ἐλπίδων πρὸς τὸ θαρρεῖν ἀνακαλούμενος. ἅπαξ δὲ καὶ τὸ σκέλος ἔσπασε διὰ τοῦ Θριασίου φεύγων· καὶ τομὰς ἔλαβε πολλὰς θεραπευόμενος, καὶ πολλὸν χρόνον ἐν φορείῳ κομιζόμενος ἐποιεῖτο τὰς στρατείας.

XXXIV. Ἀντιγόνου δὲ ἀποθανόντος καὶ Δημητρίου τὴν βασιλείαν παραλαβόντος ἔτι μᾶλλον ἐνέκειτο ταῖς Ἀθήναις καὶ ὄλως κατεφρόνει τῶν Μακεδόνων. διὸ καὶ κρατηθέντος αὐτοῦ μάχη περὶ Φυλακίαν ὑπὸ Βίθνος τοῦ Δημητρίου στρα-τηγοῦ, καὶ λόγου γενομένου πολλοῦ μὲν, ὡς ἐάλωκε, πολλοῦ δὲ ὡς τέθνηκεν, ὁ μὲν τὸν Πει- 1043
 2 ραιᾶ φρουρῶν Διογένης ἔπεμψεν ἐπιστολὴν εἰς

¹ Antigonus Gonatas died in 239 B.C., and was succeeded by his son Demetrius II., who reigned ten years.

the Peiraeus. He himself, however, in the Commentaries which he left, lays the blame for this attempt upon Erginus, with whose aid he had effected the capture of Acrocorinthus. He says that Erginus attacked the Peiraeus on his own private account, and that when his scaling-ladder broke and the enemy were pursuing him, he kept calling upon Aratus by name, as if Aratus were there, and thus deceived and made his escape from them. But this defence does not seem to be convincing. For Erginus was a private man and a Syrian, and there is no likelihood that he would have conceived of so great an undertaking if he had not been under the guidance of Aratus and obtained from him the force and the fitting time for the attack. And Aratus himself also made this plain, since he assaulted the Peiraeus, not twice or thrice, but many times, like a desperate lover, and would not desist in spite of his failures, but was roused to fresh courage by the very narrowness of the slight margin by which he was disappointed of his hopes. And once he actually put his leg out of joint as he fled through the Thriasian plain; and while he was under treatment for this, the knife was often used upon him, and for a long time he was carried in a litter upon his campaigns.

XXXIV. When Antigonus died and Demetrius succeeded to the throne,¹ Aratus was all the more bent upon getting Athens, and wholly despised the Macedonians. And so, after he had been overcome in a battle at Phylacia by Bithys the general of Demetrius, and reports were rife, one that he had been captured, and another that he was dead, Diogenes, the guardian of the Peiraeus, sent a letter to

Κόρινθον ἐξίστασθαι τῆς πόλεως κελύων τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς, ἐπειδὴ Ἄρατος ἀπέθανεν· ἔτυχε δὲ τῶν γραμμάτων κομισθέντων παρὼν αὐτὸς ἐν Κορίνθῳ, καὶ διατριβὴν οἱ τοῦ Διογένους καὶ γέλωτα πολλὴν παρασχόντες ἀπηλλάγησαν. αὐτὸς δὲ ὁ βασιλεὺς ἐκ Μακεδονίας ναῦν ἔπεμψεν, ἐφ' ἧς κομισθήσεται
 3 πρὸς αὐτὸν ὁ Ἄρατος δεδεμένος. πᾶσαν δὲ Ἀθηναῖοι κουφότητα κολακείας τῆς πρὸς Μακεδόνας ὑπερβάλλοντες ἐστεφανηφόρησαν ὅτε πρῶτον ἠγγέλθη τεθνηκώς. διὸ καὶ πρὸς ὀργὴν εὐθύς ἐκστρατεύσας ἐπ' αὐτοὺς ἄχρι τῆς Ἀκαδημείας προῆλθεν· εἶτα πεισθεὶς οὐδὲν ἠδίκησεν.

Οἱ δὲ Ἀθηναῖοι συμφρονήσαντες αὐτοῦ τὴν ἀρετὴν, ἐπεὶ Δημητρίου τελευτήσαντος ὥρμησαν ἐπὶ
 4 τὴν ἐλευθερίαν, ἐκεῖνον ἐκάλουν. ὁ δὲ, καίπερ ἑτέρου μὲν ἄρχοντας τότε τῶν Ἀχαιῶν, αὐτὸς δὲ ἀρρωστία μακρᾷ κλινῆρης ὑπάρχων, ὅμως ἐν φορείῳ κομιζόμενος ὑπὶντησε τῇ πόλει πρὸς τὴν χρείαν, καὶ τὸν ἐπὶ τῆς φρουρᾶς Διογένη συνέπεισεν ἀποδοῦναι τὸν τε Πειραιᾶ καὶ τὴν Μουνυχίαν καὶ τὴν Σαλαμίνα καὶ τὸ Σούνιον τοῖς Ἀθηναίοις ἐπὶ πεντήκοντα καὶ ἑκατὼν ταλάντοις, ὧν αὐτὸς ὁ
 5 Ἄρατος εἴκοσι τῇ πόλει συνεβάλετο. προσεχώρησαν δ' εὐθύς Αἰγινῆται καὶ Ἑρμιονεῖς τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς, ἧ τε πλείστη τῆς Ἀρκαδίας αὐτοῖς συνετέλει. καὶ Μακεδόνων μὲν ἀσχόλων ὄντων διὰ τινὰς προσοίκους καὶ ὁμόρους πολέμους, Αἰτωλῶν δὲ συμμαχούντων, ἐπίδοσιν μεγάλην ἢ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν ἐλάμβανε δύναμις,

Corinth ordering the Achaeans to quit the city, since Aratus had been killed; but when the letter arrived at Corinth, Aratus chanced to be there in person, and so the messengers of Diogenes, after furnishing much diversion and laughter, went away. Moreover, the king himself sent a ship from Macedonia, on which Aratus was to be brought to him in chains. And the Athenians, carrying their flattery of the Macedonians to the highest pitch of levity, crowned themselves with garlands as soon as they heard that Aratus was dead. Therefore he was wroth, and at once made an expedition against them, and advanced as far as the Academy; then he listened to their entreaties and did them no harm.

So the Athenians came to recognize the excellence of his character, and when, upon the death of Demetrius,¹ they set out to regain their freedom, they called upon him. Then Aratus, although another was at that time general of the Achaeans, and he himself was confined to his bed by a long sickness, nevertheless was carried in a litter to help the city in its time of need, and joined in persuading Diogenes, the commander of the garrison, to give up the Peiraeus, Munychia, Salamis, and Sunium to the Athenians for a hundred and fifty talents, twenty of which Aratus contributed himself. Moreover, Aegina and Hermione at once came over to the Achaeans, and the greater part of Arcadia joined their league. And since the Macedonians were busy with certain neighbouring and adjacent wars, and the Aetolians were in alliance with the Achaeans, the power of the Achaean League was greatly increased.

¹ In 229 B.C. He was succeeded by Antigonus Doson, who reigned nine years.

XXXV. Ὁ δὲ Ἄρατος ἐξεργαζόμενος τὴν παλαιὰν ὑπόθεσιν, καὶ δυσανασχετῶν τὴν ἐν Ἄργει τυραννίδα γειτιῶσαν αὐτοῖς, ἔπειθε πέμπων τὸν Ἀριστόμαχον εἰς μέσον θεῖναι καὶ προσαγαγεῖν τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς τὴν πόλιν, καὶ ζηλώσαντα Λυδιάδην ἔθνους τηλικούτου μετ' εὐφημίας καὶ τιμῆς στρατηγὸν εἶναι μᾶλλον ἢ μιᾶς πόλεως κινδυνεύοντα
 2 καὶ μισούμενον τύραννον. ὑπακούσαντος δὲ τοῦ Ἀριστομάχου καὶ κελεύσαντος αὐτῷ πεντήκοντα τάλαντα πέμψαι τὸν Ἄρατον, ὅπως ἀπαλλάξῃ καὶ διαλύσῃται τοὺς παρ' αὐτῷ στρατευομένους, καὶ τῶν χρημάτων ποριζομένων, ὁ Λυδιάδης ἔτι στρατηγῶν καὶ φιλοτιμούμενος ἴδιον αὐτοῦ πολίτευμα τοῦτο πρὸς τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς γενέσθαι, τοῦ μὲν Ἀράτου κατηγόρει πρὸς Ἀριστόμαχον ὡς δυσμενῶς καὶ ἀδιαλλάκτως αἰεὶ πρὸς τοὺς τυράννους ἔχοντας, αὐτῷ δὲ πείσας τὴν πράξιν ἐπιτρέψαι προσήγαγε τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς τὸν ἄνθρωπον.
 3 ἔνθα δὴ μάλιστα φανεράν ἐποίησαν οἱ σύεδροι τῶν Ἀχαιῶν τὴν πρὸς τὸν Ἄρατον εὐνοίαν καὶ πίστιν. ἀντειπόντος μὲν γὰρ αὐτοῦ δι' ὀργὴν ἀπήλασαν τοὺς περὶ τὸν Ἀριστόμαχον· ἐπεὶ δὲ συμπεισθεῖς πάλιν αὐτὸς ἤρξατο περὶ αὐτῶν διαλέγεσθαι παρών, πάντα ταχέως καὶ προθύμως ἐψηφίσαντο, καὶ προσεδέξαντο μὲν τοὺς Ἀργεῖους καὶ Φλιασίους εἰς τὴν πολιτείαν, ἐνιαυτῷ δὲ ὕστερον καὶ τὸν Ἀριστόμαχον εἴλοντο στρατηγόν.
 4 Ὁ δὲ εὐήμερῶν παρὰ τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς καὶ βουλόμενος εἰς τὴν Λακωνικὴν ἐμβαλεῖν ἐκάλει τὸν Ἄρατον ἐξ Ἀθηνῶν. ὁ δὲ ἔγραφε μὲν αὐτῷ τὴν στρατείαν ἀπαγορεύων καὶ¹ τῷ Κλεομένει θράσος

¹ καὶ bracketed by Sint.²

XXXV. And now Aratus, seeking to effect his long-standing purpose, and impatient of the tyranny so near the Achaeans in Argos, sent messengers and tried to persuade Aristomachus to give his city freedom and attach it to the Achaean League, urging him to imitate Lydiades and be general of so great a nation with praise and honour, rather than tyrant of a single city with peril and hatred. Aristomachus consented, and told Aratus to send him fifty talents, in order that he might disband and send away the soldiers under him, and the money was being provided. Upon this, Lydiades, who was still general and had an ambition that the Achaeans should regard this transaction as his own work, denounced Aratus to Aristomachus as a man who had always been an implacable enemy of tyrants, and after persuading Aristomachus to entrust the matter to himself, brought him before the Achaean council. Then the members of the council put into clearest light their goodwill towards Aratus and their confidence in him. For when he angrily opposed the project, they drove Aristomachus away; but when he had been won over again, and came before them in person, and began to argue for the project, they speedily and readily adopted all his proposals, admitted Argos and Phlius into the league, and a year later¹ actually choose Aristomachus general.

Aristomachus, then, being in high favour with the Achaeans, and wishing to invade Laconia, summoned Aratus from Athens. Aratus wrote him a letter in which he tried to dissuade him from the expedition, and expressed unwillingness to involve the Achaeans in hostilities with Cleomenes, who was daring and

¹ In 227 B.C.

ἔχοντι καὶ παραβόλως αὐξανομένῳ συμπλέεσθαι τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς μὴ βουλόμενος, ὠρμημένου δὲ πάν-5 τως ὑπήκουσε καὶ παρῶν συνεστράτευεν. ὅτε δὴ καὶ κωλύσας περὶ τὸ Παλλάντιον τοῦ Κλεο-μένους ἐπιφανέντος αὐτοῖς μάχην συνάψαι τὸν Ἀριστόμαχον ὑπὸ Λυδιάδου κατηγορήθη, καὶ περὶ τῆς στρατηγίας εἰς ἀγῶνα καὶ ἀντιπαραγαγελίαν αὐτῷ καταστάς ἐκράτησε τῇ χειροτονίᾳ καὶ τὸ δωδέκατον ἤρέθη στρατηγός.

XXXVI. Ἐν ταύτῃ τῇ στρατηγίᾳ περὶ τὸ Λύκαιον ἠττηθεὶς ὑπὸ τοῦ Κλεομένους ἔφυγε· καὶ 1044 πλανηθεὶς νυκτὸς ἔδοξε μὲν τεθνάναι καὶ πάλιν οὗτος ὁ λόγος κατ' αὐτοῦ πολὺς ἐξεφοίτησεν εἰς τοὺς Ἕλληνας· ἀνασωθεὶς δὲ καὶ τοὺς στρατιώτας συναγαγὼν οὐκ ἠγάπησεν ἀσφαλῶς ἀπελθεῖν, 2 ἀλλ' ἄριστα τῷ καιρῷ χρησάμενος οὐδενὸς προσδοκῶντος οὐδὲ συλλογιζομένου τὸ μέλλον ἐξαίφ-νης ἐπέπεσε Μαντινεῦσι συμμάχοις οἷσι τοῦ Κλεομένους· καὶ τὴν πόλιν ἔλῶν φρουρὰν ἐνέβαλε καὶ τοὺς μετοίκους πολίτας ἐποίησεν αὐτῶν, καὶ μόνος ἂν νικῶντες οὐκ ἂν ῥαδίως ἔσχον ἐκτήσατο νενικημένοις τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς.

3 Αὐθις δὲ τῶν Λακεδαιμονίων ἐπὶ Μεγάλην πόλιν στρατευσάντων βοηθήσας ὄκνει μὲν ἀψι-μαχοῦντι τῷ Κλεομένει λαβὴν παρασχεῖν καὶ τοῖς Μεγαλοπολίταις βιαζομένοις ἀντεῖχεν, οὔτε ἄλλως πρὸς τὰς κατὰ στόμα μάχας εὖ πεφυκῶς καὶ τότε λειπόμενός τε πλήθει καὶ πρὸς ἄνδρα τολμητὴν καὶ νέον ἤδη παρακμάζουσι τῷ θυμῷ καὶ κεκολασμένη τῇ φιλοτιμίᾳ συνεστηκῶς, καὶ

¹ See the Cleomenes, iv. 3-4.

² 226 B.C. Cf. the Cleomenes, v. ³ Cf. the Cleomenes, vi.

growing marvellously in power; but, since Aristomachus was altogether insistent, Aratus obeyed orders and accompanied the expedition in person. It was at this time that he prevented Aristomachus from joining battle when Cleomenes came upon them at Pallantium,¹ and was denounced therefore by Lydiades, with whom he came into contest and competition for the office of general, winning the vote and being chosen general for the twelfth time.

XXXVI. In the campaign of this year² he was defeated by Cleomenes near Mount Lycaeum, and took to flight; and, since he lost his way in the night, he was thought to be dead, and once more a story to this effect had wide currency among the Greeks. But he escaped alive and rallied his soldiers, and then was not content to come off safely, but making the best use of his opportunity, when no one expected or had any idea of what was to happen, he suddenly made an assault upon Mantinea, which was in alliance with Cleomenes; and having taken the city, he set a garrison there, and made its alien residents full citizens, thus acquiring single-handed for the conquered Achaeans what they could not easily have obtained as conquerors.

And again, when the Lacedaemonians made an expedition against Megalopolis,³ he went to the aid of the city, but was loth to give Cleomenes a chance for the hand-to-hand fighting which he desired, and resisted the importunities of the Megalopolitans. For he was never at any time well fitted by nature for set battles, and at this time in particular he was inferior in numbers, and was matched against a man who was young and daring, while his own courage was past its prime, and his ambition chastened. He νομίζων ἦν διὰ τοῦ τολμᾶν ἐκεῖνος ἐξ οὐχ ὑπαρχόντων ἐκτάτο δόξαν αὐτῷ κεκτημένῳ φυλακτέον εἶναι διὰ τῆς εὐλαβείας.

XXXVII. Οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ τῶν ψιλῶν ἐκδραμόντων καὶ ὠσαμένων τοὺς Σπαρτιάτας ἄχρι τοῦ στρατοπέδου καὶ περὶ τὰς σκηναὺς διασπαρέντων, ὁ μὲν Ἄρατος οὐδ' ὥς ἐπήγαγεν, ἀλλ' ἐν μέσῳ λαβὼν χαράδραν ἐπέστησε καὶ κατεκόλυσε διαβῆναι τοὺς ὀπλίτας· ὁ δὲ Λυδιάδης περιπαθῶν πρὸς τὰ γιγνόμενα καὶ τὸν Ἄρατον κακίζων ἀνεκαλεῖτο τοὺς ἵππεῖς ὡς αὐτόν, ἀξιῶν ἐπιφανῆναι τοῖς διώκουσι καὶ μὴ προέσθαι τὸ νίκημα μηδὲ ἐγκαταλιπεῖν αὐτὸν ὑπὲρ τῆς πατρίδος ἀγωνιζόμενον. πολλῶν δὲ συστραφέντων καὶ ἀγαθῶν ἐπιρρωσθεῖς ἐνέβαλε τῷ δεξιῷ τῶν πολεμίων καὶ τρεψάμενος ἐδίωκεν, ὑπὸ θυμοῦ καὶ φιλοτιμίας ἀταμιεύτως ἐπισπασθεῖς εἰς χωρία σκολιὰ καὶ μεστὰ δένδρων πεφυτευμένων καὶ τάφρων πλατειῶν, ἐν οἷς ἐπιθεμένου τοῦ Κλεομένου ἐπέσε λαμπρῶς ἀγωνισάμενος τὸν κάλλιστον τῶν ἀγῶνων ἐπὶ θύραις τῆς πατρίδος. οἱ δ' ἄλλοι φεύγοντες εἰς τὴν φάλαγγα καὶ συνταράξαντες τοὺς ὀπλίτας ὅλον τὸ στράτευμα τῆς ἡττης ἐνέπλησαν. αἰτίαν δὲ μεγάλην ὁ Ἄρατος ἔλαβε δόξας προέσθαι τὸν Λυδιάδην· καὶ βιασθεῖς ὑπὸ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν ἀπερχομένων πρὸς ὄργην ἠκολούθησεν αὐτοῖς εἰς Αἴγιον. ἐκεῖ δὲ συνελθόντες ἐψηφίσαντο μὴ δίδόναι χρήματα αὐτῷ μηδὲ μισθοφόρους τρέφειν, ἀλλ' αὐτῷ πορίζειν, εἰ δέοιτο πολεμεῖν.

also thought that the glory which his adversary was trying to acquire by his daring and did not possess, had already been acquired by himself and must be preserved by his caution.

XXXVII. Nevertheless, his light infantry once made a sally, drove the Spartans as far as to their camp, and were scattered about among the tents. Aratus, however, would not even then lead up his men, but putting a ravine between himself and the enemy, halted there, and would not suffer his men-at-arms to cross it. Then Lydiades, distressed at what was going on, and loading Aratus with reproaches, called his horsemen to him and exhorted them to go to the help of the pursuers, and not to let the victory slip out of their hands nor leave in the lurch a commander who was fighting in behalf of his native city. Many brave men gathering at his call, he was emboldened to charge upon the right wing of the enemy, which he routed and pursued. But his ardour and ambition robbed him of discretion, and he was drawn on into places that were intricate and full of planted trees and broad trenches. Here Cleomenes attacked him and he fell, after a brilliant and most honourable combat at the gates of his native city. The rest of his men fled to their main line, threw the men-at-arms into confusion, and thus infected the whole army with their defeat. Aratus was severely blamed for this, being thought to have betrayed Lydiades; and when the Achaeans left the field in anger, they forced him to accompany them to Aegium. Here they held an assembly, and voted not to give him money and not to maintain mercenaries for him; if he wanted to wage war, he must provide the means himself.

XXXVIII. Οὕτω δὲ προπηλακισθεὶς ἐβουλεύσατο μὲν εὐθὺς ἀποθέσθαι τὴν σφραγίδα καὶ τὴν στρατηγίαν ἀφεῖναι, λογισμῶ δὲ χρησάμενος τότε μὲν ὑπέμεινε, καὶ πρὸς Ὀρχομενὸν ἐξαγαγὼν τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς μάχην ἔθετο πρὸς Μεγιστόνου τὸν Κλεομένους πατρῶον, ἐν ἧ κρατήσας τριακοσίου μὲν ἀπέκτεινε, ζῶντα δὲ τὸν Μεγιστόνου συν-
 2 ἔλαβεν. εἰωθὼς δὲ στρατηγεῖν παρ' ἐνιαυτὸν, ὡς ἡ τάξις αὐτῷ περιῆλθε, καλούμενος ἐξωμόσατο, καὶ Τιμόξενος ἠρέθη στρατηγός. ἐδόκει δὲ ἡ μὲν πρὸς τοὺς ὄχλους ὀργὴ πρόφασις εἶναι λεγομένη τῆς ἐξωμοσίας ἀπίθανος, αἰτία δ' ἀληθῆς τὰ περιεστῶτα τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς, οὐκέθ' ὡς πρότερον ἀτρέμα καὶ σχέδην τοῦ Κλεομένους ἐπιβαίνοντος οὐδ' ἐμπλεκομένου ταῖς πολιτικαῖς ἀρχαῖς,
 3 ἀλλ' ἐπεὶ τοὺς ἐφόρους ἀποκτείνας καὶ τὴν χώραν ἀναδασύμενος καὶ πολλοὺς τῶν μετοίκων ἐμβαλὼν εἰς τὴν πολιτείαν ἔσχεν ἰσχὺν ἀνυπεύθυνον, εὐθὺς ἐπικειμένον τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς καὶ τῆς ἡγεμονίας ἑαυτὸν ἀξιούντος. διὸ καὶ μέμφονται τὸν Ἄρατον ἐν σάλῳ μεγάλῳ καὶ χειμῶνι τῶν πραγμάτων φερομένων ὡσπερ κυβερνήτην ἀφέντα καὶ προέ-
 4 των ἐπιστάντα σώζειν τὸ κοινόν· εἰ δ' ἀπεγνώκει τὰ πράγματα καὶ τὴν δύναμιν τῶν Ἀχαιῶν, εἴξει τῷ Κλεομένει, καὶ μὴ πάλιν τὴν Πελοπόννησον ἐκβαρβαρῶσαι φρουραῖς Μακεδόνων, μηδὲ πληρῶσαι τὸν Ἀκροκόρινθον Ἰλλυρικῶν ὀπλων καὶ Γαλατικῶν, μηδὲ οὖς αὐτὸς ἐν ταῖς πράξεσι κατα-

1045

¹ Cf. the Cleomenes, xv. 1.

² For the year 224 B. C.

³ Cf. the Cleomenes, viii., xi.

XXXVIII. Smarting under this insult, he resolved to give up his seal at once, and resign the office of general, but upon reflection he held on for the present, and after leading the Achaeans forth to Orchomenus, fought a battle there with Megistonoüs, the stepfather of Cleomenes, in which he got the upper hand, killing three hundred of the enemy and taking Megistonoüs prisoner. But when, accustomed as he was to be general every other year, his turn came round again and he was invited to take the office, he formally declined,¹ and Timoxenus was chosen general.² Now the grounds usually given for this refusal of Aratus, namely, his anger at the people, were not thought to be convincing, and the real reason for it was the situation of the Achaeans. For the invasions of Cleomenes were no longer quiet and restrained, as formerly, nor was he fettered by the civil authorities, but after he had killed the ephors, divided up the land, advanced many resident aliens to the citizenship, and thus got an irresponsible power,³ he immediately pressed the Achaeans hard, and demanded the supreme leadership for himself. And therefore men blame Aratus, because, when the ship of state was driving in a great surge and storm, he forsook the pilot's helm and left it to another, although it had been well, even if the people were unwilling, to remain at their head and save them; and if he despaired of the government and power of the Achaeans, he ought to have yielded to Cleomenes, and not to have made Peloponnesus quite barbarous again under Macedonian garrisons, nor to have filled Acrocorinthus with Illyrian and Gallic arms, nor, in the case of στρατηγῶν καὶ καταπολιτευόμενος, ἐν δὲ τοῖς ὑπομνήμασι λαιδορῶν διετέλει, τούτους ἐπάγεσθαι δεσπότας ταῖς πόλεσι συμμάχους ὑποκοριζόμενον.

 5 εἰ δὲ Κλεομένης ἦν, λεγέσθω γὰρ οὕτως, παράνομος καὶ τυραννικός, ἄλλ' Ἑρακλεΐδαι πατέρες αὐτῷ καὶ Σπάρτη πατρίς, ἧς τὸν ἀφανέστατον ἄξιον ἀντὶ τοῦ πρώτου Μακεδόνων ἡγεμόνα ποιείσθαι τοὺς ἐν τινι λόγῳ τὴν Ἑλληνικὴν τιθεμένους εὐγένειαν. καίτοι Κλεομένης ἦτει τὴν ἀρχὴν παρὰ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν ὡς πολλὰ ποιήσων ἀγαθὰ τὰς πόλεις ἀντὶ τῆς τιμῆς καὶ τῆς προσηγορίας ἐκείνης, 6 Ἀντίγονος δὲ καὶ κατὰ γῆν καὶ κατὰ θάλατταν αὐτοκράτωρ ἡγεμῶν ἀναγορευθεὶς οὐχ ὑπήκουσε πρὶν τὸν μισθὸν αὐτῷ τῆς ἡγεμονίας ὁμολογηθῆ-ναι τὸν Ἀκροκόρινθον, ἀτεχνῶς τὸν Αἰσώπου μιμησάμενος κυνηγόν. οὐ γὰρ πρότερον ἐπέβη τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς δεομένοις καὶ ὑποβάλλουσιν αὐτοὺς διὰ τῶν πρεσβειῶν καὶ τῶν ψηφισμάτων ἢ τῇ φρουρᾷ καὶ τοῖς ὁμήροις ὥσπερ χαλινουμένους ἀνασχέ-7 σθαι. καίτοι πᾶσαν ὁ Ἄρατος ἀφήσει φωνὴν ἀπολογιζόμενος τὴν ἀνάγκην. ὁ Πολύβιος δὲ αὐτὸν ἐκ πολλοῦ φησι καὶ πρὸ τῆς ἀνάγκης ὑφορώμενον τὸ θράσος τὸ τοῦ Κλεομένου κρύφα τῷ Ἀντιγόνῳ διαλέγεσθαι, καὶ τοὺς Μεγαλοπολίτας προκαθιέναι δεομένους Ἀχαιῶν ἐπικαλεῖσθαι τὸν Ἀντίγονον. οὗτοι γὰρ ἐπιέζοντο τῷ πολέμῳ μάλιστα, συνεχῶς ἄγοντος αὐτοὺς καὶ φέροντος 8 τοῦ Κλεομένου. ὁμοίως δὲ καὶ Φύλαρχος ἰστό-

¹ Histories, ii. 47, 4 ff.

men whom he was always defeating in the fields of war and statesmanship and abusing in the pages of his Commentaries, to have made these men lords over the cities under the endearing name of allies. And if Cleomenes was, as must be granted, lawless and arbitrary, still, Heracleidae were his ancestors, and Sparta was his native land, the meanest citizen of which was more worthy than the foremost Macedonian to be made their leader by those who had any regard for Greek nobility of birth. And yet Cleomenes asked the Achaeans for the office, with the promise that he would confer many benefits upon their cities in return for that honour and its title, whereas Antigonus, although he was proclaimed leader with full powers by land and sea, would not accept the office until Acrocorinthus had been promised him as the pay for his leadership. In this he acted just like Aesop's hunter. For he would not mount the Achaeans, although they prayed him to do so and presented their backs to him by way of embassies and decrees, until they consented to wear the bit and bridle of the garrison they received and the hostages they gave. And yet Aratus says everything that he can say in explaining the necessity that was upon him. Polybius, however, says¹ that for a long time, and before the necessity arose, Aratus mistrusted the daring temper of Cleomenes and made secret overtures to Antigonus, besides putting the Megalopolitans forward to beg the Achaeans to call in Antigonus. For the Megalopolitans were most oppressed by the war, since Cleomenes was continually plundering their territory. A similar account of these matters is given by Phylarchus also, in whom, but for the testimony of ρηκε περί τούτων, ᾧ μὴ τοῦ Πολυβίου μαρτυροῦντος οὐ πάνυ τι πιστεύειν ἄξιον ἦν. ἐνθουσιᾷ γὰρ ὅταν ἄψηται τοῦ Κλεομένους, ὑπ' εὐνοίας, καὶ καθάπερ ἐν δίκῃ τῇ ἱστορίᾳ τῷ μὲν ἀντιδικῶν διατελεῖ, τῷ δὲ συναγορεύων.

XXXIX. Ἀπέβαλον δ' οὖν οἱ Ἀχαιοὶ τὴν Μαντίνειαν, πάλιν ἐλόντος αὐτὴν τοῦ Κλεομέ-νους, καὶ μάχῃ μεγάλῃ περὶ τὸ Ἑκατόμβαιον ἠττηθέντες οὕτω κατεπλάγησαν ὥστε πέμπειν εὐθὺς ἐφ' ἡγεμονία τὸν Κλεομένη καλοῦντες εἰς 2 Ἄργος. ὁ δὲ Ἄρατος ὡς ἦσθετο βαδίζοντα καὶ περὶ Λέρναν ὄντα μετὰ τῆς δυνάμεως, φοβηθεὶς ἀπέστειλε πρέσβεις τοὺς ἀξιούντας ὡς παρὰ φίλους καὶ συμμάχους αὐτὸν ἤκειν μετὰ τρι-ακοσίων, εἰ δὲ ἀπιστεῖ, λαβεῖν ὀμήρους. ταῦτα ὑβριν εἶναι καὶ χλευασμὸν αὐτοῦ φήσας ὁ Κλεομένης ἀνέξουξεν, ἐπιστολὴν γράψας τοῖς
Ἀχαιοῖς ἐγκλήματα πολλὰ κατὰ τοῦ Ἄρατου
3 καὶ διαβολὰς ἔχουσιν. ἔγραφε δὲ καὶ κείνος ἐπι-στολὰς κατὰ τοῦ Κλεομένους· καὶ ἐφέροντο λοιδορίαι καὶ βλασφημίαι μέχρι γάμων καὶ γυναικῶν ἀλλήλους κακῶς λεγόντων.

Ἐκ τούτου κήρυκα πέμψας ὁ Κλεομένης πόλεμον προερούντα τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς, μικροῦ μὲν ἔλαθε τὴν Σικυωνίων πόλιν ἀρπάσας διὰ προδο-σίας, ἔγγυθεν¹ δὲ ἀποτραπείς Πελλήνη προσέβαλε καὶ τοῦ στρατηγοῦ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν ἐκπεσόντος ἔσχε τὴν πόλιν. ὀλίγω δὲ ὕστερον καὶ Φενεὸν 4 ἔλαβε καὶ Πεντέλειον. εἴτ' εὐθὺς Ἀργεῖοι προσεχώρησαν αὐτῷ καὶ Φλιάσιοι φρουρὰν ἐδέξαντο·
καὶ ὅλως οὐδὲν ἔτι τῶν ἐπικτήτων βέβαιον ἦν

¹ ἔγγυθεν Bekker reads ἐκείθεν, with the Alvine.

Polybius, one should not put entire credence. For goodwill makes his every mention of Cleomenes ecstatic, and as if he were pleading in a court of law, he is for ever accusing Aratus in his history, and defending Cleomenes.

XXXIX. So, then, the Achaeans lost Mantinea, which was taken again by Cleomenes, and after being defeated in a great battle at Hecatombaeum they were so dismayed that they sent at once and invited Cleomenes to come to Argos and assume the leadership. But Aratus, when he learned that Cleomenes was on the way and at Lerna with his forces, feared the issue, and sent an embassy to demand that he should come with three hundred men only, as to friends and allies, and that if he was distrustful, he should accept hostages. Cleomenes declared that he was insulted and mocked by this demand, and retired with his army, after writing a letter to the Achaeans which was full of bitter accusations against Aratus. Aratus also wrote letters against Cleomenes; and their mutual abuse and defamation reached the point of maligning one another's marriages and wives.

As a result of this, Cleomenes sent a herald to declare war against the Achaeans, and almost succeeded in seizing the city of Sicyon with the help of traitors; he turned aside, however, when close at hand, and assaulted and took the city of Pellene, from which the Achaean commander fled. And not long afterwards he took Pheneus also and Penteleium. Then Argos went over to his side, and Phlius received a garrison which he sent. In a word, not one of their acquisitions longer held firm to the τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς, ἀλλὰ θόρυβος πολὺς ἄφνω περιειστήκει τὸν Ἄρατον, ὄρωντα τὴν Πελοπόννησον κραδαινομένην καὶ τὰς πόλεις ἐξανισταμένας ὑπὸ τῶν νεωτεριζόντων πανταχόθεν.

XI. Ἡτρέμει γὰρ οὐδὲν οὐδὲ ἔστεργεν ἐπὶ τοῖς παροῦσιν, ἀλλὰ καὶ Σικυωνίων αὐτῶν καὶ Κοριν- 1046 θίων ἐγένοντο πολλοὶ καταφανεῖς διειλεγμένοι τῷ Κλεομένει καὶ πάλαι πρὸς τὸ κοινὸν ἰδίων 2 ἐπιθυμία δυναστειῶν ὑπούλως ἔχοντες. ἐπὶ τούτους ἐξουσίαν ἀνυπεύθυνον ὁ Ἄρατος λαβὼν τοὺς μὲν ἐν Σικυῶνι διεφθαρμένους ἀπέκτεινε, τοὺς δὲ ἐν Κορίνθῳ πειρώμενος ἀναζητεῖν καὶ κολάζειν ἐξηγρίαине τὸ πλῆθος ἤδη νοσοῦν καὶ βαρυνόμενον τὴν ὑπὸ τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς πολιτείαν.
συνδραμόντες οὖν εἰς τὸ τοῦ Ἀπόλλωνος ἱερὸν μετεπέμποντο τὸν Ἄρατον, ἀνελεῖν ἢ συλλαβεῖν 3 πρὸ τῆς ἀποστάσεως ἐγνωκότες. ὁ δὲ ἦκε μὲν αὐτὸς ἐφελκόμενος τὸν ἵππον ὡς οὐκ ἀπιστῶν οὐδὲ ὑποπτεύων, ἀναπηδησάντων δὲ πολλῶν καὶ λοιδορουμένων αὐτῷ καὶ κατηγορούντων εὖ πως καθεστῶτι τῷ προσώπῳ καὶ τῷ λόγῳ πρῶως ἐκέλευε καθίσαι καὶ μὴ βοᾶν ἀτάκτως ἐστῶτας, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοὺς περὶ θύρας ὄντας εἴσω παριέναι καὶ ταῦθ' ἅμα λέγων ὑπεξῆει βάδην ὡς παρα-4 δώσων τινὲ τὸν ἵππον. οὕτως δὲ ὑπεκδύς καὶ τοῖς ὑπαντῶσι τῶν Κορινθίων ἀθορύβως διαλεγόμενος καὶ κελεύων πρὸς τὸ Ἀπολλώνιον βαδί-ζειν, ὡς ἔλαθε πλησίον τῆς ἄκρας γενόμενος, ἀναπηδήσας ἐπὶ τὸν ἵππον καὶ Κλεοπάτρῳ τῷ ἄρχοντι τῆς φρουρᾶς διακελευσάμενος ἐγκρατῶς

¹ With this chapter cf. the Cleomenes, xvii.—xix. 1.

² See chap. xli. 1.

Achaean, but a vast confusion suddenly encompassed Aratus. He saw Peloponnesus shaking, and its cities everywhere stirred to revolt by restless agitators.¹

XL. For there was no quiet anywhere, and no contentment with present conditions, but even among the Sicyonians and Corinthians themselves there were many who were known to have been in conference with Cleomenes, men whom a desire for private domination had long ago led into secret hostility towards the common interests. For the punishment of these men Aratus was clothed with absolute power,² and seizing those in Sicyon who were thus corrupted he put them to death; but when he tried to seek out and chastise those in Corinth, he roused the resentment of the populace there, which was already disaffected and ill at ease under the Achaean administration. So they assembled hastily in the temple of Apollo and sent for Aratus, determined to kill him or seize him, and then to revolt. He came, accordingly, leading his horse after him, as though he had no distrust or suspicion, and when many sprang up and abused and denounced him, with a composed countenance and gentle words he bade them sit down and not stand there shouting in disorderly fashion, but to admit also those who were outside at the door; and as he spoke, he withdrew slowly, as if he would hand his horse over to somebody. Having thus slipped out of the crowd, he conversed calmly with the Corinthians who met him, bidding them go to the temple of Apollo, and so, before his enemies were aware of it, came nigh the citadel. Then he leaped upon his horse, and after giving orders to Cleopater the commander of the garrison in the citadel to guard φυλάττειν ἀφίππευσεν εἰς Σικυῶνα, τριάκοντα μὲν αὐτῷ στρατιωτῶν ἐπομένων, τῶν δὲ ἄλλων ἐγκαταλιπόντων καὶ διαρρύντων.

- 5 Αἰσθόμενοι δ' οἱ Κορίνθιοι μετ' ὀλίγον τὴν ἀπόδρασιν αὐτοῦ καὶ διώξαντες, ὡς οὐ κατέλαβον, μετεπέμψαντο τὸν Κλεομένη καὶ παρέδωσαν τὴν πόλιν οὐδὲν οἰομένῳ λαμβάνειν παρ' αὐτῶν τοσοῦτον ὅσου διήμαρτεν ἀφέντων Ἄρατον. οὗτος μὲν οὖν, προσγενομένων αὐτῷ τῶν τὴν λεγομένην Ἀκτὴν κατοικούντων καὶ τὰς πόλεις ἐγχειρισάντων, ἀπεσταύρου καὶ περιετείχιζε τὸν Ἀκροκόρινθον.

- ΧΛΙ. Ἐπὶ δὲ Ἀράτῳ συνῆλθον εἰς Σικυῶνα τῶν Ἀχαιῶν οὐ πολλοί.¹ καὶ γενομένης ἐκκλησίας ἠρέθη στρατηγὸς αὐτοκράτωρ. καὶ περιστήσατο φρουρὰν ἐκ τῶν ἑαυτοῦ πολιτῶν, τριάκοντα μὲν ἔτη καὶ τρία πεπολιτευμένος ἐν τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς, πεπρωτεुकῶς δὲ καὶ δυνάμει καὶ δόξῃ τῶν Ἑλλήνων, τότε δὲ ἔρημος καὶ ἄπορος συντετριμμένος, ὥσπερ ἐπὶ ναυαγίου τῆς πατρίδος ἐν τοσοῦτῳ
- 2 σάλῳ καὶ κινδύνῳ διαφερόμενος. καὶ γὰρ Αἰτωλοὶ δεομένου βοηθεῖν ἀπέειπαντο, καὶ τὴν Ἀθηναίων πόλιν χάριτι τοῦ Ἀράτου πρόθυμον οὖσαν οἱ περὶ Εὐρυκλείδην καὶ Μικίωνα διεκώλυσαν. ὄντων δὲ τῷ Ἀράτῳ καὶ χρημάτων ἐν Κορίνθῳ καὶ οἰκίας, ὁ Κλεομένης ἤψατο μὲν οὐδενὸς οὐδὲ ἄλλον εἶασε, μεταπεμψάμενος δὲ τοὺς φίλους αὐτοῦ καὶ τοὺς διοικητὰς ἐκέλευε

¹ οὐ πολλοί Ziegler, with Ss and most good MSS. : οἱ πολλοί.

it with a strong hand, he rode off to Sicyon, followed by only thirty of his soldiers; the rest deserted him and dispersed.

After a little while the Corinthians learned of his flight and pursued him, but did not overtake him. Then they sent for Cleomenes and delivered their city into his hands,¹ although he thought that he had gained by what they gave him far less than he had lost by their letting Aratus get away. Cleomenes, accordingly, after the accession to him of the inhabitants of Acte, as the district is called, who placed their cities in his hands, proceeded to run a wall and palisade about Acrocorinthus.

XLI. But a few of the Achaeans came together with Aratus at Sicyon; and in an assembly there held he was chosen general with full powers. And now he surrounded himself with a guard from among his own citizens. For three-and-thirty years he had directed public affairs among the Achaeans, and had enjoyed more power and reputation than any other Greek; but now, abandoned by his allies and helplessly crushed, he was like one drifting about in great surge and peril on the wreck of his native city. For the Aetolians refused him their aid when he asked for it, and the Athenians, whom gratitude made eager to help him, were prevented by Eurycleides and Micion.² As for the house and property belonging to Aratus in Corinth, Cleomenes would not touch them at all, nor permit anyone else to do so, but sent for the friends and stewards of Aratus and ordered them to administer and watch over ¹ Early in 223 B.C. The story is told very differently in the Cleomenes. xix. 1 f.

² Two leading orators of the time.

πάντα διοικεῖν¹ καὶ φυλάσσειν ὡς Ἀράτῳ λόγον
 3 ὑφέζοντας· ἰδίᾳ δὲ πρὸς αὐτὸν ἔπεμψε Τρίπυλον καὶ πάλιν Μεγιστόνου τὸν πατρῶν ὑπισχνούμενος ἄλλα τε πολλὰ καὶ δώδεκα τάλαντα σύνταξιν ἐνιαύσιον, ὑπερβαλλόμενος τῷ ἡμίσει Πτολεμαίῳ· ἐκεῖνος γὰρ ἕξ τάλαντα τῷ Ἀράτῳ κατ' ἐνιαυτὸν ἀπέστελλεν. ἡξίου δὲ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν ἡγεμῶν ἀναγορευθῆναι καὶ κοινῇ μετ' αὐτῶν 4 φυλάσσειν τὸν Ἀκροκόρινθον. τοῦ δὲ Ἀράτου φήταντος ὡς οὐκ ἔχοι τὰ πράγματα, μᾶλλον δὲ ὑπ' αὐτῶν ἔχοιτο, καὶ κατειρωνεύσασθαι δόξαντος, ἐμβαλὼν εὐθύς τὴν Σικυωνίαν ἐπόρθει καὶ κατέφθειρε καὶ προσεκάθητο τῇ πόλει τρεῖς μῆνας, ἐγκαρτεροῦντος τοῦ Ἀράτου καὶ διαποροῦντος εἰ δέξεται τὸν Ἀντίγονον ἐπὶ τῷ παραδοῦναι τὸν Ἀκροκόρινθον· ἄλλως γὰρ οὐκ ἐβούλετο βοηθεῖν.

XLII. Οἱ μὲν οὖν Ἀχαιοὶ συνεληλυθότες εἰς Αἴγιον ἐκεῖ τὸν Ἄρατον ἐκάλουν. ἦν δὲ κίνδυνος, τοῦ Κλεομένους πρὸς τῇ πόλει στρατοπεδεύοντος, διελθεῖν. καὶ κατεῖχον οἱ πολῖται, δεόμενοι καὶ 1047
 προήσασθαι τὸ σῶμα τῶν πολεμίων ἐγγὺς ὄντων οὐ φάσκοντες· ἐξήρτηντο δὲ αὐτοῦ καὶ γυναῖκες ἤδη καὶ παῖδες ὡσπερ πατρὸς κοινοῦ καὶ σωτῆρος 2 περιεχόμενοι καὶ δακρύνοντες. οὐ μὲν ἄλλὰ θαρ-ρύνας καὶ παραμυθησάμενος αὐτοὺς ἐξίππευσεν ἐπὶ τὴν θάλατταν, ἔχων δέκα φίλους καὶ τὸν

¹ διοικεῖν suggested by Sintenis, with comparison of Cleomenes, xix. 3: ποιεῖν.

everything as though they are to render an account to Aratus. Moreover, he privately sent Tripylus to Aratus, and afterwards Megistonoüs, his stepfather, promising to give him, besides many other things, a yearly pension of twelve talents, thus doubling the amount which Aratus received annually from Ptolemy; for he sent six talents each year to Aratus.¹ Cleomenes demanded, however, that he should be proclaimed leader of the Achaeans, and together with them should have the keeping of Acrocorinthus. Aratus made answer that he did not control affairs, but rather was controlled by them; whereupon Cleomenes, thinking himself mocked, at once invaded the territory of Sicyon, ravaged and laid it waste, and encamped before the city three months. All this while Aratus held out patiently, and debated with himself whether he should accept Antigonus as an ally on condition of handing over to him Acrocorinthus! for on any other terms Antigonus was unwilling to give him help.²

XLII. Accordingly, the Achaeans came together at Aegium and invited Aratus thither. But there was danger in his trying to get there, since Cleomenes was encamped before Sicyon. Besides, the citizens tried to detain him, beseeching him not to go and refusing to let him expose himself while the enemy were near; and presently the women and children were clinging to him and tearfully embracing him as a common father and preserver. Nevertheless, after encouraging and comforting them, he rode out to the sea, accompanied by ten friends and by his

¹ Ptolemy III., surnamed Euergetes, king of Egypt 247—222 B. C.

² Cf. the Cleomenes, xix. 3 f.

υῖον ἤδη νεανίαν ὄντα· καὶ παρορμούντων ἐκεῖ πλοίων, ἐπιβάντες εἰς Αἴγιον παρεκομίσθησαν ἐπὶ τὴν ἐκκλησίαν, ἐν ἧ καλεῖν τὸν Ἀντίγονον ἐψηφίσαντο καὶ παραδιδόναι τὸν Ἀκροκόρινθον.

3 ἔπεμψε δὲ καὶ τὸν υῖόν Ἄρατος πρὸς αὐτὸν μετὰ τῶν ἄλλων ὁμήρων. ἐφ' οἷς οἱ Κορίνθιοι χαλεπῶς φέροντες τὰ τε χρήματα διήρπασαν αὐτοῦ καὶ τὴν οἰκίαν τῷ Κλεομένει δωρεὰν ἔδωκαν.

XLIII. Τοῦ δ' Ἀντιγόγου προσιόντος ἤδη μετὰ τῆς δυνάμεως (ἦγε δὲ πεζοὺς δισμυρίους Μακεδόνας, ἵππεῖς δὲ χιλίους καὶ τριακοσίους) ἀπήντα μετὰ τῶν δημιουργῶν ὁ Ἄρατος αὐτῷ κατὰ θάλατταν εἰς Πηγάς, λαθὼν τοὺς πολεμίους, οὐ πάνυ τι θαρρῶν τὸν Ἀντίγονον οὐδὲ πιστεύων τοῖς Μακεδόσιν. ἦδει γὰρ ηὔξημένον ἑαυτὸν ἐξ ὧν ἐκείνους κακῶς ἐποίησε καὶ πρώτην εἰληφότα μεγίστην ὑπόθεσιν τῆς πολιτείας τὴν πρὸς

2 Ἀντίγονον τὸν παλαιὸν ἔχθραν. ἀλλὰ ὁρῶν ἀπαραιτήτον ἐπικειμένην ἀνάγκην καὶ τὸν καιρὸν, ᾧ δουλεύουσιν οἱ δοκοῦντες ἄρχειν, ἐχώρει πρὸς τὸ δεινόν. ὁ δὲ Ἀντίγονος, ὡς τις αὐτῷ προσιόντα τὸν Ἄρατον ἔφρασε, τοὺς μὲν ἄλλους ἠσπάσατο μετρίως καὶ κοινῶς, ἐκείνους δὲ καὶ περὶ τὴν πρώτην ἀπάντησιν ἐδέξατο τῇ τιμῇ περιπτῶς, καὶ τὰλλα πειρώμενος ἀνδρὸς ἀγαθοῦ καὶ νοῦν ἔχοντος ἐνδοτέρω τῆς χρείας προσηγάγετο.

3 Καὶ γὰρ ἦν ὁ Ἄρατος οὐ μόνον ἐν πράγμασι son, who was now a young man. Vessels were lying at anchor off the shore, and upon these the party were conveyed to Aegium, where the assembly was sitting. Here it was voted to call in Antigonus and hand over to him Acrocorinthus.¹ Aratus even sent his son to Antigonus with the other hostages. At this the Corinthians were indignant; they plundered his property and made a present of his house to Cleomenes.

XLIII. And now, as Antigonus was approaching with his forces (he was followed by twenty thousand Macedonian footmen and thirteen hundred horse), Aratus, in company with his High Councillors,² went by sea to meet him at Pegae, eluding the enemy. He had no very great confidence in Antigonus, and put no trust in the Macedonians. For he knew that his own rise to power had been a consequence of the harm he had done to them, and that he had found the first and the chief basis for his conduct of affairs in his hatred towards the former Antigonus.³ But seeing how inexorable was the necessity laid upon him in the demands of the hour, to which those we call rulers are slaves, he went on towards the dread ordeal. But Antigonus, when he was told that Aratus was coming to him, gave the rest of the party an ordinary and moderate welcome; Aratus, however, he received at this first meeting with superlative honour, and afterwards, finding him to be a man of worth and wisdom, drew him in closer intimacy to himself.

For Aratus was not only helpful in large under-

¹ In the spring of 223 B.C. Cf. the Cleomenes, xix. 4.

² A body of ten men, chosen as admirers of the general.

³ Antigonus Gonatas. See the note on xxxiv. 1.

μεγάλοις ὠφέλιμος, ἀλλὰ καὶ σχολάζοντι βασιλεῖ συγγενέσθαι παρ' ὄντινον ἐπίχαρις. διό, καίπερ ὦν νέος ὁ Ἀντίγονος, ὡς κατενόησε τὴν φύσιν τοῦ ἀνδρὸς μηδὲν ἀργὸν εἰς φιλίαν βασιλικὴν οὐσαν, οὐ μόνον Ἀχαιῶν, ἀλλὰ καὶ Μακεδόνων τῶν σὺν αὐτῷ πάντων μάλιστα¹ χρώμενος
 4 ἐκείνῳ διετέλει· καὶ τὸ σημεῖον ἀπέβαινε ὡς ὁ θεὸς ἐπὶ τῶν ἱερῶν ἔδειξε. λέγεται γὰρ οὐ πρὸ πολλοῦ θύοντι τῷ Ἀράτῳ δύο χολὰς ἐν ἥπατι φανῆναι μιᾷ πιμελῇ περιεχομένας· καὶ τὸν μάντιν εἰπεῖν ὡς ταχὺ πρὸς τὰ ἔχθιστα καὶ πολεμιώτατα σύνεισιν εἰς ἄκραν φιλίαν. τότε μὲν οὖν παρήνευκε τὸ ῥηθέν, οὐδὲ ἄλλως πολὺ νέμων πίστεως ἱεροῖς καὶ μαντεύμασιν, ἀλλὰ τῷ
 5 λογισμῷ χρώμενος. ἐπεὶ δὲ ὕστερον εὐ χωροῦντι τῷ πολέμῳ συναγαγὼν ὁ Ἀντίγονος ἐστίασιν ἐν Κορίνθῳ καὶ πολλοὺς ὑποδεχόμενος τὸν Ἄρατον ἐπάνω κατέκλινεν ἑαυτοῦ, καὶ μετὰ μικρὸν αἰτήσας περιβόλαιον ἠρώτησεν εἰ δοκεῖ κάκείνῳ ψῦχος εἶναι, τοῦ δὲ καὶ πάνυ ῥιγοῦν φήσαντος, ἐκέλευσε προσχωρεῖν ἐγγυτέρῳ καὶ δάπιδος κομισθείσης ἀμφοτέρους ὁμοῦ περιέβαλον οἱ παῖδες, τότε δὴ τὸν Ἄρατον ἀναμνησθέντα τῶν ἱερῶν ἐκείνων γέλωσ ἔλαβε, καὶ διηγείτο τῷ βασιλεῖ τὸ σημεῖον καὶ τὴν προαγόρευσιν. ἀλλὰ ταῦτα μὲν ἐπράχθη χρόνοις ὕστερον.

XLIV. Ἐν δὲ ταῖς Πηγαῖς δόντες καὶ λαβόντες ὄρκους εὐθύς ἐβάδιζον ἐπὶ τοὺς πολεμίους. καὶ περὶ τὴν πόλιν ἀγῶνες ἦσαν, εὐ πεφραγμένου

¹ πάντων μάλιστα Coraës and Ziegler, after Reiske : πάντα.

takings, but also more acceptable than anyone else as a companion in the king's leisure hours. Therefore, although Antigonus was young, as soon as he perceived that Aratus was naturally well fitted to be a king's friend, he continually treated him with greater intimacy than anyone else, whether of the Achaeans, or of the Macedonians in his following; and thus the omen proved true which the god had given to Aratus in his sacrificial victims. For it is related that as he was sacrificing a little while before this, a liver was found which had two gall-bladders enclosed in a single coil of fat; whereupon the seer had declared that Aratus would soon enter into close friendship with what he most hated and fought against. At the time, then, Aratus paid no heed to the utterance, since in general he put little faith in victims and divinations, and trusted rather to his reasoning powers. Later, however, when the war was going on well, Antigonus gave a feast in Corinth, at which he had many guests, and made Aratus recline just above himself. After a little while the king called for a coverlet, and asked Aratus if he too did not think it cold; and when Aratus replied that he was very chilly, the king ordered him to come nearer; so that the rug which the servants brought was thrown over both of them together. Then, indeed, Aratus called to mind his sacrificial victims and burst out laughing, and told the king about the omen and the seer's prediction. But this took place at a later time.

XLIV. At Pegae Antigonus and Aratus exchanged oaths of fidelity, and straightway marched against the enemy at Corinth. And there were conflicts about the city, Cleomenes being well fortified, and τοῦ Κλεομένουσ καὶ τῶν Κορινθίωι ἀμυνομένων προθύμως. ἐν τούτῳ δὲ Ἀριστοτέλης ὁ Ἀργεῖοσ φίλοσ ὦν Ἀράτου διαπέμπεται κρύφα πρὸσ αὐτόν, ὡσ ἀποστήσων τὴν πόλιν, εἰ στρατιώτασ 2 ἐκεῖνοσ ἔχων ἔλθοι. τοῦ δὲ Ἀράτου φράσαντοσ τῷ Ἀντιγόνῳ καὶ μετὰ χιλίων καὶ πεντακοσίων εἰσ Ἐπίδαυρον ἐξ Ἰσθμοῦ πλοίοισ κομιζόμενουσ κατὰ τάχοσ, οἱ μὲν Ἀργεῖοι προεξαναστάντεσ ἐπέθεντο τοῖσ τοῦ Κλεομένουσ καὶ κατέκλεισαν εἰσ τὴν ἀκρόπολιν, ὁ δὲ Κλεομένησ πυθόμενοσ 1048 ταῦτα, καὶ δείσασ μὴ κατασχόντεσ οἱ πολέμιοι τὸ Ἄργοσ ἀποκόψωσιν αὐτόν τῆσ οἴκαδε σωτη-ρίασ, ἐκλιπὼν τὸν Ἀκροκόρινθοσ ἔτι νυκτὸσ ἐβοή-3 θει. καὶ παρελθὼν μὲν εἰσ Ἄργοσ ἔφθη καὶ τροπὴν τινα τῶν πολεμίων ἐποίησεν, ὀλίγῳ δὲ ὕστερον Ἀράτου προσφερομένου καὶ τοῦ βασι-λέωσ ἐπιφαινομένου μετὰ τῆσ δυνάμewσ ἀπεχώρησέν εἰσ Μαντίνειαν. ἐκ τούτου τοῖσ μὲν Ἀχαιοῖσ πάλιν αἱ πόλεις ἅπασαι προσεχώρησαν, Ἀντίγονοσ δὲ τὸν Ἀκροκόρινθοσ παρέλαβεν, Ἄρατοσ δὲ στρατηγὸσ αἰρεθεῖσ ὑπ' Ἀργείων ἔπεισεν αὐτοῦσ Ἀντιγόνῳ τά τε τῶν τυράννων καὶ τὰ τῶν προδοτῶν χρήματα δωρεὰν δοῦναι.

 4 τὸν δὲ Ἀριστόμαχοσ ἐν Κεγχραεῖσ στρεβλώσαντεσ κατεπόντισαν, ἐφ' ᾧ καὶ μάλιστα κακῶσ ἤκουσεν ὁ Ἄρατοσ, ὡσ ἄνθρωπον οὐ πονηρόν, ἀλλὰ καὶ κεχρημένον ἐκείνῳ καὶ πεπεισμένον ἀφείναι τὴν ἀρχὴν καὶ προσαγαγεῖν τοῖσ Ἀχαιοῖσ τὴν πόλιν, ὅμωσ περιιδὼν παρανόμωσ ἀπολλύμενον.

XLV. Ἦδη δὲ καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἐκείνῳ τὰσ αἰτίας ἐπέφερον, οἶον ὅτι τὴν μὲν Κορινθίων πόλιν

the Corinthians defending themselves with ardour. Meanwhile, however, Aristotle the Argive, who was a friend of Aratus, sent secretly to him and promised to bring his city to revolt from Cleomenes if Aratus would come thither with soldiers. So Aratus, after informing Antigonus, took fifteen hundred men and sailed from the Isthmus to Epidaurus with all speed.¹ But the Argives, revolting prematurely, attacked the garrison of Cleomenes and shut them up in the citadel, and Cleomenes, learning of this, and fearing that if his enemies got possession of Argos they would cut him off from a safe return home, abandoned Acrocorinthus while it was still night and went to their aid. He succeeded in getting into Argos first, routing some of the enemy on the way; but shortly afterwards Aratus came up, and Antigonus showed himself with his forces, and Cleomenes therefore retreated to Mantinea. Upon this the cities all came over to the Achaeans again, Acrocorinthus was handed over to Antigonus, and Aratus, having been chosen general by the Argives, persuaded them to make a present to Antigonus of the property of the tyrants and of the traitors. As for Aristomachus, he was tortured at Cenchreae and then thrown into the sea; for which deed, more than any other, Aratus was reproached, on the ground that he had allowed a man to be lawlessly put to death who was not wicked, but had coöperated with him, and at his persuasion had renounced his power and attached his city to the Achaean League.²

XLV. Presently, too, men began to blame Aratus for whatever else was done, as, for instance, that the

¹ Cf. the Cleomenes, xx. 3 f.

² Cf. chap. xxxv.

Ἀντιγόνῳ δωρεὰν ἔδωκαν, ὥσπερ κώμην τὴν τυχούσαν, τὸν Ὀρχομενὸν δὲ συνεχώρησαν αὐτῷ διαρπάσαντι φρουρὰν ἐμβαλεῖν Μακεδονικῆν, ἐψηφίσαντο δὲ ἄλλῳ μὴ γράφειν βασιλεῖ μηδὲ πρεσβεύειν πρὸς ἄλλον ἄκοντος Ἀντιγόνου,
 2 τρέφειν τε καὶ μισθοδοτεῖν ἠναγκάζοντο τοὺς
 Μακεδόνας, θυσίας δὲ καὶ πομπὰς καὶ ἀγῶνας Ἀντιγόνῳ συνετέλουν, ἄρξαμένων τῶν Ἀράτου πολιτῶν καὶ δεξαμένων τῇ πόλει τὸν Ἀντίγονον ὑπ' Ἀράτου ξενιζόμενον, ἠτιῶντο πάντων ἐκείνου, ἀγνοοῦντες ὅτι τὰς ἡνίας ἐκείνῳ παραδεδωκῶς καὶ τῇ ρύμῃ τῆς βασιλικῆς ἐφελκόμενος ἐξουσίας οὐδενὸς ἦν ἢ μόνῃς φωνῆς ἔτι κύριος, ἐπισφαλῆ 3 τὴν παρρησίαν ἐχούσης. ἐπεὶ φανερώς γε πολλὰ τῶν πραπτομένων ἐλύπει τὸν Ἄρατον, ὥσπερ τὸ περὶ τῶν εἰκόνων· ὁ γὰρ Ἀντίγονος τὰς μὲν τῶν ἐν Ἀργεὶ τυράννων καταβεβλημένας ἀνέστησε, τὰς δὲ τῶν ἐλόντων τὸν Ἀκροκόρινθον ἐστῶσας
 ἀνέτρεψε πλὴν μιᾶς τῆς ἐκείνου· καὶ πολλὰ περὶ 4 τούτων δεηθεὶς ὁ Ἄρατος οὐκ ἔπεισεν. ἐδόκει δὲ καὶ τὰ περὶ Μαντίειαν οὐχ Ἑλληνικῶς διωκῆσθαι τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς. κρατήσαντες γὰρ αὐτῶν δι' Ἀντιγόνου τοὺς μὲν ἐνδοξοτάτους καὶ πρώτους ἀπέκτειναν, τῶν δ' ἄλλων τοὺς μὲν ἀπέδοντο, τοὺς δ' εἰς Μακεδονίαν ἀπέστειλαν ἐν πέδαις¹ δεδεμένους, παῖδας δὲ καὶ γυναῖκας ἠνδραποδίσαντο, τοῦ δὲ συναχθέντος ἀργυρίου τὸ τρίτον αὐτοῖ διείλοντο, τὰς δὲ δύο μοίρας ἔνειμαν τοῖς

¹ ἐν πέδαις Sint.², followed by Ziegler: πέδαις.

Achaean made a present to Antigonus of the city of Corinth, as if it had been an ordinary village; that they allowed the king to plunder Orchomenus and put a Macedonian garrison in it; that they decreed not to write or send an embassy to any other king against the wishes of Antigonus; that they were forced to furnish supplies and pay for the Macedonian troops; and that they celebrated sacrifices, processions, and games in honour of Antigonus, the fellow-citizens of Aratus leading the way and receiving Antigonus into their city, where he was the guest of Aratus. For all these things men blamed Aratus, not knowing that, since he had entrusted the reins to the king and was dragged along in the wake of the king's power, he was no longer master of anything except his tongue, which it was dangerous for him to use with freedom. At any rate Aratus was plainly annoyed at many acts of the king, and especially at his treatment of the statues in Argos; for those of the tyrants, which had been cast down, Antigonus set up again, while those of the captors of Acrocorinthus, which were standing, he threw down, that of Aratus only excepted; and though Aratus made many appeals to him in the matter, he could not persuade him. It was thought also that the treatment of Mantinea by the Achaeans was not in accord with the Greek spirit. For after mastering that city with the aid of Antigonus, they put to death the leading and most noted citizens, and of the rest, some they sold into slavery, while others they sent off into Macedonia in chains, and made slaves of their wives and children, dividing a third of the money thus raised among themselves, and giving the remaining two-thirds to the Macedonians.

5 Μακεδόσι. καὶ ταῦτα μὲν ἔσχε τὸν τῆς ἀμύνης νόμον· καὶ γὰρ εἰ δεινὸν ἄνδρας ὁμοφύλους καὶ συγγενεῖς οὕτω μεταχειρίσασθαι δι' ὀργήν, ἀλλ' ἐν ἀνάγκαις γλυκὺ γίνεται καὶ σκληρόν,¹ κατὰ Σιμωνίδην, ὡσπερ ἀλγοῦντι τῷ θυμῷ καὶ φλεγμαίνονται θεραπείαν καὶ ἀναπλήρωσιν προσφερόντων. τὰ δὲ μετὰ ταῦτα πραχθέντα περὶ τὴν πόλιν οὐτ' εἰς καλὴν οὐτ' εἰς ἀναγκαίαν ἐστὶ
6 θέσθαι τῷ Ἀράτῳ πρόφασιν. τῶν γὰρ Ἀχαιῶν τὴν πόλιν παρ' Ἀντιγόμου δωρεὰν λαβόντων καὶ κατοικίξειν ἐγνωκότων αὐτὸς οἰκιστῆς αἰρεθεὶς καὶ στρατηγὸς ὧν ἐψηφίσατο μηκέτι καλεῖν Μαντίνειαν, ἀλλ' Ἀντιγόνειαν, ὃ καὶ μέχρι νῦν καλεῖται. καὶ δοκεῖ δι' ἐκείνον ἢ μὲν ἐρατεινὴ Μαντίνεια παντάπασιν ἐξαληλίφθαι, διαμένει δὲ ἢ πόλις ἐπώνυμος τῶν ἀπολεσάντων καὶ ἀνελόντων τοὺς πολίτας.

XLVI. Ἐκ τούτου Κλεομένης μὲν ἠττηθεὶς μάχῃ μεγάλη περὶ Σελλασίαν ἐξέλιπε τὴν Σπάρτην καὶ ἀπέπλευσεν εἰς Αἴγυπτον, Ἀντιγόμος δὲ πάντα τὰ δίκαια καὶ φιλάνθρωπα τῷ Ἀράτῳ πεπονηκῶς ἀνέξευξεν εἰς Μακεδονίαν, 1049
κακεῖ νοσῶν ἤδη τὸν διάδοχον τῆς βασιλείας Φίλιππον, οὐπω πάνυ μεράκιον ὄντα, πέμπων εἰς Πελοπόννησον Ἀράτῳ μάλιστα προσέχειν ἐκέλευσε καὶ δι' ἐκείνου ταῖς πόλεσιν ἐντυχεῖν
2 καὶ γνωρισθῆναι τοῖς Ἀχαιοῖς. καὶ μέντοι καὶ

¹ καὶ σκληρόν with Bergk (Poet. Lyr. Gr. iii.⁴ p. 530): καὶ οὐ σκληρόν.

² The repeated treacheries of the Mantineians towards the Achaeans are related at length in Polybius, ii. 57 f.

² Homer, Iliad, ii. 607.

It is true that this came under the law of reprisal; ¹ for though it is a terrible thing to treat men of the same race and blood in this way, out of anger, still "in dire stress even cruelty is sweet," as Simonides says, when men, as it were, give satisfaction and healing care to a mind that is in anguish and inflamed. But the subsequent treatment of the city by Aratus was neither necessary nor honourable, and cannot be excused. For after the Achaeans had received the city from Antigonus as a present and had decided to colonize it, Aratus himself was chosen to be the founder of the new settlement, and being then general, got a decree passed that the city should no longer be called Mantinea, but Antigoneia, and this is its name down to the present time. And so it was due to Aratus that the name of "lovely Mantinea" ² was altogether extinguished, and the city continues to bear the name of him who destroyed and slew its former citizens.³

XLVI. After this, Cleomenes, having been defeated in a great battle at Sellasia,⁴ forsook Sparta and sailed off to Egypt, and Antigonus, after having accorded to Aratus fair and kindly treatment in every way, led his army back to Macedonia. There, being now a sick man, he sent Philip, his successor in the kingdom, who was still a stripling, into the Peloponnesus, and urged him to attach himself to Aratus above all others, and through him to deal with the cities and make the acquaintance of the Achaeans.

³ The old name of the city was restored by the Emperor Hadrian. Pausanias, viii. 8. 12.

⁴ In 221 B.C., cf. the Cleomenes, xxviii. ff.

παραλαβὼν αὐτὸν ὁ Ἄρατος οὕτως διέθηκεν ὥστε πολλῆς μὲν εὐνοίας πρὸς αὐτόν, πολλῆς δὲ πρὸς τὰς Ἑλληνικὰς πράξεις φιλοτιμίας καὶ ὀρμῆς μεστὸν εἰς Μακεδονίαν ἀποστεῖλαι.

XLVII. Τελευτήσαντος δὲ Ἀντιγόνου καταφρονήσαντες Αἰτωλοὶ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν διὰ τὴν ῥαθυμίαν (ἐθισθέντες γὰρ ἀλλοτρίαις σώζεσθαι χερσὶ καὶ τοῖς Μακεδόνων ὄπλοις αὐτοὺς ὑπεσταλκότες ἐν ἀργία πολλῇ καὶ ἀταξία διήγον) ἐπέθεντο τοῖς κατὰ Πελοπόννησον πρᾶγμασι· καὶ τὴν μὲν Πατρέων καὶ Δυμαίων λεηλασίαν ὁδοῦ πάρεργον ἐποιήσαντο, τὴν δὲ Μεσσηνὴν ἐμβαλόντες ἐπόρθουν. ἐφ' οἷς ὁ Ἄρατος ἀγανακτῶν καὶ τὸν στρατηγούντα τότε τῶν Ἀχαιῶν Τιμόξενον ὀρών ὀκνοῦντα καὶ διατρίβοντα τὸν χρόνον, ἤδη τῆς στρατηγίας αὐτῷ τελευτώσης, αὐτὸς ἡρημένος ἄρχειν μετ' ἐκείνον προέλαβεν ἡμέραις πέντε τὴν ἀρχὴν ἕνεκα τοῦ βοηθῆσαι Μεσσηνίοις. καὶ συναγαγὼν τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς τοῖς τε σώμασιν ἀγυμνάστους ὄντας καὶ ταῖς διανοαῖς ἐκκελυμένους πρὸς τὸν πόλεμον ἠττάται περὶ Καφύας· καὶ θυμικώτερον ἐστρατηγηκένοι δόξας οὕτως αὐτὸν πάλιν ἀπημβλύνθη καὶ προήκατο τὰ πρᾶγματα καὶ τὰς ἐλπίδας, ὥστε πολλάκις λαβὴν τοὺς Αἰτωλοὺς παρασχόντας ἀνέχεσθαι καὶ περιορᾶν ὥσπερ κωμάζοντας ἐν τῇ Πελοποννήσῳ μετὰ πολλῆς ἀσελγείας καὶ θρασύτητος. αὐθις οὖν τὰς χεῖρας ὀρέγοντες εἰς Μακεδονίαν ἐπεσπῶντο καὶ κατήγον ἐπὶ τὰς Ἑλληνικὰς πράξεις τὸν Φίλιππον, οὐχ ἥκιστα διὰ τὴν πρὸς τὸν Ἄρατον

¹ In 221 B.C. See the Cleomenes, xxx.

² In 220 B.C. See the Cleomenes, xxxiv. 1.

And indeed Aratus did take the prince in hand, and managed matters so as to send him back to Macedonia full of great goodwill towards his patron and of ardour and ambition for the conduct of Hellenic affairs.

XLVII. But upon the death of Antigonus¹ the Aetolians, despising the Achaeans on account of their slothful ways (for now that they were accustomed to save themselves by other men's prowess and had taken shelter behind the Macedonian arms, they were living in great inactivity and lack of discipline), proceeded to interfere in the affairs of Peloponnesus;² and after plundering the territories of Patrae and Dyme on their way, they invaded Messenia and ravaged it. At this Aratus was incensed, and seeing that Timoxenus, who at that time was general of the Achaeans, was hesitant and dilatory, since his term of office was just about to expire, he himself, having been chosen to succeed Timoxenus, anticipated his term of office by five days for the sake of giving aid to the Messenians. And having assembled the Achaeans, who were physically and mentally unfit for war, he met with defeat at Caphyae. Then, being thought to have conducted the campaign with too much ardour, his purposes were once more blunted and he gave up the cause and his hopes for lost, so that oftentimes, when the Aetolians gave him an advantage, he neglected it, and suffered them to revel, as it were, in Peloponnesus, with great boldness and wantonness. Once more, therefore, the Achaeans stretched out their hands imploringly to Macedonia, and brought Philip down to take part in Hellenic affairs, above all things because his goodwill towards Aratus εὐνοίαν αὐτοῦ καὶ πίστιν ἐλπίζοντες εὐκόλῳ περὶ πάντα χρήσεσθαι καὶ χειροῖθαι.

XLVIII. Καὶ τότε πρῶτον Ἀπελλοῦ καὶ Μεγαλέου καὶ τινων αὐλικῶν ἄλλων διαβαλλόντων τὸν Ἄρατον ἀναπεισθεῖς ὁ βασιλεύς, καὶ συναρχαιρεσιάσας τοῖς ἀπὸ τῆς ἐναντίας στάσεως, ἐσπούδασε τοὺς Ἀχαιοὺς ἐλέσθαι στρατηγὸν
 2 Ἐπήρατον. ὡς δ' ἐκείνου μὲν καταφρονουμένου τελέως ὑπὸ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν, τοῦ δὲ Ἀράτου παραμελοῦντος ἐγίνετο τῶν χρησίμων οὐδέν, ἔγνω διαμαρτάνων τοῦ παντὸς ὁ Φίλιππος. καὶ ἀνακρουσάμενος αὐθις ἐπὶ τὸν Ἄρατον ὅλος ἦν ἐκείνου, καὶ τῶν πραγμάτων αὐτῷ πρὸς τε δύναμιν καὶ πρὸς εὐδοξίαν ἐπιδιδόντων ἐξήρτητο τοῦ ἀνδρός,
 3 ὡς δι' ἐκείνους εὐδοκιμῶν καὶ αὐξόμενος. ἐδόκει τε πᾶσιν ὁ Ἄρατος οὐ μόνον δημοκρατίας, ἀλλὰ καὶ βασιλείας ἀγαθὸς εἶναι παιδαγωγός· ἡ γὰρ προαίρεσις αὐτοῦ καὶ τὸ ἦθος ὡς χρῶμα ταῖς πράξεσι τοῦ βασιλέως ἐπεφαίνετο. καὶ γὰρ ἡ πρὸς Λακεδαιμονίους ἀμαρτόντας μετριότης τοῦ νεανίσκου καὶ ἡ πρὸς Κρήτας ὁμιλία, δι' ἧς ὄλην προσηγάγετο τὴν νῆσον ἡμέραις ὀλίγαις, ἧ τε πρὸς Αἰτωλοὺς στρατεία γενομένη θαυμαστῶς ἐνεργὸς εὐπειθείας μὲν τῷ Φιλίππῳ δόξαν, εὐβου-
 4 λίας δὲ τῷ Ἀράτῳ προσετίθει. καὶ διὰ ταῦτα μᾶλλον οἱ βασιλικοὶ φθονοῦντες, ὡς οὐδὲν ἐπέβαινον κρύφα διαβάλλοντες, ἀναφανδὸν ἐλοιδοροῦντο καὶ προσέκρουον αὐτῷ παρὰ τοὺς πότους μετὰ

¹ Cf. Polybius, v. 30.

and his confidence in him led them to hope that they would find him easy-tempered in all things and managable.

XLVIII. And now for the first time Apelles, Megaleas, and sundry other courtiers made false charges against Aratus to which the king listened, and joining in the canvass made by those of the opposite faction, he favoured the election of Eperatus as general of the Achaeans. But Eperatus was altogether despised by the Achaeans,¹ and as long as Aratus gave little heed to public matters nothing went well. Philip therefore perceived that he had been entirely wrong. So he reversed his course, went back to Aratus, and was wholly his; and since the progress of events now brought him increased power and reputation, he depended altogether upon Aratus, convinced that his repute and strength were due to him. And all the world thought that Aratus was a good guardian and tutor for a kingdom no less than for a democracy; for his principles and character were manifest, like colour in a fabric, in the actions of the king. For instance, the moderation of the young prince in dealing with the offending Lacedaemonians, his engaging behaviour towards the Cretans, by means of which he won the whole island to obedience in a few days, and the astonishingly vigorous conduct of his campaign against the Aetolians, all added to the reputation of Philip for taking good advice, and to that of Aratus for giving it. For this reason, too, the royal courtiers were all the more envious of him, and since they could accomplish nothing by their secret calumnies, they took to abusing and insulting him openly at their banquets, πολλῆς ἀσελγείας καὶ βωμολοχίας· ἅπαξ δὲ καὶ λίθοις βάλλοντες ἀπιόντα εἰς τὴν σκηνὴν μετὰ τὸ δεῖπνον κατεδίωξαν. ἐφ' οἷς ὁ Φίλιππος ὀργισθεὶς εὐθύς μὲν αὐτοὺς ἐξημίωσεν εἴκοσι ταλάντοις, ὕστερον δὲ λυμαίνεσθαι τὰ πράγματα καὶ ταραττεῖν δοκοῦντας ἀπέκτεινεν.

XLIX. Ἐπεὶ δὲ τῆς τύχης εὐροούσης ἐπαιρόμενος τοῖς πράγμασι πολλὰς μὲν ἀνέφυε καὶ μεγάλας ἐπιθυμίας, ἣ δ' ἔμφυτος κακία, τὸν παρὰ 1050 φύσιν σχηματισμὸν ἐκβιαζομένη καὶ ἀναδύουσα, κατὰ μικρὸν ἀπεγύμνου καὶ διέφαινεν αὐτοῦ τὸ ἦθος, πρῶτον μὲν ἰδίᾳ τὸν νεώτερον Ἄρατον ἠδίκηει περὶ τὴν γυναῖκα καὶ πολὺν χρόνον ἐλάνθανεν ἐφέστιος ὧν καὶ ξενιζόμενος ὑπ' αὐτῶν ἔπειτα πρὸς τὰς Ἑλληνικὰς ἐξετραχύνετο πολιτείας καὶ φανερὸς ἦν ἤδη τὸν Ἄρατον ἀπο-
 2 σειόμενος. ἀρχὴν δὲ ὑποψίας τὰ Μεσσηνιακὰ παρέσχε. στασιασάντων γὰρ αὐτῶν ὁ μὲν Ἄρατος ὕστερεϊ βοηθῶν, ὁ δὲ Φίλιππος ἡμέρα μιᾷ πρότερον ἐλθὼν εἰς τὴν πόλιν εὐθύς οἷστρόν τινα κατ' ἀλλήλων ἐνέβαλε τοῖς ἀνθρώποις, ἰδίᾳ μὲν ἐρωτῶν τοὺς στρατηγοὺς τῶν Μεσσηνίων εἰ νόμους κατὰ τῶν πολλῶν οὐκ ἔχουσιν, ἰδίᾳ δὲ πάλιν τοὺς τῶν πολλῶν προεστῶτας εἰ χεῖρας κατὰ
 3 τῶν τυραννούντων οὐκ ἔχουσιν. ἐκ δὲ τούτου θαρρήσαντες οἱ μὲν ἄρχοντες ἐπελαμβάνοντο τῶν δημαγωγῶν, ἐκεῖνοι δὲ μετὰ τῶν πολλῶν ἐπελ-

with great wantonness and scurrility; and once they actually pursued and threw stones at him as he was going to his tent after supper. At this Philip was enraged, and for the nonce fined them twenty talents; afterwards, however, regarding them as a noxious and confusing element in his affairs, he put them to death.¹

XLIX. But soon, as the king's fortune flowed smoothly on, he was lifted up by his success, and developed many inordinate desires; his inherent badness, too, forcing aside the unnatural restraints of his assumed deportment and making its way to the light, little by little laid bare and revealed his true character. In the first place he inflicted a private wrong upon the younger Aratus by corrupting his wife, and was for a long time undetected, since he was a housemate and a guest of the family; in the second place, he began to show hostility towards the civil polities of the Greeks, and it was presently clear that he was trying to shake off Aratus. First grounds of suspicion were afforded by his conduct at Messene. For there was factional strife in the city, and Aratus was tardy in coming to its aid, and Philip, who got to the city a day before Aratus, at once goaded on the two parties against one another. In private he asked the generals of the Messenians if they had not laws to enforce against the common people, and again in private he asked the leaders of the common people if they had not hands to lift against the tyrants. Upon this the officials plucked up courage and tried to lay hands upon the leaders of the people, and they, coming to the attack at the head of their followers,

¹ Cf. Polybius, v. 15 f.

θόντες τούς τε ἄρχοντας ἀπέκτειναν καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ὀλίγον ἀπολείποντας διακοσίων.

L. Οὕτω δὲ δεινὸν ἔργον ἐξειργασμένου τοῦ Φιλίππου, καὶ συγκρούοντος ἔτι μᾶλλον ἑαυτοῖς τοὺς Μεσσηνίους, ἐπελθὼν ὁ Ἄρατος αὐτός τε δῆλος ἦν φέρων βαρέως καὶ τὸν υἱὸν ἐπιτιμῶντα πικρῶς τῷ Φιλίππῳ καὶ λοιδορούμενον οὐκ ἐκώλυσεν. ἐδόκει δὲ ὁ νεανίσκος ἐρᾶν τοῦ Φιλίππου καὶ τότε λέγων εἶπε πρὸς αὐτὸν ὡς οὐδὲ καλὸς ἔτι φαίνοιτο τὴν ὄψιν αὐτῷ τοιαῦτα δράσας, 2 ἀλλὰ πάντων αἰσχιστος. ὁ δὲ Φίλιππος ἐκείνῳ μὲν οὐδὲν ἀντεῖπε, καίπερ ἐπίδοξος ὢν, ὑπ' ὀργῆς καὶ πολλάκις ἐξυλακτῆσας λέγοντος αὐτοῦ, τὸν δὲ πρεσβύτερον, ὡς ἐνηνοχῶς πρᾶως τὰ λεχθέντα καί τις ὢν μέτριος καὶ πολιτικὸς τὴν φύσιν, ἀνέστησεν ἐκ τοῦ θεάτρου τὴν δεξιὰν ἐμβαλὼν, καὶ προσῆγεν εἰς τὸν Ἴθωμάταν τῷ τε Διὶ θύσων καὶ 3 θεωρήσων τὸν τόπον. ἔστι γὰρ οὐχ ἥττον εὐερκῆς τοῦ Ἀκροκορίνθου, καὶ λαβὼν φρουρὰν γίνεται χαλεπὸς καὶ δυσεκβίαστος τοῖς παροικοῦσιν. ἀναβὰς δὲ καὶ θύσας, ὡς προσήνεγκεν αὐτῷ τὰ σπλάγχνα τοῦ βοῦς ὁ μάντις, ἀμφοτέραις ταῖς χερσὶν ὑπολαβὼν ἐδείκνυε τῷ τε Ἀράτῳ καὶ τῷ Φαρίῳ Δημητρίῳ, παρὰ μέρος ἀποκλίνων εἰς ἑκάτερον καὶ πυνθανόμενος τί καθορώσιν ἐν τοῖς ἱεροῖς, κρατοῦντα τῆς ἄκρας αὐτὸν ἢ τοῖς Μεσσηνίοις ἀποδιδόντα. γελᾶσας οὖν ὁ Δημήτριος, “Εἰ μὲν,” ἔφη, “μάντεως ἔχεις ψυχὴν, ἀφήσεις τὸν τόπον· εἰ δὲ βασιλέως, ἀμφοτέρων τῶν κεράτων τὸν βούν καθέξεις,” αἰνιττόμενος τὴν Πελοπόνslew the officials and nearly two hundred citizens besides.

¹ A precinct of Zeus, on the summit of Mt. Ithome. Cf. Pausanias, iv. 3. 9.

L. After this outrageous deed of Philip's, and while he was striving more than ever to set the Messenians by the ears, Aratus reached the city. He showed clearly that he was indignant himself, and would not check his son when he bitterly reproached and reviled Philip. Now, it would seem that the young man was a lover of Philip; and so at this time he told Philip, among other things, that he no longer thought him fair to look upon, after so foul a deed, but the most repulsive of men. Philip made no answer to him, although it was expected that he would, since in his anger he had many times cried out savagely while the young man was speaking, but as though he meekly submitted to what had been said and was a person of moderation and not above the ordinary citizen, he gave the elder Aratus his hand, led him forth from the theatre, and brought him to the Ithomatas,¹ in order to sacrifice to Zeus and take a view of the place. For it is quite as well walled in as Acrocorinthus, and with a garrison in it is difficult of access and a hard place for its neighbours to take by force. Thither Philip went up, and offered sacrifice, and when the seer brought him the entrails of the ox, he took them in both hands and showed them to Aratus and Demetrius of Pharos, leaning towards each one in turn and asking them what indications they saw in the omens; was he to be master of the citadel, or to give it back to the Messenians? Demetrius, with a laugh, replied: "If thou hast the spirit of a seer, thou wilt give up the place; but if that of a king, thou wilt hold the ox by both its horns," speaking darkly of Peloponnesus, νησον, ὡς, εἰ προσλάβοι τὸν Ἰθωμάταν τῷ Ἀκρο-κορίνθῳ, παντάπασιν ἐσομένην ὑποχείριον καὶ 5 ταπεινήν. ὁ δὲ Ἄρατος ἐπὶ πολὺ μὲν ἠσύχαζε, δεομένου δὲ τοῦ Φιλίππου τὸ φαινόμενον λέγειν, “Πολλὰ μὲν,” εἶπεν, “ὦ Φίλιππε, Κρητῶν ὄρη καὶ μεγάλα, πολλαὶ δὲ Βοιωτῶν ἄκραι καὶ Φωκέων ἐκπεφύκασι τῆς γῆς· εἰσὶ δέ που πολλοὶ καὶ τῆς Ἀκαρνάνων τοῦτο μὲν χερσαῖοι, τοῦτο δ’ ἔναλοι τόποι θαυμαστὰς ὀχυρότητας ἔχοντες· ἀλλ’ οὐδένα τούτων κατείληφας, καὶ πάντες 6 ἔκουσίως σοι ποιοῦσι τὸ προστασσόμενον. λησταὶ γὰρ ἐμφύονται πέτραις καὶ κρημνῶν περιέχονται, βασιλεῖ δὲ πίστεως καὶ χάριτος ἰσχυρότερον οὐδὲν οὐδὲ ὀχυρότερον. ταῦτά σοι τὸ Κρητικὸν ἀνοίγει πέλαγος, ταῦτα τὴν Πελοπόννησον. ἀπὸ τούτων ὀρμώμενος σὺ τοσοῦτος ἡλικίαν τῶν μὲν ἡγεμῶν, τῶν δὲ κύριος ἤδη καθέστηκας.” ἔτι λέγοντος αὐτοῦ τὰ μὲν σπλάγχνα τῷ μάντει παρέδωκεν ὁ Φίλιππος, ἐκείνον δὲ τῆς χειρὸς ἐπισπασάμενος, “Δεῦρο τοίνυν,” ἔφη, “τὴν αὐτὴν ὁδὸν ἴωμεν.” ὥσπερ ἐκβεβιασμένος ὑπ’ αὐτοῦ καὶ τὴν πόλιν ἀφῆρημένος.

ΛΙ. Ὁ δὲ Ἄρατος ἀπορρέων ἤδη τῆς αὐλῆς καὶ κατὰ μικρὸν ἑαυτὸν ἀνακομιζόμενος ἐκ τῆς πρὸς τον Φίλιππον συνηθείας, διαβαίνοντος εἰς Ἡπει- 1051 ρὸν αὐτοῦ καὶ δεομένου συστρατεύειν, ἀπέπειπατο καὶ κατέμεινε, δεδιὼς ἀναπλησθῆναι δόξης πονη-2 ρᾶς ἀφ’ ὧν ἐκείνος ἔπραπτεν. ἐπεὶ δὲ τὰς τε ναῦς ὑπὸ Ῥωμαίων ἀπολέσας αἰσχίστα καὶ ὄλως ἀποτυχῶν ταῖς πράξεσιν ἐπανῆλθεν εἰς Πελοπόννησον, καὶ τοὺς Μεσσηνίους αὐθις ἐπιχειρήσας φενακίζειν καὶ μὴ λαθῶν ἠδίκηει φανερώς καὶ τὴν which, if Philip added the Ithomatas to Acrocorinthus, would be altogether subject and submissive to him. Aratus held his peace for a long time, but upon Philip's asking him to express his opinion, said: "There are many lofty hills in Crete, O Philip, and many towering citadels in Boeotia and Phocis; in Acarnania, too, I suppose, as well inland as on its shores, there are many places which show an amazing strength; but not one of these dost thou occupy, and yet all these peoples gladly do thy bidding. For it is robbers that cling to cliffs and crags, but for a king there is no stronger or more secure defence than trust and gratitude. These open up for thee the Cretan sea, these the Peloponnesus. Relying upon these, young as thou art, thou hast already made thyself leader here, and master there." While he was yet speaking, Philip handed the entrails to the seer, and drawing Aratus to him by the hand, said: "Come hither, then, and let us take the same road," implying that he had been constrained by him and made to give up the city.

LI. But Aratus presently began to withdraw from the court and little by little to retire from his intimacy with Philip. When the king was about to cross into Epeirus¹ and asked him to join the expedition, he refused and remained at home, fearing that he would be covered with ignominy by the king's proceedings. Philip lost his fleet most shamefully at the hands of the Romans, and after utter failure in his undertakings, came back into Peloponnesus. Here he tried once more to hoodwink the Messenians, and after being detected in this, wronged

¹ In 215 B.C. Philip had made an alliance with the Carthaginians against the Romans.

χώραν αὐτῶν ἐπόρθει, παντάπασιν ὁ Ἄρατος ἀπεστράφη καὶ διεβλήθη πρὸς αὐτόν, ἤδη καὶ τῶν περὶ τὴν γυναικωνίτιν ἀδικημάτων αἰσθόμενος καὶ φέρων ἀνιαρῶς αὐτός, ἀποκρυπτόμενος
 3 δὲ τὸν υἱόν· εἶδέναι γὰρ ὑβρισμένον περιῆν, ἄλλο δὲ οὐδέν, ἀμύνασθαι μὴ δυναμένῳ. μεγίστην γὰρ ὁ Φίλιππος δοκεῖ καὶ παραλογωτάτην μεταβαλέσθαι μεταβολήν, ἐξ ἡμέρου βασιλέως καὶ μειρακίου σώφρονος ἀνὴρ ἀσελγῆς καὶ τύραννος ἐξώλης γενόμενος. τὸ δὲ οὐκ ἦν ἄρα μεταβολὴ φύσεως, ἀλλ' ἐπίδειξις ἐν ἀδείᾳ κακίας πολλὴν χρόνον διὰ φόβον ἀγνοηθείσης.

ΛΙΙ. Ὅτι γὰρ ἦν μεμιγμένον αἰσχύνῃ καὶ φόβῳ τὸ πρὸς τὸν Ἄρατον αὐτοῦ πάθος ἀπ' ἀρχῆς συντετραμμένον, ἐδήλωσεν οἷς ἔπραξε περὶ αὐτόν. ἐπιθυμῶν γὰρ ἀνελεῖν τὸν ἄνδρα καὶ νομίζων οὐδ' ἂν ἐλεύθερος ἐκείνου ζῶντος εἶναι, μὴ τί γε τύραννος ἢ βασιλεύς, βία μὲν οὐδέν ἐπεχείρησε, Ταυρίωνα δὲ τῶν στρατηγῶν τινα καὶ φίλων ἐκέλευσεν ἀδήλῳ τρόπῳ τοῦτο πράξαι, μάλιστα διὰ φαρμάκων,
 2 αὐτοῦ μὴ παρόντος. ὁ δὲ ποιησάμενος τὸν Ἄρατον συνήθη φάρμακον αὐτῷ δίδωσιν, οὐκ ὀξύ καὶ σφοδρόν, ἀλλὰ τῶν θέρμας τε μαλακὰς τὸ πρῶτον ἐν τῷ σώματι καὶ βῆχα κινούντων ἀμβλείαν, εἶτα οὕτως κατὰ μικρὸν εἰς φθορὰν περαινόντων. οὐ μὴν ἔλαθέ γε τὸν Ἄρατον· ἀλλ' ὡς οὐδέν ἦν ὄφελος ἐλέγχοντι, πράως καὶ σιωπῇ
 3 νοσῶν, διήντλει. πλὴν ἐνός γε τῶν συνήθων ἐν

them openly and ravaged their territory. Then Aratus was altogether estranged and filled with distrust of the king, being now aware also of the crime committed against his domestic life. At this he was sorely vexed himself, but kept it hidden from his son, who could only know that he had been shamefully abused, seeing that he was not able to avenge himself. For Philip would seem to have undergone a very great and inexplicable change,¹ in that from a gentle prince and chaste youth he became a lascivious man and a pernicious tyrant. In fact, however, this was not a change of nature, but a showing forth, in time of security, of a baseness which his fears had long led him to conceal.

LII. For that the feelings which he had cherished from the beginning towards Aratus had an admixture of shame and fear, was made plain by what he did to him at the last. For he desired to kill Aratus, and thought he could not be a free man while Aratus lived, much less a tyrant or a king. In a violent way, however, he made no attempt upon him, but ordered Taurion, one of his officers and friends, to do this in a secret way, preferably by poison, when the king was absent. So Taurion made an intimate companion of Aratus, and gave him poison, not of a sharp and violent sort, but one of those which first induce gentle heats in the body, and a dull cough, and then little by little bring on consumption. The thing was not hidden from Aratus, but since it was no use for him to convict the criminal, he calmly and silently drank his cup of suffering to the dregs, as if his sickness had been of a common and familiar type. However, when one of his intimate com-

¹ Cf. Polybius, vii. 13.

τῷ δωματίῳ παρόντος ἀναπτύσας δίαιμον, ἰδόντος ἐκείνου καὶ θαυμάσαντος, “Ταῦτα,” εἶπεν, “ὦ Κεφάλων, ἐπίχειρα τῆς βασιλικῆς φιλίας.”

LIII. Οὕτω δὲ αὐτοῦ τελευτήσαντος ἐν Αἰγίῳ τὸ ἑπτακαιδέκατον στρατηγούντος, καὶ τῶν Ἀχαιῶν φιλοτιμουμένων ἐκεῖ γενέσθαι ταφὰς καὶ μνήματα πρέποντα τῷ βίῳ τοῦ ἀνδρός, Σικυῶνιοι συμφορὰν ἐποιοῦντο μὴ παρ’ αὐτοῖς τεθῆναι
 2 τὸ σῶμα. καὶ τοὺς μὲν Ἀχαιοὺς ἔπεισαν ἐφίεναι, νόμου δὲ ὄντος ἀρχαίου μηδένα θάπτεσθαι τειχῶν ἐντός, ἰσχυρᾶς τε τῷ νόμῳ δεισιδαιμονίας προσούσης, ἔπεμψαν εἰς Δελφοὺς ὑπὲρ τούτων ἐρησόμενοι τὴν Πυθίαν. ἡ δὲ αὐτοῖς ἀναιρεῖ τὸν χρησμὸν τόνδε·

Βουλεύη, Σικυῶν, ζῳάγριον αἰὲν Ἀράτου, ἀμβ’ ὅσιγ’ ἑταλὴν τε κατοικομένοιο ἄνακτος;
 ὡς τὸ βαρυνόμενον τῷδ’ ἀνέρι καὶ τὸ βαρῦνον γαίης ἔστ’ ἀσέβημα καὶ οὐρανοῦ ἠδὲ θαλάσσης.

3 κομισθείσης δὲ τῆς μαντείας οἳ τε Ἀχαιοὶ σύμπαντες ἦσθησαν, καὶ διαφερόντως οἱ Σικυῶνιοι μεταβαλόντες εἰς ἰορτὴν τὸ πένθος εὐθύς ἐκ τοῦ Αἰγίου τὸν νεκρὸν ἐστεφανωμένοι καὶ λευχειμοῦντες ὑπὸ παιάνων καὶ χορῶν εἰς τὴν πόλιν ἀνήγον, καὶ τόπον ἐξελόμενοι περίοπτον ὥσπερ
 4 οἰκιστὴν καὶ σωτῆρα τῆς πόλεως ἐκήδευσαν. καὶ καλεῖται μέχρι νῦν Ἀράτειον, καὶ θύουσιν αὐτῷ

¹ In 213 B.C.

panions who was with him in his chamber saw him spit blood, and expressed surprise, "Such, my dear Cephalo," said Aratus, "are the wages of royal friendship."

LIII. And so he died,¹ at Aegium, while general for the seventeenth time, and the Achaeans were very desirous that he should have burial there and memorials befitting his life. But the Sicyonians regarded it as a calamity that he should not be buried in their city, and persuaded the Achaeans to surrender his body to them. They had, however, an ancient law that no one should be buried inside the city walls, and the law was supported by strong feelings of superstition. So they sent to Delphi to get advice in the matter from the Pythian priestess, and she gave them the following oracular answer:—

“Would'st thou, O Sicyon, pay Aratus lasting honour for the lives he saved,
And join in pious funeral rites for thy departed lord?
Know that the place which vexes or is vexed by him
Is sacrilegious, be it in earth or sky or sea.”

When the oracle was brought to them the Achaeans were all delighted, and the Sicyonians, in particular, changing their mourning into festival, at once put on garlands and white raiment and brought the body of Aratus from Aegium into their city, amid hymns of praise and choral dances; and choosing out a commanding place, they buried him there, calling him founder and saviour of the city. And the place is called to this day Arateium, and yearly sacrifices are made to Aratus there, one on the day when he θυσίαν, τὴν μὲν, ἢ τὴν πόλιν ἀπήλλαξε τῆς τυ-ραννίδος ἡμέρα πέμπτη Δαισίου μηνός, ὃν Ἀθηναῖοι καλοῦσιν Ἀνθεστηριῶνα, καὶ τὴν θυσίαν ἐκείνην Σωτήρια προσαγορεύουσι, τὴν δὲ τοῦ μηνός ἐν ἣ γενέσθαι τὸν ἄνδρα διαμνημονεύουσι. 1052 τῆς μὲν οὖν προτέρας ὁ τοῦ Διὸς τοῦ Σωτήρος κατήρχετο θηπόλος, τῆς δὲ δευτέρας ὁ τοῦ

 Ἀράτου, στρόφιον οὐχ ὀλόλευκον, ἀλλὰ μεσο-5 πόρφυρον ἔχων, μέλη δὲ ἦδετο πρὸς κιθάραν ὑπὸ τῶν περὶ τὸν Διόνυσον τεχνιτῶν, καὶ συνεπόμπεινεν ὁ γυμνασίάρχος ἡγούμενος τῶν τε παίδων καὶ τῶν ἐφήβων, εἶτα ἐφείπετο ἡ βουλή στεφανηφοροῦσα καὶ τῶν ἄλλων πολιτῶν ὁ βουλόμενος.
 ὧν ἔτι δείγματα μικρὰ ταῖς ἡμέραις ἐκείναις ἐξοσιούμεοι διαφυλάττουσιν· αἱ δὲ πλείστα τῶν τιμῶν ὑπὸ χρόνου καὶ πραγμάτων ἄλλων ἐκλελοίπασιν.

LIV. Ἀλλὰ γὰρ ὁ μὲν πρεσβύτερος Ἀρατος οὕτω βιώσαι καὶ τοιοῦτος γενέσθαι τὴν φύσιν ἱστορεῖται· τὸν δὲ υἱὸν αὐτοῦ μιὰρὸς ὧν φύσει καὶ μετ' ὠμότητος ὑβριστῆς ὁ Φίλιππος οὐ θανασίμοις, ἀλλὰ μανικοῖς ἐξέστησε τοῦ λογισμοῦ φαρμάκοις· καὶ παρέτρεψεν εἰς δεινὰς καὶ ἄλλοκότους ἐπιφοράς, πράξεων ἀτόπων καὶ σὺν αἰσχύνῃ παθῶν ὀλεθρίων ὀρεγόμενον, ὥστε τὸν θάνατον αὐτῷ, καίπερ ὄντι νέῳ καὶ ἀνθούντι, μὴ συμφορὰν, ἀλλ' ἀπόλυσιν κακῶν καὶ σωτηρίαν
 2 γενέσθαι. δίκας γε μὴν ὁ Φίλιππος οὐ μεμπτὰς Διὶ ξενίῳ καὶ φιλίῳ τῆς ἀνοσιουργίας ταύτης τίνων διετέλεσε. καταπολεμηθεῖς μὲν γὰρ ὑπὸ Ῥωμαίων ἐπέτρεψεν ἐκείνοις τὰ καθ' αὐτόν, ἐκfreed the city from its tyranny—the fifth day of the month Daesius (which the Athenians call Anthes-terion), which sacrifice has the name Soteria, and one on the day of the month when, according to the records, he was born. The first of these sacrifices was performed by the priest of Zeus the Saviour; the second by the priest of Aratus, who wore a headband, not pure white but purple and white, and hymns with accompaniment of lyre were sung by the artists of Dionysus, and the gymnasiarch took part in the procession, at the head of the boys and young men of military age; then followed the councillors wearing garlands, and all other citizens who desired. Of these ceremonial rites the Sicyonians still preserve slight traces, celebrated on the same days of the year, but most of them, owing to the passage of time and the pressure of other matters, have lapsed.

LIV. Such was the life and such the nature of the elder Aratus, as history tells us; and as for his son, he was deprived of his reason by Philip, who had an abominable nature and added savage cruelty to his wanton exercise of power. He gave the young man poisons which did not kill, but crazed, and thus made him a prey to strange and dreadful impulses, under which he grasped at absurd activities, and experiences not only shameful but destructive, so that death came to him, although he was young and in the flower of his life, not as a calamity, but as release from evils, and salvation. For this unholy deed, however, Philip paid ample penalties to Zeus, the guardian of hospitality and friendship, as long as he lived. For after being subdued by the Romans and putting his fortunes in their hands, he was πεσών δὲ τῆς ἄλλης ἀρχῆς καὶ τὰς ναῦς πλὴν πέντε πάσας προέμενος καὶ χίλια προσεκτίσειν ὁμολογήσας τάλαντα καὶ τὸν υἱὸν ὀμηρεύσοντα παραδοὺς δι' οἶκτον ἔτυχε Μακεδονίας καὶ τῶν συντελούντων. ἀποκτείνων δὲ αἰεὶ τοὺς ἀρίστους καὶ συγγενεστάτους φρίκης ἐνέπλησε καὶ μίσους 3 ὅλην τὴν βασιλείαν πρὸς αὐτόν. ἐν δὲ μόνον ἐν τοσοῦτοις κακοῖς εὐτύχημα κτησάμενος, υἱὸν ἀρετῇ διαφέροντα, τοῦτον φθόνῳ καὶ ζηλοτυπία τῆς παρὰ Ῥωμαίοις τιμῆς ἀνείλε, Περσεῖ δὲ θατέρῳ τὴν ἀρχὴν παρέδωκεν, ὃν οὐ γνήσιον, ἀλλ' ὑπόβλητον εἶναί φασιν, ἐκ Γναθαιίου τινὸς ἀκεστρίας γενόμενον. τοῦτον Αἰμίλιος ἐθριάμβευσε· καὶ κατέστρεψεν ἐνταῦθα τῆς Ἀντιγονικῆς βασιλείας ἢ διαδοχῆ. τὸ δὲ Ἀράτου γένος ἐν τῇ Σικυῶνι καὶ τῇ Πελλάγη διέμενε καθ' ἡμᾶς.

stripped of most of his dominions, surrendered all his ships but five, agreed to pay a thousand talents besides, gave up his son to serve as hostage, and only out of pity obtained Macedonia and its tributaries. But he was for ever putting to death the noblest of his subjects and his nearest kin, and thus filled his whole kingdom with horror and hatred of him. One piece of good fortune only was his, amid so many ills, and that was a son of surpassing excellence; but this son he killed, out of envy and jealousy of the honour paid him by the Romans, and left his kingdom to his other son, Perseus, who was not legitimate, as we are told, but supposititious, the child of a sempstress, Gnathaenion.¹ This king graced the triumph of Aemilius, and with him ended the royal line of the Antigonids; whereas the descendants of Aratus were living at Sicyon and Pellene in my time.

¹ See the Aemiliu. Paulus, viii. 6 f. ; xxxiv., xxxvi.

ARTAXERXES

ΑΡΤΟΞΕΡΞΗΣ

I. Ὁ μὲν πρῶτος Ἀρτοξέρξης, τῶν ἐν Πέρσαις βασιλέων πραότητι καὶ μεγαλοψυχία πρωτεύσας, Μακρόχειρ ἐπεκαλεῖτο τὴν δεξιὰν μείζονα τῆς ἐτέρας ἔχων, Ξέρξου δὲ ἦν υἱός· ὁ δὲ δεύτερος, περὶ οὗ τάδε γράφεται, Μνήμων ἐπικληθεὶς ἐκ θυγατρὸς ἦν ἐκείνου. Δαρείου γὰρ καὶ Παρυσάτιδος παῖδες ἐγένοντο τέσσαρες, πρεσβύτατος μὲν Ἀρτοξέρξης, μετ' ἐκείνον δὲ Κῦρος, νεώτεροι δὲ τούτων Ὀστάνης καὶ Ὁξάθρης. ὁ μὲν οὖν Κῦρος ἀπὸ Κύρου τοῦ παλαιοῦ τοῦνομα ἔσχευ, ἐκείνῳ δὲ ἀπὸ τοῦ ἡλίου γενέσθαι φασί· Κῦρον γὰρ καλεῖν Πέρσας τὸν ἥλιον. ὁ δὲ Ἀρτοξέρξης Ἀρσίκας πρότερον ἐκαλεῖτο· καίτοι Δείνων φησὶν ὅτι Ὀάρσης. ἀλλὰ τὸν Κτησίαν, εἰ καὶ τᾶλλα μύθων ἀπιθάνων καὶ παραφόρων ἐμβέβληκεν εἰς τὰ βιβλία παντοδαπὴν πυλαίαν, οὐκ εἰκός ἐστιν ἀγνοεῖν τοῦνομα τοῦ βασιλέως παρ' ᾧ διέτριβε θεραπεύων αὐτὸν καὶ γυναῖκα καὶ μητέρα καὶ παῖδας.

1012

II. Ὁ μὲν οὖν Κῦρος ἔντονόν τι καὶ σφοδρὸν εὐθύς ἐκ πρώτης ἡλικίας εἶχευ, ἄτερος δὲ πραότερος ἐδόκει περὶ πάντα καὶ ταῖς ὁρμαῖς φύσει μαλακώτερος εἶναι. γυναῖκα δὲ καλὴν καὶ ἀγαθὴν ἔλαβε μὲν τῶν γονέων κελευόντων, ἐφύλαξε

¹ Artaxerxes I. 465–425 B.C. The parallel form Artaxerxes has become fixed in English.

ARTAXERXES

I. THE first Artaxerxes,¹ preëminent among the kings of Persia for gentleness and magnanimity, was surnamed Longimanus, because his right hand was longer than his left, and was the son of Xerxes; the second Artaxerxes,² the subject of this Life, was surnamed Memor, or Mindful, and was the grandson of the first by his daughter Parysatis. For Darius³ and Parysatis had four sons—an eldest, Artaxerxes, and next to him Cyrus, and after these Ostanes and Oxathres. Cyrus took his name from Cyrus of old,⁴ who, as they say, was named from the sun; for “Cyrus” is the Persian word for sun. Artaxerxes was at first called Arsicas; although Deinon gives the name as Oarses. But it is unlikely that Ctesias, even if he has put into his work a perfect farrago of extravagant and incredible tales, should be ignorant of the name of the king at whose court he lived as physician to the king’s wife and mother and children.

II. Now Cyrus, from his very earliest years, was high-strung and impetuous, but Artaxerxes seemed gentler in everything and naturally milder in his impulses. His wife, a beautiful and excellent woman, he married in compliance with his parents’ bidding,

¹ Artaxerxes II. 404–362 B. C.

² Darius II. 424–404 B. C.

³ Cyrus the Elder, 559–529 B. C.

δὲ κωλυόντων· τὸν γὰρ ἀδελφὸν αὐτῆς ἀποκτείνας
 2 ὁ βασιλεὺς ἐβουλεύετο κύκειν ἄνελεϊν, ὁ δὲ Ἄρσίκας τῆς μητρὸς ἰκέτης γενόμενος καὶ πολλὰ κατακλαύσας μόλις ἔπεισε μῆτε ἀποκτείνειν μῆτε αὐτοῦ διαστῆσαι τὴν ἄνθρωπον. ἡ δὲ μήτηρ ὑπῆρχε τὸν Κῦρον μᾶλλον φιλοῦσα καὶ βουλομένη βασιλεύειν ἐκείνον. διὸ καὶ τοῦ πατρὸς νοσοῦν-τος ἤδη μετάπεμπτos ἀπὸ θαλάσσης γενόμενος παντάπασιν ἀνέβαινε εὐελπίς ὢν, ὡς κατειργα-σμένης ἐκείνης διαδόχον αὐτὸν ἀποδειχθῆναι τῆς 3 ἀρχῆς. καὶ γὰρ εἶχεν εὐπρεπῆ λόγον ἢ Παρύσατις, ᾧ καὶ Ξέρξης ὁ παλαιὸς ἐχρήσατο, Δημα-ράτου διδάξαντος, ὡς Ἄρσικαν μὲν ἰδιώτην, Κῦρον δὲ βασιλεύοντι Δαρείῳ τεκεῖν.¹ οὐ μὴν ἔπεισεν, ἀλλ' ὁ πρεσβύτερος ἀπεδείχθη βασιλεὺς, Ἄρτοξέρξης μετονομασθεὶς, Κῦρος δὲ Λυδίας σατράπης καὶ τῶν ἐπὶ θαλάσσης στρατηγός.

III. Ὀλίγω δ' ὕστερον ἢ τελευτῆσαι Δαρείου ἐξήλασεν εἰς Πασαργάδας ὁ βασιλεὺς, ὅπως τελεσθείη τὴν βασιλικὴν τελετὴν ὑπὸ τῶν ἐν Πέρσαις ἱερέων. ἔστι δὲ θεᾶς πολεμικῆς ἱερόν, ἦν Ἀθηναῶν 2 ἂν τις εἰκάσειεν. εἰς τοῦτο δεῖ τὸν τελούμενον παρελθόντα τὴν μὲν ἰδίαν ἀποθέσθαι στολὴν, ἀνα-λαβεῖν δὲ ἦν Κῦρος ὁ παλαιὸς ἐφόρει πρὶν ἢ βασιλεὺς γενέσθαι, καὶ σύκων παλάθης ἐμφαγόντα τερμίνθου κατατραγεῖν καὶ ποτήριον ἐκπιεῖν ὄξυγάλακτος. εἰ δὲ πρὸς τούτοις ἕτερ' ἄττα δρῶσιν, 3 ἄδηλόν ἐστι τοῖς ἄλλοις. ταῦτα δρᾶν Ἄρτοξέρξου

¹ τεκεῖν Bekker has τέκοι, after Coraës.

and kept her in defiance of them; for after the king had put her brother to death, he wished to kill her also. But Arsicas, throwing himself at his mother's feet and supplicating her with many tears, at last obtained her promise that his wife should neither be killed nor separated from him. But the mother had more love for Cyrus, and wished that he should succeed to the throne. Therefore, when his father was now lying sick, Cyrus was summoned home from the sea-coast, and went up in full hope that by his mother's efforts he had been designated as successor to the kingdom. For Parysatis had a specious argument (the same that Xerxes the Elder employed on the advice of Demaratus¹), to the effect that she had borne Arsicas to Darius when he was in private station, but Cyrus when he was a king. However, she could not prevail, but the elder son was declared king, under the new name of Artaxerxes, while Cyrus remained satrap of Lydia and commander of the forces in the maritime provinces.²

III. A little while after the death of Darius, the new king made an expedition to Pasargadae, that he might receive the royal initiation at the hands of the Persian priests. Here there is a sanctuary of a warlike goddess whom one might conjecture to be Athena. Into this sanctuary the candidate for initiation must pass, and after laying aside his own proper robe, must put on that which Cyrus the Elder used to wear before he became king; then he must eat of a cake of figs, chew some turpentine-wood, and drink a cup of sour milk. Whatever else is done besides this is unknown to outsiders. As Artaxerxes

¹ See Herodotus, vii. 3.

² Cf. Xenophon, Anab. i. 1, 1 ff.

μέλλοντος ἀφίκετο Τισαφέρνης πρὸς αὐτὸν ἄγων ἓνα τῶν ἱερέων, ὃς ἐν παισὶ Κύρου τῆς νομιζομένης ἀγωγῆς ἐπιστάτης γενόμενος καὶ διδάξας μαγεύειν αὐτὸν οὐδενὸς ἦττον ἐδόκει Περσῶν ἀνιάσθαι μὴ ἀποδειχθέντος ἐκείνου βασιλέως· διὸ καὶ πίστιν 4 ἔσχε κατηγορῶν Κύρου. κατηγορεῖ δὲ ὡς μέλ-λοντος ἐνεδρεύειν ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, καὶ ἐπειδὰν ἐκδύηται τὴν ἐσθήτα ὁ βασιλεύς, ἐπιτίθεσθαι καὶ δια-φθείρειν αὐτόν. οἱ μὲν ἐκ ταύτης τῆς διαβολῆς τὴν σύλληψιν γενέσθαι φασίν, οἱ δὲ καὶ παρελθεῖν τὸν Κῦρον εἰς τὸ ἱερόν καὶ παραδοθῆναι 5 κρυπτόμενον ὑπὸ τοῦ ἱερέως. μέλλοντα δὲ αὐτὸν ἤδη ἀποθνήσκειν ἢ μήτηρ περισχοῦσα ταῖς ἀγκάλαις καὶ τοῖς βοστρύχοις περιελίξασα καὶ συλλαβοῦσα τὸν ἐκείνου τράχηλον πρὸς τὸν αὐτῆς, ὀδυρομένη πολλὰ καὶ ποτνωμένη παρητήσατο καὶ κατέπεμψεν αὐτὴς ἐπὶ θιάλατταν, οὐκ ἀγαπῶντα τὴν ἀρχὴν ἐκείνην, οὐδὲ μεμνημένον τῆς διέσεως, ἀλλὰ τῆς συλλήψεως, καὶ δι' ὄργην σπαργῶντα μᾶλλον ἢ πρότερον ἐπὶ τὴν βασιλείαν.

IV. "Ἐνιοὶ δὲ φασιν οὐκ ἀρκούμενον οἷς ἐλάμ-βανεν εἰς τὸ καθ' ἡμέραν δεῖπνον ἀποστήναι βασιλέως, εὐήθη λέγοντες. εἰ γὰρ ἄλλο μηδέν, ἀλλὰ ἢ μήτηρ ὑπῆρχε, χρῆσθαι καὶ λαμβάνειν ὅσα βούλοιτο τῶν αὐτῆς παρέχουσα καὶ διδοῦσα.
 μαρτυρεῖ δὲ τῷ πλούτῳ καὶ τὸ μισθοφορικὸν πολλαχόθι διὰ τῶν φίλων καὶ ξένων αὐτῷ παρα-τρεφόμενον, ὡς Ξενοφῶν εἴρηκεν. ἀθρόους μὲν γὰρ οὐ συνήγαγει, ἔτι τὴν παρασκευὴν ἐπικρυπτό-

1013

¹ Anab. i. 1, 6-11.

was about to perform these rites, Tissaphernes brought to him a certain priest who had conducted Cyrus through the customary discipline for boys, had taught him the wisdom of the Magi, and was thought to be more distressed than any one in Persia because his pupil had not been declared king. For this reason, too, his accusation against Cyrus won credence. And he accused him of planning to lie in wait for the king in the sanctuary until he should put off his garment, and then to fall upon him and kill him. Some say that Cyrus was arrested in consequence of this false charge, others that he actually made his way into the sanctuary and hid himself there, and was delivered into custody by the priest. But now, as he was about to be put to death, his mother clasped him in her arms, twined her tresses about him, pressed his neck against her own, and by much lamentation and entreaty prevailed upon the king to spare him, and sent him back to the sea-coast. Here he was not satisfied with the office assigned to him, nor mindful of his release, but only of his arrest; and his anger made him more eager than before to secure the kingdom.

IV. Some say that he revolted from the king because his allowance did not suffice for his daily meals, which is absurd. For had no other resource been his, still, his mother was resource enough, who gave freely from her own wealth all that he wished to take and use. And that he had wealth is proved by the mercenary troops that were maintained for him in many places by his friends and connections, as Xenophon tells us.¹ For he did not bring these together into one body, since he was still trying to conceal his preparations, but in one place and another,

2 μενος, ἀλλαχόθι δὲ ἄλλους ἐπὶ πολλαῖς προφάσεσι ξενολογούντας εἶχε. βασιλέως δὲ ἢ τε μήτηρ παροῦσα τὰς ὑποψίας ἀφῆρει, καὶ Κῦρος αὐτὸς αἰεὶ θεραπευτικῶς ἔγραφε, τὰ μὲν αἰτούμενος παρ' αὐτοῦ, τὰ δὲ Ἰσαφέρνους ἀντικατηγορῶν, ὡς δὴ πρὸς ἐκεῖνον αὐτῷ ζήλου καὶ ἀγῶνος ὄντος.

3 Ἦν δέ τις καὶ μέλλησις ἐν τῇ φύσει τοῦ βασιλέως, ἐπιείκεια φαινομένη τοῖς πολλοῖς. ἐν ἀρχῇ δὲ καὶ πάνυ ζηλοῦν ἔδοξε τὴν Ἄρτοξέρξου τοῦ ὁμωνύμου πραότητα, ἠδίω τε ἑαυτὸν παρέχων ἐντυγχάνεσθαι, καὶ περὶ τὸ τιμᾶν καὶ χαρίζεσθαι τὸ κατ' ἀξίαν ὑπερβάλλων, κολάσεως δὲ πάσης ἀφαιρῶν τὸ ἐφυβρίζον καὶ ἠδόμενον, ἐν δὲ τῷ δέχεσθαι χάριτας οὐχ ἦττον τοῖς διδοῦσιν ἢ τοῖς λαμβάνουσιν ἐν τῷ δίδοναι φαινόμενος εὐχαρισ 4 καὶ φιλάνθρωπος. οὐδὲν γὰρ ἦν οὕτως μικρόν τι τῶν διδομένων ὃ μὴ προσεδέξατο προθύμως, ἀλλὰ καὶ ῥόαν μίαν ὑπερφυῖ μεγέθει προσενέγκαντος Ἵμίου τινὸς αὐτῷ, “Νῆ τὸν Μίθραν,” εἶπεν, “οὗτος ὁ ἀνὴρ καὶ πόλιν ἂν ἐκ μικρᾶς ταχὺ ποιήσῃε μεγάλην πιστευθείς.”

V. Ἐπεὶ δὲ ἄλλων ἄλλα προσφερόντων καθ' ὁδὸν αὐτουργὸς ἄνθρωπος οὐδὲν ἐπὶ καιροῦ φθάσας εὐρεῖν τῷ ποταμῷ προσέδραμε καὶ ταῖν χεροῖν ὑπολαβὼν τοῦ ὕδατος προσήνεγκεν, ἦσθεις ὁ Ἄρτοξέρξης φιάλην ἔπεμψεν αὐτῷ χρυσοῦν καὶ χιλίους δαρεικοὺς. Εὐκλείδα δὲ τῷ Λάκωνι, πολ-λὰ παρρησιαζομένῳ πρὸς αὐτὸν αὐθαδῶς, ἐκέλευσεν εἰπεῖν τὸν χιλιάρχον ὅτι “Σοὶ μὲν ἔξεστιν and on many pretexts, he kept recruiting-agents. And as for the king's suspicions, his mother, who was at court, tried to remove them, and Cyrus himself would always write in a submissive vein, sometimes asking favours from him, and sometimes making countercharges against Tissaphernes, as if his eager contention were against him.

There was, too, a certain dilatoriness in the nature of the king, which most people took for clemency. Moreover, in the beginning he appeared to be altogether emulous of the gentleness of the Artaxerxes whose name he bore, showing himself very agreeable in intercourse, and bestowing greater honours and favours than were really deserved, while from all his punishments he took away the element of insult or vindictive pleasure, and in his acceptance and bestowal of favours appeared no less gracious and kindly to the givers than to the recipients. For there was no gift so small that he did not accept it with alacrity; indeed, when a certain Omisus brought him a single pomegranate of surpassing size, he said: "By Mithra, this man would speedily make a city great instead of small were he entrusted with it."

V. Once when he was on a journey and various people were presenting him with various things, a labouring man, who could find nothing else at the moment, ran to the river, and, taking some of the water in his hands, offered it to him; at which Artaxerxes was so pleased that he sent him a goblet of gold and a thousand darics. To Eucleidas the Lacedaemonian, who would often say bold and impudent things to him, he sent this word by his officer of the guard: "It is in thy power to say εἰπεῖν ἂ βούλει, ἐμοὶ δὲ καὶ λέγειν καὶ ποιεῖν.” 2 ἐν δὲ θήρα τινὶ Τηριβάζου δείξαντος αὐτῷ τὸν κάνδυν ἐσχισμένον, ἠρώτησεν ὅ τι δεῖ ποιεῖν.

 ἐκείνου δὲ εἰπόντος, “Ἄλλον αὐτὸς ἔνδυσαι, τοῦ-τον δὲ ἐμοὶ δός,” οὕτως ἐποίησεν, εἰπὼν, “Δίδωμι μὲν, ὦ Τηρίβαζε, σοὶ τοῦτον, φορεῖν δὲ ἀπαγο-ρεύω.” τοῦ δὲ Τηριβάζου μὴ φροντίσαντος (ἦν γὰρ οὐ πονηρός, ὑπόκουφος δὲ καὶ παράφορος), ἀλλὰ τὸν τε κάνδυν εὐθύς ἐκείνον ἐνδύντος καὶ δέραια χρυσᾶ καὶ γυναικεῖα τῶν βασιλικῶν περιθεμένου, πάντες μὲν ἠγανάκτου (οὐ γὰρ ἐξῆν), ὁ μέντοι βασιλεὺς κατεγέλασε καὶ εἶπε· “Δίδωμί σοι καὶ τὰ χρυσία φορεῖν ὡς γυναικὶ καὶ τὴν 3 στολὴν ὡς μαινομένῳ.” τραπέζης δὲ τῆς αὐτῆς μηδενὸς μετέχοντος ἀλλ’ ἢ μητρὸς βασιλέως ἢ γαμετῆς γυναικός, καθεζομένων τῆς μὲν ὑπ’ αὐτόν, τῆς δὲ μητρὸς ὑπὲρ αὐτόν, Ἄρτοξέρξης καὶ τοὺς ἀδελφούς ἐπὶ τὴν αὐτὴν ἐκάλει τράπεζαν, Ὀστά-νην καὶ Ὀξάθρην, νεωτέρους ὄντας. ἐν δὲ τοῖς μάλιστα κεχαρισμένην ὄψιν παρείχε τοῖς Πέρσαις ἢ τῆς γυναικὸς Στατεΐρας ἀρμάμαξα γυμνῆ τῶν παραπετασμάτων αἰεὶ προφερομένη καὶ διδοῦσα ταῖς δημότισιν ἀσπᾶσθαι αὐτὴν καὶ προσελθεῖν, ὅθεν ἠγαπάτο τοῖς πολλοῖς ἢ βασιλεία.

VI. Τὸν μέντοι Κῦρον οἱ νεωτεριστὰ καὶ πολυ-πράγμονες ὡς λαμπρὸν ἄνδρα τῇ ψυχῇ καὶ πολεμικὸν διαφερόντως καὶ φιλέταιρον ᾔοντο τὰ πράγματα ποθεῖν, καὶ τὸ μέγεθος τῆς ἡγεμονίας βασιλέως δεῖσθαι φρόνημα καὶ φιλοτιμίαν ἔχον-2 τος. οὐχ ἦττον οὖν τοῖς ἄνω πιστεύων ὁ Κῦρος
 ἢ τοῖς περὶ αὐτὸν ἐπεχείρει τῷ πολέμῳ· καὶ

what thou pleasest, but it is in mine both to say and to do." Again, when he was hunting once and Teribazus pointed out that the king's coat was rent, he asked him what was to be done. And when Teribazus replied, "Put on another for thyself, but give this one to me," the king did so, saying, "I give this to thee, Teribazus, but I forbid thee to wear it." Teribazus gave no heed to this command (being not a bad man, but rather light-headed and witless), and at once put on the king's coat, and decked himself with golden necklaces and women's ornaments of royal splendour. Everybody was indignant at this (for it was a forbidden thing); but the king merely laughed, and said: "I permit thee to wear the trinkets as a woman, and the robe as a madman." Again, no one shared the table of a Persian king except his mother or his wedded wife, the wife sitting below him, the mother above him; but Artaxerxes invited to the same table with him his brothers Ostanes and Oxathres, although they were his juniors. But what gratified the Persians most of all was the sight of his wife Stateira's carriage, which always appeared with its curtains up, and thus permitted the women of the people to approach and greet the queen. This made her beloved of the common folk.

VI. Nevertheless, restless and factious men thought that affairs demanded Cyrus, a man who had a brilliant spirit, surpassing skill in war, and great love for his friends; and that the magnitude of the empire required a king of lofty purpose and ambition. Accordingly, Cyrus relied quite as much upon the people of the interior as upon those of his own province and command, when he began the war.

Λακεδαιμονίοις ἔγραφε παρακαλῶν βοηθεῖν καὶ συνεκπέμπειν ἄνδρας, οἷς ἔφη δώσειν, ἂν μὲν πεζοὶ παρῶσιν, ἵππους, ἂν δὲ ἵππεῖς, συνωρίδας· ἂν δ' ἀγροὺς ἔχωσι, κώμας· ἂν δὲ κώμας, πόλεις· μισθοῦ δὲ τοῖς στρατευομένοις οὐκ ἀριθμόν, ἀλλὰ 3 μέτρον ἔσεσθαι. μεγαληγορῶν δὲ περὶ αὐτοῦ πολλὰ καὶ καρδίαν ἔφη τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ φορεῖν βαρυ- 1014 τέραν καὶ φιλοσοφεῖν μᾶλλον καὶ μαγεύειν βέλτιον, οἶνον δὲ πλείονα πίνειν καὶ φέρειν· ἐκείνον δὲ ὑπὸ δειλίας καὶ μαλακίας ἐν μὲν τοῖς κυνηγεσίοις μηδὲ ἐφ' ἵππου, ἐν δὲ τοῖς κινδύνοις μηδὲ ἐπὶ τοῦ θρόνου καθῆσθαι. Λακεδαιμόνιοι μὲν οὖν σκυτά-λην πρὸς Κλέαρχον ἀπέστειλαν ὑπηρετεῖν Κύρω 4 πάντα κελεύοντες. ὁ δὲ Κύρος ἀνέβαινε ἐπὶ βασιλέα βαρβαρικήν τε πολλὴν ἔχων δύναμιν καὶ μισθοφόρους Ἑλληνας ὀλίγῳ τρισχιλίων καὶ μυρίων ἀποδέοντας, ἄλλας ἐπ' ἄλλαις ποιούμενος προφάσεις τῆς στρατείας. οὐ μὴν ἔλαθέ γε εἰς πολὺν χρόνον, ἀλλ' ἦκε βασιλεῖ Τισαφέρνῃς αὐτάγγελος· καὶ πολὺς θόρυβος εἶχε τὰ βασιλεία, τῆς τε Παρυσάτιδος τὴν πλείστην αἰτίαν τοῦ πολέμου φερομένης, καὶ τῶν φίλων αὐτῆς ἐν 5 ὑποψίαις ὄντων καὶ διαβολαῖς. μάλιστα δὲ ἦν ἡ τὴν Παρύσατιν ἢ Στάτειρα τῷ πολέμῳ περιπαθοῦσα καὶ βοῶσα, “Ποῦ νῦν αἱ πίστεῖς ἐκεῖναι;
 ποῦ δὲ αἱ δεήσεις, αἷς ἐξελομένη τὸν ἐπιβουλεύ-σαντα τῷ ἀδελφῷ πολέμου καὶ κακῶν ἐμπέπληκας ἡμᾶς;” ἐκ δὲ τούτων μισοῦσα τὴν Στάτειραν ἢ Παρύσατις, καὶ φύσει βαρύθυμος οὖσα καὶ βάρ-

1. Cf. Xenophon, Anab. i. 1, 9; 2, 21; 4, 3.

He also wrote to the Lacedaemonians, inviting them to aid him and send him men, and promising that he would give to those who came, if they were footmen, horses; if they were horsemen, chariots and pairs; if they had farms, he would give them villages; if they had villages, cities; and the pay of the soldiers should not be counted, but measured out. Moreover, along with much high-sounding talk about himself, he said he carried a sturdier heart than his brother, was more of a philosopher, better versed in the wisdom of the Magi, and could drink and carry more wine than he. His brother, he said, was too effeminate and cowardly either to sit his horse in a hunt, or his throne in a time of peril. The Lacedaemonians, accordingly, sent a dispatch-roll to Clearchus ordering him to give Cyrus every assistance.¹ So Cyrus marched up against the king with a large force of Barbarians and nearly thirteen thousand Greek mercenaries,² alleging one pretext after another for his expedition. But the real object of it was not long concealed, for Tissaphernes went in person to the king and informed him of it. Then there was a great commotion at the court, Parysatis being most blamed for the war, and her friends undergoing suspicion and accusation. And above all was she vexed by Stateira, who was greatly distressed at the war, and kept crying: "Where now are those pledges of thine? And where are the entreaties by which thou didst rescue the man who had plotted against the life of his brother, only to involve us in war and calamity?" Therefore Parysatis hated Stateira, and being naturally of a harsh

² Cf. Xenophon, Anab. i. 7, 10, where the force of Barbarians is said to have numbered one hundred thousand.

6 βαρος ἐν ὀργαῖς καὶ μνησικακίαις, ἐπεβούλευεν αὐτὴν ἀνελεῖν. ἐπεὶ δὲ Δείνων μὲν ἐν τῷ πολέμῳ συντελεσθῆναι τὴν ἐπιβουλήν εἶρηκε, Κτησίας δὲ ὕστερον, ὃν οὔτε ἀγνοεῖν τὸν χρόνον εἰκὸς ἐστὶ παρόντα ταῖς πράξεσιν, οὔτε ἐκὼν αἰτίαν εἶχεν ἐκ τοῦ χρόνου μεταστῆσαι τὸ ἔργον, ὡς ἐπράχθη διηγούμενος, οἷα πάσχει πολλῶν ὁ λόγος αὐτοῦ πρὸς τὸ μυθῶδες καὶ δραματικὸν ἐκτρεπόμενος τῆς ἀληθείας, τοῦτο μὲν ἦν ἐκεῖνος ἀπέδωκε χώραν ἕξει.

VII. Κύρῳ δὲ προσιόντι φῆμαι καὶ λόγοι προσ- ἐπιπτον, ὡς οὐ μάχεσθαι βασιλέως εὐθύς ἐγνω- κότες οὐδὲ συνδραμεῖν εἰς χεῖρας αὐτῷ σπεύδοντος, ἀλλ' ἐν Πέρσαις ὑπομένειν ἄχρι ἂν αἱ δυνάμεις ἐκεῖ πανταχόθεν συνέλθωσι. καὶ γὰρ τάφρον εὖρος ὀργυιῶν δέκα καὶ βάθος ἴσων ἐπὶ σταδίου διὰ τοῦ πεδίου τετρακοσίους ἐνέβαλε· καὶ ταύτης τε περιεΐδε τὸν Κύρον ἐντὸς παρελθόντα καὶ Βα- 2 βυλῶνος αὐτῆς οὐ μακρὰν γενόμενον. Τηριβάζου δέ, ὡς φασι, πρώτου τολμήσαντος εἰπεῖν ὡς οὐ δεῖ φυγομαχεῖν οὐδὲ Μηδίας ἐκστάντα καὶ Βα- βυλῶνος ἅμα¹ καὶ Σούσων ἐνδύεσθαι τῇ Περσίδι, πολλαπλασίαν μὲν ἔχοντα δύναμιν τῶν πολεμίων, μυρίους δὲ σατράπας καὶ στρατηγούς Κύρου καὶ φρονεῖν καὶ μάχεσθαι βελτίονας, ὥρμησε διαγω- νίσασθαι τὴν ταχίστην.

3 Καὶ τὸ μὲν πρῶτον ἐξαίφνης καταφανείς ἐνενή- κοντα μυριάσι στρατοῦ διακεκοσμημέναις λαμ-

¹ ἅμα Bekker and Ziegler, after Coraïs : ἀλλά.

temper and savage in her wrath and resentment, she plotted to kill her. Deinon says that her plot was carried out during the war. Ctesias, however, says that it was accomplished afterwards, and neither is it likely that he was ignorant of the time since he was at the scene of action, nor had he any occasion, in his narrative of the deed, to change the time of it on purpose, however often his story turns aside from the truth into fable and romance. I shall therefore give the event the place which he has assigned to it.¹

VII. As Cyrus proceeded on his march, rumours and reports kept coming to his ears that the king had decided not to give battle at once, and was not desirous of coming to close quarters with him, but rather of waiting in Persia until his forces should assemble there from all parts. For he had run a trench, ten fathoms in width and as many in depth, four hundred furlongs through the plain; and yet he allowed Cyrus to cross this and to come within a short distance of Babylon itself.² And it was Teribazus, as we are told, who first plucked up courage to tell the king that he ought not to shun a battle, nor to retire from Media and Babylon, as well as Susa, and hide himself in Persia, when he had a force many times as numerous as that of the enemy, and countless satraps and generals who surpassed Cyrus in wisdom and military skill. The king therefore determined to fight the issue out as soon as possible.

So, to begin with, by his sudden appearance with an army of nine hundred thousand men in brilliant

¹ See chap. xix.

² Cf. Xenophon, Anab. i. 7, 14-17.

πρῶς, τοὺς πολεμίους ἀσυντάκτους καὶ ἀνόπλους διὰ τὸ θαρρεῖν καὶ καταφρονεῖν ὁδοιποροῦντας ἐξέπληξε καὶ συνετάραξεν, ὥστε σὺν θορύβῳ καὶ βοῇ πολλῇ μόλις εἰς τάξιν καθίστασθαι τὸν Κῦρον· ἔπειτα σιγῇ καὶ σχέδην ἐπάγων θαῦμα τοῖς Ἕλλησι τῆς εὐταξίας παρείχε, κραυγὰς ἀτάκτους καὶ σκιρτήματα καὶ πολὺν τάραχον αὐτῶν καὶ διασπασμὸν ἐν πλήθει τοσοῦτῳ προσδεχομέ-4 νοις. εὐ δὲ καὶ κατὰ τοὺς Ἕλληνας ἀντέταξε τῶν δρεπανηφόρων τὰ ῥωμαλεώτατα πρὸ τῆς ἑαυτοῦ φάλαγγος, ὡς πρὶν ἐν χερσὶ γενέσθαι διακόφοντα τὰς τάξεις βία τῆς εἰσελάσεως.

VIII. Τὴν δὲ μάχην ἐκείνην πολλῶν μὲν ἀπηγγελκότων, Ξενοφῶντος δὲ μονονουχὶ δεικνύοντος ὄψει, καὶ τοῖς πράγμασιν, ὡς οὐ γεγενημένοις, ἀλλὰ γινομένοις, ἐφιστάντος ἀεὶ τὸν ἀκροατὴν ἐμπαθῆ καὶ συγκινδυνεύοντα διὰ τὴν ἐνάργειαν, οὐκ ἔστι νοῦν ἔχοντος ἐπεξηγεῖσθαι, πλὴν ὅσα 2 τῶν ἀξίων λόγου παρήλθεν εἰπεῖν ἐκείνον. ὁ μὲν οὖν τόπος, ἐν ᾧ παρετάξαντο, Κούναξα καλεῖται 1015
 καὶ Βαβυλῶνος ἀπέχει σταδίου πεντακοσίου.
 Κῦρον δὲ πρὸ τῆς μάχης Κλέαρχου παρακα-λούντος ἐξόπισθεν τῶν μαχομένων εἶναι καὶ μὴ κινδυνεύειν αὐτὸν εἰπεῖν φασι, “Τί λέγεις, ᾧ Κλέαρχε; σὺ κελεύεις με τὸν βασιλείας ὀρεγό-
 3 μενον ἀνάξιον εἶναι βασιλείας;” ἀμαρτόντος δὲ Κύρου μέγα τῷ δῦναι προπετῶς εἰς μέσα τὰ δεινὰ καὶ μὴ φυλάξασθαι τὸν κίνδυνον, οὐχ ἦττον ἤμαρτεν, εἰ μὴ καὶ μᾶλλον, Κλέαρχος ἀντιτάξει

¹ Anab. i. 8.

array, he so terrified and confounded the enemy, who were marching along in loose order and without arms because of their boldness and contempt for the king, that Cyrus could with difficulty bring them into battle array amid much tumult and shouting; and again, by leading his forces up slowly and in silence, he filled the Greeks with amazement at his good discipline, since they had expected in so vast a host random shouting, and leaping, with great confusion and dissipation of their lines. Besides this, he did well to draw up in front of his own line, and over against the Greeks, the mightiest of his scythe-bearing chariots, in order that by the force of their charge they might cut to pieces the ranks of the Greeks before they had come to close quarters.

VIII. Now, since many writers have reported to us this battle, and since Xenophon¹ brings it all but before our eyes, and by the vigour of his description makes his reader always a participant in the emotions and perils of the struggle, as though it belonged, not to the past, but to the present, it would be folly to describe it again, except so far as he has passed over things worthy of mention. The place, then, where the armies were drawn up, is called Cunaxa, and it is five hundred furlongs distant from Babylon. And we are told that Cyrus, before the battle, when Clearchus besought him to remain behind the combatants and not risk his life, replied: "What sayest thou, Clearchus? Dost thou bid me, who am reaching out for a kingdom, to be unworthy of a kingdom?" It was a great mistake for Cyrus to plunge headlong into the midst of the fray, instead of trying to avoid its dangers; but it was no less a mistake, nay, even a greater one, for Clearchus to refuse to array his κατὰ τὸν βασιλέα μὴ θελήσας τοὺς Ἕλληνας, ἀλλὰ προσμίξας τῷ ποταμῷ τὸ δεξιόν, ὡς μὴ κυκλωθείη. τὴν γὰρ ἀσφάλειαν ἐξ ἅπαντος διώκοντα καὶ πλείστον λόγον ἔχοντα τοῦ μηδὲν

 4 παθεῖν οἴκοι μένειν ἦν κράτιστον. ὁ δὲ μυρίους σταδίους ἀπὸ θαλάσσης ἐν ὄπλοις ἀναβεβηκῶς μηδενὸς ἀναγκάζοντος, ἀλλ' ὅπως Κῦρον εἰς τὸν θρόνον καθίσῃ τὸν βασιλείον, εἶτα περισκοπῶν χώραν καὶ τάξιν, οὐκ ἀφ' ἧς σώσειε τὸν ἡγεμόνα καὶ μισθοδότην, ἀλλ' ἐν τίνι θέμενος ἑαυτὸν ἀσφαλῶς μαχεῖται καθ' ἡσυχίαν, ὅμοιος ἦν ὑπὸ δέους τῶν παρόντων ἐκβεβληκότη τοὺς περὶ τῶν ὄλων λογισμοὺς καὶ προἰεμένῳ τὴν τῆς στρατείας
 5 ὑπόθεσιν. ὅτι γὰρ οὐδεὶς ἂν ὑπέμεινε τῶν τεταγμένων περὶ βασιλέα τοὺς Ἕλληνας ἐμπεσόντας, ὡσθέντων δ' ἐκείνων καὶ βασιλέως φυγόντος ἢ πεσόντος ὑπῆρχε Κύρῳ νικῶντι σώζεσθαι καὶ βασιλεύειν, ἐκ τῶν πεπραγμένων δῆλόν ἐστι. διὸ τὴν Κλεάρχου μάλλον εὐλάβειαν ἢ τὸ τοῦ Κύρου θράσος αἰτιατέον ὡς τὰ πράγματα καὶ Κῦρον
 6 ἀπολέσασαν. εἰ γὰρ αὐτὸς ἐσκόπει βασιλεὺς ὅπου τάξας τοὺς Ἕλληνας ἀβλαβεστάτοις χρήσεται πολεμίοις, οὐκ ἂν ἑτέραν ἐξεύρην ἢ τὴν ἀπωτάτῳ χώρῳ ἑαυτοῦ καὶ τῶν περὶ ἑαυτὸν, ἀφ' ἧς οὔτε νικηθεὶς αὐτὸς ἦσθετο καὶ Κῦρος ἔφθῃ κατακοπέις ἢ χρησάμενός τι τῇ Κλεάρχου νίκῃ.
 7 καίτοι Κῦρος τὸ συμφέρον οὐκ ἠγνόησεν, ἀλλ' ἐκεῖ Κλέαρχον ἐκέλευε τάττεσθαι κατὰ μέσον. ὁ δ' αὐτῷ μέλειν εἰπὼν ὅπως ἔξει κάλλιστα, τὸ πᾶν διέφθειρεν.

Greeks over against the king, and to keep his right wing close to the river, that he might not be surrounded. For if he sought safety above everything else and made it his chief object to avoid losses, it had been best for him to stay at home. But he had marched ten thousand furlongs up from the sea-coast under arms, with no compulsion upon him, but in order that he might place Cyrus upon the royal throne; and then, in looking about for a place and position which would enable him, not to save his leader and employer, but to fight safely and as he pleased, he was like one who, through fear of instant peril, had cast aside the plans made for general success and abandoned the object of the expedition. For had the Greeks charged upon the forces arrayed about the king, not a man of them would have stood his ground; and had these been routed and the king either slain or put to flight, Cyrus would have won by his victory, not only safety, but a kingdom. This is clear from the course of the action. Therefore the caution of Clearchus rather than the temerity of Cyrus must be held responsible for the ruin of Cyrus and his cause. For if the king himself had sought out a place to array the Greeks in which their attack would be least injurious to him, he could have found no other than that which was most remote from himself and his immediate following, since he himself did not know that his forces had been defeated there, and Cyrus could take no advantage at all of the victory of Clearchus, because he was cut down too soon. And yet Cyrus well knew what was for the best, and ordered Clearchus to take his position accordingly in the centre. But Clearchus, after telling Cyrus he would see to it that the best was done, ruined everything.

IX. Οἱ μὲν γὰρ Ἕλληνας ὅσον ἐβούλοντο τοὺς βαρβάρους ἐνίκων καὶ διώκοντες ἐπὶ πλείστον προήλθον· Κύρω δὲ γενναῖον ἵππον, ἄστομον δὲ καὶ ὑβριστὴν ἐλαύνοντι, Πασακᾶν καλούμενον, ὡς Κτησίας φησὶν, ἀντεξήλασεν ὁ Καδουσίων ἄρχων

2 Ἀρταγέρσης μέγα βοῶν, “ὦ τὸ κάλλιστον ἐν Πέρσαις ὄνομα Κύρου καταισχύνων, ἀδικώτατε ἀνδρῶν καὶ ἀφρονέστατε, κακοὺς μὲν Ἕλληνας ἔρχη κακὴν ὁδὸν ἄγων ἐπὶ τὰ Περσῶν ἀγαθὰ, δεσπότην δὲ σεαυτοῦ καὶ ἀδελφὸν ἐλπίζων ἀναιρήσειν, ὃς σοῦ μυριάκις μυρίους δούλους ἔχει κρείσσονας. αὐτίκα δὲ πειράσῃ· πρότερον γὰρ ἵπολεις ἐνταῦθα τὴν σεαυτοῦ κεφαλὴν ἢ θεά-

3 σασθαι τὸ βασιλέως πρόσωπον.” ταῦτα εἰπὼν ἐξηκόντισεν ἐπ’ αὐτόν. ὁ δὲ θώραξ στερεῶς ἀντέσχε, καὶ οὐκ ἐτρώθη μὲν ὁ Κῦρος, ἐκραδάνθη δὲ τῆς πληγῆς ἰσχυρᾶς προσπεσούσης. ἀποστρέψαντος δὲ τὸν ἵππου τοῦ Ἀρταγέρσου βαλὼν ὁ Κῦρος ἔτυχε, καὶ διήλασε παρὰ τὴν κλεῖδα διὰ τοῦ τραχήλου τὴν αἰχμὴν.

4 Τὸν μὲν οὖν Ἀρταγέρσην ἀποθανεῖν ὑπὸ τοῦ Κύρου σχεδὸν ἄπαιτες ὁμολογοῦσι· περὶ δὲ τῆς αὐτοῦ Κύρου τελευτῆς ἐπεὶ Ξενοφῶν ἀπλῶς καὶ συντόμως, ἅτε δὴ μὴ παρὼν αὐτός, εἶπεν, οὐδὲν ἴσως κωλύει τὰ Δείωνος ἰδίᾳ καὶ πάλιν τὰ Κτησίου διελθεῖν.

X. Φησὶν οὖν ὁ μὲν Δείων ὅτι τοῦ Ἀρταγέρσου πεσόντος εἰσελάσας βιαίως ὁ Κῦρος εἰς τοὺς προτεταγμένους τοῦ βασιλέως κατέτρωσεν αὐτοῦ τὸν ἵππον, ὁ δὲ ἀπερρῆ· Τηριβάζου δὲ

IX. For the Greeks were victorious to their hearts' content over the Barbarians, and went forward a very great distance in pursuit of them; but Cyrus, riding a horse that was high-bred, but fierce and hard to guide (his name was Pasacas, as Ctesias tells us), was met in full course by Artagerses, commander of the Cadusians, who cried with a loud voice: "O thou who disgracest the name of Cyrus, that noblest name among the Persians, thou most unjust and senseless of men, thou art come with evil Greeks on an evil journey after the good things of the Persians, and thou hopest to slay thine own brother and thy master, who hath a million servants that are better men than thou. And thou shalt at once have proof of this; for thou shalt lose thine own head here before thou hast seen the face of the king." With these words he hurled his spear at Cyrus. But the breastplate of Cyrus stoutly resisted, and its wearer was not wounded, though he reeled under the shock of the mighty blow. Then, as Artagerses turned his horse away, Cyrus hurled his spear and hit him, and drove its head through his neck past the collar-bone.

Thus Artagerses died at the hands of Cyrus, as nearly all writers are agreed in saying; but as regards the death of Cyrus himself, since Xenophon makes simple and brief mention of it,¹ because he was not present himself when it happened, there is no objection perhaps to my recounting, first what Deinon says about it, and then what Ctesias says.

X. Accordingly, Deinon says that after Artagerses had fallen, Cyrus charged furiously into those drawn up in front of the king, and wounded the king's horse, and that the king fell to the ground; but ἀναβαλόντος αὐτὸν ἐπ' ἄλλον ἵππον ταχὺ καὶ εἰπόντος, “ὦ βασιλεῦ, μέμνησο τῆς ἡμέρας ταύτης· οὐ γὰρ ἀξία λήθης ἐστί,” πάλιν ὁ Κῦρος ἐνσεισας τῷ ἵππῳ κατέβαλε τὸν Ἀρτοξέρξην.

¹ Anab. I. viii. 26 f.

 2 πρὸς δὲ τὴν τρίτην ἐπέλασιν δυσανασχετήσας ὁ βασιλεὺς, καὶ εἰπὼν πρὸς τοὺς παρόντας ὡς βέλτιόν ἐστι μὴ ζῆν, ἀντεξήλαυνε τῷ Κῦρῳ προπετῶς καὶ ἀπερισκέπτως εἰς ἐναντία βέλη φερομένῳ. καὶ βάλλει μὲν αὐτὸς ἀκουτίῳ, βάλλουσι δὲ οἱ περὶ αὐτὸν. πίπτει δὲ ὁ Κῦρος, ὡς μὲν ἔνιοι λέγουσι, πληγεῖς ὑπὸ τοῦ βασιλέως, ὡς δὲ ἕτεροί τινες, Καρὸς ἀνθρώπου πατάξαντος, ᾧ γέρας ἔδωκε τῆς πράξεως ταύτης ὁ βασιλεὺς ἀλεκτρυόνα χρυσοῦν ἐπὶ δόρατος αἰεὶ πρὸ τῆς τάξεως ἐν ταῖς στρατείαις κομίζειν· καὶ γὰρ αὐτοὺς τοὺς Κῆρας ἀλεκτρυόνας οἱ Πέρσαι διὰ τοὺς λόφους, οἷς κοσμοῦσι τὰ κράνη, προσηγόρευον.

XI. Ἡ δὲ Κτησίῳ διήγησις, ὡς ἐπιτεμόντι πολλὰ συντόμως ἀπαγγεῖλαι, τοιαύτη τίς ἐστί. Κῦρος ἀποκτείνας Ἀρταγέρσην ἤλαυνεν εἰς αὐτὸν βασιλέα τὸν ἵππον, καὶ αὐτὸς εἰς ἐκείνον, ἀμφότεροι σιωπῇ. φθάνει δὲ βαλὼν Ἀριαῖος ὁ Κύρου φίλος βασιλέα, καὶ οὐκ ἔτρωσε. βασιλεὺς δὲ ἀφείς τὸ δόρυ Κύρου μὲν οὐκ ἔτυχε, Σατιφέρην δὲ, πιστὸν ἄνδρα Κῦρῳ καὶ γενναῖον, ἔβαλε καὶ
 2 ἀπέκτεινε. Κῦρος δ' ἐπ' αὐτὸν ἑξακουτίσας διὰ τοῦ θώρακος ἔτρωσε τὸ στῆθος, ὅσον ἐνδύναι δύο δακτύλους τὸ ἀκόντιον, πεσεῖν δὲ αὐτὸν ὑπὸ τῆς πληγῆς ἀπὸ τοῦ ἵππου. φυγῆς δὲ καὶ ταραχῆς τῶν περὶ αὐτὸν γενομένης, ὁ μὲν ἀναστὰς μετ'

Teribazus quickly mounted him upon another horse, saying, "O king, remember this day, for it deserves not to be forgotten"; whereupon Cyrus again plunged in and dismounted Artaxerxes. But at his third assault, the king, being enraged, and saying to those who were with him that death was better, rode out against Cyrus, who was rashly and impetuously rushing upon the missiles of his opponents. The king himself hit him with a spear, and he was hit by the attendants of the king. Thus Cyrus fell, as some say, by a wound at the hands of the king, but as sundry others have it, from the blow of a Carian, who was rewarded by the king for this exploit with the privilege of always carrying a golden cock upon his spear in front of the line during an expedition; for the Persians call the Carians themselves cocks, because of the crests with which they adorn their helmets.

XI. But the narrative of Ctesias, to give it in a much-abbreviated form, is something as follows. After he had slain Artagerses, Cyrus rode against the king himself, and the king against him, both without a word. But Ariaeus, the friend of Cyrus, was beforehand in hurling his spear at the king, though he did not wound him. And the king, casting his spear at Cyrus, did not hit him, but struck and killed Satiphernes, a trusted friend of Cyrus and a man of noble birth. But Cyrus threw his spear at the king and wounded him in the breast through the cuirass, so that the weapon sank in two fingers deep, and the king fell from his horse with the blow. Amid the ensuing confusion and flight of his immediate followers, the king rose to his feet, and with a few companions ὀλίγων, ἐν οἷς καὶ Κτησίας ἦν, λόφον τινὰ πλησίον καταλαβὼν ἠσύχαζε· Κῦρον δὲ τοῖς πολεμίοις ἐνειλούμενον ὁ ἵππος ἐξέφερεν ὑπὸ θυμοῦ μακράν, ἤδη σκότους ὄντος ἀγνοούμενον ὑπὸ τῶν 3 πολεμίων καὶ ζητούμενον ὑπὸ τῶν φίλων. ἐπαιρόμενος δὲ τῇ νίκῃ καὶ μεστὸς ὦν ὀρμῆς καὶ θράσους διεξήλαυε βοῶν, “Ἐξίστασθε, πενι-χροί.” τοῦτο δὲ Περσιστὶ πολλάκις αὐτοῦ βοῶντος, οἱ μὲν ἐξίσταντο προσκυνοῦντες, ἀποπίπτει δὲ τῆς κεφαλῆς ἢ τιάρα τοῦ Κύρου. καὶ παρατρέχων νεανίας Πέρσης ὄνομα Μιθριδάτης ἀκοντίῳ βάλλει τὸν κρόταφον αὐτοῦ παρὰ τὸν 4 ὀφθαλμόν, ἀγνοῶν ὅστις εἶη. πολὺ δὲ αἷμα τοῦ τραύματος ἐκβαλόντος ἰλιγγιάσας καὶ καρωθεὶς ὁ Κῦρος ἔπεσε. καὶ ὁ μὲν ἵππος ὑπεκφυγὼν ἐπλάζετο, τὸν δ’ ἐφίππειον πῖλον ἀπορρυνέντα λαμβάνει τοῦ τὸν Κῦρον βαλόντος ἀκόλουθος αἵματος περίπλεω. τὸν δὲ Κῦρον ἐκ τῆς πληγῆς ἀναφέροντα χαλεπῶς καὶ μόλις εὐνοῦχοί τινες ὀλίγοι παρόντες ἐπεχείρουν ἐπ’ ἄλλον ἵππον ἀναθέσθαι καὶ σώζειν.

 5 ἀδυνάτως δ’ ἔχοντα καὶ δι’ αὐτοῦ προθυμούμενον βαδίζειν ὑπολαβόντες ἤγον, τῷ μὲν σώματι καρη-βαροῦντα καὶ σφαλλόμενον, οἴομενον δὲ νικᾶν ἀκούοντα τῶν φευγόντων ἀνακαλουμένων Κῦρον βασιλέα καὶ φείδεσθαι δεομένων. ἐν δὲ τούτῳ Καύνιοί τινες ἄνθρωποι κακόβιοι καὶ ἄποροι καὶ ταπεινῶν ὑπουργημάτων ἔνεκα τῇ τοῦ βασιλέως στρατιᾷ παρακολουθοῦντες ἔτυχον συναναμιχθέν-6 τες ὡς φίλοις τοῖς περὶ τὸν Κῦρον. ὡς δὲ μόλις

among whom also was Ctesias, took possession of a certain hill near by and remained there quietly; but Cyrus, enveloped by his enemies, was borne on a long distance by his spirited horse, and since it was now dark, his enemies did not recognize him and his friends could not find him. But lifted up by his victory, and full of impetuosity and confidence, he rode on through his foes, crying out, "Clear the way, ye beggars!" Thus he cried out many times, in Persian, and they cleared the way, and made him their obeisance. But the turban of Cyrus fell from his head, and a young Persian, Mithridates by name, running to his side, smote him with his spear in the temple, near the eye, not knowing who he was. Much blood gushed from the wound, and Cyrus, stunned and giddy, fell to the ground. His horse escaped and wandered about the field, but the horse's saddle-cloth, which had slipped off, was captured by the attendant of the man who had struck Cyrus, and it was soaked with blood. Then, as Cyrus was slowly and with difficulty recovering from the blow, a few eunuchs who were at hand tried to put him upon another horse and bring him to a place of safety. But since he was unable to ride and desired to go on his own feet, they supported him and led him along. His head was heavy and he reeled to and fro, but he thought he was victorious because he heard the fugitives saluting Cyrus as king and begging him to spare them. Meanwhile some Caunians—low and poverty-stricken men who followed the king's army to do menial service—chanced to join the party about Cyrus, supposing them to be friends. But when at last they perceived that the tunics συνείδον τὰ ἐπιθροακίδια φοινικᾶ, λευκοῖς χρω-μένων τῶν βασιλικῶν ἀπάντων, ἔγνωσαν πολεμίους ὄντας. εἰς οὖν ἐκείνων ἐτόλμησεν ἀγνοῶν ἐξόπισθεν βαλεῖν τὸν Κῦρον ἀκουτίῳ. τῆς δὲ περὶ τὴν ἰγνύαν φλεβὸς ἀναρραγείσης πεσὼν ὁ Κῦρος ἅμα παίει πρὸς τιμὴν λίθῳ τὸν τετρωμένον κρόταφον καὶ ἀποθνήσκει. τοιοῦτος μὲν ὁ Κτη-σίου λόγος, ᾧ καθάπερ ἀμβλεῖ ξιφιδίῳ μόλις ἀναιρῶν τὸν ἄνθρωπον ἀνήρηκεν.

XII. Ἦδη δὲ αὐτοῦ τεθνηκότος Ἄρτασύρας ὁ βασιλέως ὀφθαλμὸς ἔτυχεν ἵππῳ παρεξελαύνων.
 γνωρίσας οὖν τοὺς εὐνούχους ὀλοφυρομένους ἠρώτησε τὸν πιστότατον αὐτῶν, “Τίνα τοῦ-1017 του, ᾧ Παρίσκα, κλαίεις παρακαθήμενος;” ὁ δὲ εἶπεν· “Οὐχ ὀρᾶς, ᾧ Ἄρτασύρα, Κῦρον τεθνηκότα;” θαυμάσας οὖν ὁ Ἄρτασύρας τῷ μὲν εὐνούχῳ θαρρεῖν παρεκελεύσατο καὶ φυλάττειν 2 τὸν νεκρὸν, αὐτὸς δὲ συντείνας πρὸς τὸν Ἄρτο-ξέρξην, ἀπεγνωκότα μὲν ἤδη τὰ πράγματα, κακῶς δὲ καὶ τὸ σῶμα διακείμενον ὑπὸ τε δίψης καὶ τοῦ τραύματος, χαίρων φράζει ὡς αὐτὸς ἴδιοι τεθνηκότα Κῦρον. ὁ δὲ πρῶτον μὲν εὐθύς ὤρ-μησεν αὐτὸς ἰέναι, καὶ τὸν Ἄρτασύραν ἄγειν ἐκέλευσεν ἐπὶ τὸν τόπον· ἐπεὶ δὲ πολὺς ἦν λόγος τῶν Ἑλλήνων καὶ φόβος ὡς διωκόντων καὶ πάντα νικῶντων καὶ κρατούντων, ἔδοξε πλείονας πέμψαι 3 τοὺς κατοψομένους· καὶ τριάκοντα λαμπάδας ἔχοντες ἐπέμφθησαν. αὐτῷ δὲ μικρὸν ἀπολείποντι τοῦ τεθνάναι διὰ τὸ διψῆν Σατιβαρζάνης over their breastplates were of a purple colour, whereas all the king's people wore white ones, they knew that they were enemies. Accordingly, one of them, not knowing who Cyrus was, ventured to smite him from behind with his spear. The vein in the ham of Cyrus was ruptured and he fell, and at the same time struck his wounded temple against a stone, and so died. Such is the story of Ctesias, in which, as with a blunt sword, he is long in killing Cyrus, but kills him at last.

XII. When Cyrus was now dead, Artasyras, the king's Eye,¹ chanced to pass by on horseback, and recognizing the eunuchs as they lamented, he asked the trustiest of them, "Who is this man, Pariscas, by whom thou sittest mourning?" And Pariscas answered: "O Artasyras, dost thou not see Cyrus dead?" Astonished at this, then, Artasyras bade the eunuch be of good courage and guard the dead body, but he himself went in hot haste to Artaxerxes (who had already given up his cause for lost, and besides was physically in a wretched plight from thirst and from his wound), and joyfully told him that with his own eyes he had seen Cyrus dead. At first the king promptly set out to go in person to the place, and ordered Artasyras to conduct him thither; but since there was much talk about the Greeks, and it was feared that they were pursuing and conquering and making themselves masters everywhere, he decided to send a larger company to see where Cyrus lay. So thirty men were sent, with torches. Meanwhile, since the king was almost dead with thirst, Satibarzanes the eunuch

¹ A confidential officer of high rank, a Superintendent of the Realm.

ὁ εὐνοῦχος περιθέων ἐζήτει ποτόν· οὐ γὰρ εἶχε τὸ χωρίον ὕδωρ, οὐδὲ ἦν ἐγγὺς τὸ στρατόπεδον· μόλις οὖν ἐπιτυγχάνει τῶν Καυνίων ἐκείνων τῶν κακοβίων ἐνὸς ἐν ἀσκίῳ φαύλῳ διεφθαρμένον ὕδωρ καὶ πονηρὸν ἔχοντος, ὅσον ὀκτῶ κοτύλας· καὶ λαβὼν τοῦτο καὶ κομίσας τῷ βασιλεῖ δίδωσιν. ἐκπιόντα δὲ ἅπαν ἠρώτησεν εἰ μὴ πάνυ δυσχε-4 ραίνει τὸ ποτόν. ὁ δὲ ὤμοσε τοὺς θεοὺς μήτε οἶνον ἠδέως οὕτως πώποτε πεπωκέναι μήτε ὕδωρ τὸ κουφότατον καὶ καθαρώτατον, “Ὡστε,” ἔφη, “τὸν δόντα σοι τοῦτο ἄνθρωπον, ἂν ἐγὼ μὴ δυνηθῶ ζητήσας ἀμείψασθαι, τοὺς θεοὺς εὐχομαι ποιῆσαι μακάριον καὶ πλούσιον.”

XIII. Ἐν δὲ τούτῳ προσήλαυνον οἱ τριάκοντα λαμπροὶ καὶ περιχαρεῖς, ἀναγγέλλοντες αὐτῷ τὴν ἀνέλπιστον εὐτυχίαν. ἤδη δὲ καὶ πλήθει τῶν συντρεχόντων πάλιν πρὸς αὐτὸν καὶ συνισταμένων ἐθάρρει, καὶ κατέβαινε ἀπὸ τοῦ λόφου φωτὶ
 2 πολλῷ περιλαμπόμενος. ὡς δὲ ἐπέστη τῷ νεκρῷ, καὶ κατὰ δὴ τινα νόμον Περσῶν ἢ δεξιὰ χεῖρ ἀπεκόπη καὶ ἡ κεφαλὴ τοῦ σώματος, ἐκέλευσε τὴν κεφαλὴν αὐτῷ κομισθῆναι· καὶ τῆς κόμης δραξάμενος οὔσης βαθείας καὶ λασίας ἐπεδείκνυε τοῖς ἀμφιδοξοῦσιν ἔτι καὶ φεύγουσιν. οἱ δὲ ἐθαύμαζον καὶ προσεκύνουν, ὥστε ταχὺ μυριάδας
 3 ἐπτά περὶ αὐτὸν γενέσθαι καὶ συνεισελάσαι πάλιν εἰς τὸ στρατόπεδον. ἐξεληλάκει δέ, ὡς ὁ Κτησίας φησὶν, ἐπὶ τὴν μάχην τεσσαράκοντα μυριάσιν· οἱ δὲ περὶ Δείνωνα καὶ Ξενοφῶντα πολὺ πλείονας γενέσθαι λέγουσι τὰς μεμαχημένας. ἀριθμὸν δὲ νεκρῶν ὁ Κτησίας ἑνακισχιλίους ἀνενεχθῆναι ran about in quest of a drink for him; for the place had no water, and the camp was far away. At last, then, he came upon one of those low Caunians, who had vile and polluted water in a wretched skin, about two quarts in all: this he took, brought it to the king, and gave it to him. After the king had drunk it all off, the eunuch asked him if he was not altogether disgusted with the drink. But the king swore by the gods that he had never drunk wine, or the lightest and purest water, with so much pleasure. "Therefore," said the king, "if I should be unable to find and reward the man who gave thee this drink, I pray the gods to make him rich and happy."

XIII. And now the thirty messengers came riding up with joy and exultation in their faces, announcing to the king his unexpected good fortune. Presently, too, he was encouraged by the number of men who flocked back to him and formed in battle array, and so he came down from the hill under the light of many torches. And after he had halted at the dead body of Cyrus, and its right hand and head had been cut off (in accordance with a law of the Persians), he ordered the head to be brought to him; and grasping it by the hair, which was long and bushy, he showed it to those who were still wavering and disposed to fly. These were amazed, and made obeisance to the king, so that very soon seventy thousand men were about him and marched back with him to their camp. He had marched out to the battle, as Ctesias says, with four hundred thousand men. But Deinon and Xenophon say that the army which fought under him was much larger. As to the number of his dead, Ctesias says that it

φησι πρὸς τὸν Ἀρτοξέρξην, αὐτῷ δὲ δισμυρίων οὐκ ἐλάττους φανῆναι τοὺς κειμένους. ταῦτα μὲν οὖν ἔχει διαμφισβήτησιν· ἐκείνο δὲ τοῦ Κτησίου λαμπρὸν ἤδη ψεῦσμα, τὸ πεμφθῆναι φάναι πρὸς τοὺς Ἕλληνας αὐτὸν μετὰ Φαλίνου τοῦ Ζακυνθίου
 4 καὶ τινων ἄλλων. ὁ γὰρ Ξενοφῶν ἠπίστατο συνδιατρίβοντα βασιλεῖ Κτησίαν· μέμνηται γὰρ αὐτοῦ καὶ τοῖς βιβλίοις τούτοις ἐντετυχηκῶς δῆλός ἐστιν· οὐκ ἂν οὖν ἐλθόντα καὶ λόγων τοσοῦτων ἐρμηνέα γενόμενον παρήκεν ἀνώνυμον, Φαλῖνον δὲ τὸν Ζακύνθιον ὠνόμαζεν· ἀλλὰ δαιμονίως ὁ Κτησίας, ὡς ἔοικε, φιλότιμος ὢν καὶ οὐχ ἦττον φιλολάκων καὶ φιλοκλέαρχος αἰεὶ τινὰς ἐν τῇ διηγῆσει χώρας ἑαυτῷ δίδωσιν, ἐν αἷς γενόμενος πολλὰ καὶ καλὰ μεμνήσεται Κλεάρχου καὶ τῆς Λακεδαίμονος.

XIV. Μετὰ δὲ τὴν μάχην δῶρα κάλλιστα μὲν ἐξέπεμψε καὶ μέγιστα τῷ Ἀρταγέρσου παιδὶ τοῦ πεσόντος ὑπὸ Κύρου, καλῶς δὲ καὶ Κτησίαν καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους ἐτίμησε. τὸν δὲ Καύνιον ἐκείνου ἐξανευρών, ὃς ἐπέδωκε τὸ ἀσκίον, ἐξ ἀδόξου καὶ πένητος ἔντιμον καὶ πλούσιον ἐποίησεν. ἦν δέ τις ἐπιμέλεια καὶ περὶ τὰς τῶν ἐξαμαρτόντων δικαιο-
 2 ῶσεις. Ἀρβάκην μὲν γάρ τινα Μῆδον ἐν τῇ μάχῃ πρὸς Κῦρον φυγόντα καὶ πάλιν ἐκείνου πεσόντος μεταστάντα, δειλίαν καὶ μαλακίαν καταγιούς, οὐ προδοσίαν οὐδὲ κακόνοιαν, ἐκέλευσε γυμνὴν ἀναλαμβάνοντα πόρνην περιβάδην ἐπὶ τοῦ τραχήλου δι' ἡμέρας ὅλης ἐν ἀγορᾷ περιφέρειν. ἐτέρου δὲ πρὸς

1018

¹ Anab. ii. 1. 7-23.

was reported to Artaxerxes as nine thousand, but that he himself thought the slain no fewer than twenty thousand. This matter, then, is in dispute. But it is certainly a glaring falsehood on the part of Ctesias to say that he was sent to the Greeks along with Phalinus the Zacynthian and certain others. For Xenophon knew that Ctesias was in attendance upon the king, since he makes mention of him and had evidently read his works; if, then, Ctesias had come to the Greeks and served as an interpreter in so momentous a colloquy, Xenophon would not have left him nameless and named only Phalinus the Zacynthian.¹ The truth is that Ctesias, being prodigiously ambitious, as it would seem, and none the less partial to Sparta and to Clearchus, always allows considerable space in his narrative for himself, and there he will say many fine things about Clearchus and Sparta.

XIV. After the battle, the king sent the largest and most beautiful gifts to the son of that Artagerses who fell at the hands of Cyrus; he also gave generous rewards to Ctesias and others, and when he had found out the Caunian who had given him the skin of water, he raised him from obscurity and poverty to honour and wealth. There was much watchful care also in his punishment of those who had gone wrong. For example, in the case of Arbaces, a Mede, who had run away to Cyrus during the battle, and, when Cyrus fell, had changed back again, the king pronounced him guilty, not of treachery, nor even of malice, but of cowardice and weakness, and ordered him to take a naked harlot astride his neck and carry her about in the market-place for a whole day. And in the case of another man, who, besides

τῷ μεταστῆναι ψευσαμένου καταβαλεῖν δύο τῶν πολεμίων, προσέταξε διαπεῖραι τρισὶ βελόνας 3 τὴν γλῶτταν. οἴόμενος δὲ καὶ βουλόμενος δοκεῖν καὶ λέγειν πάντας ἀνθρώπους ὡς αὐτὸς ἀπεκτόνοι Κῦρον, Μιθριδάτη τε τῷ βαλόντι πρώτῳ Κῦρον ἐξέπεμψε δῶρα καὶ λέγειν ἐκέλευσε τοὺς διδόντας ὡς “Τούτοις σε τιμᾷ ὁ βασιλεὺς ὅτι τὸν ἐφίππειον Κύρου πῖλον εὐρών ἀνήνεγκας.” τοῦ δὲ Καρός, ὑφ’ οὗ τὴν ἰγνύαν πληγείς ὁ Κῦρος ἔπεσε, καὶ αὐτοῦ δωρεὰν αἰτοῦντος, ἐκέλευσεν εἰπεῖν τοὺς διδόντας ὅτι “Σοὶ ταῦτα δίδωσιν βασιλεὺς εὐαγγε-γελίων δευτερεία· πρώτος γὰρ Ἀρτασύρας, μετ’ ἐκείνῳ δὲ σὺ τὴν Κύρου τελευταίην ἀπήγγειλας.” 4 ὁ μὲν οὖν Μιθριδάτης ἀπῆλθε σιωπῇ λυπούμενος· τὸν δὲ ἄθλιον Κᾶρα κοινόν τι πάθος ἐξ ἀβελτερίας κατέσχε. διαφθαρεῖς γὰρ ὑπὸ τῶν παρόντων, ὡς ἔοικεν, ἀγαθῶν, καὶ ἀναπεισθεῖς εὐθύς ἀντιποιεῖ-σθαι τῶν ὑπὲρ αὐτόν, οὐκ ἠξίου τὰ δοθέντα μισθὸν εὐαγγελίων ἔχειν, ἀλλ’ ἠγανάκτει μαρτυρό-μενος καὶ βοῶν ὅτι Κῦρον οὐδεὶς ἕτερος, ἀλλ’ αὐτὸς ἀπεκτόνοι, καὶ τὴν δόξαν ἀδίκως ἀποστεροῖτο. ταῦτα δὲ ἀκούσας ὁ βασιλεὺς σφόδρα παρωξύνθη καὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν ἐκέλευσεν ἀποτεμεῖν 5 τοῦ ἀνθρώπου. παρούσα δ’ ἡ μήτηρ, “Μὴ σύ γε,” εἶπεν, “οὕτω τὸν Κᾶρα τοῦτον, ὦ βασιλεῦ, τὸν ὄλεθρον ἀπαλλάξης, ἀλλὰ παρ’ ἐμοῦ τὸν ἄξιον ἀπολήψεται μισθὸν ὧν τολμᾷ λέγειν.” ἐπιτρέψαντος δὲ τοῦ βασιλέως ἐκέλευσε τοὺς ἐπὶ τῶν τιμωριῶν ἢ Παρύσατις λαβόντας τὸν going over to the enemy, had lyingly boasted that he had slain two of them, the king ordered that his tongue should be pierced with three needles. Moreover, believing, and wishing all men to think, and say, that he had killed Cyrus with his own hand, he sent gifts to Mithridates, the one who first hit Cyrus, and ordered the bearers of the gifts to say: "This is thy reward from the king because thou didst find and bring to him the trappings of the horse of Cyrus." Again, when the Carian, from whom Cyrus received the blow in the ham which brought him down, asked that he also should receive a gift, the king ordered its bearers to say: "The king gives thee these things as a second prize for good tidings; for Artasyras came first, and after him thou didst come, with tidings of the death of Cyrus." Now, Mithridates went away without a word, although he was vexed; but the wretched Carian, in his folly, gave way to a common feeling. That is, he was corrupted, it would seem, by the good things which he had, and led by them to aspire at once to things beyond his reach, so that he would not deign to take the gifts as a reward for good tidings, but was indignant, calling men to witness and crying in loud tones that it was he himself, and no one else, who had killed Cyrus, and that he was unjustly robbed of his glory. When the king heard of this, he was vehemently angry and gave orders that the man should be beheaded. Whereupon the king's mother, who was present, said to him: "O King, do not let this accursed Carian off so easily, but leave him to me, and he shall receive the fitting reward for his daring words." So the king consigned the man to Parysatis, who ordered the executioners to ἄνθρωπον ἐφ' ἡμέρας δέκα στρεβλοῦν, εἶτα τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς ἐξορύξαντας εἰς τὰ ὦτα θερμὸν ἐντήκειν χαλκὸν ἕως ἀποθάνῃ.

XV. Κακῶς δὲ ἀπόλετο καὶ Μιθριδάτης μετ' ὀλίγον χρόνον ἐκ τῆς αὐτῆς ἀβελτερίας. κληθεὶς γὰρ ἐπὶ δεῖπνον ἔνθα καὶ βασιλέως καὶ τῆς μητρὸς εὐνοῦχοι παρῆσαν, ἦκεν ἐσθῆτι καὶ χρυσῷ
 2 κεκοσμημένος οἷς ἔλαβε παρὰ βασιλέως. ἐπεὶ δὲ εἰς τὸ πίνειν ἀφίκοντο, λέγει πρὸς αὐτὸν ὁ μέγιστον δυνάμενος τῶν Παρυσάτιδος εὐνούχων. “Ὡς καλὴν μὲν ἐσθῆτά σοι ταύτην, ὦ Μιθριδάτα, ὁ βασιλεὺς δέδωκε, καλὰ δὲ στρεπτά καὶ ψέλια πολλοῦ δὲ ἄξιος ὁ ἀκινάκης. ἡ μακάριόν σε καὶ
 3 περίβλεπτον ἅπασι πεποίηκεν.” ἤδη δὲ μεθύων ὁ Μιθριδάτης, “Τί δὲ ταῦτά ἐστιν,” εἶπεν, “ὦ Σπαραμίζη; μειζόνων γὰρ ἐγὼ καὶ καλλιόνων βασιλεῖ τὴν ἡμέραν ἐκείνην ἄξιον ἐμαυτὸν παρ-
 4 ἔσχον.” καὶ ὁ Σπαραμίζης ἐπιμειδιάσας, “Φθόνος μὲν οὐδεὶς, ὦ Μιθριδάτα,” εἶπεν. “ἐπεὶ δὲ φασιν Ἕλληνες οἶνον καὶ ἀλήθειαν εἶναι, τί λαμπρόν, ὦ τᾶν, ἢ μέγα, πῖλον εὐρεῖν ἵππου περιρρυέντα καὶ τοῦτον ἀνενεγκεῖν;” ταῦτα δὲ οὐκ ἀγνοῶν τὸ ἀληθὲς ἔλεγεν, ἀλλὰ βουλόμενος ἐκκαλύψαι πρὸς τοὺς παρόντας ὑπεκίνει τὴν κουφότητα τοῦ ἀνθρώπου λάλου καὶ ἀκρατοῦς γεγονότος διὰ τὸν
 4 οἶνον. εἶπεν οὖν μὴ κατασχών. “Ἔμεις μὲν, ὅ τι βούλεσθε, πῖλους λέγετε καὶ φλυάρους· ἐγὼ δὲ ὑμῖν λέγω διαρρήδην ὑπὸ ταύτης ἀνηρῆσθαι Κῦρον τῆς χειρός. οὐ γὰρ ὡς Ἀρταγέρσης ἠκόντισα κενὸν καὶ μάταιον, ἀλλὰ τοῦ μὲν ὀφθαλμοῦ take him and rack him on the wheel for ten days, then to gouge out his eyes, and finally to drop molten brass into his ears until he died.

XV. Mithridates also came to a miserable end a little while after, owing to the same folly. For being invited to a banquet at which eunuchs of the king and of the queen-mother were present, he came decked out with raiment and gold which he had received from the king. And when the company were at their cups, the chief eunuch of Parysatis said to him: "Mithridates, how beautiful this raiment is which the king gave thee, and how beautiful the collars and bracelets! Costly, too, is thy scimitar. Verily the king has made thee happy in the admiring eyes of all men." Then Mithridates, now flushed with wine, replied: "Sparamizes, what do these things amount to? Surely my services to the king on that day were worthy of greater and more beautiful gifts." Here Sparamizes smiled at him and said: "There's no grudging them to thee, Mithridates; but since, according to the Greek maxim, there is truth in wine, what great or brilliant exploit was it, my good fellow, to find a horse's trappings that had slipped off, and bring them to the king?" In saying this, Sparamizes was not ignorant of the truth, but he wished to unveil Mithridates to the company, and therefore slyly stirred up his vanity when wine had made him talkative and robbed him of self-control. Accordingly, Mithridates threw away constraint and said: "Ye may talk as ye please about horse-trappings and such nonsense; but I declare to you explicitly that Cyrus was slain by this hand of mine; for I did not, like Artagerses, make a futile and an idle cast of spear, but I

5 μικρὸν ἡμαρτον, τοῦ δὲ κροτάφου τυχῶν καὶ διελά-σας κατέβαλον τὸν ἄνδρα· καὶ τέθνηκεν ὑπ' ἐκείνου τοῦ τραύματος.” οἱ μὲν οὖν ἄλλοι τὸ τέλος ἤδη τοῦ Μιθριδάτου καὶ τὴν κακοδαιμονίαν ὀρώντες εἰς τὴν γῆν ἔκνυσαν· ὁ δ' ἐστιῶν αὐτούς, “^Ω 1019 τᾶν,” ἔφη, “ Μιθριδάτα, πίνωμεν ἐν τῷ παρόντι καὶ ἐσθίωμεν τὸν βασιλέως δαίμονα προσκνυοῦντες, λόγους δὲ μείζους ἢ καθ' ἡμᾶς ἐάσωμεν.”

XVI. Ἐκ τούτου τῇ μὲν Παρυσάτιδι φράζει τὸν λόγον ὁ εὐνοῦχος, ἐκείνη δὲ βασιλεῖ· βασιλεὺς δὲ ἠγανάκτησεν ὥσπερ ἐξελεγχόμενος καὶ τὸ κάλλιστον καὶ ἡδιστον ὑπολλύων τῆς νίκης.
 ἐβούλετο γὰρ βαρβάρους ἅπαντας πεπεῖσθαι καὶ “Ἕλληνας ὡς ἐν ταῖς ἐξελάσεσι καὶ συμπλοκαῖς δούς καὶ λαβῶν πληγὴν ἐτρώθη μὲν αὐτός, ἔκττεινε δὲ ἐκείνον. ἐκέλευσεν οὖν τὸν Μιθριδάτην ὑποθανεῖν σκαφευθέντα.

- 2 Τὸ δὲ σκαφευθῆναι τοιοῦτόν ἐστι· σκάφας δύο πεποιημένας ἐφαρμόζειν ἀλλήλαις λαβύντες, εἰς τὴν ἐτέραν κατακλίνουσι τὸν κολαζόμενον ὑπτιον· εἶτα τὴν ἐτέραν ἐπάγοντες καὶ συναρμόζοντες, ὥστε τὴν κεφαλὴν καὶ τὰς χεῖρας ἔξω καὶ τοὺς πόδας ἀπολαμβάνεσθαι, τὸ δὲ ἄλλο σῶμα πᾶν ἀποκεκρῦφθαι, διδόασιν ἐσθίειν τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ, κἂν μὴ θέλη, προσβιάζονται κεντοῦντες τὰ ὄμματα· φαγόντι δὲ πιεῖν μέλι καὶ γάλα συγκεκραμένον ἐγγέουσιν εἰς τὸ στόμα καὶ κατὰ τοῦ προσώπου 3 καταχέουσιν. εἶτα πρὸς τὸν ἥλιον ἀεὶ στρέφου-σιν ἐναντία τὰ ὄμματα, καὶ μυῖων προσκαθημέ-narrowly missed his eye, struck him in the temple, pierced it, and brought the man down; and it was of that wound that he died." The rest of the company, then, who already saw the end of Mithridates and his hapless fate, bowed their faces towards the ground; and their host said: "My good Mithridates, let us eat and drink now, revering the good genius of the king, and let us waive discourse that is too weighty for us."

XVI. Afterwards the eunuch told the matter to Parysatis, and she to the king; and the king was incensed, as being openly convicted of falsehood, and likely to forfeit the fairest and most pleasing feature of his victory. For he wished that all Barbarians and all Greeks should be fully persuaded that when he and his brother had charged and grappled with each other, he had given and received a blow, being only wounded himself, but killing his brother. He therefore gave orders that Mithridates should be put to death by the torture of the boats.

Now, this torture of the boats is as follows. Two boats are taken, which are so made as to fit over one another closely; in one of these the victim is laid, flat upon his back; then the other is laid over the first and carefully adjusted, so that the victim's head, hands, and feet are left projecting, while the rest of his body is completely covered up. Then they give him food to eat, and if he refuse it, they force him to take it by pricking his eyes. After he has eaten, they give him a mixture of milk and honey to drink, pouring it into his mouth, and also deluge his face with it. Then they keep his eyes always turned towards the sun, and a swarm of flies settles down νων πλῆθος πᾶν ἀποκρύπτεται τὸ πρόσωπον. ἐντὸς δὲ ποιούντος ὅσα ποιεῖν ἀναγκαῖόν ἐστιν ἐσθίουσας ἀνθρώπους καὶ πίνοντας, εὐλαὶ καὶ σκώληκες ὑπὸ φθορᾶς καὶ σηπεδόνας ἐκ τοῦ περιττώματος ἀναζέουσιν, ὑφ' ὧν ἀναλίσκεται τὸ σῶμα διαδυομένων εἰς τὰ ἐντὸς. ὅταν γὰρ ἤδη φανερὸς ἢ τεθνηκῶς ὁ ἄνθρωπος, ἀφαιρεθείσης τῆς ἐπάνω σκάφης ὀρῶσι τὴν μὲν σάρκα κατεδεδεσμένην, περὶ δὲ τὰ σπλάγχνα τοιούτων θηρίων ἐσμούς ἐσθιόντων καὶ προσπεφυκότων. οὕτως ὁ Μιθριδάτης ἑπτακαίδεκα ἡμέρας φθειρόμενος μόλις ἀπέθανε.

XVII. Λοιπὸς δ' ἦν τῇ Παρυσάτιδι σκοπὸς ὁ τὴν κεφαλὴν ἀποτεμῶν καὶ τὴν χεῖρα τοῦ Κύρου Μασαβίτης, βασιλέως εὐνοῦχος. ὡς οὖν αὐτὸς οὐδεμίαν καθ' ἑαυτοῦ λαβὴν παρεδίδου, τοιούτον ἐπιβουλῆς τρόπον ἡ Παρύσατις συνέθηκεν. ἦν τὰ τε ἄλλα θυμόσοφος γυνὴ καὶ δεινὴ κυβεύειν· διὸ καὶ βασιλεῖ πρό τοῦ πολέμου πολλάκις συνεκύβευε· μετὰ δὲ τὸν πόλεμον διαλυθεῖσα πρὸς αὐτὸν οὐκ ἔφευγε τὰς φιλοφροσύνας, ἀλλὰ καὶ συνέπαιζε καὶ τῶν ἐρωτικῶν ἐκοινῶνει συμπράττουσα καὶ παροῦσα, καὶ ὅλως μικρότατον αὐτοῦ τῇ Στατεΐρα μετεδίδου χρῆσθαι καὶ συνεῖναι, μισοῦσά τε μάλιστα πάντων ἐκείνην καὶ μέγιστον αὐτῇ βουλομένη δύνασθαι. λαβοῦσα δὴ ποτε τὸν Ἄρτοξέρξην ὠρμημένον ἀλύειν σχολῆς οὔσης προῦκαλεῖτο περὶ χιλίων δαρεικῶν κυβεύσαι· καὶ κυβεύοντα περιεΐδε νικῆσαι καὶ τὸ χρυσίον ἀπέδωκε. προσποιουμένη δὲ ἀνιάσθαι καὶ φιλονει-upon his face and hides it completely. And since inside the boats he does what must needs be done when men eat and drink, worms and maggots seethe up from the corruption and rottenness of the excrement, devouring his body, and eating their way into his vitals. For when at last the man is clearly dead and the upper boat has been removed, his flesh is seen to have been consumed away, while about his entrails swarms of such animals as I have mentioned are clinging fast and eating. In this way Mithridates was slowly consumed for seventeen days, and at last died.

XVII. And now there was one mark left for the vengeance of Parysatis—the man who had cut off the head and right hand of Cyrus, Masabates, an eunuch of the king. Against this man, then, since he himself gave her no chance to get at him, Parysatis concocted a plot of the following sort. She was in general an ingenious woman, and greatly addicted to playing at dice. For this reason she frequently played at dice with the king before the war, and after the war was over and she had been reconciled with him, she did not try to avoid his friendly overtures, but actually joined in his diversions, and took part in his amours by her coöperation and presence, and, in a word, left very little of the king for Stateira's use and society. For she hated Stateira above all others, and wished to have the chief influence herself. So, one day, finding Artaxerxes trying to amuse himself in a vacant hour, she challenged him to play at dice for a thousand darics, allowed him to win the game, and paid the money down. Then, pretending to be chagrined at her loss and to seek revenge, she challenged the king to play

κείν ἐκέλευσεν αὐθις ἐξ ἀρχῆς περὶ εὐνούχου 4 διακυβεῦσαι· κάκεινος ὑπήκουσε. ποιησάμενοι δὲ συνθήκας πέντε μὲν ἐκύτερον ὑπεξελέσθαι τοὺς πιστοτάτους, ἐκ δὲ τῶν λοιπῶν ὃν ἂν ὁ νικῶν ἔλθῃται, δοῦναι τὸν ἡττώμενον, ἐπὶ τούτοις ἐκύ-βευον. σφόδρα δὴ γενομένη πρὸς τῷ πράγματι καὶ σπουδάσασα περὶ τὴν παιδιάν, εὖ δέ πως αὐτῇ καὶ τῶν κύβων πεσόντων, νικήσασα λαμβά-νει τὸν Μασαβίτην· οὐ γὰρ ἦν ἐν τοῖς ὑπεξηρη-5 μένοις. καὶ πρὶν ἐν ὑποψία γενέσθαι βασιλέα τοῦ πράγματος ἐγχειρίσασα τοῖς ἐπὶ τῶν τιμω-ριῶν προσέταξεν ἐκδεῖραι ζῶντα, καὶ τὸ μὲν σῶμα πλάγιον διὰ τριῶν σταυρῶν ἀναπῆξαι, τὸ δὲ δέρμα χωρὶς διαπατταλεῦσαι. γενομένων δὲ τούτων καὶ βασιλέως χαλεπῶς φέροντος καὶ παροξυνομένου πρὸς αὐτήν, εἰρωνευομένη μετὰ γέλωτος, “Ὡς ἡδύς,” ἔφασκεν, “εἰ καὶ μακίριος, εἰ χαλεπαίνεις διὰ γέροντα πονηρὸν εὐνούχον, ἐγὼ δὲ χιλίους ἐκ-6 κυβευθεῖσα δαρειακοὺς σιωπῶ καὶ στέργω.” βασιλεὺς μὲν οὖν ἐφ’ οἷς ἐξηπατήθη μεταμελόμενος ἡσυχίαν ἤγειν, ἡ δὲ Στάτειρα καὶ πρὸς τὰλλα φανερώς ἠναντιοῦτο καὶ τούτοις ἐδυσχέraitεν, ὡς ἄνδρας εὐνούχους καὶ πιστοὺς βασιλεῖ διὰ Κύρον ὡμῶς καὶ παρανόμως ἀπολλυούσης αὐτῆς.

XVIII. Ἐπεὶ δὲ Κλέαρχον καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους 1020 στρατηγοὺς Τισαφέρνης ἐξηπάτησε καὶ παρεσπόνδησεν ὄρκων γενομένων καὶ συλλαβῶν ἀνἐπεμφεν ἐν πέδαις δεδεμένους, δεθηθῆναί φησιν αὐτοῦ τὸν Κλέαρχον ὁ Κτησίας ὅπως κτενὸς εὐπορήσειε. τυχόντα δὲ καὶ τημελήσαντα τὴν κεφαλὴν ἡσθῆναι τε τῇ χρεῖα καὶ τὸν δακτύλιον

a second game, with an eunuch for the stake, and the king consented. They agreed that both might reserve five of their most trusty eunuchs, but that from the rest the loser must give whichever one the winner might select, and on these conditions played their game. Parysatis took the matter much to heart and was in great earnest with her playing, and since the dice also fell in her favour, she won the game, and selected Masabates; for he was not among those who had been excepted. And before the king suspected her design, she put the eunuch in the hands of the executioners, who were ordered to flay him alive, to set up his body slantwise on three stakes, and to nail up his skin to a fourth. This was done, and when the king was bitterly incensed at her, she said to him, with a mocking laugh: "What a blessed simpleton thou art, to be incensed on account of a wretched old eunuch, when I, who have diced away a thousand darics, accept my loss without a word." So the king, although sorry that he had been deceived, kept quiet in the matter, but Stateira openly opposed Parysatis in other things, and above all was angry with her because, for the sake of Cyrus, she was cruelly and lawlessly putting to death eunuchs and others who were faithful to the king.

XVIII. Now, when Clearchus and his fellow-generals had been completely deceived by Tissaphernes,¹ and, contrary to solemn oaths, had been seized and sent up to the king in chains, Ctesias tells us that he was asked by Clearchus to provide him with a comb. Clearchus got the comb and dressed his hair, and being pleased at the service

¹ Cf. Xenophon, Anab. ii. 5.

- αὐτῷ δοῦναι σύμβολον φιλίας πρὸς τοὺς ἐν Λακεδαίμονι συγγενεῖς καὶ οἰκείους· εἶναι δὲ γλυφὴν ἐν τῇ σφραγίδι Καρυάτιδας ὀρχουμένης.
- 2 τὰ δὲ πεμπόμενα σιτία τῷ Κλεάρχῳ τοὺς συνδεδεμένους στρατιώτας ἀφαιρεῖσθαι καὶ καταναλίσκειν, ὀλίγα τῷ Κλεάρχῳ δίδοντας ἀπ' αὐτῶν. ἰάσασθαι δὲ καὶ τοῦτό φησιν ὁ Κτησίας, πλείονα τῷ Κλεάρχῳ πέμπεσθαι διαπραξάμενος, ἰδίᾳ δὲ ἕτερα τοῖς στρατιώταις δίδοσθαι· καὶ ταῦτα μὲν ὑπουργῆσαι καὶ παρασχεῖν χάριτι καὶ γνώμῃ τῆς
- 3 Παρυσάτιδος. πεμπομένου δὲ καθ' ἡμέραν τῷ Κλεάρχῳ κωλῆνος ἐπὶ τοῖς σιτίοις, παρακαλεῖν αὐτὸν καὶ διδάσκειν ὡς χρὴ μικρὸν εἰς τὸ κρέας ἐμβαλόντα μαχαίριον ἀποκρύψαντα πέμψαι καὶ μὴ περιῖδειν ἐν τῇ βασιλέως ὠμότητι τὸ τέλος αὐτοῦ γενόμενον· αὐτὸς δὲ φοβούμενος μὴ ἐθελῆσαι. Βασιλέα δὲ τῇ μὲν μητρὶ παραιτουμένη μὴ κτείνειν τὸν Κλεάρχον ὁμολογῆσαι καὶ ὁμόσαι· πεισθέντα δὲ αὐθις ὑπὸ τῆς Στατεΐρας ἀποκτείνειν
- 4 πάντα πλὴν Μένωνος. ἐκ δὲ τούτου τὴν Παρύσατιν ἐπιβουλεῦσαι τῇ Στατεΐρα καὶ συσκευάσασθαι τὴν φαρμακείαν κατ' αὐτῆς, οὐκ εἰκότα λέγων. ἀλλὰ πολλὴν ἀλογίαν ἔχοντα τῆς αἰτίας, εἰ δεινὸν ἔργον οὕτως ἔδρασε καὶ παρεκινδύνευσε ἢ Παρύσατις διὰ Κλεάρχον, ἀνελεῖν τολμήσασα τὴν γινησίαν βασιλέως γυναῖκα καὶ τέκνων κοινω-
- 5 νὸν ἐπὶ βασιλείᾳ τρεφομένων. ἀλλὰ ταῦτα μὲν οὐκ ἄδηλον ὡς ἐπιτραγωδεῖται τῇ Κλεάρχου μνήμῃ. καὶ γὰρ ἀναιρεθέντων φησὶ τῶν στρατηγῶν τοὺς μὲν ἄλλους ὑπὸ κυνῶν σπαράττεσθαι rendered, gave Ctesias his ring as a token of friendship which he might show to his kindred and friends in Sparta; and the device in the seal was a group of dancing Caryatides. Moreover, as Ctesias says, the provisions sent to Clearchus were seized by the soldiers in captivity with him, who consumed them freely and gave only a small part of them to Clearchus. This hardship also Ctesias says he remedied, by getting more provisions sent to Clearchus, and a separate supply given to the soldiers; and these services he says he rendered and performed to please Parysatis, and at her suggestion. He says further that a fitch of bacon was sent to Clearchus every day to supplement his rations, and that Clearchus earnestly advised him that he ought to bury a small knife in the meat and send it to him thus hidden away, and not allow his fate to be determined by the cruelty of the king; but he was afraid, and would not consent to do this. The king, Ctesias says, at the solicitation of his mother, agreed and swore not to kill Clearchus; but he was won back again by Stateira, and put all the generals to death except Menon. It was because of this, Ctesias says, that Parysatis plotted against the life of Stateira and prepared the poison for her. But it is an unlikely story, and one that gives an absurd motive for her course, to say that Parysatis thus risked and wrought a dreadful deed because of Clearchus, and dared to kill the king's lawful wife, who was the mother by him of children reared for the throne. Nay, it is quite evident that he adds this sensational detail out of regard for the memory of Clearchus. For he says that after the generals had been put to death, the rest of them were torn by dogs and birds, but that καὶ ὀρνέων, τῷ δὲ Κλεάρχου νεκρῷ θύελλαν ἀνέμου γῆς θίνα πολλὴν φέρουσαν ἐπιχῶσαι καὶ ἐπικρῦσαι τὸ σῶμα· φοινίκων δὲ τινων διασπαρέντων ὀλίγῳ χρόνῳ θαυμαστὸν ἄλσος ἀναφῦναι καὶ κατασκιᾶσαι τὸν τόπον, ὥστε καὶ βασιλεῖ σφόδρα μεταμέλει, ὡς ἄνδρα θεοῖς φίλου ἀνηρηκότι τὸν Κλέαρχον.

XIX. Ἡ δ' οὖν Παρύσατις, μίσους τε πρὸς τὴν Στάτειραν ἐξ ἀρχῆς ὑποκειμένου καὶ ζηλοτυπίας, ὀρώσα τὴν μὲν αὐτῆς δύναμιν αἰδουμένου βασιλέως καὶ τιμῶντος οὖσαν, τὴν δ' ἐκείνης ἔρωτι καὶ πίστει βέβαιον καὶ ἰσχυρὰν, ἐπεβούλευσεν ὑπὲρ τῶν
 2 μεγίστων, ὡς ᾤετο, παραβαλλομένη. θεράπαιναν εἶχε πιστὴν καὶ δυναμένην παρ' αὐτῇ μέγιστον ὄνομα Γίγιν, ἣν ὁ μὲν Δείνων ὑπουργῆσαι τῇ φαρμακείᾳ φησί, συγγνώμην δὲ μόνον ἄκουσαν ὁ Κτησίας. τὸν δὲ δόντα τὸ φάρμακον οὗτος μὲν ὀνομάζει Βελιτάραν, ὁ δὲ Δείνων Μελάνταν. ἐκ δὲ τῆς πρόσθεν ὑποψίας καὶ διαφορᾶς ἀρξάμενοι πάλιν εἰς τὸ αὐτὸ φοιτᾶν καὶ συνδειπνεῖν ἀλλήλαις, ὅμως τῷ δεδιέναι καὶ φυλάττεσθαι τοῖς αὐτοῖς σιτίοις καὶ ἀπὸ τῶν αὐτῶν ἐχρῶντο.
 3 γίνεται δὲ μικρὸν ἐν Πέρσαις ὀρνίθιον, ᾧ περιπτώματος οὐδέν ἐστιν, ἀλλ' ὅλον διάπλεων πιμελῆς τὰ ἐντός· καὶ νομίζουσιν ἀνέμῳ καὶ δρόσῳ τρέφεσθαι τὸ ζῶον· ὀνομάζεται δὲ ῥυντάκης. τοῦτό φησιν ὁ Κτησίας μικρᾷ μαχαιρίδι κεχρισμένη τῷ φαρμάκῳ κατὰ θάτερα τὴν Παρύσατιν διαιροῦσαν ἐκμάξαι τῷ ἑτέρῳ μέρει τὸ φάρμακον· καὶ τὸ μὲν ἄχραντον καὶ καθαρὸν εἰς τὸ στόμα βαλοῦσαν in the case of Clearchus, a blast of wind carried a great mass of earth and heaped it in a mound which covered his body; upon this some dates fell here and there, and in a short time a wonderful grove of trees sprang up and overshadowed the place, so that even the king was sorely repentant, believing that in Clearchus he had killed a man whom the gods loved.

XIX. Parysatis, accordingly, who from the outset had a lurking hatred and jealousy of Stateira, saw that her own influence with the king was based on feelings of respect and honour, while that of Stateira was grounded fast and strong in love and confidence; she therefore plotted against her life and played for what she thought the highest stake. She had a trusted maidservant named Gigis, who had most influence with her and assisted her in preparing the poison, according to Deinon, although Ctesias says she was merely privy to the deed, and that against her will. The poison was actually given by a man named Belitaras, according to Ctesias; Deinon gives his name as Melantas. After a period of dissension and suspicion, the two women¹ had begun again to meet and eat with one another, although their mutual fear and caution led them to partake of the same dishes served by the same hands. Now, there is a little Persian bird which has no excrement, but is all full of fat inside; and the creature is thought to live upon air and dew; the name of it is "rhyntaces." It was a bird of this species, according to Ctesias, that Parysatis cut in two with a little knife smeared with poison on one side, thus wiping the poison off upon one part only of the bird; the undefiled and wholesome part she then put into her

¹ i.e., Parysatis and Stateira.

αὐτὴν ἐσθίειν, δοῦναι δὲ τῇ Στατεΐρα τὸ πεφαρμαγ-4 μένον· ὁ δὲ Δείνων οὐ τὴν Παρύσατιν, ἀλλὰ τὸν Μελάνταν τέμνοντα τῷ μαχαιρίῳ τὰ φαρμασσόμενα τῶν κρεῶν τιθέναι κατὰ τὴν Στάτειραν.
 ἀποθνήσκουσα δ' οὖν ἡ γυνὴ μετὰ πόνων μεγάλων 1021 καὶ σπαραγμῶν αὐτὴ τε συνησθάνετο τοῦ κακοῦ καὶ βασιλεῖ παρέσχεν ὑποψίαν κατὰ τῆς μητρός, 5 εἰδότετι τὸ θηριῶδες αὐτῆς καὶ δυσμεΐλικτον. ὅθεν εὐθύς ἐπὶ τὴν ζήτησιν ὀρμήσας τοὺς μὲν ὑπηρέτας καὶ τραπεζοκόμους τῆς μητρός συνέλαβε καὶ κατεστρέβλωσε, τὴν δὲ Γίγιν ἡ Παρύσατις πολὺν χρόνον εἶχεν οἴκοι μεθ' αὐτῆς καὶ βασιλέως ἐξαιτούντος οὐκ ἔδωκεν, ἀλλ' ὕστερον αὐτῆς δεηθείσης εἰς τὸν οἶκον ἀφεθῆναι νυκτός, αἰσθόμενος καὶ λόχον ὑφείς συνήρπασε καὶ κατέγνω
 6 θάνατον. ἀποθνήσκουσι δὲ οἱ φαρμακεῖς ἐν Πέρσαις κατὰ νόμον οὕτως· λίθος ἐστὶ πλατύς, ἐφ' οὗ τὴν κεφαλὴν καταθέντες αὐτῶν ἐτέρῳ λίθῳ παίουσι καὶ πιέζουσιν, ἄχρι οὗ συνθλάσωσι τὸ πρόσωπον καὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν. ἡ μὲν οὖν Γίγισ οὕτως ἀπέθανε, τὴν δὲ Παρύσατιν ὁ Ἄρτοξέρξης ἄλλο μὲν οὐδὲν οὔτε εἶπε κακὸν οὔτε ἐποίησεν, εἰς δὲ Βαβυλῶνα βουλομένην ἐξέπεμψε εἰπών, ἕως ἐκείνη περίεστιν αὐτὸς οὐκ ὄψεσθαι Βαβυλῶνα. τὰ μὲν κατὰ τὴν οἰκίαν οὕτως εἶχεν.

XX. Ἐπεὶ δὲ τοὺς Κύρῳ συναναβάντας Ἕλληνας σπουδάσας λαβεῖν ὁ βασιλεὺς οὐδὲν ἤττον ἢ Κύρου περιγενέσθαι καὶ τὴν βασιλείαν κατα-σχεῖν οὐκ ἔλαβεν, ἀλλὰ Κύρον τὸν ἡγεμόνα καὶ τοὺς αὐτῶν στρατηγούς ἀποβαλόντες ἐξ αὐτῶν μονορουχὶ τῶν βασιλείων ἐσώθησαν, ἐξελέγξαντες own mouth and ate, but gave to Stateira the poisoned part. Deinon, however, says it was not Parysatis, but Melantas who cut the bird with the knife and placed the flesh that was poisoned before Stateira. Be that as it may, the woman died, in convulsions and great suffering, and she comprehended the evil that had befallen her, and brought the king to suspect his mother, whose fierce and implacable nature he knew. The king, therefore, at once set out upon the inquest, arrested the servants and table-attendants of his mother, and put them on the rack. Gigis, however, Parysatis kept for a long time at home with her, and would not give her up at the king's demand. But after a while Gigis herself begged to be dismissed to her own home by night. The king learned of this, set an ambush for her, seized her, and condemned her to death. Now, the legal mode of death for poisoners in Persia is as follows. There is a broad stone, and on this the head of the culprit is placed; and then with another stone they smite and pound until they crush the face and head to pulp. It was in this manner, then, that Gigis died; but Parysatis was not further rebuked or harmed by Artaxerxes, except that he sent her off to Babylon, in accordance with her wish, saying that as long as she lived he himself would not see Babylon. Such was the state of the king's domestic affairs.

XX. Now, the king was no less eager to capture the Greeks who had come up with Cyrus than he had been to conquer Cyrus and preserve his throne. Nevertheless, he could not capture them, but though they had lost Cyrus their leader and their own commanders, they rescued themselves from his very palace, as one might say, thus proving clearly to the καὶ ἀποφήναντες τὰ Περσῶν καὶ βασιλέως πράγματα χρυσὸν ὄντα πολὺν καὶ τρυφὴν καὶ γυναικάς, τὰ δὲ ἄλλα τύφον καὶ ἀλαζονείαν, πᾶσα μὲν ἡ Ἑλλὰς ἐξεθάρρησε καὶ κατεφρόνησε τῶν βαρβάρων, Λακεδαιμονίοις δὲ καὶ δεινὸν ἐφαίνετο μὴ νῦν γε δουλείας ἐξελέσθαι τοὺς τὴν Ἀσίαν κατοικοῦντας Ἑλληνας μηδὲ παῦσαι προπηλακίζομένους ὑπ' αὐτῶν. πρότερον δὲ διὰ Θίμβρωνος, εἶτα διὰ Δερκυλλίδου πολεμοῦντες, οὐδὲν δὲ πράττοντες ἀξίολογον, Ἀγησιλάῳ τῷ βασιλεῖ τὸν πόλεμον ἐπέτρεψαν. ὁ δὲ περαιωθεὶς ναυσὶν εἰς Ἀσίαν εὐθύς ἦν ἐνεργὸς καὶ δόξαν εἶχε μεγάλην καὶ Τισαφέρην παραταξάμενος ἐνίκησε καὶ τὰς πόλεις ἀφίστη. τούτων δὲ γενομένων συμφρονήσας ὁ Ἄρτοξέρξης ὃν τρόπον αὐτοῖς ἐστὶ πολεμητέον, ἔπεμψε Τιμοκράτην τὸν Ῥόδιον εἰς τὴν Ἑλλάδα χρυσίον πολὺ κομίζοντα, δίδόναι καὶ διαφθείρειν τοὺς πλείστον ἐν ταῖς πόλεσι δυναμένους κελεύσας, καὶ πόλεμον Ἑλληνικὸν κινεῖν ἐπὶ τὴν Λακεδαίμονα. τοῦ δὲ Τιμοκράτους ταῦτα πράττοντος καὶ τῶν μεγίστων πόλεων συνισταμένων καὶ τῆς Πελοποννήσου διαταρατομένης, μετεπέμποντο τὸν Ἀγησίλαον ἐκ τῆς Ἀσίας οἱ ἄρχοντες. ὅτε δὲ καὶ φασιν αὐτὸν ἀπιόντα πρὸς τοὺς φίλους εἰπεῖν ὡς τρισμυρίοις τοξόταις ἐξελαύνοιτο τῆς Ἀσίας ὑπὸ βασιλέως· τὸ γὰρ Περσικὸν νόμισμα τοξότην ἐπίσημον εἶχεν.

XXI. Ἐξέβαλε δὲ καὶ τῆς θαλάττης Λακεδαιμονίους Κόνωνι τῷ Ἀθηναίῳ μετὰ Φαρναβάζου στρατηγῷ χρησάμενος. ὁ γὰρ Κόνων world that the empire of the Persians and their king abounded in gold and luxury and women, but in all else was an empty vaunt. Therefore all Greece took heart and despised the Barbarians, and the Lacedaemonians in particular thought it strange if now at least they could not rescue the Greeks that dwelt in Asia from servitude, and put a stop to their outrageous treatment at the hands of the Persians. The war they waged was at first conducted by Thimbron, and then by Dercyllidas, but since they accomplished nothing worthy of note, they at last put the conduct of the war in the hands of their king, Agesilaüs. He crossed over to Asia with a fleet, went to work at once, won great fame, defeated Tissaphernes in a pitched battle, and set the Greek cities in revolt. This being the case, Artaxerxes considered how he must carry on the war with Agesilaüs, and sent Timocreon the Rhodian into Greece with a great sum of money, bidding him use it for the corruption of the most influential men in the cities there, and for stirring up the Greeks to make war upon Sparta. Timocrates did as he was bidden, the most important cities conspired together against Sparta, Peloponnesus was in a turmoil, and the Spartan magistrates summoned Agesilaüs home from Asia. It was at this time, as we are told, and as he was going home, that Agesilaüs said to his friends; "The king has driven me out of Asia with thirty thousand archers"; for the Persian coin has the figure of an archer stamped upon it.¹

XXI. The king also expelled the Lacedaemonians from the sea, employing Conon the Athenian as his commander along with Pharnabazus. For Conon

¹ Cf. the Agesilaüs, xv. 6.

διέτριβε μὲν ἐν Κύπρῳ μετὰ τὴν ἐν Αἰγὸς ποταμοῖς ναυμαχίαν, οὐ τὴν ἀσφάλειαν ἀγαπῶν, ἀλλὰ τὴν τῶν πραγμάτων μεταβολήν, ὥσπερ ἐν πελάγει τροπήν, περιμένων. ὄρων δὲ καὶ τοὺς ἑαυτοῦ λογισμοὺς δυνάμει καὶ τὴν βασιλέως δύναμιν ἀνδρὸς ἔμφρονος δεομένην, ἔπεμψεν ἐπιστολὴν βασιλεῖ περὶ ᾧν διενοεῖτο. καὶ ταύτην ἐκέλευσε τὸν κομίζοντα μάλιστα μὲν ἀποδοῦναι διὰ Ζήνωνος τοῦ Κρητὸς ἢ Πολυκρίτου τοῦ Μενδαίου· τούτων δ' ἦν ὁ μὲν Ζήνων ὀρχηστής, ὁ δὲ Πολύκριτος ἰατρός· ἂν δὲ οὗτοι μὴ παρῶσι, διὰ Κτησίου τοῦ ἰατροῦ. λέγεται δὲ ὁ Κτησίας τὴν ἐπιστολὴν λαβὼν παρεγγράψαι τοῖς ὑπὸ τοῦ Κόνωνος ἐπεσταλμένοις ὅπως καὶ Κτησίαν ἀποστείλῃ πρὸς αὐτόν, ὡς ὠφέλιμον ὄντα ταῖς ἐπὶ θαλάσῃ πράξεσιν. ὁ δὲ Κτησίας αὐτὸν ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ βασιλέα φησὶ προσθεῖναι τὴν λειτουργίαν αὐτῷ ταύτην.

4 Ἄλλ' ἐπεὶ κρατήσας τῇ περὶ Κνίδον ναυμαχίᾳ 1022
 διὰ Φαρναβάζου καὶ Κόνωνος ἀφείλετο τὴν κατὰ θάλατταν ἀρχὴν Λακεδαιμονίους, ἐπέστρεψε πᾶσαν ὁμοῦ τὴν Ἑλλάδα πρὸς αὐτόν, ὥστε καὶ τὴν περιβόητον εἰρήνην βραβεῦσαι τοῖς Ἑλλησι passed the time at Cyprus, after the sea-fight at Aegospotami,¹ not satisfied with mere safety, but awaiting a reversal in the course of affairs, as he would a change of wind at sea. And seeing that his own plans needed a military force, and the king's force needed a sagacious leader, he wrote a letter to the king explaining his purposes. This letter he ordered the bearer, if possible, to give the king by the hand of Zeno the Cretan or Polycritus the Mendaeon (Zeno was a teacher of dancing, and Polycritus was a physician); but if these were not at court, by the hand of Ctesias the physician. And it is said that Ctesias, on receiving the letter, added to the suggestions which Conon made to the king a request to send Ctesias also to him, as likely to be of service in matters on the sea-coast. Ctesias, however, says that the king of his own accord conferred upon him this new duty.
 5 τὴν ἐπ' Ἀνταλκίδου προσαγορευομένην. ὁ δὲ Ἀνταλκίδας Σπαρτιάτης ἦν, Λέοντος υἱός, καὶ σπουδάσας βασιλεῖ διεπράξατο τὰς ἐν Ἀσίᾳ πόλεις Ἑλληνίδας ἀπάσας καὶ νήσους, ὅσαι προσκυροῦσιν Ἀσίᾳ, παρεῖναι Λακεδαιμονίους αὐτῷ κεκτηῖσθαι φόρων ὑποτελεῖς, εἰρήνης γενομένης τοῖς Ἑλλησιν, εἰ δεῖ τὴν τῆς Ἑλλάδος ὕβριν καὶ προδοσίαν εἰρήνην καλεῖν, ἧς πόλεμος οὐδεὶς ἀκλεέστερον ἤνεγκε τέλος τοῖς κρατηθεῖσι.

But after Artaxerxes, by the sea-fight which Pharnabazus and Conon won for him off Cnidus, had stripped the Lacedaemonians of their power on the sea, he brought the whole of Greece into dependence upon him, so that he dictated to the Greeks the celebrated peace called the Peace of Antalcidas.² Now Antalcidas was a Spartan, son of Leon, and acting in the interests of the king he induced the Lacedaemonians to surrender to the king all the Greek cities of Asia, and all the islands adjacent to Asia, to possess them on payment of tribute; and peace was thus established among the Greeks, if the mockery and betrayal of Greece can be called peace, a peace than which no war ever brought a more inglorious consummation to the defeated.

¹ 405 B.C. Cf. the Alcibiades xxxvii. 2.

² In 387 B.C. Cf. the Agesilaüs, xxiii. 1 ff.

XXII. Διὸ καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους Σπαρτιάτας αἰὲν βδελυττόμενος ὁ Ἄρτοξέρξης, καὶ νομίζων, ὡς φησι Δείνων, ἀνθρώπων ἀπάντων ἀναιδεστάτους εἶναι, τὸν Ἄνταλκίδα ὑπερηγάπησεν εἰς Πέρσας ἀναβάντα. καὶ ποτε λαβὼν ἓνα τῶν ἀνθινῶν στεφάνων καὶ βύψας εἰς μύρον τὸ πολυτελέστατον, ἀπὸ δείπνου ἔπεμψε τῷ Ἄνταλκίδᾳ· καὶ
 2 πάντες ἐθαύμασαν τὴν φιλοφροσύνην. ἦν δέ, ὡς ἔοικεν, ἐπιτήδειος οὗτος ἐντροφηθῆναι καὶ τοιοῦτον λαβεῖν στέφανον, ἐξορχησάμενος ἐν Πέρσαις τὸν Λεωνίδα καὶ τὸν Καλλικρατίδα. ὁ μὲν γὰρ Ἄγησίλαος, ὡς ἔοικε, πρὸς τὸν εἰπόντα, “Φεῦ τῆς Ἑλλάδος, ὅπου μηδίζουσιν ἡμῖν οἱ Λάκωνες,” “Οὐ μᾶλλον,” εἶπεν, “οἱ Μῆδοι λακωνίζουσι;” τοῦ δὲ ῥήματος ἢ κομψότης τὴν τοῦ πράγματος αἰσχύνῃ οὐκ ἀφείλεν, ἀλλὰ τὴν μὲν ἡγεμονίαν ἀπώλεσαν ἐν Λεύκτροις ἀγωνισάμενοι κακῶς, ἡ δὲ δόξα τῆς Σπάρτης προαπώλετο ταῖς ὁμολογίαις ἐκείναις.

3 Ἄχρι μὲν οὖν ἐπρώτευεν ἡ Σπάρτη, ξένον ἐποιεῖτο καὶ φίλον ὠνόμαζεν ἑαυτοῦ τὸν Ἄνταλκίδα· ἐπεὶ δὲ ἠττήθησαν ἐν Λεύκτροις, ταπεινὰ πράττοντες ἐδέοντο μὲν χρημάτων καὶ τὸν Ἄγησίλαον εἰς Αἴγυπτον ἐξέπεμψαν, ὁ δὲ Ἄνταλκίδας ἀνέβη πρὸς τὸν Ἄρτοξέρξην παρακαλῶν
 4 ἐπαρκέσαι τοῖς Λακεδαιμονίοις. ὁ δ' οὕτως ἐξημέλησε καὶ παρείδε καὶ ἀπέρριψεν αὐτόν, ὥστε καταβάντα καὶ χλευαζόμενον ὑπὸ τῶν ἐχθρῶν, φοβούμενον δὲ καὶ τοὺς ἐφόρους, ἀποκαρτερῆσαι. Ἄνέβη δὲ πρὸς τὸν βασιλέα καὶ Ἰσμηνίας ὁ

XXII. For this reason Artaxerxes, although he always held other Spartans in abomination, and considered them, as Deinon tells us, the most shameless of all mankind, showed great affection for Antalcidas when he came up to Persia. On one occasion he actually took a wreath of flowers, dipped it in the most costly ointment, and sent it to Antalcidas after supper; and all men wondered at the kindness.¹ But Antalcidas was a fit person, as it would seem, to be exquisitely treated and to receive such a wreath, now that he had danced away among the Persians the fair fame of Leonidas and Callicratidas. For Agesilaüs, as it would appear, when someone said to him: "Alas for Greece, now that the Spartans are medizing," replied, "Are not the Medes the rather spartanizing?" However, the wittiness of the speech could not remove the shame of the deed, and the Spartans lost their supremacy in the disastrous battle of Leuctra,² though the glory of Sparta had been lost before that by this treaty.

So long, then, as Sparta kept the first place in Greece, Artaxerxes treated Antalcidas as his guest and called him his friend; but after the Spartans had been defeated at Leuctra, they fell so low as to beg for money, and sent Agesilaüs to Egypt, while Antalcidas went up to Artaxerxes to ask him to supply the wants of the Lacedaemonians. The king, however, so neglected and slighted and rejected him that, when he came back home, being railed at by his enemies, and being in fear of the ephors, he starved himself to death.

Ismenias the Theban also, and Pelopidas, who had

¹ Cf. the Pelopidas, xxx. 4.

² In 371 B.C. Cf. the Agesilaüs, xxviii. 5.

Θηβαῖος καὶ Πελοπίδας ἤδη τὴν ἐν Λεύκτροις μάχην νενικηκώς. ἀλλ' οὗτος μὲν οὐδὲν αἰσχρὸν ἐποίησεν. Ἰσμηνίας δὲ προσκυνῆσαι κελευόμενος ἐξέβαλε πρὸ αὐτοῦ χαμᾶζε τὸν δακτύλιον, εἶτα κύψας ἀνείλετο καὶ παρέσχε δόξαν προσκυνούν-5 τος. Τιμαγόρα δὲ τῷ Ἀθηναίῳ διὰ Βηλούριδος τοῦ γραμματέως εἰσπέμψαντι γραμματίδιον ἀπόρρητον ἡσθεὶς μυρίους τε δαρεικοὺς ἔδωκε, καὶ γάλακτος βοείου δεομένῳ δι' ἀσθένειαν ὄγδοῆ-κοντα βουῦς ἀμέλγεσθαι παρηκολούθουν· ἔτι δὲ κλίνην καὶ στρώματα καὶ τοὺς στρωννύντας ἔπεμψεν, ὡς οὐ μεμαθηκότων Ἑλλήνων ὑποστρων-6 νύναι, καὶ φορεῖς τοὺς κομίζοντας αὐτὸν μέχρι θαλίσης μαλακῶς ἔχοντα. παρόντι δὲ δεῖπνον ἐπέμπετο λαμπρότατον, ὥστε καὶ τὸν ἀδελφὸν τοῦ βασιλέως, Ὀσάνην, “ὦ Τιμαγόρα,” φάναι, “μέννησο ταύτης τῆς τραπέζης· οὐ γὰρ ἐπὶ μικροῖς οὕτω σοι κεκοσμημένη παράκειται.” τοῦτο δ' ἦν ὄνειδισμὸς εἰς προδοσίαν μᾶλλον ἢ χάριτος ὑπόμνησις. Τιμαγόρου μὲν οὖν διὰ τὴν δωροδοκίαν Ἀθηναῖοι θάνατον κατέγνωσαν.

XXIII. Ὁ δὲ Ἀρτοξέρξης ἐν ἀντὶ πάντων ὧν ἐλύπει τοὺς Ἕλληνας εὐφραине, Τισαφέρην τὸν ἔχθιστον αὐτοῖς καὶ δυσμενέστατον ἀποκτείνας. ἀπέκτεινε δὲ ταῖς διαβολαῖς αὐτοῦ τῆς Παρυσάτιδος συνεπιθεμένης. οὐ γὰρ ἐνέμεινε τῇ ὀργῇ πολὺν χρόνον ὁ βασιλεὺς, ἀλλὰ διηλλάγη τῇ μητρὶ καὶ μετεπέμψατο, νουν μὲν ὄρων ἔχουσαν 1023

¹ Cf. the Pelopidas, xxx. 1-3.

² Cf. the Pelopidas, xxx. 6 f.

³ Cf. the Agesilaüs, x. 3 f.

just been victorious in the battle of Leuctra, went up to the king.¹ Pelopidas did nothing to disgrace himself; but Ismenias, when ordered to make the obeisance to the king, threw his ring down on the ground in front of him, and then stooped and picked it up, thus giving men to think that he was making the obeisance. With Timagoras the Athenian, however, who sent to him by his secretary, Beluris, a secret message in writing, the king was so pleased that he gave him ten thousand darics, and eighty milch cows to follow in his train because he was sick and required cow's milk; and besides, he sent him a couch, with bedding for it, and servants to make the bed (on the ground that the Greeks had not learned the art of making beds), and bearers to carry him down to the sea-coast, enfeebled as he was. Moreover, during his presence at court, he used to send him a most splendid supper, so that Ostanes, the brother of the king, said: "Timagoras, remember this table; it is no slight return which thou must make for such an array." Now this was a reproach for his treachery rather than a reminder of the king's favour. At any rate, for his venality, Timagoras was condemned to death by the Athenians.²

XXIII. But there was one thing by which Artaxerxes gladdened the hearts of the Greeks, in return for all the evils which he wrought them, and that was his putting Tissaphernes to death, their most hated and malicious enemy.³ And he put him to death in consequence of accusations against him which were seconded by Parysatis. For the king did not long persist in his wrath against his mother, but was reconciled with her and summoned her to court, since he saw that she had intellect and a lofty

καὶ φρόνημα βασιλείας ἄξιον, αἰτίας δὲ μηδεμιᾶς οὔσης ἐμποδῶν ἔτι δι' ἣν ὑπόψονται συνόντες 2 ἀλλήλοις ἢ λυπήσουσιν. ἐκ δὲ τούτου πάντα πρὸς χάριν ὑπουργοῦσα βασιλεῖ, καὶ τῷ πρὸς μηδὲν ὧν ἐκεῖνος ἔπραττε δυσκολαίνειν ἔχουσα τὸ δύνασθαι παρ' αὐτῷ καὶ τυγχάνειν ἀπάντων, ἥσθητο τῆς ἐτέρας τῶν θυγατέρων, Ἀτόσσης, ἐρώντος ἔρωτα δεινόν, ἐπικρυπτομένου δὲ δι' ἐκείνην οὐχ ἥκιστα καὶ κολάζοντος τὸ πάθος, ὡς φασιν ἔνιοι, καίτοι γεγενημένης ἤδη πρὸς τὴν 3 παρθένον ὀμιλίας αὐτῷ λαθραίας. ὡς οὖν ὑπό-πτευσεν ἡ Παρύσατις, τὴν παῖδα μᾶλλον ἢ πρότερον ἠσπάζετο, καὶ πρὸς τὸν Ἄρτοξέρξην ἐπήνει τό τε κάλλος αὐτῆς καὶ τὸ ἦθος, ὡς βασιλικῆς καὶ μεγαλοπρεποῦς. τέλος οὖν γῆμαι τὴν κόρην ἔπεισε καὶ γνησίαν ἀποδείξαι γυναῖκα, χαίρειν ἐάσαντα δόξας Ἑλλήνων καὶ νόμους, Πέρσαις δὲ νόμον αὐτὸν ὑπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ δικαιοτὴν αἰσχυρῶν 4 καὶ καλῶν ἀποδεδειγμένον. ἔνιοι μέντοι λέγουσιν, ὧν ἐστὶ καὶ Ἡρακλείδης ὁ Κυμαῖος, οὐ μίαν μόνον τῶν θυγατέρων, ἀλλὰ καὶ δευτέραν, Ἀμη-στριν, γῆμαι τὸν Ἄρτοξέρξην, περὶ ἧς ὀλίγον ὕστερον ἀπαγγελοῦμεν. τὴν δ' Ἀτοσσαν οὕτως ἠγάπησεν ὁ πατὴρ συνοικοῦσαν ὥστε ἀλφοῦ κατα-νεμηθέντος αὐτῆς τὸ σῶμα δυσχερᾶναι μὲν ἐπὶ
 5 τούτῳ μῆδ' ὅτιοῦν, εὐχόμενος δὲ περὶ αὐτῆς τῇ Ἡρᾷ προσκυνῆσαι μόνην θεῶν ἐκείνην, ταῖς χερσὶ τῆς γῆς ἀψάμενος, δῶρά τε τῇ θεῷ τοσαῦτα πέμψαι τοὺς σατράπας καὶ φίλους αὐτοῦ κελεύ-σαντος ὥστε τὰ μεταξὺ τοῦ ἱεροῦ καὶ τῶν βασιλείων ἑκκαίδεκα στάδια χρυσοῦ καὶ ἀργύρου καὶ πορφύρας καὶ ἵππων ἐμπλησθῆναι.

spirit worthy of a queen, and since there was no longer any ground for their suspecting and injuring one another if they were together. After this she consulted the king's pleasure in all things, and by approving of everything that he did, acquired influence with him and achieved all her ends. She perceived that the king was desperately in love with one of his two daughters, Atossa, and that, chiefly on his mother's account, he was trying to conceal and restrain his passion, although some say that he had already had secret intercourse with the girl. When, accordingly, Parysatis became suspicious of the matter, she showed the girl more affection than before, and would speak to Artaxerxes in praise of her beauty and her disposition, saying that she was truly royal and magnificent. At last, then, she persuaded the king to marry the girl and proclaim her his lawful wife, ignoring the opinions and laws of the Greeks, and regarding himself as appointed by Heaven to be a law unto the Persians and an arbitrator of good and evil. Some, however, say, and among them is Heracleides of Cymé, that Artaxerxes married, not one of his daughters only, but also a second, Amestris, of whom we shall speak a little later.¹ Atossa, however, was so beloved by her father as his consort, that when her body was covered with leprosy he was not offended at this in the least, but offered prayers to Hera in her behalf, making his obeisance and clutching the earth before this goddess as he did before no other; while his satraps and friends, at his command, sent the goddess so many gifts that the sixteen furlongs between her sanctuary and the royal palace were filled with gold and silver and purple and horses.

¹ Chap. xxvii. 4.

XXIV. Πόλεμον δὲ πρὸς μὲν Αἰγυπτίους διὰ Φαρναβάζου καὶ Ἰφικράτους ἐξενεγκὼν ἀπέτυχε, στασιασάντων ἐκείνων· ἐπὶ δὲ Καδουσίους αὐτὸς ἐστράτευσε τριάκοντα μυριάσι πεζῶν καὶ μυρίοις ἵππευσιν. ἐμβαλὼν δὲ εἰς χώραν τραχύτητι χαλεπὴν καὶ ὀμιχλώδη καὶ τῶν ἀπὸ σπόρου καρπῶν ἄγονον, ἀπίοις δὲ καὶ μήλοισι καὶ τοιούτοις ἄλλοις ἀκροδρύοις τρέφουσιν ἀνθρώπους πολεμικοὺς καὶ θυμοειδεῖς, ἔλαθε μεγάλαις ἀπορρίαισι καὶ κινδύνοις περιπεσῶν. οὐδὲν γὰρ ἐδώδιμον ἦν λαμβάνειν οὐδὲ ἔξωθεν ἐπεισάγεσθαι, τὰ δὲ ὑποζύγια μόνον κατέκοπτον, ὥστε ὄνου κεφαλὴν μόλις δραχμῶν ἐξήκοντα ὄνιον εἶναι. τὸ δὲ βασιλικὸν δεῖπνον ἐξελείφθη· καὶ τῶν ἵππων ὀλίγοι περιῆσαν ἔτι, τοὺς δὲ ἄλλους ἐσθίοντες κατανηλώκεσαν.

Ἐνταῦθα Τηρίβαζος, ἀνὴρ πολλάκις μὲν ἐν πρώτῃ δι' ἀνδραγαθίαν τάξει γενόμενος, πολλάκις δὲ ἀπορριφεὶς διὰ κουφότητα καὶ τότε ταπεινὰ πράττων καὶ περιορώμενος, ἔσωσε βασιλέα καὶ τὸν στρατόν. ὄντων γὰρ δυεῖν ἐν τοῖς Καδουσίοις βασιλέων, ἑκατέρου δὲ χωρὶς στρατοπεδεύοντος, ἐντυχὼν τῷ Ἀρτοξέρξῃ καὶ φράσας περὶ ὧν διενοεῖτο πράττειν, ἐβάδιζεν αὐτὸς πρὸς τὸν ἕτερον τῶν Καδουσίων, καὶ πρὸς τὸν ἕτερον κρύφα τὸν υἱὸν ἔπεμπεν. ἐξηπάτα δὲ ἑκάτερον ἑκάτερος, λέγων ὡς ἄτερος ἐπιπρεσβεύεται πρὸς τὸν Ἀρτοξέρξην φιλίαν μόνῳ πράττων ἑαυτῷ καὶ συμμαχίαν· οὐκοῦν, εἰ σωφρονεῖ, χρῆναι πρότερον ἐντυγχάνειν ἐκείνῳ, αὐτὸν δὲ συμπράξειν ἅπαντα. τούτοις ἐπέισθησαν ἀμφότεροι, καὶ φθάνειν ἀλλή-

XXIV. In the war which Pharnabazus and Iphicrates conducted for him against Egypt he was unsuccessful, owing to the dissensions of these commanders; against the Cadusians, therefore, he made an expedition in person, with three hundred thousand footmen and ten thousand horse. But the country which he penetrated was rough and hard to traverse, abounded in mists, and produced no grains, although its pears and apples and other such tree-fruits supported a warlike and courageous population. Unawares, therefore, he became involved in great distress and peril. For no food was to be got in the country or imported from outside, and they could only butcher their beasts of burden, so that an ass's head was scarcely to be bought for sixty drachmas. Moreover, the royal banquets were abandoned; and of their horses only a few were left, the rest having been consumed for food.

Here it was that Teribazus, a man whose bravery often set him in a leading place, but whose levity as often cast him down, so that at this time he was in disgrace and overlooked, saved the king and his army. For the Cadusians had two kings, and each of them encamped separately. So Teribazus, after an interview with Artaxerxes in which he told him what he purposed to do, went himself to one of the Cadusian kings, and sent his son secretly to the other. Each envoy, then, deceived his man, telling him that the other king was sending an embassy to Artaxerxes to secure friendship and alliance for himself alone: he should, therefore, if he were wise, have an interview with Artaxerxes before the other did, and he himself would help him all he could. Both kings were persuaded by this argument, and λους νομίζοντες ὁ μὲν τῷ Τηριβιάζῳ συνέπεμψε πρέσβεις, ὁ δὲ τῷ παιδί τοῦ Τηριβιάζου. διατριβῆς δὲ γενομένης ὑποψίαι καὶ διαβολαὶ κατὰ τοῦ Τηριβιάζου τῷ Ἄρτοξέρξῃ προσέπιπτον· αὐτὸς δὲ δυσθύμως εἶχε καὶ μετενόει πιστεύσας τῷ Τηριβιάζῳ, καὶ τοῖς φθονοῦσιν ἐγκαλεῖν παρέιχεν.

5 ἐπεὶ δὲ ἦκεν ὁ Τηρίβαζος, ἦκε δὲ καὶ ὁ υἱὸς αὐτοῦ τοὺς Καδουσίους ἄγοντες, ἐγένοντο δὲ σπονδαὶ πρὸς ἀμφοτέρους καὶ εἰρήνη, μέγας ὢν ὁ Τηρίβαζος ἤδη καὶ λαμπρὸς ἀνεξεύγνυε μετὰ τοῦ βασιλέως, ἐπιδεικνυμένου πᾶσαν τὴν δειλίαν καὶ τὴν μαλακίαν οὐ τρυφῆς καὶ πολυτελείας, ὥσπερ οἱ πολλοὶ νομίζουσιν, ἔκγονον οὖσαν, ἀλλὰ μοχθηρᾶς φύσεως καὶ ἀγεννοῦς καὶ δόξαις πονηραῖς

6 ἐπομένης. οὔτε γὰρ χρυσὸς οὔτε κᾶνδυσ οὔτε ὁ τῶν μυρίων καὶ δισχιλίων ταλάντων περικείμενος αἰὲ τῷ βασιλέως σώματι κόσμος ἐκείνον ἀπεκώλυε πονεῖν καὶ ταλαιπωρεῖν, ὥσπερ οἱ τυχόντες, ἀλλὰ τὴν τε φαρέτραν ἐνημμένος καὶ τὴν πέλτην φέρων αὐτὸς ἐβάδιζε πρῶτος ὁδοὺς ὄρεινὰς καὶ προσάντεις, ἀπολιπὼν τὸν ἵππον, ὥστε τοὺς ἄλλους πτεροῦσθαι καὶ συνεπικουφίζεσθαι τὴν ἐκείνου προθυμίαν καὶ ῥώμην ὀρώντας· καὶ γὰρ διακοσίων καὶ πλείονων σταδίων κατήνυεν ἡμέρας ἐκάστης πορείαν.

XXV. Ἐπεὶ δὲ εἰς σταθμὸν κατέβη βασιλικὸν παραδείσους ἔχοντα θαυμαστοὺς καὶ κεκοσμημένους διαπρεπῶς ἐν τῷ περίξ ἀδένδρῳ καὶ ψιλῷ χωρίῳ, κρύους ὄντος, ἐπέτρεψε τοῖς στρατιώταις ἐκ τοῦ παραδείσου ξυλίζεσθαι τὰ δένδρα κόπτοντας,

2 μῆτε πεύκης μῆτε κυπαρίττου φειδομένους. ὁκ-

each thinking that he was anticipating the other, one sent his envoys along with Teribazus, and the other with the son of Teribazus. But matters were delayed, and suspicions and calumnies against Teribazus came to the ears of Artaxerxes; he himself also was ill at ease, and repented him of having put confidence in Teribazus, and gave occasion to his rivals to malign him. But at last Teribazus came, and his son came too, both bringing their Cadusian envoys, and a peace was ratified with both kings; whereupon Teribazus, now a great and splendid personage, set out for home with the king. And the king now made it plain that cowardice and effeminacy are not always due to luxury and extravagance, as most people suppose, but to a base and ignoble nature under the sway of evil doctrines. For neither gold nor robe of state nor the twelve thousand talents' worth of adornment which always enveloped the person of the king prevented him from undergoing toils and hardships like an ordinary soldier; nay, with his quiver girt upon him and his shield on his arm he marched in person at the head of his troops, over precipitous mountain roads, abandoning his horse, so that the rest of the army had wings given them and felt their burdens lightened when they saw his ardour and vigour; for he made daily marches of two hundred furlongs and more.

XXV. At length he came down to a royal halting-place which had admirable parks in elaborate cultivation, although the region round about was bare and treeless; and since it was cold, he gave permission to his soldiers to cut the trees of the park for wood, sparing neither pine nor cypress. And when they νούντων δὲ καὶ φειδομένων διὰ τὰ κάλλη καὶ τὰ μεγέθη, λαβὼν πέλεκυν αὐτὸς ὅπερ ἦν μέγιστον καὶ κάλλιστον τῶν φυτῶν ἔκοψεν. ἐκ δὲ τούτου ξυλιζόμενοι καὶ πολλὰ πυρὰ ποιῶντες εὐμαρῶς ἐνυκτέρευσαν. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ πολλοὺς καὶ ἀγαθοὺς ἀποβαλὼν ἄνδρας, ἵππους δὲ ὁμοῦ τι πάντας 3 ἐπανήλθε. καὶ δόξας καταφρονεῖσθαι διὰ τὴν ἀτυχίαν καὶ τὴν ἀπότευξιν τῆς στρατείας, ἐν ὑποψίαις εἶχε τοὺς πρώτους· καὶ πολλοὺς μὲν ἀνῆρει δι' ὀργήν, πλείονας δὲ φοβούμενος. ἡ γὰρ δειλία φονικώτατόν ἐστιν ἐν ταῖς τυραννίσιν, ἴλεων δὲ καὶ πρᾶον καὶ ἀνύποπτον ἢ θαρραλεό-

 της. διὸ καὶ τῶν θηρίων τὰ ἀτιθάσεντα καὶ δυσεξημέρωτα ψοφοδεῆ καὶ δειλιά, τὰ δὲ γενναῖα πιστεύοντα μᾶλλον διὰ τὸ θαρρεῖν οὐ φεύγει τὰς φιλοφροσύνας.

XXVI. Ὁ δὲ Ἄρτοξέρξης ἤδη πρεσβύτερος ὢν ἠσθάνετο τοὺς υἱοὺς ἀγῶνα περὶ τῆς βασιλείας ἐν τοῖς φίλοις καὶ τοῖς δυνατοῖς ἔχοντας. οἱ μὲν γὰρ εὐγνώμονες ἠξίουσαν, ὡς ἔλαβεν αὐτός, οὕτως ἀπολιπεῖν πρεσβεῖα Δαρείῳ τὴν ἐρχήν. ὁ δὲ νεώτατος Ὀχὸς ὀξύς ὢν καὶ βίαιος εἶχε μὲν καὶ τῶν περὶ τὸ βασίλειον οὐκ ὀλίγους σπουδαστάς, ἠλπιζε δὲ μάλιστα κατεργάσεσθαι τὸν πατέρα
 2 διὰ τῆς Ἀτόσσης. ἐκείνην γὰρ ἐθεράπευεν ὡς γαμησομένην καὶ συμβασιλεύσουσαν αὐτῷ μετὰ τὴν τοῦ πατρὸς τελευτήν. ἦν δὲ λόγος ὅτι καὶ ζῶντος ἐλάνθανεν αὐτῇ πλησιάζων. ἀλλὰ τοῦτο 188

hesitated and were inclined to spare the trees on account of their great size and beauty, he took an axe himself and cut down the largest and most beautiful tree. After this the men provided themselves with wood, and making many fires, passed the night in comfort. Nevertheless, he lost many and brave men, and almost all his horses before he reached home. And now, thinking that his subjects despised him because of the disastrous failure of his expedition, he was suspicious of his chief men; many of these he put to death in anger, and more out of fear. For it is cowardly fear in a tyrant that leads to most bloodshed; but bold confidence makes him gracious and mild and unsuspecting. So also among wild beasts, those that are refractory and hardest to tame are timorous and fearful, whereas the nobler sorts are led by their courage to put more confidence in men, and do not reject friendly advances.

XXVI. But Artaxerxes, being now advanced in years, perceived that his sons were forming rival parties among his friends and chief men with reference to the royal succession. For the conservatives thought it right that, as he himself had received the royal power by virtue of seniority, in like manner he should leave it to Darius. But his youngest son, Ochus, who was of an impetuous and violent disposition, not only had many adherents among the courtiers, but hoped for most success in winning over his father through the aid of Atossa. For he sought to gain Atossa's favour by promising that she should be his wife and share the throne with him after the death of his father. And there was a report that even while his father was alive Ochus had secret relations with Atossa. But Artaxerxes μὲν ἠγνόησεν ὁ Ἄρτοξέρξης· ταχὺ δὲ βουλόμενος ἐκκροῦσαι τῆς ἐλπίδος τὸν Ὀχον, ὅπως μὴ τὰ αὐτὰ Κύρω τολμήσαντος αὐτοῦ πόλεμοι καὶ ἀγῶνες αὐτῆς καταλάβωσι τὴν βασιλείαν, ἀνέ-δειξε τὸν Δαρεῖον βασιλέα πεντηκοστὸν ἔτος γεγονότα, καὶ τὴν καλουμένην κίταριν ὀρθὴν 3 φέρειν ἔδωκε. νόμου δὲ ὄντος ἐν Πέρσαις δωρεὰν αἰτεῖν τὸν ἀναδειχθέντα καὶ διδόναι τὸν ἀναδείξαντα πᾶν τὸ αἰτηθέν, ἄνπερ ἢ δυνατόν, ἤτησεν Ἄσπασίαν ὁ Δαρεῖος τὴν μάλιστα σπουδασθεῖσαν ὑπὸ Κύρου, τότε δὲ τῷ βασιλεῖ παλλακευομένην. ἦν δὲ Φωκαῖς τὸ γένος ἀπ' Ἰωνίας, 4 ἐλευθέρων γονέων καὶ τεθραμμένη κοσμίως. ἐπεὶ δὲ Κύρου δειπνοῦντος εἰσήχθη μεθ' ἐτέρων γυναικῶν, αἱ μὲν ἄλλαι παρακαθεζόμεναι προσπαίζοντος αὐτοῦ καὶ ἀπτομένου καὶ σκώπτουτος οὐκ ἀηδῶς ἐνεδέχοντο τὰς φιλοφροσύνας, ἐκείνη δὲ παρὰ τὴν κλίνην εἰστήκει σιωπῇ καὶ Κύρου καλοῦντος οὐχ ὑπήκουε· βουλομένων δὲ προσ-ἀγειν τῶν κατευναστῶν, “Οἰμώξεται μέντοι τούτων,” εἶπεν, “ὅς ἂν ἐμοὶ προσαγάγῃ τὰς χεῖρας.”

 ἔδοξεν οὖν ἄχαρις τοῖς παροῦσιν εἶναι καὶ ἄγροι-5 κος. ὁ δὲ Κύρος ἠσθεὶς ἐγέλασε, καὶ εἶπε πρὸς τὸν ἀγαγόντα τὰς γυναῖκας, “Ἄρα ἤδη συνορᾷς ὅτι μοι μόνην ταύτην ἐλευθέραν καὶ ἀδιάφθορον ἦκεις κομίζων;” ἐκ δὲ τούτου προσεῖχεν ἀρξάμενος αὐτῇ, καὶ μάλιστα πασῶν ἔστερξε καὶ σοφὴν προσηγόρευσεν. ἐάλω δὲ Κύρου πεσόντος ἐν τῇ μάχῃ καὶ διαρπαζομένου τοῦ στρατοπέδου.
 XXVII. Ταύτην ὁ Δαρεῖος αἰτήσας ἠμίασε τὸν

1025

¹ Cf. Xenophon, Anab. i. 10. 2; Plutarch, Pericles, xxiv. 7.

was ignorant of this ; and wishing to shatter at once the hopes of Ochus, that he might not venture upon the same course as Cyrus and so involve the kingdom anew in wars and contests, he proclaimed Dareius, then fifty years of age, his successor to the throne, and gave him permission to wear the upright "kitanis," as the tiara was called. Now, there was a custom among the Persians that the one appointed to the royal succession should ask a boon, and that the one who appointed him should give whatever was asked, if it was within his power. Accordingly, Dareius asked for Aspasia, who had been the special favourite of Cyrus, and was then a concubine of the king. She was a native of Phocaea, in Ionia, born of free parents, and fittingly educated. Once when Cyrus was at supper she was led in to him along with other women. The rest of the women took the seats given them, and when Cyrus proceeded to sport and dally and jest with them, showed no displeasure at his friendly advances. But Aspasia stood by her couch in silence, and would not obey when Cyrus called her ; and when his chamberlains would have led her to him, she said : " Verily, whosoever lays his hands upon me shall rue the day." The guests therefore thought her a graceless and rude creature. But Cyrus was delighted, and laughed, and said to the man who had brought the women : " Dost thou not see at once that this is the only free and unperverted woman thou hast brought me ?" From this time on he was devoted to her, and loved her above all women, and called her The Wise. She was taken prisoner when Cyrus fell in the battle at Cunaxa and his camp was plundered.¹

XXVII. This was the woman for whom Dareius

- πατέρα· δύσζηλα γὰρ τὰ βαρβαρικὰ δεινῶς περὶ τὸ ἀκόλαστον, ὥστε μὴ μόνον τὸν προσελθόντα καὶ θιγόντα παλλακῆς βασιλέως, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸν ἐν πορείᾳ προεξελθόντα καὶ διεξελύσαντα τὰς ἀμάξας ἐφ' αἷς κομίζονται, θανάτῳ κολάζεσθαι.
- 2 καίτοι τὴν μὲν Ἄτοσσαν εἶχεν ἔρωτι ποιησάμενος γυναῖκα παρὰ τὸν νόμον, ἐξήκοντα δὲ καὶ τριακόσiai παρετρέφοντο κάλλει διαφέρουσαι παλλακίδες. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ καὶ αἰτηθεὶς ἐκείνην ἐλευθέραν ἔφησεν εἶναι καὶ λαμβάνειν ἐκέλευσε βουλομένην, ἄκουσαν δὲ μὴ βιάζεσθαι. μεταπεμφθείσης δὲ τῆς Ἀσπασίας καὶ παρ' ἐλπίδας τοῦ βασιλέως ἐλομένης τὸν Δαρεῖον, ἔδωκε μὲν ὑπ' ἀνάγκης τοῦ νόμου, δούς δὲ ὀλίγον ὕστερον
- 3 ἀφείλετο. τῆς γὰρ Ἀρτέμιδος τῆς ἐν Ἐκβατάνοισι, ἣν Ἀναῖτιν καλοῦσιν, ἰέρειαν ἀνέδειξεν αὐτήν, ὅπως ἀγνή διάγη τὸν ἐπίλοιπον βίον, οἴομενος οὐ χαλεπὴν, ἀλλὰ καὶ μετρίαν τινὰ καὶ παιδιᾷ μεμιγμένην ταύτην λήψεσθαι δίκην παρὰ τοῦ παιδός. ὁ δ' ἠνεγκεν οὐ μετρίως, εἶτ' ἔρωτι τῆς Ἀσπασίας περιπαθῆς γεγονώς, εἶτε ὑβρίσθαι καὶ κεχλευάσθαι νομίζων ὑπὸ τοῦ πατρός.
- 4 Αἰσθόμενος δ' αὐτὸν οὕτως ἔχοντα Τηρίβαζος ἔτι μᾶλλον ἐξετράχυνεν, ἐν τοῖς ἐκείνου σινιδῶν τὰ καθ' αὐτόν. ἦν δὲ τοιαῦτα. πλειόνων οὐσῶν βασιλεῖ θυγατέρων ὠμολόγησε Φαριναβάζῳ μὲν Ἀπάμαν δώσειν γυναῖκα, Ῥοδογούνην δὲ Ὀρόντη, asked, and he gave offence thereby to his father ; for the Barbarian folk are terribly jealous in all that pertains to the pleasures of love, so that it is death for a man, not only to come up and touch one of the royal concubines, but even in journeying to go along past the waggons on which they are conveyed. And yet there was Atossa, whom the king passionately loved and had made his wife contrary to the law, and he kept three hundred and sixty concubines also, who were of surpassing beauty. However, since he had been asked for Aspasia, he said that she was a free woman, and bade his son take her if she was willing, but not to constrain her against her wishes. So Aspasia was summoned, and contrary to the hopes of the king, chose Dareius. And the king gave her to Dareius under constraint of the custom that prevailed, but a little while after he had given her, he took her away again. That is, he appointed her a priestess of the Artemis of Ecbatana, who bears the name of Anaitis, in order that she might remain chaste for the rest of her life, thinking that in this way he would inflict a punishment upon his son which was not grievous, but actually quite within bounds and tintured with pleasantry. The resentment of Dareius, however, knew no bounds, either because he was deeply stirred by his passion for Aspasia, or because he thought that he had been insulted and mocked by his father.

And now Teribazus, who became aware of the prince's feelings, sought to embitter him still more, finding in his grievance a counterpart of his own, which was as follows. The king had several daughters, and promised to give Apama in marriage to Pharnabazus, Rhodogune to Orontes, and Amestris

Τηριβάζω δὲ Ἀμηστριν. καὶ τοῖς μὲν ἄλλοις ἔδωκε, Τηρίβαζον δὲ ἐψεύσατο γήμας αὐτὸς τὴν Ἀμηστριν, αὐτ' ἐκείνης δὲ τῷ Τηριβάζω τὴν
 5 νεωτάτην Ἀτοσσαν ἐνεγύησεν. ἐπεὶ δὲ καὶ ταύτην ἐρασθεὶς ἔγημεν, ὡς εἴρηται, παντάπασι δυσμενῶς πρὸς αὐτὸν ὁ Τηρίβαζος ἔσχεν, οὐδὲ ἄλλως στάσιμος ὢν τὸ ἦθος, ἀλλ' ἀνώμαλος καὶ παράφορος. διὸ καὶ νῦν μὲν εὐημερῶν ὅμοια τοῖς πρώτοις, νῦν δὲ προσκρούων καὶ σκορακιζόμενος οὐδεμίαν ἔφερεν ἐμμελῶς μεταβολήν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τιμώμενος ἦν ἐπαχθῆς ὑπὸ χαννότητος, καὶ τὸ κολουόμενον οὐ ταπεινὸν οὐδὲ ἡσυχαιῶν, ἀλλὰ τραχὺ καὶ ἀγέρωχον εἶχε.

XXVIII. Πῦρ οὖν ἐπὶ πῦρ ἐγένετο τῷ νεανίσκῳ προσκείμενος ὁ Τηρίβαζος αἰεὶ καὶ λέγων ὡς οὐδὲν οὐνιησιν ἢ κίταρις ἐστῶσα περὶ τῆ κεφαλῇ τοὺς ὑφ' αὐτῶν μὴ ζητοῦντας ὀρθοῦσθαι τοῖς πράγμασι, κάκεινον ἀβέλτερα φρονεῖν, εἰ, τοῦ μὲν ἀδελφοῦ διὰ τῆς γυναικωνίτιδος ἐνδυομένου τοῖς πράγμασι, τοῦ δὲ πατρὸς οὕτως ἐμπληκτον ἦθος καὶ ἀβέβαιον ἔχοντος, οἶεται βέβαιον αὐτῷ τὴν
 2 διαδοχὴν ὑπάρχειν. ὁ γὰρ Ἑλληνικοῦ χάριν γυναιῶν τὸν ἄψευστον ἐν Πέρσαις ψευδάμενος νόμον οὐ δὴ που πιστός ἐστι τὰς περὶ τῶν μεγίστων ὁμολογίας ἐμπεδώσειν. οὐ ταῦτ' οὐδ' εἶναι τὸ μὴ τυχεῖν Ὀχῶ κάκεινῳ τὸ στέρεσθαι τῆς βασιλείας. Ὀχον μὲν γὰρ οὐδένα κωλύσειν ἰδιώτην βιοῦν μακαρίως, ἐκείνῳ δ' ἀποδεδειγμένῳ βασιλεῖ βασιλεύειν ἀνάγκη ἢ μηδὲ ζῆν εἶναι.

¹ Chap. xxiii. 2 ff.

² Cf. chap. xxvi. 2.

to Teribazus. He kept his promise to the other two, but broke his word to Teribazus and married Amestris himself, betrothing in her stead to Teribazus his youngest daughter, Atossa. But soon he fell enamoured of Atossa also and married her, as has been said,¹ and then Teribazus became a downright foe to him. Teribazus was at no time of a stable disposition, but uneven and precipitate. And so, when he would be at one time in highest favour, and at another would find himself in disgrace and spurned aside, he could not bear either change of fortune with equanimity, but if he was held in honour his vanity made him offensive, and when he fell from favour he was not humble or quiet, but harsh and ferocious.

XXVIII. Accordingly, it was adding fire to fire when Teribazus attached himself to the young prince and was forever telling him that the tiara standing upright on the head² was of no use to those who did not seek by their own efforts to stand upright in affairs of state, and that he was very foolish if, when his brother was insinuating himself into affairs of state by way of the harem, and his father was of a nature so fickle and insecure, he could suppose that the succession to the throne was securely his. Surely he whom regard for a Greek courtesan had led to violate the inviolable custom of the Persians, could not be trusted to abide by his agreements in the most important matters. Moreover, he said it was not the same thing for Ochus not to get the kingdom and for Dareius to be deprived of it; for no one would hinder Ochus from living happily in private station, but Dareius had been declared king, and must needs be king or not live at all.

3 Καθόλου μὲν οὖν ἴσως, τὸ Σοφόκλειον, ταχεῖα πειθῶ τῶν κακῶν ὁδοιπορεῖ.

λεία γάρ τις ἢ πορεία καὶ κατάντης ἐπὶ τὸ βουλόμενον. βούλονται δὲ οἱ πλείστοι τὰ φαῦλα δι' ἀπειρίαν τῶν καλῶν καὶ ἄγνοιαν· οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ τὸ μέγεθος τὸ τῆς ἀρχῆς καὶ τὸ πρὸς τὸν Ὀχον τοῦ Δαρείου δέος ὑπόθεσιν τῷ Τηριβάζῳ παρεῖχε· Κυπρογένεια δ' οὐ πάμπαν ἀναίτιος, ἢ τῆς Ἀσπασίας ἀφαίρεσις.

1026

XXIX. Ἐπέδωκεν οὖν ἑαυτὸν τῷ Τηριβάζῳ καὶ πολλῶν ἤδη συνισταμένων, εὐνούχος ἐδήλωσε τῷ βασιλεῖ τὴν ἐπιβουλήν καὶ τὸν τρόπον, εἰδὼς ἀκριβῶς ὅτι νυκτὸς ἐγνώκασιν ἐν τῷ θαλάμῳ κατακείμενον ἀναιρεῖν αὐτὸν ἐπεισελθόντες. ἀκού-σαντι δὲ τῷ Ἀρτοξέρξῃ καὶ τὸ παριδεῖν κίνδυνον τηλικούτου, ἀμελήσαντα τῆς διαβολῆς, δεινὸν ἐδόκει, καὶ τὸ πιστεῦσαι μηδεὶς ἐλέγχου γενο-μένου δεινότερον. οὕτως οὖν ἐποίει· τὸν μὲν εὐνούχον ἐκείνοις ἐκέλευσε παρεῖναι καὶ παρακολουθεῖν, αὐτὸς δὲ τοῦ θαλάμου τὸν ὄπισθεν τῆς κλίνης τοῖχον ἐκκόψας καὶ θυρώσας κατεκάλυψε ἀυλαία τὰς θύρας. ἐνστάσης δὲ τῆς ὄρας καὶ φράσαντος τοῦ εὐνούχου τὸν καιρὸν, ἐπὶ τῆς κλίνης ὑπέμεινε καὶ οὐκ ἐξανέστη πρότερον ἢ τῶν ἐπ' αὐτὸν ἐρχομένων τὰ πρόσωπα 3 κατιδεῖν καὶ γνωρίσαι σαφῶς ἕκαστον. ὡς δὲ εἶδεν ἐσπασμένους τὰ ἐγχειρίδια καὶ προσφερομένους, ταχὺ τὴν ἀυλαίαν ὑπολαβὼν ἀνεχώρησεν

¹ From an unknown play, Nauck, *Trag. Græc. Frag.*², p. 315.

Now, perhaps it is generally true, as Sophocles says,¹ that—for smooth and downward sloping is the passage to what a man desires, and most men desire the bad through inexperience and ignorance of the good. However, it was the greatness of the empire and the fear which Darius felt towards Ochus that paved the way for Teribazus although, since Aspasia had been taken away, the Cyprus-born goddess of love was not altogether without influence in the case.

“Swiftly doth persuasion unto evil conduct make its way” ;

XXIX. Accordingly, Darius put himself in the hands of Teribazus ; and presently, when many were in the conspiracy, an eunuch made known to the king the plot and the manner of it, having accurate knowledge that the conspirators had resolved to enter the king's chamber by night and kill him in his bed. When Artaxerxes heard the eunuch's story, he thought it a grave matter to neglect the information and ignore so great a peril, and a graver still to believe it without any proof. He therefore acted on this wise. He charged the eunuch to attend closely upon the conspirators ; meanwhile he himself cut away the wall of his chamber behind the bed, put a doorway there, and covered the door with a hanging. Then, when the appointed hour was at hand and the eunuch told him the exact time, he kept his bed and did not rise from it until he saw the faces of his assailants and recognised each man clearly. But when he saw them advancing upon him with drawn swords, he quickly drew aside the εἰς τὸ ἐντὸς οἶκημα καὶ τὰς θύρας ἐπήρραξε κράζων. ὄφθέντες οὖν οἱ σφαγεῖς ὑπ' αὐτοῦ, πράξαντες δὲ μηθέν, ἀπεχώρουν φυγῇ διὰ θυρῶν,

 καὶ τοὺς περὶ τὸν Τηρίβαζον ἐκέλευον ἀποχωρεῖν 4 ὡς φανεροὺς γεγονότας. οἱ μὲν οὖν ἄλλοι διαλυθέντες ἔφυγον· ὁ δὲ Τηρίβαζος συλλαμβανόμενος πολλοὺς ἀπέκτεινε τῶν βασιλέως δορυφόρων καὶ μόγις ἀκουτίῳ πληγῆς πόρρωθεν ἔπεσε. τῷ δὲ Δαρείῳ μετὰ τῶν τέκνων ἀναχθέντι καθίσας τοὺς βασιλείους δικαστάς, οὐ παρῶν αὐτός, ἀλλ' ἐτέρων κατηγορησάντων, ἐκέλευσεν ὑπηρέτας τὴν ἐκάστου γραφασμένους ἀπόφασιν ὡς αὐτὸν ἐπανε-5 νεγκεῖν. ἀποφνημαμένων δὲ πάντων ὁμοίως καὶ καταγνόντων τοῦ Δαρείου θάνατον, οἱ μὲν ὑπηρέται συλλαβόντες αὐτὸν εἰς οἶκημα πλησίον ἀπ-ἤγαγον, ὁ δὲ δῆμιος κληθεὶς ἦκε μὲν ξυρὸν ἔχων, ᾧ τὰς κεφαλὰς ἀποτέμνουσι τῶν κολαζομένων, ἰδὼν δὲ τὸν Δαρεῖον ἐξεπλήγη καὶ ἀνεχώρει πρὸς τὰς θύρας ἀποβλέπων, ὧς οὐ δυνησόμενος οὐδὲ 6 τολμήσων αὐτόχειρ γενέσθαι βασιλέως. ἔξωθεν δὲ τῶν δικαστῶν ἀπειλούντων καὶ διακελευομένων ἀναστρέψας καὶ τῇ ἐτέρα χειρὶ δραξάμενος τῆς κόμης αὐτοῦ καὶ καταγαγὼν ἀπέτεμε τῷ ξυρῷ τὸν τράχηλον.

Ἐνιοὶ δὲ φασὶ τὴν κρίσιν γενέσθαι βασιλέως αὐτοῦ παρόντος, τὸν δὲ Δαρεῖον, ὡς κατελαμβάνετο τοῖς ἐλέγχοις, ἐπὶ στόμα πεσόντα δεῖσθαι 7 καὶ ἰκετεύειν· τὸν δὲ ὑπ' ὀργῆς ἀναστάντα καὶ σπασάμενον τὸν ἀκινάκην τύπτειν ἕως ἀπέκτεινεν· hanging, retired into the inner chamber, closed the door with a slam, and raised a cry. The murderers, accordingly, having been seen by the king, and having accomplished nothing, fled back through the door by which they had come, and told Teribazus and his friends to be off since their plot was known. The rest, then, were dispersed and fled; but Teribazus slew many of the king's guards as they sought to arrest him, and at last was smitten by a spear at long range, and fell. Dareius, together with his children, was brought to the king, who consigned him to the royal judges for trial. The king was not present in person at the trial, but others brought in the indictment. However, the king ordered clerks to take down in writing the opinion of each judge and bring them all to him. All the judges were of one opinion and condemned Dareius to death, whereupon the servants of the king seized him and led him away into a chamber near by, whither the executioner was summoned. The executioner came, with a sharp knife in his hand, wherewith the heads of condemned persons are cut off; but when he saw Dareius, he was confounded, and retired towards the door with averted gaze, declaring that he could not and would not take the life of a king. But since the judges outside the door plied him with threats and commands, he turned back, and with one hand clutching Dareius by the hair, dragged him to the ground, and cut off his head with the knife.

Some say, however, that the trial was held in the presence of the king, and that Dareius, when he was overwhelmed by the proofs, fell upon his face and begged and sued for mercy; but Artaxerxes rose up in anger, drew his scimitar, and smote him till he εἶτα εἰς τὴν αὐλὴν προελθόντα τὸν Ἴλιον προσκυνῆσαι καὶ εἰπεῖν· “Εὐφραίνεσθε ἀπίοντες, ὦ Πέρσαι, καὶ λέγετε τοῖς ἄλλοις ὅτι τοῖς ἄθεσμα καὶ παράνομα διανοηθεῖσιν ὁ μέγας Ὀρομάξης δίκην ἐπιτέθεικεν.”

XXX. Ἡ μὲν οὖν ἐπιβουλή τοιοῦτον ἔσχε τέλος. ὁ δὲ Ὀχος ἤδη μὲν ἦν ταῖς ἐλπίσι λαμ-πρὸς ὑπὸ τῆς Ἀτόσσης ἐπαιρόμενος, ἔτι δὲ ἐφοβεῖτο τῶν μὲν γνησίων τὸν ὑπόλοιπον Ἀριάσπην, τῶν δὲ νόθων Ἀρσάμην. ὁ μὲν γὰρ Ἀριάσπης οὐ διὰ τὸ πρεσβύτερος εἶναι τοῦ Ὀχου, πρᾶος δὲ καὶ ἀπλοῦς καὶ φιλόανθρωπος, ἠξιοῦτο βασιλεύειν ὑπὸ τῶν Περσῶν· ὁ δὲ Ἀρσάμης καὶ νοῦν ἔχειν ἐδόκει καὶ μάλιστα τῷ πατρὶ προσφιλῆς 2 ὢν οὐκ ἐλάνθανε τὸν Ὀχον. ἐπιβουλεύων οὖν ἀμφοτέροις καὶ δολερὸς ὢν ὁμοῦ καὶ φονικὸς ἐχρήσατο τῇ μὲν ὠμότητι τῆς φύσεως πρὸς τὸν Ἀρσάμην, τῇ δὲ κακουργίᾳ καὶ δεινότητι πρὸς τὸν Ἀριάσπην. ὑπέπεμψε γὰρ πρὸς αὐτὸν εὐνοῦχους καὶ φίλους βασιλέως ἀπειλὰς τινὰς αἰεὶ καὶ λόγους φοβεροὺς ἀπαγγέλλοντας, ὡς τοῦ πατρὸς ἐγνωκότος ἀποκτιννύειν αὐτὸν ὠμῶς καὶ 3 ἐφυβρίστως. οἱ δὲ ταῦτα καθ' ἡμέραν ἐκφέρειν δοκοῦντες ὡς ἀπόρρητα, καὶ τὰ μὲν μέλλειν, τὰ δὲ ὅσον οὐπω πράσσειν βασιλέα λέγοντες, οὕτως 1027 ἐξέπληξαν τὸν ἄνθρωπον καὶ τοσαύτην ἐνέβαλον πτοίαν αὐτῷ καὶ ταραχὴν καὶ δυσθυμίαν εἰς τοὺς λογισμούς, ὥστε φάρμακον σκεύασαντα τῶν θανα-4 σίμων καὶ πίωντα τοῦ ζῆν ἀπαλλαγῆναι. πυθό-μενος δὲ ὁ βασιλεὺς τὸν τρόπον τῆς τελευτῆς, ἐκεῖνον μὲν ἀπέκλαυσε, τὴν δ' αἰτίαν ὑπόπτειν.
ἐλέγχειν δὲ καὶ ζητεῖν ἐξαδυνατῶν διὰ γῆρας ἔτι

had killed him; then, going forth into court, he made obeisance to the sun and said: "Depart in joy and peace, ye Persians, and say to all whom ye meet that those who contrived impious and unlawful things have been punished by great Oromasdes."

XXX. Such, then, was the end of the conspiracy. And now Ochus was sanguine in the hopes with which Atossa inspired him, but he was still afraid of Ariaspes, the only legitimate son of the king remaining, and also of Arsames among the illegitimate sons. For Ariaspes, not because he was older than Ochus, but because he was mild and straightforward and humane, was deemed by the Persians worthy to be their king; Arsames, however, was thought to have wisdom, and the fact that he was especially dear to his father was not unknown to Ochus. Accordingly, he plotted against the lives of both, and being at once wily and bloody-minded, he brought the cruelty of his nature into play against Arsames, but his villainy and craft against Ariaspes. For he secretly sent to Ariaspes eunuchs and friends of the king, who constantly brought him word of sundry threatening and terrifying utterances implying that his father had determined to put him to a cruel and shameful death. Since they pretended that these daily reports of theirs were secrets of state, and declared, now that the king was delaying in the matter, and now that he was on the point of acting, they so terrified the prince, and filled his mind with so great trepidation, confusion, and despair, that he drank a deadly poison which he had prepared, and thus rid himself of life. When the king was informed of the manner of his death, he bewailed his son. He also suspected what had caused his death, but being μᾶλλον ἠσπάζετο τὸν Ἀρσάμην, καὶ δῆλος ἦν μάλιστα πιστεύων ἐκείνῳ καὶ παρρησιαζόμενος.

 ὅθεν οἱ περὶ τὸν Ὀχον οὐκ ἀνεβάλλοντο τὴν πρᾶξιν, ἀλλ' Ἀρπάτην υἱὸν Τηριβάζου παρασκεύασαντες ἀπέκτειναν δι' ἐκείνου τὸν ἄνθρωπον.
 5 ἦν μὲν οὖν ἐπὶ ῥοπῆς μικρᾶς ὁ Ἀρτοξέρξης διὰ τὸ γῆρας ἤδη τότε· προσπεσόντος δὲ αὐτῷ τοῦ περὶ τὸν Ἀρσάμην πάθους οὐδὲ ὀλίγον ἀντέσχευ, ἀλλ' εὐθύς ὑπὸ λύπης καὶ δυσθυμίας ἀπεσβέσθη, βιώσας μὲν ἐνενήκοντα καὶ τέσσαρα ἔτη, βασιλεύσας δὲ δύο καὶ ἐξήκοντα, δόξας δὲ πρᾶος εἶναι καὶ φιλυπήκοος οὐχ ἥκιστα διὰ τὸν υἱὸν Ὀχον ὠμότητι καὶ μαιφονίᾳ πάντας ὑπερβαλόμενον.

unable by reason of his age to search out and convict the guilty one, he was still more well-affectioned towards Arsames, and clearly made him his chief support and confidant. Wherefore Ochus would not postpone his design, but set Arpates, a son of Teribazus, to the task and by his hand slew the prince. Now Artaxerxes, by reason of his age, was already hovering between life and death; and when the sad fate of Arsames came to his ears, he could not hold out even a little while, but straightway expired of grief and despair. He had lived ninety-four years, and had been king sixty-two, and had the reputation of being gentle and fond of his subjects; though this was chiefly due to his son Ochus, who surpassed all men in cruelty and blood-guiltiness.

GALBA

ΓΑΛΒΑΣ

I. Ὁ μὲν Ἀθηναῖος Ἴφικράτης τὸν μισθοφό- 1053 ρον ἠξίου στρατιώτην καὶ φιλόπλουτον εἶναι καὶ φιλήδονον, ὅπως ταῖς ἐπιθυμίαις χορηγίαν ἐπιζητῶν ἀγωνίζηται παραβολώτερον, οἱ δὲ πλεῖστοι, καθάπερ ἐρρωμένον σῶμα, τὸ στρατιωτικὸν ἀξιού-σιν ἰδία μηδέποτε χρώμενον ὀρμῇ συγκινεῖσθαι 2 τῇ τοῦ στρατηγοῦ. διὸ καὶ Παῦλον Αἰμίλιον λέγουσι τὴν ἐν Μακεδονίᾳ δύναμιν παραλαβόντα λαλιᾶς καὶ περιεργίας, οἷον διαστρατηγοῦσαν, ἀνάπλεων, παρεγγυῆσαι τὴν χεῖρα ποιεῖν ἐτοίμην καὶ τὴν μάχαιραν ὀξεῖαν ἕκαστον, αὐτῷ δὲ 3 τῶν ἄλλων μελήσειν. ὁ δὲ Πλάτων οὐδὲν ἔργον ὀρῶν ἄρχοντος ἀγαθοῦ καὶ στρατηγοῦ στρατιᾶς μὴ σωφρονούσης μηδὲ ὀμοπαθούσης, ἀλλὰ τὴν πειθαρχικὴν ἀρετὴν ὀμοίως τῇ βασιλικῇ νομίζων φύσεως γενναίας καὶ τροφῆς φιλοσόφου δεῖσθαι, μάλιστα τῷ πρᾶφ καὶ φιλανθρώπῳ τὸ θυμοειδὲς καὶ δραστήριον ἐμμελῶς ἀνακεραυνυμένης, ἄλλα τε πάθη πολλὰ καὶ τὰ Ῥωμαίοις συμπεσόντα μετὰ τὴν Νέρωνος τελευτὴν ἔχει μαρτύρια καὶ παραδείγματα τοῦ μηδὲν εἶναι φοβερώτερον ἀπαι-

¹ With Plutarch's Galba may be compared Suetonius, Galba; Dion Cassius, lxi. 1-9; Tacitus, Hist. i. 1-45.

GALBA¹

I. IPHICRATES the Athenian used to think that the mercenary soldier might well be fond of wealth and fond of pleasure, in order that his quest for the means to gratify his desires might lead him to fight with greater recklessness; but most people think that a body of soldiers, just like a natural body in full vigour, ought to have no initiative of its own, but should follow that of its commander. Wherefore Paulus Aemilius, as we are told, finding that the army which he had taken over in Macedonia was infected with loquacity and meddlesomeness, as though they were all generals, gave out word that each man was to have his hand ready and his sword sharp, but that he himself would look out for the rest.² Moreover, Plato³ sees that a good commander or general can do nothing unless his army is amenable and loyal; and he thinks that the quality of obedience, like the quality characteristic of a king, requires a noble nature and a philosophic training, which, above all things, blends harmoniously the qualities of gentleness and humanity with those of high courage and aggressiveness. Many dire events, and particularly those which befell the Romans after the death of Nero, bear witness to this, and show plainly that an empire has nothing more fearful to ² See the Aemilius, xiii. 4.

³ Cf. e. g. Republic 376 C.

δεύτοις χρωμένης καὶ ἀλόγοις ὀρμαῖς ἐν ἡγεμονίᾳ
 4 στρατιωτικῆς δυνάμεως. Δημάδης μὲν γὰρ Ἀλεξάνδρου τελευτήσαντος εἴκαζε τὴν Μακε-δόνων στρατιὰν ἐκτετυφλωμένῳ τῷ Κύκλωπι, πολλὰς κινουμένην ὀρῶν κινήσεις ἀτάκτους καὶ παραφόρους· τὴν δὲ Ῥωμαίων ἡγεμονίαν ὅμοια τοῖς λεγομένοις Τιτανικοῖς πάθεσι καὶ κινήμασι κατελάμβανεν, εἰς πολλὰ διασπωμένην ἅμα καὶ πολλαχόθεν αὐθις ἑαυτῇ συμπίπτουσαν, οὐχ οὕτως ὑπὸ φιλαρχίας τῶν ἀναγορευομένων αὐτο-κρατόρων, ὡς φιλοπλουτίας καὶ ἀκολασίας τοῦ 5 στρατιωτικοῦ δι' ἀλλήλων ὥσπερ ἦλους τοὺς ἡγεμόνας ἐκκρούοντος. καίτοι Διονύσιος Φεραῖον ἄρξαντα Θετταλῶν δέκα μῆνας, εἶτα εὐθύς ἀναιρεθέντα, τὸν τραγικὸν ἀνεκάλει τύραννον, ἐπι-σκώπτων τὸ τάχος τῆς μεταβολῆς. ἡ δὲ τῶν Καισάρων ἐστία, τὸ Παλάτιον, ἐν ἐλάσσονι χρόνῳ τέσσαρας αὐτοκράτορας ὑπεδέξατο, τὸν μὲν εἰσαγόντων ὥσπερ διὰ σκηνῆς, τὸν δ' ἐξαγόντων.
 ἀλλ' ἦν γε παραμυθία τοῖς κακῶς πάσχουσι μ' ἅ τὸ μὴ δεηθῆναι δίκης ἐτέρας ἐπὶ τοὺς αἰτίους, ἀλλ' ὀρᾶν αὐτοὺς ὑφ' ἑαυτῶν φονευομένους, πρῶτον δε καὶ δικαιοτάτα πάντων τὸν δελεάσαντα καὶ διδάξαντα τοσοῦτον ἐλπίζειν ἐπὶ μεταβολῇ Καίσαρος ὅσον αὐτὸς ὑπέσχετο, κάλλιστον ἔργον δια-βαλὼν τῷ μισθῷ, τὴν ἀπὸ Νέρωνος ἀποστασίαν προδοσίαν γενομένην.

II. Νυμφίδιος γὰρ Σαβίνος ὢν ἑπαρχος, ὥσπερ εἴρηται, μετὰ Τιγελλίνου τῆς αὐλῆς, ἐπεὶ τὰ Νέρωνος ἀπέγνωστο παντάπασι καὶ δῆλος ἦν

¹ An allusion to the proverb ἦλφ ὁ ἦλος ἐκκρούεται.

show than a military force given over to untrained and unreasoning impulses. Demades, indeed, after Alexander had died, likened the Macedonian army to the blinded Cyclops, observing the many random and disorderly movements that it made; but the Roman Empire was a prey to convulsions and disasters like those caused by the Titans of mythology, being torn into many fragments, and again in many places collapsing upon itself, not so much through the ambition of those who were proclaimed emperors, as through the greed and licence of the soldiery, which drove out one commander with another as nail drives out nail.¹ And yet the Pheraean² who ruled Thessaly for ten months and was then promptly killed, was called the tragedy-tyrant by Dionysius, with scornful reference to the quickness of the change. But the house of the Caesars, the Palatium, in a shorter time than this received four emperors, the soldiery ushering one in and another out, as in play. But the suffering people had one consolation at least in the fact that they needed no other punishment of the authors of their sufferings, but saw them slain by one another's hands, and first and most righteously of all, the man who ensnared the soldiery and taught them to expect from the deposition of a Caesar all the good things which he promised them, thus defiling a most noble deed by the pay he offered for it, and turning the revolt from Nero into treachery.

II. It was Nymphidius Sabinus, prefect of the court guard along with Tigellinus, as I have already stated,³ who, when Nero's case was altogether desperate, and

¹ Alexander, tyrant of Pherae. See the Pelopidas, xxiv.-xxxv.

² Probably in the lost Life of Nero.

ἀποδρασόμενος εἰς Αἴγυπτον, ἔπεισε τὸ στρατιωτικόν, ὡς μηκέτι παρόντος, ἀλλ' ἤδη πεφευγότες, 2 αὐτοκράτορα Γάλβαν ἀναγορευσαί, καὶ δωρεὰν ὑπέσχετο κατ' ἄνδρα τοῖς αὐλικοῖς καὶ στρατη-γικοῖς προσαγορευομένοις δραχμὰς ἑπτακισχιλίας πεντακοσίας, τοῖς δὲ ἔκτος στρατευομένοις πεντή-κοντα καὶ διακοσίας ἐπὶ χιλίαις, ὅσον ἀμήχανον ἦν συναγαγεῖν μὴ πλείονα μυριάκις κακὰ παρα-3 σχόντα πᾶσιν ἀνθρώποις ὧν Νέρων παρέσχε. τοῦτο γὰρ εὐθύς μὲν ἀπώλεσε Νέρωνα, μετ' ὀλίγον δὲ Γάλβαν· τὸν μὲν γὰρ ὡς ληψόμενοι προήκαντο, τὸν δὲ μὴ λαμβάνοντες ἀπέκτειναν. εἶτα τὸν τοσοῦτον δώσοντα ζητοῦντες ἔφθησαν ἐν ταῖς ἀποστάσεσι καὶ προδοσίαις ἀναλώσαντες αὐτοὺς ἢ τυχόντες ὧν ἠλπισαν. τὰ μὲν οὖν καθ' ἕκαστα τῶν γενομένων ἀπαγγέλλειν ἀκριβῶς τῆς πραγματικῆς ἱστορίας ἐστίν, ὅσα δὲ ἄξια λόγου τοῖς τῶν Καισάρων ἔργοις καὶ πάθεσι συμπέπτωκεν, οὐδὲ ἐμοὶ προσήκει παρελθεῖν.

1054

III. Γάλβας Σουλπίκιος ὅτι μὲν ἰδιώτης πλου-σιώτατος ἀπάντων εἰς τὸν Καισάρων παρήλθεν οἶκον, ὁμολογεῖται· μέγα δὲ ἔχων εὐγενείας ἀξίω-μα τὸν Σερουτίων οἶκον, αὐτὸς ἐφρόνει μείζον ἐπὶ τῇ Κάτλου συγγενείᾳ, πρωτεύσαντος ἀνδρὸς ἀρετῇ καὶ δόξῃ τῶν καθ' ἑαυτόν, εἰ καὶ τὸ δύνα-2 σθαι μᾶλλον ἐκὼν ἐτέροις παρήκεν. ἦν δέ τι καὶ Λιβία τῇ Καίσαρος γυναικὶ κατὰ γένος προσή-κων ὃ Γάλβας, καὶ διὰ τοῦτο Λιβίας παρασχού-

¹ Plutarch uses the Greek word drachma for the corresponding Roman denarius, a silver coin about equivalent to

it was clear that he was going to run away to Egypt, persuaded the soldiery, as though Nero were no longer there but had already fled, to proclaim Galba emperor, and promised as largess seventy-five hundred drachmas apiece for the court, or praetorian, guards, as they were called, and twelve hundred and fifty drachmas¹ for those in service outside of Rome, a sum which it was impossible to raise without inflicting ten thousand times more evils upon the world than those inflicted by Nero. This promise was at once the death of Nero, and soon afterwards of Galba: the one the soldiers abandoned to his fate in order to get their reward, the other they killed because they did not get it. Then, in trying to find someone who would give them as high a price, they destroyed themselves in a succession of revolts and treacheries before their expectations were satisfied. Now, the accurate and circumstantial narration of these events belongs to formal history; but it is my duty also not to omit such incidents as are worthy of mention in the deeds and fates of the Caesars.

III. That Sulpicius Galba was the richest private person who ever came to the imperial throne, is generally admitted; moreover, his connection with the noble house of the Servii gave him great prestige, although he prided himself more on his relationship to Catulus, who was the foremost man in his time in virtue and reputation, even if he gladly left to others the exercise of greater power. Galba was also somehow related to Livia, the wife of Augustus Caesar, and therefore, at the instance of Livia, he was made the franc. But a Roman writer would reckon by sestertii, the sestertius being worth about a quarter of the denarius.

σης ὕπατος ἐκ Παλατίου προῆλθε. λέγεται δὲ καὶ στρατεύματος ἐν Γερμανία καλῶς ἄρξαι καὶ Λιβύης ἀνθύπατος γενόμενος σὺν ὀλίγοις ἐπαινεθῆναι. τὸ δὲ εὐκόλον αὐτοῦ τῆς διαίτης καὶ φειδωλὸν ἐν δαπάναις καὶ ἀπέριττον αἰτίαν ἔσχεν αὐτοκράτορος γενομένου μικρολογίας, ἣν ἔωλόν τινα δόξαν εὐταξίας ἔφερε καὶ σωφροσύνης.

3 ἐπέμφθη δὲ ὑπὸ Νέρωνος Ἰβηρίας ἄρχων, οὐπω δεδιδαγμένου φοβεῖσθαι τοὺς ἐν ἀξιώμασι μεγάλους¹ τῶν πολιτῶν. ἐκείνῳ δὲ καὶ φύσει δοκοῦντι πρῶτῳ γεγονέναι προσετίθει πίστιν εὐλαβείας τὸ γῆρας.

IV. Ἐπεὶ² δέ, τῶν ἀλιτηρίων ἐπιτρόπων ὡμῶς καὶ ἀγρίως τὰς ἐπαρχίας ἐκείνῳ διαφορούντων, ἄλλο μὲν εἶχεν οὐδὲν βοηθεῖν, αὐτῷ δὲ τῷ φανερὸς εἶναι συναλγῶν καὶ συναδικούμενος ἀμῶς γέ πως ἀναπνοήν τινα καὶ παραμυθίαν τοῖς καταδικαζομένοις καὶ πωλουμένοις παρέσχε· καὶ ποιημάτων εἰς Νέρωνα γινομένων καὶ πολλαχοῦ περιφερομένων καὶ ἀδομένων, οὐκ ἐκώλυεν οὐδὲ συνηγανάκτει τοῖς ἐπιτρόποις· ἐφ' οἷς ἔτι μᾶλλον ἠγαπάτο ὑπὸ

2 τῶν ἀνθρώπων. καὶ γὰρ ἦν ἤδη συνήθης, ἔτος ὄγδοον ἐκείνο τὴν ἀρχὴν ἔχων ἐν ᾧ Ἰούνιος Οὐίνδιξ ἐπανεστη Νέρωνι, Γαλατίας ὢν στρατηγός. λέγεται μὲν οὖν καὶ πρὸ τῆς ἐμφανοῦς ἀποστάσεως γράμματα πρὸς αὐτὸν ἀφικέσθαι παρὰ τοῦ Οὐίνδικος, οἷς μήτε πιστεῦσαι μήτε μηνῦσαι καὶ κατειπεῖν,

¹ μεγάλους Coraës and Bekker have μεγάλοις, after Reiske.

² ἐπεὶ Sint.² corrects to ἐκεῖ (there).

consul¹ by the emperor. We are told also that he commanded an army in Germany with distinction, and that when he was pro-consul of Africa,² he won such praise as few have done. But his simple and contented way of living, the sparing hand with which he dealt out money, always avoiding excess, were counted unto him, when he became emperor, as parsimony, so that the reputation which he bore for moderation and self-restraint was an insipid sort of thing. By Nero he was sent out as governor of Spain,³ before Nero had yet learned to be afraid of citizens who were held in high esteem. Galba, however, was thought to be of a gentle nature, and his great age gave an added confidence that he would always act with caution.

IV. But when, as the nefarious agents of Nero savagely and cruelly harried the provinces, Galba could help the people in no other way than by making it plain that he shared in their distress and sense of wrong, this somehow brought relief and comfort to those who were being condemned in court and sold into slavery. And when verses were made about Nero, and men circulated and sang them freely, he did not put a stop to it nor share in the displeasure of Nero's agents; wherefore he was still more beloved by the inhabitants. For he was by this time well known to them, since it was in the eighth year of his governorship that Junius Vindex, a general in Gaul, revolted against Nero. It is said, indeed, that even before the open rebellion Galba received letters from Vindex, and that he neither put any trust in them nor gave accusing information

¹ In 33 A.D.² In 45 A.D.³ In 61 A.D.

ὡς ἕτεροι τῶν ἡγεμονικῶν ἐπιστολὰς αὐτοῖς γραφείσας ἔπεμψαν πρὸς Νέρωνα καὶ διέφθειραν ὅσον ἐπ' αὐτοῖς τὴν πρᾶξιν, ἧς ὕστερον μετασχόντες ὠμολόγησαν αὐτῶν οὐδὲν ἦττον ἢ ἐκεί-3 νου προδῶται γεγονέναι. ἀλλ' ἐπειδὴ λαμπρῶς τὸν πόλεμον ἐκφήνας ὁ Οὐίνδιξ ἔγραψε τῷ Γάλβα παρακαλῶν ἀναδέξασθαι τὴν ἡγεμονίαν καὶ παρασχεῖν ἑαυτὸν ἰσχυρῶ σώματι ζητοῦντι κεφαλήν, ταῖς Γαλατίαις δέκα μυριάδας ἀνδρῶν ὀπλισμένων ἐχούσαις ἄλλας τε πλείονας ὀπλίσαι δυναμέναις, προὔθηκε βουλὴν τοῖς φίλοις. ὧν οἱ μὲν ἠξίουν περιμένειν καρδοκοῦντα τίνα κίνησιν ἢ 4 Ῥώμη καὶ φορὰν ἔξει πρὸς τὸν νεωτερισμόν· Τίτος δὲ Οὐίνιος ὁ τοῦ στρατηγικοῦ τάγματος ἡγεμῶν αὐτοῖς¹ εἶπεν· “ὦ Γάλβα, τίνα τρόπον βουλεύεσθε; τὸ γὰρ ζητεῖν Νέρωνι εἰ πιστοὶ μενοῦ-μεν, οὐκ ἤδη μενόντων ἐστίν. ὡς οὖν ὑπάρχοντος ἐχθροῦ Νέρωνος οὐ δὴ προετέον τὴν τοῦ Οὐίνδι-κος φιλίαν, ἢ καὶ κατηγορητέον εὐθύς αὐτοῦ καὶ πολεμητέον, ὅτι σὲ βούλεται Ῥωμαίους ἔχειν ἄρχοντα μᾶλλον ἢ Νέρωνα τύραννον.”

V. Ἐκ τούτου προγράμματι μὲν ἐδήλωσεν ὁ
 Γάλβας ἡμέραν ἐν ἣ τὰς κατὰ μέρος ἐλευθερώ-1055 σεις ὑποδώσει τοῖς δεομένοις, λαλιὰ δὲ καὶ φήμη προεκπεσοῦσα πλήθος ἀνθρώπων ἠθροισε προ-θύμων ἐπὶ τὸν νεωτερισμόν. οὐκ ἔφθη γοῦν φανερὸς ἐπὶ τοῦ βήματος γενόμενος, καὶ πάντες 2 αὐτὸν ὁμοφώνως αὐτοκράτορα προσείπον. ὁ δὲ ταύτην μὲν εὐθύς οὐ προσεδέξατο τὴν προσηγορίαν, κατηγορήσας δὲ τοῦ Νέρωνος, καὶ τῶν ἀνηρημένων ἀνδρῶν ὑπ' αὐτοῦ τοὺς ἐπιφανεστά-

¹ αὐτοῖς suggested by Sint.² for the αὐτός of the MSS.

about them, although other provincial governors sent to Nero the letters written to them, and thus did all they could to ruin the enterprise of Vindex; and yet they afterwards took part in it, and thus confessed that they had been false to themselves no less than to Vindex. But after Vindex had openly declared war, he wrote to Galba inviting him to assume the imperial power, and thus to serve what was a vigorous body in need of a head, meaning the Gallic provinces, which already had a hundred thousand men under arms, and could arm other thousands besides. Then Galba took counsel with his friends. Some of these thought it best for him to wait and see what movement Rome would set on foot in response to the revolution; but Titus Vinius, the captain of the praetorian guard, said to them: "O Galba, what counsels are these? For to ask whether we shall remain faithful to Nero means that we are already unfaithful. Assuming, then, that Nero is an enemy, we surely must not reject the friendship of Vindex; or else we must at once denounce him and make war upon him because he wishes the Romans to have thee as their ruler rather than Nero as their tyrant."

V. After this, Galba issued an edict appointing a day on which he would grant individual manumissions to all who desired them, and gossip and rumour flying all abroad brought together a multitude of men who were eager for the revolution. At any rate, no sooner was Galba seen upon the tribunal than all with one voice hailed him as emperor. However, he did not at once accept this appellation, but after denouncing Nero, and bewailing the most illustrious of the men who had been put to τους ὀλοφυράμενος, ὠμολόγησεν ἐπιδώσειν τῇ πατρίδι τὴν ἑαυτοῦ πρόνοιαν, οὔτε Καῖσαρ οὔτ' αὐτοκράτωρ, στρατηγὸς δὲ συγκλήτου καὶ δήμου Ῥωμαίων ὀνομαζόμενος.

- 3 "Ὅτι δ' ὀρθῶς ὁ Οὐίνδιξ καὶ λελογισμένως ἐξεκαλεῖτο τὸν Γάλβαν ἐπὶ τὴν ἡγεμονίαν, ἐπιστώσατο μάρτυρι τῷ Νέρωνι. προσποιούμενος γὰρ ἐκείνου καταφρονεῖν καὶ παρ' οὐδὲν ἡγεῖσθαι τὰ Γαλατῶν, ἅμα τῷ πυθέσθαι τὰ περὶ Γάλβαν (ἔτυχε δὲ λελουμένος καὶ ἀριστῶν) ἀνέτρεψε τὴν
- 4 τράπεζαν. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ συγκλήτου ψηφισαμένης πολέμιον τὸν Γάλβαν αὐτὸς τε παίζειν καὶ θρασύνεσθαι πρὸς τοὺς φίλους βουλόμενος, οὐ φαύλην ἔφη πρόρρησιν ἐμπεπτωκέναι λογισμοῦ δεομένῳ χρημάτων αὐτῷ· καὶ τὰ μὲν Γαλατῶν, ὅταν ὑποχείριοι γένωνται, λαφυραγωγῆσθαι, ἡ δὲ Γάλβα πάρεστιν οὐσία χρῆσθαι καὶ πωλεῖν ἤδη
- 5 πολεμίου πεφηνότος. οὗτός τε δὴ τὰ Γάλβα πιπράσκειν ἐκέλευε, καὶ Γάλβας ἀκούσας, ὅσα Νέρωνος ἦν ἐν Ἰβηρία κηρύττων εὔρισκε πολλοὺς προθυμοτέρους ὠνητάς.

VI. Ἀφισταμένων δὲ πολλῶν τοῦ Νέρωνος καὶ πάντων ἐπιεικῶς τῷ Γάλβᾳ προστιθεμένων, μόνος Κλώδιος Μάκρος ἐν Λιβύῃ καὶ Οὐεργίνιος Ῥοῦφος ἐν Γαλατία τοῦ Γερμανικοῦ στρατεύματος ἡγούμενος αὐτοῖ καθ' ἑαυτοὺς ἔπραττον, οὐ τὴν αὐτὴν

2 αἵρεσιν ἔχοντες. ἀλλ' ὁ μὲν Κλώδιος, ἐν ἀρπαγαῖς πραγμάτων γεγυνῶς καὶ φόνοις ἀνδρῶν δι' ὠμότητα καὶ πλεονεξίαν, δῆλος ἦν ἐν τῷ μῆτε κατέχειν μῆτε ἀφιέναι τὴν ἀρχὴν δύνασθαι περιφερόμενος, Οὐεργίνιος δὲ ταγμάτων ἐπιστατῶν δυνατωτάτων πολλίκις αὐτὸν ἀναγορευόντων αὐτοκράτορα καὶ death by him, promised to devote his best powers to the service of his country, taking as his title, not Caesar, nor Emperor, but General of the Roman Senate and People.

Now, that Vindex acted wisely and well in calling upon Galba to be emperor, was convincingly proved by Nero. For though he pretended to despise Vindex and to regard matters in Gaul as of no moment, as soon as he learned what Galba had done—Nero had just taken his bath and was at breakfast—he overturned his table. However, after the Senate had voted Galba an enemy, Nero, with a desire to jest and put on a bold countenance with his friends, said that an excellent idea had occurred to him in his need of money: the property of the Gauls would not fall to him as spoil of war until after they should be subdued; but Galba's estate was ready to be used and sold at once, now that Galba had been declared a public enemy. So he ordered the property of Galba to be sold, and Galba, when he heard of it, put up at public sale all that Nero owned in Spain, and found many readier buyers.

VI. Many were now falling away from Nero, and almost all of them attached themselves to Galba; only Clodius Macer in Africa, and Verginius Rufus in Gaul (where he commanded the German forces), acted on their own account, though each took a different course. Clodius, whose cruelty and greed had led him into robberies and murders, was clearly in a strait where he could neither retain nor give up his command; while Verginius, who commanded the strongest legions and was often saluted by them as emperor and strongly urged to take the title, declared βιαζομένων οὔτε αὐτὸς ἔφη λήψεσθαι τὴν ἡγεμονίαν οὔτε ἄλλω περιόψεσθαι διδομένην, ὃν ἂν μὴ ἢ

 3 συγκλητος ἔληται. ταῦτα τὸν Γάλβαν οὐ μετρίως ἐθορύβει τὸ πρῶτον· ἐπεὶ δὲ τὰ Οὐεργινίου καὶ Οὐίνδικος στρατεύματα τρόπον τινὰ βία τοὺς ἡγεμόνας, ὥσπερ ἡμιόχους κρατῆσαι χαλινῶν μὴ δυνηθέντας, εἰς μάχην ἐξευεγκόντα μεγάλην συνέρραξαν, καὶ Οὐίνδικος ἑαυτὸν ἀνελοντος ἐπὶ δισμυρίοις Γαλατῶν πεσοῦσι, διῆλθε λόγος ὡς βουλομένων πάντων ἐπὶ νίκη τοσαύτῃ τὸν Οὐεργίνιον ἀναδέξασθαι τὴν ἡγεμονίαν ἢ πάλιν
 4 μεταβαλουμένων πρὸς Νέρωνα, τότε δὴ παντάπασι περίφοβος γενόμενος ὁ Γάλβας ἔγραψε τῷ Οὐεργινίῳ, παρακαλῶν κοινοπραγεῖν καὶ διαφυλάσσειν ἅμα τὴν ἡγεμονίαν καὶ τὴν ἐλευθερίαν Ῥωμαίοις· αὐθις δὲ μετὰ τῶν φίλων εἰς Κλουνίαν, Ἰβηρικὴν πόλιν, ἀναχωρήσας ἐν τῷ μετανοεῖν περὶ τῶν γεγονότων καὶ ποθεῖν τὴν συνήθη καὶ σύντροφον ἀπραγμοσύνην μᾶλλον ἢ πράττειν τι τῶν ἀναγκαίων διέτριβεν.

VII. Ἦν δὲ θέρος ἤδη, καὶ βραχὺ πρὸ δειλῆς ἦκεν ἀπὸ Ῥώμης Ἰκελος ἀνὴρ ἀπελεύθερος ἑβδομαῖος. πυθόμενος δὲ τὸν Γάλβαν ἀναπαύεσθαι καθ' ἑαυτὸν ἐβάδιζε συντόμως ἐπὶ τὸ δωμάτιον αὐτοῦ, καὶ βία τῶν θαλαμηπόλων ἀνοίξας καὶ παρελθὼν that he would neither assume the imperial power himself, nor allow it to be given to anyone else whom the senate did not elect. These things greatly disturbed Galba at first; but presently the armies of Verginius and Vindex in a manner forced their leaders, like charioteers who had lost control of the reins, into the crash of a great battle, and Vindex, after the loss of twenty thousand Gauls, died by his own hand, and a report was current that all the soldiers desired Verginius, in view of the great victory he had won, to assume the imperial power, or they would go back again to Nero. Then indeed Galba was all alarm, and wrote to Verginius inviting him to join in efforts for the preservation alike of the empire and the freedom of the Romans. But after this he retired with his friends to Clunia, a city in Spain, and spent his time in repenting of what he had done and in longing for his habitual and wonted freedom from care, rather than in taking any of the steps now made necessary.
 2 ἀπήγγειλεν ὅτι καὶ ζῶντος ἔτι τοῦ Νέρωνος, οὐκ ὄντος δὲ φανεροῦ, τὸ στράτευμα πρῶτον, εἶτα ὁ δῆμος καὶ ἡ σύγκλητος αὐτοκράτορα τὸν Γάλβαν ἀναγορεύσειεν, ὀλίγον δὲ ὕστερον ἀπαγγελθεῖη τεθνηκῶς ἐκεῖνος· οὐ μὴν αὐτὸς γε πιστεύσας ἔφη τοῖς ἀπαγγέλλουσι, ἀλλὰ ἐπελθὼν τῷ νεκρῷ καὶ κείμενον θεασάμενος, οὕτως ἐξελθεῖν.

VII. It was now summer,¹ and shortly before sunset there came from Rome a freedman named Icelus, who had made the journey in seven days. Having learned that Galba was reposing by himself, he went in hot haste to his chamber, opened the door in spite of the chamberlains, entered, and announced that while Nero was still alive, but in hiding, that the army first, and then the senate and people, had proclaimed Galba emperor, and that a little while afterwards it was reported that Nero was dead; Icelus himself, however, as he said, had not believed the report, but had gone and seen the dead body where it lay, and then had set out on his journey. This announcement

¹ Of 68 A.D.

3 ταῦτα ἀπαγγελλόμενα λαμπρὸν ἤρε τὸν Γάλβαν, καὶ συνέδραμε πλῆθος ἀνδρῶν ἐπὶ θύρας ἐκτεθαρρηκότων ὑπ' αὐτοῦ βεβαίως. καίτοι τὸ τάχος ἦν ἄπιστον. ἀλλὰ καὶ δυσὶν ἡμέραις ὕστερον¹ Οὐίνιος Τίτος² ἀπὸ στρατοπέδου μεθ' ἑτέρων ἀφίκετο τὰ δόξαντα τῇ συγκλήτῳ καθ' ἕκαστον ἀπαγγέλλων. οὗτος μὲν οὖν εἰς τάξιν ἔντιμον προήχθη· τῷ δ' ἀπελευθέρῳ δακτυλίους τε χρυσοῦς ἔδωκε καὶ Μαρκιανὸς ὁ Ἰκελος ἤδη καλούμενος εἶχε τὴν πρώτην ἐν τοῖς ἀπελευθέροις δύναμιν.

VIII. Ἐν δὲ Ῥώμῃ Νυμφίδιος Σαβίνος, οὐκ ἡρέμα καὶ κατὰ μικρὸν, ἀλλὰ συλλήβδην ὁμοῦ, πάντα πράγματα φέρων περιήνεγκεν εἰς ἑαυτόν, ὡς Γάλβαν μὲν ὄντα πρεσβύτην καὶ μόλις εἰς Ῥώμην ἐξαρκέσοντα φοράδην κομισθῆναι διὰ γῆρας· ἦν γὰρ ἑτῶν τριῶν καὶ ἑβδομήκοντα· τὰ δὲ αὐτόθι στρατεύματα, καὶ πάλαι πρὸς αὐτὸν εὐνόως ἔχοντα καὶ νῦν ἑνὸς ἐξηρητημένα μόνου, διὰ τὸ τῆς δωρεᾶς μέγεθος εὐεργέτην ἐκείνον ἠγείσθαι, 2 Γάλβαν δὲ χρεωφειλέτην. εὐθύς οὖν Τιγελλίνῳ μὲν τῷ συνάρχοντι προσέταξεν ἀποθέσθαι τὸ ξίφος, ὑποδοχὰς δὲ ποιούμενος ἐδείπνιζε τοὺς ὑπατικούς καὶ τοὺς ἡγεμονικούς, ἔτι τὸ Γάλβα προστιθεὶς ὄνομα ταῖς κλήσεσιν, ἔν τε τῷ στρατοπέδῳ πολλοὺς παρεσκεύασε λέγειν ὡς πεμπτέον ἐστὶ πρὸς Γάλβαν αἰτουμένους ἔπαρχον εἰσαεὶ Νυμφίδιον ἄνευ συνάρχοντος.

3 Ἄ δὲ ἢ σύγκλητος εἰς τιμὴν ἔπραττεν αὐτοῦ

¹ ὕστερον supplied by Coraës, after Amyot.

highly elated Galba, and there came running to his door a multitude of men who had gained complete confidence as the result of Icelus' report. And yet the messenger's speed was incredible. But two days afterwards Titus Vinius with others came from the camp and reported in detail the decrees of the senate. Vinius, accordingly, was advanced to a position of honour, and as for the freedman, he was allowed to wear the gold ring, received the name of Marcianus instead of Icelus, and had the chief influence among the freedmen.

VIII. But at Rome Nymphidius Sabinus was forcing the entire control of affairs into his own hands, not slowly and little by little, but all at once. He thought that Galba was an old man and would hardly have the strength to be carried to Rome on a litter, by reason of his age, for he was in his seventy-third year; moreover, he knew that the soldiery in the city had long been well disposed towards him and were now devoted to him alone, regarding him as their benefactor because of the large gifts which he promised, but Galba as their debtor. Straightway, therefore, he ordered his colleague Tigellinus to lay down his sword, gave receptions at which he banqueted men who had been consuls or in high command (although he still affixed the name of Galba to his invitations), and instigated many of the soldiers to declare that a deputation ought to be sent to Galba demanding that Nymphidius be made prefect for life without a colleague.

Moreover, the senate did much to enhance his

² Τίτος after this name the words πολλά τῶν, deleted by Coraës and Bekker, are retained by Sint.² with indication of a lacuna (πολλά . . . τῶν).

καὶ δύναμιν, ἀνακαλοῦσα εὐεργέτην καὶ συντρέχουσα καθ' ἡμέραν ἐπὶ θύρας καὶ παντὸς ἐξάρχειν δόγματος ἀξιούσα καὶ βεβαιοῦν, ἔτι περαιτέρω τόλμης ἀνήγειν αὐτόν, ὥστε ὀλίγου χρόνου τοῖς 4 θεραπεύουσι μὴ μόνον ἐπίφθονον, ἀλλὰ καὶ φοβε-ρὸν εἶναι. τῶν δ' ὑπάτων οἰκέτας δημοσίους προχειρισαμένων τὰ δόγματα κομίζοντας τῷ αὐτο-κράτορι, καὶ τὰ καλούμενα διπλώματα σεσημασμένα δόντων, ἃ γνωρίζοντες οἱ κατὰ πόλιν ἄρχοντες ἐν ταῖς τῶν ὀχημάτων ἰμοιβαῖς ἐπιταχύνουσι τὰς προπομπὰς τῶν γραμματηφόρων, οὐ μετρίως ἠγανάκτησεν ὅτι μὴ παρ' αὐτοῦ καὶ σφραγίδα καὶ στρατιώτας λαβόντες ἀνέπεμψαν, ἀλλὰ λέγεται καὶ βουλευσασθαι περὶ τῶν ὑπάτων,
 εἶτα τὴν ὀργὴν ἀπολογησαμένοις καὶ δεηθεῖσιν 5 ἀνῆκε. τῷ δὲ δήμῳ χαριζόμενος οὐκ ἐκώλυε τὸν παραπίπτοιντα τῶν Νέρωνος ἀποτυμπαρίζειν.
 Σπῖκλον μὲν οὖν τὸν μονομάχον ἀνδριάσι Νέρωνος ἐλκομένοις ὑποβαλόντες ἐν ἀγορᾷ διέφθειραν, Ἀπόιον δὲ τινα τῶν κατηγορικῶν ἀνατρέψαντες ἀμάξας λιθοφόρους ἐπήγαγον, ἄλλους δὲ διέσπα-σαν πολλοὺς, ἐνίους μὴδὲν ἀδικοῦντας, ὥστε καὶ Μαύρικον, ἄνδρα τῶν ἀρίστων καὶ ὄντα καὶ δο-κοῦντα, πρὸς τὴν σύγκλητον εἶπεῖν ὅτι φοβεῖται μὴ ταχὺ Νέρωνα ζητήσωσιν.

IX. Οὕτω δὲ προσάγων ὁ Νυμφίδιος ἐγγυτέρω ταῖς ἐλπίσιν οὐκ ἔφευγε Γαίου Καίσαρος υἱὸς λέγεσθαι τοῦ μετὰ Τιβέριον ἄρξαντος. ἐγνώκει γὰρ ὁ Γαῖος, ὡς ἔοικε, τὴν τεκοῦσαν αὐτόν ἔτι

¹ Caligula.

honour and power, giving him the title of benefactor, assembling daily at his door, and allowing him the privilege of initiating and confirming all their decrees. This raised him to a still higher pitch of boldness, so that within a short time those who paid court to him were filled, not only with jealousy, but also with fear. When the consuls provided public servants to carry the decrees of the senate to the emperor, and gave to these the diplomas, as they were called, sealed with their official seal (in order that the magistrates of the various cities, recognising this, might expedite the supply of fresh vehicles for the journey of the couriers), he was vexed beyond all bounds because the decrees had not been sent under his seal and in charge of his soldiers, nay, it is said that he actually thought of proceeding against the consuls, but put away his wrath when they excused themselves and begged for forgiveness. Again, in his desire to gratify the people, he would not prevent them from beating to death any follower of Nero who fell into their hands. Accordingly, they cast Spiculus the gladiator under statues of Nero that were being dragged about in the forum, and killed him; Aponius, one of Nero's informers, they threw to the ground and dragged waggons laden with stone over him; and many others, some of whom had done no wrong, they tore in pieces, so that Mauricus, who was justly deemed one of the best men in Rome, told the senate that he was afraid they would soon be searching for a Nero.

IX. Thus coming in his hopes nearer and nearer to his goal, Nymphidius was not averse to having it said that he was the son of the Caius Caesar¹ who succeeded Tiberius. For Caius, as it would appear, while still μειράκιον ὦν οὐκ ἀειδῆ τὴν ὄψιν οὖσαν, ἐκ δ' ἀκεστρίας ἐπιμισθίου Καλλίστῳ, Καίσαρος ἀ-

 2 ελευθέρῳ, γεγεννημένην. ἀλλ' ἦν ἡ πρὸς Γαίῳ ἔντευξις αὐτῆς, ὡς ἔοικε, νεωτέρα τῆς Νυμφιδίου γενέσεως, αἰτίαν δὲ ἔσχεν ἐκ Μαρτιανοῦ τοῦ μονομάχου γεγονέναι, τῆς Νυμφιδίας ἐρασθείσης διὰ δόξαν αὐτοῦ, καὶ μᾶλλον ἐδόκει καθ' ὁμοιότητα
 3 τῆς ιδέας ἐκείνῳ προσήκειν. ἀλλ' ὁμολογῶν γε Νυμφιδίας εἶναι μητρὸς ἔργον μὲν αὐτοῦ μόνου τὴν Νέρωνος ἐποιεῖτο κατάλυσιν, ἄθλα δὲ αὐτῆς οὐ νομίζων ἱκανὰ καρποῦσθαι τὰς τιμὰς καὶ τὰ χρήματα καὶ τὸ Σπόρῳ τοῦ Νέρωνος συγκαθεύδειν, ὃν εὐθύς ἀπὸ τῆς πυρᾶς ἔτι καιομένου τοῦ νεκροῦ μεταπεμψάμενος ἐκείνος ἐν γαμετῆς εἶχε τάξει καὶ 1057 Ποππαίαν προσηγόρευεν, ἐπὶ τὴν διαδοχὴν παρεδύετο τῆς ἡγεμονίας. καὶ τὰ μὲν αὐτὸς ἐν Ῥώμῃ διὰ τῶν φίλων ὑπειργάζετο, καὶ γυναικῶν τινων αὐτῷ καὶ συγκλητικῶν ἀνδρῶν κρύφα συλλαμβανομένων, ἕνα δὲ τῶν φίλων, Γελλιανόν, εἰς Ἰβηρίαν ἔπεμψεν κατασκεψόμενον.

Χ. Τῷ δὲ Γάλβᾳ μετὰ τὴν Νέρωνος τελευταίαν ἐχώρει πάντα. Οὐέργινιος δὲ Ῥούφος ἀμφίβολος ὦν ἔτι φροντίδα παρείχε, μὴ τῷ δυνάμει πολλῆς καὶ μαχιμωτάτης ἄρχειν προσειληφὼς τὸ νενικηκέναι Οὐίνδικα καὶ κεχειρῶσθαι μέγα μέρος τῆς Ῥωμαίων ἡγεμονίας, ἐν σάλῳ γενομένην ἀποστατικῷ Γαλατίαν ἄπασαν, ὑπακούσαι τοῖς παρα-
 2 καλοῦσιν αὐτὸν ἐπὶ τὴν ἀρχήν. οὐδενὸς γὰρ ἦν ὄνομα μείζον, οὐδὲ εἶχε δόξαν οὐδεὶς ὄσσην ὁ Οἰερ-

a young man, had been intimate with the mother of Nymphidius, a woman of comely appearance and a daughter of Callistus, Caesar's freedman, by a hired sempstress. But this intimacy, as it would seem, was later than the birth of Nymphidius, and it was believed that he was a son of Martianus, the gladiator (with whom Nymphidia fell in love on account of his fame), and his resemblance to Martianus was thought to favour this connection. But although he certainly admitted that Nymphidia was his mother, he took to himself sole credit for the overthrow of Nero, and thinking himself insufficiently rewarded for this by the honours and wealth which he enjoyed, and by the company of Sporus, Nero's favourite (whom he had sent for at once, while Nero's body was yet burning on its pyre, and treated as his consort, and addressed by the name of Poppaea), he aspired to the succession in the empire. Some secret steps to this end he himself took at Rome through the agency of his friends, and certain women and men of senatorial rank secretly assisted him, and one of his friends, Gellianus, he sent to Spain to keep an eye upon matters there.

X. But everything went well with Galba after the death of Nero. Verginius Rufus, it is true, who was still hesitating, gave him anxiety. For besides commanding a large and most efficient army, Verginius had the added prestige of his victory over Vindex and his subjugation of all Gaul, which was a large part of the Roman Empire and had been in the throes of revolt. Galba therefore feared that Verginius might listen to those who invited him to take the supreme power. For no man's name was greater than that of Verginius, and no man had a reputation

γίνιος, ὡς μεγίστη ῥοπή τοῖς Ῥωμαίων πραγμασι τυραννίδος ὁμοῦ χαλεπῆς καὶ Γαλατικῶν πολέ-μων ἀπαλλαγῇ γενόμενος. ἀλλ' ἐκεῖνος τότε τοῖς ἐξ ἀρχῆς ἐμμένων λογισμοῖς ἐφύλαττε τῇ συγ-κλήτῳ τὴν αἵρεσιν τοῦ αὐτοκράτορος. καίτοι φανεράς γε τῆς Νέρωνος τελευτῆς γενομένης τό τε πλήθος ἐνέκειτο τῷ Οὐεργινίῳ πάλιν, καὶ τῶν χιλιάρχων τις τῶν ἐν τῇ σκηνῇ σπασάμενος τὸ ξίφος ἐκέλευε τὸν Οὐεργινιον δέχεσθαι τὴν ἡγεμο-3 νίαν ἢ τὸν σίδηρον. ἐπεὶ δὲ Φάβιος Οὐάλης ἄρχων ἐνὸς τάγματος ὄρκωσε πρῶτος εἰς Γάλβαν, καὶ γράμματα ἤκεν ἀπὸ Ῥώμης περὶ ὧν ἡ σύγκλητος ἐψηφίσαστο, χαλεπῶς μὲν καὶ μόλις, ἔπεισε δ' οὖν τοὺς στρατιώτας αὐτοκράτορα τὸν Γάλβαν ἀνειπεῖν· καὶ πέμψαντος αὐτοῦ διάδοχον Φλάκκον Ὀρδεώνιον ἐδέξατο. καὶ παραδοὺς ἐκείνῳ τὴν δύναμιν αὐτὸς ἀπήντησε τῷ Γάλβα πρόσω χωροῦντι, καὶ συνανέστρεφεν, οὔτε ὀργῆς οὔτε τιμῆς 4 ἐπιδήλου τυγχάνων. αἴτιος δὲ τοῦ μὲν αὐτὸς ὁ Γάλβας αἰδούμενος τὸν ἄνδρα, τοῦ δὲ οἱ φίλοι καὶ μάλιστα Οὐίνιος Τίτος, ὑπὸ φθόνου τὸν Οὐεργί-νιον οἰόμενος μὲν κολοῦειν, ἡγνόμενος δὲ ἄρα τῷ Οὐεργινίου χρηστῷ δαίμονι συνεργῶν, ἤδη τὸν ἄνδρα πολέμων καὶ κακῶν, ὅσα τοὺς ἄλλους ἡγεμόνας κατέσχευε, ἐκτὸς εἰς βίον ἀκύμονα καὶ γῆρας εἰρήνης καὶ ἡσυχίας μεστὸν ὑπεκτιθεμένῳ.

XI. Γάλβαν δὲ περὶ Νάρβωνα, πόλιν Γαλατι-κήν, οἱ παρὰ τῆς συγκλήτου πρέσβεις ἐντυχόντες ἠσπάζοντο, καὶ παρεκάλουν ἐπιφανῆσαι τῷ δήμῳ ποθοῦντι ταχέως. ὁ δὲ τὰς τε ἄλλας παρέιχεν ἐντεύξεις καὶ συνουσίας αὐτοῖς φιλανθρώπου καὶ

equal to his, since he had exercised the greatest influence in ridding the Roman state alike of a grievous tyrant and of Gallic wars. But in the present crisis he was true to his original resolves and maintained the senate's right to choose the emperor. And yet when Nero's death was known for certain, the mass of his soldiery were insistent again with Verginius, and one of the military tribunes in his tent drew his sword and ordered Verginius to choose between imperial power and the steel. But after Fabius Valens, commander of a legion, had led off in taking the oath of allegiance to Galba, and letters had come from Rome telling of the senate's decrees, he succeeded at last, though with the greatest difficulty, in persuading his soldiers to declare Galba emperor; and when Galba sent Flaccus Hordeonius to succeed him, Verginius received that officer, handed over his army to him, and went himself to meet Galba as he advanced, and turned back in his company without receiving any clear mark either of his anger or esteem. This was due, in the one case, to Galba himself, who had a wholesome respect for Verginius, and in the other to Galba's friends, especially Titus Vinius. Vinius was jealous of Verginius, and thought to block his career; but without knowing it he was aiding the man's good genius, which was now removing him from all the wars and miseries which encompassed the other leaders, and bringing him into a calm haven of life, and an old age full of peace and quiet.

XI. At Narbo, a city of Gaul, Galba was met by the deputies from the senate, who greeted him and begged him to gratify speedily the eager desire of the people to see him. In his general interviews and meetings with them he was kind and unassuming, δημοτικάς, πρὸς τε τὰς ἐστιάσεις πολλῆς κατασκευῆς καὶ θεραπείας βασιλικῆς παρουσίας, ἣν ἐκ τῶν Νέρωνος ὁ Νυμφίδιος αὐτῷ προσέπεμψεν, οὐδενὶ χρώμενος ἐκείνων, ἀλλὰ τοῖς ἑαυτοῦ πάσιν, εὐδοκίμει, μεγαλόφρων ἀνὴρ καὶ κρείττων ἀπειροκαλίας φαινόμενος. ταχὺ μέντοι τὰ γενναῖα ταῦτα καὶ ἄτυφα καὶ πολιτικὰ δημαγωγίαν Οὐίνιος ἀποφαίνων καὶ κομφύοτητα μεγάλων ἀπαξιούσαν αὐτήν, ἔπεισε χρήμασί τε χρῆσθαι τοῖς Νέρωνος καὶ περὶ τὰς ὑποδοχὰς μὴ φείδεσθαι τῆς βασιλικῆς πολυτελείας. καὶ ὅλως αἰσθησιν αὐτοῦ κατὰ μικρὸν ὑπὸ τῷ Οὐνίῳ γενησομένου παρείχεν ὁ πρεσβύτης.

XII. Ἦν δὲ Οὐίνιος ἀργυρίου μὲν ἐσχάτως καὶ παρ' ὄντινουν ἤπτων, ἔνοχος δὲ καὶ τοῖς περὶ γυναῖκας ἀμαρτήμασιν. ἔτι γὰρ ὢν νέος καὶ στρατευόμενος ὑπὸ Καλβισίῳ Σαβίνῳ τὴν πρώτην στρατείαν ἀκόλαστον οὖσαν τὴν γυναῖκα τοῦ ἡγεμόνος παρεσιγγαγε νύκτωρ εἰς τὸ στρατόπεδον ἐν ἐσθῆτι στρατιωτικῇ καὶ διέφθειρεν ἐν τοῖς ἀρχείοις, ἃ πριγκίπια καλοῦσι Ῥωμαῖοι. ἐπὶ τούτῳ δὲ Γάιος Καῖσαρ ἔδησεν αὐτόν· ἐκείνου δὲ ἀποθανόντος εὐτυχία χρησάμενος ἀπελύθη. δειπνῶν δὲ παρὰ Κλαυδίῳ Καίσαρι ποτήριον ἀργυροῦν ὑφείλετο· πυθόμενος δὲ ὁ Καῖσαρ τῇ ὑστεραία πάλιν αὐτόν ἐπὶ δεῖπνον ἐκάλεσεν, ἐλθόντι δὲ ἐκέλευσεν ἐκείνῳ μηδὲν ἀργυροῦν, ἀλλὰ κεράμια πάντα προσφέρειν καὶ παρατιθέναι τοὺς ὑπηρέτας.

3 τοῦτο μὲν οὖν διὰ τὴν Καίσαρος μετριότητα κωμικωτέραν γενομένην γέλωτος, οὐκ ὀργῆς ἄξιον ἔδοξεν· ἃ δὲ τὸν Γάλβαν ἔχων ὑφ' αὐτῷ, καὶ δυνάμενος

and when he entertained them, though there was an abundance of royal furniture and service at his command, which Nymphidius had sent him from Nero's palace, he used none of it, but only what was his own, thus winning a good repute, and showing himself a man of large mind who was superior to vulgarity. Vinius, however, by declaring to him that this dignified, simple, and unassuming course was merely a flattery of the people and a refinement of delicacy which thought itself unworthy of great things, soon persuaded him to make use of Nero's riches, and in his receptions not to shrink from a regal wealth of outlay. And in general the aged man let it be seen little by little that he was going to be under the direction of Vinius.

XII. Now Vinius was to the last degree and beyond all compare a slave of money, and was also addicted to loose conduct with women. For when he was still a young man and was serving his first campaign, under Calvisius Sabinus, he brought his commander's wife, an unchaste woman, by night into the camp in the garb of a soldier, and had commerce with her in the general's quarters (the Romans call them "principia"). For this offence Caius Caesar put him in prison; but on the death of the emperor he had the good fortune to be released. While he was at supper with Claudius Caesar, he purloined a silver drinking-cup, and Caesar, learning of it, invited him to supper again the next day, and when he came, ordered the attendants to set before him no silver plate at all, but only earthenware. This misdeed, it is true, owing to the comic turn which Caesar's moderation took, was thought worthy of laughter, not of anger; but what he did when he had μέγιστον ἐπὶ χρήμασιν, ἔπραττε, τραγικῶν παθῶν καὶ συμφορῶν μεγάλων τοῖς μὲν αἰτίαν, τοῖς δὲ πρόφασιν παρέσχευ.

XIII. Ὁ γὰρ Νυμφίδιος εὐθύς ἐπανελθόντος τοῦ Γελλιανοῦ πρὸς αὐτόν, ὃν ἔπεμψε τοῦ Γάλβα τρόπον τινὰ κατάσκοπον, ἀκούσας τῆς μὲν αὐλῆς καὶ τῶν δορυφόρων ἔπαρχον ἀποδεδεῖχθαι Κορνήλιον Λάκωνα, τὸ δὲ σύμπαν εἶναι τοῦ Οὐνίου κράτος, αὐτῷ δὲ μηδέποτε τοῦ Γάλβα στήναι πλησίον ἐγγεγονέναι μηδὲ ἐντυχεῖν ἰδίᾳ, πάντων αὐτὸν ὑφορωμένων καὶ διαφυλαττόντων, ἐθορυβήθη καὶ συναγαγὼν τοὺς ἡγεμόνας τοῦ στρατεύματος ἔφη Γάλβαν μὲν αὐτὸν εἶναι πρεσβύτην ἐπιεικῆ καὶ μέτριον, ἐλάχιστα δὲ τοῖς αὐτοῦ χρώμενον λογισμοῖς ὑπὸ Οὐνίου καὶ Λάκωνος οὐκ εὖ διοικεῖσθαι. πρὶν οὖν λαθεῖν αὐτοὺς ἦν ἔσχε Τιγελλῖνος ἰσχὺν ἐν τοῖς πράγμασι κτησαμένους, πεμπτέον εἶναι πρὸς τὸν ἡγεμόνα πρέσβεις ἀπὸ στρατοπέδου τοὺς διδάξοντας ὅτι τῶν φίλων δύο μόνους τούτους ἀποσκευασάμενος ἡδίων παρέ-3 σται πᾶσι καὶ ποθεινότερος. ἐπεὶ δὲ ταῦτα λέγων οὐκ ἔπειθεν, ἀλλ' ἄτοπον ἐδόκει καὶ ἀλλόκοτον ἡγεμόνα πρεσβύτην, ὥσπερ ἄρτι γενόμενον ἐξουσίας μεираκιον, οἷς χρήσεται φίλοις ἢ μή, ῥυθμί-ζειν, ἐτέραν ὁδὸν τραπόμενος ἔγραφε τῷ Γάλβα δεδιττόμενος, νῦν μὲν ὡς ὑπουλα καὶ μετέωρα πολλὰ τῆς πόλεως ἐχούσης, νῦν δὲ Κλώδιον Μάκρον ἐν Λιβύῃ τὰ σιτηγὰ κατέχειν, αὐθις δὲ παρακινεῖν τὰ Γερμανικὰ τάγματα, καὶ περὶ τῶν ἐν Συρίᾳ καὶ Ἰουδαίᾳ δυνάμεων ὅμοια πυνθάνεσθαι.

Galba under his control and was most influential with him in financial matters, was partly a cause and partly a pretext for tragic events and great calamities.

XIII. For Nymphidius, as soon as Gellianus had come back to him, whom he had sent to be a sort of spy upon Galba, heard that Cornelius Laco had been appointed prefect of the praetorian guard, and that Vinus was all powerful with Galba, while Gellianus had never stood near him or seen him in private, but had been looked upon with suspicion and distrust by everyone. Nymphidius was therefore much disturbed, and calling together the officers of the army, told them that Galba himself was a well-meaning and moderate old man, but did not follow his own counsels in the least, and was badly directed by Vinus and Laco. Therefore, before these men had succeeded in secretly acquiring the power which Tigellinus had held, a deputation should be sent to the emperor from the camp, to inform him that if he would put away from his company of friends only these two men, he would be more acceptable and welcome to all on his arrival. But this speech of Nymphidius did not convince his hearers; nay, they thought it a strange and unnatural thing to dictate to an aged emperor, as if he had been a youth just tasting power, what friends he was to have or not to have. Nymphidius therefore took another course, and wrote to Galba messages intended to alarm him—now, that there was much hidden distemper and unrest in the city, now, that Clodius Macer was holding back the grain supplies in Africa; again, that the legions in Germany were mutinous, and that like news came concerning the forces in Syria and Judaea. But since Galba gave 4 τοῦ δὲ Γάλβα μὴ πάνυ τὸν νοῦν προσέχοντος αὐτῷ μηδὲ πιστεύοντος ἔγνω προεπιχειρεῖν· καίτοι Κλώδιος Κέλσος Ἀντιοχεύς, ἀνὴρ ἔμφρων, εὖνους δὲ ἐκείνῳ καὶ πιστός, ἀπηγόρευε, λέγων οὐκ ἂν οἴεσθαι μίαν ἐν Ῥώμῃ συνοικίαν Καίσαρα προσειπεῖν Νυμφίδιον. ἀλλὰ πολλοὶ κατεγέλων, καὶ Μιθριδάτης ὁ Ποντικὸς ἐπισκώπτων τὴν φαλακρότητα καὶ ῥυσσοῦτητα τοῦ Γάλβα νῦν ἔφη τινὰ δοκεῖν εἶναι Ῥωμαίοις, ὀφθέντα δὲ φανεῖσθαι τῶν ἡμερῶν τούτων ἃς καλεῖται Καίσαρ, ὄνειδος.

XIV. Ἔδοξεν οὖν περὶ μέσας νύκτας εἰς τὴν παρεμβολὴν παραγαγόντας ἀναδεικνύειν αὐτοκράτορα τὸν Νυμφίδιον. πρῶτος δὲ τῶν χιλιάρχων Ἀντώνιος Ὀνωράτος ἐσπέρας γενομένης τοὺς ὑφ' ἑαυτῷ στρατιώτας συναγαγὼν ἐκάκιζε μὲν αὐτόν, ἐκάκιζε δὲ ἐκείνους ἐν ὀλίγῳ χρόνῳ τροπᾶς τοσαύτας τρεπομένους κατ' οὐδένα λογισμὸν οὐδὲ αἵρεσιν ἀμεινόνων, ἀλλὰ δαίμονός τις αὐτοὺς ἐκ προδοσίας εἰς προδοσίαν ἐλαύνοντος.

2 καὶ τὰ μὲν πρῶτα προφάσεις ἔχειν τὰ Νέρωνος ἐγκλήματα· νῦν δὲ Γάλβαν προδιδόναι, τίνα φόνον μητρὸς ἐγκαλοῦντας ἢ σφαγὴν γυναικός, ἢ ποίαν αἰδουμένους θυμέλην ἢ τραγωδίαν τοῦ αὐτοκράτορος; “Ἄλλ' οὐδὲ ἐκείνον ἐπὶ τούτοις ὑπεμίναμεν ἐγκαταλιπεῖν, ἀλλὰ Νυμφιδίῳ πεισθέντες ὅτι πρῶτος ἡμᾶς ἐγκατέλιπε καὶ πέφευγεν εἰς

3 Αἴγυπτον. πότερον οὖν Νέρωνι Γάλβαν ἐπιθυσώμεθα, καὶ τὸν ἐκ Νυμφιδίας ἐλόμενοι Καίσαρα τὸν ἐκ Λιβίας ἀνέλωμεν, ὡς τὸν ἐξ Ἀγριπ-

no heed to him whatever and put no confidence in his reports, he determined not to wait before making his attempt. And yet Clodius Celsus of Antioch, a man of good sense, who was well-disposed and faithful to him, tried to dissuade him, saying that in his opinion not a single precinct in Rome would give Nymphidius the title of Caesar. But many ridiculed Galba, and especially Mithridates of Pontus, who scoffed about his bald head and wrinkled face, and said that now the Romans thought him a great personage, but when they saw him they would regard all the days in which he had borne the title of Caesar as a disgrace to them.

XIV. It was decided, therefore, to bring Nymphidius into the camp about midnight and proclaim him emperor. But when it was evening, the leading military tribune, Antonius Honoratus, calling together the soldiers under his command, reviled himself, and reviled them for changing about so often in so short a time, not according to any plan or choice of better things, but because some evil spirit drove them from one treachery to another. In the first instance, he said, they had an excuse in the crimes of Nero; but now, if they were to betray Galba, what charge of murdering his mother or slaying his wife could they bring against him, or what feelings of shame that their emperor should appear in public as musician or tragic actor? "Nay, not even with these provocations would we consent to abandon a Nero, but we had to be persuaded by Nymphidius that Nero had first abandoned us and fled to Egypt. Shall we, then, sacrifice Galba after Nero, and choosing the son of Nymphidia as our Caesar, shall we slay the scion of the house of Livia, πίνης ἀνείλομεν; ἢ τούτῳ δίκην ἐπιθέντες ὧν δέδρακε, τιμωροὶ μὲν Νέρωνος, Γάλβα δὲ φύλακες ἀγαθοὶ καὶ πιστοὶ φανῶμεν;”

Ταῦτα λέγουσι τῷ χιλιάρχῳ προσέθεντο πάντες οἱ στρατιῶται, καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους προσιόντες ἐμμένειν παρεκάλουν τῇ πρὸς τὸν αὐτοκράτορα πίστει
 4 καὶ τοὺς πλείους μετέστησαν. ἀρθείσης δὲ βοῆς, εἴτε πεισθεὶς ὁ Νυμφίδιος, ὡς φασιν ἔνιοι, καλεῖν αὐτὸν ἤδη τοὺς στρατιώτας, εἴτε προλαβεῖν σπεύδων τὸ θορυβοῦν ἔτι καὶ διστάζον, ὑπὸ φωτὶ πολλῷ προῆει, λόγον τινὰ κομίζων ἐν βιβλίῳ γεγραμμένον ὑπὸ Κιγγωνίου Βάρρωνος, ὃν ἐκμε-
 5 μελετήκει πρὸς τοὺς στρατιώτας εἰπεῖν. ἰδὼν δὲ κεκλεισμένας τοῦ στρατοπέδου τὰς πύλας καὶ περὶ τὰ τεῖχη πολλοὺς ὀπλισμένους ἔδεισε· καὶ προσιὼν ἠρώτα τί βούλονται καὶ τίνας κελεύσαντος ἐν ὄπλοις γεγόνασιν. ἀπαντώσης δ' αὐτῷ παρὰ πάντων μιᾶς φωνῆς, Γάλβαν αὐτοκράτορα γινώσκειν, κάκεινος ὁμόσε χωρῶν ἐπευφήμει καὶ
 6 τοὺς ἐπομένους ἐκέλευε. τῶν δὲ παρὰ τὰς πύλας παρέντων αὐτὸν εἰσελθεῖν μετ' ὀλίγων αὐτὸς ἀκοντίζεται λόγχῃ· καὶ ταύτην μὲν ἐδέξατο πρὸ αὐτοῦ θυρεῷ Σεπτίμιος, ἄλλων δὲ γυμνοῖς ξίφεσιν ἐπιφερομένων φυγῶν καὶ διωχθεὶς ἐν οἰκῆματι στρατιώτου σφάττεται. καὶ τὸν νεκρὸν εἰς μέσον ἐλκύσαντες καὶ περιβαλόντες κιγκλίδα θέαμα τοῖς βουλομένοις μεθ' ἡμέραν παρέσχον.

XV. Οὕτῳ δὲ τοῦ Νυμφιδίου καταστρέψαντος ὁ Γάλβας πυθόμενος, καὶ τῶν συνωμοτῶν αὐτοῦ as we have slain the son of Agrippina? Or, shall we inflict punishment on Nymphidius for his evil deeds, and thereby show ourselves avengers of Nero, but true and faithful guardians of Galba?"

So spoke the tribune, and all his soldiers took his side, and visiting their fellow-soldiers, exhorted them to maintain their fidelity to the emperor; and they brought over the greater part of them. But now loud shouts arose, and Nymphidius, either because he was convinced, as some say, that the soldiers were already calling him, or because he was anxious to win over betimes the element that was still unruly and mutinous, came up in a glare of lights, carrying in his hand a speech written out for him by Cingonius Varro; this he had got by heart to deliver to the soldiers. But when he saw the gate of the camp closed and a great number of men under arms along the walls, he was struck with fear; and drawing near, he asked what they meant, and by whose command they were under arms. One cry came to him from the lips of all, and this was that they acknowledged Galba as emperor, whereupon he also, as he joined them, shouted in approval, and bade his followers do the same. But after the soldiers at the gate had permitted him to enter with a few followers, a lance was hurled at him. This weapon was received in the shield which Septimius interposed, but others assailed him, with drawn swords, whereupon he fled, was pursued, and was cut down in a soldier's hut. His dead body was dragged forth, surrounded with a paling, and exposed to public view all day.

XV. Such was the violent end of Nymphidius, and when Galba learned of it, he ordered such of his

- κελεύσας ἀποθανεῖν ὅσοι μὴ δι' αὐτῶν εὐθὺς ἀπέθανον, ἐν οἷς ἦν καὶ Κιγγώνιος ὁ τὸν λόγον γράψας καὶ Μιθριδάτης ὁ Ποντικός, ἔδοξε μὴ νομίμως, εἰ καὶ δικαίως, μηδὲ δημοτικῶς ἀνηρηκέναι πρὸ κρίσεως ἄνδρας οὐκ ἀσήμους. ἕτερον γὰρ ἡγεμονίας σχῆμα προσεδέχοντο πάντες, ἔξαπατώ-
 2 μνοι συνήθως ὑπὸ τῶν ἐν ἀρχῇ λεγομένων. ἔτι δὲ μᾶλλον ἠνίασεν αὐτοὺς ἀνὴρ ὑπατικὸς καὶ Νέρωνι πιστὸς ἀποθανεῖν κελευσθεῖς, Πετρώνιος Τουρπιλιανός. Μάκρον¹ γὰρ ἐν Λιβύῃ διὰ Τρεβωνίου¹ καὶ Φοντήϊον ἐν Γερμανίᾳ διὰ Οὐᾶλεντος ἀνελὼν πρόφασιν εἶχεν ἐν ὅπλοις καὶ στρατοπέδοις ὄντας φοβηθῆναι. Τουρπιλιανὸν δέ, γέροντα γυμνὸν καὶ ἄνοπλον, λόγου μεταλαβεῖν οὐδὲν ἐκώλυεν, εἴ τις ἦν ἐπαγγέλλεται μετριότητα τοῖς πράγμασιν² ἔργῳ φυλάξειν ἔμελλε.
- 3 Ταῦτα μὲν οὖν τοιαύτας ἔχει μέμψεις. ἐπεὶ δὲ προσιῶν ἀπέιχε τῆς πόλεως περὶ πέντε καὶ εἴκοσι σταδίους, ἐνετύγχανεν ἀκοσμία καὶ θορύβῳ τῶν ἐρετῶν τὴν ὁδὸν προκατεχόντων καὶ περικεχυμένων πανταχόθεν. οὗτοι δὲ ἦσαν οὓς εἰς ἐν τάγμα
 4 ὁ Νέρων συλλοχίσας ἀπέφηνε στρατιώτας· καὶ τότε παρόντες ἐκβεβαιώσασθαι τὴν στρατείαν οὐτ' ὀφθῆναι τοῖς ἀπαντῶσιν οὐτ' ἀκουσθῆναι παρίεσαν τὸν αὐτοκράτορα, ἀλλ' ἐθορύβουν βοῇ σημεῖα τῷ τάγματι καὶ χῶραν αἰτοῦντες. ἐκείνου δὲ ὑπερτιθεμένου καὶ πάλιν εἰπεῖν³ κελεύσαντος,

¹ Μάκρον (as in xiii. 3), Τρεβωνίου, suggested by Sint.² for Μάκρωνα and Τρεβωνιανοῦ of the MSS.

² πράγμασιν Sint.² has γρίμμασιν (in his letters), after Emporius.

³ πάλιν εἰπεῖν Bekker has παρέικειν (yield), after Coraës.

fellow-conspirators as had not at once taken their own lives to be put to death. Among these was Cingonius, who wrote the speech for Nymphidius, and Mithridates of Pontus. But it was held to be illegal and despotic, even though just, to put to death without a trial men who were not without distinction. For everyone expected a different mode of government, being thoroughly deceived, as is usual, by assurances made in the beginning. And people took it still more amiss when Petronius Turpilianus, a man of consular dignity who was faithful to Nero, was ordered to take his own life. For in having Macer taken off in Africa at the hands of Trebonius, and Fonteius in Germany at the hands of Valens, Galba could excuse himself with the fear they inspired as commanders of armed forces. But there was no reason why Turpilianus, a helpless old man and unarmed, should not have a chance to defend himself, if the emperor was really going to observe that moderation in his dealings which he promised.

Such, then, was the censure to which these acts exposed Galba. Moreover, when, in his approach to the city, he was distant from it about five-and-twenty furlongs, he fell in with a disorderly and tumultuous crowd of seamen, who beset his way and encompassed him on all sides. These were men whom Nero had formed into a legion and given the title of soldiers. And now they were there to enforce their just rights as soldiers, and would not suffer the emperor to be seen or heard by those who came to meet him, but with tumultuous shouts demanded standards for their legion and regular quarters. When Galba put off their demand and told them to renew it at another time, they declared ἀρνήσεως σχῆμα τὴν ἀναβολὴν εἶναι φάσκοντες ἠγανάκτουν καὶ παρείποντο μὴ φειδόμενοι βοῆς. ἐνίων δὲ καὶ τὰς μαχαίρας σπασαμένων, ἐκέλευσε τοὺς ἵππεῖς ἐμβαλεῖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Γάλβας. ὑπέστη δὲ οὐδεὶς ἐκείνων, ἀλλ' οἱ μὲν εὐθύς ἀνατραπέντες, οἱ δὲ φεύγοντες διεφθάρησαν, οὐ χρηστὸν οὐδὲ αἷσιον ποιοῦντες τῷ Γάλβᾳ τὸν οἰωνὸν εἰσιόντι διὰ πολλοῦ φόνου καὶ νεκρῶν τοσοῦτων εἰς τὴν πόλιν. ἀλλ' εἰ καὶ τις αὐτοῦ κατεφρόνει πρότερον ἄσθενους καὶ γέροντος ὀρωμένου, τότε πᾶσι φρικώδης καὶ φοβερὸς ἐγένετο.

XVI. Βουλόμενος δὲ τῆς περὶ τὰς δωρεὰς ἀμετρίας καὶ πολυτελείας τοῦ Νέρωνος ἀποδεικνύναι μεγάλην μεταβολήν, ἀστοχεῖν ἐδόκει τοῦ πρόποντος. Κάνου γὰρ αὐλήσαντος αὐτῷ παρὰ 1060 δεῖπνον (ἀκρόαμα δὲ ἦν ὁ Κάνος εὐδοκιμούμενον) ἐπαινέσας καὶ ἀποδεξάμενος ἐκέλευσεν αὐτῷ κομισθῆναι τὸ γλωσσόκομον· καὶ λαβὼν χρυσοῦς τινὰς ἐπέδωκε τῷ Κάνῳ, φήσας ἐκ τῶν ἰδίων, οὐκ

2 ἐκ τῶν δημοσίων χαρίζεσθαι. τὰς δὲ δωρεὰς ἅς Νέρων ἔδωκε τοῖς περὶ σκηνὴν καὶ παλαίστραν, ἀπαιτεῖσθαι συντόνως κελεύσας πλὴν τοῦ δεκάτου μέρους, εἶτα μικρὰ καὶ γλίσχρα κομιζόμενος (ἀνηλώκεσαν γὰρ οἱ πλείστοι τῶν λαβόντων, ἐφήμεροι καὶ σατυρικοὶ τοῖς βίοις ἄνθρωποι) τοὺς πριαμένους παρ' αὐτῶν ἢ λαβόντας ὅτιοῦν

3 ἀνεζήτει καὶ παρ' ἐκείνων ἐξέπραττε. τοῦ δὲ πράγματος ὄρον οὐκ ἔχοντας, ἀλλὰ πόρρω νεμομένου καὶ προϊόντος ἐπὶ πολλούς, αὐτὸς μὲν

that the postponement was merely a way of refusing their demands, and were incensed, and followed along with unremitting shouts. Some actually drew their swords, and then Galba ordered his horsemen to charge upon them. Not a man of them stood his ground, but some were done to death at once in the rout, and others as they fled, nor was it a happy and auspicious omen that Galba should enter the city through so much slaughter and so many dead bodies. But whereas many had before this despised him and looked upon him as a weak old man, now all regarded him with shuddering fear.

XVI. And now, in his desire to display a great change from Nero's immoderate and extravagant manner of giving, he was thought to fall short of what was fitting. For example, after Canus had played on the flute for him at a banquet (now Canus was a performer of high repute), he was loud in his praises and ordered his purse to be brought to him; and taking from it a few gold pieces, he gave them to Canus, with the remark that the gift was made from his own, and not from the public moneys. Again, he ordered that the gifts which Nero had made to people of the theatre and palaestra should be demanded back again with strictness, all but the tenth part; and then, when he got only slight and grudging returns (for most of the recipients had squandered their largess, being men of a loose and improvident way of living), he had a search made for such as had bought or received anything whatsoever from them, and tried to exact it from these. The business had no limits, but was far extended and affected many; it gave the emperor himself a bad ἠδόξει, φθόνον δὲ καὶ μῖσος εἶχεν Οὐίνιος, ὡς τοῖς μὲν ἄλλοις ἅπασιν ἀνελεύθερον παρέχων τὸν ἡγεμόνα καὶ μικρολόγον, αὐτὸς δὲ χρώμενος ἀσώτως καὶ λαμβάνων πάντα καὶ πιπράσκων.

4 ὁ μὲν γὰρ Ἑσίοδος

ἀρχομένου τε πίθου καὶ λήγοντος κορέσασθαι φησὶ δεῖν, ὁ δὲ Οὐίνιος ὀρῶν ἀσθενῆ καὶ γέροντα τὸν Γάλβαν ἐνεπίμπλατο τῆς τύχης, ὡς ἅμα μὲν ἀρχομένης, ἅμα δὲ φθινούσης.

XVII. Ὁ δὲ πρεσβύτης ἠδικεῖτο τὰ μὲν πρῶτα τοῦ Οὐνίου κακῶς διοικούντος, ἃ δὲ αὐτὸς ὀρθῶς προηρεῖτο διαβάλλοντος ἢ κωλύοντος· οἶον ἦν τὸ περὶ τὰς κολάσεις τῶν Νερωνιανῶν.

2 ἀπέκτεινε γὰρ τοὺς πονηροὺς, ἐν οἷς ἦν ὁ Ἥλιος καὶ Πολύκλειτος καὶ Πετῖνος καὶ Πατρόβιος. ὁ δὲ δῆμος ἐκρότει, καὶ δι' ἀγορᾶς αὐτῶν ἀγομένων ἐβόα καλὴν μὲν εἶναι καὶ θεοφιλῆ πομπήν, ἀπαιτεῖν δὲ καὶ θεοὺς καὶ ἀνθρώπους τὸν διδάσκαλον καὶ παιδαγωγὸν τῆς τυραννίδος Τιγελλῖνον. ἐφθάκει δὲ ὁ γενναῖος προειληφῶς ἀρραβῶσι

3 μεγάλοις τὸν Οὐίνιον. εἶτα Τουρπιλιανὸς μὲν, ὅτι μὴ προεδίδου μηδὲ ἐμίσει τὸν ἡγεμόνα τοιοῦτον ὄντα μισούμενος, ἄλλο δὲ μηδὲ ἐν μέγα συναδικήσας, ἀπέθανεν· ὁ δὲ καὶ ποιήσας ἄξιον θανάτου Νέρωνα καὶ γενόμενον τοιοῦτον ἐγκαταλιπὼν καὶ προδοὺς περιῆν, μέγα δίδαγμα

¹ Works and Days, 366.

name, and brought envy and hatred upon Vinius as having made the emperor ungenerous and sordid with everybody else, while he himself used money lavishly, taking everything that was offered and selling freely. For Hesiod¹ bids men to and so Vinius, seeing that Galba was old and feeble, sated himself with the good fortune which he thought was just beginning and at the same time was soon to end.

“ Drink without stint at the beginning and end of the cask,”

XVII. But the aged emperor suffered injustice not only when Vinius, as at first, administered affairs badly, but also when he brought into odium or prevented wise measures set on foot by Galba himself; as, for instance, in the matter of punishing the adherents of Nero. For Galba set out to kill the bad ones, among whom were Helius and Polycleitus and Petinus and Patrobius. And the people applauded the act, and shouted, as the culprits were dragged through the forum to their doom, that it was a goodly procession indeed, and acceptable to the gods, but that gods and men alike demanded justice on the tutor and teacher of the tyrant, namely, Tigellinus. That worthy minister, however, had won the protection of Vinius betimes, by means of large advances. Again, Turpilianus, who was hated merely because he would not betray nor show hatred to Nero in spite of all that emperor's crimes, but apart from this had participated in no one serious offence, was put to death; whereas the man who had made Nero worthy of death, and betrayed and forsook him when he had come to that pass, was left alive – a great

τοῦ μηδὲν ἄπρακτον εἶναι παρὰ Οὐνίῳ μηδὲ 4 ἀνέλπιστον τοῖς διδοῦσιν. οὐδενὸς γὰρ οὕτω θεάματος ἐρασθεῖς ὁ Ῥωμαίων δῆμος ὡς τοῦ Τιγελλίνου ἰδεῖν ἀπαγόμενον, οὐδὲ παυσάμενος ἐν πᾶσι θεάτροις καὶ σταδίοις αἰτούμενος ἐκείνου, ἐπεπλήχθη διαγράμματι τοῦ αὐτοκράτορος Τι-γελλίνου μὲν οὐ πολὺν ἔτι βιώσεσθαι φάσκον-τος χρόνον ὑπὸ φθινιάδος νόσου δαπανώμενον, ἐκείνους δὲ παραιτουμένους μὴ διαγριαίνειν 5 μηδὲ τυραννικὴν ποιεῖν τὴν ἡγεμονίαν. ἀχθο-μένου δὲ τοῦ δήμου καταγελῶντες ὁ μὲν Τιγελλῖνος ἔθυσσε σωτήρια καὶ παρεσκεύασε λαμπρὰν ἐστίασιν, ὁ δὲ Οὐίνιος ἀναστὰς παρὰ τοῦ αὐτοκράτορος μετὰ δεῖπνον ἐκώμασεν ὡς ἐκείνου, ἄγων τὴν θυγατέρα χήραν οὔσαν. καὶ προὔπιεν ὁ Τιγελλῖνος αὐτῇ πέντε καὶ εἴκοσι μυριάδας ἀργυρίου, καὶ τῶν παλλακίδων τὴν ἀγελαρ-χούσαν ἐκέλευσε τὸν περιδέριον κόσμον ἀφελομένην ἐκείνη περιάψαι, πεντεκαίδεκα μυριάδων εἶναι λεγόμενον.

XVIII. Ἐκ δὲ τούτου καὶ τὰ μετρίως πρατ-τόμενα διαβολὴν εἶχεν, ὡς τὰ πρὸς τοὺς Γαλάτας Οὐνδίκι συναραμένους. ἑδόκουν γὰρ οὐ φιλαν-θρωπία τοῦ αὐτοκράτορος, ἀλλὰ ὠνούμενοι παρὰ Οὐνίου τυγχάνειν ἀνέσεώς τε δασμῶν καὶ
 2 πολιτείας. οἱ μὲν οὖν πολλοὶ διὰ ταῦτα πρὸς τὴν ἡγεμονίαν ἀπηχθάνοντο, τοὺς δὲ στρατιώτας τὴν δωρεὰν μὴ κομιζομένους ἐν ἀρχῇ μὲν ἐλπίς παρήγεν ὡς, εἰ καὶ μὴ τοσοῦτον, ἀλλ' ὅσον

object-lesson to show that Vinius could do anything and fulfil any expectation for those who gave him enough. For there was no spectacle on which the Roman people had so set their hearts as that of Tigellinus dragged away to punishment, and in all the theatres and circuses they would not cease demanding him, until they were quelled by an edict of the emperor in which he declared that Tigellinus was wasting away with consumption and had not much longer to live, and advised them not to exasperate the government or force it to be tyrannical. Then, in mockery of the dissatisfied people, Tigellinus offered sacrifices for his preservation and prepared a splendid feast; and Vinius, rising from beside the emperor, afterwards went to a drinking-bout in Tigellinus' house, leading his daughter, who was a widow. Tigellinus pledged her health with a gift of twenty-five myriads of money,¹ and ordered the governess of his concubines to take the necklace from her own neck and put it about hers. The necklace was said to be worth fifteen myriads.

XVIII. After this, even the reasonable measures of the emperor fell under censure, as, for instance, his treatment of the Gauls who had conspired with Vindex. For they were thought to have obtained their remission of tribute and their civil rights, not through the kindness of the emperor, but by purchase from Vinius. Such were the reasons, then, why most of the people hated the government; but the soldiers, though they had not received their promised largess, were led on at first by the hope that Galba would give them, if not the whole of it, at least as much as

¹ See the note on Chap. ii. 2.

Νέρων ἔδωκεν, ἀποδώσοντος. ἐπεὶ δὲ μεμφομένους ἀκούσας ἀφήκε φωνὴν ἡγεμόνι μεγάλῳ πρέπουσαν, εἰπὼν εἰωθέναι καταλέγειν στρατιώτας, οὐκ ἀγοράζειν, πυθνομένοις τοῦτο δεινὸν εἰσῆλθε 100 μῖσος καὶ ἄγριον πρὸς αὐτόν. ἐδόκει γὰρ οὐκ αὐτὸς ἀποστερεῖν ἴσος, ἀλλὰ νομοθετεῖν καὶ διδάσκειν τοὺς μεθ' αὐτὸν αὐτοκράτορας.

- 3 Ἄλλὰ τὸ μὲν¹ ἐν Ῥώμῃ τυφλὸν ἦν ἔτι κίνημα, καὶ τις αἰδῶς ἅμα πρὸς παρόντα τὸν Γάλβαν ἀμβλύτητα καὶ μέλλησιν ἐνεποίει τῷ νεωτερισμῷ, καὶ τὸ μηδεμίαν ἀρχὴν ἐμφανῆ μεταβολῆς ὀραῖσθαι συνέστελλε καὶ συνέκρυπτεν ἁμῶς γέ πως τὴν δυσμένειαν αὐτῶν. οἱ δὲ πρότερον ὑπὸ Οὐεργινίῳ γενόμενοι, τότε δ' ὄντες ὑπὸ Φλάκκῳ περὶ Γερμανίαν, μεγάλων μὲν ἀξιούντες αὐτοὺς διὰ τὴν μάχην ἣν ἐμαχέσαντο πρὸς Οὐῖνδικα, μηδενὸς δὲ τυγχάνοντες, ἀπαρηγόρητοι τοῖς 4 ἄρχουσιν ἦσαν. αὐτὸν δὲ τὸν Φλάκκον ὑπὸ συντόνου ποδάγρας ἀδύνατον ὄντα τῷ σώματι καὶ πραγμάτων ἄπειρον ἐν οὐδενὶ λόγῳ τὸ παράπαν ἐποιούντο. καὶ ποτε θέας οὔσης, καὶ τῶν χιλιάρχων καὶ λοχαγῶν τὸ Ῥωμαίοις σύνηθες εὐτυχίαν ἐπευχομένων τῷ αὐτοκράτορι Γάλβα, διεθορύβησαν οἱ πολλοὶ τὸ πρῶτον, εἶτα ταῖς εὐχαῖς ἐπιμενόντων ἐκείνων ἀντεφώνουν "Εἰ ἄξιος."

XIX. Τοιαῦτα δὲ ἕτερα καὶ τῶν ὑπὸ Τιγελλίνῳ ταγμάτων ὑβριζόντων πολλάκις, ἐπέμπετο γράμματα τῷ Γάλβα παρὰ τῶν ἐπιτρόπων· ὁ δὲ φοβηθεὶς ὡς μὴ μόνον διὰ τὸ γῆρας, ἀλλὰ καὶ

¹ τὸ μὲν Coraës and Bekker have τῶν μὲν, the correction of Reiske.

Nero had given. When, however, Galba heard that they were complaining, he spoke out as became a great emperor, and declared that it was his custom to enroll soldiers, not to buy them; whereupon they began to cherish a dire and savage hatred towards him. For they thought that he was not only defrauding them himself, but laying down the law and giving instructions for succeeding emperors.

But the agitation at Rome was still smouldering, and at the same time a certain respect for Galba's presence blunted and delayed the spirit of revolution, and the absence of any manifest occasion for a change repressed and kept under cover, somehow or other, the resentment of the soldiers. But the army which had formerly served under Verginius, and was now serving under Flaccus in Germany, thinking themselves deserving of great rewards on account of the battle they had fought against Vindex, and getting nothing, could not be appeased by their officers. Of Flaccus himself, who was physically incapacitated by an acute gout, and inexperienced in the conduct of affairs, they made no account whatever. And once at a spectacle, when the military tribunes and centurions, after the Roman custom, invoked health and happiness upon the emperor Galba, the mass of the soldiery raised a storm of dissent at first, and then, when the officers persisted in their invocation, cried out in response, "If he deserves it."

XIX. The legions also that were under the command of Tigellinus frequently behaved with similar insolence, and letters on the subject were sent to Galba by his agents. So the emperor, fearing that it was not only his old age but also his διὰ τὴν ἀπαιδίαν καταφρονούμενος, ἐβουλεύετο παῖδα θέσθαι τῶν ἐπιφανῶν τινα νεανίσκον καὶ

 2 διάδοχον ἀποδείξαι τῆς ἀρχῆς. ἦν δὲ Μάρκος Ὅθων, ἀνὴρ γένει μὲν οὐκ ἀφανῆς, τρυφῇ δὲ καὶ φιληδονίαις εὐθύς ἐκ παίδων ἐν ὀλίγοις Ῥωμαίων διεφθαρμένος. ὡς δὲ τὸν Ἀλέξανδρον Ὅμηρος “Ἐλένης πόσιν ἠϋκόμοιο,” μηδὲν ἔχοντα πρὸς δόξαν ἄλλο σεμνύνων ἀπὸ τῆς γυναικός, ὀνομάζει πολλάκις, οὕτως γεγωνὸς περιβόητος ἐν Ῥώμῃ διὰ τὸν Ποππαίας γάμον, ἧς ἦρα μὲν ὁ Νέρων Κρισπίνῳ συνούσης, ἔτι δ’ αἰδούμενος τὴν ἑαυτοῦ
 3 γυναῖκα καὶ τὴν μητέρα φοβούμενος ὑψῆκε τὸν
 Ὅθωνα πειρῶντα τὴν Ποππαίαν. φίλῳ δὲ τῷ Ὅθωνι καὶ συμβιωτῇ διὰ τὴν ἀσωτίαν ἐχρήτο, καὶ σκωπτόμενος ὑπ’ αὐτοῦ πολλάκις εἰς μικρο-λογίαν καὶ ἀνελευθερίαν ἔχαιρε. λέγεται δὲ ποτε μύρῳ τῶν πολυτελῶν χρισαμένου τοῦ Νέρωνος καὶ τὸν Ὅθωνα καταβρέξαντος, ἐκεῖνος πάλιν τῇ ὑστεραία δεχόμενος αὐτὸν ἅμα πολλα-χόθεν ἀργυροῦς καὶ χρυσοῦς προβαλεῖν ἄφνω 4 σωλήνας, ὥσπερ ὕδωρ τὸ μύρον ἐκχέοντας καὶ κατακλύζοντας. ἀλλὰ τὴν γε Ποππαίαν προμοι-χεύσας τῷ Νέρωνι, καὶ διαφθείρας ταῖς εἰς ἐκεῖνον ἐλπίσιν, ἔπεισεν ἀποστῆναι τοῦ ἀνδρός.
 ἐλθούσης δὲ παρ’ αὐτὸν ὡς γαμετῆς οὐκ ἠγίπα μετέχων, ἀλλ’ ἤσχαλλε μεταδιδούς, οὐδὲ αὐτῆς ἀχθομένης, ὡς φασι, τῇ ζηλοτυπία τῆς Ποππαίας.
 5 καὶ γὰρ ἀποκλείσαι τὸν Νέρωνα λέγεται μὴ παρόντος τοῦ Ὅθωνος, εἴτε τῆς ἡδονῆς ἀφαιρούσα τὸ πλῆσμιον, εἴτε, ὡς φασιν ἔνιοι, βαρυνομένη childlessness that brought him into contempt, planned to adopt some young man of illustrious family and appoint him his successor. Marcus Otho, now, was a man of good lineage, but from his very childhood corrupted by luxury and the pursuit of pleasure as few Romans were. And as Homer often calls Paris "the husband of fair-haired Helen," giving him a dignity borrowed from his wife, since he had no other title to fame, so Otho was celebrated at Rome for his marriage with Poppaea. With Poppaea Nero was enamoured while she was the wife of Crispinus, but since he respected his own wife still and feared his mother, he put Otho up to soliciting her favours for him. For because of Otho's lavish prodigality Nero made an intimate friend of him, and was well pleased to be rallied by him often for parsimony and meanness. Thus, we are told that Nero once anointed himself with a costly ointment and sprinkled a little of it upon Otho; whereupon Otho, entertaining the emperor in his turn on the following day, suddenly brought into play gold and silver pipes on all sides of the room, out of which the ointment gushed freely, like so much water. But as for Poppaea, Otho corrupted her with hopes of Nero's favour and seduced her first himself, and persuaded her to leave her husband. However, after she had come to live with him as his wife, he was not content to have only a share in her favours, and was loth to give Nero a share, while Poppaea herself, as we are told, was not displeased at the rivalry between them. For it is said that she would shut out Nero although Otho was not at home; whether it was that she sought to keep his pleasure in her from cloying, or whether, as some τὸν Καίσαρος γάμον, ἐραστῇ δὲ μὴ φεύγουσα χρῆσθαι διὰ τὸ φιλακόλαστον. ἐκινδύνευσεν οὖν ὁ Ὀθων ἀποθανεῖν· καὶ παράλογον ἦν ὅτι τὴν γυναῖκα καὶ ἀδελφὴν ἀποκτείνας διὰ τὸν Ποππαίας γάμον ἐφείσατο τοῦ Ὀθωνος.

XX. Σενέκαν δὲ εἶχεν εὖνουν· κακείνου τὸν
 Νέρωνα πείσαντος καὶ παραινέσαντος ἐξεπέμφθη Λυσιτανῶν στρατηγὸς ἐπὶ τὸν Ὀκεανόν. καὶ παρέσχεν ἑαυτὸν οὐκ ἄχαριν οὐδὲ ἐπαχθῆ τοῖς ὑπηκόοις, εἰδὼς φυγῆς ὑποκόρισμα καὶ παρακά-2 λυμμα τὴν ἀρχὴν αὐτῷ δεδομένην. ἀποστάντος δὲ Γάλβα πρῶτος αὐτῷ¹ προσεχώρησε τῶν ἡγεμόνων, καὶ φέρων ὅσον εἶχεν ἐν ἐκπώμασι καὶ τραπέζαις ἄργυρον καὶ χρυσὸν ἔδωκε κατακόψαι ποιουμένῳ νόμισμα, καὶ τῶν οἰκετῶν ἔδωρήσατο 1062
 τοὺς εἰθισμένους περὶ δίαιταν ἡγεμόνι ἐμμελῶς ὑπουργεῖν. καὶ τὰ ἄλλα πιστὸς ἦν αὐτῷ, καὶ διδοὺς πείσαν οὐδενὸς ἦττον ἐδόκει πραγμάτων ἔμπειρος εἶναι· καὶ βαδίζοντι τὴν ὁδὸν ἄπασαν ἐφ' ἡμέρας πολλὰς συνοχούμενος διετέλεσεν.
 3 ἐν δὲ τῇ συνοδίᾳ καὶ τῇ συνηθείᾳ τὸν Οὐίνιον ἐξεθεράπευσεν ὁμιλία καὶ δώροις, μάλιστα δὲ τῶν πρωτείων ὑφιέμενος αὐτῷ τό γε μετ' ἐκείνον δύνασθαι δι' ἐκεῖνον εἶχε βεβαίως. τῷ δὲ ἀν-επιφθόνῳ περιῆν, προῖκα συμπράττων πάντα τοῖς δεομένοις, καὶ παρέχων ἑαυτὸν εὐπροσήγορον καὶ φιλάνθρωπον ἅπασιν. πλείστα δὲ τοῖς στρατιωτικοῖς συνελάμβανε καὶ προήγε πολλοὺς ἐφ'

¹ αὐτῷ Coraës and Bekker, after Du Soul: αὐτός.

¹ Cf. Tacitus, Annals, xiii. 45 f.

say, she recoiled from a marriage with the emperor, but was not averse to having him as a lover, out of mere wantonness. Otho, accordingly, came into peril of his life; and it was strange that although his own wife and sister were put to death by Nero on account of his marriage with Poppaea, Otho himself was spared.¹

XX. But Otho had the good will of Seneca, by whose advice and persuasion Nero sent him out as governor of Lusitania to the shores of the western ocean. Here he made himself acceptable and pleasing to his subjects, although he knew that his office had been given him to disguise and mitigate his banishment. When Galba revolted, Otho was the first of the provincial governors to go over to him, and bringing all the gold and silver that he had in the shape of drinking-cups and tables, he gave it to him for conversion into coin, presenting him also with those of his servants who were qualified to give suitable service for the table of an emperor. In other ways he was trusted by Galba, and when put to the test was thought to be inferior to none as a man of affairs; and during the entire journey of the emperor he would travel in the same carriage with him for many days together. Moreover, amid the intimacies of the common journey he paid court to Vinius, both in person and by means of gifts, and, above all else, by yielding to him the first place, he got his aid in holding securely the place of influence next to him. But in avoiding envy he was superior to Vinius, for he gave his petitioners every aid without any reward, and showed himself easy of access and kindly to all men. But it was the soldiers whom he was most ready to help, and he advanced many of ἡγεμονίας, τὰ μὲν αἰτούμενος ἀπὸ τοῦ αὐτοκρά-4 τορος, τὰ δὲ τὸν Οὐίνιον καὶ τοὺς ἀπελευθέρους παρακαλῶν Ἴκελον καὶ Ἀσιατικόν· οὗτοι γὰρ ἦσαν ἐν δυνάμει μάλιστα τῶν περὶ τὴν αὐλήν.

 ὁσάκις δὲ τὸν Γάλβαν εἰστία, τὴν παραφυλάττουσαν ἀεὶ σπείραν ἐδέκαζε χρυσοῦν ἐκάστω διανέμων, οἷς τιμᾶν αὐτὸν ἐδόκει καταπολιτευόμενος καὶ δημαγωγῶν τὸ στρατιωτικόν.

XXI. Ἄλλ' οὖν βουλευομένοι γε τοῦ Γάλβα περὶ διαδόχου τὸν Ὄθωνα παρεισηγεν ὁ Οὐίνιος, οὐδὲ τοῦτο προῖκα πράσσω, ἀλλ' ἐπὶ γάμφῳ τῆς θυγατρὸς, ὁμολογίας γενομένης γαμεῖν αὐτὴν τὸν Ὄθωνα παῖδα τοῦ Γάλβα καὶ διάδοχον ἀποδειχθέντα τῆς ἡγεμονίας. ὁ δὲ Γάλβας ἀεὶ μὲν ἦν δῆλος πρὸ τοῦ ἰδίου τὸ κοινὸν τιθέμενος καὶ ζητῶν οὐχ αὐτῷ θέσθαι τὸν ἡδιστον, ἀλλὰ Ῥωμαίοις 2 τὸν ὠφελιμώτατον. δοκεῖ δὲ μὴδ' ἂν ἐπὶ τοῖς ἰδίοις χρήμασι μόνον ἐλέσθαι τὸν Ὄθωνα κληρο-νόμον, ἀκόλαστον εἰδὼς καὶ πολυτελεῆ καὶ πεντακισχιλίων μυριάδων ὀφλήμασι βεβαπτισμένον.
 ὄθεν ἀκούσας τοῦ Οὐίνιου σιωπῇ καὶ πρῶως ὑπερέθετο τὴν διάθεσιν. ἀποδείξας δ' αὐτὸν ὑπάτου καὶ συνάρχοντα τὸν Οὐίνιον ἐπίδοξος ἦν ἔτους ἀρχῇ τὸν διάδοχον ἀναγορεύσειν· καὶ τὸ στρατιωτικὸν ἠδέως εἶχε τὸν Ὄθωνα παρ' ὄντιν οὖν ἄλλον ἀναγορευθῆναι.

XXII. Καταλαμβάνει δ' αὐτὸν ἔτι μέλλοντα

¹ See the note on Chap. ii. 2.

them to places of command, sometimes asking the appointment from the emperor, and sometimes getting the support of Vinius, and of the freedmen Icelus and Asiaticus; for these were the most influential men at court. And as often as he entertained Galba, he would compliment the cohort on duty for the day by giving each man a gold piece, thus showing honour to the emperor, as it was thought, while really scheming for the support and favour of the soldiery.

XXI. So, then, while Galba was deliberating upon a successor, Vinius suggested Otho. And yet not even this was done for nothing, but as a return for the marriage of his daughter. For it had been agreed that Otho should marry her when he had been adopted by Galba and declared his successor. But Galba always showed clearly that he placed the public good before his private interests, and in the present case that he aimed to adopt, not the man who was most agreeable to himself, but the one who would be most serviceable to the Romans. And it does not seem that he would have chosen Otho merely as the heir of his own private fortune, since he knew that he was unrestrained and extravagant and immersed in debts amounting to five millions.¹ Wherefore, after listening to Vinius calmly and without a word, he postponed his decision. But he appointed himself and Vinius consuls for the following year, and it was expected that on their accession to office he would declare his successor. And the soldiery would have been glad that Otho, rather than anyone else, should be so declared.

XXII. But while the emperor was hesitating and deliberating, he was overtaken by the dis-

καὶ βουλευόμενον ἐκραγέντα τὰ Γερμανικά. κοινῇ γὰρ ἅπαντες οἱ στρατευόμενοι τὸν Γάλβαν ἐμίσουν οὐκ ἀποδιδόντα τὴν δωρεάν, ἰδίας δὲ ἐκείνοι προφάσεις ἐποιοῦντο Οὐεργίνιον τε Ῥούφον ἀπερριμμένον ἀτίμως καὶ Γαλατῶν τοὺς πολεμήσαντας
 2 αὐτοῖς δωρεῶν τυγχάνοντας, ὅσοι δὲ μὴ προσέθεντο Οὐῖνδικι κολαζομένους, ᾧ μόνῳ τὸν Γάλβαν χάριν εἶδέναι καὶ τιμᾶν τεθνηκότα καὶ γεραίρειν δημοσίοις ἐναγισμοῖς, ὡς ὑπ' ἐκείνου Ῥωμαίων
 3 ἀποδεδειγμένον αὐτοκράτορα. τοιούτων ἀναφανδὸν ἤδη λόγων ἐν τῷ στρατοπέδῳ περιφερομένων ἐπῆλθεν ἡ νουμηνία τοῦ πρώτου μηνός, ἣν καλάνδας Ἰανουαρίας καλοῦσι· τοῦ δὲ Φλάκκου συναγαγόντος αὐτοὺς ἐπὶ τὸν ὄρκον ὃν ἔθος ἐστὶν ὀμνύειν ὑπὲρ τοῦ αὐτοκράτορος, τὰς μὲν εἰκόνας τοῦ Γάλβα προσελθόντες ἀνέτρεψαν καὶ κατέσπασαν, αὐτοὶ δὲ ὁμόσαντες ὑπὲρ συγκλήτου καὶ
 4 δήμου Ῥωμαίων διελύθησαν. εἶτα τοῖς ἡγεμονικοῖς παρίστατο δεδοικέναι τὴν ἀναρχίαν ὡς ἀπόστασιν. λέγει δέ τις ἐν αὐτοῖς· “Τί πάσχομεν, ᾧ συστρατιῶται, μήτ' ἄλλοι ἡγεμόνα ποιούμενοι μήτε τὸν νῦν ὄντα φυλάττοντες, ὥσπερ οὐ Γάλβαν, ἀλλ' ὅλως ἄρχοντα καὶ τὸ ἄρχεσθαι
 5 φεύγοντες; Φλάκκον μὲν οὖν Ὀρδεώνιον οὐδὲν ἄλλο ἢ σκιὰν ὄντα Γάλβα καὶ εἶδωλον ἐατέον, ἡμέρας δὲ μιᾶς ὁδὸν ἀφέστηκεν ἡμῶν Οὐῖτέλλιος, ὁ τῆς ἐτέρας Γερμανίας ἡγούμενος, πατρός τε τιμητοῦ καὶ τρις ὑπάτου γενομένου καὶ Κλαυδίῳ 103
 Καίσαρι τρόπον τινὰ συνάρξαντος, αὐτός τε τὴν

¹ See Chap. iv. 3.

orders which broke out among the troops in Germany. For the soldiers in all parts of the empire had a common hatred of Galba because he had not given them their usual largess, but those in Germany made special excuses for themselves out of the fact that Verginius Rufus had been cast off in dishonour; that the Gauls who had fought against them were getting rewards, while all those who had not joined Vindex were being punished; and that to Vindex alone Galba showed gratitude by honouring him when he was dead and giving him the distinction of public obsequies, on the ground that Vindex had proclaimed him emperor of the Romans.¹ Such arguments as these were already circulating openly in the camp, when the first day of the first month came, which the Romans call the Calends of January. On this day Flaccus assembled the soldiers that they might take the customary oath of allegiance to the emperor; but they overturned and pulled down all the statues of Galba which they could find, and after swearing allegiance to the senate and people of Rome, went to their quarters. Then their officers began to fear that their lawless spirit might issue in revolt, and one of them made this speech: "What is wrong with us, my fellow soldiers? We are neither supporting the present emperor nor setting up another. It is as though we were averse, not to Galba, but to all rule and obedience. Flaccus Hordeonius, indeed, who is nothing but a shadow and image of Galba, we must ignore, but there is Vitellius, who is only a day's march distant from us, and commands the forces in the other Germany. His father was censor, thrice consul, and in a manner the colleague of Claudius Caesar, and λοιδορουμένην ὑπ' ἐνίων πενίαν δεῖγμα λαμπρὸν ἔχων χρηστότητος καὶ μεγαλοφροσύνης. φέρε, τοῦτον ἐλόμενοι δείξωμεν ἀνθρώποις πᾶσιν ὡς Ἰβήρων καὶ Λυσιτανῶν ἀμείνους ἔσμεν αὐτοκράτορα αἰρεῖσθαι."

- 6 Ταῦτα τῶν μὲν ἤδη προσιεμένων, τῶν δ' οὐ προσιεμένων, εἰς ὑπεξελθὼν σηματοφόρος ἀπήγγειλε τῷ Οὐϊτελλίῳ νυκτός, ἐστιωμένων πολλῶν παρ' αὐτῷ. τοῦ δὲ λόγου διαπεσόντος εἰς τὰ στρατεύματα πρῶτος Φάβιος Οὐάλης, ἡγεμὼν ἐνὸς τάγματος, τῇ ὑστεραία μετὰ ἰππέων συχνῶν ἐλάσας αὐτοκράτορα τὸν Οὐϊτέλλιον προσεῖπεν.
- 7 ὁ δὲ τὰς μὲν ἔμπροσθεν ἡμέρας ἐδόκει διωθεῖσθαι καὶ ἀναδύεσθαι, τὸ μέγεθος τῆς ἀρχῆς φοβούμενος, τότε δὲ φασιν οἴνου διάπλεων καὶ τροφῆς ὄντα μεσημβρινῆς προελθεῖν καὶ ὑπακούσαι Γερμανικὸν ὄνομα θεμένων αὐτῷ, τὸ δὲ Καίσαρος
- 8 οὐ προσδεξάμενον. εὐθύς δὲ καὶ τὸ μετὰ Φλάκκου στρατεύμα τοὺς καλοὺς ἐκείνους καὶ δημοκρατικούς εἰς σύγκλητον ὄρκους ἀφέντες ὤμοσαν Οὐϊτελλίῳ τῷ αὐτοκράτορι ποιῆσειν τὸ προστασσόμενον.

XXIII. Οὕτω μὲν ἀνηγορεύθη Οὐϊτέλλιος αὐτοκράτωρ ἐν Γερμανία. πυθόμενος δὲ τὸν ἐκεῖ νεωτερισμὸν ὁ Γάλβας οὐκέτι τὴν εἰσποίησιν ἀνεβύλλετο. γινώσκων δὲ τῶν φίλων ἐνίους μὲν ὑπὲρ Δολοβέλλα, τοὺς δὲ πλείστους ὑπὲρ Ὀθωνος ἀρχαιρεσιάζοντας, ὧν οὐδέτερον ἐδοκίμαζεν αὐτός, ἄφνω μηδὲν προειπὼν μετεπέμψατο Πείσωνα, Κράσσου καὶ Σκριβωνίας ἔκγονου, οὓς Νέρων

2 ἀνηρήκει, νεανίαν ἐν τῇ πρὸς πᾶσαν ἀρετὴν εὐφυΐᾳ τὸ κόσμον καὶ αὐστηρὸν ἐμφανέστατα

Vitellius himself, in the poverty with which some reproach him, affords a splendid proof of probity and magnanimity. Come, let us choose him, and so show the world that we know how to select an emperor better than Iberians and Lusitanians."

While some of the soldiers were already for adopting this proposal and others for rejecting it, one standard-bearer stole away and brought tidings of the matter by night to Vitellius, as he was entertaining many guests. The news spread swiftly to the troops, and first Fabius Valens, commander of a legion, rode up next day with a large body of horse-men and saluted Vitellius as emperor. Hitherto Vitellius had seemed to decline and avoid the office, fearing the magnitude of it; but on this day, as they say, being fortified with wine and a midday meal, he came out to the soldiers and accepted the title of Germanicus which they conferred upon him, though he rejected that of Caesar. And straightway the army with Flaccus also, casting aside those fine and democratic oaths of theirs to support the senate, took oath that they would obey the orders of Vitellius the emperor.

XXIII. Thus was Vitellius proclaimed emperor in Germany; and when Galba learned of the revolution there he no longer deferred his act of adoption. Knowing that some of his friends favoured the selection of Dolabella, and most of them that of Otho, neither of whom was approved by himself, he suddenly, and without any previous notice of his intention, sent for Piso (whose parents, Crassus and Scribonia, had been put to death by Nero), a young man in whose predisposition to every virtue the traits of gravity and decorum were most conspicuous; then ἔχοντα· καὶ κατέβαινον εἰς τὸ στρατόπεδον ἐκεί-νον ἀποδείξων Καίσαρα καὶ διάδοχον. καίτοι μεγάλοι μὲν εὐθύς ἐξιώντι διοσημίαι παρηκολούθουν, ἀρξαμένου δὲ τὰ μὲν λέγειν ἐν τῷ στρατο-πέδῳ, τὰ δὲ ἀναγινώσκειν, τοσαυτάκις ἐβρόντησε καὶ κατήστραψε, καὶ τοσοῦτος ὄμβρος καὶ ζόφος ἐξεχύθη εἰς τὸ στρατόπεδον καὶ τὴν πόλιν, ὡς κατάδηλον εἶναι μὴ προσιέμενον μηδὲ ἐπαινοῦν τὸ δαιμόνιον γινομένην οὐκ ἐπ' ἰγαθῷ τὴν εἰσποίη-3 σιν. ἦν δὲ καὶ τὰ τῶν στρατιωτῶν ὑπουλα καὶ σκυθρωπὰ μηδὲ τότε δωρεᾶς αὐτοῖς δοθείσης.

Τοῦ δὲ Πείσωνος οἱ παρόντες ἐθαύμασαν τῇ τε φωνῇ τεκμαιρόμενοι καὶ τῷ προσώπῳ τὸ τηλι-καύτην χάριν ἀνεμπλήκτως, οὐ μὴν ἀναισθήτως δεχόμενον, ὥσπερ αὐτοῦ τοῦ Ὄθωνος ἐπεφαίριετο πολλὰ σημεῖα τῇ μορφῇ πικρῶς καὶ σὺν ὀργῇ τῆς ἐλπίδος τὴν ἀπότευξιν φέροντος, ἧς πρῶτος ἀξιωθεὶς καὶ τοῦ τυχεῖν ἐγγυτάτῳ γενόμενος τὸ μὴ τυχεῖν ἐποιεῖτο σημεῖον ἔχθους ἅμα καὶ κακο-4 νοίας τοῦ Γάλβα πρὸς αὐτόν. ὅθεν οὐδὲ ἄφοβος ἦν περὶ τοῦ μέλλοντος, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸν Πείσωνα δεδιὼς καὶ τὸν Γάλβαν προβαλλόμενος καὶ τῷ Οὐνίῳ χαλεπαίνων ἀπήει πολλῶν παθῶν πλήρης.
 οὐδὲ γὰρ τὸ ἐλπίζον ἐκλιπεῖν οὐδὲ ἀπαγορευσαὶ παντάπασιν εἶπον οἱ περὶ αὐτὸν ὄντες αἰεὶ μάντις καὶ Χαλδαῖοι, εἰς τὰ μάλιστα δὲ Πτολεμαῖος ἰσχυριζόμενος τῷ προειπεῖν πολλάκις ὡς οὐκ ἀποκτενεῖ Νέρων αὐτόν, ἀλλὰ τεθνήξεται πρότερος, αὐτὸς δὲ περιέσται καὶ ἄρξει Ῥωμαίων (ἐκείνο γὰρ 256

he went down to the camp to declare him Caesar and heir to the throne. And yet as soon as he set out, great signs from heaven accompanied him on his way, and after he had begun to pronounce and read his address to the soldiers, there were many peals of thunder and flashes of lightning, and much darkness and rain pervaded both the camp and the city, so that it was plain that the act of adoption was inauspicious and was not favoured or approved by the heavenly powers. The soldiers also were secretly disloyal and sullen, since not even then was their largess given to them.

As for Piso, those who were present at the scene and observed his voice and countenance were amazed to see him receive so great a favour without great emotion, though not without appreciation; whereas in the outward aspect of Otho there were many clear signs of the bitterness and anger with which he took the disappointment of his hopes. He had been the first to be thought worthy of the prize, and had come very near attaining it, and his not attaining it was regarded by him as a sign of ill-will and hatred on Galba's part towards him. Wherefore he was not without apprehension for the future, and fearing Piso, blaming Galba, and angry with Vinius, he went away full of various passions. For the soothsayers and Chaldaeans who were always about him would not suffer him to abandon his hopes or give up altogether, particularly Ptolemaeus, who dwelt much upon his frequent prediction that Nero would not kill Otho, but would die first himself, and that Otho would survive him and be emperor of the Romans (for now that he could point to the first part of the prediction as true, he thought that Otho ἀληθῆς ἀποδείξας ἡξίου μηδὲ ταῦτα ἀπελπίζειν)· οὐχ ἥκιστα δ' οἱ συναχθόμενοι κρύφα καὶ συνεπιστένοντες ὡς ἀχάριστα πεπονθότι. πλείστοι δὲ τῶν περὶ Τιγελλῖνον καὶ Νυμφίδιον ἐν τιμῇ γεγυότων ἀπερριμμένοι τότε καὶ ταπεινὰ πράττοντες ἐφθείροντο πρὸς αὐτὸν καὶ συνηγανάκτου καὶ παρώξυνον.

XXIV. Ἐν δὲ τούτοις Οὐετούριος καὶ Βάρβιος, ὁ μὲν ὀπτίων, ὁ δὲ τεσσεράριος· οὕτω γὰρ καλοῦνται οἱ διαγγέλων καὶ διοπτήρων ὑπηρεσίας τελούντες. μεθ' ὧν Ὀθωνος ἀπελεύθερος Ὀνόμαστος ἐπιφοιτῶν τοὺς μὲν ἀργυρίῳ, τοὺς δὲ ἐλπίσι διέφθειρεν ἤδη σαθροὺς ὄντας καὶ δεομένους προφάσεως. οὐ γὰρ ἦν ἡμερῶν τεσσάρων ἔργον ὑγιαίνοντος στρατοπέδου μεταστῆσαι πίστιν, ὅσαι μεταξὺ τῆς εἰσποιήσεως ἐγένοντο καὶ τῆς σφαγῆς. ἕκτη γὰρ ἀνηρέθησαν, ἦν ἄγουσι Ῥωμαῖοι πρὸ δεκαοκτῶ καλανδῶν Φεβρουαρίων.

106

- 2 Ἐκείνη γὰρ ἔωθεν εὐθύς ὁ μὲν Γάλβας ἔθυσεν ἐν Παλατίῳ τῶν φίλων παρόντων, ὁ δὲ θύτης Ὀμβρίκιος ἅμα τῷ λαβεῖν εἰς τὰς χεῖρας τοῦ ἱερείου τὰ σπλάγχνα καὶ προσιδεῖν οὐ δι' αἰνιγμῶν, ἀλλ' ἀντικρυς ἔφη σημεῖα μεγάλης ταραχῆς, καὶ μετὰ δόλου κίνδυνον ἐκ κεφαλῆς ἐπικείμενον τῷ αὐτοκράτορι, μονουουχὶ τὸν Ὀθωνα τοῦ θεοῦ
- 3 χεῖρὶ ληπτὸν παραδιδόντος. παρῆν γὰρ ὀπισθεν τοῦ Γάλβα, καὶ προσεῖχε τοῖς λεγομένοις καὶ δεικνυμένοις ὑπὸ τοῦ Ὀμβρικίου. θορυβουμένῳ should not despair of the second part). Above all, Otho was encouraged by those who secretly shared his resentment and chagrin on the ground that he had been thanklessly treated. Moreover, most of the adherents of Tigellinus and Nymphidius, men who had once been in high honour, but were now cast aside and of no account, treacherously went over to Otho, shared his resentment, and spurred him on to action.

¹ January 15th (A.D. xviii. Cal. Feb.), 68 A.D.

XXIV. Among these were Veturius and Barbius, the one an "optio," the other a "tesserarius" (these are the Roman names for scout and messenger). In company with these Onomastus, a freedman of Otho's, went round corrupting the soldiers, some with money, and others with fair promises. The soldiers were already disaffected and wanted only a pretext for treachery. For four days would not have sufficed to change the allegiance of a loyal army, and only so many days intervened between the act of adoption and the murder, since on the sixth day after the adoption (the Romans call it the eighteenth before the Calends of February¹), Galba and Piso were slain.

On that day, shortly after dawn, Galba was sacrificing in the Palatium in the presence of his friends; and as soon as Umbricius, the officiating priest, had taken the entrails of the victim in his hands and inspected them, he declared not ambiguously, but in so many words, that there were signs of a great commotion, and that peril mixed with treachery hung over the emperor's head. Thus the god all but delivered Otho over to arrest. For Otho was standing behind Galba, and noted what was said and pointed out by Umbricius. But

δὲ αὐτῷ καὶ χροῶς ἀμείβοντι παντοδαπὰς ὑπὸ δέους παραστάς Ὀνόμαστος ἀπελεύθερος ἦκειν ἔφη καὶ περιμένειν αὐτὸν οἴκοι τοὺς ἀρχιτέκτονας.
 ἦν δὲ σύμβολον καιροῦ, πρὸς ὃν ἔδει ἀπαντῆσαι 4 τὸν Ὀθωνα τοῖς στρατιώταις. εἰπὼν οὖν, ὅτι παλαιὰν ἐωνημένος οἰκίαν βούλεται τὰ ὑποπτα δεῖξαι τοῖς πωληταῖς, ἀπῆλθε, καὶ διὰ τῆς Τιβερίου καλουμένης οἰκίας καταβὰς ἐβάδιζεν εἰς ἀγοράν, οὗ χρυσοῦς εἰστήκει κίων, εἰς ὃν αἱ τετμημέναί τῆς Ἰταλίας ὁδοὶ πᾶσαι τελευτῶσιν.

XXV. Ἐνταῦθα τοὺς πρώτους ἐκδεξαμένους αὐτὸν καὶ προσειπόντας αὐτοκράτορά φασι μὴ πλείους τριῶν καὶ εἴκοσι γενέσθαι. διό, καίπερ οὐ κατὰ τὴν τοῦ σώματος μαλακίαν καὶ θηλύτητα τῆ ψυχῇ διατεθρυμμένος, ἀλλὰ ἰταμὸς ὢν πρὸς 2 τὰ δεινὰ καὶ ἄτρεπτος, ἀπεδειλίασεν. οἱ δὲ παρόντες οὐκ εἶων, ἀλλὰ τοῖς ξίφεσι γυμνοῖς περιῶντες αὐτοῦ τὸ φορεῖον ἐκέλευον αἶρεσθαι, παραφθεγγομένου πολλάκις ἀπολωλέναι καὶ τοὺς φορειαφόρους ἐπιταχύνοντος. ἐξήκουον γὰρ ἔνιοι θαυμάζοντες μᾶλλον ἢ ταραττόμενοι διὰ τὴν ὀλιγότητα τῶν ἀποτετολμημένων. φερομένῳ δὲ οὕτω δι' ἀγορᾶς ἀπήντησαν ἕτεροι τοσοῦτοι, καὶ 3 πάλιν κατὰ τρεῖς καὶ τέτταρας ἄλλοι προσεπέλαζον. εἶτα συνανέστρεφον ἅπαντες ἀνακαλού-μενοι Καίσαρα καὶ γυμνὰ τὰ ξίφη προῖσχύμενοι.
 τῶν δὲ χιλιάρχων ὁ τὴν φυλακὴν ἔχων τοῦ στρατοπέδου Μαρτίαλις, ὡς φασι, μὴ συνειδώς, ἐκπλαγεὶς δὲ τῷ ἀπροσδοκίῳ καὶ φοβηθεὶς

as he stood there in confusion and with a countenance changing to all sorts of colours through fear, Onomastus his freedman came up and told him that the builders were come and were waiting for him at his house. Now, this was a token that the time was at hand when Otho was to meet the soldiers. With the remark, then, that he had bought an old house and wished to show its defects to the vendors, he went away, and passing through what was called the house of Tiberius, went down into the forum, to where a gilded column stood, at which all the roads that intersect Italy terminate.

XXV. Here, as we are told, the soldiers who first welcomed him and saluted him as emperor were no more than twenty-three. Therefore, although he was not sunken in spirit to match the weakness and effeminacy of his body, but was bold and adventurous in presence of danger, he began to be afraid. The soldiers who were there, however, would not suffer him to desist, but surrounding his litter with their swords drawn, ordered it to be taken up, while Otho urged the bearers to hasten, saying to himself many times that he was a lost man. For he was overheard by some of the bystanders, and they were astonished rather than disturbed, owing to the small number of those who had ventured upon the deed. But as he was thus borne through the forum, he was met by as many more soldiers, and others again kept joining the party by threes and fours. Then all crowded around the litter, saluting Otho as emperor and brandishing their drawn swords. At the camp, Martialis, the military tribune in charge of the watch at the time, who was not privy to the plot, as they say, but was confounded by their unexpected ἔφηκεν εἰσελθεῖν. γενομένῳ δὲ ἐντὸς οὐδεὶς ἀντέπεσεν. οἱ γὰρ ἀγνοοῦντες τὰ πραπτόμενα τοῖς εἰδόσι καὶ συνεστῶσιν ἐκ παρασκευῆς ἐμπεριεχόμενοι καθ' ἓνα καὶ δύο σποράδες, ὑπὸ δέους τὸ πρῶτον, εἶτα πεισθέντες ἐπηκολούθησαν.

- 4 Εἰς δὲ τὸ Παλάτιον εὐθύς μὲν ἀπηγγέλη τῷ Γάλβα παρόντος ἔτι τοῦ θύτου καὶ τῶν ἱερῶν ἐν χερσὶν ὄντων, ὥστε καὶ τοὺς πάνυ πρὸς τὰ τοιαῦτα δυσπειθῶς καὶ ἀτενῶς ἔχοντας ἐκπλήττεσθαι καὶ θαυμάζειν τὸ θεῖον· ὄχλου δὲ παντοδαποῦ συρρέοντος ἐξ ἀγορᾶς, αὐτῷ μὲν Οὐίνιος καὶ Λάκων καὶ τῶν ἀπελευθέρων ἔνιοι γυμνὰ τὰ ξίφη προῖσχόμενοι παρέστησαν, ὁ δὲ Πείσων προελθὼν τοῖς φυλάττουσι τὴν αὐλὴν δορυφόροις
- 5 ἐνετύχχανε. τοῦ δ' Ἰλλυρικοῦ τάγματος ἐν τῇ καλουμένῃ παστάδι Βιψανία στρατοπεδεύοντος ἀπεστάλη Μάριος Κέλσος, ἀνὴρ ἀγαθός, προκαταληψόμενος.

XXVI. Βουλευομένου δὲ τοῦ Γάλβα προελθεῖν, καὶ Οὐνίου μὲν οὐκ ἔωντος, Κέλσου δὲ καὶ Λάκωνος παρορμώντων καὶ σφοδρότερον τοῦ Οὐνίου καθαπτομένων, θροῦς διήλθε πολὺς ὡς ἀνηρημένου τοῦ Ὀθωνος ἐν τῷ στρατοπέδῳ· καὶ μετὰ μικρὸν ὄφθη Ἰούλιος Ἀττικὸς τῶν οὐκ ἀσήμων ἐν τοῖς δορυφόροις στρατευόμενος γυμνῷ τῷ ξίφει προσφερόμενος καὶ βοῶν ἀνηρηκέσαι τὸν Καίσαρος πολέμιον· ὡσάμενος δὲ διὰ τῶν προεστώτων appearance and terrified, permitted them to enter. And after Otho was inside the camp, no one opposed him. For those who were ignorant of what was going on, scattered about as they were by ones and twos, were designedly enveloped by those who knew and were privy to the plot, and so gave in their adherence, at first through fear, and then under persuasion.

- 2 ἔδειξε τῷ Γάλβα τὸ ξίφος ἠμαγμένον. ὁ δὲ βλέψας πρὸς αὐτόν, “Τίς σε,” εἶπεν, “ἐκέλευσε;” τοῦ δὲ ἀνθρώπου τὴν πίστιν εἰπόντος καὶ τὸν

News of this was carried at once to Galba in the Palatium and the priest was still standing there with the entrails in his hands, so that even men who were altogether indifferent and sceptical about such matters were confounded and filled with wonder at the divine portent. And now a motley crowd came streaming out from the forum; Vinius and Laco and some of the freedmen stood at Galba's side brandishing their naked swords; Piso went out and held conference with the guards on duty in the court; and Marius Celsus, a man of worth, was sent off to secure the allegiance of the Illyrian legion encamped in what was called the Vipsanian portico.

XXVI. And now, as Galba purposed to go forth, and Vinius would not permit it, while Celsus and Laco urged it and vehemently chided Vinius, a rumour spread insistently that Otho had been slain in the camp; and after a little, Julius Atticus, a soldier of distinction among the guards, was seen rushing up with his sword drawn, and crying out that he had slain the enemy of Caesar; and forcing his way through the crowd about Galba, he showed him his sword all stained with blood. Then Galba fixed his eyes upon him and said, "Who gave thee thy orders?" Whereupon the man replied that it was his fidelity and the oath that he had sworn, at ὄρκου ὃν ὤμοσε, καὶ τοῦ πλήθους ἐπιβοῶντος ὡς εὖ, καὶ κροτοῦντος, ἐμβὰς εἰς τὸ φορεῖον ἐκομίζετο τῷ τε Διὶ θῦσαι καὶ φανῆναι τοῖς πολίταις βουλόμενος. ἐμβαλόντος δὲ εἰς τὴν ἀγοράν, ὥσπερ τροπαία πνεύματος, ἀπήντησε φήμη κρα-3 τεῖν τὸν Ὀθωνα τοῦ στρατεύματος. οἷα δὲ ἐν πλήθει τοσοῦτω, τῶν μὲν ἀναστρέφειν, τῶν δὲ προΐεναι, τῶν δὲ θαρρεῖν, τῶν δὲ ἀπιστεῖν βοών-των, καὶ τοῦ φορείου, καθάπερ ἐν κλύδωνι, δεῦρο κῦκεῖ διαφερομένου καὶ πυκνὸν ἀπονεύοντος, ἐφαίνοντο πρῶτον ἵππεῖς, εἶτα ὀπλίται διὰ τῆς Παύ-λου βασιλικῆς προσφερόμενοι, μιᾷ φωνῇ μέγα 4 βοῶντες ἐκποδὼν ἴστασθαι τὸν ἰδιώτην. τῶν μὲν οὖν πολλῶν δρόμος ἦν, οὐ φυγῆ σκιδναμένων, ἀλλ' ἐπὶ τὰς στοὰς καὶ τὰ μετέωρα τῆς ἀγορᾶς, ὥσπερ θέαν καταλαμβάνόντων. Ἀτιλλίου δὲ Βεργελίωνος εἰκόνα Γάλβα προσουδίσαντος, ἀρ-χὴν τοῦ πολέμου ποιησάμενοι περιηκόντισαν τὸ φορεῖον· ὡς δ' οὐκ ἔτυχον αὐτοῦ, προσήγον ἐσπασμένοις τοῖς ξίφεσιν. ἤμυνε δὲ οὐδεὶς οὐδὲ ὑπέστη πλὴν ἑνὸς ἀνδρός, ὃν μόνον ἤλιος ἐπέιδεν ἐν μυριάσι τοσαύταις ἄξιον τῆς Ῥωμαίων ἡγε-5 μονίας· Σεμπρώνιος ἦν Δῆνσος ἑκατοντάρχης, οὐδὲν ἰδίᾳ χρηστὸν ὑπὸ Γάλβα πεπουθῶς, τῷ δὲ

 καλῷ καὶ τῷ νόμῳ βοηθῶν προέστη τοῦ φορείου.
 καὶ τὸ κλῆμα πρῶτον, ᾧ κολάζουσιν ἑκατοντάρ-χαι τοὺς πληγῶν δεομένους, ἐπαράμενος τοῖς ἐπιφερομένοις ἐβόα καὶ διεκελεύετο φεῖδεσθαι τοῦ αὐτοκράτορος. ἔπειτα συμπλεκομένων αὐτῷ which the multitude cried out that he had done well, and gave him their applause. Then Galba got into his litter and was carried forth, wishing to sacrifice to Jupiter and show himself to the citizens. But when he was come into the forum, there met him, like a change of wind, a report that Otho was master of the army. Then, as might be expected in so great a crowd, some cried out to him to turn back, others to go forward; some bade him to be of good courage, others urged him to be cautious; and so, while his litter was swept hither and thither, as in a surging sea, and often threatened to capsize, there came into view, first horsemen, and then men-at-arms, charging through the basilica of Paulus, and with one voice loudly ordering all private citizens out of their way. The multitude, accordingly, took to their heels, not scattering in flight, but seeking the porticoes and eminences of the forum, as if to get a view of a spectacle. Hostilities began with the overthrow of a statue of Galba by Attilius Vergilio, and then the soldiers hurled javelins at the litter; and since they failed to strike it, they advanced upon it with their swords drawn. No one opposed them or tried to defend the emperor, except one man, and he was the only one, among all the thousands there on whom the sun looked down, who was worthy of the Roman empire. This was Sempronius Densus, a centurion, and though he had received no special favours from Galba, yet in defence of honour and the law he took his stand in front of the litter. And first, lifting up the switch with which centurions punish soldiers deserving of stripes, he cried out to the assailants and ordered them to spare the emperor. Then, as they came to σπασάμενος τὸ ξίφος ἤμύνατο πολὺν χρόνον, ἕως τυφθεὶς τὰς ἰγνύας ἔπεσε.

XXVII. Τὸν δὲ Γάλβαν, ἀποκλιθέντος τοῦ φορείου περὶ τὸν Κουρτίου καλούμενον λάκκον, ἐκκυλισθέντα τεθωρακισμένον ἔτυπτον ἐπιδραμόντες. ὁ δὲ τὴν σφαγὴν προτείνας, “Δρᾶτε,” εἶπεν, “εἰ τοῦτο τῷ δήμῳ Ῥωμαίων ἄμεινόν ἐστι.”
 2 πολλὰς μὲν οὖν ἔλαβε πληγὰς εἰς τε τὰ σκέλη καὶ τοὺς βραχίονας, ἀπέσφαξε δὲ αὐτόν, ὡς οἱ πλείστοι λέγουσι, Καμούριός τις ἐκ τοῦ πεντεκαίδεκάτου τάγματος. ἔνιοι δὲ Τερέντιον, οἱ δὲ Λεκάμιον ἱστοροῦσιν, οἱ δὲ Φάβιον Φάβουλον, ὃν καὶ φασιν ἀποκόψαντα τὴν κεφαλὴν κομίζειν τῷ ἱματίῳ συλλαβόντα, διὰ τὴν ψιλότητα δυσπερί-
 3 ληπτον οὔσαν· ἔπειτα τῶν σὺν αὐτῷ κρύπτειν οὐκ ἐόντων, ἀλλ’ ἐκφανῆ πάσι ποιεῖν τὴν ἀνδραγαθίαν, περιπέραντα περὶ λόγχην καὶ ἀναπήλαντα πρεσβύτου πρόσωπον, ἄρχοντός τε κοσμίῳ καὶ ἀρχιερέως καὶ ὑπάτου, δρόμῳ χωρεῖν, ὥσπερ αἱ βύκχαι, πολλάκις μεταστρεφόμενον, καὶ κραδαίνοντα τὴν λόγχην αἵματι καταρροεμένην.

Τὸν δ’ Ὀθωνα, τῆς κεφαλῆς κομισθείσης, ἀνακραγεῖν λέγουσιν. “Οὐδέν ἐστι τοῦτο, ὦ συστρατιῶται, τὴν Πείσωνός μοι κεφαλὴν δείξατε.” μετ’ ὀλίγον δὲ ἦκε κομιζομένη· τρωθεὶς γὰρ ἔφευγεν ὁ νεανίσκος, καὶ καταδιωχθεὶς ὑπὸ Μούρκου τινὸς ἀπεσφάγη πρὸς τῷ ἱερῷ τῆς Ἑστίας. ἀπεσφάττετο δὲ καὶ Οὐίνιος ὁμολογῶν κοινῶν γεγοῖναι τῆς ἐπὶ τὸν Γάλβαν συνωμοσίας· ἐβόα γὰρ ἀποθνήσκειν παρὰ τὴν Ὀθωνος γνώμην. ἀλλὰ close quarters with him, he drew his sword, and fought them off a long time, until he fell with a wound in the groin.

XXVII. The litter was upset at the place called Lacus Curtius, and there Galba tumbled out and lay in his corselet, while the soldiers ran up and struck at him. But he merely presented his neck to their swords, saying: "Do your work, if this is better for the Roman people." So, then, after receiving many wounds in his legs and arms, he was slain, as most writers state, by a certain Camurius, of the fifteenth legion. Some, however, ascribe his death to Terentius, others to Lecanius, and others still to Fabius Fabulus, who, they say, cut off Galba's head and was carrying it wrapped in his cloak, since its baldness made it difficult to grasp; then, since his companions would not suffer him to hide his deed of valour, but insisted on his displaying it to all eyes, he impaled on his spear and thrust on high the head of an aged man, who had been a temperate ruler, a high priest, and a consul, and ran with it, like a bacchanal,¹ whirling about often, and brandishing the spear all dripping with blood.

But Otho, as they say, when the head was brought to him, cried out: "This is nothing, fellow-soldiers; show me the head of Piso." And after a little it was brought to him; for the young man had been wounded and tried to escape, and a certain Murcus ran him down and slew him at the temple of Vesta. Vinius also was slain, and he admitted himself a party to the conspiracy against Galba by crying out that he was put to death contrary to the wishes of

¹ So the Bacchanals with the head of Pentheus (Euripides, Bacchae, 1153 ff.).

γὰρ καὶ τούτου τὴν κεφαλὴν ἀποτεμόντες καὶ Λάκωνος ἐκόμισαν πρὸς τὸν Ὀθωνα δωρεὰς αἰ-5 τούντες. ὡς δέ φησιν Ἀρχίλοχος, ἑπτὰ γὰρ νεκρῶν πεσόντων, οὓς ἐμάρψαμεν ποσίν,

 χίλιοι φονῆες ἐσμέν,

οὕτως τότε πολλοὶ τοῦ φόνου μὴ συνεφαψάμενοι, χεῖρας δὲ καὶ ξίφη καθαιμάσσοντες ἐπεδείκνυντο καὶ δωρεὰς ἤτουν βιβλία διδόντες τῷ Ὀθωνι. εἴκοσι γοῦν καὶ ἑκατὸν εὐρέθησαν ὕστερον ἐκ τῶν γραμματίων, οὓς ὁ Οὐιτέλλιος
 6 ἀναζητήσας ἅπαντας ἀπέκτεινεν. ἦκε δὲ καὶ Μάριος Κέλσος εἰς τὴν παρεμβολήν. καὶ πολ-λῶν αὐτοῦ κατηγορούντων ὅτι τοὺς στρατιώτας ἔπειθε τῷ Γάλβᾳ βοηθεῖν, καὶ τοῦ πλήθους ἀποκτινύειν βοῶντος, Ὀθων οὐκ ἐβούλετο· φο-βούμενος δὲ ἀντιλέγειν οὐχ οὕτως ἔφη ταχέως ἀποκτενεῖν αὐτόν· εἶναι γὰρ ἂν δεῖ πρότερον ἐκπυ-θέσθαι παρὰ τοῦ ἀνδρός. ἐκέλευσεν οὖν δήσαντας φυλάττειν, καὶ παρέδωκε τοῖς μάλιστα πιστευ-ομένοις.

106

XXVIII. Εὐθύς δὲ βουλὴ συνεκαλείτο. καὶ καθάπερ ἄλλοι γεγονότες ἢ θεῶν ἄλλων γεγονότων συνελθόντες ὤμνουον ὄρκον ὑπὲρ τοῦ Ὀθωνος, ὃν αὐτὸς ὁμόσας οὐκ ἐτήρησε· καὶ Καίσαρα καὶ Σεβαστὸν ἀνηγόρευον, ἔτι τῶν νεκρῶν ἀκεφάλων ἐν ταῖς ὑπατικαῖς ἐσθῆσιν ἐρριμμένων ἐπὶ τῆς 2 ἀγορᾶς. ταῖς δὲ κεφαλαῖς ὡς οὐδὲν εἶχον ἔτι χρῆσθαι, τὴν μὲν Οὐινίου τῇ θυγατρὶ δισχιλίων

¹ Bergk, Lyr. Gr. Frag. ii.⁴ p. 398.

Otho. However, they cut off his head, and Laco's too, and brought them to Otho, of whom they demanded largess. And as Archilochus says¹ that, so in this case, many who had no part in the murder smeared their hands and swords with blood and showed them to Otho, as they presented him with written petitions for largess. At any rate, a hundred and twenty were afterwards discovered by means of these petitions, all of whom were sought out and put to death by Vitellius. Marius Celsus also came into the camp. There many denounced him for trying to persuade the soldiers to defend Galba, and the majority clamoured for his death, but Otho did not wish it; however, since he was afraid to oppose them, he said he would not put Celsus to death so quickly, since there were matters about which he must first question him. He therefore ordered that he be fettered and kept under guard, and handed over to those in whom he put most trust.

“Only seven lay dead on the ground, where we trod their bodies under foot. But we who slew are a thousand,”

XXVIII. A senate was at once convened. And as if they were now other men, or had other gods to swear by, they united in swearing an oath to support Otho—an oath which he himself had sworn in support of Galba, but had not kept. Moreover, they gave him the titles of Caesar and Augustus, while the dead bodies, all headless in their consular robes, were still strewn over the forum. And as for the heads, when they had no further use for them, that of Vinius they sold to his daughter for twenty-καὶ πεντακοσίων δραχμῶν ἀπέδοντο, τὴν δὲ Πείσωνος ἢ γυνὴ ἔλαβεν Οὐερανία δεηθεῖσα, τὴν δὲ Γάλβα τοῖς Πατροβίου δούλοις ἐδώρησαντο.

 3 λαβόντες δὲ ἐκείνοι καὶ πάντα τρόπον αἰκισάμενοι καὶ καθυβρίσαντες ἔρριψαν ἢ τοὺς ὑπὸ τῶν Kaisάρων κολαζομένους θανατούσιν· ὁ δὲ τόπος Σεσσώριον καλεῖται. τὸ δὲ σῶμα τοῦ Γάλβα Πρίσκος Ἐλβίδιος ἀνείλετο, τοῦ Ὁθωνος ἐπιτρέψαντος· ἔθαψε δὲ νυκτὸς Ἀργεῖος ἀπελεύθερος.

XXIX. Τοιαῦτα τὰ κατὰ τὸν Γάλβαν, ἄνδρα μῆτε γένει μῆτε πλούτῳ πολλῶν ἀπολειφθέντα Ῥωμαίων, ὁμοῦ δὲ πλούτῳ καὶ γένει πρωτεύσαντα πάντων τῶν καθ' αὐτόν, πέντε αὐτοκρατόρων ἡγεμονίαις ἐμβιώσαντα μετὰ τιμῆς καὶ δόξης, ὥστε τῇ δόξῃ μᾶλλον ἢ τῇ δυνάμει καθ-
 2 ελεῖν Νέρωνα. τῶν γὰρ¹ συνεπιτιθεμένων τότε τοὺς μὲν οὐδεὶς ἠξίωσε τῆς ἡγεμονίας, οἱ δ' ἑαυτοὺς ἀπηξίωσαν, Γάλβας δὲ καὶ κληθεὶς καὶ ὑπακούσας αὐτοκράτωρ καὶ τῇ Οὐῖνδικος ἐμπαρασχῶν ὄνομα τόλμη, κίνημα καὶ νεωτερισμὸν αὐτοῦ λεγομένην τὴν ἀπόστασιν ἐποίησε πόλεμον
 3 ἐμφύλιον, ἀνδρὸς ἡγεμονικοῦ τυχοῦσαν. ὅθεν οὐχ ἑαυτῷ τὰ πράγματα λαμβάνειν, ἀλλὰ μᾶλλον ἑαυτὸν οἰόμενος διδόναι τοῖς πράγμασιν, ἄρχειν ἠξίου τῶν ὑπὸ Τιγελλίνου καὶ Νυμφιδίου τετιθασευμένων ὡς Σκηπίων ἦρχε καὶ Φαβρίκιος καὶ
 4 Κάμιλλος τῶν τότε Ῥωμαίων. ὑπερειπόμενος δὲ τῷ γήρα, ἄχρι τῶν ὄπλων καὶ τῶν στρατευμάτων ἄκρατος ἦν καὶ ἀρχαῖος αὐτοκράτωρ, Οὐνίῳ

¹ καθελεῖν Νέρωνα. τῶν γὰρ κ.τ.λ. Bekker, after Coraës : καθελὼν Νέρωνα τῶν κ.τ.λ.

five hundred drachmas; that of Piso was given to his wife Verania in answer to her prayers; and that of Galba was bestowed upon the servants of Patrobius. They took it, and after heaping all manner of insult and outrage upon it, cast it into a place called Sessorium, where those under condemnation of the emperors are put to death. The body of Galba was taken up by Priscus Helvidius, with the permission of Otho; and it was buried at night by Argivus, a freedman.

XXIX. Such were the fortunes of Galba, a man surpassed by few Romans in lineage and wealth, and both in wealth and lineage the foremost of his time. During the reigns of five emperors he lived with honour and high repute, so that it was by his high repute, rather than by his military power, that he overthrew Nero. For of his partners in the task, some were by all men deemed unworthy of the imperial dignity, and others deemed themselves unworthy. But to Galba the imperial title was offered and by him it was accepted; and by simply lending his name to the bold measures of Vindex, he gave to his revolt (as his rebellious agitation was called) the character of a civil war, because it had acquired a man who was worthy to rule. Wherefore, in the belief that he was not seizing the conduct of affairs for himself, but rather giving himself for the conduct of affairs, he set out with the idea of commanding the petted creatures of Tigellinus and Nymphidius as Scipio and Fabricius and Camillus used to command the Romans of their time. But being gradually weighed down by his years, in arms and camps, indeed, he was an "imperator" of a severe and ancient type; but

PLUTARCH'S LIVES

δὲ καὶ Λάκωνι καὶ τοῖς ἀπελευθέροις πάντα τὰ πράγματα πωλοῦσι παρέχων ἑαυτόν, οἷον Νέρων παρεῖχε τοῖς ἀπληστοτάτοις, οὐδένα ποθοῦντα τὴν ἀρχήν, οἰκτεῖραντας δὲ τοὺς πολλοὺς τὸν θάνατον ἀπέλιπεν.

just as Nero put himself in the hands of his most insatiate favourites, so Galba put himself in the hands of Vinius and Laco and their freedmen, and they made merchandise of everything, so that he left behind him no one who wished him still in power, but very many who were moved to pity at his death.

OTHO

ΟΘΩΝ

Ι. Ὁ δὲ νεώτερος αὐτοκράτωρ ἄμ' ἡμέρα προ-ελθὼν εἰς τὸ Καπιτώλιον ἔθυσσε καὶ κελεύσας Μάριον Κέλσον ἀχθῆναι πρὸς αὐτὸν ἡσπάσατο καὶ διελέχθη φιλανθρώπως, καὶ παρεκάλεσε τῆς αἰτίας ἐπιλαθέσθαι μᾶλλον ἢ τῆς ἀφέσεως μνημονεύειν. τοῦ δὲ Κέλσου μήτ' ἀγεννῶς ἀποκριναμένου μήτ' ἀναισθητῶς, ἀλλὰ φήσαντος αὐτὸ τοῦ τρόπου διδόναι τὸ ἔγκλημα πίστιν, ἐγκεκλήσθαι γὰρ ὅτι Γάλβα βέβαιον ἑαυτὸν παρέσχεν, ᾧ χάριν οὐδεμίαν ὄφειλεν, ἠγάσθησαν οἱ παρόντες 2 ἀμφοτέρων καὶ τὸ στρατιωτικὸν ἐπήνεσεν. ἐν δὲ συγκλήτῳ πολλὰ δημοτικὰ καὶ φιλάνθρωπα δια-λεχθεῖς, ὃν μὲν αὐτὸς ὑπατεύειν χρόνον ἠμελλε, τούτου μέρος ἔνειμεν Οὐεργινίῳ Ῥούφῳ, τοῖς δὲ ἀποδεδειγμένοις ὑπὸ Νέρωνος ἢ Γάλβα πᾶσιν 3 ἐτήρησε τὰς ὑπατείας. ἰερωσύναις δὲ τοὺς καθ' ἡλικίαν προήκοντας ἢ δόξαν ἐκόσμησε. τοῖς δὲ 1067 ἐπὶ Νέρωνος φυγοῦσι καὶ κατελθοῦσιν ἐπὶ Γάλβα συγκλητικοῖς πᾶσιν ἀπέδωκεν ὅσα μὴ πεπραμένα τῶν κτημάτων ἐκάστου¹ ἐξεύρισκεν. ὅθεν οἱ πρῶτοι καὶ κράτιστοι πεφρικότες πρότερον ὡς

¹ ἐκάστου Coraës and Bekker, after Stephanus, for the ἕκαστον of the MSS. : ἐκάστων.

OTHO ¹

I. At daybreak the new emperor went forth to the Capitol and sacrificed; then, having ordered Marius Celsus to be brought to him, he greeted that officer, conversed with him kindly, and urged him to forget the cause of his imprisonment rather than to remember his release. Celsus replied in a manner that was neither ignoble nor ungrateful, saying that the very charge made against him afforded proof of his character, for the charge was that he had been loyal to Galba, from whom he had received no special favours. Both speakers were admired by those who were present, and the soldiery gave their approval. In the senate Otho spoke at length in a kindly strain and like a popular leader. For part of the time during which he himself was to have been consul, he assigned the office to Verginius Rufus, and all those who had been designated as future consuls by Nero or Galba he confirmed in their appointment. To the priesthoods he promoted those who were preëminent in age or reputation. Moreover, to all the men of senatorial rank who had been exiled under Nero and restored under Galba, he restored whatever portions of each man's property he found to be unsold. Wherefore the citizens of highest birth and greatest influence, who before this οὐκ ἀνδρός, ἀλλὰ τινος ἢ Ποινῆς ἢ παλαμναίου δαίμονος ἄφνω τοῖς πράγμασιν ἐπιπεπτωκός, ἡδῖους ἐγένοντο ταῖς ἐλπίσι πρὸς τὴν ἡγεμονίαν ὥσπερ διαμειδῶσαν.

¹ With Plutarch's Otho may be compared Suetonius, Otho; Dion Cassius, lxiv. 10—15; Tacitus, Hist. i. 46—ii. 49.

II. Ὅμοῦ δὲ Ῥωμαίους πάντα οὐδὲν εὐφρανεν οὕτως οὐδὲ ἠκείωσατο πρὸς αὐτὸν ὡς τὰ περὶ Τιγελλίνου. ἐλελήθει μὲν γὰρ ἤδη κολαζόμενος αὐτῷ τῷ φόβῳ τῆς κολάσεως ἦν ὡς χρέος ἀπήτει
 2 δημόσιον ἢ πόλις, καὶ νοσήμασιν ἀνηκέστοις σώματος, αὐτὰς τε τὰς ἀνοσίους καὶ ἄρρητους ἐν γυναιξὶ πόρναις καὶ ἀκαθάρτοις ἐγκυλινδήσεις, αἷς ἔτι προσέσπαιρε δυσθανατοῦντος αὐτοῦ τὸ ἀκόλαστον ἐπιδραττόμενον, ἐσχάτην τιμωρίαν ἐποιοῦντο καὶ πολλῶν ἀντάξια θανάτων οἱ σωφρονοῦντες. ἡγία δὲ τοὺς πολλοὺς ὅμως τὸν ἥλιον ὀρῶν μετὰ τοσοῦτους καὶ τοιούτους δι'
 3 αὐτὸν οὐχ ὀρῶντας. ἔπεμψεν οὖν ἐπ' αὐτὸν ὁ Ὅθων εἰς τοὺς περὶ Σινόεσσαν ἀγρούς· ἐκεῖ γὰρ διητᾶτο, πλοίων παρορμούντων, ὡς φευξόμενος ἀπωτέρω. καὶ τὸν γε πεμφθέντα χρυσίῳ πολλῷ πείθειν ἐπεχείρησε παρεῖναι· μὴ πεισθέντι δὲ δῶρα μὲν ἔδωκεν οὐδὲν ἦττον, ἐδεήθη δὲ ὑπομεῖναι ἕως ἂν ἀποξύρηται τὸ γένειον· καὶ λαβὼν αὐτὸς ἑαυτὸν ἐλαιμοτόμησεν.

III. Οὕτω δὲ τῷ δήμῳ τὴν δικαιοτάτην ἡδονὴν ἀποδοὺς ὁ Καῖσαρ, αὐτὸς ἰδίας ἔχθρας οὐδενὶ τοπαράπαν ἐμνησικάκησε, τοῖς δὲ πολλοῖς χαριζόμενος οὐκ ἔφευγε τὸ πρῶτον ἐν τοῖς θεάτροις Νέρων προσαγορεύεσθαι· καὶ τινῶν εἰκόνας Νέ-had felt a shuddering fear that it was not a man, but some genius of retribution or avenging spirit, that had suddenly fallen upon the state, became more cheerful in their hopes for a government which wore a face so smiling.

II. But nothing so gladdened all Romans alike, and won their allegiance to the new emperor so much, as his treatment of Tigellinus. Men were not aware that Tigellinus was already punished by his very fear of that punishment which the city was demanding as a debt due to the public, and also by incurable bodily diseases; and besides, there were those unhallowed and unspeakable grovellings of his among the vilest harlots, for which his lustful nature still panted, clutching after them as his life painfully ebbed away; these were looked upon by reasonable men as extremest punishment and an equivalent of many deaths. Nevertheless it vexed the common people that he should see the light of day after so many good men had been robbed of that light by him. Accordingly, Otho sent a messenger to fetch him from his country estate at Sinuessa; for he was staying there, where vessels lay at anchor, that he might fly to more distant parts. He tried to bribe the messenger with a large sum of money to let him go, but failing in this, he made him gifts nevertheless, and begged him to wait till he had shaved; and taking the razor he cut his own throat.

III. And now that the emperor had given the people this most righteous gratification, he did not remember his own private grievances against any man soever, and in his desire to please the multitude did not refuse at first to be hailed in the theatres by the name of Nero, and when statues of Nero ρωνος εἰς τὸν μφανὲς προθεμένων οὐκ ἐκώλυσε.

 2 Κλούβιος δὲ Ῥούφος εἰς Ἰβηρίαν φησὶ κομισθῆναι διπλώματα, οἷς ἐκπέμπουσι τοὺς γραμματηφόρους, τὸ τοῦ Νέρωνος θετὸν ὄνομα προσγε-γραμμένον ἔχοντα τῷ τοῦ Ὄθωνος. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ τοὺς πρώτους καὶ κρατίστους αἰσθόμενος ἐπὶ τούτῳ δυσχεραίνοντας ἐπαύσατο.

Τοιαύτην δὲ τῆς ἡγεμονίας κατάστασιν αὐτῷ λαμβανούσης, οἱ μισθοφόροι χαλεποὺς παρῆχον ἑαυτοὺς, ἀπιστεῖν παρακελευόμενοι καὶ φυλάτ-τεσθαι καὶ κολουεῖν τοὺς ἀξιολόγους, εἴτ' ἀληθῶς φοβούμενοι δι' εὐνοίαν, εἴτε προφάσει χρώμενοι 3 ταύτῃ τοῦ ταραττεῖν καὶ πολεμοποιεῖν. Κρισπίνον δὲ πέμψαντος αὐτοῦ τὴν ἑπτακαιδεκάτην σπεῖραν Ὀστίας ἀπάξοντα, κάκεινου νυκτὸς ἔτι συσκευαζομένου καὶ τὰ ὄπλα ταῖς ἀμάξαις ἐπιτι-θέντος, οἱ θρασύτατοι πάντες ἐβῶν οὐδὲν ὑγιᾶς τὸν Κρισπῖνον ἤκειν διανοούμενον, ἀλλὰ τὴν σύγκλητον ἐπιχειρεῖν πρίγμασι νεωτέροις, καὶ τὰ ὄπλα 4 κατὰ Καίσαρος, οὐ Καίσαρι παρακομίζεσθαι. τοῦ δὲ λόγου πολλῶν ἀπτομένου καὶ παροξύνοντος, οἱ μὲν ἐπελαμβάνοντο τῶν ἀμαξῶν, οἱ δὲ τοὺς ἐνισταμένους ἑκατοντάρχας δύο καὶ τὸν Κρισπῖνον αὐτὸν ἀπέκτειναν, πάντες δὲ διασκευασάμενοι καὶ παρακαλέσαντες ἀλλήλους Καίσαρι βοηθεῖν ἤλαννον εἰς τὴν Ῥώμην· καὶ πυθόμενοι παρ' αὐτῷ δειπνεῖν ὀγδοήκοντα συγκλητικούς, ἐφέροντο πρὸς τὰ βασιλεία, νῦν καιρὸν εἶναι λέγοντες ἐν ταύτῳ 5 πάντας ἀνελεῖν τοὺς Καίσαρος πολεμίους. ἡ μὲν οὖν πόλις ὡς αὐτίκα διαρπαγησομένη θόρυβον

¹ Cf. Chap. viii 4

were produced in public, he did not prevent it. Moreover, Cluvius Rufus tells us that "diplomas,"¹ such as couriers are provided with, were sent to Spain, in which the cognomen of Nero was added to the name of Otho. However, perceiving that the men of highest birth and greatest influence were displeased at this, Otho gave up the practice.

But while he was placing his government on this basis, the paid soldiers began to make themselves troublesome by urging him not to trust the influential citizens, but to be on his guard against them and restrict their power. It is uncertain whether their goodwill led them to be really apprehensive for him, or whether they used this pretext for raising disturbance and war. And so, when the emperor sent Crispinus to bring back the seventeenth legion from Ostia, and while that officer was still getting the baggage together at night and loading the arms upon the waggons, the boldest of the soldiers all began to cry out that Crispinus was come on no good errand, and that the senate was attempting to bring about a revolution, and that the transportation of the arms was an act of hostility, not of service, to the emperor. The notion prevailed with great numbers and exasperated them; some attacked the waggons, others killed two centurions who opposed them, as well as Crispinus himself; and then the whole body, putting themselves in array and exhorting one another to go to the help of the emperor, marched to Rome. Here, learning that eighty senators were at supper with Otho, they rushed to the palace, declaring that now was a good time to take off all the emperor's enemies at one stroke. Accordingly, the city was in great commotion, εἶχε πολύν, ἐν δὲ τοῖς βασιλείοις ἦσαν διαδρομαί, καὶ τὸν Ὀθωνα δεινὴ κατελάμβανεν ἀπορία. φο-βούμενος γὰρ ὑπὲρ τῶν ἀνδρῶν αὐτὸς ἦν φοβερὸς ἐκείνοις, καὶ πρὸς αὐτὸν ἀνηρητημένους ἐώρα ταῖς ὄψεσιν ἀναύδους καὶ περιδεεῖς, ἐνίους καὶ μετὰ 6 γυναικῶν ἤκοντας ἐπὶ τὸ δεῖπνον. ἅμα δὲ τοὺς ἐπάρχους ἀπέστειλε τοῖς στρατιώταις διαλέγε-σθαι καὶ πρᾶννειν κελεύσας, ἅμα δὲ τοὺς κεκλη-μένους ἄνδρας ἀναστήσας καθ' ἑτέρας θύρας ἀφῆκε· καὶ μικρὸν ἔφθησαν ὑπεκφυγόντες, διὰ τῶν μισθοφόρων ὠθουμένων εἰς τὸν ἀνδρῶνα καὶ πυυθανομένων τί γεγόνασιν οἱ Καίσαρος πολέ-7 μοι. τότε μὲν οὖν ὀρθὸς ἀπὸ τῆς κλίνης πολλὰ 1068 παρηγορήσας καὶ δεηθεὶς καὶ μηδὲ δακρύων φει-σάμενος μόλις ἀπέπεμψεν αὐτούς· τῇ δ' ὑστεραία δωρησάμενος ἅπαντας κατ' ἄνδρα χιλίαις καὶ δια-κοσίαις καὶ πεντήκοντα δραχμαῖς εἰσῆλθεν εἰς τὸ 8 στρατόπεδον, καὶ τὸ μὲν πλῆθος ἐπήνεσεν, ὡς πρὸς αὐτὸν εὖνουν καὶ πρόθυμον, ὀλίγους δέ τινας οὐκ ἐπ' ἀγαθῷ φήσας ὑποικουρεῖν, διαβάλλοντας αὐτοῦ τὴν μετριότητα καὶ τὴν ἐκείνων εὐστάθειαν, ἠξίου συναγανακτεῖν καὶ συγκολάζειν.

 ἐπαινούντων δὲ πάντων καὶ κελευόντων, δύο μό-νους παραλαβών, οἷς οὐδεὶς ἔμελλεν ἄχθεσθαι κολασθεῖσιν, ἀπηλλάγη.

IV. Ταῦτα οἱ μὲν ἀγαπῶντες ἤδη καὶ πι-στεύοντες ἐθαύμαζον τὴν μεταβολήν, οἱ δ' ἀναγκαῖα πολιτεύματα πρὸς τὸν καιρὸν ἠγούντο, 282

expecting to be plundered at once; in the palace there were runnings to and fro; and a dire perplexity fell upon Otho. For while he had fears about the safety of his guests, he himself was an object of fear to them, and he saw that they kept their eyes fixed upon him in speechless terror, some of them having even brought their wives with them to the supper. But he sent the prefects of the guard with orders to explain matters to the soldiers and appease them, while at the same time he dismissed his guests by another door; and they barely succeeded in making their escape as the soldiers, forcing their way through the guards into the great hall, asked what was become of the enemies of Caesar. In this crisis, then, Otho stood up on his couch, and after many exhortations, and entreaties, and not without plentiful tears, at last succeeded in sending them away; but on the following day, after making a gift of twelve hundred and fifty drachmas to every man, he went into the camp. There he commended the great body of the soldiers for their goodwill and zeal in his service, but said that there were a few of them who were intriguing to no good purpose, thereby bringing his moderation and their fidelity into disrepute, and he demanded that they share his resentment against these and assist him in punishing them. All his hearers approving of this and bidding him to do as he wished, he took two men only, at whose punishment no one was likely to be distressed, and went away.

IV. Those who were already fond of Otho and put confidence in him admired this change in his behaviour, but others thought it a policy forced upon him by the situation, wherein he courted popular

- δημαγωγούντος αὐτοῦ διὰ τὸν πόλεμον. ἤδη γὰρ ἠγγέλλετο βεβαίως Οὐϊτέλλιος ἀξίωμα καὶ δύναμιν αὐτοκράτορος ἀνειληφώς· καὶ πτεροφόροι συνεχῶς ἐφοίτων αἰεὶ τι προσχωρεῖν ἐκείνῳ φράζοντες, ἕτεροι δὲ¹ τὰ Παννονικὰ καὶ τὰ Δαλματικὰ καὶ τὰ περὶ Μυσίαν στρατεύματα δηλοῦντες
- 2 ἤρῃσθαι μετὰ τῶν ἡγεμόνων Ὀθωνα. ταχὺ δὲ ἀφίκετο καὶ παρὰ Μουκιανοῦ γράμματα καὶ παρὰ Οὐεσπεσιανοῦ φίλια, τοῦ μὲν ἐν Συρίᾳ, τοῦ δὲ ἐν Ἰουδαίᾳ μεγάλας δυνάμεις ἐχόντων. ὑφ' ὧν ἐπαίρομενος ἔγραψεν Οὐϊτελλίῳ παραινῶν στρατιωτικὰ φρονεῖν, ὡς χρήματα πολλὰ δώσουστος αὐτοῦ καὶ πόλιν, ἐν ἧ βιώσεται ῥᾶστον καὶ ἡδιστον
- 3 βίον μεθ' ἡσυχίας. ἀντέγραψε δὲ κακείνος αὐτῷ κατειρωνευόμενος ἡσυχῇ πρῶτον· ἐκ δὲ τούτου διερεθιζόμενοι πολλὰ βλάβσφημα καὶ ἀσελγῆ χλευάζοντες ἀλλήλοις ἔγραφον, οὐ ψευδῶς μὲν, ἀνοήτως δὲ καὶ γελοίως θατέρου τὸν ἕτερον ἂ προσῆν ἀμφοτέροις ὀνειδέη λοιδороῦντος. ἀσωτίας γὰρ καὶ μαλακίας καὶ ἀπειρίας πολέμων καὶ τῶν πρόσθεν ἐπὶ πενίᾳ χρεῶν πλήθους ἔργου ἦν εἰπεῖν ὁποτέρῳ μείον αὐτῶν μέτεστι.
- 4 Σημείων δὲ καὶ φαντασμάτων πολλῶν λεγομένων, τὰ μὲν ἄλλα φήμας ἀδεσπότους καὶ ἀμφιβόλους εἶχεν, ἐν δὲ Καπιτωλίῳ Νίκης ἐφεστώσης ἄρματι τὰς ἡνίας πάντες εἶδον ἀφειμένας ἐκ τῶν χειρῶν, ὥσπερ κρατεῖν μὴ δυναμένης, καὶ τὸν ἐν μεσοποταμίᾳ νήσῳ Γαῖου Καίσαρος ἀνδριάντα favour because of the war. For already there were sure tidings that Vitellius had assumed the dignity and power of emperor; and swift couriers were continually coming with accounts of ever new accessions to him, although others made it clear that the armies in Pannonia, Dalmatia, and Mysia, with their leaders, adhered to Otho. And quickly there came also friendly letters from Mucianus and Vespasian, who were at the head of large forces, the one in Syria, the other in Judaea. Otho was elated by these, and wrote to Vitellius advising him not to have more than a soldier's ambitions, in which case he should be rewarded with a large sum of money, and a city, where he could live in the utmost ease and pleasure and be undisturbed. Vitellius also wrote to Otho in reply, at first in a somewhat dissembling manner; but afterwards both got excited and wrote one another abusive letters filled with shameful insults; not that either brought false charges, but it was foolish and ridiculous for one to storm the other with reproaches applicable to both. For as regards prodigality, effeminacy, inexperience in war, and multiplicity of debts incurred in a previous state of poverty, it were hard to say which of them had the advantage.

There were many reports of signs and apparitions, most of which were of uncertain and dubious origin; but everybody saw that a Victory standing in a chariot on the Capitol had dropped the reins from her hands, as if she had not power to hold them, and that the statue of Caius Caesar on the island in μήτε σεισμῶ γεγονότος μήτε πνεύματος ἀφ' ἑσ-5 πέρας μεταστραφέντα πρὸς τὰς ἀνατολάς· ὃ φασι συμβῆναι περὶ τὰς ἡμέρας ἐκείνας ἐν αἷς οἱ περὶ Οὐεσπεσιανὸν ἐμφανῶς ἤδη τῶν πραγμάτων ἀντελαμβάνοντο. καὶ τὸ περὶ τὸν Θύμβριν δὲ σύμπτωμα σημεῖον ἐποιοῦντο οἱ πολλοὶ μοχθηρόν.

¹ δὲ supplied by Sint.², after Schaefer; Bekker assumes a lacuna before ἐρεποι.

 ἦν μὲν γὰρ ὥρα περὶ ἣν μάλιστα οἱ ποταμοὶ πλή-θουσιν, ἀλλ' οὐπω τοσοῦτος ἦρθη πρότερον, οὐδὲ ἀπώλεσε τοσαῦτα καὶ διέφθειρεν, ὑπερχυθεὶς καὶ κατακλύσας πολὺ μέρος τῆς πόλεως, πλείστον δὲ ἐν ᾧ τὸν ἐπὶ πράσει διαπωλοῦσι σῖτον, ὡς δεινὴν ἀπορίαν ἡμερῶν συχνῶν κατασχεῖν.

V. Ἐπεὶ δὲ τὰς Ἄλπεις κατέχοντες ἤδη προσηγγέλλοντο Κεκίνας καὶ Οὐάλης Οὐϊτελλίῳ στρατηγούντες, ἐν Ῥώμῃ Δολοβέλλας, εὐπατρί-δης ἀνὴρ, ὑποψίαν παρῆχε τοῖς μισθοφόροις νεώτερα φρονεῖν. ἐκείνον μὲν οὖν, εἴτε αὐτὸν εἴτε ἄλλον δεδοικῶς, εἰς πόλιν Ἀκύνιον παρέπεμψε παραθαρύνας. καταλέγων δὲ τῶν ἐν τέλει συνεκδή-μους ἔταξεν ἐν τούτοις καὶ Λεύκιον τὸν Οὐϊτελλίου ἀδελφόν, οὔτε προσθεὶς οὐδὲν οὔτε ἀφελὼν ἧς 2 εἶχε τιμῆς. ἰσχυρῶς δὲ καὶ τῆς μητρὸς ἐπεμελήθη τοῦ Οὐϊτελλίου καὶ τῆς γυναικός, ὅπως μηδὲν φοβήσονται περὶ αὐτῶν. τῆς δὲ Ῥώμης φύλακα Φλαούιον Σαβῖνον, ἀδελφὸν Οὐεσπεσιανοῦ, κατέστησεν, εἴτε καὶ τοῦτο πράξας ἐπὶ τιμῇ Νέρωνος (παρ' ἐκείνου γὰρ εἰλήφει τὴν ἀρχὴν ὁ Σαβῖνος, ἀφείλετο δὲ Γάλβας αὐτόν), εἴτε μᾶλ-λον εὐνοίαν ἐνεδεικνυτο Οὐεσπεσιανῶ καὶ πίστιν αὐξων Σαβῖνον.

3 Αὐτὸς μὲν οὖν ἐν Βριξίλλῳ, πόλει τῆς Ἰταλίας

the Tiber, without the occurrence of earthquake or wind, had turned from west to east, which is said to have happened during the time when Vespasian was at last openly trying to seize the supreme power. The behaviour of the Tiber, too, was regarded by most people as a baleful sign. It was a time, to be sure, when rivers are at their fullest, but the Tiber had never before risen so high, nor caused so great ruin and destruction. It overflowed its banks and submerged a great part of the city, and especially the grain-market, so that dire scarcity of food prevailed for many days together.

V. And now, when word was brought to Rome that Caecina and Valens, who were in command with Vitellius, were in possession of the Alps, Dolabella, a man of noble family, was suspected by the praetorian soldiers of revolutionary designs. Otho therefore sent him away (through fear of him or of someone else) to the town of Aquinum, with words of encouragement. And in his selection of the men in authority who were to accompany him on his expedition he included also Lucius, the brother of Vitellius, without either increasing or diminishing his honours. He also took strong measures for the safety of the wife and mother of Vitellius, that they might have no fear for themselves. Moreover, he appointed Flavius Sabinus, a brother of Vespasian, prefect of the city, either because in this way also he could honour the memory of Nero (for Nero had bestowed the office upon Sabinus, but Galba had deprived him of it), or rather because, by advancing Sabinus, he could show how he favoured and trusted Vespasian.

Well, then, Otho himself tarried behind at Brixil-περὶ τὸν Ἡριδανὸν ἀπελείφθη, στρατηγὸς δὲ τῶν δυνάμεων ἐξέπεμψε Μάριόν τε Κέλσον καὶ Σουητώσιον Παυλίον ἔτι τε Γάλλον καὶ Σπουρίναν, ἄνδρας ἐνδόξους, χρήσασθαι δὲ μὴ δυνηθέντας ἐπὶ τῶν πραγμάτων ὡς προηροῦντο τοῖς ἑαυτῶν λογισμοῖς δι' ἀταξίαν καὶ θρασύτητα τῶν στρατιωτῶν. οὐ γὰρ ἠξίου ἐτέρων ἀκούειν, ὡς παρ' αὐτῶν τοῦ αὐτοκράτορος τὸ ἄρχειν ἔχοντος. ἦν μὲν οὖν οὐδὲ τὰ τῶν πολεμίων ὑγιαίνοντα παντάπασιν οὐδὲ χειροῆθη τοῖς ἠγεμόσιν, ἀλλ' ἔμπληκτα καὶ σοβαρὰ διὰ τὴν αὐτὴν αἰτίαν. οὐ μὴν ἀλλ' ἐκείνοις ἐμπειρία γε παρῆν τοῦ μάχεσθαι καὶ τὸ κάμνειν¹ ἐθάδες ὄντες οὐκ ἔφευγον, οὗτοι δὲ μαλακοὶ μὲν ἦσαν ὑπὸ σχολῆς καὶ διαίτης ἀπολέμου, πλεῖστον χρόνον ἐν θεάτροις καὶ πανηγύρεσι καὶ παρὰ σκηνὴν βεβιωκότες, ὕβρει δὲ καὶ κόμπῳ ἐπαμπέχειν ἐβούλοντο, προσποιήσασθαι τὰς λειτουργίας ὡς κρείττονες ἀπαξιούντες, οὐχ ὡς ἀδύνατοι φέρειν. ὁ δὲ Σπουρίνας προσβιαζόμενος αὐτοὺς ἐκινδύνευσεν μικρὸν ἐλθόντας ἀνελεῖν αὐτόν. ὕβρεως δὲ καὶ βλασφημίας οὐδεμιᾶς ἐφείσαντο, προδότην καὶ λυμεῶνα τῶν Καίσαρος καιρῶν καὶ πραγμάτων λέγοντες. ἔνιοι δὲ καὶ μεθυσθέντες ἤδη νυκτὸς ἦλθον ἐπὶ τὴν σκηνὴν ἐφόδιον αἰτοῦντες· εἶναι γὰρ αὐτοῖς πρὸς Καίσαρα βαδιστέον, ὅπως ἐκείνου κατηγορήσωσιν.

VI. Ὦνησε δὲ τὰ πράγματα καὶ Σπουρίναν ἐν τῷ παραντίκα λοιδορία περὶ Πλακεντίαν γενομένη τῶν στρατιωτῶν. οἱ γὰρ Οὐίτελλίου τοῖς τείχεσι προσβάλλοντες ἐχλεύαζον τοὺς Ὀθωνος ἐστῶτας

¹ τὸ κάμνειν Bekker, after Coraës : τοῦ κάμνειν.

lum, a town of Italy on the river Po, but sent his forces on under the command of Marius Celsus and Suetonius Paulinus, besides Gallus and Spurina. These were men of distinction, but were unable to conduct the campaign according to their own plans and wishes, owing to the disorderly and arrogant spirit of their soldiers. For these would not deign to obey other officers, since, as they said, they had made the emperor their commander. It is true that the enemy's troops also were not altogether in condition, nor under the control of their officers, but fierce and haughty, and for the same reason. Nevertheless, they were certainly experienced in fighting, and being accustomed to hard labour, they did not shun it; whereas Otho's men were soft, owing to their lack of employment and their unwarlike mode of life, having spent most of their time at spectacles and festivals and plays, and they wished to cloak their weakness with insolence and boasting, disdaining to perform the services laid upon them because they were above the work, not because they were unable to do it. When Spurina tried to force them into obedience, he came near being killed by them. They spared him no abuse nor insolence, declaring that he was betraying and ruining the opportunities and the cause of Caesar. Nay, some of them who were drunk came at night to his tent and demanded money for a journey, for they must go, they said, to Caesar, in order to denounce their commander.

VI. But Spurina and the emperor's cause were helped for the time by the abuse which his soldiers received at Placentia. For when the troops of Vitellius assaulted the walls, they railed at the

- παρὰ τὰς ἐπάλξεις, σκηνικοὺς καὶ πυρριχιστὰς καὶ Πυθίων καὶ Ὀλυμπίων θεωροὺς, πολέμου δὲ καὶ στρατείας ἀπείρους καὶ ἀθεύτους ἀποκαλοῦντες, καὶ μέγα φρονούντας ἐπὶ τῷ γέροντος ἀν-
 2 καταβάντας. οὕτω γὰρ ἐταράχθησαν ὑπὸ τούτων τῶν ὄνειδῶν καὶ διεκίκησαν ὥστε προσπεσεῖν τῷ Σπουρίνα, δεόμενοι χρῆσθαι καὶ προσταττειν αὐτοῖς, οὐδένα κίνδυνον οὐδὲ πόνον ἀπολεγομένοις. ἰσχυρὰς δὲ συστάσης τειχομαχίας καὶ μηχανημάτων πολλῶν προσαχθέντων ἐκράτησαν οἱ τοῦ Σπουρίνα, καὶ φόνῳ πολλῷ τοὺς ἐναντίους ἀποκρουσάμενοι διετήρησαν ἔνδοξον πόλιν καὶ τῶν Ἰταλῶν οὐδεμιᾶς ἤττον ἀνθούσαν.
- 3 Ἦσαν δὲ καὶ τὰ ἄλλα τῶν Οὐϊτελλίου στρατηγῶν οἱ Ὀθωῖος ἐντυχεῖν ἀλυπότεροι καὶ πόλεσι καὶ ιδιώταις· ἐκείνων δὲ Κεκίνας μὲν οὔτε φωνὴν οὔτε σχῆμα δημοτικός, ἀλλ' ἐπαχθῆς καὶ ἀλλόκοτος, σώματος μεγάλου, Γαλατικῶς ἀναξυρίσι καὶ χειρῖσιν ἐνεσκευασμένος, σημείοις καὶ ἄρχου-
 4 σι Ῥωμαϊκοῖς διαλεγόμενος. καὶ τὴν γυναῖκα παρέπεμπον αὐτῷ λογάδην ἵππεῖς ὄχουμένην ἵππῳ κεκοσμημένην ἐπιφανῶς. Φάβιον δὲ Οὐάλεντα τὸν ἕτερον στρατηγὸν οὔτε ἄρπαγαὶ πολεμίων οὔτε κλοπαὶ καὶ δωροδοκίαι παρὰ συμμάχων ἐνεπίμπλασαν χρηματιζόμενον, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐδόκει διὰ τοῦτο βραδέως ὀδεύων ὑστερῆσαι τῆς προτέ-
 5 ρας μάχης. οἱ δὲ τὸν Κεκίναν αἰτιῶνται, σπεύδοντα τὴν νίκην ἑαυτοῦ γενέσθαι πρὶν ἐκείνου

soldiers of Otho who manned the ramparts, calling them actors, dancers, spectators at Pythian and Olympian games, men who had never known or seen a campaign or fighting, and thought highly of themselves because they had cut off the head of a defenceless old man (meaning Galba), but would not openly enter a conflict and battle of men. Otho's soldiers were so disturbed by these reproaches, and so inflamed, that they threw themselves at the feet of Spurina, begging him to use them and command them, and pleading excuse from no danger or toil. And so, when a fierce assault was made upon the walls and many siege-engines were brought to bear upon them, Spurina's men prevailed, repulsed their opponents with great slaughter, and held safe a city which was famous and more flourishing than any in Italy.

In other ways, too, the generals of Vitellius were more vexatious than those of Otho in their dealings with both cities and private persons. One of them, Caecina, had neither the speech nor the outward appearance of a Roman citizen, but was offensive and strange, a man of huge stature, who wore Gaulish trousers and long sleeves, and conversed by signs even with Roman officials. His wife, too, accompanied him, with an escort of picked horsemen; she rode a horse, and was conspicuously adorned. Fabius Valens, the other general, was so rapacious that neither what he plundered from the enemy nor what he stole or received as gifts from the allies could satisfy him. Indeed, it was thought that this rapacity of his had delayed his march, so that he was too late for the battle at Placentia. But some blame Caecina, who, they say, was eager to win the ἐλθεῖν, ἄλλοις τε μικροτέροις περιπεσεῖν ἁμαρτήμασι καὶ μάχην οὐ κατὰ καιρὸν οὐδὲ γενναίως συνάψαι, μικροῦ πάντα τὰ πράγματα διαφθεί-ρασαν αὐτοῖς.

- VII. Ἐπεὶ γὰρ ὑποκρουσθεὶς τῆς Πλακεντίας
ὁ Κεκίνας ἐπὶ Κρεμώνην ὄρμησεν, ἐτέραν πόλιν εὐδαίμονα καὶ μεγάλην, πρῶτος μὲν Ἄννιος Γάλλος πρὸς Πλακεντίαν Σπουρίνα βοηθῶν, ὡς ἤκουσε καθ' ὁδὸν τοὺς Πλακεντίνους περιγεγονέναι, κινδυνεύειν δὲ τοὺς ἐν Κρεμώνῃ, μετήγαγεν ἐκεῖ τὸ στράτευμα καὶ κατεστρατοπέδευσε πλησίον τῶν πολεμίων· ἔπειτα καὶ τῶν ἄλλων 2 ἕκαστος ἐβοήθει τῷ στρατηγῷ. τοῦ δὲ Κεκίνα λοχίσαντος εἰς λάσια χωρία καὶ ὑλώδη πολλοὺς ὀπλίτας, ἵππεῖς δὲ προεξελάσαι κελεύσαντος, καὶ 1070 συνάψωσιν οἱ πολέμοι κατὰ μικρὸν ἀναχωρεῖν καὶ ἀναφεύγειν, ἄχρι ἂν ὑπάγοντες οὕτως ἐμβάλωσιν αὐτοὺς εἰς τὴν ἐνέδραν, ἐξήγγειλαν αὐτόμολοι τῷ Κέλσῳ. καὶ οὗτος μὲν ἵππεῦσιν ἀγαθοῖς ἀντεξελάσας, πεφυλαγμένως δὲ χρώμενος τῇ διώξει καὶ τὴν ἐνέδραν περισχὼν καὶ συνταράξας, ἐκάλει τοὺς ὀπλίτας ἐκ τοῦ στρατο-3 πέδου. καὶ δοκοῦσιν ἂν ἐπελθόντες ἐν καιρῷ μη-δένα λιπεῖν τῶν πολεμίων, ἀλλὰ πᾶν τὸ μετὰ Κεκίνα στράτευμα συντριῖναι καὶ ἀνελεῖν ἐπισπόμενοι τοῖς ἵππεῦσι· νυνὶ δὲ ὁ Παυλῖνος ὄψε καὶ σχολῇ προσβοηθήσας αἰτίαν ἔσχεν ἐνδεέστερον 4 τῆς δόξης στρατηγήσαι δι' εὐλάβειαν. οἱ δὲ πολλοὶ τῶν στρατιωτῶν καὶ προδοσίαν ἐνεκάλουν αὐτῷ, καὶ παρώξυνον τὸν Ὀθωνα, μεγαληvictory himself before Valens came, and so not only made other minor mistakes, but also joined battle inopportunately and without much spirit, thereby almost ruining their whole enterprise.

VII. For when Caecina, repulsed from Placentia, had set out to attack Cremona, another large and prosperous city, first Annius Gallus, who was coming to the help of Spurina at Placentia, hearing upon the march that Placentia was safe, but that Cremona was in peril, changed his course and led his army to Cremona, where he encamped near the enemy; then his colleagues¹ came one by one to his aid. Caecina now placed a large body of men-at-arms in ambush where the ground was rough and woody, and then ordered his horsemen to ride towards the enemy, and if they were attacked, to withdraw little by little and retreat, until they had in this way drawn their pursuers into the ambush. But deserters brought word of all this to Celsus, who rode out with good horsemen to meet the enemy, followed up his pursuit with caution, surrounded the men in ambush, and threw them into confusion. Then he summoned his men-at-arms from the camp. And apparently, if these had come up in time to the support of the cavalry, not a man of the enemy would have been left alive, but the whole army with Caecina would have been crushed and slain. As it was, however, Paulinus came to their aid too slowly and too late, and incurred the charge of sullyng his reputation as a commander through excessive caution. But most of the soldiers actually accused him of treachery, and tried to incense Otho against him, γορούντες ὡς νενικηκότων αὐτῶν, τῆς δὲ νίκης οὐκ ἐπὶ πᾶν προελθούσης κακία τῶν στρατηγῶν. ὁ δὲ Ὀθων οὐχ οὕτως ἐπίστευεν αὐτοῖς ὡς ἐβούλετο μὴ δοκεῖν ἀπιστεῖν. ἔπεμψεν οὖν Τιτιανὸν ἐπὶ τὰ στρατεύματα τὸν ἀδελφὸν καὶ Πρόκλον τὸν ἑπαρχον, ὃς εἶχεν ἔργῳ τὴν πᾶσαν ἀρχήν, 5 πρόσχημα δὲ ἦν ὁ Τιτιανός. οἱ δὲ περὶ τὸν Κέλσον καὶ Παυλῖνον ἄλλως ἐφείλκοντο συμβούλων ὄνομα καὶ φίλων, ἐξουσίαν καὶ δύναμιν ἐν τοῖς πράγμασι μηδεμίαν ἔχοντες. ἦν δὲ θορυβώδη καὶ τὰ παρὰ τοῖς πολεμίοις, μάλιστα δὲ τοῖς ὑπὸ τῷ Οὐάλεντι· καὶ τῆς περὶ τὴν ἐνέδραν μάχης ἀπαγγελθείσης ἐχαλέπαινον ὅτι μὴ παρεγένοντο μηδὲ ἤμυναν ἀνδρῶν τοσοῦτων ἀποθανόντων. μόλις δὲ πείσας καὶ παραιτησάμενος ὠρμημένους αὐτοὺς βάλλειν ἀνέζευξε καὶ συνῆψε τοῖς περὶ Κεκίαν.

¹ Celsus, Paulinus, and Spurina (v. 3), although Spurina is not mentioned further.

VIII. Ὁ δὲ Ὀθων παραγενόμενος εἰς Βητριακὸν εἰς τὸ στρατόπεδον (ἔστι δὲ πολίχνη πλησίον Κρεμώνης τὸ Βητριακόν) ἐβουλεύετο περὶ τῆς μάχης. καὶ Πρόκλῳ μὲν ἐδόκει καὶ Τιτιανῷ, τῶν στρατευμάτων ὄντων προθύμων καὶ προσφάτου τῆς νίκης, διαγωνίσασθαι καὶ μὴ καθῆσθαι τὴν ἀκμὴν ἀμβλύνοντα τῆς δυνάμεως καὶ περιμένοντα Οὐϊτέλλιον αὐτὸν ἐκ Γαλατίας ἐπελθεῖν. 2 Παυλῖνος δὲ τοῖς μὲν πολεμίοις ἔφη πάντα μεθ' ὧν μαχοῦνται παρεῖναι, καὶ μηδὲν ἐνδεῖν, Ὀθωνι δὲ τῆς ἤδη παρούσης οὐκ ἐλάττονα προσδόκιμον εἶναι δύναμιν ἐκ Μυσίας καὶ Παννονίας, ἃν τὸν αὐτοῦ περιμένῃ καιρὸν, ἀλλὰ μὴ στρατηγῇ πρὸς 3 τὸν τῶν πολεμίων. οὐ γὰρ ἀμβλυτέροις γε χρήloudly boasting that they had been victorious, but that their victory was made incomplete by the cowardice of their commanders. Otho did not believe them, and yet wished to avoid the appearance of disbelieving them. He therefore sent to the armies his brother Titianus, and Proculus, the prefect of the guards; of these two men Proculus had the entire authority in reality, and Titianus only in appearance. Celsus and Paulinus, too, enjoyed the empty title of friends and counsellors, but had no power or influence in the conduct of affairs. There were disturbances also among the enemy, and especially among the troops of Valens; for when these were told about the battle at the ambuscade, they were enraged because they were not present and had given no aid where so many men had lost their lives. They actually began to stone Valens, but he finally succeeded in pacifying them, and then broke camp and joined Caecina.

VIII. Otho now came to the camp at Bedricum (a little village near Cremona) and held a council of war. Proculus and Titianus were of the opinion that he ought to fight a decisive battle while his armies were flushed with their recent victory, and not sit there dulling the efficiency of his troops and waiting for Vitellius to come in person from Gaul. Paulinus, on the contrary, said that the enemy already had all the resources with which they would give battle, and lacked nothing, whereas, in the case of Otho, a force as large as the one he already had might be expected from Mysia and Pannonia, if he would only wait for his own best opportunity and conduct the campaign to suit that of the enemy. For his men were now confident of success in spite σεσθαι τότε τοῖς νῦν θαρροῦσιν ἀπ' ἐλαττόνων, ἂν πλείονας τοὺς ἀγωνιζομένους προσλάβωσιν, ἀλλ' ἐκ περιουσίας ἀγωνιῆσθαι· καὶ χωρὶς δὲ τούτου τὴν διατριβὴν εἶναι πρὸς αὐτῶν ἐν ἀφθόνοις πᾶσιν ὄντων, ἐκείνοις δὲ τὸν χρόνον ἀπορίαν παρέξειν τῶν ἀναγκαίων ἐν πολεμίᾳ καθεζομένοις.

4 ταῦτα λέγοντι Παυλίνῳ Μάριος Κέλσος ἐγένετο σύμφηφος. Ἄννιος δὲ Γάλλος οὐ παρῆν μὲν, ἀλλ' ἐθεραπεύετο πεπτωκῶς ἀφ' ἵππου, γράψαντος δὲ Ὀθωνος αὐτῷ συνεβούλευσε μὴ σπεύδειν, ἀλλὰ τὴν ἐκ Μυσίας περιμένειν δύναμιν ἣδη καθ' ὁδὸν οὔσαν. οὐ μὴν ἐπέιθετο τούτοις, ἀλλὰ ἐκράτησαν οἱ πρὸς τὴν μάχην παρορμῶντες.

IX. Αἰτίαι δὲ πλείονες ἄλλαι ὑπ' ἄλλων λέγονται· προδήλως δὲ οἱ στρατηγικοὶ προσαγορευόμενοι καὶ τάξιν ἔχοντες δορυφόρων, τότε μᾶλλον ἀληθινῆς γενόμενοι στρατείας καὶ τὰς ἐν Ῥώμῃ διατριβὰς καὶ διαίτας ἀπολέμους καὶ πανηγυρικὰς ποθοῦντες, οὐκ ἦσαν καθεκτοὶ σπεύδοντες ἐπὶ τὴν μάχην, ὡς εὐθύς ἐξ ἐπιδρομῆς ἀναρπασόμενοι τοὺς ἐναντίους. 2 δοκεῖ δὲ μηδὲ αὐτὸς Ὀθων ἐξαναφέρειν ἔτι πρὸς τὴν ἀδηλόγητα μηδὲ ὑπομένειν ἀηθεία καὶ μαλακότητι τοὺς περὶ τῶν δεινῶν λογισμούς, ἐκπονούμενος δὲ ταῖς φροντίσι σπεύδειν ἐγκαλυψάμενος, ὥσπερ ἀπὸ κρημνοῦ, 3 μεθεῖναι τὰ πράγματα πρὸς τὸ συντυχόν. καὶ 1071 τοῦτο μὲν διηγείτο Σεκοῦνδος ὁ ῥήτωρ ἐπὶ τῶν ἐπιστολῶν γενόμενος τοῦ Ὀθωνος. ἐτέρων δὲ ἦν of their inferior numbers, and he would not find them less keen after they had received reinforcements, nay, their superiority would lead them to fight all the better. And besides, delay was to their advantage, since they had everything in abundance, while to the enemy time would bring a scarcity of supplies, since they were occupying a hostile country. So Paulinus argued, and Marius Celsus voted with him. Annius Gallus was not present, being under treatment for a fall from his horse, but Otho asked his advice by letter, and his counsel was not to hasten the battle, but to await the forces from Mysia, which were already on the march. Nevertheless, Otho would not listen to these counsels, and the day was carried by those who urged immediate battle.

IX. Various other reasons for this are given by various writers; but manifestly the praetorian soldiers, as they were called, who served as the emperor's guards, since they were now getting a more generous taste of real military service and longed for their accustomed life of diversion at Rome in which festivals abounded and war was unknown, could not be restrained, but were eager for the battle, feeling sure that at the very first onset they would overwhelm their opponents. Moreover, it would seem that Otho himself could not longer bear up against the uncertainty of the issue, nor endure (so effeminate was he and so unused to command) his own thoughts of the dire peril confronting him; but worn out by his anxieties, he veiled his eyes, like one about to leap from a precipice, and hastened to commit his cause to fortune. And this is the account given by Secundus the rhetorician, who was Otho's secretary. But others would tell us ἀκούειν ὅτι τοῖς στρατεύμασιν ἀμφοτέροις παρίσταντο ὄρμαι πολλαὶ ὡς εἰς ταὐτὸ συνελθεῖν· καὶ μάλιστα μὲν αὐτοὺς ὁμοφρονήσαντας ἐκ τῶν πα-ρόντων ἡγεμονικῶν ἐλέσθαι τὸν ἄριστον, εἰ δὲ μή, τὴν σύγκλητον ὁμοῦ καθίσαντας ἐφεῖναι τὴν 4 αἴρεσιν ἐκείνη τοῦ αὐτοκράτορος. καὶ οὐκ ἀπει-κός ἐστι, μηδετέρου τότε τῶν προσαγορευομένων αὐτοκρατόρων εὐδοκιμοῦντος, ἐπιπίπτειν τοιούτους διαλογισμοὺς τοῖς γνησίοις καὶ διαπόνοις καὶ σωφρονούσι τῶν στρατιωτῶν, ὡς ἔχθιστον εἶη

 καὶ δεινόν, ἃ πάλαι διὰ Σύλλαν καὶ Μάριον, εἶτα Καίσαρα καὶ Πομπήϊον ᾠκτείροντο δρῶντες ἀλλήλους καὶ πιάσχοντες οἱ πολῖται, ταῦτα νῦν ὑπομένειν ἢ Οὐϊτελλίῳ λαιμαργίας καὶ οἰνοφλυγίας ἢ τρυφῆς καὶ ἀκολασίας Ὁθωνι τὴν ἡγεμο-5 νίαν χορήγημα προθεμένους. ταῦτ' οὖν ὑπονοοῦσι τοὺς τε περὶ τὸν Κέλσον αἰσθανομένους ἐμβαλεῖν διατριβὴν, ἐλπίζοντας ἄνευ μάχης καὶ πόνων κριθήσεσθαι τὰ πράγματα, καὶ τοὺς περὶ τὸν Ὁθωνα φοβουμένους ἐπιταχῦναι τὴν μάχην.

Χ. Αὐτὸς δὲ πάλιν εἰς Βρίξιλλον ἀνεχώρησε, καὶ τοῦτο προσεξαμαρτῶν, οὐχ ὅτι μόνον τὴν ἐν ὀφθαλμοῖς αὐτοῦ παρόντος αἰδῶ καὶ φιλοτιμίαν ἀφεῖλε τῶν ἀγωνιζομένων, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοὺς ἔρρωμενεστάτους καὶ προθυμοτάτους δι' αὐτὸν ἰππεῖς καὶ πεζοὺς ἀπαγαγὼν φυλακὴν τοῦ σώματος ὡσπερὶ στόμωμα¹ τῆς δυνάμεως ἀπέκοψε.

2 Συνέβη δὲ ταῖς ἡμέραις ἐκείναις καὶ περὶ τὸν Ἡριδανὸν ἀγῶνα γενέσθαι, τοῦ μὲν Κεκίνα ζευγνύντος τὴν διάβασιν, τῶν δὲ Ὁθωνος εἰργόντων that both armies were strongly inclined to confer; and above all, if they could agree, to elect as emperor the best of the commanders who were with them, but if not, to convene the senate and commit to it the choice of an emperor. And since neither of the men who then had the title of emperor enjoyed high repute, it is not unlikely that the real soldiers, those who knew what hardship was and had sense, should be led to reflect that it would be a dreadful and most hateful thing if the evils which the citizens had once to their sorrow inflicted upon one another and suffered because of Sulla and Marius, and again because of Caesar and Pompey, should now be endured again only to make the imperial power a means for providing for the gluttony and drunkenness of Vitellius or for the luxury and licentiousness of Otho. It is suspected, then, that Celsus was aware of these feelings, and therefore tried to interpose delay, hoping that the issue would thus be decided without hardship and battle, and that Otho, fearing this, hastened on the battle.

X. Otho himself returned to Brixillum, and in this too he made a mistake, not only because he took away from the combatants the respect and ambition which his presence and oversight inspired, but also because, by leading away as his bodyguard of foot and horse the men who were most vigorous and eager to please him, he cut away, as it were, the head and front of his army.

During this time there was also a conflict at the river Po, where Caecina tried to build a bridge across the stream, and Otho's soldiers attacked him

¹ στόμωμα Doehner's correction of the vulgate τι σῶμα, adopted by Sint.²

καὶ προσμαχομένων. ὡς δὲ οὐδὲν ἐπέβαινον, ἐνθεμένων εἰς τὰ πλοῖα δᾶδα θείου καὶ πίττης ἀνάπλεων, διὰ τοῦ πόρου πνεῦμα προσπεσὸν ἄφνω τὴν παρεσκευασμένην ὕλην ἐπὶ τοὺς πολεμί-3 οὺς ἐξερρίπιζε. καπνίου δὲ πρῶτον, εἶτα λαμπρᾶς φλογὸς ἐκπεσούσης, ταραττόμενοι καὶ ἀποπηδῶντες εἰς τὸν ποταμὸν τὰς τε ναῦς ἀνέτρεπον καὶ τὰ σώματα τοῖς πολεμίοις μετὰ γέλωτος παρεῖχον. οἱ δὲ Γερμανοὶ τοῖς Ὀθωνος μονομάχοις περὶ νησίδα τοῦ ποταμοῦ προσμίξαντες ἐκράτησαν καὶ διέφθειραν αὐτῶν οὐκ ὀλίγους.

XI. Γενομένων δὲ τούτων, καὶ τῶν ἐν Βητριάκῳ στρατιωτῶν τοῦ Ὀθωνος ἐκφερομένων μετ' ὀργῆς ἐπὶ τὴν μάχην, προήγαγεν αὐτοὺς ὁ Πρόκλος ἐκ τοῦ Βητριάκου, καὶ κατεστρατοπέδευσεν ἀπὸ πεντήκοντα σταδίων οὕτως ἀπείρως καὶ καταγελάστως ὥστε, τῆς μὲν ὥρας ἑαρινῆς οὔσης, τῶν δὲ κύκλῳ πεδίων πολλὰ νάματα καὶ ποταμοὺς
 2 ἀεννάιους ἐχόντων, ὕδατος σπάνει πιέζεσθαι. τῇ δὲ ὑστεραίᾳ βουλόμενον προάγειν ἐπὶ τοὺς πολεμίους ὁδὸν οὐκ ἐλάττονα σταδίων ἑκατὸν οἱ περὶ τὸν Παυλῖνον οὐκ εἶων, ἀλλ' ὥοντο δεῖν περιμένειν καὶ μὴ προπονεῖν ἑαυτοὺς, μηδὲ εὐθύς ἐκ πορείας μάχην τίθεσθαι πρὸς ἄνδρας ὀπλισμένους καὶ παρατεταγμένους καθ' ἡσυχίαν, ἐν ὅσῳ χρόνῳ προίασιν αὐτοὶ τοσαύτην ὁδὸν ἀναμεμιγ-
 3 μένων ὑποζυγίων καὶ ἀκολουθῶν. οὔσης δὲ περὶ τούτων ἀντιλογίας ἐν τοῖς στρατηγοῖς ἦλθε παρ' Ὀθωνος ἵππεὺς τῶν καλουμένων Νομάδων γράμματα κομίζων κελεύοντα μὴ μένειν μηδὲ διατρίβειν, ἀλλ' ἄγειν εὐθύς ἐπὶ τοὺς πολεμίους. ἐκεῖνοι μὲν οὖν ἄραυτες ἐχώρουν, ὁ δὲ Κεκίνας

and tried to prevent it. Not succeeding, Otho's men loaded their vessels with torchwood full of sulphur and pitch, and began to cross the river; but a blast of wind suddenly smote the material which they had prepared for use against the enemy, and fanned it afire. First smoke arose from it, then bright flames, so that the crews were confounded and leaped overboard into the river, upsetting their boats, and putting themselves at the mercy of a jeering enemy. Moreover, the Germans attacked Otho's gladiators at an island in the river, overpowered them and slew not a few of them.

XI. These disasters threw Otho's soldiers at Bedriacum into a rage for battle, and Proculus therefore led them forth out of Bedriacum, and after a march of fifty furlongs pitched his camp, but in a manner so ignorant and ridiculous that his men were troubled by lack of water, although it was the spring of the year and the plains around abounded in running streams and rivers that never dried up. On the following day he proposed to make a march of no less than a hundred furlongs and attack the enemy, but Paulinus objected, and thought they ought to wait and not tire themselves beforehand, nor join battle immediately after a march with men who had armed and arrayed themselves at their leisure, while they themselves were advancing so great a distance with all their beasts of burden and camp-followers. While the generals were disputing about the matter, there came from Otho a Numidian courier with a letter which ordered them not to wait or delay, but to march at once against the enemy. Accordingly, they decamped and moved forward, and Caecina, who was much disturbed on πυθόμενος τὴν ἔφοδον αὐτῶν ἐθορυβήθη, καὶ κατὰ σπουδὴν ἀπολιπὼν τὰ ἔργα καὶ τὸν ποταμὸν ἦκεν εἰς τὸ στρατόπεδον. ὠπλισμένων δὲ ἤδη τῶν πολλῶν, καὶ τὸ σύνθημα παραλαμβανόντων παρὰ τοῦ Οὐάλεντος, ἐν ὅσῳ τὴν τάξιν διελάγχανε τὰ τάγματα, τοὺς ἀρίστους τῶν ἰπέων προεξέπεμψαν.

XII. Ἐμπίπτει δὲ τοῖς προτεταγμένοις τῶν Ὀθωνος ἐκ δὴ τινος αἰτίας δόξα καὶ λόγος ὡς μεταβαλουμένων τῶν Οὐϊτελλίου στρατηγῶν πρὸς αὐτούς. ὡς οὖν ἐγγὺς ἦσαν, ἠσπάσαντο φιλίως συστρατιώτας προσαγορεύσαντες. ἐκείνων δὲ τὴν προσαγόρευσιν οὐκ εὐμενῶς, ἀλλὰ μετὰ θυμοῦ καὶ φωνῆς πολεμικῆς ἀμειψαμένων, τοῖς μὲν ἀσπασαμένοις ἀθυμία, τοῖς δὲ λοιποῖς ὑπόνοια κατὰ τῶν ἀσπασαμένων ὡς προδιδόντων παρέστη. καὶ τοῦτο πρῶτον αὐτοὺς ἐτάραξεν ἤδη τῶν πολεμίων ἐν χερσὶν ὄντων. εἶτα τῶν ἄλλων οὐδὲν ἦν κόσμῳ γινόμενον, ἀλλὰ πολλὴν μὲν ἀταξίαν τὰ σκευοφόρα τοῖς μαχομένοις ἐμπλαζόμενα παρείχε, πολλοὺς δὲ τὰ χωρία διασπασμοὺς ἐποίει τάφρων ὄντα μεστὰ καὶ ὀρυγμάτων, ἃ φοβούμενοι καὶ περιϊόντες ἠναγκάζοντο φύρδην καὶ κατὰ μέρη πολλὰ συμπλέκεσθαι τοῖς ἐναντίοις. μόναι δὲ δύο λεγεῶνες (οὕτω γὰρ τὰ τάγματα Ῥωμαῖοι καλοῦσιν), ἐπὶ κλησιν ἢ μὲν Οὐϊτελλίου Ἄρπαξ, ἢ δὲ Ὀθωνος Βοηθός, εἰς πεδίον ἐξελίξασαι ψιλὸν καὶ ἀναπεπταμένον, νόμιμόν τινα μάχην, συμπεσοῦσαι φαλαγγηδόν, ἐμάχοντο πολλὸν χρόνον. οἱ μὲν οὖν Ὀθωνος ἄνδρες ἦσαν εὖρωστοι καὶ ἀγαθοί, πολέμου δὲ καὶ μάχης τότε πρῶτον πείραν λαμβάνοντες· οἱ learning of their approach, hastily abandoned his operations at the river and came to his camp. There most of the soldiers had already armed themselves, and Valens was giving out the watchword to them, and while the legions were taking up their positions, the best of the cavalry were sent out in advance.

XII. And now, for some reason, it was believed and rumoured among Otho's vanguard that the generals of Vitellius would come over to their side. Accordingly, when these drew near, Otho's men greeted them in a friendly fashion and called them fellow-soldiers. The enemy, however, returned the salutation in no kindly spirit, but with anger and hostile cries, so that those who had greeted them were dejected, and were suspected of treachery by the others on their side. This was the first thing that threw Otho's men into confusion, and at a time when the enemy were close at hand. And besides, nothing else was done properly, since the baggage-train wandered about among the fighting men and caused great disorder. Moreover, the line of battle was often broken by the nature of the ground, which was full of trenches and pits, and in avoiding or going around these the men were compelled to engage their opponents promiscuously and in many detachments. Only two legions (to use the Roman word), that of Vitellius called "Rapax" (or Devourer) and that of Otho called "Adiutrix" (or Helper), got out into a treeless and extended plain, engaged in full formation, and fought a regular battle for a long time. Otho's men were sturdy and brave, but were now for the first time getting a taste of war and fighting; those of Vitellius, on the δὲ Οὐίτελλίου πολλῶν ἀγῶνων ἐθάδες, ἤδη δὲ γηραιοὶ καὶ παρακμάζοντες.

- 4 Ὀρμήσαντες οὖν ἐπ' αὐτοὺς οἱ Ὀθωνος ἐώσαντο καὶ τὸν ἀετὸν ἀφείλοντο, παντας ὁμοῦ τι τοὺς προμάχους ἀποκτείναντες· οἱ δὲ ὑπὸ αἰσχύνης καὶ ὀργῆς ἐμπεσόντες αὐτοῖς τὸν τε πρεσβευτὴν τοῦ τάγματος Ὀρφίδιον ἔκτειναν καὶ πολλὰ τῶν σημείων ἤρπασαν. τοῖς δὲ μονομάχοις ἐμπειρίαν τε καὶ θάρσος ἔχειν πρὸς τὰς συμπλοκὰς δοκοῦσιν ἐπήγαγεν Οὔαρος Ἀλφῆνος τοὺς καλουμένους
- 5 Βατάβους. εἰσὶ δὲ Γερμανῶν ἵππεῖς ἄριστοι, νῆσον οἰκοῦντες ὑπὸ τοῦ Ῥήνου περιρρομένην. τούτους ὀλίγοι μὲν τῶν μονομάχων ὑπέστησαν, οἱ δὲ πλείστοι φεύγοντες ἐπὶ τὸν ποταμὸν ἐπίπτουσιν εἰς σπεύρας τῶν πολεμίων αὐτόθι τεταγμένας, ὑφ' ὧν ἀμυνόμενοι πάντες ὁμαλῶς διεφθάρησαν.
- 6 αἰσχίστα δὲ ἠγωνίσαντο πάντων οἱ στρατηγικοί, μηδὲ ὅσον ἐν χερσὶ γενέσθαι τοὺς ἐναντίους ὑπομείναντες, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοὺς ἀητήτους ἔτι φόβου καὶ ταραχῆς ἀνεπίμπλασαν φεύγοντες δι' αὐτῶν. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ πολλοὶ γε τῶν Ὀθωνος νενικηκότες τοὺς καθ' αὐτοὺς ἐβιάσαντο καὶ διεξέπεσον διὰ τῶν πολεμίων κρατούντων εἰς τὸ στρατόπεδον.

XIII. Τῶν δὲ στρατηγῶν οὔτε Πρόκλος οὔτε Παυλῖνος συνεισελθεῖν ἐτόλμησαν, ἀλλ' ἐξέκλιναν φοβούμενοι τοὺς στρατιώτας ἤδη τὴν αἰτίαν ἐπὶ τοὺς στρατηγοὺς τρέποντας. Ἄννιος δὲ Γάλλος ἀνελάμβανεν ἐν τῇ πόλει καὶ παρεμυθεῖτο τοὺς ἐκ τῆς μάχης συλληγομένους, ὡς ἀγχωμάλου γεγενημένης καὶ πολλοῖς κεκρατηκότας μέρεσι

2 τῶν πολεμίων. Μάριος δὲ Κέλσος τοὺς ἐν τέλει

other hand, had seen many battles and were used to them, but they were now old and past their prime.

So Otho's men charged upon them, drove them back, and captured their eagle, killing nearly all who stood in the first rank ; but the others, impelled by shame and anger, fell upon their foes, slew Orfidius, the commander of the legion, and seized many of their standards. Against Otho's gladiators, too, who were supposed to have experience and courage in close fighting, Alfenus Varus led up the troops called Batavians. They are the best cavalry of the Germans, and come from an island made by the Rhine. A few of the gladiators withstood these, but most of them fled towards the river, where they encountered cohorts of the enemy in battle array, and in defending themselves against these, were cut off to a man. But the praetorian soldiers fought more shamefully than any others. They did not even wait for their opponents to come to close quarters, but fled through the ranks of their still unvanquished comrades, filling them with fear and confusion. Notwithstanding all this, many of Otho's men conquered those who opposed them, forced their way through the victorious enemy, and regained their camp.

XIII. But as for their generals, neither Proculus nor Paulinus ventured to enter the camp with them, but turned aside through fear of the soldiers, who were already laying the blame for their defeat upon their commanders. But Annius Gallus received into the town the soldiers who gathered there out of the battle, and tried to encourage them. The battle had been nearly equal, he said, and in many parts of it they had overcome their enemies. Marius Celsus, συναγαγὼν ἐκέλευσε σκοπεῖν τὸ κοινόν, ὡς ἐπὶ συμφορᾷ τηλικαύτῃ καὶ φόνῳ τοσοῦτῳ πολιτῶν μηδὲ Ὅθωνος, εἶπερ ἀνὴρ ἀγαθός ἐστιν, ἐθελήστοντος ἔτι πειρᾶσθαι τῆς τύχης, ὅπου καὶ Κάτων καὶ Σκηπίων, Καίσαρι κρατοῦντι μετὰ Φάρσαλον εἶξαι μὴ θελήσαντες, αἰτίαν ἔχουσιν ὡς πολλοὺς καὶ ἀγαθοὺς ἄνδρας ἐν Λιβύῃ παραναλώσαντες οὐκ ἀναγκαίως, καίπερ ἀγωνιζόμενοι περὶ τῆς 3 Ῥωμαίων ἐλευθερίας. τὰ γὰρ ἄλλα κοινὴν ἢ τύχην παρέχουσα πᾶσιν ἑαυτὴν ἐν οὐκ ἀφαιρεῖται τῶν ἀγαθῶν, τὸ κὰν πταίσωσιν εὐλογιστεῖν πρὸς τὰ συντυγχάνοντα.

Ταῦτα λέγων ἔπειθε τοὺς ἡγεμονικοὺς. ἐπεὶ δὲ πειρώμενοι τοὺς στρατιώτας ἐώρων εἰρήνης δεομένους καὶ Τιτιανὸς ἐκέλευε πρεσβεύειν ὑπὲρ ὁμοιοῖας, ἔδοξε Κέλσῳ καὶ Γάλλῳ βαδίζειν καὶ διαλέγεσθαι τοῖς περὶ τὸν Κεκίαν καὶ Οὐάλεντα.
 4 βαδίζουσι δὲ αὐτοῖς ἀπήντησαν ἑκατοντάρχαι τὴν μὲν δύναμιν ἤδη κεκινημένην λέγοντες ἐρχομένην ἐπὶ τὸ Βητριάκον, αὐτοὶ δὲ ὑπὸ τῶν στρατηγῶν ἀπεστάλθαι περὶ ὁμοιοῖας. ἐπαιέσαντες οὖν οἱ περὶ τὸν Κέλσον ἐκέλευσαν αὐτοὺς ἀναστρέψαντας πάλιν ἀπαντᾶν μετ' αὐτῶν τοῖς περὶ τὸν Κεκίαν. ἐπεὶ δὲ ἐγγὺς ἦσαν, ἐκινδύνευσεν ὁ
 Κέλσος. ἔτυχον γὰρ οἱ περὶ τὴν ἐνέδραν ἡττη-5 μένοι πρότερον ἰππεῖς προεξελαύνοντες. ὡς οὖν προσιόντα τὸν Κέλσον κατείδον, εὐθύς βοήσαντες ὤρμησαν ἐπ' αὐτόν. οἱ δὲ ἑκατοντάρχαι προ-ἔστησαν ἀνείργοντες· καὶ τῶν ἄλλων λοχαγῶν

moreover, assembled the officers and urged them to consult the public good. In view of so great a calamity, he said, and the slaughter of so many citizens, not even Otho himself, if he were a good man, would wish to make further trial of his fortune, since even Cato and Scipio, by refusing to yield to a victorious Caesar after Pharsalus, had incurred the charge of needlessly squandering the lives of many brave men in Africa, although their struggle was in behalf of Roman freedom. For in general all men alike are subject to the decrees of fortune, but of one thing she cannot rob a good man, and that is the privilege, in case of adversity, of taking reasonable measures to correct the situation that confronts him.

By this speech Celsus won over the officers. And after they had sounded the soldiers and found them desirous of peace, and when Titianus urged that an embassy be sent in the interest of concord, Celsus and Gallus decided to go and confer with Caecina and Valens. But as they were on the way they were met by some centurions of the enemy, who said that their army was already in motion and was on its way to Bedriacum, and that they themselves had been sent out by their generals to treat for concord. Accordingly, Celsus commended them, and bade them turn back with him and go to meet Caecina. But when they were near the army of Caecina, Celsus ran risk of his life. For it chanced that the horsemen who had formerly been worsted by him at the ambush were riding on in advance. So when they saw Celsus coming up, they forthwith raised a shout and dashed against him. But the centurions stood in front of him and kept them off;

φείδεσθαι βοώντων οἱ περὶ τὸν Κεκίαναν πυθόμνοι καὶ προσελάσαντες τὴν ἰκοσμίαν ταχὺ τῶν ἵππέων ἔπαυσαν, τὸν δὲ Κέλσον ἀσπασάμενοι φιλοφρόνως ἐβάδιζον μετ' αὐτῶν εἰς τὸ Βητριακόν.
 6 ἐν δὲ τούτῳ μετάνοια Τιτιανὸν ἔσχεν ἐκπέμψαντα τοὺς πρέσβεις· καὶ τῶν στρατιωτῶν τοὺς θρασυ-ομένους αὐθις ἀνεβίβαζεν ἐπὶ τὰ τεῖχη καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους παρεκάλει βοηθεῖν. τοῦ δὲ Κεκίνα προσ-ελάσαντος τῷ ἵππῳ καὶ τὴν δεξιὰν ὀρέγοντος οὐδεὶς ἀντέσχεν, ἀλλ' οἱ μὲν ἀπὸ τῶν τειχῶν ἠσπάζοντο τοὺς στρατιώτας, οἱ δὲ τὰς πύλας ἀνοίξαντες ἐξήεσαν καὶ ἀνεμίγνυντο τοῖς προστ-7 ἴκουσιν. ἠδίκηει δὲ οὐδεὶς, ἀλλὰ καὶ φιλοφροσῦναι καὶ δεξιώσεις ἦσαν, ὅμοσαν δὲ πάντες περὶ τοῦ Οὐϊτελλίου καὶ προσεχώρησαν.

XIV. Οὕτω μὲν οἱ πλείστοι τῶν παραγενομε-νων ἀπαγγέλλουσι γενέσθαι τὴν μάχην, οὐδὲ αὐτοὶ σαφῶς ὁμολογοῦντες εἶδέναι τὰ καθ' ἕκαστα διὰ τὴν ἀταξίαν καὶ τὴν ἀνωμαλίαν. ἐμοὶ δὲ ὕστερον ὀδεύοντι διὰ τοῦ πεδίου Μέστριος Φλῶρος, ἀνὴρ ὑπατικὸς τῶν τότε μὴ κατὰ γνώμην, ἀλλ' ἀνάγκη μετὰ τοῦ Ὀθωνος γενομένων, νεῶν ὄντα παλαιὸν ἐπιδείξας διηγείτο μετὰ τὴν μάχην ἐπελθὼν ἰδεῖν νεκρῶν σωρὸν τηλικούτου ὥστε 2 τοὺς ἐπιπολῆς ἄπτεσθαι τῶν αἰετῶν. καὶ τὴν αἰτίαν ἔφη ζητῶν οὔτε αὐτὸς εὔρεῖν οὔτε παρ' ἄλλου του πυθέσθαι. θνήσκειν μὲν γὰρ παρὰ τοὺς ἐμφυλίους πολέμους, ὅταν τροπὴ γένηται, πλείονας εἰκὸς ἐστὶ, τῷ μηδένα ζωγρεῖν, χρῆσθαι γὰρ οὐκ ἔστι τοῖς ἀλισκομένοις, ἢ δ' ἐπὶ τοσοῦτο

the other officers also shouted to the horsemen to spare Celsus, and Caecina, hearing their cries, rode up and speedily brought his horsemen to order. Then he greeted Celsus in a friendly manner and went on with him to Bedriacum. But meanwhile Titianus had repented of having sent the embassy, and after ordering the more resolute of the soldiers back again upon the walls, he exhorted the rest to go to their support. However, when Caecina rode up on his horse and stretched out his hand to them, not a man resisted further, but some greeted his soldiers from the walls, while others, throwing open the gates, went forth and mingled with the advancing troops. There were no hostilities, on the part of Otho's men, but only friendly salutations and greetings, and all took oath to support Vitellius and went over to his side.

XIV. This is the account which most of the participants give of the battle, although they themselves confess that they were ignorant of its details, owing to the disorder and the unequal fortunes of the several groups. At a later time, when I was travelling through the plain, Mestrius Florus, one of the men of consular rank who were at that time with Otho (by constraint, and not of their own will), pointed out to me an ancient temple, and told me how, as he came up to it after the battle, he saw a heap of dead bodies so high that those on top of it touched the gable of the temple. The reason for this he said he could neither discover himself nor learn from anyone else. It is natural, indeed, that in civil wars, when a rout takes place, more men should be killed, because no quarter is given (there being no use for prisoners); but why the dead σωρεία καὶ συμφόρησις οὐκ ἔχει τὴν αἰτίαν εὐσυλλόγιστον.

XV. Ἐγὼ δὲ Ὀθωνι πρῶτον μὲν ἀσαφής, ὥσπερ εἶθε περὶ τῶν τηλικούτων, προσέπεσε λόγος· ἐπεὶ δὲ καὶ τετρωμένοι τινὲς ἦκον ἐκ τῆς μάχης ἀπαγγέλλοντες, τοὺς μὲν φίλους ἦπτον ἂν τις ἐθαύμασεν οὐκ ἐῶντας ἀπαγορεύειν, ἀλλὰ θαρρεῖν παρακελευομένους, τὸ δὲ τῶν στρατιωτῶν πάθος ἅπασαν ὑπερέβαλε πίστιν. ὡς οὐδεὶς ἀπῆλθεν, οὐδὲ μετέστη πρὸς τοὺς κρατοῦντας, οὐδ' ὄφθη τὸ καθ' αὐτὸν ζητῶν ἀπεγνωσμένου τοῦ ἡγεμόνος, πάντες δ' ὁμαλῶς ἐπὶ θύρας ἦλθον, ἐκάλουν αὐτοκράτορα, προελθόντος ἐγίνοντο προστρόπαιοι, μετὰ βοῆς καὶ ἰκεσίας χειρῶν ἦπτοντο, προσέπιπτον, ἐδάκρουν, ἐδέοντο μὴ σφᾶς ἐγκαταλιπεῖν, μὴ προδοῦναι τοῖς πολεμίοις, ἀλλὰ χρῆσθαι μέχρι ἂν ἐμπνέωσι καὶ ψυχαῖς καὶ σώμασιν ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ. ταῦτα ὁμοῦ πάντες ἰκέτεον. εἷς δὲ τῶν ἀφανεστέρων ἀνατίνας τὸ ξίφος καὶ εἰπὼν, “Ἴσθι, Καῖσαρ, οὕτως ὑπὲρ σοῦ παρατεταγμένους ἅπαντας,” ἀπέσφαξεν ἑαυτόν.

Ἀλλὰ τούτων οὐδὲν ἐπέκλασε τὸν Ὀθωνα, φαιδρῶ δὲ καὶ καθεστῶτι προσώπῳ πανταχόσε τὰς ὄψεις περιαγαγών, “Γαύτην,” εἶπεν, “ὦ συστρατιῶται, τὴν ἡμέραν ἐκείνης, ἐν ἣ με πρῶτον ἐποιήσατε αὐτοκράτορα, μακαριωτέραν ἡγοῦμαι, τοιούτους ὁρῶν ὑμᾶς καὶ τηλικούτων ἀξιούμενος. ἀλλὰ μὴ μείζονος ἀποστερεῖτε, τοῦ καλῶς ἀποθανεῖν ὑπὲρ τοσοῦτων καὶ τοιούτων πολιτῶν. εἰ τῆς Ῥωμαίων ἡγεμονίας ἄξιος γέγονα, δεῖ με τῆς ἐμῆς ψυχῆς ὑπὲρ τῆς πατρίδος ἀφειδεῖν. οἶδα τὴν ῥίκην τοῖς ἐναντίοις οὔτε βεβαίαν οὔτε bodies should be collected and heaped up in such a manner is not easy to determine.

XV. To Otho there came at first, as is usual in such catastrophes, an indistinct rumour of the result; but presently some of his soldiers who had been wounded came with direct tidings of the battle. Here one cannot so much wonder that his friends would not let him give up all for lost, and exhorted him to be of good cheer; but the feelings of his soldiers towards him passed all belief. Not a man of them left him, or went over to the victorious side, or was seen to despair of the emperor's cause and seek his own safety, but all alike came to his door, called upon him as emperor, became his humble suppliants when he appeared before them, seized his hands with cries and prayers, fell down before him, wept, begged him not to abandon them, and not to betray them to their enemies, but to use their lives and persons in his service as long as they had breath. Such were their united supplications. And one obscure soldier held up his sword, and with the words "Know, O Caesar, that all of us stand in this fashion at thy side," slew himself.

None of these things, however, broke Otho down, but looking all around with a countenance composed and cheerful, he said: "This day, my fellow-soldiers, I deem more blessed than that on which ye first made me emperor, since I see you so devoted to me and am judged worthy of so high honour at your hands. But do not rob me of a greater blessedness—that of dying nobly in behalf of fellow-citizens so many and so good. If I was worthy to be Roman emperor, I ought to give my life freely for my country. I know that the victory of our adversaries ἰσχυρὰν οὖσαν. ἀπαγγέλλουσι τὴν ἐκ Μυσίας ἡμῶν δύναμιν οὐ πολλῶν ἡμερῶν ὁδὸν ἀπέχειν,

 5 ἣδη καταβαίνουσιν ἐπὶ τὸν Ἀδρίαν. Ἀσία καὶ Συρία καὶ Αἴγυπτος καὶ τὰ πολεμοῦντα Ἰουδαίους στρατεύματα μεθ' ἡμῶν, ἣ τε σύγκλητος παρ' ἡμῖν καὶ τέκνα τῶν ἐναντίων καὶ γυναῖκες. ἀλλ' οὐκ ἔστι πρὸς Ἀντίβαν οὐδὲ Πύρρον οὐδὲ Κίμ-βρους ὁ πόλεμος ὑπὲρ τῆς Ἰταλίας, ἀλλὰ Ῥωμαῖοι πολεμοῦντες ἀμφότεροι τὴν πατρίδα καὶ νικῶντες ἀδικοῦμεν καὶ νικώμενοι. καὶ γὰρ τὸ ἀγαθὸν τοῦ 6 κρατοῦντος ἐκείνη κακὸν ἔστι. πιστεύσατε πολλάκις ὅτι δύναμαι κάλλιον ἀποθανεῖν ἢ ἄρχειν.
 οὐ γὰρ ὀρῶ τί τηλικούτου Ῥωμαῖοις ὄφελος ἔσομαι κρατήσας, ἠλίκον ἐπιδούς ἐμαυτὸν ὑπὲρ εἰρήνης καὶ ὁμοιοῦσας, καὶ τοῦ μὴ πάλιν ἡμέραν τοιαύτην ἐπιδεῖν τὴν Ἰταλίαν."

XVI. Τοιαῦτα διαλεχθεῖς, καὶ πρὸς τοὺς ἐνί-στασθαι καὶ παρακαλεῖν ἐπιχειροῦντας ἀπισχυρι-σάμενος, τοὺς τε φίλους ἐκέλευεν ἀπαλλάττεσθαι καὶ τῶν συγκλητικῶν τοὺς παρόντας· τοῖς δὲ μὴ παροῦσιν ἐπέστελλε καὶ γράμματα πρὸς τὰς πόλεις, ὅπως παρακομισθῶσιν ἐντίμως καὶ μετὰ
 2 ἀσφαλείας. προσαγόμενος δὲ τὸν ἀδελφιδοῦν Κοκκήϊον, ἔτι μειράκιον ὄντα, θαρρεῖν παρεκάλει καὶ μὴ δεδιέναι Οὐϊτέλλιον, οὗ καὶ μητέρα καὶ γενεᾶν καὶ γυναῖκα αὐτός, ὥσπερ οἰκείων κηδό-μενος, διαφυλάξαι. διὰ τοῦτο γὰρ οὐδὲ θέσθαι παῖδα βουλόμενος αὐτόν, ἀλλ' ἀναβαλέσθαι τὴν εἰσποίησιν, ὅπως συνάρχῃ κρατήσαντος αὐτοῦ, μὴ προσαπόλοιτο πταίσαντος. "Ἐκείνο δέ," εἶπεν, "ὦ παῖ, παρεγγυῶμαί σοι τελευταῖον, is neither decisive nor assured. I have word that our forces from Mysia are already approaching the Adriatic, and are only a few days distant from us. Asia, Syria, Egypt, and the armies fighting against the Jews, are on our side; the senate, too, is with us, as well as the wives and children of our adversaries. Still, it is not to defend Italy against Hannibal, or Pyrrhus, or the Cimbri, that our war is waged, but both parties are waging war against Romans, and we sin against our country whether we conquer or are conquered. * For the victor's gain is our country's loss. Believe me when I insist that I can die more honourably than I can reign. For I do not see how my victory can be of so great advantage to the Romans as my offering up my life to secure peace and concord, and to prevent Italy from beholding such a day again."

XVI. So he spake, and after resisting firmly those who tried to oppose and dissuade him, he ordered his friends to depart, as well as the men of senatorial rank who were present; to those who were absent he sent the same command, and wrote to the cities urging them to escort the travellers on their way with honour and in safety. Then he sent for his nephew Cocceius, who was still a youth, and bade him be of good cheer and not fear Vitellius, whose mother and wife and children he had kept safe and cared for as though they were his own. He had desired, he said, to make him his son, but had put off the adoption, in order that the youth might share his power after he had prevailed, and not perish with him after he had failed. "And now, my boy," he said, "this is my last charge to thee; do not altoμήτε ἐπιλαθέσθαι παντάπασι μήτε ἄγαν μνημονεύειν ὅτι Καίσαρα θεῖον ἔσχες.”

- 3 Γενόμενος δὲ ἀπὸ τούτων μετὰ μικρὸν ἤκουσε θορύβου καὶ βοῆς ἐπὶ θύραις. οἱ γὰρ στρατιῶται τῶν συγκλητικῶν τοῖς ἀπιούσι διηπείλουν ἀποσφάζειν, εἰ μὴ παραμενοῦσιν, ἀλλὰ οἰχήσονται τὸν αὐτοκράτορα καταλιπόντες. πάλιν οὖν προῆλθεν ὑπὲρ τῶν ἀνδρῶν φοβηθεῖς, καὶ τοὺς στρατιώτας, οὐκέτι δεητικὸς οὐδὲ πρᾶος, ἀλλὰ τραχὺς ὄφθεις, καὶ μετ’ ὀργῆς εἰς τὸ θορυβοῦν μάλιστα διαβλέψας, ἀπελθεῖν ἐποίησεν εἴξαντας καὶ διατρέσαντας.

- XVII. Ἦδη δὲ ἐσπέρας οὔσης ἐδίψησε, καὶ πῶν ὀλίγον ὕδατος, δυεῖν ὄντων αὐτῷ ξιφῶν, ἑκατέρου κατεμάνθανε τὸ σπᾶσμα πολὺν χρόνον, καὶ τὸ ἕτερον ἀπέδωκε, θάτερον δὲ εἰς τὰς ἀγκύλας ἀναλαβὼν τοὺς οἰκέτας προσεκαλεῖτο. καὶ φιλοφρονούμενος διένεμε τῶν χρημάτων τῷ μὲν πλέον, τῷ δὲ ἔλαττον, οὐχ ὥσπερ ἄλλοτρίων ἀφειδῶν, ἀλλὰ τὸ κατ’ ἀξίαν καὶ τὸ μέτριον
- 2 ἐπιμελῶς φυλάττων. ἀποπέμψας δὲ τούτους ἤδη τὸ λοιπὸν ἀνεπαύετο τῆς νυκτός, ὥστε τοὺς κατευναστὰς αἰσθάνεσθαι βαθέως αὐτοῦ καθεύδοντος. ὄρθρου δὲ καλέσας ἀπελεύθερον ᾧ συνδιώκησε τὰ περὶ τοὺς συγκλητικούς, μαθεῖν προσέταξε· καὶ πυθόμενος γεγονέναι τοῖς ἀπερχομένοις ὧν ἕκαστος ἔχρηξεν, “Ἴθι τοίνυν,” ἔφη, “σύ, καὶ ποίει τοῖς στρατιώταις ἐμφανῆ σεαυτόν, εἰ μὴ θέλεις κακῶς ὑπ’ αὐτῶν ἀποθανεῖν ὡς ἐμοὶ
- 3 συμπράξας τὸν θάνατον.” ἐξελθόντος δὲ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου τὸ ξίφος ὑποστήσας ὄρθρον ἀμφοτέραις ταῖς χερσί, καὶ περιπεσῶν ἄνωθεν, ὅσον ἅπαξ gether forget, and do not too well remember, that thou hadst a Caesar for an uncle."

This done, after a little he heard tumult and shouting at his door. For as the men of senatorial rank were departing, the soldiers threatened to kill them if they did not remain, instead of forsaking their emperor. Once more, then, he went forth, since he feared for the men's safety. He was no longer gentle and suppliant, however, but stern of countenance, and looking angrily round upon the most turbulent of the soldiers, he made them go away submissively and in fear.

XVII. It was now evening, and being thirsty, he drank a little water. He had two swords, and after examining the blade of each for a long time, he laid one of them aside, but put the other under his arm, and then called his servants. These he addressed kindly, and distributed money to them, more to one and less to another, not as though lavish with what was no longer to be his, but with strict regard to moderation and the claims of merit. After sending the servants away, he betook himself to rest for the remainder of the night, and slept so soundly that his chamberlains heard his heavy breathing. Just before dawn he called a freedman with whom he had arranged for the departure of the senators, and bade him learn how they fared. And when he was told that all of them had what was needful for their journey, "Go thou, then," he said to the freedman, "and show thyself to the soldiers, unless thou wishest them to put thee to a miserable death for helping me to die." Then, when the man had gone out, with both hands he held his sword upright beneath him, and fell upon it, giving but a στενάξαι μόνον ἦσθετο τοῦ πόνου καὶ τοῖς ἐκτὸς αἰσθησιν παρέσχεν. ἀραμένων δὲ τῶν παίδων οἰμωγὴν εὐθύς ἅπαν τὸ στρατόπεδον καὶ τὴν πόλιν ἐπέιχε κλαυθμός· καὶ μετὰ βοῆς οἱ στρατιῶται εἰσέπεσον ἐπὶ τὰς θύρας καὶ ὠλοφύροντο, περιπαθοῦντες καὶ λοιδοροῦντες ἑαυτοὺς μὴ φυλάξαντας τὸν αὐτοκράτορα μηδὲ κωλύσαντας ἀποθανεῖν ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν. ἀπέστη δὲ οὐδεὶς τῶν κατ' αὐτόν, ἐγγὺς ὄντων τῶν πολεμίων, ἀλλὰ κοσμήσαντες τὸ σῶμα καὶ πυρὰν κατασκευάσαντες ἐξεκόμιζον ἐν τοῖς ὄπλοις οἱ φθάσαντες ὑποδύναί καὶ βαστάσαι τὸ λέχος ἐπιγαυρούμενοι. τῶν δὲ ἄλλων οἱ μὲν τὸ τραῦμα τοῦ νεκροῦ κατεφίλουσαν προσπίπτουτες, οἱ δὲ ἤπτοντο τῶν χειρῶν, οἱ δὲ προσεκύνουσαν πόρρωθεν. ἔνιοι δὲ τῇ πυρᾷ λαμπάδας ὑφέντες ἑαυτοὺς ἀπέσφαξαν, οὐδὲν ἐκδήλωσαν οὔτε πεπονθότες χρηστὸν ὑπὸ τοῦ τεθνηκότος οὔτε πείσεσθαι δεινὸν ὑπὸ τοῦ κρατοῦντος δεδιότες. ἀλλ' ἔοικε μηδενὶ τῶν πωποτε τυράννων ἢ βασιλέων δεινὸς οὕτως ἔρως ἐγγενέσθαι καὶ περιμανῆς τοῦ ἄρχειν, ὡς ἐκεῖνοι τοῦ ἄρχεσθαι καὶ ὑπακούειν Ὀθωνος ἠράσθησαν· οὓς γε μηδ' ἀποθανόντος ὁ πόθος προὔλιπεν, ἀλλὰ παρέμεινε εἰς ἀνήκεστον ἔχθος Οὐϊτελλίῳ τελευτήσας.

XVIII. Τὰ μὲν οὖν ἄλλα καιρὸν οἰκεῖον ἔχει λεχθῆναι· κρύψαντες δὲ τῇ γῇ τὰ λείψανα τοῦ Ὀθωνος οὔτε μεγέθει σήματος οὔτ' ἐπιγραφῆς ὄγκῳ τὸν τάφον ἐποίησαν ἐπίφθονον. εἶδον δὲ ἐν Βριξίλλῳ γενόμενος καὶ μνήμα μέτριον καὶ single groan as he felt the pang. The servants outside heard his groan and raised a wailing cry, and at once the whole camp and the city were filled with lamentation. The soldiers, with loud cries, burst in at the door, and then bewailed their emperor, full of anguish, and reviling themselves because they had not watched over him and prevented him from dying in their behalf. Not one of his followers went away, although the enemy were near, but after attiring the body and preparing a funeral pyre for it, they escorted it thither with military honours, and full of exultation were those who won the privilege of carrying the bier. Of the rest, some embraced the emperor's body and kissed his wound, others grasped his hands, and others still made him their obeisance at a distance. There were some, too, who first put their torches to the pyre and then slew themselves, not, so far as could be known, because they were either indebted to the dead for favours, or fearful of punishment at the hands of the victor. Nay, it would seem that no king or tyrant was ever possessed by so dire and frenzied a passion for ruling as was that of these soldiers for being ruled and commanded by Otho; not even after his death did their yearning for him leave them, nay, it abode with them until it finally changed into an incurable hatred for Vitellius.

XVIII. Well, then, the rest of the story is now in place. They buried the remains of Otho, and made a tomb for them which neither by the great size of its mound nor by the boastfulness of its inscription could awaken jealousy. I saw it when I was at Brixillum. It is a modest memorial and the inscrip-

τὴν ἐπιγραφὴν οὕτως ἔχουσαν, εἰ μεταφρασθεῖη· “ Δηλώσει¹ Μάρκου Ὀθωνος.”

- 2 Ἀπέθανε δὲ Ὀθων ἔτη μὲν ἑπτὰ καὶ τριάκοντα βιώσας, ἄρξας δὲ τρεῖς μῆνας, ἀπολιπὼν δὲ μὴ χεῖρονας μὴδ' ἐλάττους τῶν τὸν βίον αὐτοῦ ψευδόντων τοὺς ἐπαινοῦντας τὸν θάνατον. βιώσας γὰρ οὐδὲν ἐπιεικέστερον Νέρωνος ἀπέθανεν εὐγενέστερον.
- 3 Οἱ δὲ στρατιῶται Πολλίωνος τοῦ ἐτέρου τῶν ἐπάρχων ὀμνύειν εὐθύς εἰς τὸν Οὐϊτέλλιον κελεύσαντος ἐδυσχέρανον· καὶ πυθόμενοι τῶν συγκλητικῶν ἐπίουσι ἔτι παρεῖναι τοὺς μὲν ἄλλους ἀφήκαν, Οὐεργινίῳ δὲ Ῥούφῳ πράγματα παρεῖχον ἅμα τοῖς ὄπλοις ἐλθόντες ἐπὶ τὴν οἰκίαν καὶ κατακαλοῦντες αὐθις καὶ κελεύοντες ἄρχειν ἢ
- 4 πρεσβεύειν ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν. ὁ δὲ τὴν ἡγεμονίαν ἡττωμένων παραλαβεῖν, νεικηκότων πρότερον μὴ θελήσας, μανικὸν ἠγεῖτο· πρεσβεύειν δὲ πρὸς τοὺς Γερμανοὺς δεδιώς, πολλὰ βεβιάσθαι παρὰ γνώμην ὑπ' αὐτοῦ δοκοῦντας, ἔλαθε δι' ἐτέρων θυρῶν ἐκποδὼν ποιήσας ἑαυτόν. ὡς δὲ τοῦτο ἔγνωσαν οἱ στρατιῶται, τοὺς τε ὄρκους ἐδέξαντο καὶ τοῖς περὶ τὸν Κεκίαν προσέθεντο συγγνώμης τυχόντες.

¹ Δηλώσει Bekker adopts Δαίμοσι, the correction of Lobeck.

tion on it, in translation, runs thus: "To the memory of Marcus Otho."

Otho died at the age of thirty-seven years, but he had ruled only three months, and when he was gone, those who applauded his death were no fewer or less illustrious than those who blamed his life. For though he lived no more decently than Nero, he died more nobly.

As for his soldiers, when Pollio, their remaining prefect,¹ ordered them to swear allegiance at once to Vitellius, they were incensed; and when they learned that some of the senators were still there, they let all of them go except Verginius Rufus, and him they annoyed by going to his house in military array and inviting him again,² and even urging him, to assume the imperial power, or to go on an embassy in their behalf. But Verginius thought it would be madness for him to accept the imperial dignity now, when they were defeated, after refusing it before, when they were victorious, and as for going on an embassy to the Germans, he feared to do so, since they felt that he had often done them violence beyond all reason; and so he stole away unobserved by another door. When the soldiers learned of this, they consented to take the oaths, and joined the forces of Caecina, thus obtaining pardon.

¹ The other was Proculus, (vii. 4 ; xiii. 1).

² See The Galba, vi. 3 ; x. 2 ff.

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

The Roman numerals refer to the volume, the Arabic to the page. Numbers marked off by semicolons belong to lemmata omitted for the sake of brevity.

A name without a number following two or more with numbers indicates uncertainty as to the identity of the person referred to.

Bergk is used for Bergk, Poetae Lyrici Graeci, 4th ed.; Kock for Kock, Comicorum Atticorum Fragmenta; Nauck for Nauck, Tragicorum Graecorum Fragmenta, 2nd ed.

- ABANTES, Euboean tribe referred to by Homer and Archilochus, I. 10
- Abantidas, aimed at tyranny of Sicyon, XI. 4; slain, 6
- Abas, river where Pompey defeated Albanians, v. 208
- Abocritus, boeotarch defeated at Chaeroneia by Aetolians, XI. 34
- Abolus, river where Timoleon defeated Mameucus, VI. 340
- Abra, attendant of Pompeia, VII. 152, 464
- Abriorix (Ambiorix) destroys army of Titurius and Cotta, VII. 500
- Abuletes, imprisoned by Alexander, VII. 414
- Abydos, scene of naval battle, IV. 78
- Academus, gave name to Academy, I. 74
- Academy, near Athens, XI. 78; beautified by Cimon, II. 446; ravaged by Sulla, IV. 362. See also I. 406
- Academy, new, rep. by Philo, Cleitomachus, Carneades, VII. 88, II. 606
- Academy, old, rep. by Antiochus of Ascalon, II. 606
- Acamantis, tribe of Pericles, III. 6
- Acanthians, their treasury, IV. 234, 280
- Acaranania, overrun by Pericles, III. 60; given to Pyrrhus, IX. 360
- Acarnanians, defeated by Agesilaus, v. 62; fight for Antigonus, X. 114
- Acastus, son of Pelias, eaten by worms, IV. 410
- Acca Larentia, wife of Faustulus, I. 100
- Aceriae, city north of Po, v. 446
- Acestodorus, quoted, II. 38
- Achaeans, helped by Agesilaus, v. 62; league against Philip, VII. 40; league joined by Sicyon, XI. 20; choose Aratus general, 34; alliance with Alexander, 38; joined by Corinth, 52; by Megara, Troezen, Epidaurus, 54, 58; joined by Cleonae, 64; ask aid of Sparta, X. 30; joined by Megalopolis, XI. 68; allied with Aetolians, 74; joined by Aegina, Hermione, Arcadia, 78; by Argos and Phlius, 80; by Mantinea, 82; war with Sparta, X. 54, 58, 62, 80, 84, XI. 86, 90; aided by Antigonus, X. 266; recover Argos, XI. 102; war with Aetolians, X. 126, XI. 108; Philopoemen cavalry leader, X. 272; invite Philip, XI. 108; defeat Machanidas, X. 280, 284; with Romans against Nabis, 292; against Philip, 334; exiles restored, II. 326. See also X. 274, 314, 360, 370
- Achaeans, Phthiotic, III. 56, v. 418, 430, X. 350

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Achaeans' harbour, in Troad, II. 506
 Achaicus, surname of Mummius, IX. 464
 Acharnae, Attic deme, II. 66, 252
 Acheloiis river, III. 60
 Achilles, has Pompey killed, v. 316; wars on Caesar, VII. 558; executed, v. 324
 Achilles, defeats Paris, I. 78; deified in Epeirus, IX. 346; slain by Paris, IV. 452
 Achilles, rescues infant Pyrrhus, IX. 350
 Achradina, strongest part of Syracuse, v. 484, VI. 62, 66, 76, etc.
 Acilius, friend of Brutus, VI. 176
 Acilius, soldier of Caesar, VII. 478
 Acilius, C., quoted, I. 158; interprets Greek, II. 370
 Acilius Glabrio, M', defeats Antiochus, etc., II. 334, 340, IV. 364, X. 366
 Acontium, mountain in Greece, IV. 380, 388
 Acrae, in Sicily, VI. 58
 Acrillae, in Sicily, v. 482
 Acrocorinthus, X. 82, 90, XI. 34, 36, 54, 76, 102
 Acron, slain by Romulus, I. 134, 190, v. 454
 Acropolis of Athens, II. 28, 54, 416, 446, 612, III. 42, IX. 338
 Acrotatus (1), son of Cleomenes, father of Areus, X. 10
 Acrotatus (2), son of Areus, slain at Megalopolis, IX. 434, X. 10
 Acurium, mountain in Phocis, VIII. 222
 Actaeon (1), Plataean hero, II. 246
 Actaeon (2), torn to pieces by dogs, VIII. 2
 Actaeon (3), torn to pieces by lovers, VIII. 2
 Acte, joins Cleomenes, XI. 94; Demetrius, IX. 58
 Actium sea-fight, IX. 278, VI. 246; v. 174
 Acuphis, made ruler by Alexander, VII. 390
 Ada, queen of Caria, VII. 286
 Adeimantus (1), Athenian archon, II. 16
 Adeimantus (2), Athenian general at Aegospotami, IV. 106
 Adiabeni, support Tigranes, II. 552, 558
 Adiatrix, legion of Otho, XI. 302
 Admetus (1), loved by Apollo, I. 318
 Admetus (2), king of Molossians, shelters Themistocles, II. 64
 Adonia festival, described, III. 256, IV. 48
 Adramyttium, home of Xenocles, VII. 90
 Adranus, saved by Timoleon, VI. 286, 298
 Adranus, god honoured in Sicily, VI. 286
 Adrasteia, mountain range, II. 496
 Adrastus, helped by Theseus, I. 66, VII. 150
 Adria, Tuscan city, II. 128
 Adria, northern sea, II. 128
 Adria, where Phillistus wrote history, VI. 24 Adria? garrisoned by Antigonus, XI. 26
 Adrian, officer under Lucullus, II. 520
 Adriatic sea, II. 198
 Adultery, unknown at Sparta, I. 252; Solon's law, 466
 Aeacidae, II. 44; IX. 432
 Aeacides, father of Pyrrhus, IX. 58, 346, 350
 Aeacus, described, I. 20, VII. 224; sanctuary at Aegina, 70
 Aeantid tribe, lost 52 at Plataea, II. 72
 Aedepsus hot springs, IV. 408
 Aediles, two kinds, IX. 470; IV. 158
 Aedui, rebel against Caesar, VII. 506
 Aegae (1), little Aeolic citadel, II. 70
 Aegae (2), garrisoned by Pyrrhus, IX. 432
 Aegean, made free sea by Cimon, II. 428
 Aegeid, Attic tribe, III. 254, IV. 56
 Aegeus, his history, I. 6, 24, 32, 44, 196, 200
 Aegialia, little island, X. 118
 Aegias, banker of Sicyon, XI. 40
 Aegina, II. 44, IV. 252, VII. 2, 64, 70
 Aeginetans, attacked by Athens, II. 10; 46; 52; III. 84; expelled by Athenians, 98; 230; restored by Lysander, IV. 268; join Achaean league, XI. 78

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Aegium, attached to Rome by Cato Major, II. 336; X. 86; 106; XI. 84, 96; 120
- Aegle, loved by Theseus, I. 40, 66
- Aegospotami, Lysander defeats Athenians, IV. 106, 254, 258, XI. 176
- Aegyptians, I. 318; months in year, 368; wheel, 356; revolt from Persia, II. 84; send grain to Athens, III. 108
- Aelia, wife of Sulla, IV. 344
- Aelii, their poverty, VI. 366, 432
- Aelius, Sextus, consul with Flaminius, X. 324
- Aelius Tubero, married Aemilius Paulus' daughter, VI. 366, 426, 432
- Aemilia (1), mother of Romulus by Mars, I. 92
- Aemilia (2), wife of Scipio Magnus, VI. 358
- Aemilia (3), wife of Glabrio, then of Pompey, IV. 432, V. 134
- Aemilii, patrician family, I. 334, VI. 358
- Aemilius, common crier, VI. 454
- Aemilius, M., elected consul, II. 206
- Aemilius Lepidus, M., stone bridge over Tiber, I. 338; VI. 454
- Aemilius Papus, Q., consul with Fabricius, IX. 410
- Aemilius Paulus, Lucius (1), death at Cannae, III. 158 f., VI. 358
- Aemilius Paulus, Lucius (2), son of preceding, VI. 358; aedile, augur, 360; war in Spain, 362; divorces Papiria, children, 364; subdues Ligurians, 366; general against Perseus, 378; victory at Pydna, 400 f.; triumph, 440; two sons die, 446; address to people, 448; censor, 454; death, 456
- Aemilius Scaurus, see "Scaurus."
- Aenaria, island near Minturnae, IX. 566, 574
- Aeneas, father of Romulus and Aemilia, husband of Roma, I. 92; descendants ruled in Alba, 96; brought Palladium and Samothracian images to Italy, II. 144; founded Lavinium, IV. 188
- Aenus, Thracian city, VIII. 258
- Aeolia, Nicogenes its wealthiest man, II. 70
- Aeolian, spoken in Phocis, II. 408
- Aequians, defeated by Postumius Tiburtus, II. 96; war on Rome, 176, 182; IV. 216
- Aëropus (1), Macedonian, IX. 46
- Aëropus (2), friend of Pyrrhus, IX. 368
- Aeschines (1), of Lamprae, plotted with Persians, II. 252
- Aeschines (2), the Socratic, quoted, II. 292, III. 68, 92
- Aeschines (3), orator, I. 430, VII. 8, 20, 30, 38, 52, 58
- Aeschylus (1), kinsman of Timoleon, VI. 270
- Aeschylus (2), Argive, XI. 56
- Aeschylus (3), defeated by Sophocles died in Sicily, II. 430; VII. 242
 Eleusinians, cited, I. 68
 Persians (341-3), II. 40
 Prometheus Loosed (Nauck 68), V. 116
 Seven against Thebes (395 f. and 435), I. 4 (592 f.), II. 220
 Suppliants (226), I. 116
 — (Bergk, II. 242), VII. 214
 — (Nauck, 107), IX. 84
- Aesculapius, friend of Sophocles, I. 320; temple in Epidaurus, V. 174
- Aesion, on Attic orators, VII. 26
- Aeson, Macedonian river near Pydna, VI. 396
- Aesop, talk with Solon, I. 482; fables, III. 418, XI. 70, 88; V. 428
- Aesop, tragedian imitated by Cicero VII. 94
- Aesuvian meadow, battle between Tarquin and Romans, I. 522
- Aethiopians, attacked by Perseus, II. 410
- Aethra, Theseus' mother, I. 8, 12, 16; carried off by Hector, etc., 78
- Aetolians, defeat Athenians, III. 226; destroy city of Oeniadae, alliance with Antipater, VII. 366, XI. 8; defeat Boeotians at Chaeroneia, 34; driven from Pellene by Aratus, 70, X. 32; allied with Achaeans, XI. 74; invade Laconia, X. 88; war with Demetrius, IX. 100; conquered, 364, XI. 94; war with Achaeans, X. 126; defeat Aratus at Caphyae, XI. 108; support Romans, X. 334, 338; at Cynoscephalae, 344; oppose

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Flamininus, 346 f.; join Antiochus, 362, II. 340; kill Nabis, X. 296; attacked by Acilius Glabrio and Philip, 364
- Aerós, title of tyrants, II. 228, IX. 370
- Africanus, Pompey's legate in Spain, VIII. 52; held Armenia, V. 204; defeats Parthians, 208; subdues Arabians about Amanus, 216; consul, 228; defeated by Caesar, in Spain, 290, VII. 530, 542; V. 286; defeated at Thapsus, VII. 566
- Africa, governed by Sextilius, IX. 576; secured for Sulla by Pompey, V. 140; province of Pompey, VII. 512; of Cassius, VI. 168
- African war, II. 310
- "Africanus," Scipio's surname, IX. 464
- Agamemnon, sacrificed daughter, V. 14; ten years taking Troy, III. 82; V. 12; VIII. 2
- Agariste, Pericles' mother, III. 6
- Agatharcus, with Zeuxis, III. 40; with Alcibiades, IV. 42
- Agathoclea, Ptolemy's mistress, X. 124
- Agathocles, of Syracuse, gives daughter Lanassa to Pyrrhus, captures Corcyra, IX. 368; nearly takes Carthage, 388; 60; 386
- Agathocles, Lysimachus' son, IX. 76; war on Demetrius, 116 f.
- Agave, in "Bacchae" of Euripides, III. 420
- Age, golden, II. 436
- Ager Romanus, divided up by Numa, I. 362
- Agessias, of Acharnae, II. 252
- Agesilaüs, Archidamus' son, lineage and character, V. 2, 36, 50, 64, 70, I. 298, VI. 344, VIII. 152, X. 8; king with Lysander's help, V. 6, IV. 292; war on Persia, V. 12 f., II. 464, IV. 296 f., XI. 174; defeats Tissaphernes, V. 24, XI. 174; given control of navy, V. 26; alliance with Cotys, 28; sets cities in order, plans attack on Susa and Ecbatana, recalled, 38, 416; defeats Trallians, 42; invades Boeotia, Coroneia battle, 44 f., suppresses Lysander's speech, 54, IV. 318; attacks Corinth and Argos, V. 56; seizes Heraeum, 58; defeats Acarnanians, 62; approves seizure of Cadmeia, 66; invades Boeotia, criticized, 72, 374, I. 244; declares war on Thebes, Leuctra, V. 78; XI. 178; declines battle with Epaminondas, V. 86; refuses peace with Thebans, 94; goes to Egypt, 100; deserts Tachos for Nectanabig, 106; death, 112
- Sayings: I. 268, V. 58; IV. 300, V. 20; 32; 44; 64; 72; 104; 106; 110; XI. 174; 178
- Agesilaüs, supports Agis, X. 14 20; spoils Agis' plans by avarice, 30, 34; saved by son Hippomedon, 36
- Agesipolis, Pausanias' son, succeeded by Cleombrotus, V. 66, X. 8; befriended by Agesilaüs, V. 54; saves Epaminondas and Pelopidas at Mantinea, 350
- Agesipolis, Cleombrotus' son, short reign, X. 8
- Agesistrata, Agis' mother, X. 10; supports son in reforms, 16; 42; death, 46
- Agiadae, royal line of Sparta, IV. 302, 318, X. 8
- Agias, with younger Aristomachus seizes Argos, XI. 66
- Agiatis, Gylippus' daughter, Agis' wife, then Cleomenes', X. 50; death, 98
- Agis (1), son of Archidamus and Lampido, brother of Agesilaüs and king of Sparta, I. 296, V. 2; wife Timaea corrupted by Alcibiades, 4, 8, IV. 64; plots against Alcibiades, 66; from Deceleia besieges Athens, 252, 268; fined for omitting sacrifice, I. 238; gold and silver subvert Lycurgus' laws, 296, X. 12; when dying acknowledges Leotychides as his son, IV. 292, V. 6
- Agis (2), son of Archidamus III., slain by Antipater at Megalopolis, V. 40, VII. 58, X. 8
- Agis (3), son of Eudamidas, 5th from Agesilaüs, V. 112, X. 8; character, 10; seeks to restore Lycurgus' constitution, 14 f.; got "rhetra" before senate, 16; "rhetra" rejected, 24; supplants ephors by others, 28; ruined by Agesilaüs, 30, 34;

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL 'THE LIVES'

- aids Achaeans against Aetolians, 30, XI. 70; slain by Leonidas, v. 112, X. 42 f.; saying, 46
- Agis, sayings, I. 264, 268
- Agnus, Attic deme, I. 26
- Agrarian law of Licinius Stolo, II. 194
- Agraule, Attic deme, II. 62, IV. 60
- Agraulus, young warriors' oath in sanctuary of, IV. 38
- Agriculture of Cato Major, II. 366, 378, 390
- Argentum, supports Dion, VI. 56; Neapolis in its territory, 102; re-peopled after Timoleon pacified Sicily, 344; IX. 416
- Agrippa, M., Octavius' friend, IX. 214; Cassius' prosecutor, VI. 184; at Actium, IX. 284 f.; married Marcellus and Octavia's daughter, then Octavius', 330
- Agrippa Menenius, speech to plebs on Mons Sacer, IV. 130
- Agrippina the Younger, had son Lucius by Ahenobarbus, married Claudius Caesar, IX. 332; mother of Nero, XI. 234
- Agylaeus, Spartan ephor, X. 66
- "Agoge," defined, V. 2, X. 72
- Ahala, Servilius, slew Spurius Maelius, VI. 126
- Ahenobarbus, origin of name, VI. 420
- Ahenobarbus, Cn. Domitius (1), invaded Africa, v. 136; slain at Utica by Pompey, 140
- Ahenobarbus, Cn. Domitius (2), with Antony against Parthians, IX. 230; 264; deserts to Octavius and dies, 280
- Ahenobarbus, Cn. Domitius (3), married Agrippina, had son L. Domitius, IX. 332.
- Ahenobarbus, L. Domitius (1), pro-consul of Hither Spain, slain by Sertorius' quaestor, VIII. 30
- Ahenobarbus, L. Domitius (2), married Porcia, sues for consulship, III. 358, 426, v. 250, VIII. 332; yields Corfinium to Caesar, VII. 526; in Pompey's camp, v. 290, 334, VII. 178, 544; led Pompey's left at Pharsalus, v. 294, VII. 548
- Ahenobarbus, L. Domitius (3), married Antony and Octavia's daughter, IX. 332
- Ahenobarbus, L. Domitius (4), son of Cn. D. Ahenobarbus and Agrippina, adopted by Claudius, became Emperor Nero, IX. 332
- Aias, Periboea's son, I. 66; Eurysaces and Philaeus' father, 426, IV. 2
- Aidoneus, king of Molossians, had wife Persephone, daughter Cora, dog Cerberus, slew Peirithoüs, imprisoned Theseus, I. 72, 80
- Aigialia, see "Aegialia."
- Aigikoreis, original Attic tribe, why so called, I. 468
- Aigle, see "Aegle."
- Αἴγος ἔλος, see "Goat's Marsh"
- Aii Locutii ara, erected by Camillus, II. 168
- Aipeia, Cyprian city renamed Soli, I. 478
- Ajax, see "Aias."
- Ἀκέσις, possibly related to "ancile," I. 352
- Alalcomenius, Boeotian for Maimacterion, II. 278
- Alba, ruled by Aeneas' descendants, I. 96; 112; Romulus king on death of Numitor, 172; II. 130; VII. 582
- Alban lake, its overflow a prodigy, II. 98
- Alban mount, v. 494
- Alban villa, Pompey's, v. 254, 324, VII. 160
- Albanians, adjoin Iberians in Caucasus, II. 554, v. 204; crushed by Pompey, 206 f., 230; conquered by Canidius, IX. 214
- Albinus, Lucius, helps Vestals in flight, II. 144
- Albinus, Postumius, wrote history in Greek, II. 336
- Albinus, legate slain by Sulla's soldiers, IV. 342
- Alcaeus, wrote epigram on defeat of Philip at Cynoscephalae, x. 344
- Alcaeus of Sardis, poisoned by Mithridates, v. 212
- Alcander, blinded Lycurgus in one eye, pardoned by him, I. 234
- Alcetas, Tharrhyas' son, Arybas' father, IX. 346
- Alcetas, gets letter from Alexander the Great, VII. 382; refuses to serve under Eumenes, VIII. 90; wants chief command under Eumenes, 102
- Alcibiades, his family, guardians, tutor, etc., I. 256, IV. 2, IX. 296;

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- character, III. 236, 246, IV. 4 f., 38, 62, VIII. 150, an orator, III. 62, IV. 24; favourite of Socrates, 8 f., 18; of Timon, 42, IX. 296: fought at Potidaea, at Delium, IV. 18; married Hipparete, 20; victorious in chariot races, 24, VII. 2; enters public life, IV. 22, 28; with Nicias effects ostracism of Hyperbolus, II. 232, III. 246, IV. 30; upsets Peace of Nicias, III. 242, IV. 32; made general, allies Argos, Mantinea, and Elis with Athens, III. 244, IV. 36; urges Sicilian expedition, III. 250, IV. 44; general with Nicias and Lamachus for Sicilian expedition, III. 252, IV. 46; accused of mutilating the Hermae, IV. 48, 60; sails, takes Rhegium, plans campaign, recalled, III. 258, IV. 52, 58; saves Messana from Athenians, escapes at Thurii, 58; flees to Sparta, 60; urges sending Gylippus to Sicily and fortifying Deceleia, 62; corrupts Agis' wife, Timaea, 64, v. 4; flees to Tissaphernes, IV. 66, v. 6; advises him in conduct of war, IV. 68, 240; opposed by Phrynichus, 70; made general by army at Samos, 74; recalled from exile, makes great change in situation, wins naval battle off Abydos, 78, 238; imprisoned by Tissaphernes, escapes, 80; captures Cyzicus, 82; defeats Pharnabazus, takes Selymbria, 86; takes Byzantium, 90; returns to Athens, 92; attacks Andros, leaves Antiochus over fleet at Samos, 102, 242; fleet defeated by Lysander, 104; deposed, warns Athenian generals at Aegospotami, 106, 256; flees to Bithynia, 108; then to Pharnabazus in Phrygia, 110; slain, 114; statue in forum at Rome, I. 336. See also II. 296; III. 106
- Sayings: IV. 6, 14, 16, 22, 34, 38, 58, 60
- Alcidamas, his rhetorical system obtained by Demosthenes according to Ctesibius, VII. 12.
- Alcimeus, Achaean noble, with Dion's expedition against Syracuse, I. 48
- Alcimus, the Epeirot, sturdiest man under Demetrius, slain at Rhodes, IX. 50
- Alcimus, place near Piraeus, II. 88
- Alcmaeon, Amphiaraus' son, resembled Orontes, the Persian, XI. 8
- Alcmaeon, Megacles' father, I. 486; led Amphictyons in defence of Delphi, 430
- Alcmaeon, Leobotes' father, II. 62; denounced Themistocles, 292
- Alcmaeonidae, Athenian family, I. 492
- Alcman, lyric poet, Helots forbidden to sing his songs, I. 290; eaten of worms, IV. 440; Fragment 35 (Bergk III. 4 51) quoted, I. 272
- Almene, Lysidice's daughter, Pelop's granddaughter, Heracles' mother, I. 16; body disappeared like Romulus', 180; her monument at Haliartus near Rhadamanthus' tomb, IV. 312
- Alcmeon, see "Alcmaeon."
- Alyoneus, son of Antigonus, IX. 458 f.
- Alea, name of Rhadamanthus' tomb at Haliartus, IV. 312
- Alesia, Gallic city taken by Caesar, VII. 506
- Alexander (1), see "Paris."
- Alexander (2) the Macedonian, warned Aristides of Mardonius' plan, II. 256; 448
- Alexander (3), king of Macedonia, at war with Ptolemy, v. 404; slain by him, 406
- Alexander (4), soldier of Alexander the Great, VII. 390
- Alexander (5), son of Alexander the Great and Roxana, engaged to Deidameia, IX. 354
- Alexander (6), son of Polysperchon, married Cratesipolis, IX. 22; approaches Athens with army, VIII. 220
- Alexander (7), son of Cassander, expelled by his brother Antipater, asks help of Demetrius and Pyrrhus, IX. 86; given Antipater's land by Pyrrhus, 360; slain by Demetrius, 90, 340, 362
- Alexander (8), son of Demetrius and Deidameia, lived and died in Egypt, IX. 134
- Alexander (9), son of Pyrrhus and Lauassa, IX. 370

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Alexander (10), tyrant of Corinth, made alliance with Achaeans, XI. 38; poisoned by Antigonus, 36
- Alexander (11), led Thracians at Pydna, VI. 400
- Alexander (12), 3rd son of Perseus, his fate, VI. 452
- Alexander (13), Polyhistor (?) taught Crassus philosophy of Aristotle, III. 320
- Alexander (14), Strabo's freedman, stole public property, v. 122
- Alexander (15), son of Antony and Cleopatra, IX. 218; given Armenia, Media, and Parthia, 262
- Alexander of Antioch, with Antony against Parthians, IX. 244, 248
- Alexander the Great, lineage, VII. 224; birth, 228; appearance, v. 118, VII. 230; character, 232, 242, 284 f., 338 f., IX. 152; teachers, VII. 236, 240, 286, 296; as regent subdued Maedi, fought at Chaeroneia, 244; quarrel with father, 246; at 20 becomes king, 250; defeats Syrmus, king of Triballi, 252; defeats Thebans, 54, 254, VIII. 180 f., IX. 140 f.; by Greeks chosen leader against Persians, VII. 258; strength of his army, 260; battle of Granicus, II. 138, VII. 262 f.; storms Halicarnassus and Miletus, 268; subdues Pisidia, Phrygia, Paphlagonia, Cappadocia, cuts Gordian knot, 272; treated for illness by Philip the Acarnanian, 276; defeats Dareius at Issus 278 f.; takes Tyre, 292; takes Gaza, 296; founds Alexandria, visits Temple of Ammon, 300 f.; holds contests of dithyrambic choruses and tragedies, 308; rejects Dareius' peace proposals, 310; defeats Dareius at Arbela, 316 f.; proclaimed king of Asia, 326; traverses Babylonia, 328; takes Susa, 332; ravages Persis, hears Dareius is captured, sends Thessalians home, 348; takes Dareius' camp, 350; invades Hyrcania, v. 206, VII. 352; invades Parthia, assumes barbaric dress, 354; routs Scythians, 356; attempts to mix Macedonians and barbarians, marries Roxana, 358; plotted against by Philotas and others, 362 f.; murders Cleitus, 368 f.; prepares to invade India, VI. 384, VII. 384; exchanges gifts with Taxiles the Indian, massacres Indian mercenaries, 390; conquers Porus, 394 f.; founds Bucephalia, 398; his men refuse to cross Ganges, 400; severely wounded in attacking Malli, 402; pardons captured gymnosophists, 404 f.; reaching ocean orders Nearchus to return by sea with fleet, reaches Gedrosia, 410, VIII. 80; punishes erring subordinates, VII. 414; reaches Persia, 416; marries Stateira, 418; reaches Ecbatana in Media where Hephaestion dies, v. 428, VII. 424; reaches Babylon, 426; dies of fever, 66, 432
- See also II. 248, v. 38, 232, VI. 372, 384, VII. 43, 58, 60, VIII. 80, 86, 182, 184, 190, IX. 58, 64, 338, x. 264, 382
- Sayings: v. 40; VII. 232; 234; 236; 240; 246; 250; 252; 256, VIII. 184; VII. 258; 260; 262; 268; 280; 282; 284; 286; 288; 298; 306; 310; 320; 334; 338; 340; 342; 346; 350; 370; 372; 378; 388 f.; 392; 394; 406; 426; 430
- Alexander of Macedon, quoted, I. 12
- Alexander of Myndus, quoted, IX. 506
- Alexander of Pherae, humbled by Pelopidas, v. 402 f.; takes Pelopidas prisoner, induced by Epaminondas to surrender him, 406; 412; renews his oppressions, 418; 420; defeated at Pharsalus by Pelopidas, 422; slain at instigation of wife, 430 f.; ruled Thessaly 10 months, called tragedy-tyrant by Dionysius, XI. 208
- Alexandria, founded, VII. 298; great library destroyed, 560; VIII. 320; x. 122
- Alexandrians, worship Cleomenes after his death, x. 140; liked Antony, IX. 202
- Alexandropolis, city repeopled and renamed by Alexander, VII. 244
- Alexas, the Laodicean, most influential Greek with Antony, executed by Octavius, IX. 302
- Alexas, the Syrian, IX. 288

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Alexicrates, chief cup-bearer to Pyrrhus, IX. 358
- Alexippus, physician, cured Peucestas of illness, VII. 346
- Allies at Athens, II. 2, IV. 12
- Allia, river flowing into Tiber, II. 136
- Allia, battle of, I. 343, II. 134 f.
- Alliance, see "Treaty."
- Allies, Athenian, continue to pay assessments but stop military service, II. 436. See also "Hellenes" and "Delos, Confederacy of."
- Allobroges, their part in conspiracy of Catiline, VII. 124
- Alopece, deme of Lysander, II. 86; of Aristides, 210; of Thucydides, III. 32
- Alopecus, hill near Hallartus, IV. 318
- Alphabet, that used after Euclides, II. 212
- Alps, II. 126; northern boundary of Tuscany, 128; VI. 366
- Alsaeta, city seized by Cleomenes, X. 64
- Alycus, Sciron's son, slain at Aphidnae, I. 76
- Alycus, place in Megara, I. 76
- Amantius, disgraces Caesar by greed, VII. 562
- Amanus, mountain in Cilicia, V. 216, VII. 174, IX. 122, 124
- Amarsyas, father of Phereclus, I. 34
- Amathusians, I. 42
- Amazonium, place at Athens, place in Chalcis, I. 62
- Amazons, war with Theseus, I. 58, 60, 62, 64, 190; attacked by Heracles, II. 544; their queen visits Alexander, VII. 356; habits and country, V. 208
- Ambrorix, see "Abriorix."
- Ambracia, III. 57; given Pyrrhus by Alexander, IX. 360; 368
- Ambrones, ancestral name of Ligurians, IX. 514; defeated Manlius and Caepio, defeated by Romans at Aquae Sextiae, 512 f.
- Ambustus, Q. Fabius, one of three sent to consult oracle at Delphi re Alban lake, II. 102; though ambassador, fights Gauls, I. 348, II. 132; appointed military tribune, 134
- Ameinias, the Deceleian, slays Ariamnes, Xerxes' brother, II. 42; rivals Aristides at Plataea, 388
- Ameinias, the Phocian, Antigonos' general, enters Sparta, IX. 444
- Ameria, Italian city, IX. 508
- Amestris, Artaxerxes' daughter, married to father, XI. 192
- Amfidius, Tullus, of Antium, plans with Coriolanus war on Rome, IV. 170 f.; quoted, 172; advises Volscians to summon Coriolanus, 182; becomes jealous, 192; causes Coriolanus' death, 214; slain by Romans, 218
- Amisus, rich city founded by Athens, II. 510, 530; besieged, 514; sacked by Lucullus, 526; restored by him, 530; V. 212; 222
- Ammon, son of Zeus and Pasiphaë, XI. 20; II. 462; III. 254, 260; his temple in Africa, IV. 288; 304; VII. 228; consulted by Alexander, 304; 424
- Ammonius, philosopher, taught Plutarch and his friend Themistocles, II. 90
- Amnaeus, Roman senator, VIII. 280
- Amoebus, singer, XI. 38
- Amompharetus (1), one of five Spartan umpires re Salamis, I. 428
- Amompharetus (2), Spartan at Plataea, II. 264
- Amorgus, Athenian naval defeat off, IX. 28
- Amphares, compasses death of Agis, his mother, and grandmother, X. 40, 46, 48
- Amphiaraius, father of Alcmaeon, XI. 8; II. 220; his oracle, 270
- Amphicrates, rhetorician, died at court of Tigranes, II. 540
- Amphictyons, persuaded by Solon, wage war on Cirrha, I. 428; urged by Sparta to exclude cities that did not fight against Persia, II. 56; 336; 426; IV. 362
- Amphilochia, given Pyrrhus by Alexander, IX. 360
- Amphipolis, won by Athenians, II. 426; Cleon and Brasidas fall in battle there, III. 236; 242; V. 308; VI. 416; 418
- Amphissa, Philip successful there, VII. 42; IX. 198
- Amphitheus, bribed by Persian money, IV. 308
- Amphitrope, Diophantus' deme, II. 294

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Amphitryon, Alceme's husband, IV. 312
- Anulius, descendant of Aeneas, dispossesses his brother Numitor, exposes Ilia's children, I. 96; father of Ilia's twins, 98, 102; slain by Romulus and Remus, 112, 158, 188
- Amycla, Alcibiades' Spartan nurse, I. 256, IV. 2
- Amyclas, father of Daphne according to Phylarchus, X. 20
- Amyntas, Macedonian, sent by Phillip on embassy to Thebes, VII. 42; in exile advises Darius not to attack Alexander in narrow passes, 278
- Amyntas, king of Lycaonia and Galatia, sends army to Antony, IX. 276; deserts to Octavius, 280
- Anacharsis, meeting with Solon, bon mot, I. 414
- Anacreon of Teos, poet, III. 4, 78
- Anaitis, name of Artemis of Ecbatana, XI. 192
- Ἄνακες*, derived from ἀνάσχεσις, I. 352
- Ἄνακτες*, why kings so called, I. 78
- Anaphlystus, Euthippus' deme, II. 458
- Anapus, river in Sicily, VI. 58, 312
- Ἀνάσχεσις*, possibly related to "ancile."
- Anaxagoras of Clazomene, teacher of Themistocles, II. 6; his philosophy, influence on Pericles, III. 10, 14, 16, 290, IV. 262; III. 20; 52; attacked by Diopithes' bill, 92; saved from imprisonment by Pericles, 290; saying, 54
- Anaxandrides, Delphian, quoted, IV. 280
- Anaxarchus, sophist, Alexander's friend, VII. 244, 306, 374
- Anaxenor, lute-player with Antony, IX. 186
- Anaxidamus, of Chaeroneia, helps Sulla, IV. 382, 390
- Anaxilas, one of five Spartan umpires re Salamis, I. 428
- Anaxilaüs, of Byzantium, tried at Sparta for surrendering city and acquitted, IV. 90
- Anaximenes, orator, says funeral orations began with Solon, I. 526, VII. 70
- Anaxo, carried off by Theseus, I. 66, 196
- Anazarbus, see "Quinda."
- Ancharia, Octavia's mother, IX. 206
- Ancharius, of senatorial rank, slain by Marius' men, IX. 584
- Ancilia, story of, I. 350 f.
- Ancus Martius, Numa's grandson, completed wooden bridge over Tiber, I. 338; IV. 118
- Andocides, orator, II. 88; suspected of mutilating Hermae and imprisoned, III. 254, IV. 54 f.
- Ἀνδρεία*, Cretan name for σοσάνια, I. 236
- Andrians, reply to Themistocles asking money, II. 56
- Androcleides (1), accused of being bribed by Persia to oppose Spartans, IV. 308; outlawed from Thebes, slain through Leontidas, v. 350 f.
- Androcleides (2), helps rescue infant Pyrrhus, IX. 348
- Androcleides, records saying of Lysander, IV. 250
- Androcleion, helps rescue infant Pyrrhus, IX. 348
- Androcles, opponent of Alcibiades, IV. 48
- Androcottus, subdued all India, VII. 400; his opinion of Alexander, 402
- Androcrates, Plataean hero, his shrine, II. 246 f.
- Androcydes of Cyzicus, painter, v. 400
- Androgeos, Minos' son, his murder led to invasion of Attica, I. 28 f., 190
- Andromache, character in "Trojan Women" of Euripides, v. 414
- Andromache, Dion's sister, murdered by Hicetas, VI. 120
- Andromachus (1), Timaeus' father, welcomes Timoleon's expedition, VI. 284
- Andromachus (2), betrays Romans to Parthians, III. 406
- Andron of Halicarnassus, cited, I. 56
- Andronicus, the Rhodian, published copies of works in Apellicon's library, IV. 406
- Andros, given 250 settlers by Pericles, III. 34; people defeated by Alcibiades, IV. 102
- Androtion, re Solon's seisachtheia, I. 442; speech against by Demosthenes, VII. 36
- Anecdotes, I. 262, 264, 268, 270, 276, 280, 290, 392, 412, 420, II. 232, v. 340, VII. 76, 90

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Ἀνεκάθειν*, used for ἄνω by Athenians, I. 78; possibly related to "ancile," 352
- Ἀνεκός*, used for ἄνω by Athenians, I. 78
- Angelus, helps rescue infant Pyrrhus, IX. 348
- Anicius, L., captures Genthius; king of Illyrians, with wife and children, VI. 386
- Anienus, ordered by Caesar to cut through isthmus of Corinth, VII. 578
- Animals, examples of Greek kindness to, II. 316, III. 2, IV. 22, 24, V. 144, 148, 388, VII. 396
- Anio river, I. 558; plebs seceded to it, IV. 128; battle of, II. 198 f.
- Annalius, L., senator, struck by Crassus, III. 426
- Annius, C., sent to Spain by Sulla, worsts Sertorius, VIII. 18
- Annius, T., defeats Ti. Gracchus in public debate, X. 178
- Annius, soldier of Marius, slays M. Antonius, IX. 588
- Annius Gallus, see "Gallus, Annius."
- Antaeus, killed by Hercules, I. 22; buried in city of Tingis, VIII. 24
- Antagoras, the Chian, offends Pausanias, joins Athenians, II. 284
- Antalcidas, Spartan, Leon's son, sent to Tiribazus re peace, V. 62; peace of, dictated by Artaxerxes, its terms, XI. 176; V. 416, XI. 178; V. 86; starved to death, XI. 178
Sayings: I. 244, V. 72, 374; 86
- Antemnae, its people conquered by Romulus and transferred to Rome, I. 138; yields to Sulla, IV. 422
- Antenor, Epicharmus' treatise dedicated to him, I. 334
- Anthedon, Boeotian city destroyed by Sulla, IV. 408
- Anthemion, Anytus' father, IV. 12, 150
- Anthemocritus, Athenian herald, III. 86
- Anthesterion, IV. 372, IX. 60 f.
- Antho, Amulia's daughter, intercedes for Iliia, I. 96
- Antias, Valerius, re Sabine girls seized by Romans, I. 130; re books put in Numa's coffin, 380; version of scandal about L. Flamininus, X. 374
- Antiates, most warlike of Volscians, IV. 136. See also "Antium."
- "Anticato," written by Caesar, VII. 568
- Anticleides, re queen of Amazons, VII. 356
- Anticrates, Spartan, slew Epaminondas, V. 98
- Anticyra, granary for Antony, IX. 294
- Anticyra, prostitute of Demetrius, IX. 54
- Antigenes the One-eyed, punished by Alexander, VII. 420; leader of Silver-shields, envies Eumenes, VIII. 116; with Teutamus plots against Eumenes, 126
- Antigenes, says queen of Amazons came to see Alexander, VII. 356
- Antigenidas, re flute-playing, IX. 4
- Antigone of Pydna, reports Philotas' words to Alexander, VII. 362
- Antigone, Berenice's daughter by Philip, married to Pyrrhus, IX. 356, 358; had son Ptolemy, 360, 368
- Antigoneia, new name given Mantinea, XI. 106
- "Antigonids," name of bowls, VI. 442
- Antigonis, new tribe at Athens in honour of Antigonus, IX. 26
- Antigonus the One-eyed, general and successor of Alexander, his children, his career, VI. 372, VIII. 4, IX. 6, 8, 332, 334; VIII. 84; with Antipater to conduct war against Eumenes, 102; defeats Eumenes at Orcynii, 104; 108; aspires to supreme power, 114; 120; 122; defeated by Eumenes, 130; decides to execute Eumenes, 134; punishes Eumenes' betrayers, 136; IX. 10; sends son Demetrius against Ptolemy, 12; 16; frees Athens, 18; 24; asks Demetrius to fight Ptolemy for Cyprus, 34; wins Cyprus, 40; when 80 years old attacks Ptolemy unsuccessfully, 42; defeated by league of other kings and slain, 66, VIII. 210; his royal line brought to end by Aemilius Paulus, VI. 460
Sayings: I. 140, V. 340, 342, VIII. 108, IX. 40, 366
- Antigonus Dason, made regent, then king by Macedonians, IV. 142, VI.

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- 372; crosses Geraneia with large force, X. 92; garrisons Corinth, X. 96, XI. 88, 98, 100, 102; takes Tegea by siege and surprises Orchomenos and Mantinea, X. 100, XI. 104; advances to Argos, X. 106 f.; defeats Cleomenes at Sellasia, 112 f., 266 f.; offered Philopoemen command, 270; 274; takes Sparta, restores laws and constitution, returns to Macedonia and dies, 118; XI. 106
- Antigonus Gonatas, Demetrius' son, had a son Demetrius, VI. 372; IX. 134; defeats Boeotians, 98; tries to liberate his father Demetrius, 128; buries him, 132; defeated by Pyrrhus, 430; 444; agrees to leave Argos, 450; 452; defeats Pyrrhus, who is slain, 460; XI. 8; 20; 32; gets Acrocorinthus, 36; loses Megara, 54; ally of Aristippus, tyrant of Argos, 58; dies, 76
- Sayings: IX. 430, XI. 32
- Antigonus the Jew, beheaded by Antony, IX. 218
- Antigonus, re Tarpeia's father, I. 142
- Antilibanus, Mount, Arabs dwell near it, VII. 292
- Antiochus, writes verses in honour of Lysander, IV. 282
- Antimachus of Colophon, defeated in poetic contest by Niceratus, consoled by Plato, IV. 282; his poetry seems laboured, VI. 346
- Antimachus of Teos, epic poet, saw eclipse on day Rome founded, I. 120
- Antioch by Daphne in Syria, II. 534, V. 218, VIII. 262, IX. 78
- Antioch in Mygdonia, called Nisibis by barbarians, captured by Lucullus, II. 578
- Antiochis, Aristides' tribe, II. 210; victorious in poetic contest, 212; opposed Persian centre at Marathon, 224
- Antiochus, sea captain, great favourite of Alcibiades, IV. 22; defeated and slain off Ephesus by Lysander, 102 f., 242, 454
- Antiochus (Soter), son of Seleucus and Apameia, IX. 76; defeated by Demetrius, 70; married his father's wife Stratonice, 92; made king of Upper Asia by his father, 94
- Antiochus the Great, not to be compared with Xerxes, II. 396; spurred on by Hannibal, X. 346; 348; 354; won back most of Seleucus Nicator's dominions, II. 334; VI. 362; crosses to Greece, joined by Aetolians, X. 362; defeated at Thermopylae, returns to Asia, II. 336 f., 388, IV. 364, X. 302, 364; in flight marries Cleoptolemus' daughter, 304, 366; defeated in Phrygia by Scipio, II. 504, III. 398, X. 378; terms of peace, VI. 370
- Antiochus of Ascalon, in treatise "Concerning Gods" mentions battle of Taurus, II. 564; led Old Academy, friend of Lucullus, 606; admired by M. Brutus, VI. 128; his lectures attended by Cicero; his philosophy, VII. 88, 90
- Antiochus of Commagene, besieged by Ventidius, comes to terms with Antony, IX. 212
- Antiope, Amazon, seized by Theseus, loved by Solos, I. 58, 62, 196; had son Hippolytus by Theseus, 64
- Antiorus, Lycurgus' son, I. 302
- Antipater, Alexander's general, his surrender demanded by Thebans, VII. 254; 280; defeated and slew Agis in Arcadia, V. 40, X. 8; fearing Alexander, makes alliance with Aetolians, VII. 366; rebelled against by Olympias and Cleopatra, 414; suspected of poisoning Alexander, 436; besieged by Leosthenes in Lamia, 66, VIII. 86, 196; with Leonnatus defeated by Greeks in Thessaly, 200; defeats Greeks at Crannon, II. 138; advances on Athens, VII. 70, VIII. 202 f.; executes Hypereides, Aristonicus, and Himeræus, VII. 70; gives Athenian poor land in Thrace, VIII. 208; 210, VII. 218; sends soldiers to arrest Demosthenes, 70 f.; 78; with Craterus crosses to Asia against Perdiccas, VIII. 90; 92; to help Antigonus against Eumenes, 102; married daughter Phila to Demetrius, IX. 32, 90, 334; before dying appoints Polysperchon general-in-

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- chief, and Cassander chiliarch, VIII. 216; died in Macedonia, 114
See also VII. 342, 382, 388, 422, 428
 Sayings: II. 390, IV. 224; VIII. 144; 212
- Antipater, Cassander's son, murders his mother Thessalonice, expels his brother Alexander, attacked by Pyrrhus, IX. 86, 90, 360
- Antipater of Tarsus, dedicated philosophical treatises to Blossius, X. 162; his dying words, IX. 596
- Antipater of Tyre, Stoic philosopher, friend of Cato the Younger, VIII. 244
- Antiphanes, wrote farce ridiculing Batalus, VII. 10; 24
- Antiphates, rebuked by Themistocles, II. 50
- Antiphilus, Phocion's successor, defeats and slays Leonnatus, VIII. 198 f.
- Antiphon, the Rhamnusian, slanders Alcibiades, IV. 8; discredited, III. 226; executed owing to Demosthenes, VII. 36; saying, IX. 196
- Antisthenes, says Amycla Alcibiades' nurse, IV. 2
 Sayings: I. 300, III. 4
- Antistia (1), Appius Claudius' wife, quoted, X. 150
- Antistia (2), Antistius' daughter, married to Pompey, v. 126; divorced by him, 134, IV. 432
- Antistius, praetor, gave Pompey daughter in marriage, v. 124; slain by Marius' men, 136
- Antistius (should be Appuleius) gives Brutus 500,000 drachmas, VI. 180
- Antium, Volscian town, its people fight Romans, IV. 136; its land raided by Coriolanus, 148; attacked to distract plebs' attention, 162 f.; 166; 214; VI. 172
- Anton, Hercules' son, progenitor of Antonii, IX. 146
- Antonia (1), C. Antonius' daughter, M. Antony's wife, divorced by him, IX. 156
- Antonia (2), M. Antony and Octavia's daughter, wife of Domitius Ahenobarbus, IX. 332
- Antonia (3), M. Antony and Octavia's daughter, Drusus' wife, Germanicus' mother, IX. 332
- Antonias, name of Cleopatra's "flagship," IX. 274
- Antonii, descended from Anton, Hercules' son, IX. 146
- Antonius, C. (1), consul with Cicero, VII. 108, IX. 156; bribed by offer of province of Macedonia to support Cicero, VII. 110; sent to fight Catiline, 120; defeats Catiline, 136
- Antonius, C. (2), praetor, IX. 170; captured and executed by order of Brutus, 184, VI. 182 f., 186
- Antonius, L., tribune of plebs, IX. 170; fought against Octavius, fled from Italy, 202
- Antonius (Saturninus, L.) revolts from Domitian, defeated, VI. 420
- Antonius, M., supported Sulla, slain by order of Marius, IX. 138, 586
- Antonius Creticus, M., M. Antony's father, brief account of, IX. 138
- Antonius, P., prosecuted by Greeks before M. Lucullus, praetor of Macedonia, VII. 448
- Antonius Honoratus, military tribune, loyal to Galba, against Nymphidius, XI. 232
- Antonius, helps to murder Sertorius, VIII. 72
- Antonius, celebrated triumph, his daughter captured by pirates, v. 176
- Antony, Mark (1), son of Antonius Creticus and Julia, IX. 138; corrupted by Curio and Clodius, studied oratory in Greece, 140; defeats and captures Aristobulus in Syria, 142; supporting Ptolemy, takes Pelusium, 144; appearance and character, 144 f., 188 f.; joining Caesar's party, elected tribune of plebs and augur, reads Caesar's letters to senate, 148, v. 268, VII. 516; presents Caesar's new proposals, with Cassius flees to Caesar, IX. 150, v. 270, VII. 518; disgraces Caesar by dissoluteness, 562, IX. 152, 158; captures Lissus, brings troops from Italy to Caesar, 154, VII. 536; led Caesar's left at Pharsalus, v. 294, IX. 156; marries Fulvia, Clodius' widow, 160; consul with Caesar, 162; offered Caesar

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- diadem, 164, VII. 584; Antony spared by conspirators on plea of Brutus, detained outside senate, 596, VI. 162 f., IX. 166; proposes amnesty on murder of Caesar, pronounces funeral oration, 168, VI. 166 f., VII. 190; has rival in Octavius, VI. 174, VII. 192 f., IX. 170 f.; attacked by Octavius at Mutina, 174, VI. 452, VII. 198; forms triumvirate with Octavius and Lepidus, 200, VI. 186, IX. 178; proscribes Cicero, 180; defeats Cassius at Philippi, 182 f., VI. 216 f.; gives Brutus burial, 246, 256, IX. 184; levies money in Asia, 186; meets Cleopatra, 194; divides empire with Octavius, marries Octavia, 204; learns of Ventidius' victory over Parthians, 210; makes peace with Antiochus of Comagene, 212; meets Octavius at Tarentum, 216; increases Cleopatra's territory, 218; begins war against Parthians, 218; deserted by Artavasdes, Armenian king, 224; led by Phraates to retreat, 228; crosses river Araxes into Armenia, 250; met by Cleopatra, 254; Octavia reaches Athens on way to him, 256; beguiled from wife by Cleopatra, 258; drawn into war with Octavius, 260 f.; war against Antony voted at Rome, 272; Antony's forces, 274 f.; defeated in naval battle off Actium, 282 f., I. 372; flees with Cleopatra to Egypt, IX. 288; revels with Cleopatra, 300; hearing Cleopatra is dead, falls upon his sword, 310; left 7 children by his 3 wives, 330
See also VI. 140, 186, 190, 192, 210, 230, VII. 142, 188, 192
 Sayings: IX. 148, 186, 304, 310
 Antony (Julius Antonius), Fulvia's son, third in esteem of Octavius, IX. 330; marries Octavia and Marcellus' daughter, Agrippa's divorced wife, 332
 Antyllus, Q., lictor slain in brawl, X. 226 f.; not murdered by C. Gracchus, 248
 Antyllus, Antony and Fulvia's son, executed by Octavius, IX. 300, 318, 330
- Anytus, Anthemion's son, lover of Alcibiades, IV. 12; tried for failure to relieve Pylos, first to bribe jurors, 150
 Aollius or Avillus, Romulus and Hersilia's son, I. 130
 Aolus, river in Greece, VII. 534
 Apama (1), Artaxerxes' daughter, married Pharnabazus, XI. 192 f.
 Apama (2), Artabazus' daughter, given in marriage to Ptolemy by Alexander, VIII. 80
 Apama (3), Antiochus' mother by Seleucus, IX. 76
 Ἀπελλάζειν, to assemble the people, I. 222
 Apelles (1), painted Alexander of too swarthy a colour, VII. 230; opinion of Protogenes' painting, IX. 52; gave talent to be admitted to society of artists of Sicyon, XI. 28
 Apelles (2), courtier of Philip, Antigonus' son, XI. 110
 Apellicon, his library seized by Sulla, etc., IV. 406
 Apeimantus, admirer of Timon, IX. 298
 Aperantians, harried by Macedonians, X. 364 Aphetæ, reached by Persian army, II. 20
 Aphidnae, Helen hidden there, I. 72 f.; captured by Dioscuri, 76; 78; lost to Athens under Theseus, 198
 Aphidnus, Theseus' friend, guarded Helen, I. 72; adopted Tyndaridae, 78
 Aphrodite, Theseus' guide to Crete, why called "Epitragia," I. 36; "April" derived from "Aphrodite," 368, II. 506; mother of Harmonia by Ares, V. 386; abhors wars, myrtle her plant, 496
 Aphytae, city in Thrace, besieged by Lysander, IV. 288
 Apis, sacred bull, X. 128
 Apollo, loved Phorbos, Hyacinthus, Admetus, Hippolytus the Sicyonian, I. 318; father of Syrus by Sinope, II. 544; patron of Athens, flayed flute-player, IV. 8; gave Cadmus cow for guide, 382; temple of at Actium plundered by pirates, V. 174
 Apollo, name of costly room of Lucullus, II. 602

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Apollo the Laurel-bearer at Phlya, II. 44
- Apollo Lyceus, IX. 450, 454
- Apollo, Pythian, half property of Thebans consecrated to him by Sulla, IV. 390; 420; gets golden bowl from Romans, V. 456; Antony plans to finish his temple, IX. 186; vouches for Lycurgus' laws, X. 244
- Apollo Tegyraeus, brief account of, V. 378
- Apollo Thurius, why so named, IV. 382
- Apollocrates, eldest son of Dionysius the Younger, put in command of citadel of Syracuse, VI. 80; 116; makes terms with Dio and leaves Syracuse, 106
- Apollodorus (1) of Phalerum, ardent disciple of Socrates, VIII. 346
- Apollodorus (2), used speeches written for him by Demosthenes, VII. 36, 216
- Apollodorus (3), commandant of Babylon under Alexander, VII. 426
- Apollodorus (4), proves Lycurgus lived long before first Olympiad, I. 204
- Apollodorus (5), the Sicilian, Cleopatra's friend, VII. 558
- Apollonia (1), in Illyria near Dyrrhachium, IV. 408; taken by Caesar, VII. 532; Octavius studied there, 194, VI. 174, IX. 170; favoured Brutus, VI. 180 f.
- Apollonia (2), on the river Rhyndacus, II. 504
- Apollonia (3), in Sicily, ruled by tyrant Leptines, VI. 318
- Apollonides (1), Dion's intimate friend, IX. 126
- Apollonides (2), Stoic, with Cato at Utica, VIII. 396, 402
- Apollonius (1), Molon's son, taught Caesar and Cicero oratory, VII. 90, 446; quoted, 92
- Apollonius (2), tyrant of Zenodotia in Mesopotamia, III. 364
- Apollophanes of Cyzicus, brings Agesilaus and Pharnabazus together, V. 32
- Apollothemis, says Lycurgus died in Elis, I. 302
- Aponius, informer under Nero, XI. 222
- Apothetae, at foot of Mt. Taÿgetus, where Spartans exposed sickly children, I. 254
- Appian Way, see "Way, Appian."
- Appii, always belonged to party of senate and nobles, VI. 454
- Appius, governor of Sardinia, visits Caesar at Luca, VII. 494; brings from Gaul Pompey's troops lent Caesar, V. 266
- Appius, M., questioned by Cicero, VII. 148
- Appius Claudius (1), hostile to plebs, supports Coriolanus, IV. 164
- Appius Claudius (2), marries daughter to Ti. Gracchus, X. 150; helps Ti. Gracchus frame agrarian law, 164; one of three to distribute public land, 174
- Appius Claudius (3), partisan of Sulla defeated by Telesinus the Samnite, IV. 418
- Appius Claudius Caecus, gave suffrage to freedmen, I. 518; opposes peace with Pyrrhus, speech quoted, IX. 402 f.
- Appius Claudius Pulcher (1), sent with force to Syracuse, V. 466, 470; when consul, helped take Capua, III. 200
- Appius Claudius Pulcher (2), candidate for censor with Scipio Africanus the Younger, VI. 452 f.; quoted, 454
- Appius Clausus, Sabine, with 5000 families migrates to Rome, founder of Claudian family, I. 556 f.
- Appius Clodius, brother of Lucullus' wife, sent to Tigranes by Lucullus with demand for surrender of Mithridates, II. 526, 534 f.
- Appuleius, see "Antistius."
- April, origin of name, celebration on the 1st, I. 368
- Apsephion, archon, names judges in contest between Aeschylus and Sophocles, II. 428
- Apsus river, described, X. 328
- Aptera, place in Crete, IX. 448
- Apuleius, L., accuser of Camillus, II. 122
- Apulia, where Hannibal defeats and slays proconsul Gnaeus Fulvius, V. 502
- Aquae Sextiae, scene of battle between Romans and Teutones, IX. 510

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Aqueducts, P. and Q. Marcius, brought best supply of water to Rome, IV. 118
- Aquillii, nephews of Collatinus the consul, corrupted by Tarquin's envoys, I. 510 f.; condemned and beheaded, 516 f.
- Aquillius, tribune of plebs, supporter of Cato the Younger, VIII. 338
- Aquillius, M., left in charge of army by Marius, IX. 498
- Aquinius, M., called Adrastus by Cicero, VII. 150
- Aquinum, town, XI. 286
- Aquinus, defeated by Sertorius, VIII. 36
- Ara Aii Locutii, see "Aii Locutii ara."
- Arabia, triumphed over by Lucullus, V. 230; III. 382; traversed by Antony, IX. 220
- Arabia Nabataea, invaded by Demetrius, IX. 16; part toward outer sea given to Cleopatra, 218
- Arabian Gulf, IX. 296
- Arabs, those about Mt. Antilibanus attacked by Alexander, VII. 292; nomadic A. moved to new localities by Tigranes, II. 536; come from sea of Babylonia to join Tigranes, 554; kings of, offer Lucullus their possessions, 568; slay Roman fugitives after Carrhae, III. 416; those about Petra burn Cleopatra's ships, IX. 296
- Arachosia, has Sibyrtius as governor, VIII. 136
- Aracus, appointed admiral to succeed Callicratidas, IV. 248
- Arar river, Tigurini crushed there by Labienus, VII. 486; 504
- Arateium, tomb of Aratus in Sicyon, XI. 120
- Araterium, place in Gargettus, I. 80
- Aratus (1), on murder of father Cleinias, escapes to Argos, XI. 4 f.; plots to overthrow tyrant Nicocles, 10; expels Nicocles, attaches city to Achaean League, 20, X. 256; his character, 276, XI. 22, 30 f.; gets 25 talents from Ptolemy, 24; going to Egypt gets 150 talents more, 30; courted by Antigonos, 32; as general of League, ravages Locris and Calydonia, goes to help Boeotians, 34; takes Acrocorinthus from Antigonos, 40 f., X. 82; persuades Corinthians to join Achaean League, XI. 52; tries to free Argos from tyranny, 56 f.; brings Cleonae into Achaean League, 64; defeats and slays Aristippus, tyrant of Argos, 66; brings Megalopolis into League, 68; in Aetolian war gets help from Sparta, 70, X. 32 f.; defeats and drives Aetolians out of Pellene, XI. 72 f.; makes peace and alliance between Achaeans and Aetolians, 74; tries to seize the Peiraeus, 76
- Defeated at Phylacia by Bithys, Demetrius' general, 76; persuades Diogenes to give up the Peiraeus, Munychia, Salamis, and Sunium to Athenians for 150 talents, brings Aegina, Hermione, and greater part of Arcadia into League, 78; brings Argos and Phlius into League, 80; defeated by Cleomenes near Mt. Lycaean, captures Mantinea, 82, X. 60; fails to support Lydiades, who is defeated and slain by Cleomenes, 62, XI. 84; defeats Megistonous at Orchomenus, but refuses re-election as general, 86, X. 80; after defeat of Achaeans at Hecatombaeum blocks peace with Cleomenes, 86, XI. 90; punishes disaffected at Sicyon, 92; loses Corinth, 94, X. 90; at Aegium secures vote of assembly to call in Antigonos, 82, 92, XI. 98; sailing to Epidaurus, helps recover Argos from Cleomenes, 102, X. 94; criticised for concessions to Antigonos, XI. 104; founds new settlement at Mantinea, 106; defeated by the Aetolians at Caphyae, 108; becomes estranged from Philip, 112 f.; poisoned through plot of Philip, 118; buried at Sicyon, 120
- See also* X. 54, 58, 80, 274
- Commentaries of Aratus cited, X. 34, 84, 86, 90, XI. 74, 76, 88
- Aratus (2), Aratus' son, wronged by Philip, XI. 112; poisoned by Philip, 122
- Araxes river, II. 554; tributary of Cynus, V. 206; boundary between Media and Parthia, IX. 250; 256

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Arbaces, Mede punished by Artaxerxes, IX. 156
- Arbela, where Alexander defeated Persians, II. 138, VII. 316; v. 210
- Arcadia, II. 244
- Arcadians, acorn-eaters, IV. 122; have four months, I. 368; lost large territory to Spartans led by Solus, 206; malicious toward Spartans, v. 60; raided by Agesilaus, 84; opposed by Pelopidas and Epaminondas at Mantinea, 350; detached from Spartan confederacy, 396; united into one power, 398; except Mantinea, received into allegiance by Demetrius, IX. 58, X. 56; greater part join Achaean League, XI. 78
- Arcesilaus (1), Spartan, his victories, II. 434
- Arcesilaus (2), Academic, X. 256, XI. 10
- Arcesilaus (3), false friend of Agis, X. 40
- Archagetai means "kings," I. 222
- Archedamus (Archedemus), Aetolian, mocked Flamininus, X. 390; follower of Perseus, VI. 416
- Archedemus, sent to invite Plato to Syracuse, VI. 36
- Archelaus (1), colleague of Charilaus, the Spartan king, I. 218
- Archelaus (2), naturalist, possible author of elegy addressed to Cimon, II. 412, 416
- Archelaus (3), led Antigonus' forces in Corinth, defeated by Aratus, XI. 50; captured and dismissed, 52
- Archelaus (4), Mithridates' general, controls sea, his operations, IV. 358, IX. 556; lies with fleet at Munychia, IV. 372, 454; sets out for Chaeroneia 378; defeated at Chaeroneia by Sulla, 382 f.; defeated at Orchomenus by Sulla, 392 f., II. 504; parleys with Sulla near Delium, IV. 396; meets Sulla at Philippi, 400 f.; urges Lucullus to invade Pontus, II. 494; 498
- Archelaus (5), merchant of Delos, arranges meeting between Sulla and Archelaus, Mithridates' general, IV. 396
- Archelaus (6), friend of M. Antony, warred on by him, then given royal burial, IX. 144
- Archelaus (7), king of Cappadocia, fights under Antony, IX. 276
- Archeptolis, Themistocles' son, marries Mnesipotelema, his half-sister, II. 86 f.
- Archery, power of Parthian bows, III. 388
- Archestratus (1), choral poet in time of Peloponnesian war, II. 212; saying re Alcibiades, IV. 42, 284
- Archestratus (2), introduces decree to denounce Phocion to Polysperchon, VIII. 222
- Archias (1), with Leontidas and Philip, persuades Phoebidas to seize Cadmeia, v. 350 f.; with Leontidas, made ruler of Thebes, 66; slain by Pelopidas' followers, 360 f.
- Archias (2), hierophant at Athens, sends warning to Archias, Theban tyrant, v. 364
- Archias (3), the exile-hunter, arrests Hyperides, Aristonicus, and Himeraeus, and sends them to Antipater, tries to get Demosthenes, VII. 70 f.
- Archibiades, Athenian, nicknamed Laconistes, VIII. 166
- Archibius, gives Octavius 2000 talents to spare statues of Cleopatra, IX. 330
- Archidamia, Spartan woman, urges men to defend city against Pyrrhus, IX. 438
- Archidamia, Agis' grandmother, very rich, X. 10, 16; executed by Amphares, 46
- Archidamidas, Spartan, sayings: I. 266, 268
- Archidamus (1), Zeuxidamus' son, left sons Agis and Agesilaus, v. 2, 452; fined for marrying little woman, 4; saves Sparta at time of earthquake, 454; tries to avoid war with Athens, III. 84; invades Attica, 94
Sayings: III. 22; 318, X. 112
- Archidamus (2), Agesilaus' son, Agis and Eudamidas' father, I. 296, v. 112, X. 8; intercedes for Sphodrias, v. 70; conquers Arcadians in "tearless battle," 92; 96; slain with his army in Italy, II. 138, X. 8
- Archidamus (3), succeeded Eudamidas, followed by Eudamidas, X. 8;

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- defeated by Demetrius near Mantinea, IX. 84
- Archidamus (4), Agis' brother, escapes after his death, X. 50; called from Messene, made king, executed, 60
- Archidamus (5), Aetolian, remains with Perseus in his flight, VI. 416
- "Archilochi," work of Cratinus, II. 434
- Archilochus, loved by gods for sake of Muses, I. 318, III. 4; his tone adopted by Cato the Younger in iambs, VIII. 250
- (Bergk II. 383), I. 10
- (Bergk II. 392), III. 80
- (Bergk II. 383), VIII. 160
- (Bergk II. 428 f.), IX. 520
- (Bergk II. 398), XI. 268
- Archimedes, his geometry, mechanics, defence of Syracuse, v. 470 f.; asked that cylinder enclosing sphere with formula be placed on his grave, 480; his death, 486
- Archippe, Lysander's daughter, Themistocles' wife, II. 86
- Archippus, quoted (Kock I. 688), IV. 4
- Architeles, Athenian, opposes Themistocles at Artemesium, II. 20
- Archonides, Syracusan, VI. 88
- Archons, in ancient times chosen by lot; ex-archons promoted to Areiopagus, III. 26; to be chosen from all the people, II. 280; IX. 26
- See also II. 210, 214, 226, 228, 428, VII. 58
- Archytas, with Eudoxus, originated art of mechanics, v. 470; Pythagorean; persuaded to assist in bringing Plato to Sicily, VI. 36; rescues Plato from peril, 40
- Arcissus, ex-harmost of Thebes, executed by Spartans, v. 370
- Arcturus, his rising cause of storm, VI. 52
- Ardea, led by Camillus, its people defeat Gauls, II. 150
- Ardettus, place in Athens, I. 62
- Areiopagus, Council of, established by Solon. Its duties, I. 454, 464; tried Peisistratus for murder, 494, II. 30; attacked by Ephialtes, 436; its power broken by Ephialtes, 450, III. 20, 26; to investigate Harpalus matter, VII. 62; supports Phocion, VIII. 178; induced by Cicero to honour Cratippus, VII. 142
- Areius, philosopher, honoured in Alexandria by Octavius, IX. 316 f.
- Ares, gave victory over Persians, II. 272; father of Harmonia, v. 386
- Aretaeus, name of Dion's son according to Timaeus, VI. 68
- Arete, daughter of Dionysius the Elder and Aristomache, marries Thearides, then Dion, her uncle, VI. 12; married to Timocrates, 42; restored to Dion, 108; murdered by Hicetas, 120 f., 340
- Arethusa (1), in Macedonia, had tomb of Antony, I. 302
- Arethusa (2), given Monaeses by Antony, IX. 220
- Areus, Spartan king, Acrotatus' son, fell at Corinth, X. 10, IX. 434; 436; 444; 446; 452
- Argas, nickname of Demosthenes, VII. 10
- Argileonis, Brasidas' mother, replies to Amphipolitans, I. 282
- Arginusae, sea-fight of; Callicratidas defeated, III. 108, IV. 248
- Argives, misgoverned, drove out kings, I. 226; defeated utterly by Spartans, IV. 234; left in Amphictyonic Alliance through Themistocles in spite of Spartans, II. 56; hated Sparta, urged by Alcibiades to look to Athens, IV. 32; 292; make alliance with Athens, III. 244, IV. 36; after Mantinea crush attempt of "The Thousand," persuaded by Themistocles to attach city completely to Athens, 38; on left wing at Coroneia, routed by Agesilaus, v. 46; hindered at Isthmian games by Agesilaus, 56; with Cleomenes fight against Corinthians, VI. 268
- Argivus, freedman, buried Galba by night, XI. 270
- Argo, commanded by Jason, I. 38
- Argolis, overrun by Cleomenes, X. 58
- Argos, expelled king Gelanor, captured by Danaüs, IX. 454; II. 62; v. 174; detached from Spartan confederacy, 396; freed by Demetrius, IX. 58; XI. 6; IX. 446; scene of battle, where Pyrrhus is slain, 450 f.; under tyrant Aristomachus, XI. 56; attacked by Aratus, 60 f.; seized by Agias and younger Aristomachus, 66; joins Achaean

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- League, 80, 102; Achaeans meet there to confer with Cleomenes, X. 84; joins Cleomenes, 88 f., XI. 90; lost to Cleomenes, X. 96; its land ravaged by him, 106; recovered by Achaean League, XI. 102
- Ariadne, falls in love with, carried off by Theseus, I. 36, 196; deserted by Theseus, 66; various stories about her, 40; honoured in festival of Oschophoria, 50
- Ariaeus, Cyrus' friend, at Cunaxa, XI. 148
- Ariamnes (1), Xerxes' brother, slain at Salamis, II. 42
- Ariamnes (2), Arab chieftain, treacherously gives Crassus bad advice, III. 374, 382
- Ariarathes (1), king of Cappadocia, to give place to Eumenes, VIII. 84; captured, 88
- Ariarathes (2), Mithridates' son, over-running Thrace and Macedonia, IV. 358; poisoned by M., v. 212
- Ariarathes (3), buys Mithridates' sword-belt, v. 224
- Ariaspes, Artaxerxes' son, scared into committing suicide, XI. 200
- Arimanius, Persian god, II. 76
- Ariminum, v. 442; occupied by Caesar, v. 272, VII. 520, VIII. 360
- Arimnestus (1), general of Plataeans, interprets his dream to Aristides, II. 246
- Arimnestus (2), Spartan, slays Mardonius, II. 270
- Ariobarzanes (1), Mithridates' father, IX. 10
- Ariobarzanes (2), reinstated as king of Cappadocia by Sulla, IV. 334 f.; to receive Cappadocia again from Mithridates, 398; 404
- Ariobarzanes (3), king of Cappadocia, to be supported by Cicero, VII. 172
- Arioinandes, Gobryas' son, leader of Persian forces at Eurymedon, II. 440
- Ariovistus, defeated by Caesar, escapes across Rhine, VII. 486 f.
- Ariphron, Xanthippus' son, Pericles' brother, Alcibiades' guardian, IV. 2, 8
- Aristaenus, Megalopolitan, general of Achaeans, sent to prevent Philopoemen being exiled, X. 290; 304
- Aristaeus, his disappearance like that of Romulus, I. 178
- Aristagoras, town-clerk of Cyzicus, II. 500
- Aristander of Telmessus, seer with Philip, and then with Alexander, VII. 226, 260, 294, 296, 316, 322, 368, 374
- Aristeas, Argive, invites Pyrrhus to Argos, IX. 446; admits him, 450
- Aristides (1), Lysimachus' son, his family and position, II. 210 f., 390f.; his political principles; opposed Themistocles, 8, 214, 436; character, 8, 216 f., 250, 260, 436; fought brilliantly at Marathon, 224; ostracized, 16, 32, 230, 248; supports Themistocles at Salamis, 36 f. 234; condemns Themistocles' plan to break bridge of boats, 238; leads Athenians at Plataea, 244 f.; proposes decree to assembled Greeks re war against Persians, 278; proposes decree to make government democratic, 280; condemns Themistocles' plan to burn Greek naval station, 56, 282; by tact and diplomacy steals leadership from Spartans, 282, 420; chosen by allies to levy assessment upon them, 286 f.; his death, 294, III. 18; leaves family in poverty, 296, 392. See also II. 58, 418, IV. 228
- Sayings: II. 44, 218, 220, 222, 236, 242, 250, 288
- Aristides (2), Xenophilus' son, II. 212
- Aristides (3), Locrian, companion of Plato, VI. 274
- Aristides (4), author of "Milesiaca," III. 418
- Aristion, tyrant at Athens, I. 338, II. 530; character and acts; besieged by Sulla, IV. 366; forced to surrender by Curio, 372; poisoned by Sulla, 400
- Aristippus (1) of Cyrene, quoted re Dionysius, VI. 38; re Plato and Dionysius, 40
- Aristippus (2) of Argos, has feud with Aristeas, IX. 446
- Aristippus, succeeds Aristomachus as tyrant of Argos; prosecutes

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Achaean for attack in time of peace, XI. 58; 60; fights with Aratus at Chares river, 62 f.; defeated and slain, 64 f.
- Aristoboule, name given by Themistocles to temple of Artemis built by him, II. 60
- Aristobulus (1) of Alexandria, cited re Demosthenes, VII. 56; re Alexander, 260, 268, 272, 284, 356, 432
- Aristobulus (2), king of Jews, taken by Pompey, v. 216; led in his triumph, 230; having caused Jews to revolt, defeated and taken with his son by Antony, IX. 142
- Aristocleitus, father of Lysander of the Heracleidae, IV. 234
- Aristocrates (1), speech against, by Demosthenes, VII. 32
- Aristocrates (2), cited re Lycurgus, I. 216, 302; re Philopoemen, X. 302
- Aristocrates (3), rhetorician with Antony, IX. 294
- Aristocritus, sent to Philip by Pixodarus to arrange a marriage, VII. 248
- Aristodemus (1), ancestor of Lycurgus, I. 206; v. 52
- Aristodemus (2) of Miletus, courtier of Antigonus and Demetrius, IX. 20, 38
- Aristodemus (3), tyrant, defeats and slays Acrotatus at Megalopolis, X. 10; killed through plotting of Ecdemus and Megalophanes, 256
- Aristodiscus of Tanagra, murders Ephialtes, III. 32
- Aristogeiton (1), his granddaughter given dowry by Athenians, II. 298
- Aristogeiton (2), public informer at Athens, VIII. 166; speech against him delivered by Demosthenes himself, VII. 36; VIII. 168
- Aristomache, Dion's sister, Dionysius the Elder's wife, VI. 6; her children, 12; 108; drowned by order of Hicetas, 122
- Aristomachus (1), exile from Sicyon, friend of Aratus, XI. 10
- Aristomachus (2), tyrant of Argos, killed by slaves, succeeded by Aristippus, XI. 58
- Aristomachus (3), with Agias seizes Argos, XI. 66; resigns and is made general of Achaean League, XI. 80 f., X. 58; tortured at Cenchreae and drowned, XI. 102
- Aristomenes, thrice offered sacrifice for 100 Spartans slain, I. 168; said by Messenians to have slain Theopompus, Spartan king, X. 48
- Ariston (1), helps Peisistratus become tyrant, I. 490
- Ariston (2), Corinthian captain, by ruse defeats Athenians under Menander and Euthydemus, III. 280
- Ariston (3), captain of Paeonians, rewarded by Alexander, VII. 338
- Ariston (4) of Chios, cited, II. 354, VII. 24, 74
- Ariston (5) of Ceos, philosopher, cited, II. 8, 216
- Aristonicus (1) of Marathon, executed by Antipater, VII. 70
- Aristonicus (2), son of harpist's daughter, used reputed connexion with Eumenes to fill all Asia with wars and rebellions, X. 384
- Aristonicus (3), joined in Asia by Blossius, X. 194
- Aristonicus (4), Mithridates' admiral, taken by Lucullus, II. 504
- Aristonous, harper, his encounter with Lysander, IV. 282
- Aristophanes (1):—
 Acharnians, 524 f., III. 88
 Babylonians (Kock I. 408), III. 76
 Birds, 638 f., III. 234
 Farmers (Kock I. 416), III. 234
 Frogs, 1425, 1431-1432, IV. 40
 Knights, 358, III. 222; 382, IX. 28; 815, II. 54
 Lysistrata, 1137 f., II. 454
 Wasps, 44 f., IV. 4
- Aristophanes (2), one of Alexander's bodyguards, VII. 372
- Aristophon (1), painted Nemea with Alcibiades in her arms, IV. 42
- Aristophon (2), archon, VII. 58; VIII. 160
- Aristotle (1), native of Stageira, tutored Alexander, VII. 240; 242; introduced Alexander to works of Theodectas, 272; thought Callisthenes able speaker, but lacking in common sense, 380; related to Callisthenes, hated by Alexander, 384; said to have counselled Antipater to poison Alexander, 436; had gift of persuasion accord-

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

ing to Antipater, II. 390, IV. 224; called river of liquid gold by Cicero, VII. 140; abused by Timaeus, III. 210; his writings in library of Apellicon the Teian; seized by Sulla and sent to Rome, IV. 406

Statements: Theseus gave up absolute rule, I. 54; Lycurgus and Iphitus established Olympic truce, 204; Why 28 members in Council of Elders at Sparta, 220; Crannon a river and Babyca a bridge, 222; Κρυπτεία one of Lycurgus' institutions, 288; Ephors on coming into office declared formal war on Helots, 290; Honours paid Lycurgus less than deserved, 300; Solon supported Delphian oracle, 428; Tables of law at Athens were called κύρβεις, 472; Ashes of Solon scattered on island of Salamis, 498; Lucius saved Rome from Gauls, II. 148; Pythocleides was Pericles' music teacher, III. 10; (should be Plato, Alcibiades, I. 118c); Pericles defeated by Melissus in sea-fight, 76; Athenians not brutal to Samians, 78; Ephors having entered upon office, bid all men to shave moustaches and obey laws, X. 66

Constitution of Athens, (25. 4), III. 32; (27. 3), II. 432; (27. 4), III. 26; (28. 5), III. 212

Constitution of Bottiaea (Athenians were not put to death by Minos, but made slaves, etc.), I. 30

Iliad of the Casket, edition carried by Alexander, VII. 242, 298

On Nobility of Birth? (Myrto, granddaughter of Aristides, wife of Socrates?), II. 296

On the Soul, occasion of its being written, VI. 46

Fragment 56 (Rose), v. 346; 97, v. 384; 556, I. 6

Politics (II. 6. 8), I. 244

Problems, (30. 1), IV. 236

Aristotle (2), logician, with Deinias, slays Abantidas, XI. 6

Aristotle (3), causes revolt against Cleomenes in Argos, X. 94, XI. 102

Aristoxenus, musician, says Lycurgus died in Crete, I. 302; falsely says Myrto, granddaughter of Aristides, was wife of Socrates, II. 296; VI. 294; his memoirs tell of Alexander's person, VII. 232

Aristratus, tyrant of Sicyon, painted by Melanthus and Apelles, XI. 28

Aristus, brother of Antiochus of Ascalon, friend of M. Brutus, VI. 128

Armenia, attacked by Persens, II. 410; disturbed by Neoptolemus, VIII. 88; ruled by Tigranes, II. 512; Lesser A. occupied by Lucullus, 526; 536; invaded by Lucullus, 548; conquered by Lucullus, 140, 572, III. 370; people of, join Tigranes, II. 554; nature of ground and weather, 576, 590; Lucullus' trophies there, 592; added to Pompey's sway by Manilian Law, V. 190; invaded by Pompey on invitation of young Tigranes, 202, VII. 106; left in charge of Afranius by Pompey, v. 204; 208; 216; triumphed over by Pompey, 230; conquered by Canidius, IX. 214; traversed by Antony, 220

Armilustrium, on Aventine, has grave of Tattius, I. 164

Army, Roman, its armour and weapons improved by Camillus, II. 198; its weapons, 558 f.

Arnaces, royal eunuch, sent with message from Themistocles to Xerxes, II. 46, 240

Arpates, Teribazus' son, slays Arsames, XI. 202

Arpinum, Cicero had country-seat there, VII. 100; IX. 468

Arrhenides, father of Callicles, VII. 62

Arrhidaeus, Philip's son, to marry Pixodarus' daughter, VII. 248; drugged by Olympias, 436; orders Eumenes to wage war on Antigonus, VIII. 116

Arrius, Q., brings news of Catiline's army, VII. 118

Arron, Tuscan, led Gauls into Italy, II. 126 f.

Arruntius, led Octavius' centre at Actium, IX. 288

Arsaces, Parthian king, sends message to Crassus, III. 366; v. 314. See also "Hyrodes."

Arsacidae, Parthian royal line, III. 420

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Arsames, illegitimate son of Artaxerxes, slain by Arpates, XI. 200 f.
- Arsania river, battle of, between Lucullus and Armenians, II. 574 f.
- Arsian grove, scene of battle between Tarquin and Romans, I. 522
- Arsicas, name of Artaxerxes II. at first, XI. 128
- Arsis river, where Pompey defeats Carbo's cavalry, v. 130
- Artabanus, gives audience to Themistocles, II. 72
- Artabazes (Artabazus), comes to Crassus' camp with 6000 horsemen, III. 370; seized by Antony because deserted in Media by him, IX. 340. See also "Artavasdes."
- Artabazus (1), with 40,000, escaped at Plataea, II. 272
- Artabazus (2), father of Pharnabazus, VIII. 96; of Barsine, 80, VII. 284
- Artageres, commander of Cadusians, slain at Cunaxa by Cyrus, XI. 146 f., 156
- Artayras, the King's Eye, discovers and reports death of Cyrus, XI. 152, 158
- Artavasdes (Artabazes) king of Armenia, punished by Hyrodes, III. 376; sends message to Crassus, 380; reconciled to Hyrodes, 420; deserts Antony, IX. 224; robbed Antony of victory, led in triumph at Alexandria, 252; wrote tragedies orations, histories, III. 420
- Artaxas, king of Armenia, induced by Hannibal to build Artaxata and make it Armenian capital, II. 572
- Artaxata, royal city of Tigranes, attacked by Lucullus, II. 572; left untaken, 578
- Artaxerxes (1), surnamed Longimanus, Xerxes' son, XI. 128; received Themistocles, II. 72, 76 f.
- Artaxerxes (2), son of Darius and Parysatis, grandson of Artaxerxes I., XI. 128; in danger from his brother Cyrus, 132 f.; his character, 134; rebelled against by Cyrus, 136 f.; warned by Tissaphernes of Cyrus' intention, 138; urged by Teribazus to fight, 140; battle of Cunaxa, 142 f.; death of Cyrus, 148 f.; Clearchus and his fellow-generals seized and slain, 166 f.; A. fails to capture Greeks, who had come with Cyrus, 172; attacked by Agesilaüs, drives Spartans from Asia and the sea by bribery, 174 f.; dictates Peace of Antalcidas, 176; refuses Spartans money after Leuctra, 178; puts Tissaphernes to death, 180; marries his daughter Atossa, 182; fails in war against Egyptians, and against Cadusians, 184 f.; proclaims Darius his successor, 190; makes an enemy of Teribazus, 194; is plotted against by Teribazus and Darius, 194 f.; has Darius executed, 198 f.; on learning of death of his sons Ariaspes and Arsames through his son Ochus, he dies, ninety-four years old, 200 f. See also v. 416
- Sayings: XI. 134, 136
- Artaÿctus, husband of Xerxes' sister, II. 38
- Artemidorus (1), guided Lucullus to position above Mithridates, II. 516
- Artemidorus (2), Cnidian philosopher, gives Caesar a written warning, VII. 594
- Artemis, temple of, built by Themistocles and named Aristoboule, II. 60; temple of, named Proseoea, 24
- Artemis of Ecbatana, called Anaitis, XI. 192
- Artemis, Ephesian, temple of, burned, VII. 230
- Artemis Eucleia, temple of, had tomb of Euchidas, II. 276
- Artemis Orthia, temple of, in Sparta, I. 72; youths flogged to death at her altar, 262
- Artemis, Persia, highly honoured by barbarians beyond Euphrates, II. 548
- Artemis of Colophon, at banquet of Alexander, VII. 372
- Artemis of Priapus, II. 510
- Artemisia, fights for Xerxes at Salamis, II. 18 f., 42
- Artemisium, location and description, II. 22; IV. 2
- Artemisius, Macedonian name of month, VII. 264
- Artemon Periphoretus, engineer, told of in brief, III. 78

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Arthmiadas, chief helper of Lycurgus, I. 218
- Arthmius of Zeleia, disfranchised for offering gold of Medes to Greeks, II. 18
- Artisans, list of kinds at Athens, III. 38
- Artorius, M., Octavius' friend, VI. 218
- Arts, compared with senses, IX. 2
- Aruns (1), Lars Porsena's son, urges father to make peace with Romans, I. 550; rescues Roman maidens, 552
- Aruns (2), Tarquin's son, and Brutus, the consul, slay each other, I. 522
- Arverni, with Carnuntini (Carnutes), lead revolt against Caesar, VII. 504 f.
- Arybas, son of Alcetas, and father by Troas of Aeacides, IX. 346
- Arymbas, brother of Olymphas, wife of Philip of Macedon, VII. 226
- As, current copper coin in time of Camillus, II. 124
- Asbolomeni, name of Damon's descendants, II. 408
- Ascalis, son of Iphtha, Maurusian, defeated by Sertorius, VIII. 22
- Ascalon, Antiochus' of, see "Antiochus of Ascalon."
- Asclepiades (1), Hipparchus' son, reports death of Alexander, VIII. 194
- Asclepiades (2), answered by Didymus, I. 404
- Asclepias, temple of, at Epidaurus, plundered by pirates, V. 174
- Asculum (1) taken by Strabo, V. 124
- Asculum (2) battle of, IX. 412 f.
- Asia (1), separated from Asia by isthmus 300 furlongs long, IX. 296; set in order by Agesilaus, V. 38; cleared of Persians by Cimon, II. 438; VII. 264; wrested from Romans by Mithridates; 150,000 Romans massacred in one day, IV. 358, 404; 398; fined 20,000 talents by Sulla, II. 532, IV. 406; its state after 2nd Mithridatic war; relieved by Lucullus, II. 532, VII. 90; 180; decreed province of Trebonius, VI. 168; being subdued by Parthians under Labienus, IX. 204
- Asia (2), Themistocles' youngest child, reared by Phrasicles, II. 88
- Asiatic style of oratory, popular in Antony's time, IX. 140
- Asiaticus, Galba's freedman, helped Otho, XI. 250
- Asinaria, Syracusan festival to celebrate capture of Nicias, III. 304
- Asinarus river, where Nicias made last stand, III. 302
- Asinius, Antony's friend, IX. 156
- Asinius Pollio, accompanies Caesar over the Rubicon, VII. 522; sent against Cato in Sicily, VIII. 362; with Caesar at Pharsalus, V. 304; with Caesar in Africa, VII. 566; cited, 552, V. 304
- Asopian plain, I. 424
- Asopis, Sinope's mother, II. 544
- Asopus river, Persians encamped by it before Plataea, II. 244, 256
- Aspasia (1), Milesian, Axiochus' daughter, her relations with Pericles, III. 68; tried for impiety, begged off by Pericles, 92
- Aspasia (2), Phocaeen, Hermotinus' daughter, Cyrus' special favourite, Artaxerxes' concubine, made priestess of Artemis of Ecbatana, III. 72, XI. 190 f.
- Aspendus, city in Asia, IV. 76
- Aspetus, name of Achilles in Epeirote tongue, IX. 346
- Asphalius, name of Neptune, why given, I. 86.
- Aspis, strong position in Argos, IX. 450, 452, X. 88
- Assessment, of Hellenes by Aristides, II. 286, 386; paid by Athenian allies, 438; 130,000 on lists at Rome, widows and orphans excused, I. 534; revised by censors, II. 346; that of Cato the Elder, 354
- Assian plain, where Archelaus encamped, IV. 380
- Assus river, empties into Cephissus, IV. 378; crossed by Sulla, 380
- Assyrians, settled in Tigranocerta, II. 552; III. 382
- Asteria, Salaminian, wooed by Cimon, II. 416
- Asteropus, ephor, first to extend power of office, X. 70
- Astronomy, Anaxagoras' account of heavenly bodies, IV. 262; V. 12; more exact science in Plutarch's time, II. 274. See also "Meteor."

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

Astura, place of Cicero's on sea-coast, VII. 202

Astyocheus, admiral opposed to Athenians, IV. 70 f.

Astypaleia, Cleomedes of, see "Cleomedes of Astypaleia."

Astyphilus of Posidonia, interprets Cimon's dream, II. 460

Asylum, God of, I. 114

Ateius, tribune of plebs, tries to keep Crassus from leaving city on Parthian expedition, III. 362

Ateius, M., first of Sulla's men to mount wall of Athens, IV. 368

Athamania, in Greece, traversed by Caesar, V. 286

Athamanians, plundered by Macedonians, X. 364

Athans, cited, VI. 318, 350

Athens, temple of, at Athens, I. 430; patroness of Athens, II. 28, IV. 8; II. 28, 30; by showing olive-tree, won against Poseidon, II. 54; her temple at Plataea restored, 276; 502; statue of her by Pheidias, III. 40, 44, 88 f.; Plynteria of, when celebrated, IV. 98; 368; IX. 54; her precinct at Belbina commands entrance into Laconia, X. 56

Athens of the Brazen House, X. 26, 36

Athens Hygieia, statue of her set up by Pericles, III. 44

Athens Itonis (Itonia), temple of, V. 50, IX. 432

Athens Optilitis, given temple by Lycurgus, I. 236

Athens Syllania, I. 220

Athenians—Rites, customs, etc.: rites in memory of Salamis taken by Solon, I. 426; bury dead facing west, 428; fond of euphemisms, 442; great enemies of wolves, 468; oath of young warriors, IV. 38; Adonia festival, 48; rites on March 1st in memory of deluge, 372

Laws, etc.: laws re idleness, I. 280, 450, 464, 494; archons at first chosen by lot, III. 26; ostracism, II. 234, III. 246 f.; law re citizenship, 106 f.; law re divorce, IV. 20

Tribes named from occupations, I. 468; taught Greeks to sow grain and kindle fire, II. 434; pay tribute to Minos, I. 28; assembled into one city by Theseus, 50 f.; divided into three classes, 54; attacked by Megarians, and lose Nisaea and Salamis, 432; Hill-men, Plain-men, and Shore-men dispute re form of government, 434; debts cancelled by Solon, 442; A. given laws by Solon, 448 f.; made subject to Peisistratus, 488 f.

Burn Sardis, fight at Marathon, II. 224 f.; fight at Salamis, 40 f., 236 f.; tempted by Xerxes to cease struggle, 240; fight at Plataea, 248 f.; fortify city, 52 f.; win allies from Spartans through Aristides, 282 f.; send aid to Corcyra against Corinth, III. 82; besiege Potidaea, 84; attacked by Spartans under Archidamus, 94; afflicted by pestilence, 98; make peace with Spartans through Nicias, 236; enter on Sicilian expedition, 250 f., IV. 44 f.; suffer disaster in Sicily, III. 302 f.; Alcibiades begins to help Athenians again, IV. 70; defeated by Lysander at Aegospotami, and forced to surrender their city, 106 f., 264 f.; accept Lysander's terms, 270; ruled by Thirty Tyrants, 274; expel the Thirty, 290; grateful to Thebans for help, V. 354

Embroided with Sparta through Pelopidas, 372; aroused by Demosthenes to unite with Thebans against Philip, VII. 42; defeated (at Chaeroneia) by Philip, 46; asked by Alexander to surrender Demosthenes and certain others, 56; placate Alexander through Phocion, VIII. 182; besiege Antipater in Lamia, VII. 66; threatened by Antipater's army, VIII. 202; accept his terms, 204, II. 140; turn against Phocion, VIII. 220; governed for Demetrius the Phaleran for Cassander, IX. 18; freed by Demetrius Poliorcetes, 20; highly honour Demetrius, 24 f.; freed from Cassander's siege by Demetrius, 52; revolt from Demetrius, and are besieged by him, 114; assisted by Aratus in regaining freedom, XI. 78; send Carneades and Diogenes to Rome to beg cancellation of fine of 500 talents,

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- II. 368; besieged by Sulla, IV. 360 f.; their city captured, 368 f.; especially loved Octavia, IX. 266
- Athenodorus (1) of Imbros, released from prison by Alexander at Phocion's request, VIII. 186
- Athenodorus (2), actor, fined by Athenians, when Alexander pays fine, VII. 308
- Athenodorus (3) Cordyllon, Stoic philosopher, at Pergamum, won over by Cato the Younger, VIII. 256, 268
- Athenodorus (4), Sandon's son, wrote book, addressed to Octavia, I. 548
- Athenophanes, Athenian, makes experiment with naphtha, VII. 328
- Athens, made metropolis by Theseus, I. 4, 52; had perpetual fire, that went out in tyranny of Aristion, 338; very poor in time of 2nd Persian war, II. 242; fortified under Themistocles, II. 52; beautified by Cimon, 446; adorned by Pericles, III. 34; enriched with holidays and public festivals by Pericles, 198; down to time of Caesars greatly outshone Rome in great public works, temples, etc., III. 204; taken by Lysander, who tore down long walls, IV. 108, 270; her walls rebuilt by money from Pharnabazus, V. 62; spared by Alexander, VII. 256; entered by Pyrrhus, IX. 378; captured by Sulla, IV. 344, 370; visited by Cato the Elder, II. 336; given 50 talents by Pompey, V. 224; visited by Cicero, VII. 88; welcomes Brutus, VI. 176
- Athletic training, III. 174, X. 260, XI. 6
- Athos, mountain, to be made into statue of Alexander, VII. 426
- Atilla, Serranus' daughter, Cato's wife, divorced for unseemly conduct, VIII. 28, 250, 254
- Atilius (M. Atilius Regulus), II. 386
- Atilius, M., consul with T. Manlius, when temple of Janus was closed, I. 372
- Atilius Vergilio, overthrows Galba's statue, XI. 264
- Atillius, friend of Brutus, VI. 212
- Atiso river, bridged by Lutatius Catulus, IX. 524; 526
- Atlantic Islands, called Islands of the Blest, described, VIII. 20
- Atlantic Ocean, V. 214, VII. 498, VIII. 20
- Atlantis, the lost, story of, heard from Egyptian priests by Solon, who tried to put it in poetry, I. 476, 494; story of, left unfinished by Plato, 496
- Atlas, reputed father of Pasiphaë, X. 20
- Atossa, daughter of Artaxerxes, married by him, XI. 182, 194; urges Ochus to remove his rivals, 200
- Atreus, part of, acted by Aesop, VII. 94
- Atridae, II. 424
- Atropatena, ravaged by Antony, IX. 222
- Atropateni, routed by Lucullus, II. 574
- Attaleia, city in Pamphylia, V. 312
- Attalus (1), uncle of Cleopatra, wife of Philip, VII. 246; offends Pausanias, 250; 382
- Attalus (2), king, supports Flamininus' appeal to Thebans, dies of stroke, X. 338, II. 140, IX. 274
- Attalus (3) Philometer, grew poisonous plants, IX. 46; made Roman people his heir, X. 176
- Attia (Atia), daughter of Caesar's sister, mother of young Caesar, VII. 196, IX. 206
- "Attic History," by Ister, I. 78
- Attica, mostly unfruitful and worthless; manufacturing encouraged by Solon, I. 464, 468; invaded by Mardonius, II. 242; often invaded by Spartans, I. 74; invaded by Archidamus, III. 94; invaded by Sphodrias at night, V. 374; freed from Cassander, IX. 52; invaded by Aratus, XI. 54
- Atticus, gets letter from Brutus, VI. 190
- Atticus, Julius, praetorian, claims to have slain Otho, XI. 262
- Attis, two of the name, one a Syrian, the other an Arcadian; both killed by wild boar, VIII. 2; story of, among Phrygians resembles that about Numa and Egeria, I. 316
- Attius, Tullus, see "Tullus Attius."

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Attius Varus, made governor of Libya by Pompey, with Scipio and Juba after Pharsalus, VIII. 372
- Ἀγκυῶν λύσις, possibly connected with "ancile."
- Aufidius, in conspiracy against Sertorius, VIII. 68, 74
- Aufidus, river in Italy, III. 160
- Augur, defined, v. 438, VI. 360; Cicero augur in place of younger Crassus, VII. 172; Antony with help of Curio, IX. 148; Ti. Gracchus, x. 150
- August, month originally called Sextilis, I. 370, IX. 534
- Augustus Caesar (Octavius), son of Octavius and Attia, made heir and adopted son in Caesar's will, VII. 196, IX. 162, 206; quarrelling with Antony about inheritance, he supports Cicero, VI. 174, VII. 194, IX. 170 f.; fights at Mutina, VI. 184, VII. 198; becomes consul, forms triumvirate with Antony and Lepidus, VI. 186, VII. 200, 600, IX. 178; indicts Brutus and Cassius for murder, VI. 184; marries Clodia, Fulvia's daughter, IX. 180; with Antony wars on Brutus and Cassius in Macedonia, VI. 208 f., VII. 606, IX. 182 f.; after Philippi returns ill to Rome, 184; reconciled to Antony, divides empire with him and Lepidus, 202 f.; makes peace with Sextus Pompeius, 206; renews peace with Antony at Tarentum, 214 f.; makes war on Pompeius, 216, 262; finds cause of complaint in Antony, 256, 260 f.; disturbed by Antony's preparations and unrest in Italy, 268; reads Antony's will, 270; has war declared, 272; crosses Ionian sea and occupies Torone in Epeirus, 278; wins at Actium, 284 f.; after receiving surrender of Antony's land forces, makes settlement with Greeks, 292 f.; offers to spare Cleopatra, recalled to Italy, 304; next year takes Pelusium, defeats Antony, 306 f.; learns of Antony's death, 314; enters Alexandria, 316; executes Antyllus, Antony's son, 318; interviews Cleopatra, 320 f.; orders Cleopatra buried with Antony, 330; becomes consul with Cicero's son as colleague, VII. 208; has doors of Janus' temple closed, I. 372
- His Memoirs, addressed to Agrippa and Maecenas, cited, v. 520, VI. 184, 218, VII. 214, IX. 182, 292
- Sayings: VI. 256, VII. 208, IX. 318
- Aulis, where Agesilaus is hindered in sacrifice, IV. 308, v. 14 f.
- Aurelia, J., Caesar's mother, VII. 152, 462
- Aurelius, C., effects reconciliation of Pompey and Crassus, v. 170, III. 350
- Aurelius, Q., slain in Sulla's proscription, IV. 428
- Autocleides, his "Exegetics" cited, III. 292
- Autoleon, king of Paeonians, IX. 368
- Autolycus (1), founder of Sinope, etc., II. 542 f.
- Autolycus (2), athlete, executed by the Thirty, IV. 274
- Automatia, worshipped by Timoleon, VI. 346
- Auximum, Pompey levies troops from there, v. 128
- Aventine hill, I. 154, 164, 358, x. 230
- Avillius, later name of Aollius, I. 130
- Axiochus, Aspasia's father, III. 68
- Axius river, IX. 104
- Axius, suspected father of Crassus' son, VII. 144
- *Agaves, wooden tablets on which Solon's laws were written, I. 472
- Babyca, in Plutarch's time called Cheimarrus; a bridge according to Aristotle, I. 222; v. 382
- Babylon, visited by Alexander, VII. 426; VIII. 84; XI. 140
- Babylonia, sea of, II. 554; has fiery soil, III. 332; submits to Alexander, VII. 328; invaded by Demetrius, IX. 16
- "Bacchae," of Euripides, sung before Hyrodes, III. 420
- Bacchiadae, fled from Corinth to Lacedaemon, IV. 234
- Bacchides, eunuch of Mithridates, II. 524
- Bacchus, see "Dionysus."

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- "Bacchylides," Frag. 29 (Jebb, Bacch. p. 423), I. 320
- Bachelors, Thales of Miletus one, I. 416; penalized by Lycurgus, 248; forced by Camillus to marry widows, II. 96
- Bactria, III. 360, 434
- Bactrian cavalry, attack Macedonians, VII. 320
- Baculus, from βακτηρία, is a rod in lictor's bundle, I. 172
- Baebius, M., consul with P. Cornelius about 400 years after Numa, I. 380
- Baetica, named from river Baetis, VIII. 20; governed by Fufidius, 30
- Baetis river, II. 330; empties into Atlantic, VIII. 20; 30
- Bagoas, had house at Susa, VII. 342
- Bagoas, favourite of Alexander, VII. 412
- Baiae, had warm baths, IX. 554
- Balbus, sent by Sulla, attacks Telesinus, IV. 418
- Balbus, Cornelius, flatterer of Caesar, VII. 582
- Balbus, Postumius, son-in-law of Publicola, I. 560
- Balissus, stream crossed by Crassus' army, III. 384
- Balte, nymph, reputed mother of Epimenides of Phaestus, I. 432
- Banbyce, earlier name of Hicrapolis, IX. 220
- Bandius, see "Bantius."
- Bantia, Italian city, v. 514
- Bantius, Lucius, won to Romans by Marcellus, v. 458
- Barbuis, supports Otho, XI. 258
- Barca (1), saying re Hannibal, III. 168
- Barca (2), invites Cato and Munatius to supper, VIII. 326
- Bardyaei, slave bodyguard of Marius, IX. 584, 590
- Bardyllis, marries daughter Bircenna to Pyrrhus, IX. 368
- Bargylia, city freed by Lentulus, X. 354
- Barsine (1), Artabazus' daughter, taken as mistress by Alexander, VII. 284, VIII. 80
- Barsine (2), Artabazus' daughter, given by Alexander to Eumenes, VIII. 80
- Basilica (Pauli Aenili), built by (Lucius Aemilius) Paulus, VII. 514, XI. 264
- Basilica Porcia, erected in forum by Cato the Elder, II. 356; tribunes of plebs transacted business there, VIII. 246
- Basillus, L., sent by Sulla to seize city-gate of Rome, IV. 354
- Bastarnae, see "Bisternae."
- Bataces, priest of Great Mother at Pessinus, IX. 508
- Batalus, nickname of Demosthenes, VII. 10
- Bathycles, left beaker at Delphi, I. 414
- Baton, of Sinope, cited, X. 34
- Bean, white, its use, III. 76
- Bedriacum, Otho's soldiers there, XI. 300, 306
- Bedricum (Bedriacum), little village near Cremona, XI. 294
- Bees, bred in putrefying oxen, X. 140
- Beetles, bred in putrefying oxen, X. 140
- Belaeus, furnishes ship for Marius' flight, IX. 574
- Belbina, had precinct of Athena, X. 56
- Belgae, v. 246; occupied one third of Gaul; utterly defeated by Caesar, VII. 490 f.
- Belitaras, said to have given poison to Statira, XI. 170
- Bellinus, Roman praetor, taken by pirates, v. 176
- Bellona, temple of, IV. 348, 424, VII. 112
- Belurus, secretary, XI. 180
- Belus, temple of, at Susa, VII. 274
- Beneventum, Pyrrhus defeated near it by M'. Curius, IX. 426
- Bequest, Cicero received one of 90,000 denarii, VII. 100
- Berenice (1), Ptolemy's wife, Antigone's mother; courted by Pyrrhus, IX. 354
- Berenice (2) of Chios, Mithridates' wife, strangled, II. 526
- Berenicis, city on peninsula of Epeirus, built by Pyrrhus, IX. 360
- Beroea, taken by Pyrrhus, IX. 110, 374; Pompey's headquarters, v. 280
- Berytus, city of Phoenicia, IX. 254
- Bessus, seizes Darcus, VII. 248; executed by Alexander, 252
- Bestia, failed against Jugurtha, IX. 482

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Bestia (L. Calpurnius), opposes Cicero, VII. 138
- Beverage, water used by Cato the Elder on campaigns, II. 306
- Bias, declined golden tripod, I. 412
- Bibulus, L. Calpurnius (1), husband of Porcia, by whom he had two sons, VIII. 292 f.; as consul opposes Caesar's measures, 310, v. 236; overawed by Caesar's supporters, 238, VIII. 312; remained at home for last eight months of his consulship, v. 240, VII. 474; proposes Pompey be made sole consul, v. 528, VIII. 350; made admiral by Pompey, 366; wages war on Parthians, IX. 148
- Bibulus, L. Calpurnius (2), Porcia's son, tells of incident in his mother's life, VI. 152, 176
- Bibulus, Publicius, tribune of plebs, denounces Marcellus, v. 510 f.
- Billeting, Sulla billets soldiers on people of Asia, IV. 406
- Βίοι παράλληλοι, of Plutarch, mentioned, I. 2
- Bion, cited re Amazons, I. 58
- Bircenna, Bardyllis' daughter, married to Pyrrhus, IX. 368
- Bisaltæ, Thracian people to whom Pyrrhus sent 1000 settlers, III. 34
- Bisanthe, in Thrace, IV. 106
- Bisternæ, Gallic people along Danube, stirred up by Pyrrhus, VI. 376; send 20,000 men to aid Pyrrhus; on account of his stinginess they return, 382
- Bithynia, IV. 80; surrenders to Alcibiades property of Chalcidians, 86, II. 326; ruled by Prusias, X. 378; conquered by Mithridates, IV. 358; 398; II. 490; invaded by Mithridates, 492; 502; 510; VIII. 66; held by Glabrio, given to Pompey by the Manilian law, v. 190; occupied by Pharnaces, VII. 560; decreed province of Cimber, VI. 168
- Bithys, general of Demetrius II., defeats Aratus at Phylaciæ, XI. 76
- Bitò, named by Solon as happy man, I. 480
- Blossius of Cumæ, philosopher, friend of Antipater of Tarsus, said to have incited Ti. Gracchus to agrarian reform, X. 162, 186; pardoned, joined Aristonicus in Asia, committed suicide, 192
- Bocchoris, his judgment in case of Thonis, IX. 66
- Bocchus (1), king of Numidia, won over by Sulla, surrenders Jugurtha to Romans, IV. 328, 332, IX. 484; called ally of Roman people, and set up trophies on Capitol, IV. 336, IX. 552
- Bocchus (2), king of Libya, supports Antony, IX. 276
- Boedromia, Athenian celebration, I. 62
- Boedromion, Athenian month, I. 62, II. 138, 140, 274, VII. 68
- Boeorix, challenges Marius to set place and day for battle, IX. 530
- Boeotarchs, laws re their laying down command, v. 396 f.; VII. 44
- Boeotia, settled by Opheltas and his subjects, II. 404; at Cereus conquered Lattamyas and Thessalians, 138; formed terminus of medising part of Greece, 18; traversed by Xerxes, 234; 240; gave divine honours to Eucleia, 278; III. 56; invaded by Tolmides, 58; defeated Athens at Coroneia, III. 58, IV. 2, v. 50; IV. 292; displeased by Peace of Nicias, III. 240; allied with Sparta, III. 242, IV. 32; defeated Athenians, III. 284; IV. 90; favoured Athenian refugees, 308; magistrates stop sacrifice of Agesilaüs at Aulis, IV. 308, v. 16; often invaded by Agesilaüs, I. 244, v. 46, 72; invaded by Cleombrotus, v. 66, 372; had territorial dispute with Athenians, VIII. 164; defeated by Athenians under Leosthenes, 196; allied with Demetrius, IX. 52; restless under Demetrius, 96 f.; defeated at Chaeroneia by Aetolians, XI. 34; besieged Megara, X. 286; joined Romans, 338; scene of fighting between Sulla and generals of Mithridates, IX. 578; occupied by Dorylaüs, IV. 390; II. 494
- Boii, northern people, I. 142
- Bola, Latin city, taken by Volscians under Coriolanus, IV. 186
- Bona Dea, who she was; how worshipped, VII. 128, 152, 462
- Bononia, meeting of Octavianus,

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Antony, and Lepidus near it, VII. 200
- Borysthenis, Sphaerus of, X. 52
- Bosporus, held by son of Mithridates, IV. 358; V. 196; controlled by Mithridates, 214
- Bosporus, possible route of Amazons, I. 60; V. 206
- "Bottiaea, constitution of," by Aristotle, I. 30
- Bottiaeans of Thrace, descendants of first-born of Cretans, once sent to Delphi, I. 30
- Boukatiou, first month of Theban year, V. 398
- Boulimia, a disease, theory as to its cause, VI. 180
- Boys, Roman, how educated, I. 396
- Boys, Spartan, how educated, I. 254 f., 396
- Brachyllas, Theban, X. 336
- Brasidas, son of Argileonis, I. 282; honoured by Chalcidians, 298; slain at Amphipolis, III. 236; IV. 234; 280
- Brauron, place in Attica where son of Ajax resided, I. 428
- Brazen House, see "Athena of," and Χαλκίκοκος.
- Brennus, king of Gauls, recognizing Q. Ambustus, stops battle, and marches against Rome, II. 132; enters Rome by Colline gate, 146; surrounds Capitol with a guard, 148; agrees to leave country on payment of 1000 gold lbs., 164; defeated by Camillus, 166 f.; quoted at length, 130; 158; says "vae victis," 164
- Bribery, in elections at Rome began long after time of Coriolanus, at Athens Anytus first to bribe jurors, IV. 150; Demosthenes bribed, VII. 30; XI. 242
- Bride, Roman, had hair parted with spear, I. 134
- Bridge over Tiber, details concerning, I. 336
- Eriges, Brutus' name for his camp servants, VI. 226
- Britanni, Caesar's expedition against them, V. 246, VII. 498
- Britomartus, king of Gauls, slain by Claudius Marcellus, I. 138, V. 450
- Brixillum, Italian town on the Po, XI. 298
- Bronze-shields, in Perseus' army at Pydna, VI. 402; IV. 388
- Brundisium, II. 342, IV. 408; occupied by Pompey, V. 278; 284; VII. 164; 180; 186; IX. 214; station of Octavius' fleet, IX. 278
- Bruttians, attacked by Thurians, VI. 298; slay disgraced mercenaries of Timoleon, 332; III. 182; put to the sword by Fabius, 184
- Bruttius Sura, defeats Archelatis thrice at Chaeroneia, IV. 360
- Brutus (1), a steward, ancestor of M. Brutus according to some, VI. 126
- Brutus (2), son of the tyrannicide, VI. 154
- Brutus, Junius, leader in secession of plebs, one of first tribunes, IV. 130
- Brutus, D. Junius (Gallaecus), triumphed over Lusitanians, X. 194
- Brutus Albinus, D. Junius, friend of Caesar, IX. 162; joins conspiracy to murder Caesar, VI. 150, VII. 592 f.; 596; given province of Cisalpine Gaul, VI. 168; his death avenged, 186
- Brutus, L. Junius, assisted by Publicola, drove out kings, I. 504 f., VII. 584; I. 506; his sons plot to restore Tarquins, 508; has his sons executed, 514; slays Aruns in battle, and is slain by him, 522; ancestor of Brutus, the tyrannicide, VI. 126, 144; quoted, I. 514
- Brutus, M. Junius (1), praetor, sent to forbid Sulla advancing, IV. 350
- Brutus, M. Junius (2), defeated by Pompey, V. 128 f.; father of the tyrannicide; holds Cisalpine Gaul for Lepidus, surrenders to Pompey at Mutina, executed by Geminius, 152 f.
- Brutus, M. Junius (3), his lineage, VI. 126 f.; studied philosophy and rhetoric, 2 f., 128 f.; sent to Cyprus with Cato, his uncle, 130, VIII. 322; joins Pompey's party VI. 132 f., V. 282; pardoned by Caesar after Pharsalus, VI. 136, VII. 552; put in charge of Cisalpine Gaul by Caesar, VI. 138; made praetor,

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- 140, VII. 574; led to conspire against Caesar, VI. 144 f.; lets Porcia, his wife, into the secret, 152 f.; helps murder Caesar, 162, VII. 188, 598 f., IX. 164; has Antony spared, VI. 164, IX. 166; addresses the people, VI. 166, VII. 600; withdraws from Rome, 604, VI. 172, IX. 170; rebukes Cicero for supporting Octavius, 174, VII. 196, 220; sails for Athens, VI. 176; convicted of murder of Caesar, 184; meets Cassius at Smyrna, 188; exacts money of the Lycians, 192 f.; quarrels with Cassius at Sardis, 200 f.; sees a phantom at night, 204, VII. 606; defeats Octavius at Philippi, VI. 218 f., VII. 606, IX. 182; learns of defeat and death of Cassius, VI. 224; fights again, VI. 234 f.; slays himself, 244, VII. 608; statue of him at Milan, VI. 256.
- See also* v. 154, VII. 190, 586, VIII. 410, IX. 168
- Sayings and letters: VI. 130, 146, 148, 174, 176, 178, 204, 206, 214 f., 224, 228, 242, 244
- Brutus, T. Junius, son of M. J. Brutus and Vitellia, plots to restore Tarquins, I. 508 f.; executed by his father's order, 514
- Brutus, Ti. Junius, son of M. J. Brutus and Vitellia, plots to restore Tarquins, I. 508 f.; executed by his father's order, 514
- "Brutus," account of Caesar's murder by Empylus, VI. 128 f.
- Bubulcus, Roman surname, I. 532
- Bucephalus, horse tamed by Alexander, VII. 236, 322, 352, 398
- Bucephalia, city on banks of Hydaspes built by Alexander in memory of Bucephalus, VII. 398
- Bulla, its meaning and use, I. 152, VIII. 38
- Busiris, sacrificed by Hercules, I. 22
- Butas, Cato the Younger's chief agent in public matters, VIII. 404; wrote in elegiac verse explanations of Roman customs, I. 158
- Butes, Persian general, sets fire to Eton in Thrace, killing himself, II. 422
- Buthrotum, town in Epirus, VI. 182
- Byllis, town in Illyria, VI. 182
- Byzantium, III. 56, 288; freed of Pausanias by the allies, II. 420 f.; Athenians capture Persians there, 430; revolts from Athens, retaken by Alcibiades, IV. 88 f.; attacked by Philip, saved by Athenians, VII. 40, 244, VIII. 174; governed by Cato, VII. 170, VIII. 318; VII. 142
- Cabeiri, gods in Samothrace, v. 520
- Cabira, II. 512; Mithridates makes stand there, 514; taken by Lucullus, 524
- Cadmeia (1), sister of Neoptolemus, IX. 358
- Cadmeia (2), citadel, I. 66; seized by Phoebeidas in time of peace, v. 64; 382; VII. 254
- Cadmus, given cow as guide by Apollo, IV. 382
- Cadusians, attacked by Artaxerxes, XI. 184
- Caecias, a Spanish wind from north, VIII. 44
- Caecilia (1), daughter of Metellus, the pontifex maximus, wife of Sulla, IV. 342
- Caecilia (2), mother of Lucullus, II. 470
- Caecilius, wished to denounce Verres, VII. 98
- Caecilius (Calactinus), made comparison of Demosthenes and Cicero, VII. 6
- Caecilius Metellus, see "Metellus, Caecilius."
- Caccina, Vitellius' general, occupying Alps, XI. 286; repulsed from Placentia, 290; defeated before Cremona, 292; defeats Otho's men, 300 f.
- Caecus, Roman name, IV. 144
- Caedicius, M., reports hearing supernatural voice, II. 126, 168
- Caelius, orator, VII. 174; defended by Cicero, 212
- Caeninenses, Sabine people, defeated and settled at Rome by Romulus, I. 136
- Caenum, fortress of Mithridates, v. 212
- Caepio (Servilius), engaged to Julia; losing her, promised Pompey's daughter, v. 238, VII. 474
- Caepio, Q. Servilius (1), defeated by

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Cimbri, II. 140, 560, VIII. 6, IX. 504, 512
- Caepio, Q. Servilius (2), beloved brother of Cato the Younger, VIII. 236, 238, 244; military tribune in Servile war, 252; died at Aenus in Thrace, 258
- Caesar, exchanges words with Sulla, IV. 334
- Caesar, C. Julius (1) in danger from Sulla, VII. 442; captured by pirates, 444; studies under Apollonius at Rhodes, 446; wins popularity as an advocate at Rome, 448; elected military tribune, 450; went to Spain as quaestor under Vetulus, a praetor, 452; revives party of Marius, 454; elected pontifex maximus, 456; suspected of being implicated in Catiline's conspiracy, 458; divorces Pompeia, 462 f.; receives Spain as province, has to borrow from Crassus, 466 f.; elected consul, 472; gets many popular laws passed in spite of opposition of his colleague Bibulus, 472 f.; betroths his daughter Julia to Pompey, 474; subdues Gaul, 476 f.; meeting Pompey, Crassus and others at Luca, arranges to have his command in Gaul continued for five more years, 494; repels German invasion, and invades Germany, 496 f.; invades Britain, 498; loses by death his daughter Julia, Pompey's wife, 500; suppresses revolt of Gaul, 502 f.; takes Alesia, 506 f.
- Becomes estranged from Pompey, 510; is not allowed to stand for consulship in his absence, 512 f.; invades Italy, 520 f.; is deserted by Labienus, 526; enters Rome, 528; overcomes Afranius and Varro, Pompey's legates in Spain, 530; crosses to Greece, 532 f.; defeated by Pompey, 536; defeats Pompey at Pharsalus, 546 f.; reaches Alexandria just after Pompey's death, 554; wages war in Egypt, 556 f.; defeats Pharnaces at Zela, 560; returns to Rome, 562; defeats Pompeians at Thapsus, 566; celebrates an Egyptian, a Pontic, and an African triumph, 570; defeats Pompey's sons at Munda, 572; appointed dictator for life, 574; by clemency tries to disarm opposition, 574 f.; plants colonies of veterans at Carthage and Corinth, 576; plans new enterprises, 576 f.; adjusts calendar, 578; arouses hatred by desire to be king, 580 f.; refuses diadem offered by Antony, 584; is conspired against by Brutus, Cassius, and others, 586 f.; assassinated, 596; his body burned in forum, 602; 56 years old at death, 604
- See also* III. 334, 354, 356, 360, 390, 434, V. 178, 232, 236, 238, 240, 248, 264, 268, 272, 276 f., 280, 284, 292, 324, VI. 132, 134, 136, 138 f., 150, 162, 168, 180, VII. 132 f., 138, 146, 152, 156, 158, 176, 178 f., 186, 188, 194, 196, VIII. 288, 296 f., 310 f., 316, 332, 346, 354, 358 f., 362, 378, 408, IX. 148, 150 f., 160 f., 170
- His letters mentioned, VII. 556, 562
- His speeches and poems, VII. 444
- Anti-Cato, VII. 182, 446, 568, VIII. 324, 362, 366
- Commentaries, VII. 496
- Unnamed works, V. 280, 296, 524
- Sayings: III. 332, V. 272, VI. 138, 140, 142, VII. 182, 456, 466, 468, 476, 486, 522, 530, 534, 538, 548, 552, 566, 568, 588, 590, 598
- Caesar, C. Julius (2), his relations with Nymphidia, XI. 224; puts T. Vinius in prison, 228; son of Germanicus, killed, IX. 332. See also I. 140, 154
- Caesar, Claudius, punishes Vinius mildly for theft, XI. 228
- Caesar, Lucius (1), kinsman of the great Caesar, VIII. 396
- Caesar, Lucius (2), Antony's uncle, given up to Octavius, VII. 200, IX. 178; rescued by his sister, 180
- Caesarion, son of Caesar and Cleopatra, VII. 560, IX. 260, 300; executed by Octavius, 320
- Caieta, Cicero had lands there, VII. 204
- Caius, foster brother of Mithridates, V. 224

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- "Caius," name called out at sacrifice to Romulus, I. 184
- Calanus, gymnosophist, meets Alexander and Onesicritus, VII. 244, 408; has himself burned on funeral pyre, 416
- Callauria (1), has temple of Poseidon, v. 174, VII. 70, 76; scene of Demosthenes' death, VIII. 210
- Callauria (2), place in Sicily, VI. 336
- "Cale," Indian word of salutation, VII. 408
- Calendar, renaming and numbering of days of month by Solon, I. 474; adjusted by Numa, 366; adjusted by Caesar, VII. 578; II. 274
- Calends, Roman name for 1st day of month, XI. 252; of March, very nearly same as 1st of Anthesterion, IV. 370; VII. 84
- Calenus, took Megara, VI. 142; held 15 cohorts for Caesar at Athens and Megara, VII. 544
- Callaeci, in Spain, conquered by Caesar, VII. 468
- Callaeschrus, father of Critias, IV. 96
- Calliades, Athenian, defeated by Chalcidians in Thrace, III. 226
- Callias (1), the Torchbearer, steals gold at Marathon, II. 226; when prosecuted, helped by Aristides, his kinsman, II. 290; ambassador to Persian king, honoured by Athenians, 446
- Callias (2), the Rich, son of Hipponicus, III. 70; said to have married Elpinice, II. 414; said to have given Hipparete to Alcibiades as wife, IV. 20
- Callias (3), the Syracusan, said by Ctesibius to have given Demosthenes the rhetorical systems of Isocrates and Alcidamas, VII. 12
- Callibius, made harmost at Athens by Lysander, IV. 274
- Callicles, son of Arrhenides, VII. 62
- Callicles, money-lender at Athens, VIII. 162
- Callicrates (1), Spartan, slain at Plataea, II. 266
- Callicrates (2), with Ictinus architect of Parthenon, III. 40
- Callicrates (3), Syracusan, slain by Lamachus, III. 270
- Callicrates (4), descendant of Anticrates, contemporary of Plutarch, v. 98
- Callicratidas, succeeds Lysander in Asia, rebuffed by Cyrus, IV. 244; defeated in sea-fight at Arginusae, 248; I. 298, XI. 178
- Callidromus, hill at Thermopylae, II. 338
- Callimachus (1), rivalled Aristides for 2nd place at Plataea, II. 386
- Callimachus (2), prolongs defence of Amisus, II. 528; defender of Nisibis, taken by Lucullus, 578
- Callimachus (3), of Alexandria, cited, III. 246, IV. 444, VII. 378
- Callimedon, Athenian orator, joins party of Antipater, VII. 66; opposes Phocion, VIII. 206; flees from Athens, 220; condemned in absentia by Athenians, 228
- "Callinicus," a cognomen or epithet, IV. 142, IX. 464
- Calliphon, exile, begs Sulla to spare Athens, IV. 370
- Callipides, tragic actor, rebuffed by Agesilaus, v. 58; IV. 92
- Callippus, host of Dion in Athens, VI. 32; accompanies Dion to Sicily, 60, 118; slew Dion, and got possession of Syracuse, executed by Leptines and Polysperchon, III. 260, VI. 114, 286, 462
- Callisthenes (1), Athenian orator, his surrender demanded by Alexander, VII. 56
- Callisthenes (2), philosopher, relative of Aristotle; his experience with Alexander, VII. 252 f., IV. 440; cited, II. 138, 296, 440, 444, v. 46, 380, VII. 302, 322
- Callisthenes (3), freedman of Lucullus, II. 608
- Callistratus (1), orator, gave Demosthenes first notion of becoming orator, VII. 10; 32
- Callistratus (2), Mithridates' private secretary, II. 522
- Callistus, Caligula's freedman, Nymphidia's father, XI. 224
- Calpurnia, Piso's daughter, J. Caesar's wife, v. 238, VII. 474; 590; put most of Caesar's treasure in charge of Antony, IX. 170
- Calpurnii, descended from Calpus, I. 376

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Calpurnius Lanarius, murdered Julius Salinator, VIII. 18
- Calpurnius Piso, see "Piso, Calpurnius."
- Calpus, son of Numa, ancestor of Calpurnii, I. 376
- Calvinus, Gnaeus Domitius, consul, v. 256; commanded centre for Caesar at Pharsalus, v. 294, VII. 546; defeated by Pharnaces, flees from Pontus, 560
- Calvinus, Lucius (should be Gnaeus Domitius), v. 294
- Calvisius (Statianus, C.), companion of Octavianus, accuses Antony for treatment of Cleopatra, IX. 270
- Calydonia, ravaged by Aratus, XI. 34
- Calydonian boar, slain by Meleager and Theseus, I. 66
- Camarinaeans, join Dion, VI. 58
- Cambyzes, said to have lost 50,000 men in desert sand, VII. 302
- Camels, first seen by Romans at battle of Rhyndacus according to Sallust, II. 504
- Camera, people of, attack Romans, are defeated; made colony, I. 166
- Camernum, 1000 of its men made citizens by Marius for bravery, IX. 540
- "Camillus," meaning of word and relation to Greek, I. 330, IX. 464
- Camillus, Furius, the offices he held, II. 94; defeats Falerians and Capenates, 98; appointed dictator, defeats Faliscans and Capenates, 104; takes Veii, 106; celebrates splendid triumph, arouses opposition, 110; besieges Falerii, 116 f.; arouses opposition by opposing law for division of city, goes into exile, 122; is fined 15,000 asses in absentia, 124; leading Ardeans, defeats band of Gauls, 152; appointed dictator to drive out Gauls, 156; routs the Gauls with slaughter, 166
- Opposes moving citizens to Veii, 170; appointed dictator for war against Aequians, Volscians, and Latins, 176; utterly defeats Latins and Volscians, 180; captures city of Aequians, brings Volscians to terms, 182; recaptures Sutrium, 184; opposed by Marcus Manlius, made military tribune, 186; helps in conviction of Manlius, 188; with Lucius Furius leads an army against Praenestines and Volscians, defeats them, 190 f.; cows the Tusculans, 192 f.; made dictator fifth time to fight Gauls, 198; defeats the Gauls, 200 f.; captures Velitrae, 202; dies of plague, 206. See also I. 184, III. 124
- His words quoted, II. 106, 118
- Campania, III. 134; its cities subdued by Fabius Maximus, 200; VII. 94; 146
- Campanians, desert Timocrates and return home, VI. 53
- Campi Philippi, scene of battle where Brutus and Cassius were defeated, VI. 210
- Campus Martius, II. 196, v. 254, VII. 116
- Camulatus, soldier, deserts Brutus, VI. 236^m
- Camurius, soldier, said to have slain Galba, XI. 266
- Canethus, father of Sciron, I. 56
- Canicius, C., commands part of slaves, defeated by Crassus, III. 346
- Canidius (1), tribune of people, proposes that Pompey reconcile Ptolemy to people of Alexandria, v. 244; Cato's friend, sent to Cyprus in advance, VIII. 320, 322, 324; sent by Cato to take charge of Ptolemy's treasures, and then discarded, VI. 130
- Canidius (2), Antony's general, conquered Armenia, and kings of Iberians and Albanians, IX. 214; 234; 264; leads Antony's land forces at Actium, IX. 280, 284; ordered by Antony to retire with army through Macedonia into Asia, 290; deserts his army by night, 292; 300
- Caninius Revillius, consul for one day, VII. 576
- Cannae, battle of, III. 146, 160, v. 456, 500
- Canobic shore, I. 476
- Canobic mouth of Nile, VII. 293
- Canopus, city in Egypt, IX. 338, X. 132
- Cantharus, harbour of, near Athens, VIII. 208

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Canuleia, vestal appointed by Numa, I. 340
- Canus, famous fluter, XI. 238
- Canusium, refuge of Roman fugitives from Cannae, V. 456; scene of battle between Marcellus and Hannibal, 506
- Canutius, Greek actor, VI. 172
- Capaneus, character in play of Euripides, V. 346
- Capenates, defeated by Camillus, II. 98, 104, 130
- Caphis, Phocian, sent by Sulla to get treasures of Delphi, IV. 362; leads Hortensius and army safely to Sulla, 374
- Caphisias (1), Aratus' friend, XI. 12 f.
- Caphisias (2), famous fluter, IX. 366
- Caphyae, seized by Aratus, X. 58; scene of Aratus' defeat by Aetolians, XI. 108
- Capito, Fonteius, sent to bring Cleopatra to Syria, IX. 216
- Capitol, fortress of early Rome, guarded by Tarpeius, betrayed to Sabines by Tarpeia, I. 140; 170; fortified by Romans against Gauls, 350, II. 142, III. 168; I. 536; received from Tarentum colossal statue of Heracles, had equestrian statue of Fabius Maximus in bronze, III. 184; burned in Sulla's time, IV. 412
- Capitoline Hill, called Tarpeius for a time, I. 144, 328; steepest at Carmental gate, II. 156; scaled by Gauls, but saved by sacred geese, 160
- Capitolinus (C. Scantilius), colleague of Marcellus in aedileship, V. 438
- Capitolinus, Q., made dictator, casts Manlius into prison, II. 186
- Cappadocia, subdued by Alexander, VII. 272; assigned to Eumenes, VIII. 84; governed by Eumenes, 86; visited by Marius, IX. 548; Sulla sent there, IV. 334; conquered by Mithridates, 358; 398; II. 486; VIII. 66; ravaged by Tigranes, II. 586; robbed and plundered by Lucullus, III. 370; added to Pompey's sway by Manilian law, V. 190; triumphed over by Pompey, V. 230, VII. 172; occupied by Pharnaces, 560; ruled by Archelaus, IX. 276
- Cappadocians, II. 514; some transplanted to Tigranocerta, 552
- "Caprarius," derived from "capra," I. 532
- Capratine Nones, see "Nones Capratine."
- Capua, went over to Hannibal, III. 168; reduced by Fulvius and Appius, 200; X. 214; Norbanus shut up there by Sulla, IV. 412
- "Carabus," surname of Callimedes, VIII. 206
- Caranus, ancestor of Alexander the Great, VII. 224
- Carbo, Gnaeus Papirius (1), defeated by Cimbric and Teutones, IX. 504
- Carbo, Gnaeus Papirius (2), persecutes Sulla's supporters in latter's absence, IV. 396; succeeds Cinna, V. 126; unsuccessfully opposes Sulla's advance on Rome, VIII. 14; his cavalry routed by Pompey at river Arsis, V. 130; abandons his own army and sails off to Libya, IV. 418; executed by Pompey, V. 136; consul thrice, 138; VI. 190; his remark re Sulla, IV. 414
- "Carcer," name of a Roman prison, VI. 450
- Cardia, home of Eumenes as a boy, VIII. 178
- Caria, received colony brought by Ioxus and Ornytus, I. 18; has panthers, VII. 174; money to pay fleet levied from it by Alcibiades, IV. 102; touched by Aratus, XI. 26
- Carlians, called cocks by Persians, XI. 148
- Carinas, general of Carbo's faction, advances against Pompey, V. 128
- Carmania, traversed by Alexander in 7 days, VII. 412
- Carmenta, who or what she was, I. 156
- Carmental gate, where Capitoline is steepest, II. 156
- Carmentalia, feast for mothers; why so called, I. 156
- Carneades, founder of New Academy, II. 606, VII. 88; sent to Rome as ambassador, attracts Roman youth by his eloquence, II. 368

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Carneius, Syracusan month, same as Athenian Metageitnion, III. 304
- Carnuntini (Carnutes) with Arverni lead revolt against Caesar, VII. 504
- Carrhae, near scene of Crassus' defeat, III. 394, 402-403
- Carthage, III. 62, IV. 44; danger to Syracuse, VI. 14; nearly taken by Agathocles, IX. 388; III. 190; destroyed by Scipio the Younger, II. 380, 596, V. 484, VI. 414, X. 246; colony founded there by C. Gracchus, 218; II. 578; V. 140; restored as colony by Caesar, VII. 576
- Carthage, New, refuge of Sertorius, VIII. 18
- Carthaginians, III. 250, VI. 280; come to Sicily with large armament, 286 f., 302; admitted to Syracuse by Hicetas, 302; assemble great force to invade Sicily, 316; defeated by Timoleon at river Crimessus, II. 138, VI. 320-322, 324, 330; II. 140; made peace with Timoleon, VI. 340; refused peace by Pyrrhus unless they abandoned Sicily, IX. 420, 422; attack Pyrrhus in the strait, 424; at war with Masinissa, II. 380; III. 162; driven from Spain by Scipio, 190
- Carvilius, Spurius, first in Rome to divorce wife, I. 198, 394
- Caryatides, dancing, on ring of Clearchus, XI. 168
- Carystus, city in Euboea, VI. 178
- Casca, P., one of Caesar's murderers, VI. 156, 162, VII. 596; with Brutus at Philippi, VI. 228
- Casilinum, city and district on border of Campania, III. 134
- Casinum, town in Latium, III. 134
- Caspian sea, Albanians lived by it, II. 554; III. 428; receives river Cyrrnus, V. 206 f.; VII. 352
- Cassander, brother of Pleistarchus and Phila, IX. 76 f.; father of Philip, 86; husband of Thessalonice, father of Antipater and Alexander, 360
- Cassander, Antipater's son offends Alexander, VII. 428 f.; appointed chiliarch by Antipater before dying; becoming rebellious, sends Nicanor to replace Menyllus in Athens, VIII. 216; put Demades and his son to death, 214, VII. 78; quarrels with Polysperchon after death of Alexander, VIII. 114, 216; enemy of Aeacides, offers 200 talents for infant Pyrrhus, IX. 350; 18; 22; VII. 32; IX. 40; driven out of Attica by Demetrius, 52; 90
- Cassandra, Priam's daughter, X. 20
- Cassandraia, VII. 56; thither fled Demetrius after loss of Macedonia, IX. 112
- Cassius, C. Longinus (1), governor of Cisalpine Gaul, defeated by Spartacus, III. 340
- Cassius, C. Longinus (2), of school of Epicurus, VI. 206; husband of Junia, Brutus' sister, rival of Brutus for office of city praetor, 140, VII. 574, 586 f.; with Crassus on Parthian expedition, III. 370, 374, 380, 384, 402, 406, 408, VI. 140; plans Caesar's murder, 126, 136, 140, 142 f., 156; murders Caesar, V. 154, VI. 160, VII. 188, 596, IX. 164; 168, VI. 168; prosecuted by M. Agrippa for murder of Caesar and condemned, 184; meets Brutus at Smyrna, 186; takes Rhodes, 192; 198; quarrels with Brutus at Sardis, 200, 210; 212; defeated at Philippi, slays himself, 224, VII. 604, IX. 182 f.
- Quoted: VI. 144, 146, 192, 206, 214, 224
- Cassius, Q. Longinus, with Antony flees to Caesar, IX. 150
- Cassius Scaeva, soldier of Caesar's at battle of Dyrrhachium, VII. 480
- Castor, hymn played to him as Lacedaemonians marched to battle, I. 274; like Pollux in sculpture, and yet different, X. 146. See also "Dioscuri" and "Tyndaridae."
- Castulo, city of the Celtiberians, VIII. 6
- Castus, commands part of slaves, defeated by Crassus, III. 346
- Catana, in Sicily, III. 162, 264, 266, IV. 52, V. 520, VI. 122, 290, 304, 342
- Cataonia, district in Cappadocia, IX. 120
- Catiline, Lucius, his character and acts, defeated for consulship, VII. 106 f., IV. 430; his conspiracy.

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- VII. 456 f., VIII. 286 f.; Crassus and Caesar inculpated by Cicero, III. 352; defeated and slain by Antonius, VII. 136. See also VI. 134 f., VII. 116, 152
- "Cato," a 3rd Roman name, IX. 464
- "Cato," work written by Cicero, VII. 446, 568
- Cato, grandfather of Cato the Elder, II. 302
- Cato, M. Porcius (1), father of Cato the Elder, II. 302
- Cato, M. Porcius (2), the Elder, lineage, appearance, character, II. 302 f.; served under Fabius Maximus at capture of Tarentum, 308; enters public life at Rome, 310; goes to Africa as Scipio's quaestor, objects to his extravagance, 310 f.; his manner of life, 312 f.; his oratory, 320 f.; elected consul with Valerius Flaccus, wins successes in Hither Spain, 330 f.; celebrates triumph, 334; serves under M'. Acilius against Antiochus the Great, 334; busy in prosecutions, 342 f.; his activity as censor, 346 f.; erected Basilica Porcia, 356; a good family man, 360 f.; his treatment of his slaves, 314 f., 364 f.; goes into business, 366 f.; opposes Greek learning, 368 f.; marries again late in life, 374; composed speeches, histories, and a book on farming, 378; brought about destruction of Carthage, 380 f.; died, leaving son Salonius, 384
- See also* VIII. 236, 246, X. 372 f.
- His writings cited: II. 302, 304, 308, 314, 318, 330, 342, 352, 358, 360, 364, 366, 370; book of recipes, 372, 376; speeches, histories, work on farming, 378
- Sayings: II. 306, IV. 132; II. 322-328; 332; 344; 358; 374; 376; 382; 384; V. 340
- Cato, M. Porcius (3), Licinianus, son of Cato the Elder, fought brilliantly at Pydna, married Tertia, daughter of Aemilius Paulus, II. 362 f., 374, VI. 366, 410; died, II. 374, 376
- Cato, M. Porcius (4), Salonius (Salonianus), son of Cato the Elder and Salonius, II. 376; father of Marcus, died in praetorship, 384
- Cato, M. Porcius (5), grandson of Cato the Elder, II. 384
- Cato, M. Porcius (6), son of Salonius, became consul, grandfather of Cato the philosopher, II. 384
- Cato, M. Porcius (7), the Younger, his lineage and character as a boy, VIII. 236-244; studies Stoic philosophy with Antipater the Tyrian, 244; his first speech in the forum, 246; his manner of life, 248 f.; marries Atilia, daughter of Serranus, 250; takes part in Servile war, 252; goes to Macedonia as military tribune, 254; wins Athenodorus the Stoic, 256; makes tour of Asia, 260 f.; serves as quaestor, 268-278; opposes Clodius, 278; prosecutes Murena for bribery, 284; advocates death penalty for Catilinarian conspirators, 286 f.; unfortunate with women of his household, 290 f.; opposes Metellus and Pompey, 296 f.; rejects marriage alliance with Pompey, 306 f.; opposes Pompey and Caesar, 310 f.; is sent to Cyprus and court of Ptolemy, 318 f.; returns successful, 326 f.
- Opposes Cicero's proposal to make invalid acts of Clodius as tribune, 330; supports Lucius Domitius for consul against Pompey and Crassus, 332; fails to be elected praetor, 336; opposes Crassus and Pompey, 338; is elected praetor, 340; approves of Pompey being made sole consul, 350; fails to be elected consul, 356; proposes that Caesar be surrendered to the Germans, 358; joins Pompey at Dyrrhachium, is sent to Asia, 364; arouses Pompey's soldiers by his speech, 368; joins Sextus Pompeius in Libya, 370; meets Juba, 372; strengthens Utica for defence, 376; receives news of Thapsus, 378; helps fugitives leave Utica, 394; refuses to ask mercy of Caesar, 396; commits suicide, 406
- See also* II. 384, 606, 608, III. 334, 354, 358, 426, 430, 434, V. 218, 228, 236, 238, 240, 250, 256,

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- 264, 272, 274, 282, 288, VI. 128, 130, 134, VII. 132 f., 138, 168, 170, 176, 180, 212, 458, 460, 472, 474, 496, 512, 540, 562, 568, VIII. 150 f., IX. 150
 Sayings: II. 600, VIII. 246, 254, 262, 264, 290, 308, 318, 324, 342, 346, 354, 358, 360, 392, 394, 396, 398, 400 f.
- Cato, M. Porcius (8), son of Cato the Younger, pardoned by Caesar, slain at Philippi, VIII. 408 f., VI. 236 f.
- Catulus, Q. Lutatius (1), consul with Marius in latter's 4th consulship, IX. 500 f.; gives important tasks to Sulla, IV. 332; forced to retreat by Cimbri, IX. 522 f.; joined by Marius, 526; led centre at Vercellae, 530; wrote of Vercellae, 534 f.; triumphs with Marius, 538; commits suicide, 590
- Catulus, Q. Lutatius (2), elected consul with Lepidus, IV. 434, V. 150 f.; won war against Lepidus according to Lucullus, 196; consecrated 2nd temple of Jupiter Capitolinus, I. 540; V. 156; opposes Gabinian law, 178; opposes Manilian law, 192; when censor reproved by Cato, VIII. 270; VII. 132; 456; attacks Caesar's proposal re Catilinarian conspirators, 458; ancestor of S. Galba, XI. 210; quoted, VII. 156, 454. See also III. 354
- "Catulus," illustrious Roman name, VII. 82
- "Catus," means wise and prudent, II. 302
- Caucasus mountains, II. 512, v. 204, 208
- Caulonia, city in Italy, III. 182, VI. 56
- Caunians, how some escaped pirates, III. 308; in army of Artaxerxes when Cyrus was slain, XI. 150, 154, 158
- Caunus, city in Caria, IX. 124
- Cebalinus, reveals plot of Limnus to Alexander, VII. 364
- Cecrops, I. 196
- Celaenae, in Phrygia, VIII. 102, IX. 16
- "Celer," why surname of a Metellus, I. 118, IV. 142
- Celer, companion of Romulus, slew Remus according to one account, I. 116
- Celer, Q. Caecilius Metellus, how he got surname "Celer," I. 118, IV. 142; put in charge of outside affairs by Cicero during trouble with Catiline, VII. 118; husband of Clodia, 154
- Celeres, origin of name, I. 116; attendants of Romulus, 170; dis-banded by Numa, 328
- Celsus, Clodius, of Antioch, friend of Nymphidius, XI. 232
- Celsus, Marius, faithful to Galba, spared by Otho, XI. 268; 276; in command of part of Otho's forces, 288; outgenerals Caecina at battle of Cremona, 292, 294, 298, 304 f., 306 f.
- Celtiberians, neighbours of Gauls, II. 126; receive 200 talents to become Cato the Elder's allies, II. 330; warred on by Scipio Africanus, IX. 468; those in Castulo defeated by Sertorius, VIII. 8
- Celtorians, neighbours of Gauls, II. 126
- Cenchreae, harbour-town of Corinth, where Thebans defeat Athenians, v. 398; captured by Demetrius, IX. 54, XI. 52; 64; 102
- Censor, his powers and duties, II. 346, VI. 454; Camillus censor, II. 96; Cato the Elder and Valerius Flaccus, 310, 350; Crassus and Lutatius Catulus, III. 352; Censorinus twice, IV. 118; Gellius and Lentulus, v. 168; Aemilius Paulus and Marcius Philippus, VI. 454; Lutatius Catulus, VIII. 270; Ti. Gracchus the Elder, x. 144; Flaminius and M. Claudius Mer-cellus, 372; Cato the Elder, 374
- Censorinus (1), twice censor, introduced law forbidding this, IV. 118
- Censorinus (2), C. Marcius, brings suit against Sulla for bribery, IV. 336
- Censorinus (3), accompanies Crassus against Parthians, III. 390, 396
- Censorinus (4), L. Marcius, left in charge of Greece by Antony, IX. 186

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Census, at Athens, I. 450, III. 108; at Rome, VI. 454, VII. 570
- Centaurs, begotten of cloud by Ixion, X. 2; at war with Lapithae, I. 66 f., 190
- Ceos, island, II. 8; has small part called Iulis, VII. 2; sends settlers to Gela, VI. 344
- Cephalo, friend of Aratus, XI. 118 f.
- Cephalus, summoned from Corinth by Timoleon to establish civil polity of Syracuse, VI. 320
- Cephisodorus, friend of Pelopidas, slain by Leontidas, v. 368
- Cephisodotus, sculptor, related to Phocion, VIII. 188
- Cephisus river, receives river Assus, IV. 378, 382, 392, VII. 44, 244
- Ceramicus, II. 416, IV. 368, 370, VIII. 224.
- Ceraunian mountains, VIII. 210
- Cerberus, Aidoneus' dog, killed Peirithoüs, I. 72; delivered to Heracles by Cora, III. 210
- Cercina, island off Africa, VI. 52, IX. 578
- Cercyon, Arcadian, slain by Theseus, I. 22, 66
- Cereatae, see "Cirrhaeton."
- Ceres, I. 162; festival of, III. 170
- Ceressus, where Thebans defeated Lattamyas and Thessalians, II. 138
- Cethegus, Cornelius (1), deposed from priesthood, v. 446
- Cethegus, Cornelius (2), companion of younger Marius, IX. 574; in control of Rome, induced to help Lucullus get province of Cilicia, II. 486 f.; takes part in conspiracy of Catiline, VII. 120, 124, 126, 458, VIII. 286; executed, VII. 134 f., 158
- Chabrias, Athenian, father of Ctesippus, VII. 36; his character; won sea-fight off Naxos, II. 138, VIII. 156-160; commands fleet under Tachos the Egyptian, v. 104
- Chaeron (1), son of Thuro, founded Chaeroneia, IV. 382
- Chaeron (2), of Megalopolis, sent to Delphi by Philip of Macedon, VII. 228
- Chaerondas, archonship of, VII. 58
- Chaeroneia, founded by Chaeron, IV. 382; settled by people from Thessaly led by Peripolitas, II. 404; I. 64; Plutarch's native town, VII. 44; Philip defeats Greeks there, II. 138, v. 384, VII. 46 f., 244; Aetolians defeat Boeotians, XI. 34; Brutlius Sura repulses Archelaüs, IV. 360; 378; 382; Sulla defeats Mithridates' generals, II. 480, 504, IV. 382 f.; II. 406
- Chaeroneians, fight for Sulla at battle of Chaeroneia, IV. 384
- Chalcaspides, in Mithridates' army, IV. 378. See also "Bronze-shields."
- Chalcedon, attacked by Alcibiades, IV. 84 f.; handed over to Athens by Pharnabazus, 88; II. 492, 496; Cotta besieged there, 494
- Chalcidians, I. 298; their Hippobotae banished by Pericles, III. 66; defeat Calliades and Xenophon, Athenian generals in Thrace, 226; X. 366 f.
- Chalcidice, VII. 20
- Chalcis, city in Euboea, IV. 388, 390, 302, 354, X. 354, 366 f.
- Chalcedon, Elphenor's father, I. 80; chapel of, in Athens, 62
- Chaldaeans, II. 510; subdued by Lucullus, 526; IX. 582; XI. 256
- Χαλκίδαιος, temple of Athena at Sparta, I. 218, X. 26, 36
- Chalkous, an Athenian thief, VII. 28
- Chameleon, cannot turn white, IV. 62
- Chaonians, under command of Ptolemy, IX. 440
- Characitani, Spanish people, defeated by Sertorius, VIII. 42 f.
- Chares (1), Athenian, v. 344, VII. 214, VIII. 154; falls at Hellespont, 174; defeated Persians, XI. 34
- Chares (2), of Mitylené, cited, VII. 280, 294, 356, 380, 384, 418, VIII. 184
- Chares river, scene of battle between Aratus and Aristippus, XI. 62
- Charicles (1), mentioned by comic poet Telecleides, III. 220
- Charicles (2), son-in-law of Phocion, intimate with Harpalus, brought to trial, VIII. 192 f.; 220; condemned to death in absentia by Athenians, 228
- Chariclo, wife of Sciron, mother of Peleus and Telamon, I. 20

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Charidemus, VIII. 4; proposed for general at Athens after Chaeroneia, 178, 182, VII. 56
- Charilaüs, posthumous son of Polydectes, brother of Lycurgus, I. 210 f., X. 250, I. 218; concurred in measures of Lycurgus, X. 70; quoted, I. 266
- Charillus, see "Charilaüs."
- Charimenes, seer, joins plot to kill Aristomachus, tyrant of Argos, XI. 56
- Charinus, proposes decree against Megarians, III. 86
- Charmion, waiting-woman of Cleopatra, IX. 274, 326 f.
- Charmus, boy lover of Peisistratus, I. 406
- Charon (1), Theban, conspirator with Pelopidas, v. 354, 360 f., 366; elected boeotarch, 370; led Theban cavalry at Plataea, 400
- Charon (2), of Lampsacus, cited, II. 72
- Charonitae, what they were, IX. 170
- Charops, son of Machatas, X. 330
- Cheileos, Arcadian, helps Themistocles, II. 18
- Cheimarrus, see "Babyca."
- "Cheirons," see "Cratinus."
- Chelidonian isles, II. 440; western limit for Persian navy after Eurymedon, 444
- Chersonese, Thracian, conquered by Cimon and turned over to Athens, II. 446; received 1000 settlers from Pericles, III. 34, 58, VIII. 174; ravaged by Demetrius, X. 74; II. 482
- Chersonese, Syrian, Demetrius banished there, IX. 128, 132
- Chians, offer leadership to Aristides, II. 284, 440, IV. 26; revolt from Athens, 66
- Chilo, slave and school-teacher of Cato the Elder, II. 360
- Chilonis (1), daughter of Leotychides, wife of Cleonymus, IX. 434, 438
- Chilonis (2), daughter of Leonidas, wife of Cleombrotus, X. 36 f.
- Chios, Chabrias died there, VIII. 156; II. 478
- Chlidon, Theban, v. 358
- Choeac, month in Egyptian calendar, I. 122
- Choerilus, poet in retinue of Lysander, IV. 280 f.
- Cholargus, deme of Pericles, III. 6; of Xenocles, 40; of Hipparchus, 250
- Choregus, Themistocles won as c. with Phrynichus as poet, II. 16; Aristides victorious as, 212; kings of Cyprus act as, VII. 308
- Chorus, dithyrambic, VII. 308
- "Chreocopidae," name given Solon's friends for sharp practice, I. 446
- Chrysa, place at Athens, I. 62
- Chrysantes, character in Xenophon (Cyrop. IV. 1, 3), v. 528
- Chrysermus, father of a certain Ptolemy, X. 130
- Chrysippus, cited, XI. 2
- Chrysis, mistress of Demetrius, IX. 54
- Chrysogonus (1), Pythian victor, IV. 92
- Chrysogonus (2), freedman of Sulla, accuses Roscius of murder, VII. 86 f.
- Chthonian Earth, temple of, at Hermione, plundered by pirates, v. 174
- Cicer, Latin for chick-pea, VII. 82
- Cicero, how first bearer of name got it, VII. 82
- Cicero, M. Tullius (1), his race and name, VII. 82; studied until Sulla became master, 86; defended Roscius, heard Antiochus of Ascalon, 88 f.; studied oratory with Xenocles, Dionysius, Apollonius; philosophy with Poseidonius, 90 f.; weak in delivery at first, 92; quaestor in Sicily, 82, 94; prosecuted Verres, 98 f.; his wife and property, 100; courted by the great, elected praetor, 102; defends Manlius, 104
- Elected consul to oppose Catiline, 106; wins Antonius' support by giving him province of Macedonia, secures defeat of bill to appoint decemvirs, 110 f.; secures defeat of Catiline for consul, 114 f.; given by senate unlimited power to preserve state, 118, III. 354 f.; his life threatened by Marcius and Cethegus, he denounces Catiline in senate, and latter leaves city, VII. 120; has to deal with Lentulus

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

and other plotters in city, 122 f.; reveals to senate evidence against Lentulus and others, 126 f.; hears Silvanus, Caesar, Cato and others, speak in senate regarding punishment of conspirators, 130 f., 456 f., VIII. 290; has Lentulus and Cethegus executed, VII. 134, IX. 140; called father of his country, becomes vainglorious, II. 596, VII. 138 f.

Hated by Clodius and others, 150 f.; driven into exile, 156 f., II. 608, v. 234, 240, VIII. 318; with help of Pompey is recalled, VII. 168, v. 244; in attempting to annul acts of Clodius as tribune, is opposed by Cato, VII. 168, VIII. 330; defends Milo for killing Clodius, VII. 170; elected augur, given Cilicia as province, 172; on return attempts to reconcile Pompey and Caesar, 174, 518, v. 270; joins Pompey in Greece, VII. 176, v. 282; offered command of Pompey's fleet after Pharsalus, refuses, VII. 180, VIII. 370; received kindly by Caesar, VII. 182; retires to study philosophy and write; proposes honours for Caesar, 184, 574; plans writing history of Rome, divorces Terentia, 186; not informed of plot to murder Caesar, 188, VI. 148

After murder of Caesar, proposes amnesty in senate, VII. 190; fears Antony, 192; helps Octavius get support of senate and people, 194, IX. 172; rebuked by Brutus for supporting Octavius, VI. 174, VII. 196; has Antony driven out of city, and Octavius given power of praetor, 198, IX. 174; betrayed by Octavius and proscribed, VI. 186, VII. 200, IX. 178; slain, 180, VII. 206

See also v. 274, VI. 172, 184, VII. 82, 448, VIII. 310, 314, IX. 158

Letters cited:

Ad Att. (II. 1. 8), VIII. 150; (VII. 11), v. 280; (VIII. 7. 2), VII. 176

Ad Fam. (II. 10. 2 f. and 11. 2), VII. 174

To Gorgias, VII. 142

To Herodes, VII. 142

To Pelops of Byzantium, VII. 142

Unidentified letters, v. 226, VII. 140, 184

Other works cited:—

Acad. Prior. II. (Lucullus), II. 606; (II. 38. 119), VII. 140

Brutus (31. 121), VII. 140

Cato, VII. 446, 568

De Consulatu Suo, III. 352, VII. 460

De Divinatione (I. 26. 56), x. 198; (I. 46. 103), VI. 380

De Senectute (12. 42), II. 352, x. 374

In Catil. (I. 5. 10), VII. 120

In Pisonem (29. 72 f.), VII. 214

Philipp., VII. 206; (II. 22. 55), IX. 150, 158

Philosophical dialogues, VII. 184, 210

Pontius Glaucus, VII. 84

Pro Caelio (12. 28), VII. 212

Pro Milone, VII. 172

Pro Murena, VII. 170, 212, VIII. 284

Pro Plancio, VII. 94 f.

Sayings: II. 602, VII. 98 f., 104, 134, 140, 144 f., 156, 178 f., 450, 580, VIII. 248

Cicero, M. Tullius (2), son of the orator, joins Brutus' forces, VI. 178, VII. 198; defeats C. Antonius, VI. 182; chosen colleague in consulship by Octavianus, VII. 208

Cicero, Q. Tullius, brother of the orator, VII. 130, 166; attacked by Gauls, rescued by Caesar, 502; with his son proscribed and executed, 202

Cilicia, II. 84, IV. 252; allotted to Pleistarchus, Cassander's brother, IX. 76; occupied by Demetrius, 78; invaded by Seleucus, 120; governed by Octavius, who dies and is succeeded by Lucullus, II. 486 f., 544; taken from Tigranes by Lucullus, v. 202; 182; given Pompey by Manilian law, 190, 230; governed by Cicero, VII. 172; IX. 218; 276

Cilicians, join Sertorius, VIII. 18, 22

Cilician ships, defeated by Cimon, II. 462

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Cilles, Ptolemy's general, defeated by Demetrius, IX. 14
- Cimber, Tillius, petitions Caesar, VII. 596
- Cimbri, invade Italy, and destroy Caepio's army, II. 140, 560, VIII. 6, IX. 488; 496; 502; force Catulus to retreat, 526; defeated by Marius at Vercellae, 530, II. 596, VII. 454
- Cimmerians, said to be same as Cimbri, IX. 490
- Cimon (1), grandfather of the famous Cimon, dubbed Coalemus, II. 412
- Cimon (2), compared with Lucullus, II. 410; his family and character, 412 f.; his appearance; serves with distinction against Persians, 418 f., 282; takes command of allies, captures Eion from Persians, 422; seized Scyros, found Theseus' bones, 426 f., I. 84: very generous to citizens, II. 432 f.; incorruptible, popular with allies, 436 f.; cleared Asia of Persian arms from Ionia to Pamphylia, 438 f.; defeats Persians at Eurymedon, 440 f.; makes Persia accept humiliating peace, 444
- Beautifies Athens, 446; acquitted on charge of being bribed by Alexander, King of Macedonia, 448, III. 30; popular with Sparta, II. 452, 56; ostracized for helping Sparta, 456, III. 26; recalled, 28, II. 458; sails against Egypt and Cyprus, 460 f.; dies besieging Oitium, 464, III. 32
- See also* II. 14, 66, 84, 244, 292, 316, III. 14, 18, 26, 82, 198, 204, VII. 32.
- Sayings: II. 436, 452, 456
- Cimonian funeral monuments, II. 466
- Cineas (1), father of Thallus, VIII. 172
- Cineas (2), Thessalian, pupil of Demosthenes; urges Pyrrhus not to go to aid of Tarentum, IX. 384; sent to Tarentum with 3000 soldiers, 388, 392; sent by Pyrrhus on embassy to Rome, 402; 406; 408; sent on second embassy to Rome, 412; sent ahead to Sicily, 418
- Cingonius Varro, see "Varro, Cingonius."
- Cinna, L. Cornelius (1), father of Cornelia, once supreme at Rome, VII. 122, 442; bribes L. Terentius to slay Pompey, V. 122, 124; permitted by Sulla to be elected consul, IV. 356; supports Marius, VIII. 10; defeated by Octavius in the forum, 12, IX. 578; joined by Marius, 580; enters Rome with bodyguard, 584; drives Crassus to Spain, III. 322; assassinated Octavius, IV. 364; 396; IX. 586; has Bardyaei slain, 590, VI. 190; slain by centurion, V. 126, VIII. 12 f., III. 326
- Cinna, L. Cornelius (2), cowed when he starts to denounce Caesar, VI. 166, 170, VII. 602; gives Brutus 500 horsemen, VI. 180
- Cinna, poet, friend of Caesar, killed in mistake by mob, VI. 170, VII. 602
- Circe, mother of Romanus by Odysseus, I. 92
- Circeii, Roman colony, surrenders to Coriolanus, IV. 184, IX. 562
- Circeium, promontory of Latium, VII. 202, 578
- Circus Maximus, has altar of god Consus hid underground, I. 128, 154
- Circus Flaminius, II. 592, V. 510, X. 322
- Cirrha, I. 302; outraged oracle of Delphi, 428
- Cirrhaeton (Cereatae?), village in territory of Arpinum, IX. 468
- Cissus, announces absconding of Harpalus to Alexander, VII. 346
- Cissusa, spring where infant Dionysus bathed, IV. 312
- Cithaeron, mountain, had cave of Sphragitic nymphs, II. 246, 248, 252, IV. 310, VII. 56
- Cithaeronian Hera, II. 246
- Citiaeans, VII. 322
- Citium, besieged by Cimon who died there, II. 464, 466, X. 52
- Cius, revenue of, offered Phocion by Alexander, VIII. 186
- Clarius, river in Cyprus, I. 476
- Claros, sanctuary of, V. 174
- Clastidium, battle of, in which Marcellus routs Gaesatae, V. 448

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Claudia, daughter of Appius Claudius, wife of Ti. Gracchus, X. 150
- Claudian family, descended from Appius Claudius, a Sabine, I. 558
- "Claudius," surname from physical characteristic, IV. 144
- Claudius, Appius, see "Appius Claudius."
- Claudius, M., father of M. Claudius Marcellus, V. 436
- Claudius Caesar (Ti. Claudius Drusus Nero Germanicus), son of Drusus and Antonia, became emperor, married Agrippina and adopted her son L. Domitius, giving him name Nero Germanicus, IX. 332, XI. 228, 252
- Claudius Marcellus, see "Marcellus, Claudius."
- Clausus, Appius, see "Appius Claudius."
- Clazomenae, III. 254, IV. 80
- Cleaenetus, Cleomedon's son, disgraced himself, IX. 56
- Cleander, of Mantinea, reared Philopoemen, X. 256
- Cleandridas, father of Gylippus, III. 66; bribed by Pericles, 64
- Cleanthes (1), cited, IV. 14
- Cleanthes (2), freedman and physician of Cato the Younger, VIII. 404
- Clearchus (1), Macedonian, sent on embassy to Thebes, VII. 42
- Clearchus (2), ordered by Spartans to help Cyrus, XI. 138; fought at Cunaxa, 142 f.; seized and executed by Artaxerxes, 166 f.
- Cleidemus, cited, I. 38, 62, II. 30, 272
- Cleinias (1), friend of Solon, I. 444
- Cleinias (2), father of Alcibiades, fought at Artemisium, slain at Coronae, IV. 2, 60
- Cleinias (3), chief magistrate of Sicyon, father of Aratus, slain by Abantidas, XI. 4
- Cleisthenes, grandfather of Agariste, expelled Peisistratidae, established constitution, II. 214, 450, III. 6
- Cleitarchus, cited, II. 72, VII. 356
- Cleitomachus, teacher of Philo the Academic, VII. 86, 90
- Cleitro, woman of, wife of Cimon, II. 450
- Cleitोरians, outwitted by Sōis, I. 208
- Cleitus (1), saves Alexander's life at battle of Granicus, VII. 266; murdered by Alexander, 258, 368-374
- Cleitus (2), brings Phocion and his party to Athens for trial, VIII. 224
- Cleitus (3), Brutus' servant, refuses to slay him, VI. 242
- Clemency, temple of, decreed, VII. 574
- Cleobis, named by Solon as happy man, I. 480
- Cleocritus, Corinthian, at battle of Salamis, II. 236; 274
- Cleodaeus, son of Hyllus, father of Lanassa, IX. 346
- Cleomantis, Lacedaemonian, soothsayer with Alexander, VII. 368
- Cleombrotus (1), younger brother of Agesipolis, succeeds to throne of Sparta, X. 8; sent into Boeotia with army, V. 66, 370; sent again, 78; defeated and slain at Leuctra, 78, 394, IV. 452, X. 48
- Cleombrotus (2), son-in-law of Leonidas, made king of Sparta, X. 26; with Agis replaces ephors, 28; pardoned by Leonidas, 36-40
- Cleomedes, of Astypaleia, disappeared like Romulus, I. 180
- Cleomedon, father of Cleaenetus, IX. 56
- Cleomenes (1), one of 5 Spartan arbitrators, I. 428
- Cleomenes (2), son of Cleombrotus, king of Sparta after his brother Agesipolis, had 2 sons, Acrotatus and Cleonymus, X. 8 f.
- Cleomenes (3), son of Leonidas, marries Agiatis, widow of Agis, X. 50; studies philosophy with Sphaerus of Borysthenis, succeeds Leonidas as king, 52; decides to change order of things, 54; sent by ephors to occupy precinct of Athena at Belbina, 56; defeats Aratus near Mt. Lycaeum, 58, XI. 82; defeats Aratus and Lydiades at Megalopolis, 82 f., X. 60 f.; has ephors slain, 66, XI. 86; restores constitution of Lycurgus, X. 68 f.
- Devastates land of Megalopolis, 74; his manner of life, 76 f.; takes Mantinea, defeats Achaeans at

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Dyme, 78 f., XI. 90; demands leadership of Achaeans, X. 80 f.; repeats demand at 2nd conference, is insulted by Aratus, 84 f., XI. 90; takes Argos, X. 88, XI. 90; joined by Cleonae, Phlius and other cities, X. 90; gets Corinth, 90, XI. 92 f.; repeats demand for leadership of Achaeans, promises Aratus yearly pension of 12 talents, 96, X. 92; checks Antigonus, 92; loses Corinth and Argos, 96, XI. 102; takes Megalopolis, X. 102, 264; defeated by Antigonus at Sellasia, goes to Egypt, 112-122, XI. 106; put in detention, X. 130; breaks out of prison, 134; slays himself; had been king of Sparta 16 years, 136
- His words quoted: X. 56, 72, 78, 104, 116, 120, 128, 134
- Cleomenes (4), Athenian orator, IV. 270
- Cleon (1), attacks Pericles, III. 96, 102; opposed by Nicias, 212; his methods, 214, 222, X. 148; his connection with Pylos affair, III. 230 f., 234; slain at Amphipolis, 236; aped later by Stratocles, IX. 26; quoted, III. 232
- Cleon (2) of Halicarnassus, his speech on changing the constitution of Sparta memorized by Lysander, IV. 302, 318, V. 54
- Cleon (3) of Sicyon, murdered, XI. 4
- Cleonae, taken by Corinth, II. 456; scene of Hypercides' execution, VII. 70, VIII. 210; brought into Achaean League by Aratus, XI. 64; goes over to Cleomenes, X. 90
- Cleonaeans, with Argives fight Corinthians, II. 268
- Cleonice, of Byzantium, slain by Pausanias, II. 420
- Cleonides, Ptolemy's general, offered bribe by Demetrius to free Sicyon and Corinth, IX. 34
- Cleonymus (1), son of Sphodrias, intercedes for his father, V. 70; slain at Leuctra, 80
- Cleonymus (2), the Agiad, father of Leonidas, did not become king of Sparta, X. 8 f.; scared from Thebes by Demetrius, IX. 96; invites Pyrrhus to attack Sparta, 404 f.
- Cleopater, Achaean commander of the Acrocorinthus, XI. 92
- Cleopatra (1), niece of Attalus, married to Philip, VII. 246, 250, 296; rebels against Antipater and takes Macedonia to rule, 414
- Cleopatra (2), by letter invited Leonatus to claim Macedonia, VIII. 86, 102
- Cleopatra (3), daughter of Mithridates, wife of Tigranes, II. 540
- Cleopatra (4), banished by Potheinus, recalled by Caesar, whom she captivates, VII. 556 f., IX. 160; summoned to Cilicia by Antony, captivates him, 190 f.; called to Syria by Antony, given Phoenicia, Coele Syria, Cyprus, large part of Cilicia, balsam-producing part of Judaea, part of Arabia Nabataea sloping toward outer sea, 216 f.; had two children by Antony, Alexander and Cleopatra, 218; sent back to Egypt by Antony, 220; draws Antony back to Alexandria, 258; declared Queen of Egypt, Cyprus, Libya, and Coele Syria by Antony, to share her throne with Caesarion, 260; prevails upon Antony to let her accompany him to war, 264; honoured by Athenians, 268; drives Titius and Plancus to Octavius, 268; given the libraries of Pergamum by Antony, 270; estranges Geminus, M. Silanus, and Dellius, friends of Antony, 272
- Induces Antony to wage war on sea, 276, 280; with 60 ships flees for Peloponnesus, followed by Antony, 288; sent ahead into Egypt from Paraetonium, 294; tries to escape with ships into Red Sea, 296; holds revel with Antony, tests different poisons, 300; asks of Octavius Egypt for her children, 302; promised reasonable treatment if she casts out Antony, 304; allows Antony to execute wife and children of Seleucus, has tomb erected near temple of Isis, 306; hauls dying Antony into her tomb, taken by Proculeius, 312 f.; holds parley with Octavius, 320 f.; commits suicide and is buried beside

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Antony in royal state, 324; 39 when she died, had been queen 22 years, shared her power with Antony more than 14, 330
 Sayings: 202, 272, 278, 322, 324 f.
- Cleopatra (5), daughter of Antony and Cleopatra, given in marriage by Octavia to King Juba, IX. 218, 330
- Cleophanes, with Phocion in battle near Tamynae, VIII. 172
- Cleophrantus, son of Themistocles and Archippe, II. 86
- Cleoptolemus, his daughter married to Antiochus, X. 366
- Cleora, wife of Agesilaüs, v. 52
- Clepsydra, IX. 212
- Clientes, means dependants; their relation to patrons, I. 126
- Clitarchus, see "Cleitarclus."
- Clodia (1), sister of Clodius, wife of Metellus Celer, and called Quadrantaria, VII. 154
- Clodia (2), sister of Clodius, II. 582; divorced from Lucullus, 594
- Clodia (3), daughter of Fulvia, to be married to Octavius, IX. 180
- Clodius (1), praetor, defeated by Spartacus, III. 338
- Clodius (2), his "An Examination of Chronology" cited, I. 306
- Clodius (3), soldier of Lepidus, IX. 176
- Clodius, deserter in Brutus' camp, VI. 234
- Clodius, Appius, see "P. Clodius Pulcher."
- Clodius Celsus, see "Celsus, Clodius."
- Clodius Macer, governor of Africa, does not join Galba, XI. 216, 230; slain by Trebonius at the order of Galba, 236
- Clodius Pulcher, P., brother-in-law of Lucullus, serves under him in Asia, II. 534; demands Mithridates from Tigranes, and is refused, 536; secretly incites the soldiers against him, 582; IX. 140; helped Cicero in Catiline affair, VII. 152; commits sacrilege against Bona Dea, is brought to trial, is witnessed against by Cicero, is acquitted, 150 f., 462 f.; elected tribune, drives Cicero into banishment, 150, 156 f., 162, 168, 476, v. 234, 240, VIII. 316; burns down Cicero's villas, attacks Pompey, sends Cato on mission to Cyprus, v. 240 f., VII. 166, VIII. 318; attacks Cato after his return from Cyprus, VIII. 344; brings charge against Cicero for destroying records of tribunes, VII. 168; slain by Milo, 170; his funeral, VI. 170. See also VIII. 278, 310
- Cloelia, Roman maiden, her adventure, I. 552
- Cloelia (2), 3rd wife of Sulla, divorced, IV. 344
- Cloelius, general of Carbo's faction, advances against Pompey, v. 128
- Clothes, see "Dress."
- Clubs, political, encouraged by Ly-sander in Asia, IV. 244; 266; 290
- Clunia, city in Spain, XI. 218
- Clusium, besieged by Gauls, gets help of Rome, I. 348, II. 128
- Cluvius Rufus, cited, XI. 280
- Cnacion, later called Oenus, river at Sparta, I. 222, v. 382
- Cnidus, II. 440; near it Pharnabazus and Conon defeat Peisander in naval battle, v. 46, XI. 176; II. 478; given freedom by Caesar, VII. 554
- "Coalemus," nickname of Cimon's grandfather, II. 412
- Coans, fish up golden tripod, to be given to wisest man, I. 412; join Lucullus, II. 478
- Cocceius, Otho's nephew, XI. 312
- Coele Syria, given Cleopatra by Antony, IX. 216
- Coelius, led left wing for Antony at Actium, IX. 284
- Coenus, ordered by Alexander to attack Porus' right wing, VII. 396
- Coinage, Solon made mina have 100 instead of 73 drachmas, I. 444; purchasing power of drachma in Solon's time, 466; prices in Solon's time compared with those of Plutarch's time, 468; IV. 276; Lycurgus replaces gold and silver currency by iron, I. 228 f., II. 390, IV. 276, 284; price of sheep and oxen in early Roman Republic, I. 530, 532; value of Greek and Roman coins compared, II. 124, III. 130, IV. 326; Persian coin has

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- figure of archer on it, v. 40, XI. 174
- Colchis, I. 66, II. 514, v. 190, 202; invaded by Pompey, 206; 230
- Colias, cape where Athenian women sacrificed to Demeter, I. 422
- Collatinus, Tarquinius, see "Tarquinius Collatinus."
- Colline gate, where unchaste Vestals were buried alive, I. 342; gave Brennus entrance to Rome, II. 146
- Collytus, Attic deme, VII. 28
- Colonis, village, threatened by Messenians, X. 308
- Colony, to Caria by Ioxus and Ornytus, I. 18; of Athenians to the Chersonese, to Naxos, Andros, Thrace, Thurii, III. 34, 58; to Sinope, 62; to Hestiaeae, 66; to Syracuse from Asia and Corinth, VI. 316; to Agrigentum and Gela from Velia and Ceos, 344; to Velitiae by Romans, IV. 144; to Tarentum and Capua proposed by C. Gracchus, X. 214; to Carthage by C. Gracchus, 220, 226
- Colophonians, freed from Epigonus by Lucullus, II. 478
- Collytus, in Athens, VII. 28
- Comeas, archon at Athens, I. 496
- Comet, after Caesar's murder, VII. 604
- Comedy, Greek, from it conclude Greek doors opened outwards, I. 554; II. 596
- Comic poets, III. 8, 44, 50, IV. 24, 28
- Cominius, consul, invests Corioli, IV. 132; 140
- Cominius, Pontius, carries message through Gauls to Capitol, II. 154 f.
- Comitium surrounded by circular trench, I. 118; derived from coire, 150
- Commagene, v. 230, IX. 276
- Commentaries, of Aratus, XI. 6, 74, 76, 88; of J. Caesar, VII. 496
- Communism, of age of Cronos, II. 436
- Commissioners, ten, sent to organize Pontus, II. 588; X. 348
- Concord, temple of, vowed by Camillus, II. 204; built by consul Opimius, X. 238; VII. 126
- Confederacy of Delos, treasury moved to Athens, III. 34
- Connidas, tutor of Theseus, I. 10
- Conon (1), friend of Solon, I. 444
- Conon (2), father of Timotheus, IV. 338; escapes from Aegospotami to Evagoras in Cyprus, IV. 108; 260; XI. 176; with Pharnabazus defeats Peisander off Cnidus, v. 46, XI. 176 f.; ravages coast of Laconia, v. 62
- Conopion, burned body of Phocion, VIII. 230
- Considius, aged senator, VII. 476
- Consta, P., summoned as witness by Cicero, VII. 148
- Cousualia, Roman festival, held August 18th, I. 134
- Consuls: M'. Acilius, X. 364; M. Aemilius and L. Sextus (1st plebeian), II. 206; Antony, VII. 190, 584, IX. 170; Antony and Caesar, VI. 164; M. Atilius and T. Manlius, X. 364; Brutus and Collatinus, 1st consuls, I. 504; Caesar, III. 354, VII. 562; 3rd time with Lepidus, IX. 160; 4th time, VII. 570; 5th time with Antony, IX. 162; Caesar and Bibulus, v. 236, VII. 472; Caesar and Servilius Isauricus, 532; Camillus, not once, II. 94; Carbo, thrice, v. 138; Cato Major and Valerius Flaccus, II. 310, 330; Catulus and Marius, IV. 332; Cicero and C. Antonius, VII. 108, IX. 156; Cinna, IV. 356; Cominius, IV. 132; Cotta, IX. 470; Crassus and C. Scipio, III. 192; L. Domitius, VIII. 30; Gn. Domitius and Messala, v. 256; Fabius Maximus, 5 times, III. 174, 188, VI. 366; Fabius, son of Fabius Maximus, III. 186; C. Fabricius and Q. Aemilius, IX. 410; C. Fannius, X. 214; Flaccus, II. 582, IV. 390; Fulvius Flaccus, X. 238; C. Flaminius, III. 122; Flaminius and Furius, v. 442; T. Flaminius, X. 296; T. Flaminius and Sextus Aelius, X. 324; Fulvius and Appius, III. 200; Gabinus and Piso, VII. 160; S. Galba, XI. 210; Gellius and Lentulus, III. 340; Ti. Gracchus, twice, X. 144; Hirtius and Pansa, VI. 452, VII. 190,

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- IX. 174; M. Horatius, 5th man elected, I. 534; Hostilius, VI. 376; Laevinus, IX. 392; Lentulus, v. 270, VII. 166, 518, IX. 150; M. Lepidus, IV. 434, v. 150; Lucullus and M. Cotta, II. 484, v. 162; Lucretius, 4th time, I. 534; C. Mancinus, X. 152; Manius, X. 304; Marcellus, v. 464, X. 324; 3rd time, v. 466; 4th time, 496; 5th time, 512; Marcellus, 5 times, III. 174, v. 436, 442, X. 372; Marcellus and Gnaeus Cornelius, v. 446; C. Marcellus, v. 268, VII. 514, IX. 148; Marius, IX. 482, 486; 1st time, IV. 328; 2nd and 3rd times, 330, IX. 492, 498; 4th time with Lutatius Catulus, 500; 5th time, 522; 6th time, 542; 7th time, 590; younger Marius, VIII. 14; Maximus, VII. 576; Cornelius Merula with Octavius, IX. 578; Caecilius Metellus, IX. 476; L. Murena and Silanus, VIII. 284; Norbanus, IV. 410; Octavius and Cinna, VIII. 10, IX. 578; Octavius Caesar, VI. 184; with Cicero's son, VII. 208; Opimius, X. 226; Orestes, 198; Paulus, v. 268, VII. 514; Aemilius Paulus, twice, VI. 366; Aemilius Paulus, son of preceding, 366; 2nd time, 378; Philippus, VIII. 330; Piso, v. 182; Piso and Gabinius, 240, VII. 474, VIII. 316; Pompeius, IV. 350; Pompey and Crassus, III. 350, v. 166, 250, VIII. 334; Pompey, sole consul, v. 258, VII. 512, VIII. 350; Valerius Publicola, I. 518; 2nd time with T. Lucretius, 542; 3rd time, 546; 4th time, 556; L. Quintius (Flamininus), II. 350; Caninius Revilus, VII. 576; Rufinus, IV. 324; Mucius Scaevola, X. 162; Cornelius Scipio (Africanus Major), III. 190; Scipio (Africanus Minor), IX. 492; Scipio (Asiaticus), IV. 414, v. 130; Metellus Scipio with Pompey, 262; Scipio Nasica and C. Marcius, 444; Ti. Sempronius, 444, II. 334; Silanus and Murena, VII. 116; Spinther, v. 244; Sulla and Q. Pompeius, IV. 342; M. Valerius and Postumius Tubertus, I. 554; Valerius Corvinus, many times, IX. 542; Terentius Varro and Aemilius Paulus, III. 158 f.
- "Consuls" means counsellors, I. 128
- Consulship, arrogant powers taken away by Publicola, I. 568; III. 186; why candidates wear toga without tunic, IV. 148; given to Marius absent, IX. 492
- Consus, god of counsel; his altar in Circus Maximus, I. 128
- Contributions, II. 482, 532, III. 36, IV. 22
- Copillus, chief of Tectosages, captured by Sulla, IV. 330
- Coponius, commander of garrison at Carrhae, III. 404
- Cora, daughter of Aidoneus and Phersephone, I. 72
- Cora, temple of, near Hysiae at foot of Cithaeron, II. 248; goddess of Syracuse, delivered Cerberus into Heracles' hands, III. 210; goddess of Eleusis, IV. 60
- Coracesium, promontory in Cilicia, v. 184
- Corcyne, nurse, accompanied Ariadne to Naxos, I. 42
- Corcyra, II. 64; aided by Athens, III. 82, 84; in league against Philip, VII. 40, VI. 278; captured by Agathocles, IX. 368; garrisoned by Demetrius, 372; VI. 448; VIII. 370
- Corduba, VII. 482
- Cordyllon, surname of Athenodorus the Stoic, VIII. 256
- Coreia, festival of Persephone, VI. 118
- Corfinium, surrenders to Caesar, VII. 526
- Corfinius, refurnished Pompey's house, VII. 562. See also "Cornificius."
- Corinth, I. 56, 412, II. 16, 274, 64, 456; at war with Corcyra, III. 82, 84; its territory raided by Nicias, 228; displeased by Peace of Nicias, 240, IV. 48, 292; battle of, v. 40, 44; captured by Agesilaus and Teleutias, 56; in league against Philip, VII. 40; sends Timoleon to Sicily, VI. 266; 268; 270; 276; sends Timoleon reinforcements, 298; 304; 308; 312; sends colonists to Syracuse, 314; 332; freed by

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Demetrius, IX. 58; X. 10; XI. 20; joins Achæan League, 52; 56; joins Cleomenes, X. 90, XI. 94; garrisoned by Antigonus, 96; proclaimed free by Flamininus, X. 350, 358; brought over to Rome by Cato the Elder, II. 336; taken by Mummius, III. 430, IX. 464, X. 316; restored by Caesar, VII. 576
- Coriolanus, C. Marcius, his family and character, IV. 118 f.; fought against Tarquin when a boy, 122; takes Corioli, 132 f.; helps the consul rout the Volscians, 136 f.; is named Coriolanus, 140; opposes the plebs, runs for consul, not elected, 148 f.; opposes distributing corn gratis, 154 f.; is denounced by the tribunes, 156 f.; condemned by the tribunes to be cast from Tarpeian rock, is rescued, 160 f.; is tried before the people and condemned to perpetual banishment, 166 f.
- Goes to the Volscians, 170; is appointed general with Tullus for war on Rome, raids Roman land, 182 f.; takes Circeii, ravages land of Latins, takes Bola, 186; besieges Lavinium, marches against Rome, 188; gives terms of peace to Roman embassy, 190; withdraws and attacks allies of Rome, 192; returns to attack Rome, 194; spares Rome and withdraws at the intercession of his mother, 208; hated by Tullus and asked to give an account of his administration, 214; slain by a party of Volscians, 216
- His words given: 136, 140, 166, 172 f., 208
- Corioli, captured from the Volscians, IV. 132
- Cornelia (1), daughter of Scipio, wife of Ti. Gracchus the Elder, refused hand of Ptolemy; mother of the Gracchi, X. 146 f., 152; 162; 206; said to have helped C. Gracchus in his seditious measures, 226; her life after death of C. Gracchus, 240; IX. 556
- Cornelia (2), daughter of Metellus Scipio, married Publius, son of Crassus, then Pompey; her accomplishments, v. 260, 286; learns of disaster at Pharsalus, flees with her husband, 310; sees Pompey murdered, receives remains of Pompey, buries them at Alban villa, 320 f.
- Cornelia (3), daughter of Cinna, wife of Caesar, VII. 442, 450; had daughter by Caesar who married Pompey, 452
- Cornellii, three fated to become monarchs at Rome, VII. 122, IX. 464
- Cornelius, leader of party of Sulla's men, spares Caesar for 2 talents, VII. 444
- Cornelius, C., acquaintance of Livy, augurs Caesar's victory at Pharsalus, VII. 554
- Cornelius, Gnaeus, appointed colleague in consulship by Marcellus, v. 446, 448
- Cornelius, P., with M. Baebius consul about 400 years after Numa, I. 380
- Cornelius Cethegus, see "Cethegus, Cornelius."
- Cornelius Cossus, won spolia opima from Tolumnius the Tuscan, I. 138, v. 454
- Cornelius Laco, prefect of praetorian guard under Galba, XI. 230; slain by Otho's soldiers, 268
- Cornelius Merula, consul with Octavius, replacing Cinna, IX. 578
- Cornelius Nepos, cited, II. 608, v. 520, X. 194
- Cornel-tree, the sacred, story of, I. 154
- Cornificius, L., prosecutor of Brutus, VI. 184
- Cornificius, Q., has 2 legions for Caesar, VII. 544
- Cornutus, rescued from Marius by slaves, IX. 586
- Coroebus, began sanctuary of mysteries at Eleusis, III. 40
- Coronela, battle of, Athenians under Tolmides defeated by Boeotians, III. 58, IV. 2; battle of, between Agesilaüs and Thebans, v. 40, 46
- Corrhagus (Corrhaeus), Stratonice's father, IX. 6

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Corrhagus, son of Demetrius and Eurydice, IX. 134
- Corsica, sea about it cleared of pirates by Pompey, V. 182
- Corsinius, Valerius, 6 times consul like Marius, IX. 542
- Corynetes, slain by Theseus, I. 188. See also "Periphetes."
- Cos, people of, join Lucullus, II. 474
- Cosa, in Etruria, colonized by Rome, X. 324
- Cosconius, slain by Caesar's mutinous soldiers, VII. 560
- Cosis, brother of Albanian king, slain by Pompey, V. 208
- Cossaeans, slaughtered by Alexander, VII. 424
- Cossinius, praetor, slain, and his camp captured by Spartacus, III. 338
- Cossus, Cornelius, see "Cornelius Cossus."
- Cossus, Licinius, sent to consult oracle of Delphi re Alban lake, II. 102
- Cost, of clothing, II. 314; of fish, 322; of public works, 356
- "Cothurnus," nickname of Thermenenes, III. 212
- Cotta, defeated by Sertorius in sea-fight, VIII. 30
- Cotta, Caesar's legate, destroyed with army by Gauls, VII. 500
- Cotta, L. (1), opposes Marius, IX. 470
- Cotta, L. (2), censor, very fond of wine, VII. 150
- Cotta, M., consul with Lucullus, II. 484; sent with ships to guard Propontis and Bithynia, 490; defeated by Mithridates, is besieged in Chalcedon, 494
- Cotylon, Varius, intimate of Antony, left with 6 legions to guard Gaul, IX. 178
- Cotys, king of Paphlagonians, makes alliance with Agesilaüs, V. 28
- Council of Elders, established by Lycurgus, I. 218
- Council of 500, at Athens, II. 458
- Courts of justice, transferred again to knights by Pompey, V. 168
- Crane, dance instituted by Theseus, still kept up by Delians, I. 44
- Craneion, suburb of Corinth, VII. 258
- Crannon, battle of, Greeks defeated by Antipater, II. 133, VII. 68, VIII. 200
- Crassianus, C. (Crastinus or Crassinius), centurion of Caesar, slain at Pharsalus, V. 300, VII. 548
- Crassus (1), Scipio's colleague in consulship, urged by Fabius Maximus to thwart Scipio; was pontifex maximus, III. 192
- Crassus (2), brother of Licinia, X. 232
- Crassus (3), husband of Scribonia, father of Piso, executed by Nero, XI. 254
- Crassus (4), son of the triumvir, resembled Axius, VII. 144
- Crassus, M., his family, III. 314; his avarice and wealth, 316 f.; generous, eloquent, kindly, 320; escaped when Cinna and Marius prevailed, 322; joins Sulla and raises force, 326 f.; rival of Pompey, 328; victorious when Sulla is defeated, 320, IV. 416, 420 f.; lent Caesar large sum, III. 332 f., VII. 468; chosen to conduct war against Spartacus, III. 340; disciplines troops when his legate Mummius is defeated, 342; defeats parts of Spartacus' force, 344, 346, V. 164, 196; defeats Spartacus again, III. 348
- Elected consul with Pompey, quarrels with him, 350, V. 168, VIII. 334; inactive as censor, accused by Cicero of being in Catilinarian conspiracy, III. 352, VII. 116, 158; reconciled to Cicero, 168, III. 354; forms triumvirate with Pompey and Caesar, 354 f., VII. 470; has understanding with Caesar and Pompey at Luca, III. 356, VII. 494, VIII. 332; through violence is elected consul with Pompey, gets province of Syria, III. 360, VIII. 334; crosses to the east, takes Zenodotia, III. 364; receives embassy from Hyrodes, 368; encouraged by Artabazes, king of Armenia, 370; duped by Ariamnes, 374; opposed by Surenä, 376 f.; gets discouraging message

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- from Artabazes, 380; defeated by Parthians, 382 f.; leaves Carrhae by night, 408; forced to go with the Parthians, 412; is slain, 416, v. 254, VII. 510
See also II. 592, 596, 606, v. 226, VII. 102, 144, 146
 Quoted: III. 318, 330, 352, v. 170, 364, 368, 374, 398, 412
- Crassus, P. (1), pontifex maximus, helps Ti. Gracchus draw up his agrarian law, X. 162; father-in-law of C. Gracchus, elected land commissioner in place of Ti. Gracchus, 194
- Crassus, P. (2), son of M. Crassus, admiral of Cicero, III. 354, v. 260, VII. 168; came from Caesar in Gaul with 1000 troopers for his father, III. 366, 384; slain at Carrhae, 390, 400, v. 310, VII. 172
- Crastinus, see "Crassianus."
- Craterus (1), husband of Phila, IX. 32; VII. 344; wounded by Perdicas, 346; quarrels with Hephæstion, 360, 362, 382, sent back to Macedonia by Alexander, VIII. 186; defeats Greeks at Crannon, and crosses to Asia to overthrow Perdicas, VII. 68, VIII. 90, 200; VII. 70; VIII. 92; sends Antipater into Cilicia, advances against Eumenes, is defeated and dies, VIII. 94 f., IX. 32
- Craterus, the Macedonian, collected various decrees, II. 444; cited, 294
- Crates, philosopher, induces Demetrius to raise siege of Athens, IX. 116
- Cratesiclela, mother of Cleomenes, assists him, marries Aristonotus, X. 60; goes as hostage to Egypt, 98; executed by Ptolemy, X. 136
- Cratesipolis, wife of Alexander, son of Polysperchon, visits Demetrius, IX. 22
- Cratinus, comic poet, cited:—
 Archilochi (Kock I. 11), II. 434
 Cheirons (Kock I. 86), III. 8, 70
 Nemesis (Kock I. 49), III. 8; (94), I. 472; (100), III. 42
- Cratippus, v. 310; received Roman citizenship from Caesar at Cicero's request, VII. 142; his lectures attended by Brutus, VI. 176
- Craugis, Philopoemen's father, X. 256
- Cremation, alive, VII. 416 f.
- Cremona, battle of, Caecina worsted by Otho's men, XI. 292
- Creobylus, see "Crobylus."
- Creon (1), father of Menoeceus, v. 390
- Creon (2), character in tragedy, VII. 72
- Creophylus, posterity of, in Ionia preserved poems of Homer, I. 214
- Cretan, civilization, simple and severe, I. 214; government, mixture of democracy and royalty, VI. 112; javelin, X. 444
- Cretans, once sent offering of first-born to Delphi, some of Athenian descent, etc., I. 30; submit to Philip, son of Antigonus, XI. 110; serve with Aemilius Paulus, VI. 392, 416; won over by Lucullus, II. 474
- Crete, visited by Lycurgus, I. 212; worst nest of pirates after Cilicia, cleared of them by Metellus, v. 188; decreed province of Brutus, VI. 168; X. 288 f.
- "Creticus," surname of Antonius, father of M. Antony, IX. 138
- Crimesus river, in Sicily, VI. 322; battle of, 324 f.
- Crispinus (1), consul with Marcellus, slain by Hannibal in ambush, v. 516
- Crispinus (2), Poppaea's husband, XI. 246; slain by Otho's soldiers, 280
- Critias, son of Callaeschrus, moved decree for recall of Alcibiades, IV. 96; one of Thirty Tyrants, II. 434; cited, I. 230, II. 434, 454 (Bergk II. 279 f.), IV. 96
- Crito, borrowed 70 minas from Socrates, II. 214
- Critolaïdas, one of 5 arbiters in dispute between Athenians and Megarians, I. 428
- Critolaüs, cited, III. 20
- Crobylus (1), cited, VII. 40
- Crobylus (2), beautiful boy, VII. 286
- Croesus, sent bowl to Delphi, I. 414; had interview with Solon, 478; defeated and spared by Cyrus, 484

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Crommyonian sow, called Phaea, slain by Theseus, I. 18
- Cronos, age of, II. 286, 436
- Croton, I. 178; given portion of spoil from Arbela by Alexander, VII. 328
- Crustumerium, its people defeated and moved to Rome by Romulus, I. 138
- Ctesias, physician with Artaxerxes II., XI. 128; describes death of Cyrus at Cunaxa, 148 f.; rewarded by Artaxerxes, 156; tells anecdote about Clearchus and himself, 166 f.; sent to help Conon, 176 Cited: 140, 146, 148 f., 154 f., 170
- Ctesibius, cited by Hermippus, VII. 12
- Ctesiphon, brought to trial in matter of the crown, VII. 58
- Ctesippus, son of Chabrias, VII. 36; helped by Phocion, VIII. 158
- Ctesium, city in Scyros, II. 426
- Culeo, Terentius, forces Flamininus and Marcellus, the censors to receive into citizenship all offered if of free parents, X. 372
- Culleo, vainly urges Pompey to divorce Julia, V. 242
- Cumae, Blossius of, X. 160
- Cunaxa, 500 furlongs from Babylon; battle of, XI. 142 f.
- Cures, of the Sabines, native city of Numa Pompilius; from it "Quirites" derived, I. 314
"Cures, a new," term applied to Epimenides of Crete, I. 432
- Curiae, named after 30 seized Sabine maidens, I. 130, 152
- Curio (1), Sulla's legate, besieges Aristion in the acropolis and forces him to surrender, IV. 372
- Curio (2), Cato's friend, VIII. 266; aedile with Favonius, 348, IX. 140
- Curio (3), rescues Caesar in Catilinarian trouble, VII. 460; bought by Caesar, acts for him in Rome, V. 268, VII. 514 f., IX. 140, 148; driven from senate by Lentulus, VII. 518
- Curius, M., II. 324, 386, 394; hero of 3 triumphs, drove Pyrrhus from Italy, 306; defeated Pyrrhus at Beneventum, IX. 426; quoted, II. 306
- Curtius, Sabine, caught in bog henceforth called "lacus Curtius," I. 144
- Custom, of boiling all sorts of pulse together on 7th of Pyanepsion, I. 46; Spartans brought bodies of kings home for burial, V. 112
- Cyanean isles, western limit for Persian navy, II. 444
- Cybernesia, celebrated in honour of of Nausithois and Phaeax, I. 34
- Cybishus, son of Solon's sister, adopted by him, I. 418
- Cychreus, father-in-law of Sciron, I. 20; hero sacrificed to by Solon, 424
- Cyclades, being subjugated by Arche laus, IV. 358
- Cyclops, cave of, II. 326; blinded, XI. 208
- Cynus, slain by Hercules, I. 22
- Cydnus river, in Asia, VII. 274, IX. 192
- Cyinda, see "Quinda."
- Cytlarabis (Cylarabis, Cytlarabium), gymnasium just outside of Argos, IX. 452, X. 86, 110
- Cylon, his murder caused pollution and strife, I. 430; Athenians ordered by Spartans to drive out this pollution, III. 94
- Cyme, where Themistocles landed in Asia, II. 68; VII. 586
- Cynageirus, rivalled Aristides for 2nd place at Plataea, II. 388
- Cynisca, Agesilaüs' sister, enters chariot at Olympian contests, V. 52
- Cynosarges, gymnasium of Hercules outside Athens, frequented by aliens, II. 2
- Cynoscephalae, Amazons' graves there, I. 64; Pelopidas defeats Alexander of Pherae there and is himself slain, V. 422; Flamininus defeats Philip of Macedon there, VI. 372, X. 340
- Cynossema, promontory of Salamis, origin of name, II. 30 f., 318
- Cypris, I. 478
- Cyprus, has grove of Ariadne Aphrodite, I. 42; visited by Solon, 476; II. 84; 442; 460; scene of Cimon's death, 462 f., III. 32; 74; surrenders to Alexander, VII. 292; 308; IX. 12; won from Ptolemy by Demetrius, IX. 34 f.; II. 478; administered by

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Cato, v. 240, 316, VII. 170, VIII. 346; given to Cleopatra, IX. 218
- Cypselus, Periander's father, XI. 8
- Cyrene, set in order by Ecdemus and Megalophanes, X. 256; ruled by son of Demetrius and Ptolemais, IX. 134; given fixed constitution by Lucullus, II. 474; received Cato, closed gates to Labienus, VIII. 370 f.; western terminus of Antony's empire, IX. 276
- Cyrrhus river, its source, tributary, and mouth, v. 206
- Cyrrhastica, in Asia, IX. 122, 212
- "Cyrus," Persian word for sun, XI. 128
- Cyrus the Elder, named from sun, XI. 128; 130; defeated and spared Solon, I. 484; his tomb visited by Alexander VII. 416, IX. 152
- Cyrus the Younger, son of Dareius and Parysatis, XI. 128; 190, III. 72; receives Lysander at Sardis, IV. 240; 246; asks Sparta to send Lysander again, 248; promises Lysander anything he wants, 252; 280; remained satrap of Lydia and commander of the king's forces in maritime provinces on death of Dareius, XI. 130; accused of plot against life of Artaxerxes, pardoned by latter, 132; makes secret preparations, 132 f.; gets aid of Spartans, marches against the king, is slain at Cunaxa, 136 f., IV. 452; quoted, XI. 142
- Cythera, captured by Nicias, III. 228; 430; v. 86; x. 118
- Cytheris, actress, favourite of Antony, IX. 158
- Cyzicus, sends embassy to Sparta supported by Pharnabazus, IV. 66; taken by Athenians, 82; besieged by Mithridates, relieved by Lucullus, II. 498, 504; VI. 186
- Dactyli, Idaean, played tricks like those of Picus and Faunus, I. 360
- Daedalus, son of Merope, pursued by Minos, fled to Athens, protected by Theseus, I. 38
- Daesius, month in which Macedonian kings were wont to take the field, VII. 264; 432; Scyonian month, same as Anthesterion, XI. 122
- Daimachus, Plataean, cited re Solon, I. 572; his treatise "On Religion" cited, IV. 262
- Dalmatia, armies there faithful to Otho, XI. 284
- Damagoras, commands Rhodian galley, II. 482
- Damascus, VII. 280
- Damastes (1), surnamed Procrustes, slain by Theseus, I. 22
- Damastes (2), cited, II. 138
- Damippus, Spartan, captured by Marcellus, v. 482
- Damochares, plots against Agis, x. 40; helps execute him, 44
- Damocleides, prominent Theban, takes part in expulsion of Spartans at Thebes, v. 356; with Pelopidas slays Leontidas and Hypates, v. 366
- Damocrates (1), Plataean hero, II. 246
- Damocrates (2), Spartan exile, quoted, x. 56
- Damon (1), Pericles' music teacher, ostracized, II. 214, III. 10, 226
- Damon (2), Macedonian soldier of Alexander, VII. 286
- Damon (3), Peripolitas, of Chaeroneia, story of his life, II. 404 f.; his descendants called Asbolomeni, 408
- Damonides, of deme Oa, advises Pericles, III. 26
- Damophantus, leader of Eleian cavalry, slain by Philopoemen, x. 272
- Damoteles, betrays Cleomenes at Sellasia, x. 114
- Damurias river, where Timoleon defeated Hicetas, VI. 336
- Danais, captured Argos, IX. 454
- Dandamis, gymnosophist, meets Onesicritus, VII. 408; 244
- Dandarians, barbarian people dwelling about Lake Maeotis, II. 518
- Danube river, Bisternae settled along it, VI. 376; scene of battle between Alexander and Syrmus, king of Triballi, VII. 252; regions along it subdued by Tiberius Sempronius, II. 334
- Daochus, Thessalian, sent by Philip on embassy to Thebes, VII. 42

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Daphne, daughter of Amyclas, the same as Pasiphaë according to Phylarchus, X. 20
- Daphne, grove near Antioch, II. 534
- Dardanians, defeated by Perseus, VI. 376
- Dardanus, in Troad, meeting-place of Mithridates and Sulla, IV. 402
- Dardanus (1), founded Troy, II. 144
- Dardanus (2), shield-bearer of Brutus, VI. 242
- Dareius (1), sent Datis to subdue Hellenes, II. 10, 224
- Dareius (2), father of Artaxerxes, Cyrus, Ostanes, and Oxathres by Parysatis, XI. 128
- Dareius (3), his generals defeated at the river Granicus, VII. 262 f.; encouraged by Alexander's long delay in Cilicia, 274; defeated by Alexander, 278; makes proposal to Alexander, 310; marches against him with a million men, 314; escapes from rout of Arbela, 324; V. 40; seized by Bessus, dies in presence of Polystratus, 348; body sent to his mother, 350; quoted, 310 f., 350 f.
- Dareius (4), oldest son of Artaxerxes II., proclaimed successor to the throne, XI. 188 f.; plots death of Artaxerxes, is detected and put to death, 196 f.
- Daric, Persian coin, IV. 240
- Darius, see "Dareius."
- Dascylitis, lake near Cyzicus, II. 500
- Dassaretis, in Illyria, X. 330
- Datis, sent by Darius to subdue Hellenes, II. 224
- Daunians, plunder Pyrrhus' baggage at Asculum, IX. 416
- Day, white, III. 78
- Debts, cancelled in Athens by Solon, I. 442, 570; debtor class championed by M. Manlius, II. 186; VII. 418; IV. 348; II. 532; VII. 452; 470; 556; IX. 140
- Decadarchies, instituted in Asia by Lysander, IV. 242, 266, 268
- Deceleia, fortified on advice of Alcibiades, IV. 62; 98; 252
- Dechas, death chamber of prison at Sparta, X. 44
- Decimation, what it is, IX. 226; III. 342
- Decrees, II. 18, 204, 244, 280, 444, 458, III. 28, 68, 84, 88, 210, 252, IV. 42, 96, 254, 270, 318, V. 354, VI. 10, VII. 48, 68, 146, 168, VIII. 222, 230, IX. 32
- Delaneira, III. 70
- Deidameia (1), married Peirithous, I. 68
- Deidameia (2), daughter of Aeacides, sister of Pyrrhus, wife of Demetrius, IX. 58, 348, 354; mother of Alexander, 134; 72; dies, 78, 362
- Deidius, brings in head of elder of Pompey's sons, VII. 572
- Deimachus, father of Autolycus, II. 544
- Deinarchus (1), Corinthian, denounced Demades to Cassander, VII. 78; put to death by Polysperchon, VIII. 222
- Deinarchus (2), served under Timoleon in Sicily, VI. 312, 320
- Deinias, with Aristotle the logician, slays Abantidas, XI. 6; cited, 66
- Deinocrates, Messenian, induces Messene to revolt from Achaean league, captures Philopoemen, X. 306, 370; executes Philopoemen, commits suicide, 314
- Deinomache, daughter of Megacles, mother of Alcibiades, IV. 2
- Deinon, cited, VII. 332, XI. 128, 140, 146 f., 154, 170, 172, 178
- Deioneus, son of Eurytus the Oechalian, I. 18
- Deiphophoroi, women who took part in procession of Oschophoria; why so called, I. 50
- Deirades, Athenian deme, IV. 70
- Deiotarus, Galatian, guest-friend of Cato's father, welcomes Cato, who refuses his gifts and leaves soon, VIII. 260 f.; meets Crassus, III. 364; flees with Pompey, V. 308; deserts to Octavius, IX. 280
- Δεκάβοιον (ten oxen), origin of term as referring to money, I. 54
- Delium, has temple of Apollo, IV. 396; battle of, Athenians defeated, 18, 316, III. 226
- Dellius, sent by Antony to bring Cleopatra to him in Cilicia, IX. 190 f.; 272
- Delos, island, athletic contests insti-

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- tuted there by Theseus, I. 44; Confederacy of, II. 290; III. 216
- Delos, mountain near temple of Apollo Tegyraeus, v. 378
- Delphi, visited by Lycurgus, I. 216; has perpetual fire, that went out 3 times, 338; where 7 wise men once met, 412; had golden tripod and bowl sent by Croesus, 414; its records cited, 430, 472; had treasury of Acanthians, IV. 234; 280; II. 114; seized by men led by Philomelus and Onomarchus VI. 334; 428
- Delphi, oracle of, I. 52; told Theseus to found city where he found himself full of sorrow, 60, 82; 180; 216; 220; 294; 318; 424; 428; 438; II. 28; 102; 246; VII. 260; XI. 120
- Delphians, freed from Phocians by Spartans, II. 456; dispossessed of sanctuary at Delphi by Spartans, restored by Athenians, III. 62
- Delphinium, contains enclosure where house of Aegaeus stood, I. 24, 34
- Demades, his character and ability, VII. 20, 24, 30, VIII. 144; moves that Athenians take part in congress proposed by Philip, VIII. 180; induces Alexander to forgo demand for surrender of Demosthenes and others, VII. 56; moves sentence of death on Demosthenes, 70, VIII. 202; executed by Cassander, 212, VII. 78
- Sayings: Draco's laws written in blood, I. 450, VII. 28, 30, VIII. 144, 194, X. 110, XI. 208
- Demaenetus, popular leader at Syracuse, attacks Timoleon, VI. 348
- Demaratus (1), father of Tarquin, I. 138, 536
- Demaratus (2), Spartan, wishes to wear tiara upright like Persian kings, II. 80; XI. 130
- Demaratus (3), Corinthian, rebukes Philip, VII. 246, 336; dies after seeing Alexander on throne of Darius, 384; cited, v. 38
- Demaratus (4), Rhodian, his release secured by Phocion from Alexander, VIII. 186
- Demaratus, saying, I. 268
- Demaratus, with Deinarchus brought Timoleon's 2nd reinforcement from Corinth, led part of troops against Civaltas, VI. 312, 320; commands cavalry at battle of river Crimesus, 326
- Demariste, Timoleon's mother, VI. 266, 272
- Demeas, son of Demades, executed by Cassander, VIII. 214
- Demeter, sacrifice to, at Sparta 12th day after death of kinsman, I. 286, 422; goddess of Eleusis, IV. 60, II. 246; temple of, near Hysiae at foot of Cithaeron, 248
- "Demetria," new name of festival Dionysia, IX. 28
- Demetrias, city settled by Demetrius from small villages about Ioicus, IX. 134; Flamininus ordered to keep it garrisoned, X. 348; had great store of arms for Parthian war, VI. 180
- "Demetrias," new name of Sicyon, IX. 58
- Demetrias, new tribe at Athens in honour of Demetrius, IX. 26
- "Demetrias," new name for "Old and New," last day of month, IX. 28
- "Demetrium," new name of month Mounychion, IX. 28
- Demetrius (1), herald of Syracuse, VI. 354
- Demetrius (2), surnamed Pheido, in retinue of Alexander, VII. 382
- Demetrius (3), brother of Antigonus, by some said to be the father of Demetrius Poliorcetes, IX. 6
- Demetrius (4), Poliorcetes, character and lineage, IX. 6 f., VIII. 134; when 22 defeated by Ptolemy at Gaza, IX. 12; defeats Cilles, Ptolemy's general, 14; raids Nabataean Arabs, invades Babylonia, 16; frees Athens of Demetrius Phalereus, 18 f.; frees Megara, 22; takes Munychia and razes fortress, restores to Athens ancient form of government, 24 f.; marries Eurydicé, had married Phila, 32 f.; defeats Menelaüs and Ptolemy at Cyprus, 34 f.; saluted as king with his father, 40
- Fond of building ships and engines of war, 46; takes Rhodes,

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- 48 f.; rescues Athens from Cassander, 52 f.; drives his enemies out of the Peloponnesus, proclaimed Commander-in-Chief of the Greeks, 58; defeated with his father at Ipsus by rival kings, 68 f., 380; is warned off by Athens, 72; ravages Chersonesus, 74; marries his daughter Stratonice to Seleucus, takes possession of Cilicia, 78; drives Lachares from Athens, 80 f.; defeats Sparta twice, 84; has Alexander slain and becomes king of Macedonia, 88 f., 360 f.; gets Thessaly, occupies Boeotia, 96; conquers Aetolia and ravages Epeirus, 100, 364; very ill at Pella, drives Pyrrhus out of Macedonia, 106, 370; is attacked by Seleucus, Ptolemy, and Lysimachus, deserted by his army loses Macedonia and flees to Cassandreia, 110 f., 374 f.
- Sails for Asia to wrest Caria and Lydia from Lysimachus, marries Ptolemaïs, 116, 378; withdraws to Taurus mountains, 120; is successful against Seleucus, but falls sick and is deserted by most of his men, 122; surrenders to Seleucus, 126; is carried a prisoner to the Syrian Chersonese; died in his 55th year, 132; the children he left, 134
- See also VII. 32, IX. 354, 372
- Demetrius (5), the Phalerean, brother of Himeræus, VII. 70; had pension given to 2 descendants of Aristides, II. 296; ruled Athens for Cassander, expelled by Demetrius and given safe conduct to Thebes, IX. 18 f.; condemned to death in absentia by the Athenians, VIII. 226
- Cited: I. 276, 466 (his "Socrates"), II. 210, 212, 214, 226, 296, VII. 22, 24, 26, 34
- Demetrius (6), the Thin, son of Demetrius Poliorcetes, IX. 134
- Demetrius (7), son of Demetrius Poliorcetes and Ptolemaïs, ruled Cyrené, IX. 134
- Demetrius (8), son of Antigonos Gonatas, marries Nicaea to help his father get the Acrocorinthus, XI. 36; his general Bithys defeats Aratus, 76; after short rule died, leaving a son Phillip in his boyhood, VI. 372
- Demetrius (9), son of Philip, sent to Rome as hostage, X. 346; executed by his father on false charge brought by his brother Perseus, VI. 374
- Demetrius (10), of Pharos, XI. 114
- Demetrius (11), the Magnesian, cited, VII. 36, 68, 70
- Demetrius (12), the Peripatetic, with Cato at Utica, VIII. 396, 402
- Demetrius (13), freedman of Pompey, v. 120, 216, 264
- Demetrius (14), attendant of Cassius, VI. 226
- Demo, surnamed Mania, mistress of Demetrius, IX. 54, 64
- Demochares (1), of Leuconoë, relative of Demosthenes, cited, VII. 74; bon mot re Stratocles, exiled for it, IX. 56
- Demochares (2), of Soli, called Demetrius "Fable," IX. 64
- Democles, beautiful Athenian youth, IX. 56
- Democracy, favoured by maritime empire, II. 54; gains control at Athens, 450
- Democrates, lover of Alcibiades, IV. 8
- Democritus, as to what we ought to pray for, VI. 260
- Δῆμοι, play of Eupolis, III. 8
- Demoleon, accompanied Autolyceus, II. 544
- Demon, cited, I. 36, 50
- Demon of Paeonia, VII. 56; cousin of Demosthenes, brings in decree recalling him from exile, 68
- Demonax, messenger of Archelaüs to people of Cyzicus, II. 498
- Demophilus, accuser of Phocion, slain by his son, VIII. 232
- Demophon (Demophoön), son of Theseus, and Antiope, I. 64; had son Munychus from Laodicé, 78; founded city in Cyprus near river Clarius, 476
- Demopolis, son of Themistocles, II. 88
- Demosthenes (1), Athenian general, defeated in Aetolia, III. 226; fortified Pylos, 230; 278; arrives in Sicily with large force, makes night attack on Epipolæ and is defeated,

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- 284, 286; with his force captured by Syracusans, 300; executed by orders of Syracusans, 306; IV. 2
- Demosthenes (2), father of the orator, called the Outler owing to his business, VII. 8, 48
- Demosthenes (3), his parents and race, VII. 8; left by his father at age of 7 with estate of 15 talents, wronged by his guardians, 8; inspired by Callistratus to become an orator, 10 f.; brings suit against his guardians, 14; encouraged by Eunomus and Satyrus, 16; trains diligently in private, 16 f.; did not speak off-hand, 20; copied Pericles in some things, 22; overcame indistinctness and lisping by reciting speeches with pebbles in his mouth, 26; humorous in extempore rejoinders, 28
- After outbreak of Phocian war entered public life with credit, 28 f.; was not a time server, but capable of being bribed, 34; prosecuted Antiphon and Theoris and had them executed, 36; wrote speeches for others, 36; persistent opponent of Philip, 38; incited Athenians to drive Macedonians out of Euboea, and to other acts against Philip, 40; after Philip took Elateia and occupied Phocis, D. advised the people to cling to Thebes, 42; arouses the allies to fight Philip, but was not brave at battle of Chaeroneia, 46 f.
- Rejoices publicly on death of Philip, 52; gets the Greeks to form a league once more, and raises opposition to Alexander, 54; after destruction of Thebes his surrender is demanded by Alexander, but he is pardoned at intercession of Demades, 56 f., VIII. 182; supports Agis the Spartan in his uprising, VII. 58; successfully defends Ctesiphon against Aeschines, 58; accepts bribe from Harpalus, 60; is condemned to pay fine of 50 talents and imprisoned, escapes to Aegina, 64; on death of Alexander, supports rising against Antipater, 66; recalled from exile, 68; after defeat of Greeks at Crannon, escapes from Athens, 70, VIII. 202; his surrender demanded by Antipater, 204; condemned to death on motion of Demades, VII. 70; dies by taking poison in temple of Poseidon at Calauria, 70 f., VIII. 210; is honoured after death by the Athenians, VII. 76; Plutarch's "Life of Demosthenes" drawn from what written or oral sources he could find, 6, 78, I. 64
- See also* II. 308, VII. 56, 92, 142, VIII. 156, 160, 164, 178, IX. 384
- Sayings: VII. 20; 24, VIII. 156; VII. 26; 28; 38; 56; 64; 68; 72 f.
- Orations mentioned or cited:—
- Against Androtion, VII. 36
 - Against Aristocrates, 32, 36
 - Against Aristogeiton, 36
 - Against Meidias, 28, IV. 24
 - Against Timocrates, VII. 36
 - Concerning Halonnesus, 24
 - For the Immunities, 32, 36
 - For Phormion, 36
 - On the Crown (171 f.), 8; (132 f.), 34; 32; 38
 - On the False Embassy, 38
 - Philippics, 32
- "Demosthenes, Roman," term applied to Cato the Elder, II. 312
- Demostriatus, moved that generals on Sicilian expedition have full powers, III. 252, IV. 46
- Denarius, its value, why so called, II. 124
- Densus, Sempronius, only centurion to defend Galba, XI. 264
- Dercetaeus, one of Antony's body guard, IX. 314
- Dercyllidas, Spartan general, being a bachelor, snubbed by young man, I. 248; waged war on Persians, XI. 174
- Dercyllus, Athenian general, attempts to arrest Nicanor, VIII. 218
- "De Senectute," by Cicero, II. 352, X. 374
- Deucalion (1), with Pyrrha said by some to have established sanctuary at Dodona and dwelt among Molossians, IX. 346
- Deucalion (2), son of Minos, demanded surrender of Daedalus; slain by Theseus, I. 38

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Dexithea, mother of Romulus by Aeneas, I. 92
- Dexous, slew Megacles, companion of Pyrrhus, IX. 398
- "Diadematus," surname of one of the Metelli; why given, IV. 142
- Diagoras, Olympian victor, V. 428
- Dialectics, Latin terms for it provided by Cicero, VII. 184
- Diamperes, gate of Argos, IX. 450
- Diana, temple of, at Rome, X. 234
- Dicaearchia, opposing factions in it reconciled by Sulla, and code of laws prescribed, IV. 440
- Dicaearchus, I. 44, 74, V. 52
- Dicomes, king of Getae, promised to help Antony, IX. 280
- Dictator, what he was, how appointed, etymology of the name, II. 134, 170, III. 126, V. 504; forbidden by ancient law to use horse in the field, III. 126; IX. 156
- Dictators: Fabius Buteo, 2nd dictator with M. Junius, III. 146; Caesar, VII. 130, 532, IX. 156; 2nd time, VII. 562; Camillus, II. 104; 2nd time, 158, 170; 3rd time, 180; 4th time, 194; 5th time, 94, 198; Quintus Capitolinus, 186; Fabius Maximus, III. 126 f.; Quintus Fulvius, V. 504; M. Junius, III. 146; Minucius, V. 446; Sulla, IV. 430; Postumius Tubertus, II. 96
- Dictius, praetor, sends Sertorius as military tribune to Spain, VIII. 6
- Didyma, plundered by pirates, V. 174
- Didymus, grammarian, made reply to Asclepiades re Solon's tables of law, I. 404
- "Dies Alliensis," named from disaster at river Allia, II. 136, 140
- Dies nefasti, some examples of, II. 136, 560
- Dientychidas, cited, I. 206
- Dindymene, mother of the gods, warns Themistocles, II. 82
- Dinon, see "Deinon."
- Diocleides, informer against Alcibiades, IV. 54
- Diocles (1), ruler of Megarians, lost Eleusis to Theseus, I. 20
- Diocles (2), son of Themistocles, adopted by his grandfather Lysander, II. 88
- Diocles (3), Syrian, helps Aratus capture the Acrocorinthus, XI. 40 f.
- Diocles (4), of Peparethus, source for Fabius Pictor, gives most generally accepted story of Romulus and founding of Rome, I. 96; first to publish "Founding of Rome," 112
- Diodorus (1), the Topographer, cited, I. 84; "On Tombs," II. 88; 450
- Diodorus (2), son of Sophax, Libyan king, had army of Olbianians and Mycenaean, VIII. 24
- Diogeiton, Theban leader against Alexander of Phrae after death of Pelopidas, V. 430
- Diogenes (1), of Sinope, has verbal encounter with Dionysius the Younger, VI. 296; his reply to Alexander, VII. 258; had Onesicritus as a follower, 408
- Diogenes (2), guardian of Peiraeus, XI. 76; bribed to give up Peiraeus, Munychia, Salamis, and Sunium to Athenians, 78
- Diogenes (3), Stoic, sent by Athens as ambassador to Rome, II. 368
- Diogenes (4), step-son of Archelaus, fell at Orchomenus, IV. 394
- Diogenes, adopted Lycurgus' design for a civil polity, I. 300; cited, III. 148
- Diomedes (1), son of Emathion, sent Romus from Troy, I. 92
- Diomedes (2), friend of Alcibiades, shabbily treated by him, IV. 26
- Dion, disciple of Plato, VI. 2, 8 f., II. 212; brother of Aristomache, loved and trusted by Dionysius the Elder, VI. 6 f.; impresses Dionysius the Younger, 12 f.; envied by the other courtiers, 14 f.; attempts to interest Dionysius in liberal studies, 18 f.; joins in inviting Plato to Sicily, 22; opposed by Philistus and others, 24 f.; expelled from Syracuse, 30; studies with Plato in the Academy at Athens, 32; made citizen of Sparta, 34; has his income stopped by Dionysius, 36; his estate confiscated by Dionysius, 40; becomes altogether hostile to him, 42
- Plans war, 44; not deterred by

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

eclipse of moon sails with expedition against Dionysius, 48 f., III. 290; reaches Pachynus, headland of Sicily, VI. 52; lands and is entertained at Minoa, 54; joined by men of Agrigentum and Gela, 56; joined by Camarinaeans, 58; enters Syracuse, and issues proclamation, takes Epipolae and walls off the acropolis, 60 f.; negotiates with Dionysius, 62 f.; repulses attack from the citadel, 64 f.; is suspected by Syracusans, 68 f.; opposed by Heracleides, 70 f.; in vain slandered by Sosis, 72 f.; receives offer of surrender from Dionysius, 78

Opposed by Hippo and Heracleides, 80; retires from Syracuse to Leontini, 84; is summoned from Leontini to rescue Syracuse, 88; drives troops of Apollocrates back into the acropolis, 94 f.; pardons Heracleides and Theodotes, 98; opposes redistribution of land and houses, 102; is defeated by Phara~~x~~ at Neapolis, 102; hurries back to Syracuse and forestalls Heracleides and Gaesylus, 104; receives surrender of acropolis from Apollocrates, 106; takes back his wife Arete, 108; lives simply but through haughtiness becomes unpopular, is opposed by Heracleides once more, 110 f.; allows Heracleides to be murdered, 112, 312; is plotted against and murdered by Calippus, 114 f., 262, III. 260

See also II. 212, VI. 248, 460

Quoted: VI. 12, 36, 90

Dionassa, 2nd wife of Eunomus, mother of Lycurgus, I. 206

Dionysia, festival, called Demetria in honour of Demetrius, IX. 28

Dionysius (1), the Elder, very suspicious, kept his son shut up, VI. 18; composed lyric poems and tragedies, 296; account of women he married and early troubles, 6; pardoned frankness of his sister Theste, 44; banished Philistus, 24; executed children of Aristides the Locrian, 274; aided by the Spartans, V. 420; honours and trusts Dion, hears Plato and is angered, VI. 6 f.; sends Plato away, requests Pollis to kill or sell him, 10; his children and death, 12; his funeral, V. 428

See also I. 458, IV. 236

Quoted: VI. 10, 12, 16

Dionysius (2), the Younger, son of Doris, VI. 6; married Sophrosyne, 12; offered help against Carthage by Dion, 14; kept secluded by his father, 18; urged by Dion to invite Plato to Sicily, 20; invites Plato to Sicily, recalls Philistus from exile, 22; becoming suspicious, sends Dion to Italy; finally sends Plato away, 30; ally of Sparta against Thebes, 34; jealous of Dion, confiscates his property; induces Plato to come to Sicily again, then dismisses him, 36; absent when Dion's expedition arrives, returns to Syracuse, negotiates with Dion and the Syracusans, then suddenly attacks, 54 f.; is driven back to the acropolis, 64; sends letter to Dion, 68; offers to surrender conditionally; being refused, sails away, leaving citadel in charge of his son, 80, 262, 340, III. 290; in 10th year of his exile drives out Nisaeus, and becomes tyrant of Syracuse once more, VI. 262; defeated by Hicetas and shut up in acropolis, 280; surrenders to Timoleon; spends rest of his life in Corinth, 290

Quoted: 26, 40, 294 f.

Dionysius (3), Colophonian, his pictures seem forced and laboured, VI. 346

Dionysius (4), sent from Corinth to establish civil polity of Syracuse, VI. 320

Dionysius (5), Messenian, executed by Alexander, VII. 428

Dionysius (6), Syrian, brother of Diocles and Erginus, XI. 44

Dionysius (7), Chalcus, his poems extant; founded Thurii, III. 224

Dionysius (8), Magnesian, taught Cicero oratory, VII. 90

Dionysius (9), of Halicarnassus, cited, I. 138; ("Antiq. Rom." 8. 2), IV. 220; IX. 400; 414

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Dionysius, pattern deity of Demetrius, IX. 8; cited, XI. 208
- Dionysodorus, of Troezen, cited, XI. 2
- Dionysus, married one of the two Ariadnes, and begot Staphylus, I. 42; with Ariadne honoured in festival of Oschophoria, 50, II. 114; 378; 408; 410; 462; III. 216; beneficent deeds of, IV. 308; mortal who became immortal, V. 378; called Euius and Thriambus by Greeks, 496; orgies of, practised by Macedonian women, VII. 226, 258; had Gynaeceia as one of his mothers, 462; his figure in "Battle of the Giants" at Athens blown down, IX. 274
- Dionysus Carnivorous, receives sacrifice of 3 Persian youths before Salamis, II. 40, 238, V. 392
- "Dionysus, New," term Antony applied to himself, IX. 274
- Diophanes (1), general of Achaean League, invades Laconia, X. 300; kept out of Sparta by Philopoemen, 390; 368
- Diophanes (2), rhetorician, exile from Mitylene, said to have urged Ti. Gracchus to attempt agrarian reform, X. 160; executed after death of Ti. Gracchus, 192
- Diophantus, of deme Amphotropé, said to have prosecuted Aristides for taking bribe, II. 294
- Diopheithes (1), introduced bill for impeachment of those not believing in gods, III. 92
- Diopheithes (2), cites oracle against claims of Agesilaüs to throne, IV. 294, V. 6
- Diopheithes (3), Athenian general, VII. 214, VIII. 160
- Dioscorides, writer of treatise on Spartan civic polity, cited, I. 236, V. 98
- Dioscuri (Tyndaridae, Castor and Pollux) demanded their sister Helen of Theseus, I. 70; stormed Aphidnae, then received into Athens, 74; initiated into Eleusinian mysteries; adopted by Aphidnus, honoured as gods and called Anakes, 76, 352; appeared on Lysander's ship, IV. 280; golden stars of, set up at Delphi by Lysander, disappear before Leuctra, 280; sacrificed to by Alexander, VII. 368; called princes of Sparta, X. 358; seen in Rome after defeat of Tarquins, VI. 420; seen in forum after battle of Lake Regillus; Ides of July consecrated to them, IV. 124; temple of, in Samothrace, VI. 418; in forum at Rome by fountain, IV. 124, 350, VIII. 298; decorated by Caecilius Metellus, V. 120
- Diphilus (1), priest of Saviour-gods at Athens, IX. 114
- Diphilus (2), (Kock II. 576), III. 208
- Diphridas, ephor of Sparta, orders Agesilaüs to invade Boeotia immediately, V. 44
- Diploma, what it was, XI. 222, 280
- Dipylus, originally called Thriasian gates, III. 86, IV. 370
- Disaster, natural, ancient deluge, IV. 372; at Alban lake, II. 98
- Diseases: gout, its symptoms, IV. 408; ulceration of bowels and being eaten by worms, afflicted Sulla and others, 438; boulimia, theories as to cause of, VI. 180; cataract, endured by Timoleon, 350; quinsy, VII. 62; epileptic fits, of Caesar, 482; pleurisy of Marius, IX. 592
- Dithyrambic chorus, VII. 308
- Dium, city where Alexander met Demetrius, IX. 86
- Divorce, Hipparete applies for one from Alcibiades, IV. 20; decrees of Romulus concerning, I. 160; none at Rome for 230 years, 198; of Cloelia by Sulla, IV. 344; of Clodia and Servilia by Lucullus, II. 594; of Antistia by Pompey, V. 134; of Mucia by Pompey, 226; of Papiria by Aemilius Paulus, VI. 366
- Docimus, strives for chief command under Eumenes, VIII. 102
- Dodona, sanctuary there, said to have been established by Deucalion and Pyrrha, IX. 346; IV. 304; VIII. 208
- Dodonaeon Zeus, oracle of, II. 76
- Doe, white, of Sertorius, VIII. 28, 54
- Dog, of Xanthippus, had tomb at Salamis, II. 30, 460
- Dolabella (1), Gn. Cornelius, Sulla's

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- legate, IV. 414, 420; had naval command, which Sulla tried to take away from him, 448; impeached by Caesar, acquitted, VII. 448
- Dolabella (2), P. Cornelius, disgraces Caesar by his madness, VII. 562; introduces law for abolition of debts, opposed by Antony, IX. 156 f., 160; objected to by Antony as colleague in consulship, 162; VI. 130; accused of plotting against Caesar, 140, VII. 588, IX. 164; went to Syria without Cicero, VII. 190; VI. 180
- Dolabella (3), P. Cornelius, acts for Caesar Augustus, IX. 324
- Dolabella (4), favoured for emperor by some, XI. 254; sent away by Otho to Aquinum, 286
- Doliola, name given place in temple of Quirinus where jars of Vestals were buried, II. 144
- Dolo, what it is, X. 168
- Dolopians, inhospitable and savage, refused to give up bones of Theseus, I. 82; driven from Scyros by Cimon, who sent bones of Theseus to Athens, II. 428; harried by Macedonians, X. 364
- Domitian, changed names September and October to Germanicus and Domitianus, I. 370; built 4th temple of Jupiter Capitolinus, 540 f.; learns of the defeat of the rebel Antonius, VI. 420 f.
- Domitius, see "Ahenobarbus" and "Calvinus."
- Doors, of house of M. Valerius alone opened outwards. Greek doors all did, I. 554
- Dorians, in Asia, III. 56
- Doris, raided by Xerxes, II. 26
- Doris, Locrian, wife of Dionysius the Elder, VI. 6; had 3 children, 12
- Dorylaüs, general of Mithridates, lands at Chalcis, occupies Boeotia, is worsted in skirmish with Sulla near Tilphossium, IV. 390; slain in mutiny, II. 522.
- 'Doston,' surname given Antigonus in mockery, IV. 142, VI. 372
- Dowry, Terentia brought Cicero 100,000 denarii, VII. 100
- "Drachma," original meaning of, IV. 278; II. 510
- Draco, laws of, repealed by Solon except one relating to homicide, I. 448; said lesser crimes deserved death, and for greater ones no heavier penalty could be found, 450; 454
- Dracontides, moves a bill that Pericles deposit his accounts of public moneys with the prytanes, etc., III. 92
- Dramatic artists, assembled at Samos by Sulla, IX. 266
- Dramatic tetralogy, had farcical appendage, III. 14
- Dreams, II. 460, 500, 502, 506, 542, 544, III. 8, 44, 350, IV. 112, 176, 288, 352, 414, 440, V. 14, 170, 198, 292, 306, 390, 392, VI. 4, 116, 170, 206, 218, 234, 276, VII. 72, 84, 194, 226, 292, 368, 544, 590, 602, VIII. 94, IX. 10, 68, 172, 374, 442, X. 64, 198
- Dress, II. 518, 536, IV. 236, 376, IX. 98, 262
- Dromichaetes, treated Lysimachus, his captive, humanely, IX. 132
- Dromocleides, Sphettian, IX. 32; proposes that Piraeus and Munychia be handed over to Demetrius, 84
- Drusus (1) Livius, criticizes C. Gracchus, X. 148; tribune, tries to weaken C. Gracchus, 214; 220
- Drusus (2) Livius, uncle on mother's side, reared Cato the Younger, his brother Caepio, sister Porcia, half-sister Servilia, VIII. 236, 238
- Drusus (3), son of Livia, step-son of Octavius, married to Antonia, progenitor of Germanicus and Claudius, IX. 332
- Dryad, VII. 462
- Duris, Samian, descendant of Alcibiades, IV. 92; credibility as historian attacked by Plutarch, III. 78
- Cited: III. 78, IV. 92, 280, V. 6, VII. 46, 56, 260, 356, VIII. 78, 152, 184
- Dyme, city of Achaean League, XI. 24; Achaeans defeated there by Cleomenes, X. 80; XI. 108; given to pirates as residence by Pompey, V. 186

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Dyrrhachium, IV. 408; VII. 164; v. 278; Caesar driven from it by Pompey, VII. 480; 180
- Earthquake, at Sparta, I. 292, II. 452, IV. 66; at Athens, III. 244; during battle of lake Thrasymené, 124; VII. 164
- Ecbatana, in Media, v. 38, 416, VII. 34, 424, XI. 192
- Ecdelus, Arcadian of Megalopolis, friend of Aratus, XI. 10, 16
- Ecdemus, Megalopolitan, made tutor of Philopoemen; his career, x. 256
- Echecrates, prophet-priest of oracle of temple of Apollo Tegyraeus, v. 378
- Echecratides, sophist, liberated by Alexander on request of Phocion, VIII. 186
- "Echedemia," early name of Academy; named after Echedemus, I. 74
- Echedemus, in army of Dioscuri, gave name Echedemia to what was afterwards called Academy, I. 76
- Echidna, fabled serpent, III. 418
- Eclipses, I. 120, III. 288 f., 290, 292, v. 46, 420, VI. 40, 48, 56, 400, VII. 316
- Enomum, in Sicily, VI. 56
- Economy, domestic, taught by Cato the Elder, II. 390
- Epphanes, father of Mandrocleidas, X. 14
- Eprepes, ephor, cut out 2 of 9 lute-strings of Phrynis, the musician, x. 24
- Eregma, in Egypt, IX. 142
- Edessa, in Macedonia, IX. 106, 370; where Lysimachus attacked Pyrrhus, 380
- "Editia," possibly at base of "phiditia," I. 236
- Edonian women, about Mt. Haemus, VII. 228
- Education, Spartan, I. 244 f., 396, v 2; Athenian, IV. 8, 16; II. 118; Roman, I. 396; Cato the Elder's education of his son, II. 360; Aemilius Paulus' education of his children, VI. 370; of Spanish boys by Sertorius, VIII. 38; III. 318
- Egeria, goddess, consorted with Numa Pompilius, I. 316, 332; 350; 360
- Egestaeans, descendants of Trojans, aided by Athenians, III. 210; 250
- Egypt, revolts against Persia with Athenian aid, II. 84; 460 f.; III. 62; XI. 184; II. 474 f.; VII. 180
- Egyptians, think Lycurgus visited them and copied some features of his constitution from them, I. 214; 318; IX. 142
- "Eight," as first cube and double first square, represents power of Poseidon, I. 86
- Eion, city on banks of Strymon, taken from Persians by Cimon and the land given Athenians, II. 422 f.
- Eirens, young men at Sparta, 20 years old, 2 years out of class of boys; their duties, I. 258
- Eiresione, what it is, I. 46
- 'Εκατόμβιον, (100 oxen), origin of term as referring to money, I. 54
- Elaea, its revenue offered Phocion by Alexander, VIII. 186; II. 484
- Elaeus, in Chersonese, IV. 254
- Elatea, plains of, IV. 374
- Elateia, surprised by Philip, VII. 42; VIII. 222
- Elatus, first ephor, in reign of Theopompus, I. 224
- Elea (Velia), on coast of Italy, VI. 176, 456
- Eleans (Eleians), secede from Lacedaemonians, and make alliance with Athens, III. 244, IV. 36; x. 56; helped by Cleomenes, 58; have Langon restored to them by Cleomenes, 80
- "Electra," of Euripides (v. 167 f.), cited, IV. 272
- "Elegies," of Critias (Bergk II. 279 f.), cited, IV. 96
- Eleus, twin son of Cimon and woman of Arcadia, II. 450, III. 82
- Elephants, VII. 296; used by Pyrrhus in Italy, IX. 414, 428; used by Hannibal and routed, v. 508
- Elephenor, son of Chalcodon, accompanied by sons of Theseus to Ilium, I. 80 f.
- Eleusis, taken by Theseus from the Megarians, I. 20, 68, 70, II. 42, 246; sanctuary of mysteries at; by whom built, III. 40, 86; mysteries

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- of, profaned by Alcibiades, it is charged, IV. 48; festal rites of, described; celebrated by Alcibiades, 98; V. 374; captured by Demetrius, IX. 80
- Eleutheræ, I. 68
- Eleutheria, celebrated at Plataea every 4th year, II. 278
- Elimiæ, battle of; Hostilius repulsed by Perseus, VI. 376
- Elis, detached from Spartan confederacy by Thebes, v. 396
- Elpinicé, Cimon's sister, her tomb, II. 412; scandal about her, 414, 450; gets Pericles not to press charge of treason against Cimon, 448, III. 30; quoted, 80
- Elymaeans, kings of, send ambassadors to Pompey, v. 208
- Elysian Field, of which Homer sang, believed to be the Atlantic Islands, VIII. 22
- Enathion, father of Diomedes, I. 92
- Embalming, Agesilaüs' body enclosed in melted wax instead of honey, v. 112; 222
- Embassies: III. 216, 242, 244, 250, IV. 34, 66, 144, 180, 194, 238, 248, v. 416, VI. 386, VII. 38, 40, 42, 56, IX. 406
- Embezzlement, II. 220, III. 90
- Empedocles, on effect of love and hate, IX. 12
- Empylus, rhetorician and housemate of M. Brutus; wrote account of Caesar's murder called "Brutus," VI. 130
- Enarsphorus, son of Hippocoön, sought to carry off Helen when still a child, I. 72
- Endeis, daughter of Sciron and Chariclo, mother of Peleus and Telamon, I. 20
- Endymion, story of, among Arcadians, resembles that about Numa and Egeria, I. 316
- Engyium, city of Sicily, brief description and history of, v. 488
- Enna, city of Sicily, v. 488
- Enyalios, temple of, on Salamis, erected by Solon, I. 426
- Epaminondas, his family, poverty, character, generalship, II. 212, v. 346 f., VI. 344 f., VIII. 150; saves life of Pelopidas at Mantinea, v. 350; suffered by Spartans to remain in Thebes when other popular leaders were outlawed, 352; urges Theban youth to vie with Spartans in wrestling, 356; comes to aid of Theban exiles with armed following, 368; introduces Pelopidas and his companions to Theban assembly, 370; decides to fight Cleombrotus, 388; his tactics at Leuctra, 394; as boeotarch with Pelopidas invades Peloponnesus, defeats Athenians while returning, brought to trial for prolonging command, acquitted, 396; opposed politically by Menocleidas, 400; with allies ravages Laconia, and challenges Agesilaüs to battle, 84; busy in Peloponnesus, 404; sent to Thessaly, rescues Pelopidas and Ismenias, 414; builds Messene, repulsed by Agesilaüs before Sparta, slain at Mantinea, 94, IV. 452; buried at public expense, III. 196; v. 78.
- See also II. 324, 394, IV. 223, x. 260, 292, XI. 42
- Quoted: I. 242, IV. 126, v. 76, 348, 492
- Epaphroditus, freedman of Octavius Caesar, IX. 316
- "Epaphroditus," official title adopted by Sulla in writing to Greeks, IV. 434
- Eperatus, general of Achaeans, XI. 110
- Ephesians, honour Alcibiades, IV. 26; defeat Athenians under Thrasyllus 84; made prosperous by Lysander; headquarters of Persian generals, 238; IX. 270
- Ephesus, naval battle near it won by Lysander over Athenians under Antiochus, IV. 104, 242; x. 382; II. 542; 550; assembly point for Antony's navy, IX. 264
- Ephetai, Draco addresses himself to them in cases of homicide, I. 454
- Ephialtes (1), in trying to dethrone Council of Areiopagus, opposed by Cimon, II. 436; 444; acting for Pericles, broke power of Council of Areiopagus, 450, III. 20; 26; II. 454; his character, career, manner of death, 30 f.
- Ephialtes (2), Athenian leader whose

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- surrender was demanded by Alexander, VII. 56
- Ephialtes, put in fetters by Alexander for announcing the absconding of Harpalus, VII. 346
- Ephors, established as curb upon oligarchy at Sparta 100 years after Lycurgus in reign of Theopompus, I. 224; 290; 296; bribed by Themistocles, II. 52, 244, 420; hold office for year only, v. 8, 10; how their power increased, X. 70
- Ephorus, cited, II. 72, 138, 440, 442, III. 78, IV. 94, 304, 318, v. 380, VI. 76, 78, 270
- Epicharmus, comic poet of school of Pythagoras, I. 334; cited, 334, 542
- Epicles, of Hermione, harpist, II. 14
- Epicrates (1), of deme Acharnae, II. 66
- Epicrates (2), shield-bearer of Timagoras, v. 418
- Epicurus (1), one of Phocion's accusers, VIII. 232
- Epicurus (2), II. 612, VI. 206, VII. 596; during siege of Athens maintained lives of associates by distributing beans, IX. 82, 408
- Epicydes, son of Euphemides, popular leader bought off by Themistocles, II. 16
- Epicydidas, brings message to Agestilaüs, v. 38
- Epidamnus, VI. 180.
- Epidaurus, besieged by Pericles, III. 102; joined Achaean league, XI. 54; taken over by Cleomenes, X. 90, 94; sacred treasures, of, used by Sulla, IV. 362; temple of Asclepias there, v. 174
- Epigethes, prominent citizen of Pelléné, XI. 72
- Epigonus, tyrant of Colophon, arrested by Lucullus, II. 478
- Epileycus, Tisander's father, III. 104
- Epimenides, of Phaestus, considered by some one of 7 wise men, I. 432
- Epipolae, part of city of Syracuse, III. 266, 284, VI. 58, 62
- Epirus, I. 72, II. 64, IX. 346; Pyrrhus put on its throne by Glaucias, 352, 356; devoted to Pyrrhus, 358; plundered by Demetrius, 100, 430, X. 328; overrun by Romans, X. 332; pillaged by troops of Aemilius Paulus, VI. 432
- Epitadeus, ephor, introduced law permitting man to give or will his estate to whomsoever he wished, X. 12
- Epitaph, of Abrotonon, mother of Themistocles, II. 2; 276; of Timon, IX. 298f.
- Epitimus, Pharsalian, III. 104
- "Epitragia," why a surname of Aphrodité, I. 36
- Epixyes, satrap of Upper Phrygia, plots to kill Themistocles, II. 82
- Epoptae, IV. 60.
- "Epoptic," term applied to secret philosophical teachings, VII. 240
- Erasistratus (1), father of Phaeax, IV. 28
- Erasistratus (2), son of Phacax, cited, v. 40
- Erasistratus (3), physician at court of Seleucus, IX. 92
- Eratosthenes, cited, I. 204; (On Wealth) II. 74; VII. 22, 74, 228, 314
- Erechtheus, ancestor of Theeus on father's side, I. 6; father of Meropé, grandfather of Daedalus, 38, 72
- Eresos, Phanias of, I. 496
- Eretria, Plutarch expelled from it by Phocion, VIII. 172
- Ergadeis, one of 4 original tribes of Attica; why so called, I. 468
- Erginus, Syrian, helped Aratus take Acrocorinthus, helped in attempt on Peiraeus, XI. 40, 76
- Ergoteles, waits to seize Themistocles when he lands in Asia, II. 68
- Erianthus, Theban, IV. 272
- Ericius, served under Sulla, IV. 378, 384
- Erigius, friend of Alexander in his youth, banished by Philip, VII. 248
- Erinyes, shrine of, at Athens, I. 430
- Eros, Anthony's slave, refuses to kill him, IX. 310
- Erycina, in Sicily, IX. 574
- Eryx, taken by Pyrrhus, IX. 418
- Esquiline hill, a city-gate of Rome upon it, IV. 354
- Estate, of Demosthenes, father of the orator, VII. 8; of Aemilius Paulus, VI. 458
- Eteocles, Spartan, re Lysander, IV. 284

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Etesian winds, VI. 48
- "Ethics," book by Theophrastus, III. 110
- Etruria, pacified by Marcellus, V. 512; its cities give C. Scipio money for war in Africa, III. 192; VII. 106
- Etymocles, friend of Agesilaüs, V. 70
- Eÿa, its meaning, V. 494
- Euboea, governed by tyrant Tynnondas, I. 438; siezed by Athens, III. 20, 56; reinvaded and subdued by Pericles, 66, 200; occupied by Archelaüs, VI. 358; brought under sway of tyrants by Philip, freed by Athens, VII. 40
- Euboeans, fearing abandonment, send Pelagon with large sums of money to Themistocles, II. 20; III. 64; proclaimed free by Flamininus at Isthmian games, X. 350
- Eubulus, Athenian, orator merely, VIII. 160
- Euchidas, fetched fire from Delphi to Plataea in one day, 1000 furlongs, II. 276
- Eucleia, who she was, II. 278
- Eucleidas (1), Spartan at court of Artaxerxes II., XI. 134f.
- Eucleidas (2), brother of Cleomenes, chosen as colleague in kingship by him, X. 74, 248; commanded a wing at Sellasia, 114; defeated and slain, 116, 268
- Euclides (1), new alphabet used after his archonship, II. 212
- Euclides (2), sent by Timoleon to receive surrender of acropolis from Dionysius, VI. 290
- Euctus, Perseus' treasurer, slain by him, VI. 416
- "Eudaemon," surname of 2nd Battus IV. 142
- Eudamidas (1), younger son of Archidamus, succeeded his brother Agis to throne of Sparta, X. 8
- Eudamidas (2), succeeded Archidamus, succeeded by Agis as king of Sparta, X. 8
- Eudamus, master of elephants under Eumenes, VIII. 128
- Eudemus (1), Cyprian, urges Dion to free Sicily. On death of Eudemus Aristotle wrote dialogue "On the Soul," VI. 46
- Eudemus (2), of Pergamum, brought will of Attalus Philometor to Rome, X. 176
- Eudoxus, with Archytas, originates mechanics and uses it in geometrical problems, V. 470
- "Euergetes," surname, its origin, IV. 142
- "Euius," name for Dionysius, V. 496
- Euius, flute-player of Alexander, VIII. 80
- Eulaeus, Perseus' treasurer, slain by him, VI. 416
- Eumelus, father of Xenagoras, VI. 394
- Eumenes (1), of Cardia, his family; advanced by Philip, then by Alexander, VIII. 78; often quarrels with Alexander and Hephaestion, 80 f.; given satrapy of Cappadocia, Paphlagonia, and southern coast of Euxineas far as Trapezus, 84; helped by Perdicas to master his satrapy, sent by Perdicas to pacify Armenia, 88; appointed, commander of forces in Armenia and Cappadocia, defeats Neoptolemus, 90; rejects overtures of Antipater and Craterus, 92; defeats and slays them, 96 f.; winters at Celaenae, 102; defeated through treachery by Antigonus at Orcynii, 104; takes refuge in Nora, 108
- Besieged by Antigonus in Nora, 110 f.; takes oath of fealty to Antigonus with alteration, then flees, 114 f.; receives letters from Macedonia ordering him to wage war on Antigonus, 116; prevents Antigonus with loss from crossing the river Pasitigris, 120; though sick deters Antigonus from attacking, 122; though warned of plot against his life, still fights Antigonus with partial success, 126 f.; taken prisoner by the Silver-shields, his own men, and given to Antigonus, 130 f., who finally has him executed, 136; 4.
- Quoted, 102, 108, 132, 134
- Eumenes (2), received at Rome with extravagant honours by senate, II. 324; X. 384
- Eumenes, IX. 274
- Eumenides, shrine of, in Athens, I. 62

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Eumolpidae, Athenian family, IV. 60, 96
- Eumolpus, IV. 368
- Euneos, Athenian, brother of Thoas and Solois, with former made president and law-giver of Pythopolis by Theseus, I. 58 f.
- Eunomus (1), genealogy, relation to Lycurgus, I. 206
- Eunomus (2), Thriasian, upbraids Demosthenes, VII. 16
- Eunus, runaway slave who headed Servile war in Sicily eaten of worms, IV. 440
- Euphemides, Athenian, father of Epicydes, II. 16
- Euphorion, father of Solon according to Philocles, I. 404
- Euphranor, engineer, exile from Syracuse, made ladders for Aratus, XI. 12
- Euphrantides, seer, advises sacrificing 3 sons of Sandaucé, II. 38, 238
- Euphrates, crossed by Clodius, II. 534, 546, 548, 590; crossed by Crassus, III. 364, 372
- Euphronius, teacher of Antony and Cleopatra's children, sent by them on embassy to Caesar Octavius, IX. 302
- Eupolemus, son of Hicetas, captured and executed, VI. 338
- Eupolia (1), daughter of Melesippidas wife of Archidamus, mother of Agesilaüs v. 2
- Eupolia (2), daughter of Agesilaüs, v. 52
- Eupolis, cited:—
 Cities (Kock I. 315), II. 450
 Demes (Kock I. 280), III. 8; (281), IV. 28; (282), III. 70
 Maricas (Kock I. 308), III. 220
- Euripides, died and buried at Arethusa in Macedonia; his tomb struck by lightning, I. 302; knowledge of his poetry saved some Athenian prisoners at Syracuse, III. 308; Alexander of Pheræ greatly affected by "Trojan Women," v. 414; some of his plays sent to Alexander, VII. 242; "Bacchae" being given before Hyrodes when head of Crassus is brought in, III. 420
- Plays cited:—
 Andromaché (587 f.), I. 392; (683), VII. 372
 Bacchae (4 f.), IX. 114; (8), I. 404; (260), VII. 378; (310 f.), X. 168; (1170-72), III. 420; (1179), 422
 Electra (167), IV. 272
 Epinikion (Bergk II. 266), IV. 26
 Epitaph (Bergk II. 265), III. 268
See also IV. 4, VII. 2
 Erechtheus Nauck (474), III. 238
 Hercules Furens (173 f.), VIII. 362
 Iphigenia at Aulis (445 f.), III. 224
 Licymnius (Nauck 507), v. 492
 Medeia (215), VI. 338; (334), 240
 Orestes (129), IV. 64
 Phoenissae (68), IX. 370; (396), 34; (517 f.), 386; (524 f.), III. 434; (532 f.), IV. 332
 Suppliants (653 f.), I. 66; (863), v. 346; (1213), 68
 Trojan Women (766), v. 38
 Unidentified (Nauck 473), II. 414; (474), III. 238; (652), VII. 378; (671), v. 308; (679), III. 168, v. 528, IX. 336; (680), I. 28, 464
- Eurotas river, supplied rushes for pallet-beds of Spartan boys, I. 258; v. 50; crossed by Thebans under Epaminondas, v. 88, 396; 382
- Eurybiades, Spartan, humoured and bribed by Themistocles at Artemisium, II. 20; wishes to abandon Salamis, 234; worsted in wordy encounter with Themistocles, 32; given 1st prize for valour by Spartans, 48
- Eurycleidas, messenger of Cleomenes, x. 64
- Eurycleides, with Micion prevents Athenians from helping Aratus, XI. 94
- Eurycles (1), his proposal as to treatment of the captive Athenians adopted by Syracusans, III. 304
- Eurycles (2), Laconian, son of Lachares, pursues Antony's ship at Actium, IX. 288
- Eurydicé (1), sister of Phila, wife of Ptolemy, gives daughter Ptolemais in marriage to Demetrius, IX. 116
- Eurydicé (2), widow of Opheltas,

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- descendant of ancient Miltiades, married by Demetrius, IX. 32; mother of Corrhagus, 134
 Eurylochus, of Aegae, soldier of Alexander, VII. 346
 Eurymedon, battles of, II. 440
 Eurymedon, brings Nicias money from Athens, III. 278
 Eurypon, Spartan king, gave name to royal line because popular, I. 208
 Eurypontids, a house of the Heraclidae, royal line at Sparta, I. 208, IV. 300, 318, v. 328; Agis one, X. 8
 Euryptolemus, father of Isodicé, II. 416; son of Megacles, 452; kinsman of Pericles, III. 18; of Alcibiades, IV. 94
 Euryaces, son of Ajax, with his brother Philaeus became Athenian citizen and made over Salamis to Athens, I. 426; founder of Alcibiades' family, IV. 2
 Euterpé, Carian, wife of Neocles and mother of Themistocles according to Phanias, II. 2
 Euthippus, of Anaphlystus, friend of Cimon, slain at Tanagra, II. 458
 Euthydemus, colleague of Nicias, III. 278; with Menander defeated by Syracusans, 280
 Euthymus, Leucadian, defeated by Gisco, VI. 334; Hicetas' master of horse, captured and executed, 338
 Euthynnus, Thesplan according to Callisthenes, warns Agesilaüs, v. 96
 Eutyclus, his name of good omen to Octavian, IX. 284
 Euxine sea, expedition to, by Pericles, III. 60; northern limit of Eumenes' territory, VIII. 84; II. 482; boundary of territory of Iberians, v. 204; 206
 Evalcus, Spartan, slain by Pyrrhus, IX. 448
 Evander (1) Arcadian, husband of Carmenta or Nicostraté, I. 156; came to Italy, 124
 Evander (2), Cretan, remains with Perseus in his flight, VI. 416
 Evander's hill, near Messené, X. 308
 Evangelus (1), Pericles' steward, most economical, III. 52
 Evangelus (2), his 'Tactics' studied by Philopoemen, X. 264
 Evanthes, Samian, cited, I. 430
 Exathres, brother of Darius, admitted as companion of Alexander, VII. 352
 Excestides, father of Solon, descended from Solon, I. 404
 "Exegetics," work of Autocleides, III. 292
 Exhibitions, choral and gymnastic, given by Nicias to win favour, III. 214 Expedition, Sicilian, III. 250 f., IV. 44 f.
 Exports, from Athens, I. 470
 Fabia, sister of Terentia, Cicero's wife, slandered by Clodius, VIII. 278
 Fabii, origin of the family, III. 118; 3 men of, sent as ambassadors to Gauls, denounced by the Fetiales, II. 130 f.; 300 of, slain by Tuscans, 136
 Fabius (1), founder of family of Fabii, III. 118
 Fabius (2), pontifex maximus, with the other priests and aged ex-consuls refuses to leave Rome, II. 146
 Fabius (3), great-grandfather of Fabius Cunctator, 5 times consul, served as legate under his son when latter was consul, III. 188
 Fabius (4), son of preceding, consul, celebrated triumph, III. 188
 Fabius (5), pro-praetor, sent grain from Spain to Rome, X. 210 Fabius (6), Lucullus' legate, defeated by Mithridates, II. 584
 Fabius Ambustus, see "Ambustus, Q. Fabius."
 Fabius Buteo, dictator with Marcus Junius after Cannae, III. 146
 Fabius Fabulus, said to have slain Galba, XI. 266
 Fabius Maximus (1) Cunctator Verrucosus, his family and character, III. 118 f.; in his 1st consulship triumphs over Ligurians, 120; after defeat of Romans at lake Trasymené appointed dictator, appoints M. Minucius master of horse, 126; follows Hannibal but avoids battle, 130 f.; pens Hannibal up in district of Casilinum, 134; lets Hannibal escape, 138; denounced at Rome for his tactics, 140;

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- ransoms prisoners at his own expense, 142; has to share power of dictatorship with Minucius, 146; rescues Minucius from disaster, who resigns his equality of command, 152 f.; lays down his dictatorship, 158; urges Aemilius Paulus the consul to be cautious, 160
- Calms the citizens after Cannae, 170; is put in command with Claudius Marcellus, 172; consul 5 times, escapes Hannibal's trap, 174 f.; believes in treating disaffection mildly, 176 f.; recaptures Tarentum, 180 f.; incurs reproach of perfidy and cruelty, 184; is honoured by his son being made consul, 186; opposes Scipio and his policy, 190 f.; died at about time Hannibal set sail from Italy, 196
- See also II. 308, III. 6, v. 456, 492, 500, 506, VII. 478
- Quoted: III. 134, 152, 160, 178, 184, 186, 492
- Fabius Maximus (2) son of preceding, made consul, corrects his father, III. 186; died in consulship before his father, 120, 190
- Fabius Maximus (3), son of Aemilius Paulus and Papiria, VI. 364, 366; seizes pass through Perrhaebia, 392; received all of his father's estate, 458
- Fabius Valens, commander of a legion under Verginius Rufus, takes oath of allegiance to Galba, XI. 226; slew Fonteius in Germany by order of Galba, 236; first to salute Vitellius as emperor, 254; in possession of Alps, 286; his character, 290 f., 294
- Fabius Pictor, kinsman of Fabius Cunctator, sent to consult oracle of Delphi after Cannae, III. 170 f.; follows Diocles of Peparethus in his account of Romulus and founding of Rome, I. 96; cited, I. 96, 112, 126
- Fables related: II. 50, IV. 130, v. 102, VII. 56, VIII. 162
- Fabricius, C., explains defeat at Heraclela, IX. 400; heads embassy to Pyrrhus re exchange of prisoners, 406, made consul, warns Pyrrhus of plot to poison him, 410, x. 378; II. 386; 394; quoted IX. 408
- Fabulus, Fabius, see "Fabius Fabulus."
- "Faenum habet in cornu," origin and significance of saying, III. 334
- Faith, see "Fides."
- Falerians, with Capenates, utterly defeated by Camillus, II. 98; conquered by Camillus, 104; attacked by Romans under Camillus, make peace with Rome, 116 f., 130
- Falerii, attacked by Romans on account of insult to tribune Genucius, x. 204; besieged by Camillus, II. 116; induced to yield by his treatment of traitorous schoolmaster, 120, III. 122
- Faliscans, see "Falerians."
- Famine, in Citium, II. 466; in Athens, IV. 270; 366, in Rome, I. 546
- Fannia, divorced from Titinnus, befriends Marius, IX. 570
- Fannius, C., says Ti. Gracchus with himself first to scale wall of Carthage x. 152, elected consul, 212; 222
- Far-darter, epithet applied to Apollo, x. 358
- Fasces, what they were, I. 172; carried before Vestals in public, 342; 528
- Father, his right to sell sons curtailed by Numa, I. 366
- Faunus, demi-god, once haunted Aventine, I. 158, 358; husband of Bona according to Romans, VII. 462
- Fausta, twin daughter of Sulla and Metella, IV. 434
- Faustulus, servant of Amulius, exposed children of Ilia, I. 96; reared Ilia's twins, 102; 108; slain with Remus, 116
- Faustus, twin son of Sulla and Metella, IV. 434; thrashed by Cassius, VI. 144; married Pompey's daughter, v. 238, 326, VII. 474; v. 224; placarded his household goods for sale, VII. 150
- Favonius, Cato's friend, last to take oath to uphold Caesar's land law, VIII. 314; VII. 496; 542; elected aedile, VIII. 348; v. 274, VII. 524; v. 290, 334; on board ship acts as

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Pompey's valet, 306; not informed of conspiracy to murder Caesar, VI. 148 f.; reconciles Brutus and Cassius at Sardis, 200
- Fear, temple to, at Sparta, X. 66; signs of, XI. 68
- "Febrata," ancient name of day of feast of Lupercalia, I. 156
- February, means purification, I. 156, 370; intercalary month called Mercedinus by Romans, 366
- Fees, for public services introduced by Pericles, III. 24; none charged by Cato the Elder, II. 304
- "Felix," title adopted by Sulla, IV. 434
- Penestella, cited, III. 326
- Ferentine gate, I. 166
- Festival, of Adonis, described, III. 256, IV. 48; of Ceres, III. 170; Corcia, VI. 118; Dionysiac, VII. 308, IX. 28; Hyacinthia, at Sparta, II. 244; Lupercalia, VII. 584; Lysandreia of Samians, IV. 280; of The Pitchers, IX. 298; Saturnalia, license of slaves then, IV. 386; Thesmophoria, V. 352; IV. 390
- Fetiales, priests established by Numa, their duties, I. 346, II. 132
- Fever-few, grew on acropolis at Athens, IV. 366
- Fidenae, people of, defeated by Romulus and taken to Rome, I. 138, 164; attacked by Veii, 168; 560 f.
- Fidentia, battle there between Sulla's and Marius' men, IV. 412
- Fides, temple to, erected by Numa, I. 362
- Fimbria, assassinated Flaccus, IV. 364, 402, II. 490; defeated Mithridates by land, asked Sulla to cut him off by sea, 478 f. VIII. 64, X. 384; when his soldiers go over to Sulla, commits suicide, IV. 404; II. 582 f.; quoted, 480
- Fines: II. 412, 414, III. 64, 78, 102, 226, IV. 320, 406, V. 4, 10, 98, 204, 412, VI. 198, VII. 64, 100.
- Fire, perpetual, in Greece entrusted to widows past age of marrying; how rekindled if extinguished, I. 338 f.; in Rome entrusted to Vestals, 338; appointed by Numa to be worshipped as first cause of all things, II. 142
- Firmum, soldiers from, under Cato the Elder at Thermopylae, II. 338
- "Five Thousand," at Athens, on getting control are remiss in waging war on Sparta, IV. 74
- Flaccus, Fulvius, see "Fulvius Flaccus."
- Flaccus, Hordeonius, sent by Galba to succeed Verginius Rufus, XI. 226; 244; 252.
- Flaccus, Valerius (1) induced Cato the Elder to enter public life, consul and censor with him, II. 310, 330, 350; made chief senator by Cato, 350
- Flaccus, Valerius (2) consul with Marius in his 6th consulship, IX. 542; chosen consul (with Cinna), crossing Ionian sea against Sulla, IV. 390; slain by his soldiers instigated by Fimbria, II. 582, IV. 364, 402
- Flamen Quirinalis, added as priest of Romulus by Numa Pompilius, I. 323
- Flamens, named from their caps called pilamenai, I. 328, V. 446
- Flamininus, L. Quintius, naval commander on his brother's expedition to Greece, X. 328; expelled from senate by Cato the Elder, II. 350 f., X. 372 f.
- Flamininus, T. Quintius, statue of him at Rome, his disposition, X. 322; served as military tribune under Marcellus against Hannibal; consul before 30, and assigned to war against Philip, 324; crosses at once to Epirus and relieves Publius Villius, 328; learning of secret path, forces the heights held by Philip, 330 f.; joined by Thessaly and Achaeans, 334; joined by rest of Greece, 336; is given extension of command, 338; defeats Philip at Cynoscephalae, 340 f., IV. 364, VI. 372, X. 292; is vexed by Aetolians, X. 344; restores Macedonia to Philip on terms, 346; proclaims freedom to the Greeks at the Isthmian games, 350
- Begins war with Nabis, tyrant of Sparta, and then makes peace with him, 358, 296; jealous of Philopoe-

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- men, honoured by Achaeans and given Roman prisoners sold as slaves by Hannibal, 360; spoils of war shown at Rome, 362; made lieutenant of Manius Acilius in war against Antiochus, 364; interceded with Manius for Naupactus, Aetolians, and Chalcidians, 366; highly honoured by Chalcidians and other Greeks, 368; made censor with son of Marcellus, makes Scipio Dean of Senate, quarrels with Cato, 372 f., II. 356; censured for his persecution of Hannibal, X. 378 f.
- See also* II. 336, 386, X. 300, 306, 316
- Sayings: X. 258 f., 370 f.
- Flaminius, circus of, decorated by Lucullus, II. 592
- Flaminius, C., routs Insubres after receiving senate's message of recall, V. 442; appointed master of horse by Minucius, 446; defeated and slain by Hannibal at Thrasymené, III. 122
- Flavius (1), military tribune under Marcellus, put elephant to flight, V. 508.
- Flavius (2), tribune, deprived of office for taking royal diadems off Caesar's statues, VII. 584
- Flavius, C., Brutus' chief of engineers, slain at Pharsalus, VI. 240 f.
- Flavius Gallus, efficient officer under Antony, worsted by Parthians, IX. 234
- Flavius Sabinus, Vespasian's brother, made prefect of city by Nero, later by Otho, XI. 286
- Flora, courtesan, her relations with Pompey, v. 118, 252
- Florus, Mestrius, shows battlefield of Otho and Vitellius to Plutarch, XI. 308 f.
- "Fodii," original form of "Fabii" according to some, III. 118
- Fonteiis, slain in Germany by Valens by order of Galba, XI. 236
- Fonteiis Capito, see "Capito, Fonteiis."
- Forgery, by Hannibal, III. 176
- Fortune, temple of, beyond Tiber in Plutarch's time, VI. 168
- Fortune, Women's, temple of, erected by senate after Coriolanus spared city, IV. 210
- Forum Romanum, originally valley of slime there, I. 144; contained Basilica Porcia, II. 356; V. 442
- Fossae Cluilliae, 5 miles from Rome, IV. 188.
- "Four Hundred," see "Five Thousand."
- Fregellae, V. 516; conspiracy there, X. 202
- Frentanian, IX. 398
- Fufidius, creature of Sulla's, IV. 426; governor of Baetica, routed by Sertorius, VIII. 30
- Fulcinia, mother of C. Marius, IX. 466
- "Fulvia," basilica in Rome, replaced by Paulus the consul, VII. 514
- Fulvia (1) reveals plot for his murder to Cicero, VII. 120
- Fulvia (2), widow of Clodius, married to Antony, IX. 160; had daughter Clodia, 180; quarrelled with L. Antonius, then with him fought Octavius and was defeated, 196, 202; 198; died at Sicyon, 204; had son Antony, 266, 330
- Fulvius, tribune, opposes T. Flaminius' candidacy for consulship, X. 324
- Fulvius Flaccus, Gn., defeated and slain in Apulia by Hannibal, V. 502
- Fulvius Flaccus, M., implores Ti. Gracchus to submit question of agrarian law to senate, X. 170; 186 f.; questions Scipio about death of Ti. Gracchus, 196; friend of C. Gracchus, his character and deeds, attacked by Livius Drusus, suspected of death of Scipio, commissioner with C. Gracchus for distribution of public land, 218 f.; 220; urges C. Gracchus to resist consul Opimius, 226; with his partisans seizes Aventine-hill, 230, 232; slain with his elder son, 234, 236 f.; had been consul and celebrated triumph over Gauls, 230, 238
- Fulvius Flaccus, Q., consul with Appius, reduced Capua, III. 300; V. 504
- Funeral rites, Greek: regulations of Solon, I. 432, 462, 524; II. 278; at Sparta, V. 112; VI. 352; VII. 424
- Funeral rites, Roman: regulations of

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Numa, I. 346; origin of custom of funeral oration, 524; 564; one to be pronounced over woman's body, II. 114; III. 190
 "Furcifer," origin and meaning of term, IV. 178
 Furies, grove of, X. 236
 Furi, first made conspicuous by Camillus, II. 96
 Furius (1), consul with Flaminius, leads forces against Insubrians, recalled, V. 442
 Furius (2), legate of praetor Varinus, routed by Spartacus, III. 338
 Furius, L., son of Camillus, II. 182; colleague of Camillus in war with Praenestians and Volscians, 190; 192
 Furnius, ablest orator in Rome, IX. 270
 Gabené, has winter-quarters of Eumenes' men, VIII. 124
 Gabii, where Romulus and Remus were educated, I. 102
 Gabinian way, Brennus defeated beside it by Camillus, II. 166
 Gabinus, A. (1), military tribune under Sulla at Chaeroneia, IV. 378
 Gabinus, A. (2), intimate of Pompey, proposes law giving him almost unlimited power to wage war on pirates, V. 176; consul with Piso, 240, VIII. 216; had law written out to depose Piso from consulship, V. 182; gets province of Syria with help of Clodius, VII. 156; 160; takes M. Antony as commander of the horse to Syria with him, reluctant to help Ptolemy recover Egypt, IX. 142; ordered by Caesar to bring his troops with all speed to Macedonia, 154
 Gaesatae, V. 440; defeated at Clastidium by Marcellus, 446
 Gaesylus, Spartan, reconciles Dion and Heracleides, VI. 104
 "Galata," later name of Mt. Acurium, VIII. 222
 Galatia, visited by Marius, IX. 548; taken from Tigranes by Lucullus, II. 510, V. 202; added to Pompey's sway by Manilian law, 190; IX. 276
 Galatians, baggage carriers with Lucullus, II. 510
 Galba, slain by Caesar's mutinous soldiers, VII. 562
 Galba, C. Sulpicius (1), Sulla's legate at Chaeroneia, IV. 384
 Galba, C. Sulpicius (2), cited, I. 142
 Galba, Ser. Sulpicius (1), opposed triumph of Aemilius Paulus, VI. 434, 438; impeached by Cato the Elder, II. 344; 386
 Galba, Ser. Sulpicius (2), proclaimed emperor on persuasion of Nymphidius Sabinus, XI. 208 f.; his wealth and family, 210; career and popularity under Nero, 212; invited by Vindex to assume the imperial power, 214; joined by nearly all, 216; invites Verginius to join in preserving empire, 218; informed he has been proclaimed emperor by army, senate and people, 218; secretly opposed by Nymphidius, 220 f.; fears Verginius, 224; comes under influence of Vinus, 228; orders fellow-conspirators of Nymphidius to be executed, 236; becoming unpopular owing to severity and greed, 236 f.; censured even for reasonable measures, 242 f.; appoints Vinus and himself consuls, 250; hated by soldiers for his stinginess, 252
 On learning that Vitellius had been proclaimed emperor in Germany adopts Piso as his successor, 256; warned by priest Umbricius of treachery, 258; informed that Otho has been proclaimed emperor, 262; slain by soldiers, 266; buried by Argivus, a freedman, 270; recapitulation, 270; quoted, 266. See also 286
 Galepsus, near Amphipolis, VI. 416
 Galley, thirty-oared of Theseus, preserved till time of Demetrius Phalereus, I. 48. See also "Ships."
 Gallia Narbonensis, VIII. 32
 Galloscythians, term applied to whole army of Cimbric and Teutones, IX. 488
 Gallus, Annius, commands part of Otho's forces, XI. 288; 292; 296; 304

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Gallus, C. Cornelius, sent by Octavius to help take Cleopatra alive, IX. 316
- Gallus, Flavius, see "Flavius Gallus."
- Games: funeral games instituted by Minos, I. 30; gymnopaediac at Sparta, V. 80; 56; 252; Isthmian, VI. 322; X. 350; Nemean, parsley used for wreath, VI. 322; X. 88; 284; 354; XI. 64; Olympic, IV. 24; V. 34; VII. 230; Pythian, V. 50; IX. 100
- Gandarites, people of India, VII. 400
- Ganges, its width and depth, VII. 400
- Gardens, of Lucullus, II. 598
- Gargettus, has place called Araterion, I. 80
- Garland, of oak leaves given by Romans to one who saves life of citizen, IV. 122
- Gates, Dipylon, Piraic, Sacred, of Athens, IV. 370
- Gaugamela, means camel's house; actual site of battle of Arbela, VII. 316
- Gaul, its extent, IX. 488; given as province to Caesar for 5 years, V. 240, VII. 474; given to Caesar for 5 more years, III. 360, V. 250, VII. 494; pacified by Verginius Rufus, XI. 224
- Gaul, Cisalpine, separated from Italy by Rubicon, VII. 490; invaded by Cimbri and Teutones, who rout Romans, VIII. 6; II. 484; revolts, VII. 106; 110; held by Brutus for Lepidus, V. 152; governed by Cassius, III. 340; governed by Brutus, VI. 138; decreed province of Brutus Albinus, 168
- Gaul, Transalpine, Cimbri and Teutones defeat many large Roman armies there, IX. 490
- Gauls, of Celtic stock, early migrations and settlements, I. 408, II. 126, 404, IX. 488; attracted to Italy by love of wine, II. 126, VI. 368; besiege Clusium, II. 128; on recognizing Fabius Ambustus, Roman ambassador among their foes, march on Rome, 132, I. 348; defeat Romans at battle of Allia, 160, II. 136; sack Rome, I. 142, 184, 350, II. 148, V. 440; defeated by Ardeans led by Camillus, II. 150; fail to take Capitol on account of geese, 158; suffering from plague, come to agreement with besieged on Capitol, 162; cut to pieces by Camillus, 166; in 2nd march on Rome defeated by Camillus at the Anio, 198. Clodius in his "An Examination of Chronology" says ancient records lost when Gauls sacked Rome, I. 306.
- Destroy Ptolemy Ceraunus and his army, IX. 416; 426; 430 f.; fight Rome after 1st Punic war, V. 436, 440 f.; defeated by Flaminius, 442, III. 122; 334; II. 560; III. 392; rise against Caesar, are subdued, VII. 502; XI. 242
- Gaza, principal city of Syria, taken by Alexander, VII. 296; IX. 12
- Gedrosia, in Persia, VII. 410 f.
- Geese, sacred, give alarm on Capitol, II. 160
- Gegania, one of two first Vestals appointed by Numa, I. 340; 394
- Gela, Aeschylus' grave near, II. 430, VI. 56; re-peopled after Timoleon pacified Sicily, 344
- Gelae, neighbours of Albanl and Amazons, V. 208
- Gelanor, king of Argos, expelled by faction, IX. 454
- Geleontes, one of 4 original Attic tribes, why so called, I. 468
- Gellianus, friend of Nymphidius Sabinus, XI. 224; 230
- Gellius, L., consul, crushed Germans in Spartacus' forces, III. 340; VIII. 252; censor, V. 170; opposed Caesar's agrarian law, VII. 146
- Gellius, M., VII. 150
- Gelon (1), tyrant of Syracuse, VI. 12; defeated Carthaginians at Himera 318; sends grain to Rome, IV. 154
- Gelon (2), plots against Pyrrhus, IX. 356 f.
- Geminus (1), of Terracina, enemy of Marius, IX. 562, 568
- Geminus (2), Pompey's friend, V. 118; by his orders slays Brutus the Elder, V. 154
- Geminus (3), Antony's friend, IX. 272
- Genthius, king of Illyrians, VI. 376; bribed by Perseus to imprison Roman embassy, taken by L. Anicius, 386

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Genucius, tribune of people, insulted by Falerians, X. 204
- Geometricians, VI. 26; cited, 394
- Geometry, studied by Archimedes, V. 470
- Geradas, Spartan, re adultery at Sparta, I. 252
- Geraestus, near Aulis, V. 14
- Gerandas, Spartan, slain in skirmish with Thebans, V. 402
- Geranean range, in Greece, X. 92, XI. 70
- Gergithus, its revenue offered Phocion by Alexander, VIII. 186
- "Germanicus," title accepted by Vitellius, XI. 254
- Germanicus, descended from Drusus and Antonia, had son Caius, IX. 332
- Germanicus Nero, see "Nero Germanicus."
- Germans, under Ariovistus, crushed by Caesar, VII. 488 f.; IX. 488
- "Germanus," earlier name of Kermalus, I. 98
- Germany, ravaged for 18 days by Caesar, VII. 498
- Gerontes, appointed at Sparta by Lycurgus himself, afterwards elected, I. 282
- Getae, Dicomes their king, IX. 280
- Ghosts: II. 406, 420, VI. 206, 231, VII. 606
- Giants, Battle of, group of figures at Athens, IX. 274
- Gifts: II. 432, 530, 566, 594, III. 26, 108, 316, 350, IV. 154, 436, V. 112, 230, VII. 562, IX. 146
- Gigis, maidservant of Parysatis, executed by Artaxerxes, XI. 170 f.
- Gisco (1), assists Hicetas and Mameucus, VI. 334; defeated by Timoleon, 340
- Gisco (2), with Hannibal, III. 162
- Glabrio, M'. Acilius (1), see "Acilius Glabrio."
- Glabrio, M'. Acilius (2), his wife Aemilia taken from him by Sulla and given to Pompey, IV. 432, V. 134; had province of Bithynia, V. 190
- Glaucia, helps Marius oppose Metellus, IX. 542; drives him from Rome, IV. 446
- Glaucias, king of Illyrians, befriends infant Pyrrhus, restores him to his father's throne, IX. 350 f.
- Glaucippus, son of Hyperetides, spoke against Phocion, VIII. 152
- Glaucus (1), Corinthian, ally of Trojans, VI. 2
- Glaucus (2), Hephaestion's physician, crucified by Alexander, VII. 424
- Glaucus (3), son of Polymedes, distinguishes himself under Phocion, VIII. 172
- Glaucus (4), physician, warns Dellius of Cleopatra's plot against him, IX. 272
- Glycon, moves Menon the informer be given immunity from taxation, III. 90
- Gnathaemion, Argive sempstress, mother of Perseus, VI. 374, XI. 124
- Goat's Marsh, where Romulus disappeared, I. 176, 186, 308, II. 180; I. 184
- Gobryas, father of Ariomandes, II. 440
- Gold, withdrawn from currency by Lycurgus, I. 228; scarce in Rome in Camillus' time, II. 114
- Gomphi, city of Thessaly, taken by Caesar, VII. 542
- "Gonatas," surname of Antigonus, VI. 372
- Gongylius, reaches Syracuse from Corinth, tells of Gylippus coming; slain, III. 274 f.
- Gordium, home of ancient Midas, taken by Alexander, VII. 272
- Gordius, driven out of Cappadocia by Sulla, IV. 334
- Gordyaeon mountains, VII. 316
- Gordyene, Zartbienuus, king of, II. 534, 568, 584; invaded by Parthian king, relieved by Afranius, V. 208
- Gordyeni, some moved to Tigranocerta by Tigranes, II. 552; join Tigranes with their hosts, 554; join Lucullus; the reason, 568
- Gorgias (1) Leontine, cited, II. 434
- Gorgias (2), officer under Eumenes, VIII. 98
- Gorgias (3) rhetorician, censured by Cicero, VII. 142
- Gorgidas, with armed following helps Theban exiles, v. 368, 370; boeotarch with Pelopidas, 372; first formed sacred band, 382; 386

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Gorgo, Leonidas' wife, quoted, I. 246
- Gorgoleon, Spartan polemarch, slain in battle with Thebans at Tegyra, v. 380
- Gorgon, her head lost from image of goddess, II. 30
- Gorgus, sailing from Ceos, repeopled Gela, VI. 344
- "Gorpiæus," name of month in Cyprus, I. 42
- Gortynians, in Crete, aided by Areus, IX. 436; helped in war by Philopœmen, X. 288 f.
- Gouras, Tigranes' brother, nominal defender of Nisibis, captured by Lucullus, II. 578
- Gracchus, Ti. Sempronius (1) married Cornelia, daughter of Scipio Africanus, X. 144, 146, 152; father of Ti. and C. Gracchus, twice consul, censor, had 2 triumphs, 144; subdued many of Spaniards, but made peace with Numantines, 154; when consul named Scipio Nasica and C. Marcius his successors, then found he had made mistake in taking auspices, v. 444; died leaving wife with 12 children, X. 146
- Gracchus, Ti. Sempronius (2) son of Ti. Gracchus and Cornelia, daughter of Scipio, brother of C. Gracchus, X. 144; contrasted with his brother, 146 f.; made augur, becomes son-in-law of Appius Claudius, 150; served with the younger Scipio in taking Carthage, as quaestor served under consul C. Mancinus against Numantia, 152 f.; why he began to agitate for his agrarian laws, 158 f.; advised by Crassus, pontifex maximus, Mucius Scaevola, jurist, and Appius Claudius, 162 f.; his bill vetoed by Octavius another tribune, introduces one more severe, ordering wrongdoers to vacate without compensation illegally acquired land, 166; his life in danger, 168; illegally has Octavius removed from office, 170 f.; his agrarian bill becoming law, is chosen with Appius Claudius and his brother to survey and distribute the public land, 174; proposes that money willed Rome by king Attalus be given citizens who received public land to aid them in stocking their farms, 176; defends his course in respect to Octavius, 178 f.; stands for tribune for following year, 182; warned by Fulvius Flaccus of plan to kill him, 188; slain by mob of opponents, 190; his body thrown into river, his friends banished or executed, 192. See also 198
- Gracchus, C. Sempronius (1), son of elder Ti. Gracchus and Cornelia, X. 144; Quoted, 164, 180
- Gracchus, C. Sepronius (2), son of elder Ti. Gracchus and Cornelia, X. 144; 9 years younger than his brother, 150, 198; reared with brother by his mother, 146; contrasted with his brother, 6, 146; while serving under Scipio against Numantia, appointed one of 3 men to administer agrarian law of Ti. Gracchus, 174; married Licinia, 194; 196; goes as quaestor with consul Orestes to Sardinia, 198; canvasses for tribuneship, 202; elected 4th, introduces 2 laws, 1st, that magistrate deprived of office should not be allowed to hold office again, 2nd, that magistrate banishing citizen without trial should be prosecuted, 204 f.; proposes 5 laws to gratify people and overthrow senate, 206 f.; becomes very powerful, his further measures and activities, 208 f.; gets C. Fannius elected consul, is made tribune again, 214; outbid by colleague Livius Drusus, 214 f.; sails off to found colony at Carthage, meanwhile further undermined by Drusus, 218; returns in 70 days, 220; changes his residence from Palatine to near forum, opposed by consul Fannius, 222; not elected tribune 3rd time, 224; many of his laws to be revoked by consul Opimius and followers, 216; distressed by murder of consul's servant Antyllus, 226; warned of danger by his wife, 232; prevented from slaying himself by 2 companions, flees, 234; slain, his body thrown into the Tiber, his property

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- confiscated, 236; his memory honoured by the people, 238
- Wrote pamphlet explaining what induced Ti. Gracchus to undertake agrarian reform, 162, quoted, 204 f.
- Gracinius, one of conspirators against Sertorius, VIII. 68
- Granicus, river, where Alexander defeats Persians, II. 138, VII. 264; where Lucullus defeats Mithridates, II. 504
- Granius (1) Marius' step-son, IX. 560; accompanies Marius in flight, 564, 574
- Granius (2), magistrate of Dicaearchia, ordered strangled by Sulla, IV. 442
- Granius Petro, quaestor in Caesar's army, taken by Scipio, kills himself, VII. 480
- Grants, for festivals, by Pericles, III. 24
- Great Mother, prophesies victory for Romans against Cimbri and Teutones, IX. 508
- Greece, invaded by Darius' forces under Datis, II. 224; invaded by Xerxes, 18, 234; invaded by Antiochus the Great, 334; toured by Aemilius Paulus after Pydna, VI. 428; its sacred treasures taken by Sulla, IV. 362; Pompey's great force there, v. 280
- Greek, understood by Cato the Elder, II. 336; spoken fluently by Lucullus II. 470
- Greek culture, opposed by Cato the Elder, II. 370
- Greek words, once numerous in Latin, v. 454
- Greeks, defeat Persians at Marathon, Salamis, Plataea, Mycale, Arbela, II. 10, 40, 138, 264, VII. 136; are medising, II. 18, 268; saved by Themistocles, 20; pay war contribution fixed by Aristides at 460 talents, 286; under leadership of Cimon, 420; defeated by Persians in Egypt, 618; have no success against Persians after Cimon, 464; their peace disturbed by Alcibiades, IV. 32 f.; despised Persians after return of 10,000, XI. 172 f.; have Peace of Antalcidas dictated to them by Persian king, 176; honoured Dion, VI. 34; defeated by Philip at Chaeroneia, II. 138, VII. 48 f.; 250 f.; united against Alexander by Demosthenes, 54; proclaim Alexander leader against Persia, 258; crushed at Crannon by Antipater and Craterus, 68, II. 138, VIII. 200; subjugated by Cassander and Ptolemy; Antigonus and Demetrius attempt to free them, IX. 18 f.; tempted to revolt by Ptolemy, governed by Demetrius' son, 108 f.; helped by Pyrrhus against Demetrius, 378; had little contact with Romans up to time of Flamininus, x. 326; 334, 336, proclaimed free by Flamininus at Isthmian games, 296, 350, 386; welcomed at Lucullus' house in Rome, II. 604; treated well by Antony, IX. 184
- Greeks and their generals criticized, x. 352 f., 386 f.; their opinions and laws opposed to father marrying daughter, XI. 182
- Greeks, Asiatic, some moved from Cilicia and Cappadocia to Mesopotamia by Tigranes, II. 536; many transplanted from Cilicia to Tigranocerta, 552; sent from Tigranocerta to their homes by Lucullus, 566
- Greeks, Italian, fight battle at river Sagra, VI. 420; invite Pyrrhus, IX. 384
- Greeks, Sicilian, send to Corinth for help and get Timoleon, VI. 264; freed from Carthaginians by Timoleon, 332
- "Grypus," cognomen or epithet, IX. 464
- Gulf, Arabian, see "Arabian Gulf."
- Gyarta, large rich tract in territory of Syracuse, VI. 80
- Gylippus (1), comes from Sparta to aid Syracuse, III. 272, IV. 62, VI. 104; in first battle defeated by Athenians, next day defeats them, III. 276; captures Plemmyrium with large stores and moneys, 278; 282; 296; receives proposal of truce from Nicias, 300; slays or captures Athenian force, spares Nicias, 302; is refused request to be allowed to take Athenian generals captive to Sparta, 304; III. 66; I. 298; son of

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Cleandridas, banished for abstracting 30 talents from 1000 sent by Lysander to Sparta, III. 66, 306, IV. 274 f., VI. 460
- Gylippus (2), father of Agiatis, X. 50
- Gylon, father of Demosthenes' mother, banished on charge of treason, VII. 8
- Gymnasium, at Athens, near it Theseus buried, I. 84.
- Gymnopaediae, at Sparta, I. 248, V. 80
- Gymnosophists, said to have been consulted by Alexander, I. 216; caused Alexander much trouble VII. 404 f.; 408
- Gynaecia, same as Roman "Bona Dea," mother of Midas according to Phrygians, VII. 128, 462
- Gythium, Cleomenes puts to sea from it, X. 116; relieved by Philopoemen, 294
- Habrotonon, Thracian, mother of Themistocles, II. 2, 8
- Hades, II. 372
- Haemon, afterwards called Thermodon, flows past Heracleum, I. 64, VII. 46
- Hagnon (1), father of Theramenes, III. 212, IV. 270; amends bill of Dracontides, III. 92
- Hagnon (2), Teian, with Alexander, VII. 286; 342; 382
- Hagnonides, public informer, VIII. 210; denounces Phocion as traitor, 220; 222; 226; executed by Athenians, 232
- Hagnothemis, cited, VII. 436
- Hair, sheared on fore part of head by Theseus, Abantes, Mysians, I. 10; shaved off by Argives, worn long by Spartans, IV. 234
- Halae, burial place of Timon, IX. 298; destroyed by Sulla, IV. 408
- Haliartus, tomb of Rhadamanthus near it; Lysander routed and slain there, IV. 312, 452; Halicarnassus, in Caria, native city of Euterpe, II. 2; stormed by Alexander, VII. 268; besieged by Ptolemy, relieved by Demetrius, IX. 18
- Halimus, deme of Thucydides, II. 412
- Halonnesus, speech on, by Demosthenes, VII. 24
- Hamilcar, with Hasdrubal, commander of Carthaginian forces defeated by Timoleon at river Crimesus, VI. 320
- Hamilcar Barca, II. 324
- Hannibal, invaded Italy, III. 122, V. 456; defeats Flaminius at lake Trasymenê in Tuscany, III. 124; tries to force Fabius to fight, 132; escapes from Fabius' trap by ruse, 136, 200; spares Fabius' fields to bring odium upon him, 140; traps Minucius, retires when Fabius comes to rescue, 150 f.; destroys Roman army at Cannae, 162 f.; refuses to attack Rome; how helped by Cannae, 168; defeated by Marcellus at Nola, V. 462; 464; 500; slew Gn. Fulvius the proconsul and most of his army in Apulia, 502; fights drawn battle with Marcellus near Numistro, 502; fights battles with Marcellus near Canusium, 506 f.; worn out with fighting Marcellus, afraid of Fabius, III. 174; loses Tarentum to Fabius, begins to realize insufficiency of his forces. 186; traps and slays the consuls Marcellus and Crispinus, V. 518; recalled to Carthage, defeated by Scipio, 40, II. 398, III. 192, X. 144, 328; stirs up Antiochus against Rome, 346; after defeat of Antiochus goes to Artaxas the Armenian and supervises building of city Artaxata, II. 572; flees to Prusias in Bithynia, commits suicide, X. 378 f.
- See also* I. 162, II. 304, 334, III. 6, 176, V. 344, 524, 528, VIII. 4, X. 384. Quoted: III. 154, 162 f.; 186, V. 458, 506 f., 520, IX. 366, X. 380
- Hanno, Carthaginian admiral, VI. 306
- Harmony, goddess, born of Ares and Aphrodité, V. 386
- Harmost, left in each city by Lysander, IV. 266; Callibius the Spartan in Acropolis, 274; Sphodrias, at Thespieae, V. 66; 370
- Harpalus (1), banished by Philip, honoured afterwards by Alexander, VII. 250; appointed governor of Babylonia by Alexander, 332; sent books to Alexander, 242; ab-

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- sconded, 346; tried to bribe Phocion, VIII. 190, bribed Demosthenes, sent from city, VII. 60, 216
- Harpalus (2), served with Aemilius Paulus against Perseus, VI. 392
- Hasdrubal (1), see "Hamilcar."
- Hasdrubal (2), conquered in Spain by Scipio, X. 328
- Heads of the Great Syrtis, VI. 54
- Health, temple of, had statue in honour of Cato the Elder, II. 356
- "Hecaërgos," name given Apollo, X. 358
- Hecalé, honoured for her hospitality by Theseus, I. 26
- Hecalesia, sacrifice to Zeus Hecalus in honour of Hecalé, I. 26
- "Hecaliné," diminutive of Hecalé, I. 26
- Hecataeus (1) sophist, what Archidamidas said about him, I. 266
- Hecataeus (2), tyrant of Cardia, urges Leonnatus to go to aid of Antipater, distrusts Eumenes, VIII. 86
- Hecataeus (3) of Eretria, cited, VII. 356
- Hecatombæon, Athenian month, I. 52, 84; same as Boeotian Hippodromius, II. 138; v. 78; same as Macedonian Lois, VII. 228 f.
- Hecatombæum, near Dymé, X. 80
- Hecatompèdon, part of Syracuse, VI. 94
- Hectemorioi, or Thetes, Athenians who paid a sixth of increase as rent, I. 436
- Hector, captured and plundered Troezen, carried off Aethra, I. 78; v. 188; Spartan youth closely resembled him, XI. 8
- Hecuba, v. 414
- Hedyllium, mountain, IV. 378 f.
- Hegemon, accompanies Phocion to Polysperchon, VIII. 224; condemned to death with Phocion, 228
- Hegesias, cited, VII. 230
- Hegesipylé, Thracian, wife of Miltiades, mother of Cimon, II. 412
- Hegestratus, Athenian archon, I. 496
- Helen, rape of, by Theseus led to war in Attica and Theseus' banishment and death, I. 66, 196; different accounts of rape of, 70; on way to Troy threw golden tripod into sea, which fished up was offered as prize to wisest man, I. 412
- Helenus, son of Pyrrhus and Bircenna IX. 370, 454; found and sent back to Epeirus by Alyoneus, 460
- Heliæa, in Athens, VIII. 178
- Helicon (1) of Cyzicus, friend of Plato, predicted eclipse of sun, VI. 40
- Helicon (2), made belt for Alexander, VII. 322
- Helicon, mountain, IV. 318, v. 48
- Helicus, X. 102
- Heliopolis, Psenophis of, I. 476
- Helius, adherent of Nero, executed by Galba, XI. 240
- Hellas, came into closer relations with Persia after time of Themistocles, II. 80. See also "Greeks."
- Hellanicus (1), cited: I. 32, 56, 58, 60, 70, IV. 54
- Hellanicus (2), sent by Syracusans to implore help of Dion, VI. 88
- Hellenes, see "Greeks."
- Hellenic Council, II. 274, 278
- Hellespont, II. 240, 506, III. 56; Philip driven from it by Phocion, VIII. 174 f.
- Helots, made slaves by Spartans under Soüs, I. 206; tilled ground for Spartans, 278; slain by young men of "krupteia," 288, 290; treated very harshly, 386; did all business, prepared and cooked meals, etc, 388; 464; revolt from Sparta at time of great earthquake, I. 292, II. 454 f.; many desert from Agesilaüs to enemy, v. 90; those who could pay 5 Attic minas freed by Cleomenes; 2000 armed in Macedonian fashion, X. 100
- Helvetii, defeated by Caesar and forced to return home, VII. 486
- Helvia, Cicero's mother, VII. 82
- Helvidius Priscus, took up Galba's body, XI. 270
- Henioché, daughter of Pittheus, wife of Canethus, mother of Sciron, I. 56
- Hephaestion, friend of Alexander, VII. 340, 346; followed Alexander in adopting barbarian mode of life, quarrels with Craterus, 360; 382; quarrels with Eumenes, VIII. 78 f.; dies at Ecbatana to great grief of Alexander, splendidly buried, 82, v. 428, VII. 424

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Heptachalcum, place at Athens, IV. 368
- Hera, statue of, at Argos, III. 4; 70; attacked by Ixion, X. 2; festival of, among Samians to be called Lysandrea, IV. 280; temple of, I. 482; temples of, at Samos, Argos, Lacinium, plundered by pirates, V. 174; temple of, at Coriuth, seized by Aratus, XI. 54
- Hera, Cithaeronian, II. 246, 266
- "Heracleia," name of precincts dedicated to Herakles by Theseus, I. 80
- Heracleia, taken by Demetrius, IX. 52
- Heracleia, sacked by M'. Acilius, X. 364
- Heracleia, in Pontus, ghost-oracle of, II. 422; reached by Mithridates, 508
- Heracleia, in Italy, battle between Pyrrhus and Laevinus near it, IX. 394
- Heracleidae, how maintained by Athenians, I. 48; included Spartan kings, 206; united with Dorians and came into Peloponnesus, but only 2 houses, Eurypontidae and Agiadae, furnished kings, IV. 300; 234; IX. 464
- Heracleides (1), Syracusan boy, brings on sea fight, III. 292
- Heracleides (2), Syracusan, Dion accused of plotting with him against Dionysius, VI. 24; returns from Peloponnesus to Syracuse; brief account of him; becomes rival of Dion, 70; though admiral, fails to prevent Dionysius sailing away, supports popular proposals, 80; elected general, 82; recalls Dion, 94; pardoned by Dion, 100; appointed admiral, renews his machinations against Dion, 102; prevented from occupying Syracuse by Dion, takes up Gaesylus the Spartan, 104; reconciled to Dion by Gaesylus, 106; again plots against Dion, who has him slain, 112
- Heracleides (3), of Cymé, cited, XI. 182
- Heracleides (4), Ponticus cited: I. 404, 466, 494, 496, II. 72, 146, III. 102, VII. 298
- Heracleitus: (Frag. 74, Bywater 30), I. 182; (Frag. 105, Bywater 41), IV. 170; (Frag. 116, Bywater 45), 214, II. 136
- Heracleium, II. 38, III. 294, VI. 392, IX. 274
- Heracles (1), destroyed some powerful wicked men in Hellas, cowed others; after he slew Iphitus and went to Lydia, old villainies burst forth anew, but Lydia got peace and security, I. 14, 296; kinsman of Theseus, 16; sacrificed Busiris, wrestled Antaeus to death, slew Cycnus, dashed out Termerus' brains, 22; instituted Olympian games in honour of Zeus, 56; accompanied by Theseus in campaign against Amazons, 58, 544; slew Antiope and her Amazons, 64; 68; initiated into Eleusinian mysteries at instigation of Theseus, 70; 78; secured Theseus' release from Aidoneus, 80; father of Telephus, 92; ancestor 11th removed from Lycurgus, 206, 446; II. 2; had daughter Eucleia by Myrto, 278; 410; statue of, removed from Tarentum and set up in Capitol at Rome by Fabius Maximus, III. 184; 210; had tendency to melancholy according to Aristotle, IV. 236; v. 380; said to have loved Tolaius, 384; father of Macaria, 390; ancestor of Alexander, VII. 224; took Ilium, VIII. 2; had son Sophax by Tinga, settled Olbianians and Mycenaean about city of Tinga, 24; had son Anton, IX. 146; shown in paintings with Omphalé taking away his club and lion's skin, 336
- Heracles (2), son of Alexander by Barsiné, VIII. 80
- "Heracles, bowl of," VII. 432
- Heraea, IV. 294; city belonging to Acaean league, seized by Cleomenes, X. 64
- "Heraea," Greek for "Junonia," X. 220
- Heraeum, II. 266; at Corinth, seized by Agesilaus, v. 58; X. 94; 110
- Heralds, at Rome, I. 354
- Hercules, I 114; became father of 1st Fabius, III. 118; 350
- Hercynii, inland limit of Cimmerians, IX. 490

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Hereas, Megarian, cited, I. 40, 76, 428
- Herennius, C., reluctant to witness against Marius, IX. 472; with Perpenna defeated by Pompey, v. 158
- Herennius, centurion, kills Cicero, VII. 206
- Herippidas, v. 28; harmed in Thebes, executed by Spartans, 370
- Hermae, of stone, dedicated by Cimon, II. 424
- Hermae, mutilation of, III. 210, 254, IV. 48, 52
- Hermæus, priest with Mithridates' army, II. 522
- Hermagoras, rhetorician, opposed by Poseidonius at Rhodes, v. 224
- Hermes, to east of Delphinium at Athens, called Hermes at Aegeus' gate, I. 24
- "Hermes of Andocides," why so called, III. 254, IV. 56
- Hermes Terrestrial, II. 280
- Herminius, helped Horatius defend the bridge, I. 544
- Hermioné, joins Achaean league, XI. 78; taken by Cleomenes, x. 90; had temple of Chthonian Earth, v. 174; purple came from there, VII. 332; Epicles of, II. 14
- Hermippus (1), comic poet, prosecutes Aspasia for impiety, III. 92; (Kock I. 236 f.), cited, 96
- Hermippus (2), cited: I. 218, 278, 406, 418, 430, VII. 12, 26, 70, 74, 380
- Hermocrates, Syracusan, his daughter married Dionysius the Elder, VI. 6; son of Hermon, destined to cause most of Athenian reverses, III. 210; 296; 304; his saying re Nicias, 264
- Hermolaüs, plots against Alexander, is executed, VII. 332
- Hermon (1), father of Hermocrates, III. 210
- Hermon (2), slew Phrynichus, crowned by Athenians, IV. 74
- Hermotimus, Phocæan, father of Milto, III. 72
- Hermus, left by Theseus as one of governors of Pythopolis, I. 60
- Hermus, on road from Athens to Eleusis, has tomb of Pythonicé, VIII. 192
- Hero, niece of Aristotle, mother of Callisthenes, VII. 384
- Herod, Jew, sends army to Antony, IX. 276; deserts to Octavius, 300, 302
- Herodes, urged by Cicero to study philosophy with Cratippus, VII. 142
- Herodorus Ponticus, cited I. 58, 66, 70, 114
- Herodotus (1), story about him among Bithynians resembles that about Numa and Egeria, I. 316
- Herodotus (2), cited: (VIII. 3), II. 56; (5), 20; (93), 46; (IX. 46), 258; (64), 388; (85), 272
- Herophytus, Samian, not so shrewd as Cimon, II. 430
- Herostratus, sent into Macedonia by Brutus to win over commanders of armies there, VI. 178
- Hersilia, only married Sabine woman seized, married to Hostilius or to Romulus, I. 130, 146; appealed for reconciliation between Romans and Sabines, 150
- Hesiod, loved by gods for sake of Muses, I. 318; verse expunged from his poems by Peisistratus, 40; rebuked for calling some days good and others bad, II. 136. Works and Days (309), II. 390; (311), I. 408; (366), XI. 240; (370) quoted and ascribed to Pittheus on authority of Aristotle, I. 6; calls Minos "most royal," 30
- Hestia, goddess, forbids Tarchetius murdering his daughter, I. 94
- Hestiaea, II. 22
- Hestiaeans, expelled from their country by Pericles, III. 66
- Hesuchia, priestess of Athena at Clazomenae, III. 254
- Hexapyla, of Syracuse, cut through by Marcellus, v. 482
- Hicetas, of Leontini, chosen general by Syracusans, secretly negotiates with Carthaginians, VI. 264; 276; defeats Dionysius, shuts him up in acropolis, orders Carthaginians to prevent Timoleon from landing, 280; 284; defeated by Timoleon, 288; continues siege of acropolis of Syracuse, tries to have Timoleon assassinated, 298; summons to his aid Mago, 302, 304; his forces in

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Syracuse defeated and driven out by Timoleon, 312; compelled to forsake cause of Carthage, demolish his citadels and live as private person at Leontini, 318; invades territory of Syracuse, defeated and executed, 334 f.; had murdered Andromaché and Areté, 122, 340
- Hidrieus, Carian, gets letter from Agesilaüs, v. 36
- Hiempsal, king of Numidia, IX. 574, 576; given Iarbas' kingdom by Pompey, v. 142
- Hierapolis, III. 366; formerly called Bambycè, given Monaeses by Antony, IX. 220
- Hiero (1), tyrant of Sicily, refused Themistocles his daughter's hand, II. 66
- Hiero (2), intimate friend of Nicias, III. 224
- Hiero (3), king of Syracuse, receives gifts from Romans, v. 456; had persuaded Archimedes to make practical application of his geometry, 470
- Hieronymus (1), historian, sent by Antigonus to make treaty with Eumenes, VIII. 114; left as governor of Boeotians by Demetrius, IX. 96; cited, 400, 414
- Hieronymus (2), Rhodian philosopher, cited, II. 296; v. 36
- Hieronymus (3), tyrant of Syracuse, dies, v. 466
- Hieronymus (4), of Carrhae, urges P. Crassus to escape to Ichnae, III. 394
- Hill-men, at Athens, favoured democracy, I. 434; led by Peisistratus, 486
- Himera, river in Sicily where Gelon defeated Carthaginians, VI. 318
- Himera, Sicilian city, pardoned by Pompey, v. 140
- Himeraeus, brother of Demetrius the Phalerean, executed by Antipater, VII. 70
- Hippada Telountes, Athenians able to keep horse or getting 300 measures yearly, Solon's 2nd class, I. 450
- Hipparchus (1) of Cholargus, kinsman of Peisistratus, first man ostracized, III. 250
- Hipparchus (2), father of Asclepiades, VIII. 194
- Hipparchus (3), son of Theophilus, first freedman to desert Antony for Octavius, IX. 292; 304
- Hipparchus (4) Spartan, father of Aristocrates the writer, I. 216, 302
- Hippareté, daughter of Hipponicus, wife of Alcibiades, applied for divorce, IV. 20
- Hipparinus (1), father of Aristomache, once colleague of Dionysius the Elder, VI. 6
- Hipparinus (2), Dion's son, called Aretaeus according to Timaeus, VI. 68
- Hippias (1), sophist of Elis, published list of victors at Olympic games, I. 308; cited, 276
- Hippias (2), one of 3 young men fleeing with infant Pyrrhus, IX. 348
- Hippias (3), mime with Antony, IX. 158
- Hippikon, distance of 4 furlongs, I. 468
- Hippitas, lame friend of Cleomenes in Egypt, X. 134, 136
- Hippo, tyrant of Messana, VI. 80; shelters Mamercus, caught and executed, 342
- Hippobotae, wealthy class of Chalcidians, banished by Pericles, III. 66
- Hippochus, father of Pelopidas, v. 346
- Hippocoön, father of Enarsphorus, I. 72
- Hippocrates (1) mathematician, engaged in trade, I. 408
- Hippocrates (2), physician, consulted by Persian king, his reply, II. 372
- Hippocrates (3), father of Peisistratus, I. 490
- Hippocrates (4), general when 1000 Athenians lost at Delium, III. 226
- Hippocrates (5), Spartan governor of Chalcedon, defeated and slain by Alcibiades, IV. 86
- Hippocrates (6), commander of—Syracusans, seizes city and defies Marcellus, v. 468; his camp at Acrillae captured by Marcellus, v. 482
- Hippodrome, at Rome, I. 102
- Hippodromius, Boeotian month, same as Athenian Hecatombaeon, II. 138

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Hippolyta, not Antiopé, said by Cleidemus to have been the name of the Amazon whom Theseus married, I. 62
- Hippolytus (1), or Demophoön, son of Theseus and Antiopé, I. 64
- Hippolytus (2), Sicyonian, loved by Apollo, I, 318
- Hippomachus, trainer, his saying, VI. 2
- Hippomedon, son of Agesilaüs, urges father to support Agis, X. 14; saves father, 36
- Hipponicus (1), friend of Solon, I. 444
- Hipponicus (2), father of Callias the Rich by wife who later married Pericles, III. 70; gave Alcibiades his daughter Hippareté to wife, IV. 18 f.
- Hipponium, city of Lucania, later called Vibo, VII 162
- Hippostenides, Theban, one of conspirators assisting Pelopidas, V. 356
- Hirtius, consul elect with Pansa, keeps Cicero at Rome to support them, VI. 452, VII. 190; with Pansa defeats Antony at Mutina but is himself slain, 198, IX. 174
- History of Rome, written by Cato the Elder for his son, II. 362; planned by Cicero, VII. 186
- Histories of Rutilius, v. 212
- "Hoc age," its meaning, I. 356, IV. 178
- Homer, poems of, preserved among posterity of Creophylus in Ionia, first made really known by Lycurgus, I. 214; said by Timæus to have met the elder Lycurgus, 204; "Od." XI. 631 inserted by Peisistratus, 40; "Il." II. 557 f. inserted by Solon according to most writers, 426; II. 424; III. 172; his view as to man's responsibility for his actions, IV. 196; used by teachers, 16; always brings his boldest and most valiant heroes into battle well armed, v. 342; his poetry characterized, VI. 346; Alexander considered Iliad viaticum of military art, had Aristotle's recension called Iliad of the Casket, VII: 242; 298; H. said to have been born at Ios, and to have died at Smyrna, VIII. 4; IX. 420; 490; studied by Philopoemen, X. 264; XI. 246
- Iliad, (I. 188 f.) IV. 198, (238 f.) IX. 106, (259) VI. 202, (491 f.) IX. 382, X. 128, (II. 204) IX. 320, (363) V. 384, (547) I. 54, (557 f.) 426, (607) XI. 106, (III. 144) I. 78, (172) X. 68, (IV. 175) V. 40, (431) X. 68, (V. 340) VII. 306, (VI. 161 f.) IV. 176, (429 f.) VI. 176, (491) 176, (IX. 438 f.) X. 256, (XI. 544) V. 302, (XII. 243) IX. 442, (XIV. 86 f.) 436, (XV. 189) 254, (XVI. 849) VI. 178, (XIX. 15 f.) X. 280, (XX. 467) VII. 28, (XXI. 107) 380, (XXII. 207) V. 188, (XXIII. 296 f.) 24, (XXIV. 162) IX. 192, (525 f.) VI. 446, (630) 260.
- Odyssey (I. 47) X. 196, (IV. 230) III. 236, (246) IV. 172, (354 f.) VII. 298, (VIII. 75 f.) V. 12, (IX. 299) IV. 198, (339) IV. 196, (494) VIII. 180, (XI. 14 f.) IX. 490, (XII. 428) VI. 38, (XIV. 162) I. 474, (222 f.) II. 392, (XVIII. 158) IV. 196, (XIX. 179) I. 32, IX. 106, (307) I. 474
- Verse not now in poems, IV. 196
- Homoloichus, Chacronefian, assists Sulla, IV. 382, 390
- Honoratus, Antonius, see "Antonius Honoratus."
- Honour and Virtue, temple to, by Marcellus, v. 512
- "Hoplites," former name of stream Hoplites, IV. 316
- Hoplital, one of 4 original Attic tribes, composed of warriors, I. 468
- Hoplites, stream near Haliartus, or, as some say, Coronæa, IV. 316
- Horatius Cocles, helped by Herminius and Lartius, saves Rome by holding bridge, I. 544
- Horatius Flaccus, "Epist." I. 6. 45 f., cited, II. 598
- Horatius, M., elected consul to succeed Lucretius, I. 534; quarrels with Publicola about consecration of temple to Jupiter Capitolinus, 538
- Horcomosium, place at Athens, adjoining Theseum, I. 64
- Hordeonius Flaccus, see "Flaccus, Hordeonius."
- "Horns," place in Megara, II. 38

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Hortensius, Q. Hortatus (1) orator, brother of Valeria, IV. 436; legate of Sulla in Greece, IV. 374, 384, 386; appeared for Verres, VII. 98; surpassed Cicero at trial of Licinius Murena, 170; admirer of Cato, takes Cato's wife Marcia, VIII. 292 f.; made her his heir, 362; II. 472
- Hortensius, Q. Hortatus (2) delivered up Macedonia to Brutus, VI. 180; ordered to kill C. Antonius, and after Philippi slain on his tomb by Antony, 186, IX. 184
- Hostilius (1) Sabine, husband of Hersilia, grandfather of Hostilius who was king after Numa, fell in battle between Romans and Sabines, I. 130, 146
- Hostilius (2), Tullus, king after Numa, his character and death, I. 146, 382
- Hostilius Mancinus, Anlus, consul, repulsed by Perseus at Elimiae, VI. 376
- Hostius, L., first parricide at Rome, I. 162
- "House of Hermes," place in Pythopolis, I. 60
- "House of Tiberius," place in Rome, XI. 260
- Houses, of Cato the Elder, did not have plastered walls, II. 314
- Hyacinthia, festival celebrated at Sparta, II. 244
- Hyacinthus, loved by Apollo, I. 318
- Hybla, in Sicily, attacked by Nicias, III. 262
- Hybreas, rebukes Antony in behalf of Asia, IX. 188
- Hycara, barbarian fastness in Sicily, overthrown by Nicias, III. 262
- Hydaspes, river in India, VII. 394
- Hydra, "cutting off its heads," proverbial expression, X. 244
- Hydrus, II. 444
- Hyllus, father of Cleodaeus, IX. 346
- "Hymenaeus," nuptial cry of Greeks, I. 132
- Hypates, one of Theban tyrants, slain by Pelopidas' band of conspirators, v. 366 f.
- Hyperbatas, Theban general, X. 80
- Hyperbolus, of deme Perithoedae, last man ostracised, II. 252, III. 248, IV. 28
- Hyperboraean, army of, captured Rome, II. 146
- Hypereides, denounced Demosthenes, but admitted him to be man of mark, VII. 30, 32; father of Glaucippus, VIII. 152; 160; his surrender demanded by Alexander, 182; 196; leaves Athens in advance of Antipater, 202; his surrender demanded by Antipater, 204; executed by Antipater at Cleonae, 210, VII. 70; quoted, VIII. 168
- Hypsaeus, Publius Plautius, with Scipio and Milo, candidate for consulship, VIII. 350; when on trial, appeals to Pompey in vain, v. 262
- Hypsechidas, one of 5 Spartan arbiters in dispute between Athens and Megara, I. 428
- Hysicrateia, concubine of Mithridates, v. 200
- "Hysicrates," pet name of Hysicrateia, v. 200
- Hypsion, Plataean hero, II. 246
- Hyrkania, invaded by Alexander, VII. 352; left by him in haste, v. 206; III. 376; 434
- Hyrceanian sea, reached by Alexander, VII. 352; II. 590; v. 208; 214
- Hyrodes (also called Arsaces, q. v.), driven from Parthia, restored, by Surena, III. 378; having divided his forces, he himself attacks Armenia to punish Artavasdes, and sends Surena to attack Crassus, 376; informed of Crassus' death, 416; becomes reconciled to Artavasdes, the Armenian king, acquainted with Greek language and literature, 420; his general Pharnapates defeated by Ventidius, IX. 210; his son Pacorus defeated and slain by Ventidius, 212, III. 422; strangled by his son Phraates, 422, IX. 218
- Hysiae, at foot of Mt. Cithaeron, near its temple of Eleusinian Demeter and Cora, II. 248
- Iaccheium, the so-called, II. 296
- Iacchus, escorted from Athens to Eleusis on 20th of Boedromion, II. 140, IV. 98, VIII. 206
- Ialysus, story of, painted by Protogenes the Caunian; what Apelles

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- said of it; destroyed in fire at Rome, IX. 50 f.
- Ialysus, native city of Timocreon, II. 58
- Iampsas, see "Hiempsal."
- Iapygia, VI. 52, 76
- Iapygian promontory, on coast of Italy, IX. 390
- Iarbas, king, confederate of Domitius, captured and his kingdom given to Hiempsal, v. 144
- Iberia, visited by Lycurgus according to Aristocrates, I. 216
- Iberia, triumphed over by Pompey, v. 230.
- Iberians (1), of Spain, used by Carthaginians in their battles, VI. 330; mixed with Ligurians, 368; mourn death of Aemilius Paulus, 456; their sons educated at Osca by Sertorius, 36; 56; some killed by Sertorius, others sold into slavery, 68; after murder of Sertorius submit to Pompey, 72
- Iberians (2), neighbours of Albanians, II. 554; some as lancers in Tigranes' army, 574; one of 2 greatest peoples about Caucasus Mts.; extent of territory, v. 204; short account of; defeated by Pompey, 206; 212; conquered by Canidius, Antony's general, IX. 214
- Iberian mountains, source of Cynus river, v. 206
- Ibycus, calls Spartan maids "phainomerides," I. 390
- Icelus, freedman, announces Nero's death to Galba, given name Marclianus, XI. 218 f.; helped Otho, 250
- Ichnae, city not far from Carrhae, espoused Roman cause, III. 394
- Ichneumon, found in Asia, VII. 346
- Ictinus, with Callicrates, architect of Parthenon, III. 40
- Ida, mountain, VIII. 192
- Idaeus, secretary of Agesilatis, v. 34
- Idas, with Lynceus, carried off Helen according to some, I. 70
- Idomeneus, cited: II. 214, 222, 242, III. 30, 102, VII. 38, 56, VIII. 152
- 'Ιέρπας, title of tyrants, II. 228
- Ietae, place in Sicily, VI. 334
- Ignatius, with 300 horsemen reaches Carrhae with news of battle, then rides on to Zeugma, III. 402
- Ilia (or Rhea, or Silvia) Numitor's daughter, made Vestal virgin, delivered of twins, imprisoned by Amulius, I. 96; said Mars father of her babes, but Amulius was real father, 98
- Ilia, first wife of Sulla, to whom she bore a daughter, IV. 344
- Iliad, see "Homer."
- Ilicium, from Ἰλῆως, place where Numa met Jupiter, I. 360
- Ilium, taken in Thargelion according to Ephorus, Callisthenes, Damastes, and Phylarchus, II. 138; thrice taken, VIII. 2 f.; Alexander sacrifices to Athena there, VII. 262; II. 502; 506
- Illyrians, conquered by Parmenio at time of Alexander's birth, VII. 230; ravage Macedonia, X. 112; Glaucias their king, IX. 350; fight against Cleomenes at Sellasia, X. 114; 268; VI. 376
- Illyricum, decreed to Caesar for 5 years, v. 240
- Impeachment, of Servilius the augur by Lucullus, II. 470
- Inauguration, of Roman kings, I. 326 f.; of Persian kings, XI. 130
- India, visited by Lycurgus according to Aristocrates, I. 216; invaded by Alexander, VI. 384, VII. 384; v. 298; VI. 254
- Indian, in retinue of Augustus, burned himself to death as Calanus did, VII. 418
- Indian Ocean, III. 428
- Indian war, of Alexander, VII. 384 f.
- "Indian's Tomb," at Athens in Plutarch's time, VII. 418
- Indians, Macedonian troops refuse to follow Alexander against them, VII. 258
- Inferno of Homer, I. 40
- Ino, II. 104
- Inscriptions: II. 16, 24, 210; to mark battlefield of Plataea, 272; 276; in honour of Cato the Elder, 356; 424; by Niclas on stone at Delos, III. 218; IV. 234; v. 184; VI. 394; on pedestal of Demosthenes' statue, VII. 76; 268; on tomb of Cyrus, 416; on tomb of Timon the misanthrope,

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- IX. 298; 432; X. 358; 368; in honour of Aratus, XI. 32; on Otho's tomb, 318
- Insteius, M., with M. Octavius, led centre for Antony at Actium, IX. 284
- Insubrians, their race and home; call Gaesatae to their aid and wage war on Rome, V. 440; routed by Flaminius, 442; stirred up by Gaesatae, again make war on Rome, 446; submit to Rome, 452
- Insurrection, Servile, III. 334 f.
See also "Spartacus."
- "Inter duos pontes," what it was and how formed, I. 520
- Interest, rate of in Asia, regulated by Lucullus, II. 532
- Interregnum, description of the one after death of Romulus, I. 312
- Investments, Cato the Elder's, II. 366
- Iolas, son of Antipater and his chief cupbearer; feared by Alexander, VII. 428; believed to have poisoned Alexander, 434
- Iolaüs, said to have been beloved by Hercules, V. 384
- Iolcus, villages about it furnished settlers for new city Demetrias, IX. 134
- Ion (1), of Chios, poet, when youth, came from Chios to Athens, II. 430.
 Cited: (Bergk II. 254) I. 40; II. 418; 430; 456; III. 14; 82; VII. 6
- Ion (2), delivers Perseus' children to Romans, VI. 424
- "Ionia," name used for Athenian territory on pillar set up by Theseus on the Isthmus, I. 56
- Ionia, III. 82; II. 438; almost all stirred to revolt by Alcibiades, IV. 66; VII. 60
- Ionian civilization, extravagant and luxurious, I. 214
- Ionian, Salamis so called in certain oracles, I. 428
- Ionian sea, VI. 448, VII. 532, IX. 390
- Ionians, implored by Themistocles to help Greeks against Xerxes, II. 26; 448; III. 56
- Iopé, daughter of Iphicles, married by Theseus, I. 66
- Iophon, son of Peisistratus and Timonassa, II. 376
- Ios, where Homer was born, VIII. 4
- Ioxids, colony of in Caria, founded by Ioxus and Ornytus, burns neither asparagus-thorn nor rush on account of vow made by Periguné, I. 18
- Ioxus, son of Melanippus, grandson of Theseus and Periguné, with Ornytus led colony into Caria, I. 18
- Iphicles, father of Iopé, I. 66
- Iphicrates, Athenian, best type of mercenary soldier, XI. 206; cuts Spartan division to pieces, V. 60; conducts unsuccessful war for Artaxerxes against Egypt because of quarrelling with Pharnabazus, XI. 184; cited, V. 342
- Iphitus, with Lycurgus established Olympian truce, I, 204, 278; slain by Hercules, 14
- Iphtha, father of Ascallis, VIII. 22
- Ipsus, battle of, in which Antigonus was defeated and slain by the allied kings, IX. 80, 354
- Iras, waiting woman of Cleopatra, IX. 274, 326
- Isaeus, Demosthenes' guide in public speaking, VII. 12
- Isauricus, P. Servilius, candidate for pontifex maximus, defeated by Caesar, VII. 456; consul with Caesar, 532
- Isias, Corinthian, lands part of Timoleon's troops, VI. 312
- Isidas, son of Phoebidas, brave in defence of Sparta, V. 96
- Isidorus (Isodorus) naval commander of Mithridates, slain near Lemnos by Lucullus, II. 506
- Isis, temple of, near Cleopatra's tomb and monument, IX. 306
- "Isis, New," title given Cleopatra, 262
- Islands, Atlantic, called Islands of the Blest; their character, VIII. 20
- Ismenias (1), Theban, taught the flute, III. 4, IX. 4
- Ismenias (2), with Androcleides led Theban democratic party to which Pelopidas belonged, hated by Spartans, V. 350; carried to Sparta and executed, 352
- Ismenias (3), accompanied Pelopidas on embassy to Persian king, XI. 178; on embassy to Thessaly, V. 406; rescued by Epaminondas, 414

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Ismenus, sanctuary of, had oracle, IV. 316
- Isocrates, charged fee of 10 minas, too much for Demosthenes to pay, VII. 12; Orat. 12, "De bigis," written for son of Alcibiades, IV. 26; criticized by Cato the Elder, II. 372
- Isodicé, daughter of Euryptolemus, granddaughter of Megacles, wife of Cimon, II. 416, 452
- Isidorus, see "Isidorus."
- Isomantus, stream formerly called Hoplites, IV. 316
- Issorium, stronghold in Sparta where temple of Artemis stood, seized by 200 mutineers, recovered through a ruse by Agesilais, V. 88
- Issus, battle of, Alexander defeats Darius, VII. 290, 322
- Ister, "Attic History," Bk 13, cited, I. 78, VII. 356
- Isthmian games, instituted in honour of Poseidon by Theseus, I. 56; victor to receive 100 drachmas according to Solon's regulation, 466; victor's wreath at first of parsley, afterwards of pine, VI. 322 f.; freedom of Greece proclaimed at games by Flamininus, X. 350; V. 56
- Isthmus of Corinth, unites Greek continent, XI. 36; wall proposed there to block Persians, II. 26; 48; Greeks assembled there vote to join Alexander against Persians, VII. 258; IX. 58; temple of Poseidon there, V. 174; Caesar proposed to dig through it: had put Anienus in charge, VII. 578
- Isthmus between Libya and Asia, 300 furlongs in width, IX. 296
- Isthmus at Rhegium, blocked by wall and ditch 300 furlongs long by Crassus, III. 344
- Italia, Themistocles' daughter, married Panthoides the Chian, II. 88
- Italian allies, expelled from Rome, X. 222; strive for Roman citizenship, VIII. 238
- Italus, father of Roma by Leucaria, I. 92
- Italy, separated from Cisalpine Gaul by Rubicon, VII. 490; distracted by pestilence, I. 350; first invasion of, by Gauls, II. 126 f.; invaded by Pyrrhus, IX. 390 f.; returned to by Pyrrhus from Sicily, 424; subdued by Romans soon after Beneventum, 428; invaded by Hannibal, III. 122, V. 456; overrun by Hannibal, 168, II. 304; invaded by Cimbri and Teutones, IX. 488; mastered by Caesar in 60 days, V. 280; entrusted to Antony, IX. 152
- Ithagenes, father of Melissus the philosopher, III. 74
- Ithomatas, place walled in and garrisoned like the Acrocorinthus, XI. 114
- Ithomé, stronghold of Messenians and Helots in revolt against Sparta, II. 456; peopled with Messenians by Thebans, V. 398
- Itonis (Itonia) see "Athena Itonis."
- Iulis, small part of Ceos, bred good actors and poets, VII. 2
- Ixion, embraced cloud instead of Hera and begat Centaurs, X. 2
- Janiculum, held 2 stone coffins, one with body of Numa, the other with sacred books he had written, I. 378; occupied by Marius, IX. 580
- January, changed from 11th to 1st month by Numa, I. 366; by many said to have been put in calendar by him, 368; named from Janus, 370; nearly same as Athenian Poseidon, VII. 532
- January Calends, first day of Roman year, XI. 492, 590
- Janus, account of; why 2 faces; his temple at Rome, when closed, I. 372; double doors of temple opened after Numa's death. 398
- Jason (1), commander of Argo, sailed about, clearing sea of pirates, I. 38; helped at Colchis by Theseus, 66, II. 410
- Jason (2), father of Thebé; friend of Pelopidas, V. 410
- Jason (3), tragic actor in retinue of Hyrodes, III. 420
- Jews, stirred to revolt by Aristobulus, IX. 142
- Journals, with particulars of Alexander's last illness, VII. 432

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Jove, Olympian, IV. 380
- Juba (1), king, aids Cato and Scipio in Africa, VII. 562; VIII. 372; 374; his camp sacked by Caesar, VII. 566; escaped from Thapsus with few followers, VIII. 378; hidden in mountain with few men, sends letter to Cato, 384, 386
- Juba (2), son of preceding, led in Caesar's triumph; became one of most learned historians of Hellas, VII. 570; married Cleopatra, Cleopatra's daughter, IX. 330.
Cited: I. 130, 132, 142, 330, 352, IV. 380, V. 524
- Judaea, subdued by Pompey and its king imprisoned, V. 216; 230; pacified by Antony, IX. 142; balsam-producing part given to Cleopatra, 218
- Jugurtha, the Numidian, bribed Opimius, X. 238; IX. 478; son-in-law of Bocchus, surrendered to Sulla, 484, IV. 328; led in triumph, died in prison, IX. 494
- Julia (1), sister of Caesar's father, wife of Marius the Elder, mother of Marius the Younger, VII. 442, IX. 474; Caesar delivers funeral oration over her in forum, VII. 450
- Julia (2), of house of Caesars, wife of Antonius Creticus, mother of M. Antony, after death of A. C. married Cornelius Lentulus, IX. 138; 180
- Julia (3), daughter of Caesar, betrothed to Caepio, married to Pompey, V. 238, 298, VII. 474, VIII. 310; great love between her and Pompey, buried in Campus Martius, her death removes check on rivalry between Pompey and Caesar, V. 252, VII. 500; 570
- Julia (4), daughter of Augustus, married first to Marcellus, then to Agrippa, IX. 330 f.
- Julius, censor, died, II. 124
- Julius Proculus, see "Proculus, Julius."
- Julius Salinator, see "Salinator, Julius."
- July, named from J. Caesar, originally called Quintilis, I. 370
- June, derived from "Juno" or "innior," I. 370
- Junla, sister of Brutus, wife of Cassius VI. 140
- Junius, governor of Asia, VII. 446
- Junius, M., dictator after Cannae, III. 146
- Junius Silanus, see "Silanus, Junius."
- Juno, temple of, in citadel of Veii, II. 106; image of, transferred to Rome, 108; temple of, on Capitoline, 160
- Juno of Hierapolis, IV. 366
- Juno Quiritis, her statue leans upon a spear, I. 182
- Junonia, in Greek Heraea; colony founded on site of Carthage by C. Gracchus, X. 220
- Jupiter, received dedication of Capitol from Tarquin, I. 144; story of his conversation with Numa, 360; garland of oak leaves sacred to him, IV. 122; 176
- Jupiter Capitolinus, temple of, built by Tarquin the Proud; story of the terra cotta chariot for the roof, I. 534; history of temple, 536 f.
- Jupiter Feretrius, origin of the term, I. 136 f., V. 454; 450; temple of, 454
- Jupiter Stesius or Stator, origin and meaning of the term, I. 146; his temple at beginning of Sacra Via as you go up Palatine Hill, VII. 120
- Jus trium liberorum, what it was, I. 342
- Justice, seated beside Zeus, VII. 376; Spartan idea of, V. 106
- Κάδδτιχος, its meaning, I. 240
- Kannathron, what it is, V. 52
- Κεκαδδίσθαι, its meaning, I. 240
- Keraton, sort of altar about which the "Crane" was danced by Theseus, I. 44
- Κέρανος, title of tyrants, II. 228
- Kermalus, once called Germanus, place where trough containing Ilia's twins landed, I. 98
- Kitaris, Persian for tiara, XI. 190
- Klaria, Spartan for mortgages, X. 30
- Klodones, women devoted to Orphic rites and orgies of Dionysus, VII. 226
- Kothon. Laconian drinking-cup, its description, I. 230

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Krupteia, at Sparta, its nature; said by Aristotle to have been an institution of Lycurgus, I. 288
- Κυβερνήσια*, see "Cybernesia."
- Kurbeis, what they were, I. 472, 572
- Labeo, Q. Antistius, informed of conspiracy to murder Caesar, VI. 150; Brutus' legate, slain at Pharsalus, 240
- Labienus, T., Caesar's legate, crushes Tigurini at river Arar, VII. 486; deserts Caesar for Pompey, v. 282, VII. 526; commander of Pompey's cavalry, v. 292; not admitted to Cyrené, VIII. 370; quoted, VII. 180
- Labienus, Q., son of preceding, Parthian commander-in-chief, IX. 196; subduing Asia from Euphrates, and Syria as far as Lydia and Ionia, 204; slain by Ventidius, 210
- Labyrinth, Cretan, lair of Minotaur, I. 28; a dungeon according to Philochorus, 30; its intricate windings traversed by Theseus by means of thread given by Ariadne, 36; scene of battle between Theseus and Deucalion, 40; dance imitating its windings still performed by Delians, 44
- Laccopluti, nickname given by comic poets to descendants of Callias, II. 226
- Lacedaemonius, son of Cimon and woman of Arcadia, III. 82; sent with 10 ships to aid Corcyra, 82
- Lacetanians, Spanish tribe, subdued by Cato the Elder, II. 332
- Lachares (1), becomes tyrant of Athens, IX. 80; flees when Demetrius blockades city, 82
- Lachares (2), father of Eurycles, executed by Antony on charge of robbery, 290
- Lachartus, Corinthian, upbraids Cimon, II. 456
- Laciadae, deme of Miltiades, II. 412; of Cimon, 432; of Thessalus, IV. 60
- Lacinium, temple of Hera at, v. 174
- Laco, Cornelius, appointed prefect of praetorian guard under Galba, XI. 230; 262; slain by Otho's men, 268; 272
- Laconia, its coasts ravaged by Nicias, III. 230; by Conon and Pharnabazus, v. 62; most of it detached from Spartan confederacy, 396; invaded by Demetrius, IX. 84; by Aetolia and 50,000 slaves taken, X. 88; 110; invaded by T. Flamininus, 300
- "Laconistes," nickname of Archibiades, VIII. 166
- Laconizers, II. 456, 458
- Lacratidas (1), public prosecutor of Pericles according to Heracleides Ponticus, III. 102
- Lacratidas (2) Spartan ephor, IV. 320
- Lacritus, rhetorician, teacher of Archias according to Hermippus, VII. 70
- "Lacus Curtius," origin of the name, I. 144, XI. 266
- Ladder, so-called, road along coast of Pamphylia, VII. 272
- Laelius, reproached Cicero for not opposing Caesar, VII. 220
- Laelius, in army of Lepidus, IX. 176
- Laelius, C., friend of Scipio, attempted agrarian reform, X. 160; 250
- Laena, priestly mantle, derived from Greek "chlaina," I. 330
- Laertes, "to live life of," VII. 184
- Laevinus, consul, defeated by Pyrrhus at Heracleia, IX. 392 f., 398; not deposed by Romans after Heracleia, 400
- Lais, courtesan, sold when girl from Hyccara and brought to Peloponnesus, III. 262, IV. 114
- Laius, Theban king, v. 386
- Lamachus (1), IV. 2; good soldier but lacked authority and prestige because of poverty, 58; left by Pericles to help Sinopeans against Timesileos, III. 60; elected general with Nicias and Alcibiades for Sicilian expedition, 252, IV. 46, 52; urges battle close to Syracuse, III. 253, 260; slain by Callicrates before Syracuse, 270
- Lamachus (2), Myrinaean, wrote encomium on Kings Phillip and Alexander; effectually answered by Demosthenes, VII. 20
- Lamia, in booty captured from Ptolemy by Demetrius at Salamis, IX. 36; 44; 54; 60; exacted money

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- from Athenians on her own account, 62; anecdotes about her, 64 f., 336
- Lamia, Antipater besieged there by Leosthenes, VII. 66, VIII. 86, IX. 346
- Lampido, wife of Archidamus, mother of Agis, v. 2
- Lampon, Athenian seer, III. 14
- Lamponius, Lucanian, with Telesinus nearly overthrew Sulla at gates of Rome, IV. 418, 454
- Lamprias, Plutarch's grandfather, IX. 198
- Lampsacus, II. 80, IV. 106; with help of Storax taken by Lysander, IV. 254
- Lamptrae, Aeschines of, II. 252; Philomelus of, VIII. 220
- LANASSA (1), daughter of Cleodaeus, wife of Neoptolemus and mother of Pyrrhus, IX. 346
- LANASSA (2), daughter of Agathocles of Syracuse marries Pyrrhus with city of Corcyra as dowry, IX. 368; leaves Pyrrhus and marries Demetrius, 372
- Langobritae, attacked by Metellus, saved by Sertorius, VIII. 34
- Langon, cleared of Achaean garrison and restored to Eleians, X. 80
- Language, Carian, II. 270
- Laodicé, mother of Munychus by Demophoön, I. 78, II. 414
- Laomedon (1), king of Troy, wronged Heracles, III. 210, VIII. 2
- Laomedon (2), Orchomenian, how he became great long-distance runner, VII. 14
- Laomedon (3), gave dinner to Cimon and others, II. 430
- Laphystius, popular leader at Syracuse, attacks Timoleon, VI. 348
- Lapithae, aided by Theseus, fight Centaurs, I. 66, 70
- Larentalia, festival in honour of Acca Larentia, I. 100
- Larentia (1), see "Acca Larentia."
- Larentia (2), why honoured, I. 100
- Largess of grain, given poor on suggestion of Cato, VIII. 296
- Larissa (1), imprisons Agesilais' 2 ambassadors, Xenocles and Scythes, v. 42; taken by Epaminondas, 404; 306; VI. 136; IX. 90
- Larissa (2), given Monaeses by Antony, IX. 220
- Larissus river, Achaeans fight Aetolians and Eleians there, x. 272
- Lars Porsena, of Clusium, attacks Rome, then withdraws, I. 542 f.; father of Aruns, 550; bronze statue of, near senate-house, 554
- Lartius, helps Horatius defend the bridge, I. 544
- Lartius, T., left by the consul Cominius in charge of the siege of Corioli, IV. 132; 138
- Larymna, of Boeotia, destroyed by Sulla, IV. 408
- Lathyrus, surname of Ptolemy, IV. 142
- Latin festival, added by vote of people, II. 204
- Latins, especially honour woodpecker, I. 98; made alliance with Romulus, 164; with Sabines wage war on Rome, are defeated, 556 f.; their country devastated by Coriolanus, Rome refusing help, IV. 186; with Volscians and Aequians invade Roman territory, II. 176; defeated by Camillus, 180; invited to participate in Roman franchise by C. Gracchus, x. 214
- Latinus, son of Telemachus, father of Romulus by Roma according to one account, I. 92
- Latinus, T., story of his dream in which Jupiter appeared, IV. 176
- Lattamyas, with his Thessalians conquered by Boeotians at Ceresus, II. 138
- Laughter, statue of, erected by Lycurgus, I. 280; temple of, at Sparta, x. 66
- Laurentum, people of, slay Tattius, I. 162 f.; plague at, 166
- Laureum, silver mines at, the revenue shared among Athenians, II. 10, III. 218
- Lauron, in Spain, captured by Sertorius in spite of Pompey, v. 158, VIII. 48
- Laverna, IV. 340
- Lavicum, captured by Volscians under Coriolanus, IV. 186
- Lavinia, mother of Aemilia by Aeneas, I. 92
- Lavinium, I. 162; founded by Aeneas

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- contained sacred symbols of Roman ancestral gods, besieged by Volscians, IV. 188
 Law of nations, violated by Roman ambassador, II. 132
 Lebadeia, sacked by Lysander, IV. 310; sacked and despoiled of oracle by Mithridates, 376
 Lecanius, said to have slain Galba, XI. 266
 Lechaenum, harbour at Corinth, seized by Aratus, XI. 54; X. 92
 Lectum, in Troad, II. 480
 Leges, neighbours of Albani and Amazons, V. 208 Legion, what it was; why so called, I. 122; enlarged, 150 f.
 "Legs," name of long walls of Athens, II. 446
 Leibethra, image of Orpheus there, VII. 260
 "Lefton," means public hall, I. 172
 Lemnos, II. 298, III. 72, 74; naval battle near it between Lucullus and Mithridates, II. 506
 Lentuli, the two, taken on board ship with Pompey in his flight after Pharsalus, V. 306
 Lentulus, sent to Asia by Flamininus to free Barygia, X. 354 Lentulus (Dolabella), 3rd husband of Cicero's daughter, VII. 188. See also "Dolabella (2), P. Cornelius."
 Lentulus Batiatus, had school of gladiators at Capua, III. 334
 Lentulus, Cornelius, offers consul Paulus his horse in rout at Cannae, III. 166
 Lentulus Clodianus, Gn. Cornelius, consul with Gellius, defeated by Spartacus, III. 340; censor with Gellius, V. 168
 Lentulus Crus, L. Cornelius, opposes Caesar bitterly, V. 272, VII. 512, 518, 524; drives Antony from senate, IX. 150; lands in Egypt and is slain, V. 324
 Lentulus Spinther, L. Cornelius, consul, V. 244; with Pompey's army in Thessaly, V. 290, VII. 178, 544; falsely claimed share in murder of Caesar; executed by Antony and Octavius, 600
 Lentulus Sura, P. Cornelius, his character and career, leads Catiline's followers left in Rome, VII. 122, 458, VIII. 286; convicted, gives up office of praetor and is arrested, VII. 128; executed, 134, 136, 140, 158, VIII. 296, IX. 138
 Leo, Valerius, entertains Caesar, VII. 484
 Leobates, Alcmeon's son, of deme Agraulé, accused Themistocles of treason, II. 62
 Leochares, moulded some of figures in hunting scene dedicated by Craterus, VII. 344
 Leocrates, Athenian general, restrained by Aristides, II. 274; III. 52; 198
 Leon (1), Spartan, father of Antalcidas, XI. 176
 Leon (2), of Byzantium, companion of Phocion in the Academy, VIII. 176; quoted, III. 288
 Leonidas (1), brother of Polydectes' widow, attacks Lycurgus, I. 212
 Leonidas (2), slain at Artemisium by Xerxes' army, II. 24, V. 392, XI. 178; quoted, X. 52
 Leonidas (3), son of Cleonymus, an Agiad, 8th in descent from the Pausanias who defeated Mardonius at Plataea, X. 8; becomes king, is unacceptable to people, 10; opposes Agis, 18, 22; indicted by Lysander and deposed, 24, 28; brought back from Tegea, pardons Cleombrotus, 36; expels ephors, plots against life of Agis, 40; slays Leonidas for attempting to restore ancient constitution, 42, V. 112; X. 48
 Leonidas (4), kinsman of Olympias, tutor of Alexander, VII. 236, 286, 298
 Leonidas, Gorgo's husband, quoted, 266
 Leonnatus (1), sent by Alexander to reassure female relatives of Alexander, VII. 282; 342; to help Eumenes, joined by Hecataeus, plots against Perdicas, VIII. 84; defeated and slain by Greeks, 200
 Leonnatus (2), Macedonian, saves life of Pyrrhus, IX. 396 f.
 Leontidas, with Archias and Philip persuades Phoebidas to seize Cadmeia, V. 350; with Archias

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- made ruler of Thebes by Spartans, 66, 352; how slain, 368
- Leontini, with Eggesta sends embassy to Athens to urge Sicilian expedition III. 250; 260; VI. 58; receives Dion kindly, 84; 264; its territory invaded by Timoleon, 338; IX. 416; taken by Marcellus, v. 468
- Leontis, Athenian tribe, II. 2; opposed to Persian centre at Marathon, 224
- Leontocephalum, village in Asia, II. 82
- Leos, of Agnus, betrayed Pallantidae to Theseus, I. 26
- Leosthenes, Athenian, general merely, VII. 214, VIII. 160; besieged Antipater in Lamia, VI. 274, VII. 66, VIII. 196 f., 220, IX. 346
- Leotychides (1), the Elder, his question about square trees, I. 242; II. 58
- Leotychides (2), son of Timaea and Alcibiades, refused royal succession, IV. 64, 292, v. 6, 8, 326; father of Chilonis, IX. 434
- Lepida, married Metellus Scipio, VIII. 250
- Lepidus, M. Aemilius (1), see "Aemilius Lepidus, M."
- Lepidus, M. Aemilius (2), chosen consul with support of Pompey, tried to deprive Sulla's body of usual burial honours, driven by Pompey from Italy to Sardinia where he died, IV. 434 f., 442, v. 150 f., 154, 196, 326
- Lepidus, M. Aemilius (3), when praetor, entrusted with Rome by Caesar, IX. 152; consul with Caesar in latter's 3rd consulship, 160, VII. 590, 600, VI. 168, IX. 168, 174; forms triumvirate with Octavius and Antony, VI. 186, VII. 200, IX. 178; in command of Rome when Octavius and Antony went to fight Brutus and Cassius, 182; permitted to have Africa, 204
- (Lepidus?) Paulus, Aemilius, proscribed by his brother the triumvir, IX. 178
- Leptines (1), brother of Dionysius the Elder, VI. 18; gave one of his 2 daughters to Philistus, 24; 298
- Leptines (2), with Polysperchon puts Callippus to death, VI. 122; tyrant of Apollonia, surrenders and is sent to Corinth by Timoleon, 318
- Lerna, X. 80, XI. 90
- Lernaean hydra, IX. 406
- Lesbians, offer leadership to Aristides, II. 284; IV. 26; 66
- Lesbos, III. 56; captured by Paches, 226; v. 286
- Leschai, I. 280
- Lesche, place at Sparta, I. 254
- Leto, II. 58; delivered of Apollo, v. 378
- Leucadia, colonized by Corinth, VI. 294; VI. 278; in league against Philip, VII. 40
- Leucaria, mother of Roma by Italus, I. 92
- Leucas, to be colony of Corinth and Coreyra in common, II. 64; v. 174
- Leucaspidas, class of troops serving Antigonus, X. 100
- Leucon, Plataean hero, II. 246
- Leucothea, almost identical with Mater Matuta, II. 104
- Leuctra (1), battle at, Thebans defeat Spartans, Cleombrotus killed, I. 300, II. 138, IV. 126, 280, 452, v. 40, 78, 376, 394, 400, 414, X. 48, XI. 178; plan of, has tombs of daughters of Scedasus; 2 other Leuctras, v. 390
- Leuctra (2), stronghold of Megalopolis, occupied by Cleomenes, X. 60
- "Leuctridae," name given daughters of Scedasus, v. 390
- Leucus river, ran through plain at Pydna, VI. 396; 410
- Libitina (or Proserpina, or Venus) presides over services for dead, I. 346
- Libo, L. Scribonius, blockading harbour of Brundisium, beaten off by Antony, IX. 154
- Library, of Lucullus, II. 604
- Libya, I. 216, II. 474, III. 144, 190, 250, IV. 44, 324, 328, VI. 310, VIII. 372, Bocchus, king of, IX. 276; separated from Asia by isthmus 300 furlongs long, 296; 306; X. 122
- Libyans, used by Carthaginians in their battles, VI. 330
- Libyan sea, proposed by Pyrrhus as boundary between Carthaginians and Greeks, IX. 420; cleared of pirates by Pompey, v. 182

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Libys, Lysander's father, X. 14
- Libyssa, village, in Bithynia, X. 380
- Lichas, Spartan, famous for hospitality, II. 434
- Licina (1), daughter of P. Crassus, wife of C. Gracchus, X. 194; deprived of her marriage portion, 236; quoted, 230
- Licina (2), vestal, her name connected with that of Crassus, III. 314
- Licinius, trusty servant of C. Gracchus, X. 148, 234
- Licinius, P., first to invade Macedonia, defeated by Perseus, VI. 376
- Licinius Macer, see "Macer, Licinius."
- Licinius Philonicus, Roman of humble birth, VI. 454
- Licinius Stolo, see "Stolo, Licinius."
- Lictores, attended Romulus, their duties, derivation of word, I. 172; number of, VI. 362. See also "fasces."
- Licymnius, his tomb in Argos, IX. 458
- "Life of Caecilius Metellus," cited, IX. 546
- Ligarius (C. or Q.?) pardoned by Caesar, VII. 182; friend of Brutus, joins conspiracy to murder Caesar, VI. 148
- Liguria, traversed by Cimbri and Teutones, IX. 302
- Ligurians, defeated by Fabius Maximus, III. 120; also called Ligustines, brief account of them, subdued by Aemilius Paulus, VI. 366 f.; 402; 458; call themselves Ambrones by descent, defeat Ambrones at Aquae Sextiae, IX. 514
- Lilybaeum, Carthaginians land there, VI. 320
- Limnaeus, slain defending Alexander, VII. 404
- Limnus, Macedonian from Chalaestra, conspires against Alexander and is killed, VII. 364
- Lindus, Marcellus dedicated treasures from Syracuse there, v. 520
- Lingones, their territory crossed by Caesar, VII. 506
- Lion's Head, village where Themistocles was to be murdered, II. 82
- Liparian galleys, capture Roman envoys on way to Delphi, II. 114
- Liris, river, IX. 566
- Lissus, Pompeian, captured by Antony, IX. 154
- Lists of citizens, arranged by censors, II. 346
- Literature, loved by Lucullus, II. 472
- "Litores," original form of "lictiores," I. 172
- Lituus, crooked staff used in augury, carried by Romulus; preserved on Palatine, lost at time of Gallic invasion, found afterwards, I. 160; its use, II. 174
- Livia, wife of Augustus Caesar; related to Sulpicius Galba, XI. 210; IX. 322; 330
- Livius, M., lost Tarentum to Hannibal, III. 186
- Livius Drusus, see "Drusus, Livius."
- Livius Postumius, led Latins against Rome after Gauls left, I. 184
- Livy, of Patavium, historian, VII. 554
- Cited: (v. 2) II. 108, (XXIII. 16. 15) v. 462, (XXVII. 2) v. 502, (27) 520, (XXXIX. 5) x. 378, 380, (42) II. 352; 564; 576; IV. 342; VII 554; 590
- Locri Epizephyrii, favoured Hannibal, v. 514
- Locrians, give divine honours to Eucleia, II. 278; proclaimed free at Isthmian games by Flamininus, X. 350
- Locrians, Ozolian, III. 56
- Locris, invaded by Orchomenians, v. 376; ravaged by Aratus, XI. 34
- Lollius, M., colleague of Cato as quaestor, VIII. 272
- "Longimanus," surname of Artaxerxes I., XI. 128
- "Long Walls," of Athens, called "legs," begun by Cimon at his own expense, II. 446
- Lolus, Macedonian for month Hecatombaeon, VII. 228
- Love, signs of, IX. 92; statue of, in Academy, dedicated by Peisistratus, I. 406
- Luca, where Caesar, Pompey, and Crassus met, III. 356, v. 248, VII. 494
- Lucania, VI. 176, VII. 162, IX. 384, 394
- Lucanians, Mamercus planned to bring them against Timoleon, VI. 342; those joining Pyrrhus after

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

Heracleia are censured, IX. 400;
 inveterate foes of Rome, IV. 420

Lucerenses, one of the 3 divisions of Roman people in time of Romulus; derived from "lucus," I. 152

Lucilius, tribune, advises Pompey be made tribune and is attacked by Cato, V. 256

Lucilius, comrade of Brutus, saves him from capture at Philippi, VI.
 238; becomes a friend of Antony,
 IX. 294

Lucinus, Sextus, thrown down
 Tarpeian rock by orders of Marius,
 IX. 590

Lucius (1), see "Furius, L."

Lucius (2), brother of Scipio Africanus Maior, expelled from equestrian order by Cato the Elder, II. 354

Lucius (3), brother of Valens, sent away by Otho with Dolabella, XI.
 286

"Lucius," name called out on way to sacrifice to Romulus, I. 184

Lucretia (1), wife of Numa, mother of Pompilia, I. 376

Lucretia (2), suffered violence, committed suicide, I. 502, 534

Lucretius (1), father of Lucretia, elected consul with Publicola, died soon after, I. 534

Lucretius (2) T., chosen consul as colleague to Publicola, I. 542; attacks and routs Sabine cavalry, 560

Lucretius (3), invited first to express opinion re moving to Veii, II. 170

Lucretius Ofella, urged to raise siege of the younger Marius at Praeneste, IV. 422; candidate for consulship against Sulla's wishes, murdered by his orders, 432; 448

Lucullea, festivals in honour of Lucullus in Asia, II. 542

Lucullean money, used widely and for long time, II. 474

Luculli, the two, absent in Servile war, III. 432; VII. 478

Lucullus, L. Licinius, his family and accomplishments, Sulla's memoirs dedicated to him, II. 470 f., 484;
 wrote Greek history of Marsic war, 472; favoured and employed by Sulla, 474 f.; commissioned by Sulla to collect the 20,000 talents

exacted from Asia and re-coin it, 482; appointed guardian of Sulla's son; consul with M. Cotta, gets province of Cisalpine Gaul, 484;
 has money sent to Pompey in Spain, 486, V. 162; with help of Præcia and Cethegus gets province of Cilicia and Mithridatic war, II. 488; advances against Mithridates, 494;
 comes to relief of Cyzicus, 498; cuts to pieces part of Mithridates' forces at river Rhyndacus, another part at river Granicus, relieves Cyzicus, 504; refuses senate's vote of 3000 talents for ships, 508; invades Mithridates' country by way of Bithynia and Galatia, 510; leaves
 Murena in charge of siege of Amisus, 514; inflicts severe losses upon Mithridates, who flees, 520; found great treasure in Cabira and other places captured, 524; subdued Chaldaeans and Tibarenti, occupied Lesser Armenia, 526; takes Amisus, which is sacked and burned by the soldiers, 528; frees cities of Asia of their financial oppression, 532;
 gives processions, festivals, etc.
 in cities of Asia, 542; leaving Sornatius as guardian of Pontus, sets out for 2nd war, crosses Euphrates, 546; crosses Tigris and enters Armenia, 548; defeats Tigranes and invests Tigranocerta, 552; utterly defeats Tigranes' great army near Tigranocerta, 556 f.; takes Tigranocerta, 566; honours memory of Zarbienus, king of the Gordyeni, 568; decides to attack Parthia, but his soldiers refuse, 570; plundered Armenia and marched against Artaxata, royal residence of Tigranes, 572; defeats Tigranes at the river Arsania, 574; purposes to advance farther but the troops object, 578

Begins to fail because of mutinous army, 578 f.; is also secretly undermined by P. Clodius, 582; cannot get army to march against Tigranes or against Mithridates, who had come back into Pontus from Armenia, 584; is superseded by Pompey, meets him in Galatia, but comes to no agreement with him,

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- 588 f., v. 190 f.; failed because he could not win the affection of his soldiers, II. 590; on return to Rome is attacked by Memmius and has difficulty in getting a triumph, 592, VIII. 304; divorces Clodia, marries Servilia, sister of Cato, divorces her, II. 594; retires from public life, 596; his extravagance and luxury, 598 f., IX. 556; threw his libraries open to all; fond of all philosophy, but favoured the Old Academy, II. 604 f.; still supports his political friends at times and opposes Pompey, 606, VIII. 308; opposes measures of Caesar the consul, 310, II. 608; retires even more from public life, loses his mind in old age, 376, 608; buried on his estate at Tusculum, 610
- See also* II. 406, 408, 410, III. 370, 398, IV. 412, v. 192, 202, 216, 234, 238, 240, VII. 151, 162, X. 384
- Quoted: II. 512, 548, 562, 598, 602
- Lucullus, M. Licinius, loved by his brother Lucius, elected aedile with him, II. 472 f.; as Sulla's legate defeats 50 cohorts of enemy at Fidentia, IV. 412; when praetor of Macedonia tries P. Antonius for corruption, VII. 448; absent from Servile war, III. 432; prosecuted for his acts as quaestor under Sulla, but acquitted, II. 592; died soon after his brother, 610
- Lucumo, wealthy Tuscan who wronged his guardian Arron, II. 126
- "Lupa," means both she-wolf and courtesan, and may mean latter in reference to Romulus' nurse, I. 100
- Lupercalia, derivation of word; origin and nature of festival held in February, I. 156 f., 370, VII. 584; called Lycaea in Greek, IX. 164
- Luperci, what they do at the Lupercalia, I. 156, IX. 164
- Lusitanians, triumphed over by Brutus, X. 194; organized by Sertorius, VIII. 24 f.; conquered by Caesar, VII. 470
- Lusius, C., serves under his uncle Marius; slain by Trebonius, IX. 498
- "Lycaea," related in meaning to Lupercalia, I. 156, VII. 584, IX. 164
- Lycaecum, Mt., where Cleomenes defeated Aratus, X. 58, XI. 82
- Lycaonia, II. 544; added to Pompey's sway by the Manilian law, v. 190; Amyntas king of, IX. 276
- Lyceum, at Athens, I. 62; ravaged by Sulla, IV. 362
- Lyicians, refuse Brutus' demand for money, VI. 192; forced to give 160 talents, 198
- Lycomedes (1), king of Scyros, asked to restore lands to Theseus, murdered him, I. 82, II. 428
- Lycomedes (2), Athenian captain, first to capture Persian ship at Salamis, II. 44
- Lycomidae, Themistocles connected with family of, II. 4
- Lycon (1), Syracusan, supplies sword for murdering Dion, VI. 120
- Lycon (2), of Scarpheia, actor, begs 10 talents of Alexander, VII. 310
- "Lycophon," used in pallet-beds of Spartan boys in winter for warmth, I. 258
- Lycophon (1), Athenian general, slain in battle with Nicias, III. 228
- Lycophon (2), brother of Hebe, helps slay Alexander of Pherae, v. 430 f.
- Lycortas, chosen general by Messenians to avenge death of Philopoemen, X. 314
- Lycurgidae, anniversaries of death of Lycurgus, I. 302
- Lycurgus (1), when he lived, I. 204; his lineage, 206; after death of Polydectes became king of Sparta for short time, 208; resigning kingship makes himself guardian of his brother's son, the new king, 210; accused of desiring the king's death, goes abroad and studies various forms of government, 212; on returning to Sparta undertakes to change the existing order of things entirely, 216; his most important innovation was the institution of a senate or Council of Elders, 218; gets oracle from Delphi to lend sanction to his work, 220; (ephors introduced later to curb the oligarchical element), 224; as 2nd measure redistributes the land, 226;

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL 'LIVES'

next divides up the movable property, withdraws all gold and silver money and introduces iron currency, 228, IV. 276; banishes unnecessary arts, I. 230; introduces common messes, 232

Attacked by wealthy citizens and blinded in one eye by Alcander, 234; boys came to the public messes, 238; put none of his laws into writing, 240; forbade extravagance and making frequent expeditions against the same enemy, 242; carefully regulated marriages and births, 244; put public stigma upon confirmed bachelors, 248; his system of training for boys and youths, 256 f.; examples of Spartan wit and brevity of speech, 266 f.; Spartan training in music and poetry, 270; their life in time of war, 274 f.; Lycurgus said to have been an experienced warrior, 276; training of Spartans lasted until full maturity, 278; Lycurgus trained citizens to have neither wish nor ability to live for themselves; how senators were elected, 282; regulations as to burial, 286; travel and presence of foreigners forbidden; what the "krupeteia" was; treatment of Helots, 288 f.; bound citizens by oath to observe his laws until he returned, then consulted the oracle at Delphi and starved himself to death, 292 f.; in reign of Agis gold and silver crept into Sparta, 296; Lycurgus' design for a civil polity adopted by Plato, Diogenes, and Zeno, 300; the place of his death, 302

See also I. 320, 446, II. 214, 390, IV. 234, V. 72, X. 12, 68, 244, 250

Sayings: I. 210, 266

Lycurgus (2), led Plain-men at Athens, I. 486

Lycurgus (3) of Byzantium, with Anaxilais and others, agreed to surrender the city to Alcibiades if it were not plundered, IV. 90

Lycurgus (4), Athenian orator, VIII. 160; his surrender demanded by Alexander, 182, VII. 56; VIII. 166; X. 356; quoted, III. 424

Lycus, place to north of Greece, X. 330

Lycus river (1), in Asia Minor, II. 514, IX. 118

Lycus river (2), in Sicily, VI. 340

Lydia, obtained peace and security through Heracles, I. 14; II. 432; invaded by Agesilaüs, V. 24

Lydiades, tyrant of Megalopolis, resigns, makes city a member of Achaean league, tries to rival Aratus, XI. 69, 80; attacks Cleomenes at Megalopolis and is slain, 84, X. 62

"Lydians, procession of," a rite at Sparta, II. 266

Lygdamis, said by some to have led Cimmerians into Asia, IX. 490

Lynceus (1), with Idas said to have carried off Helen, I. 70

Lynceus (2), Samian, cited, IX. 62 f.

Lysander (1), father of Archippé, adopted Diocles, II. 86

Lysander (2), statue of him at Delphi, his appearance, lineage, training and character, IV. 234 f.; put in command of fleet after Athenian disaster in Sicily, 238; visits Cyrus at Sardis to accuse Tissaphernes of slackness, and gets 10,000 darics to increase pay of his sailors 1 obol a day, 102, 240; defeats Antochius, Alcibiades' pilot, off Samos, 104, 242; organizes oligarchic political clubs in cities of Asia, is succeeded by Callicratidas, 244; returns as vice-admiral under Aracus, 248; unscrupulous and subtle, deceives democracy of Miletus, 250; promised every assistance by Cyrus, 252; storms Lampsacus, 254; defeats Athenians at Aegospotami, 258 f.; slew 3000 prisoners including the admirals, 108, 260 f.; establishes oligarchies in the cities, 266 f.; takes Athens, imposes harsh terms, 270 f.; establishes 30 rulers in Athens and 10 in the Piræus, garrisons the acropolis, 110, 274

Annoys leading men by his ambition, 282; recalled by ephors, 284; released by ephors, sets sail to meet strong opposition, 290; persuades Agesilaüs to claim throne, 292, V. 4 f.; gets Agesilaüs

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- appointed general for war against barbarians, and goes along as one of 30 counsellors, 12 f., IV. 296; thrust aside by Agesilaüs, 298, v. 18; sent as ambassador to Hellespont, induces Spithridates to revolt from Pharnabazus, returns to Sparta without honour, plans revolution, 20, 52, IV. 300 f.; memorizes speech written by Cleon the Halicarnassian to persuade citizens, 302; his plot spoiled by cowardice of one of his co-workers, 306; plunged Hellas into the Boeotian war, 308; took Orchomenus, 310; defeated and slain by Thebans near Haliartus, 312; his speech on the constitution discovered by Agesilaüs but not published, 318, v. 54; honoured highly after death, IV. 320
See also I. 298, III. 306, IV. 112
 Quoted: IV. 250, 252, 292, 300
- Lysander (3), son of Iäby, supports Agis in his attempted reforms, X. 14; elected by help of Agis, introduces bill to relieve debtors and divide land, but the bill is defeated, 18; indicts Leonidas and has him deposed from kingship, 26 f.; indicted for violating law, 28, 30
- "Lysandreia," name given their festival of Hera by Samians in honour of Lysander, IV. 280
- Lysandridas, of Megalopolis, captured by Cleomenes, driven out of Messene by Philopoemen, X. 104
- Lysanoridas, harmost in Thebes; being heavily fined, left Peloponnesus, v. 370
- Lysias, orator, Cato the Elder's model, say some, II. 320
- Lysicles, sheep-dealer, lived with Aspasia after death of Pericles, III. 70
- Lysidicé, daughter of Pelops and Hippodameia, sister of Pittheus, mother of Alcmena, I. 16
- Lysimachus (1), father of Aristides the Just, of tribe Antiochis, of deme Alopecé, II. 8, 210, 290, 418
- Lysimachus (2), son of Aristides, had daughter Polycrité; given pension, II. 296
- Lysimachus (3), grandson of Aristides very poor, II. 296
- Lysimachus (4), Acarnanian, tutor of Alexander, VII. 236; saved from death by him, 294
- Lysimachus (5), king after Alexander, VII. 356; 382; IX. 30; begins to wear diadem, 40; 48; 60; 64; his territory ravaged by Demetrius, 74; father of Agathocles, marries one daughter of Ptolemy and takes another for his son, 76; deprived Demetrius of his cities in Asia, 86; 360; taken prisoner by Dromichaetes, then liberated, 98; leagued with Seleucus and Ptolemy against Demetrius, invades Macedonia from Thrace, 108, 374; divides Macedonia with Pyrrhus, 112, 378 f.; attacks Pyrrhus at Edessa and gains Macedonia, 380; 116; offers Seleucus large sum to put Demetrius to death, 130; 338
- Lysimachus (6), companion of Pyrrhus, IX. 442
- Lysippus (1), his statues well represent Alexander, VII. 230; 268; 344
- Lysippus (2), general of Achaeans, X. 286
- Macaria, daughter of Hercules, sacrificed, v. 390
- Macedonia, II. 448; entered by Pelopidas, scene of war between Ptolemy and Alexander, king of Macedonia, v. 404; IX. 106; invaded by Lysimachus and Pyrrhus, 108, 370; divided between Pyrrhus and Lysimachus, 112, 378; deserts Pyrrhus for Lysimachus, 380; invaded by Pyrrhus, 430; ravaged by barbarians, who are utterly defeated by Antigonus, X. 118; invaded by Sulpicius and Villius late in season, X. 326; Greeks freed from it, VI. 370; returned to Philip, X. 346; invaded by P. Licinius, VI. 376; in reign of Perseus subdued by Romans, 414 f., IX. 134; being overrun by Ariarathes, IV. 358; province of, voted to Antonius, VII. 110; voted to Piso, 156; delivered up to Brutus by Hecrtensius, VI. 180
- Macedonian garri on, attacked by Thebans, VII. 54

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Macedonian king, lets Agésilatis pass through territory as friend, v. 42
- Macedonians, I. 12; Greeks aroused against them by Demosthenes, VII. 40 f.; 398; after Cassander's death ruled by his son Philip, IX. 86; proclaim Demetrius king, 90; 366; proclaim Pyrrhus king, 376; driven from Peloponnesus by Aratus, X. 82; expelled from Athens, XI. 78; harried by Illyrians, call Antigonus home, X. 112; call in Antigonus, cousin of Demetrius and make him first regent and then king, VI. 372; Greeks freed from by Romans, II. 334; submit to Aemilius Paulus and are to pay 100 talents tribute, VI. 418, 428; 458
- "Macedonicus," surname of Metellus, IX. 464
- Macer, Clodius, see "Clodius Macer."
- Macer, Licinius, convicted of fraud and died, VII. 102
- "Machaeriones," name given descendants of Anticrates who slew Epaminondas, v. 98
- Machanidas, tyrant of Sparta, defeated and slain by Achaeans under Philopoemen, X. 280; succeeded by Nabis as tyrant of Sparta, 286
- Machares, son of Mithridates, held Bosphorus, asks to be Rome's friend, II. 544
- Machatas, father of Charops who was leading man in Epirus and well-disposed to Romans, X. 330
- Machinery, stage, referred to, IV. 302
- Macrinus, cognomen or epithet, IX. 464
- Maecenas, Memoirs of Caesar Augustus addressed to him and Agrippa, VII. 214, IX. 214
- Maedi, subdued by Alexander, VII. 244; their country ravaged by Sulla, IV. 402
- Maedica, force of Bisternae encamp there, VI. 382
- Maelius, Spurius, slain by Servilius Ahala, VI. 126
- Maeotic Lake (Lake Maeotis) II. 518, IV. 358, v. 206, IX. 488
- Magaeus, brother of Pharnabazus, ordered to kill Alcibiades, IV. 112
- Magas, brother of Ptolemy IV., X. 124
- Magi, XI. 132, 138
- Magnesia, given Themistocles for bread, II. 80, 82, 84; Themistocles died there, 86, 88, 90
- Magnesia, Dionysius of, VII. 90
- Magnesia, visited by Titus, X. 354
- Magnesian lore, exposition of, heard by Themistocles, II. 80
- Magnesians, have garrisons put over them by Alexander of Pherae, v. 418; freed by him under compulsion 430; proclaimed free at Isthmian games by Flamininus, X. 350; 364
- Mago, Carthaginian, summoned for help by Hicetas, occupies Syracuse with fleet and army, VI. 302, 304; frightened, sails off to Libya, 310; commits suicide, 314
- Maia, mother of Mercury, I. 370
- Maimacterion, Athenian month, same as Boeotian Alalcomenius, II. 278
- Malaca, plundered by Crassus, III. 326
- Malchus, sends army to Alexander from Arabia, IX. 276
- Malcitas, leader of Thebans against Alexander of Pherae after death of Pelopidas, v. 430
- Malea, cape, IV. 358, X. 20, XI. 26
- Maliac gulf, III. 56
- Malli, people of India, attacked by Alexander who was severely wounded, VII. 402 f., 414
- Mamercii, descended from Mamercus, I. 376
- Mamercus (1), son of Pythagoras, I. 334; surnamed Aemilius, founded Aemilian family according to some, VI. 358
- Mamercus (2), one of Numa's 4 sons, named after son of Pythagoras, I. 334, 376
- Mamercus (3), tyrant of Catana, becomes ally of Timoleon, VI. 290; forms alliance with Carthaginians, 334; writer of poems and tragedies, 336; defeated at river Abolus, 340; tried and condemned at Syracuse and crucified, 342, 350
- Mamertines, called in by some Sicilian cities owing to hatred of Pyrrhus, IX. 422, 424; barbarians about Messana, conquered by Pyrrhus, 420; harshly treated by Pompey, v. 136
- Mamurius, Veterius, copied accurately the sacred shield, I. 350; re-

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- warded by having his name mentioned in a song of the Salii, 354
- Mancinus, C., Roman consul, defeated several times in war against Numantia and forced to make truce with enemy, X. 152; to be delivered up in bonds and unarmed to Numantines, 158
- Mandrocleidas (1), Spartan, sent as ambassador to Pyrrhus, IX. 436
- Mandrocleidas (2), son of Ecphanes, supports Agis in his attempted reforms, X. 14, 20; indicted for violating law by proposing abolition of debts and distribution of land, persuades 2 kings to act together and disregard ephors, 28
- Mandurium, in Italy, where Messapians slew Archidamus, X. 8
- "Mania," surname of Demo, IX. 64
- Manilius (1), expelled from senate by Cato the Elder for embracing his wife in the presence of his daughter, II. 352
- Manilius (2), tribune, proposes law giving Pompey charge of war against Mithridates, V. 190; brought before Cicero a praetor on charge of fraudulent accounting; defended by him, VII. 104
- "Manipularis," derived from Manipulus, I. 110
- "Manipulus," origin of the word, I. 110
- Manius Curius, see "Curius, M."
- Manius (1), consul, after defeating Antiochus, asked Achaeans to permit exiles from Sparta to return home, X. 306; opposed considerably by Philopoemen, 316. See also "Acilius Glabrio, M."
- Manius (2), tribune, opposes T. Flamininus' candidacy for consulship, X. 324
- "Manlius," name common to family, IX. 464
- Manlius (1), implores Ti. Gracchus to submit question of agrarian law to senate, X. 170
- Manlius (2), brought into plot against Sertorius, VIII. 68, 70, 74
- Manlius, C., served with distinction under Sulla, led veterans in support of Catiline, VII. 114, 118, 120
- Manlius, L. (1), expert mountain-climber helps Cato the Elder at Thermopylae, II. 338
- Manlius, L. (2), came from Gallia Narbonensis to help Metellus, VIII. 32
- Manlius, T., in his consulship temple of Janus closed, I. 372
- Manlius Capitolinus, M., repulses attack of Gauls on the Capitol, II. 160 f.; supports the poor, is condemned and thrown from the Capitol, 188
- Manlius Maximus, Gn., defeated by the Ambrones, IX. 512
- Mantineia, not received into allegiance by Demetrius, IX. 58, XI. 58; ally of Cleomenes, captured by Aratus, joins Achaean league, 82, X. 60; freed of Achaean garrison and restored to its own laws and constitution by Cleomenes, 78, XI. 90; captured by Achaeans with aid of Antigonus and its inhabitants sold into slavery, founded anew and name changed to Antigoneia, 104 f., X. 100, 256, 280
- Mantineia, battle of, Thebans defeat Spartans, but Epaminondas is slain, V. 92, 98, 348; 2nd battle of, Demetrius routs Archidamus, IX. 84; 3rd battle of, Philopoemen defeats Machanidas, X. 282
- Mantineians, secede from Sparta and make alliance with Athens, III. 244, IV. 36; revolt from Thebes, helped by Spartans, V. 94
- Manumission among the Romans, X. 362
- Marathon, I. 68; named from Marathon, 74 f.; Aristonicus of, VII. 70; battle of, Greeks under Miltiades defeat Persians, I. 82, II. 10, 138, 224, 226, 386, 396, 418, XI. 34
- Marathonian bull, sacrificed to Delphinian Apollo by Theseus, I. 26
- Marathus, Arcadian in army of Dioscuri, gave name Marathon to town-ship, I. 74
- Marcellinus, asks Pompey and Crassus if they intend to be candidates for consulship, III. 358, V. 248
- "Marcellus," means martial, V. 436; 3rd Roman name, IX. 464
- Marcellus, quaestor with Cato the Younger, VIII. 276

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Marcellus, C. Claudius (1), consul, votes Caesar be declared public enemy unless he lays down arms, v. 268, VII. 512 f.; asks Pompey to prepare defence against Caesar, v. 270, IX. 148; VII. 194; had 2 daughters and 1 son by Octavia, sister of Augustus, v. 522, IX. 330; died, 206; quoted, v. 270
- Marcellus, C. Claudius (2), son of C. Marcellus and Octavia, sister of Augustus, married daughter of Augustus and died during aedileship, v. 522; made both son and son-in-law of Augustus, IX. 330
- Marcellus, M. Claudius (1), father of the following Marcellus, v. 436
- Marcellus, M. Claudius (2), 5 times consul, III. 174, v. 436, 522; mighty warrior, made curule aedile and augur, 438; appointed consul by the "interreges," appoints Gn. Cornelius his colleague; wishes war with Gauls continued, 446; slays Britomartus, king of Gauls, winning "spolia opima," 450, I. 138; takes Mediolanum, grants Gauls equitable peace, is given triumph, v. 454; after Cannae takes the lead in fighting Hannibal, 456 f., III. 172 f.; surprises Hannibal at Nola, v. 462; made consul 2nd time, defeats Hannibal near Nola, 464; consul for 3rd time, sailed to Sicily, 466; storms Leontini, 468; captures Megara and Syracuse, 482 f.; regrets death of Archimedes, 486; humane and just in treating Sicilians, 488, III. 184; brought back beautiful works of art, 184, v. 492.
- Consul 4th time, is accused by Syracusans of having treated their city with undue severity, is acquitted, 496 f.; moves against Hannibal, 500; fights several engagements with varying success, 502 f.; spends summer at Sinuessa recuperating his soldiers, 510; consul 5th time, calms Etruria, 512; ambushed and slain with his colleague Crispinus by Hannibal, 516 f., X. 324; his memorials, 520 f.; compared with Pelopidas, 522 f.
- Quoted: v. 450, 478
- Marcellus, M. Claudius (3), son of preceding, v. 438; censor with T. Flamininus, expels 4 men from senate, X. 372
- Marcellus, M. Claudius (4), serves under Marius against Teutones, IX. 518
- Marcellus, M. Claudius (5), with 2 others comes to consul Cicero at midnight to warn of plot, VII. 116
- March, used to be first month; consecrate to Mars, I. 368; why moved by Numa, 370
- Marcia, daughter of Philippus, married to Cato, then to Hortensius, VIII. 292, 326; left widow by Hortensius, again married to Cato, 362
- Marcianus, see Icelus."
- Marcii, patrician house at Rome, had many distinguished sons, IV. 118
- Marcus (1), urged Numa to accept kingship of Rome, I. 324; father of Marcus who married Pompilia, Numa's daughter; rival of Hostilius for throne after Numa, defeated, starved himself to death, 378
- Marcus (2), son of preceding, husband of Pompilia and father of Ancus Martius, I. 378
- Marcus (3), with Cethegus ordered to kill Cicero, VII. 120
- Marcus (4), recently come from Rome to Pompey's camp, quoted, VII. 180
- Marcus, mountain where Romans were besieged by Latins, II. 176, 180
- Marcus, Ancus, son of Marcus and Pompilia, Numa's daughter, 5 years old when Numa died, succeeded Tullus Hostilius to throne, I. 378, IV. 118; completed wooden bridge over Tiber, I. 338
- Marcus, C., consul with Scipio Nasica, not duly appointed and recalled, v. 444
- Marcus, P., with Q. Marcus brought best and most abundant supply of water to Rome, IV. 118
- Marcus, Q., see preceding.
- Marcus Censorinus, see "Censorinus."
- Marcus Rex, husband of Tertia, sister of Clodius, VII. 154
- Marcus, brother of Valerius, see "Valerius, M."
- "Marcus," name called out by people

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- as they went to sacrifice to Mars, I. 184
- "Marcus," praenomen of Camillus, II. 148
- Mardian, a certain, acts as adviser and guide to Antony, IX. 230
- Mardian mounted archers in Tigranes' army, II. 574
- Mardion, eunuch of Cleopatra's, IX. 274
- Mardonius, left behind by Xerxes to block pursuit, II. 12 f., 46; left behind with 300,000, threatens Hellenes and tempts Athenians, 240; invades Attica 2nd time, 242; repulsed with help of Athenians, 252; decides to cross Asopus and attack Athenians unexpectedly, 256, 260, 264; defeated and slain at Plataea, 226, 270, X. 8; quoted, II. 240
- Margianian steel, III. 386
- "Margites," epithet applied to Alexander by Demosthenes, VII. 54
- Marian canal, IX. 502
- "Marian mule," origin of the term, IX. 494
- Marica, grove near Minturnae, IX. 572
- "Maricas," play of Eupolis, III. 220
- Marius, father of the famous Marius, IX. 466
- Marius, C. (1), about his name, IX. 464; appearance, early training, family, 466; saw first service with Scipio Africanus in siege of Numantia, 468; makes his mark as tribune of the people, 470; defeated for aedile, elected praetor, 472; receives province of Farther Spain, marries Julia, aunt of J. Caesar, 474; serves with distinction in Africa under Caecilius Metellus against Jugurtha, 476; returns to Rome and is elected consul for war against Jugurtha, 480 f.; succeeds Metellus in Africa, but Sulla, his quaestor, gets Jugurtha, 484, IV. 330
- Elected consul in his absence for war against Cimbri and Teutones, IX. 486, 492; celebrates triumph over Jugurtha, 492 f.; drills his army and wins their respect, 494 f.; elected consul 3rd time, 498; elected 4th time with Lutatius Catulus, 500; confronted by Teutones and Ambrones, 502 f.; follows the barbarians to Aquae Sextiae, 510; cuts the Ambrones to pieces, 514; utterly defeats the Teutones, 518 f.; receives news of being elected consul for 5th time, 522; agrees with Boeorix, king of the Cimbri, to fight on plain of Vercellae 3rd day following, 530; utterly defeats the Cimbri, 536
- Elected consul 6th time through bribery, supports Saturninus in many of his misdeeds, 542; when Metellus is recalled from exile sets sail for Cappadocia and Galatia hoping for war against Mithridates, 548; on returning finds a rival in Sulla, 550; loses prestige in Social war, 552; by striving to get appointed to war against Mithridates brings on civil strife, 536 f.; gets appointed but Sulla refuses to hand over his troops and drives Marius from Rome, 560; is captured and taken to Minturnae, 568; frightens barbarian sent in to slay him, 572; is put aboard ship and sails to Africa, 574; is warned off by Sextilius the governor, rejoined by his son, 576; gathers a force and returns, 578 f.; enters Rome with Cinna and puts many to death, 584 f.; kills Marcus Antonius the orator, 586, IX. 138; elected consul 7th time, 590; dies of pleurisy, 592, 596.
- See also* II. 484, 596, III. 322, IV. 328, 336, 344, 348, 350, 352, 354, 454, V. 140, VI. 190, VII. 442, 450, 478, VIII. 6, 10, 14, X. 384.
- Quoted: III. 318, IX. 550, 554, 572, 576
- Marius, O. (2), son of Julia, VII. 442; escapes to Africa, IX. 560; goes to Hiempsal to ask help, 574; escapes from him and with his father crosses to island of Cercina, 576; assumes consulship and is very cruel to his opponents, 596, VIII. 14; defeated with Norbanus by Sulla near Capua, IV. 410; defeated at Signia, flees to Praeneste, 416; besieged at Praeneste by Ofella, 418, 422, v. 146; slew himself, IV. 428, IX. 598
- Marius, M. (1), sent by Sertorius to

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Mithridates from Spain with an army, advances against Lucullus, II. 494, VII. 66; captured and executed by Lucullus, II. 506
- Marius, M. (2), slain by Catiline, IV. 430
- Marius Celsus, see "Celsus, Marius."
- Marphadates, royal host of Cato the Younger's son in Cappadocia, VIII. 408
- Marriage, among Athenians as regulated by Solon, I. 456 f.; would-be brides and bridegrooms sacrifice to Eucleia, II. 278, 296; libations at wedding feast at Athens, III. 18; why Romans called "Talasius" or "Talasio" at weddings, I. 130 f., v. 124 f.; marriages reviewed by censors, II. 346; laws concerning, introduced by Sulla, IV. 450; regulations of Numa and Lycurgus compared, I. 390; marriage as regulated by Spartans, 248; penalty at Sparta for not marrying, marrying late, or marrying badly, IV. 320; marriage with one who had proved cowardly in battle considered disgrace at Sparta, v. 82, IX. 206
- Marrucinians, repulsed at Pydna, VI. 406
- Mars, father of Romulus by Aemilia according to some, I. 92; field of, dedicated, 520; shrine of, burned and demolished by barbarians, kept letters of Romulus uninjured, II. 174, IV. 390. See also "Enyalius."
- "Mars," name applied to spear consecrated in the Regia, I. 182
- Marsi, persuaded by Sulla to become friends and allies of Rome, IV. 330
- Marsic war, Greek history of, by Lucullus, II. 472, VII. 86, VIII. 8
- Marsyas (1), slain by Dionysius the Elder, VI. 20
- Marsyas (2), cited, VII. 42
- Martha, Syrian woman used as prophetess by Marius, IX. 506
- Martialis, military tribune, lets Otho's men into camp, XI. 262
- Martianus, gladiator, reputed father of Nymphidius Sabinus, XI. 224
- Marvel, raven stunned by shouting, v. 180
- Maryllus, tribune removed from office for taking diadems off Caesar's statues, VII. 584
- Masabates, eunuch of Artaxerxes, had cut off hands and head of Cyrus, tortured and executed, XI. 164 f.
- Masinissa, friend of Romans, at war with Carthage, II. 380
- Maxistius, commander of Persian cavalry in Mardonius' army, slain by Athenians, II. 254
- Maso, of consular rank, father of Papiria who married Aemilius Paulus, VI. 364
- Massalia (Marseilles), founded by Protis, a merchant, I. 408; people of, fence vineyards with bones of those slain at Aquae Sextinae, IX. 520
- Master of Horse, his powers, IX. 156
- Mater Matuta, Camillus vows a temple to her; her rites almost identical with Leucothea's, II. 104
- Mathematicians, teaching as to course of sun, VIII. 148
- Matronalia, festival for women, why instituted, I. 154
- Mauricus, noble Roman of Galba's time, XI. 222
- Maurusians, in Africa, attack Sertorius, VIII. 18; helped by Sertorius, 22; slay some of his murderers, 74
- Maxims, those of Fabius Maximus resembled those of Thucydides, III. 120
- Maximus, consul in Caesar's time, VII. 576
- "Maximus," bestowed as title upon Valerius and Fabius Rullus, v. 146
- May, named from Maia, mother of Mercury, to whom it is sacred, or from "maior," I. 370
- Mazeus, Persian general in battle of Arbela, VII. 320; his son offered a second province by Alexander, 342
- Mechanical contrivances, II. 500; siege works employed by Callimachus, II. 528; engines of war, 592; engine of artillery used by Marcellus, v. 470; engines used by Archimedes, 474; engines used by Demetrius, IX. 48 f.
- Mechanics, brief history of, v. 470
- Medea, fled from Corinth; living with Aegeus, tried to poison Theseus, I. 22 f.; naphtha said to be the drug she used, VII. 330

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Medes, attacked by Perseus, II. 410; invasion of, 416; flight of, from Hellas, 418; defeated at Mycale, VI. 420; II. 514; join Tigranes, 554, 558; king of, sends ambassadors to Pompey, v. 208; king of, quarrels with Phraortes the Parthian, invites Antony to come to his help, IX. 254; 276
- Media, XI. 140; eastern boundary of Lucullus' conquests, II. 618; triumphed over by Pompey, v. 230
- Mediolanum, captured by Marcellus, v. 452; VII. 484
- Mediterranean sea, divided by Pompey into 13 districts for war on pirates, v. 182
- Medius (1), in retinue of Alexander, VII. 432
- Medius (2), friend of Antigonus, IX. 42
- Megabacchus, serves with Crassus in Parthia, III. 390; commits suicide with P. Crassus, 396
- Megabates, son of Spithridates, favourite of Agesilaüs, v. 28
- Megabyzus, gets letter from Alexander, VII. 348
- Megacles (1), persuaded Cylon and followers to stand trial and then murdered them, I. 430
- Megacles (2), son of Alcmaeon, led Shore-men, I. 486; with rest of Alcmaeonidae flees from Athens, 492
- Megacles (3), father of Euryptolemus, who was father of Isodicé, wife of Cimon, II. 416, 452
- Megacles (4), father of Deinomaché the mother of Alcibiades, IV. 2
- Megacles (5), Dion's brother, VI. 60
- Megacles (6), friend of Pyrrhus, slain by Dexöus, IX. 398
- Megaleas, courtier of Philip, son of Antigonus, XI. 110
- Megalophanes, of Megalopolis, made tutor of Philopoemen; his career, x. 256
- Megalopolis, in Arcadia, Leuctra near it, v. 390; Chaeron of, VII. 228; IX. 434; x. 8, 10, 74, 100, 256, 288 f., XI. 68; attacked by Spartans under Cleomenes, 82 f.
- Megara (1), annexed to Attica by Theseus, I. 54; attacked by Corinth, II. 456; garrisoned by Cassander, taken and freed by Demetrius, IX. 22; seceded from Antigonus and joined Achaean league, XI. 54; besieged by Boeotians, x. 286; taken by Calenus, VI. 142, VII. 544
- Megara (2), Macedonian town, IX. 348
- Megara (3), in Sicily, taken by Marcellus, v. 482
- Megarians, lost Eleusis to Theseus, I. 20; 64; at war with Athens over Salamis, 420, 572; how outwitted by Solon, 422 f.; during quarrel between Megacles and Cylon factions recover Nisaea and Salamis, 432; bury dead facing east, 428; hard pressed by Persian cavalry, succured by Athenians, II. 252; revolt to Spartans, III. 64; complain to Sparta that Athenians keep them from market-places and harbours over which they have control, 84; decree of Athens against, cause of Peloponnesian war, 84 f.; 88; shut up in their city and island of Minoa seized by Nicias, 228; IV. 90; in league against Philip, VII. 40; helped by Athens, VIII. 176
- Megarid, Pegae in it, III. 60; razed by Pericles, 98
- Megellus, with Pheristus repeoples Agrigentum, VI. 344
- Megistonöus, husband of Cratesicleia, convinced by Cleomenes that ephors must be removed and property divided to give Sparta supremacy in Greece, x. 62; stepfather of Cleomenes, places his property in the common stock, 72; 90; 94; defeated by Aratus at Orchomenus, XI. 86; 96
- Meidias (1), Demosthenes spoke against him, IV. 24, VII. 28
- Meidias (2), exile, begs Sulla to spare Athens, IV. 370
- Melanippus, son of Theseus and Periguné, father of Ioxus, I. 18
- Melanopus, unlike Demosthenes in character, quoted, VII. 30 f.
- Melanthius (1), poems of, II. 412; cited (Nauck 473), 414
- Melanthius (2), choregus, quoted, VIII. 188
- Melanthus, flourished in time of Philip of Macedon, his painting of

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- tyrant Aristratus saved at intercession of Nealees, XI. 28
- Melas, river, in plain about Orchomenus, IV. 392; spreads out into marshes and lakes, v. 378
- Meleager, helped by Theseus in slaying Calydonian boar, I. 66
- Melesias, father of Thucydides, III. 22, 212
- Melesippidas, father of Eupolia, v. 2
- Melians, attacked by Nicias, III. 430; chief blame for execution of grown men of Melos rests upon Alcibiades, IV. 42; restored to their homes by Lysander, 270
- Meliboea, how treated by Alexander of Phrae, v. 412
- Melicertes, games at Isthmus in honour of, at night, I. 56
- Melissus, son of Ithagenes, physicist, defeated Pericles at siege of Samos and was defeated by him, II. 6, III. 74 f.
- Melité, in Attica, residence of son of Ajax, I. 428; Themistocles had house there, II. 60; Phocion had house there, VIII. 186
- Meliteia, city of, IV. 390
- Mellaria, in Spain, VIII. 30
- "Melleirens," name given oldest of boys at Sparta, I. 258
- Melon, prominent Athenian exile who with Pelopidas and others takes part in expulsion of Spartans at Thebes, v. 356, 366, 368; elected boeotarch, assaults acropolis, 370; 400; magistrate with Pelopidas, urges Sphodrias to seize the Piraeus, v. 68
- Melos, see "Melians."
- Memmius, C., prosecutes M. Lucullus and opposes giving him a triumph, then prosecutes his brother Lucius, II. 592, VIII. 304; forced by Cato to desist, 306; said Cato spent his entire nights drinking, 248
- Memmius, L., Pompey's brother-in-law, left as governor of Sicily by Pompey, v. 140; slain in battle with Sertorius, VIII. 54
- Memnon, commander of Dareius on sea-board, dies, VII. 272; Barsiné his widow, 284
- "Memor," surname of Artaxerxes II., XI. 128
- Memphis, not visited by Lucullus, II. 476
- Menander (1), appointed colleague of Nicias for Sicilian expedition, III. 278; defeated by Syracusans, 280; one of Athenian generals at Aegospotami, IV. 106
- Menander (2), companion of Alexander, executed for disobedience, VII. 386
- Menander (3), in command of Antigonus' baggage, escapes, VIII. 106
- Menander (4), (Kock 240), cited, VII. 270
- Menander (5), general of Mithridates, routed by Sornatius, II. 520
- Menas, corsair under Sextus Pompeius, IX. 206
- Mendé, III. 434
- Mendes, in Egypt, v. 106
- Meneclidas, opposes Epaminondas and Pelopidas to his own discomfiture, v. 400 f.
- Menecrates (1), physician, reproved by Agesilaüs, v. 58
- Menecrates (2), naval commander under Sextus Pompeius, IX. 206
- Menecrates (3), author of history of Bithynian city of Nicaea, cited, I. 58
- Menedemus, chamberlain of Lucullus, II. 518
- Menelaüs, brother of Ptolemy, defeated in Cyprus by Demetrius, IX. 34; surrenders Salamis to Demetrius, 38
- Menelalis' Harbour, place on coast of Libya where Agesilaüs died, v. 112
- Menemachus, general of Mithridates, defeated by Adrian, II. 520
- Menenius Agrippa, entreats plebs to return and tells fable of the belly and its members, IV. 130
- Menesthes, grandson of Scirus of Salamis, one of victims sent to Crete with Theseus, I. 34
- Menestheus (1), son of Peteos, grandson of Orneus, stirred up Athenians against Theseus, I. 72; succeeded Theseus as king, led men from Eion against Troy and died there, 82, II. 424
- Menestheus (2), Athenian general, III. 160
- "Menexenus," work of Plato, III. 70

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Meninx, island touched at by Marius, IX. 574
- Menippus (1), friend of Pericles and colleague in generalship, III. 44
- Menippus (2), Carian, taught Cicero oratory, VII. 90
- Menoceus, son of Creon, sacrificed in ancient times, v. 390
- Menoetius, father of Myrto, II. 278
- Menon (1), assistant of Pheidias, charges him with embezzlement and is rewarded, III. 90
- Menon (2), father of Theano, a priestess, IV. 60
- Menon (3), Greek general with Cyrus, spared by Artaxerxes, XI. 168
- Menon (4), Thessalian, led Greek cavalry when Leonnatus was defeated and slain, VIII. 200; father of Phthia, won high repute in Lamian war, IX. 346
- Mentor, friend of Eumenes, VIII. 80
- Menyllus, friend of Phocion, commands Macedonian garrison in Athens, VIII. 206, 212
- Mercedinus, intercalary month of 22 days inserted by Numa every other year after February, I. 366
- Mercedonius, intercalary month at Rome, VII. 580
- Merchants, held in honour by Greeks, I. 408
- Mercury, son of Maia, I. 370
- "Meriones," name appearing on spears and bronze helmets in temple in Engyium in Sicily, v. 488
- Meropé, daughter of Erechtheus, mother of Daedalus, I. 38
- Mesopotamia, raided by Demetrius, IX. 16; filled with Greeks by Tigranes, II. 536; 570; triumphed over by Pompey, v. 230; many cities in it join Crassus, III. 364; 368; 372; IX. 196
- Messala, father of Valeria, IV. 436
- Messala, M. Valerius, consul with Domitius, v. 256
- Messala Corvinus, M. Valerius, fought under Cassius at Philippi, VI. 216; 228; fought for Octavius at Actium, 244; reply to Augustus, 246.
Cited: 214, 220, 226
- Messalae, trace descent to Publicola, I. 566
- Messana, saved from Athenians by Alcibiades, IV. 58; attacked by Calippus, VI. 122; occupied by Timoleon, 308; freed of tyrant Hippo, 342; v. 136
- Messapians, offer help to Pyrrhus shipwrecked, IX. 392; slay Archidamus at Mandurium, x. 8
- Messené, rebuilt by Epaminondas, v. 94, 418; attacked by Demetrius, IX. 80; x. 102, 266; XI. 112; 116 f.; seized by Nabis, tyrant of Sparta, freed by Philopoemen, x. 286, 390; 306; 388; 314
- Messenia, v. 330; ravaged by Aetolians, XI. 108
- Messenians, I. 168; 226; rose against Sparta after great earthquake, 292, II. 456; restored by Thebans, v. 398; 100; x. 48
- Mestrius Florus, see "Florus, Mestrius."
- Metageitnion, full moon of, nearly coincides with Ides of September, I. 538; called by Boeotians Panemus, not favourable to Greeks, II. 138 f.; called Carneius by Syracusans, III. 304; VII. 68
- Metagenes, of deme Xypeté, completed sanctuary of mysteries at Eleusis, III. 40
- Metapontum, in Italy, III. 174
- Metella, wife of Sulla, had great influence, IV. 344; 366; 396; bears twins Faustus and Fausta to Sulla, 434; approves marriage of Pompey to Aemilia, her daughter by Scaurus, v. 134; IV. 436; VIII. 242
- Metellus, IV. 228
- Metellus, C., interpellates Sulla, IV. 426
- Metellus, Q., upbraids Ti. Gracchus, x. 176
- Metellus Celer, Q. Caecilius, see "Celer, Q. Caecilius Metellus."
- Metellus Creticus, L. Caecilius, tries to prevent Caesar from taking money from public treasury, v. 276, VII. 528
- Metellus Creticus, Q. Caecilius, captures pirates in Crete, v. 186
- Metellus Delmaticus, L. Caecilius, helps Marius get elected tribune, ordered to prison by him, IX. 468 f.; decorated temple of Castor and Pollux, v. 120.

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Metellus Macedonicus, Q. Caecilius, robbed of Corinth by Mummius, III. 430; IX. 464
- Metellus Nepos, Q. Caecilius, elected tribune with Cato, opposes Cicero, is opposed by Cato, VII. 138, VIII. 280 f.; proposes law giving Pompey supreme power, 296 f.; retires to Asia, 304; proconsul of Spain, visits Caesar at Luca, VII. 494; exchanges words with Cicero, 146
- Metellus Numidicus, Q. Caecilius, uncle on mother's side of Lucullus, II. 470; IV. 446; appointed general for Jugurthine war, takes Marius as Legate, intrigued against by him, IX. 476 f., 480, 484; feared by Marius and caused to lose election for consul, 540; through duplicity of Marius is banished, studies philosophy at Rhodes, 540 f., 582 f., VIII. 312; recalled from exile, IX. 548; quoted 546
- Metellus Pius, Q. Caecilius, son of Metellus Numidicus, IX. 480; III. 326; IV. 418; 340; v. 132; opposes Sertorius in Spain with indifferent success, v. 156, 196, VIII. 4, 32, 46, 50, 54, 58, 72; is pontifex maximus, IV. 342, VII. 456; 478; 376; 488
- Meteorites, fell at Aegospotami; discussion of them, IV. 262
- Methydrum seized by Cleomenes, X. 58
- Metilius, tribune of people, opposes Fabius Maximus, III. 140, 144
- Metoecea, festival instituted by Theseus, to be held on 10th of Hecatombaion, I. 52
- Meton, astrologer, foresees disaster in Sicilian expedition, III. 256, IV. 44; Meton, citizen of Tarentum, opposes inviting Pyrrhus, IX. 382
- Metrobius (1), public scribe in "Archilochi," of Cratinus, II. 434
- Metrobius (2), actor, liked by Sulla, IV. 328, 438
- Metrodorus (1), of Scepsis, incurs Mithridates' anger and is murdered, II. 538
- Metrodorus (2), dancer, in Antony's train, IX. 186
- Micion (1), devastating sea-coast of Athens, defeated and slain by Phocion, VIII. 200
- Micion (2), with Eurycleides prevents Athenians from helping Aratus, XI. 94
- Micipsa, king in Africa, x. 200
- Midas, I. 542; Gordium his home, VII. 272; son of Gynaecceia according to Phrygians, 462; x. 380
- Mieza, place in Macedonia, VII. 240
- "Milesiaca," obscene work by Aristides, III. 418
- Milesians, some quarrel with Coans over golden tripod, I. 412; fight with Samians for Priéné, III. 68, 72 f.; their popular leaders deceived and slain by Lysander, IV. 250, 282
- Milesian wool, IV. 62
- Miletus, stormed by Alexander, VII. 268; IX 116
- Milo, general under Perseus, VI. 394
- Milo Papianus, T. Annius, with Scipio and Hypsaeus candidate for consulship, VIII. 350; tribune, prosecutes Clodius for violence, VII. 166; kills Clodius, VII. 170
- Miltas, Thessalian seer, joins Dion's party, VI. 46; interprets omen of eclipse, VI. 48 f.
- Miltiades, father of Cimon by Hegesippyle, II. 412; chief of 10 Athenian generals at Marathou with Aristides next, 10 f., 224; 388; of deme Laciadae, fined 50 talents, died in prison, 294, 412; 416; 426
- Milto, Phocaeon, daughter of Hermotimus, account of her, III. 72
- Mimallones, Macedonian women devoted to Orphic rites and orgies of Dionysus, VII. 226
- Mimnermus, addressed in verse by Solon, I. 566
- Mina, made to consist of 100 drachmas instead of 73 by Solon, I. 444
- Minas, corsair, served under Sextus Pompeius, IX. 206 f.
- Mindarus, Spartan admiral, defeated off Abydos by Athenians with help of Alcibiades, IV. 78; slain at Cyzicus, 82
- Minerva, statue of, dedicated in the Capitol by Cicero, VII. 162
- Minoa, island seized by Nicias, III. 228, 430
- Minoa, place in Sicily, VI. 54
- Minos, king of Crete, invaded Attica on account of murder of Androgeos,

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- I. 28, 30; was king and lawgiver, had Rhadamanthus, as judge under him, 32; 36; 38; 320; II. 372
- Minotaur, part bull and part man, said to have destroyed youths and maidens sent as tribute, I. 28; slain by Theseus, 36
- Mint, managed by Lucullus, II. 474
- Minturnae, Italian city, IX. 564; 568; its magistrates finally send Marius on his way, 572
- Minucius, C., supports Brutus and advises not to give the exiled Tarquins their property, I. 508
- Minucius, M., one of the first 2 quaestors appointed, I. 534
- Minucius Rufus, M., made Master of Horse by Fabius Maximus, III. 126; 132; in Fabius' absence wins success over Hannibal, is given equal authority, is defeated by Hannibal, rescued by Fabius, 142 f., 202, 204; appointed dictator, then deposed on account of bad omen, V. 446; quoted, III. 154
- Minucius Thermus, supports Cato his colleague against Metellus Nepos, VIII. 298 f.
- Miracles, discussion of, II. 108 f., IV. 210 f.
- Misenum, mole of, scene of meeting between Octavius, Antony, and Sextus Pompeius, IX. 206; is a promontory, 554, X. 240
- Mistletoe, used for making bird-lime, IV. 124
- Mithras, rites of, celebrated at Olympia by pirates, V. 174; XI. 134
- Mithridates (1), young Persian, wounds Cyrus at Cunaxa, XI. 150; rewarded by Artaxerxes, 158; executed by him, 160 f.
- Mithridates (2), son of Ariobarzanes, founded line of Pontic kings, IX. 10
- Mithridates (3), had son Pharnaces, VII. 560; interviewed by Marius, IX. 550; had 150,000 Romans butchered in one day, IV. 404; war with, IX. 554 f.; to be checked by Sulla, IV. 334, 342; his early successes and only slight reverses, 358 f.; ravages Boeotia, IX. 578; his general Archelatis defeated at Chaeroneia, IV. 382 f.; again ravages Greece 390; his terms of agreement with Sulla, 398, 400, 402; 454; VIII. 10, IX. 590 f., X. 384; besieged by Fimbria, let escape by Lucullus, II. 478, 480, 482, 488; in 2nd war with reorganized army invades Bithynia, II. 490; makes alliance with Sertorius and receives army from Spain, 494, VIII. 62; besieges Cyzicus by land and sea, II. 496; suffers defeats at rivers Rhyndacus and Granicus at hands of Lucullus, 504; flees to Heracleia, 508; is father-in-law of Tigranes, 512; defeats Romans at Cabira, 514; is defeated and flees, 520 f.; escapes to Tigranes in Armenia, 526; demanded of Tigranes by Clodius, 536; 538; IV. 412; II. 544; 552; with Tigranes begins to assemble fresh forces, 566; defeats Fabius and Triarius, 584, V. 216; defeated by Pompey near the Euphrates, 198; 204; among peoples of Bosphorus, pursued by Pompey, 206, 210; documents of his found in fortress of Caenum and read by Pompey, 212; ends life, 222, II. 618; quoted, VIII. 64
- Mithridates (4), cousin of Mnaesetes, warns Antony, IX. 244; 248
- Mithridates (5), king of Commagene fights under Antony, IX. 276
- Mithridates (6), of Pontus, ridicules Galba to Nymphidius Sabinus, XI. 232; executed by Galba, 236
- Mithrobarzanes, general of Tigranes, defeated and slain by Lucullus, II. 550
- Mithropaustes, the Persian king's cousin, rebukes Demaratus the Spartan, II. 80
- Mitylené, ruled by tyrant Pittacus, I. 438; exiled Diophanes, X. 160; revolts and is subdued by Lucullus, II. 482; freed by Pompey for sake of Theophanes, V. 224; 308; 310
- Mnasitheus, helps Aratus drive Nicocles from Corinth, XI. 16
- "Mnemon," cognomen or epithet, IX. 464
- Mnesiphilus, Phrearrhian, teacher of Themistocles, precursor of sophists, II. 6
- Mnesiptolema, daughter of Themis-

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- tocles, made priestess of Dindymené, II. 82; married Archeptolis her half-brother, 88
 Muestra, wood by Cimon, II. 416
 Moerocles, Athenian orator, VII. 32; his surrender demanded by Alexander, 56
 Molon, father of Apollonius the rhetorician, VII. 90, 446
 Molossians, had king Aidoneus, I. 72; had king Admetus, II. 64; had Pyrrhus as 1st king after the flood, IX. 346; expel Aeacides and bring to power sons of Neoptolemus, 348; drive out Pyrrhus and put Neoptolemus on throne, 354
 Molossus, succeeds Phocion in command, is captured by the enemy, VIII. 174
 Molpadia, said to have slain Antiopé or Hippolyta, I. 62
 Molus, river at foot of Thurium, IV. 382; 390
 Monaeses, Parthian, fled to Antony, sent back to Phraates by him, IX. 220, 244
 Moneta, temple of, built on site of Tattius' house, I. 152; built on site of Manlius Capitolinus' house, II, 188
 Money-lenders at Rome, their oppression, IV. 126; greatly afflicted Bithynia, driven out by Lucullus, II. 492; plunder Asia, 532
 Monimé, Milesian, wife of Mithridates, forced by him to commit suicide, II. 524; her correspondence with Mithridates, v. 212
 Month, naming and numbering of its days by Solon, I. 474; Sabines adopted their months from Romans, 154; Numa's arrangements of months, 366
 Moon, eclipse of, III. 288; shortly before battle of Arbela, VII. 316; before Pydna, VI. 398
 "Moon," surname of Cleopatra, daughter of Antony and Cleopatra, IX. 218
 Mora, military unit of Spartans, its strength, v. 380
 Moschian Mts., on border of Iberians, v. 204
 Mothakes, Helots raised with Spartans X. 64
 Mother of the Gods, had shrine at Pessinus, IX. 508; 550
 Mothers, goddesses of city of Engyium in Sicily v. 488 f.
 Mothoné, seaport above Malea, XI. 26
 Mt. Lycaeum, see "Lycaeum, Mt."
 Mounychion, see "Munychion."
 Mourning at Rome, periods of, regulated by Numa, I. 346, IV. 216
 Mucia, divorced by Pompey, v. 226
 Mucianus, commander in Syria, friendly to Otho, XI. 284
 Mucius (1), client of Tl. Gracchus, elected tribune in place of M. Antonius, X. 174, 186
 Mucius (2), jurist, eaten of worms, IV. 440
 Mucius (3), father-in-law of younger Marius, IX. 560
 Mucius Scaevola, C., his experiences with Porsena, I. 546 f.; quoted, 548 Mucius Scaevola, P., jurist, helped Tl. Gracchus draw up his agrarian law, X. 162 f.
 Mucius Scaevola, Q., statesman and leader of senate, helped Cicero to acquaintance with law, VII. 86
 Mummius, Crassus' legate, defeated by Spartacus, III. 342
 Mummius, C., sent by Sulla to seize city-gate and walls on Esquiline hill, IV. 354
 Mummius, L., took Corinth, had no cognomen, got surname Achaicus, III. 430, IX. 464; X. 316
 Munatius (1), defended by Cicero, shows ingratitude, VII. 144
 Munatius (2), friend of Cato the Younger VIII. 254; 300; brings Pompey's proposal of marriage alliance to Cato, 306, 308; greatly angered by Cato's lack of trust in him, published treatise on Cato, 322 f.; in Bruttium receives under his protection Cato's younger son, 360; cited, 292, 324 f.
 Munatius Plancus, L., spoke in favour of amnesty after murder of Caesar, VI. 166; joins Antony, IX. 176; flees to Caesar, tells of Antony's will, 268
 Munatius Plancus Bursa, T., convicted in spite of Pompey's support, v. 262, VIII., 352

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Munda, battle of; sons of Pompey defeated, VII. 572
- Mundus, trench about Comitium, I. 118
- Munychia, in Athens, criticized by Epimenides of Phaestus, I. 434; entered by Macedonian garrison, VII. 70; garrisoned by Cassander, IX. 18, 20; captured and dismantled by Demetrius, 24; 84; XI. 78; IV. 372
- Munychion, Athenian month, I. 36; IV. 272; VIII. 230; changed to Demetrian in honour of Demetrius, IX. 28
- Munychus, son of Demophoön and Laodicé, legend of, I. 78
- Murcus, slew Piso, XI. 266
- Murena, L. Licinius (1), serves under Sulla in Greece, IV. 380; given left wing by Sulla at Chaeroneia, 384, 388
- Murena, L. Licinius (2), left by Lucullus in charge of siege of Amisus, II. 514; gives freedom to Tyrannio the grammarian, 530; 552; left in charge of siege of Tigranocerta, 556; elected consul with Silanus, VII. 116; brought to trial by Cato, defended by Cicero and Hortensius, 170, 212, VIII. 284, 286; supports Cato, 302
- Musæus, Fragment 21 (Kinkel, Ep. Græc. Frag., p. 229), cited, IX. 564
- Muses, Spartan king would sacrifice to them before battle, I. 272; credited with oracular teaching of Numa, 332; with Egeria give Numa account of bronze buckler fallen from heaven, 350
- Museum, at Athens, battle with Amazons near it, I. 60; garrisoned by Demetrius, IX. 84; one near Thurium, IV. 382
- Music, flute-playing held ignoble by Alcibiades, while lyre became a gentleman, IV. 6
- "Muthos," nickname of Demetrius, IX. 64
- Mutina, in Gaul, where Pompey besieged Brutus, father of the conspirator, V. 154; where the consuls Hirtilius and Pansa defeated Antony but were themselves slain, IX. 174
- Mutiny of Lucullus' troops, II. 570, 576 f., 584
- Mycalé, where Greeks under Xanthippus defeated Persians, II. 138, III. 6, VI. 420
- Mycenae, VIII. 24; XI. 66
- Mygdonia, described; invaded by Lucullus, II. 578
- Mylae, town in Sicily, VI. 350
- Mylasa, city in Asia, its revenue offered Phocion by Alexander, VIII. 186
- Myron (1), of Phlya, prosecuted family of Megacles, I. 432
- Myron (2), general under Mithridates, defeated by Adrian, II. 520
- Myronides, with Cimón and Xanthippus an envoy to Sparta, II. 244; general with Aristides and Leocrates at Plataea, 274; III. 52; 198; character in "Demes" of Eupolis, 70
- Myrtilus (1), mentions Spartan youth who closely resembled Hector, XI. 8
- Myrtilus (2), cup-bearer of Pyrrhus informs him of plot against his life, IX. 356
- Myrtle, Aphrodite's plant, V. 496
- Myrto (1), daughter of Menoetius and sister of Patroclus, had daughter Eucleia by Heracles, II. 278
- Myrto (2), granddaughter of Aristides, false story about her, II. 296
- Mysia, XI. 284
- Mystae, initiates in mysteries of Eleusis, IV. 48, 60, VIII. 208
- Mysteries, Eleusinian, at Athens, when held, II. 140, VIII. 158, 206; outrage upon, charged against Alcibiades, IV. 48, 52, 60, VII. 316; Demetrius initiated; the grades and times, IX. 60; celebrated by Voconius, II. 508
- Myus, city in Asia, given Themistocles by Persian king to supply meat, II. 80
- Nabataeans, V. 292
- Nabis, successor of Machanidas as tyrant of Sparta, seized Messenê, frightened away by Philopoemen, X. 286, 310, 390; at war with Achaeans and Romans, defeats Philopoemen in naval battle, 292;

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- routed by Philopoemen, 294; attacked by Flamininus who soon made peace with him, 358; treacherously slain by Aetolians, 296
- Nakedness, Roman vs. Greek custom, II. 362
- Names, Roman, of persons, discussed, IX. 464
- Naphtha, its properties shown to Alexander; theory as to its origin, VII. 328
- Naples, v. 264, VII. 100
- Narbo, city of Gaul, XI. 226
- Narbonensis, Gallia, VIII. 32
- Narnia, colonists sent to it, X. 324
- "Narrow," name of a place, VI. 208
- Narthacium, mountain near Pharsalus, v. 44
- Nasica, P. Cornelius Scipio, very large holder of public land, bitter hater of Ti. Gracchus X. 174; leads mob against Ti. Gracchus, who with more than 300 others was slain, 190; interrogates Blossius, 192; hated by people; though pontifex maximus, fled from Italy and committed suicide, 194
- Natural philosophy, its advantages, III. 14
- Naucrates, persuades Lycians to revolt from Brutus, VI. 192
- Naupactus, besieged by M.' Acilius, X. 364
- Nauplia, Pyrrhus pitches his camp near it, IX. 450
- Nausicrates, rhetorician, cited, II. 466
- Nausithoüs, given as pilot to Theseus, I. 34
- Naxians, their account of Ariadne and Theseus, I. 42
- Naxos, II. 68; sea-fight off Naxos, won by Athenians, 138, VIII. 156; III. 34; 218; 266
- Neacles, friend of Aratus, tries to save picture of Aristratus, XI. 28
- Neander, one of 3 young men who fled with the infant Pyrrhus, IX. 348
- Neanthes, of Cyzicus, cited, II. 2, 80
- Neapolis (1), v. 458; Lucullus had palaces there, II. 598, 612
- Neapolis (2), in territory of Agrigentum, VI. 102
- Neapolis (3), a part of Syracuse, v. 484
- Neapolitans, v. 264
- Nearchus (1), banished by Philip, honoured afterwards by Alexander, VII. 250; made admiral of fleet by Alexander, 410; meets Alexander at Gedrosia, 414; after sailing through ocean into Euphrates, joins Alexander, 426; 432; 434
- Nearchus (2), Cretan, pleads with Antigonus for life of Eumenes, VIII, 134
- Nearchus (3), Pythagorean, lodged Cato the Elder, II. 318
- Nectanabis, cousin of Tachos, revolts from him and is made king by the Egyptians, is joined by Agesilaüs, v. 104 f.; having ousted Tachos, is himself opposed by a rival from Mendes, 106; distrusts Agesilaüs, retires into fortified city, routs opponents with help of Agesilaüs, dismisses him with gifts, 108 f.
- Neleus, of Scepsis, to whom Theophrastus bequeathed his books, IV. 406
- Nemea, where Athenians under Pericles defeated Sicyonians, III. 60; painted by Aristophon with Alcibiades in her arms, IV. 42; XI. 14
- Nemean games, see "Games Nemean."
- "Nemesis," play of Cratinus, III. 8
- Neochorus, of Haliartus, slew Ly-sander, IV. 316
- Neocles (1), father of Themistocles, II. 2, 6, 214
- Neocles (2), son of Themistocles, II. 88
- Neon (1), commander of Corinthians in acropolis of Syracuse, captures the Achradina, VI. 304
- Neon (2), Boeotian, remains with Persena in his flight, VI. 416
- Neoptolemus (1), son of Achilles, after time of Deucalion took possession of country of Molossians and left line IX. 346; ancestor of Alexander on his mother's side, VII. 224
- Neoptolemus (2), brother of Arybas and uncle of Aeacides, IX. 348
- Neoptolemus (3), made king of Molossians in place of Pyrrhus, IX. 354; shares kingdom with Pyrrhus who finally slays him, 356 f.
- Neoptolemus (4), commander of Alexander's Shield-bearers, VIII. 78; 88; bid by Perdicas to take

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- orders from Eumenes, plans treachery, is defeated by Eumenes, flees to Craterus and Antipater, 90; defeated and slain by Eumenes in personal combat, 92 f.
- Neoptolemus (5), satrap of Mithridates, IX. 556; defeated off Tenedos by Lucullus, II. 482
- Nepos, see "Metellus Nepos."
- Nepos, Cornelius, see "Cornelius Nepos."
- "Nero," title given Otho by the people, XI. 278 f.
- Nero Germanicus, son of Agrippina and Ahenobarbus, adopted by Claudius, became emperor, killed his mother, 5th in descent from Antony, IX. 332, XI. 206; ruined by Nymphidius Sabinus and Tigellinus, 210, 240; his relations with Otho and Poppaea, 246 f.; gave gifts to theatrical people, 238; executed Crassus and Scribonia, Piso's parents, 254; proclaimed Greeks free at Isthmian games at Corinth, X. 358; sent Galba out as governor of Spain, Junius Vindex, general in Gaul, revolts, 212; denounced by Galba, 214; alarmed on learning of Galba's revolt, sells his property, 216; announced as dead by Icelus, 218
- Nervii, defeated by Caesar, VII. 492
- Nestor, of Homer, V. 384
- News, quick transmission of, IV. 124, VI. 418, 438
- Nicaea, Bithynian city, history of, by Menecrates, I. 58
- Niceaa, widow of Alexander, tyrant of Corinth, married to Demetrius, loses Acrocorinthus, XI. 36 f.
- Nicagoras (1), of Troezen, introduces bill to support Athenian families fleeing from Persians before battle of Salamis, II. 30
- Nicagoras (2), Messenian, secret enemy of Cleomenes, arouses Ptolemy's suspicion and hate of him, X. 128
- Nicanor (1), sent by Cassander to replace Menyllus in command of garrison at Athens, induced by Phocian to be mild to Athenians, VIII. 216; escapes from Athens and plans hostilities, 218
- Nicanor (2), sent by Antigonus to receive Eumenes as a prisoner, VIII. 130
- Nicarchus, great-grandfather of Plutarch, IX. 294
- Nicator, title of tyrants, II. 228
- Niceratus (1), father of Nicias, III. 212, 220, IV. 28
- Niceratus (2), poet of Heracleia, given crown over Antimachus of Colophon, IV. 282
- Nicias (1), son of Niceratus, becomes a leader after death of Pericles, III. 212; sought by expenditure of money to win favour, 214 f.; very pious and superstitious, had large interests in silver mines of Laurium, 218; timid and retiring, 220 f.; helped by his dependent Hiero, 224; as general made safety his chief aim, and so was successful for most part, 226; some of his minor successes, 228; discredited by Cleon's success on Sphacteria, 234; brought about the "Peace of Nicias"; its terms, 240, IV. 32; fails on embassy to Sparta, III. 244; arranges with Alcibiades his rival to have Hyperbolus banished, 248
- Opposes expedition to Sicily, 250; after being elected 1st of 3 generals for Sicily still vainly opposes the expedition, 252, 430; after recall of Alcibiades from expedition discourages troops by inaction, 258; at end of summer sails against Syracuse and wins a success, 262 f.; winters at Naxos, 266; in spring seized Epipolae, defeated Syracusans, and nearly circumvallated the city, 268 f.; on death of Lamachus is sole general and in great hopes, 270; disregards approach of Glyippus, 272; is defeated by Glyippus, who ran a cross wall to intersect the besiegers' wall of enclosure, 276; repulses Glyippus on the water, but loses Plemmyrium, 278; is reinforced by Demosthenes, who is defeated and urges return, 280 f.; is about to change base when halted by eclipse of moon, 288 f.; is defeated on the water, 292; is defeated on the water again so that he cannot retire by sea, 294 f.; delays retiring by land until

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Syracusans block all the routes, 296 f.; conducts retreat for 8 successive days until Demosthenes and his detachment is captured, 300; is captured at river Asinarus and most of his men are slain, 302; suffers death, 306, 310
See also III. 430, IV. 28, 30, 46, 52
 Quoted: III. 302
- Nicias (2), friend of Agesilaüs, V. 36
 Nicias (3), steward of Ptolemy's household, has freedom given him by senate, VIII. 330
- Nicias (4), of Engyium, induced Marcellus to spare his city, V. 490
- Nicoles (1), Athenian, VIII. 182; condemned to death with Phocion, 228, 230
- Nicoles (2), became tyrant of Sicyon, nearly lost city to Aetolians, XI. 8; his spies deceived by Aratus, 12; escapes from Sicyon, 20, X. 256
- Nicoreon, king of Salamis, competes as choregus against Pasicrates of Soli, VII. 308
- Nicodemus (1), lame and blind man, V. 348
- Nicodemus (2), Messenian, supported now Cassander now Demetrius, VII. 32
- Nicogenes, wealthiest man in Aeolia, knew and sheltered Themistocles, II. 70, 76
- Nicolaüs, philosopher, cited, VI. 240
- Nicomaché, daughter of Themistocles, given in marriage by her brother to Phrasicles, II. 88
- Nicomachus (1), brother of Cebalinus, reveals plot of Limnus to Alexander, VII. 364
- Nicomachus (2), his paintings characterized, VI. 346
- Nicomachus (3), of Carrhae, urges P. Crassus to escape to Ichnae, III. 394
- Nicomedeia, city in Bithynia, II. 508
- Nicomedes (1), son-in-law of Themistocles, II. 88
- Nicomedes (2), to receive Bithynia again from Mithridates, IV. 398; reconciled to Mithridates by Sulla, 404; visited by Caesar, VII. 444
- Nicon (1), servant of Craterus, arrested by Peucestas, VII. 348
- Nicon (2), an elephant, IX. 456
- Nicon (3), an ass, IX. 284
- Niconides, Thessalian, made wonderful siege-engines, II. 500
- Nicopolis, city on Actium, IX. 278
- Nicopolis, wealthy woman, made Sulla her heir, IV. 328
- "Nicostraté," other name of Carmenta, wife of Evander, I. 156
- "Niger," Roman surname, IV. 142
- Niger, friend of Antony, brings message from Octavia to him, IX. 256
- Nigidius, P., advises Cicero to put conspirators to death, VII. 130
- Niphates, VII. 316
- Nisaea, taken by Megara from Athens, I. 432; III. 228; sea-port of Megara, enclosed by wall and connected by walls with Megara, VIII. 178
- Nisaeen horse, IX. 374
- Nisaeus, driven from Syracuse by Dionysius the Younger, VI. 262
- Nisibis, city in Mygdonia, called Antioch by Greeks, taken by Lucullus, II. 578, 592
- Nola, V. 458; battle of, Marcellus defeats Hannibal, 462; defeats him again, 464; IV. 350
- Nonacris, cliff there had poisonous water, VII. 436
- Nones Capratine, day on which Romulus disappeared; reason for name, I. 182, 186, 308, II. 178
- Nonius (1), rival candidate for tribune ship, slain by Saturninus, IX. 542
- Nonius (2), nephew of Sulla, IV. 356
- Nonnius, in Pompey's camp, VII. 180
- Nora, stronghold on confines of Lycaonia and Cappadocia, VIII. 108
- Norbanus, encamped at Narrows near Symbolum, nearly captured with his army by Brutus and Cassius, VI. 208
- Norbanus, C., consul, with Marius the Younger defeated by Sulla and shut up in Capua, IV. 410 f., VIII. 14
- Noricum, traversed by Cimbri, IX. 502
- "Nous," term applied to Anaxagoras of Clazomenae, III. 10
- "Novi homines," what they were, II. 302
- Novum Comum, colony established by Caesar in Gaul, VII. 512
- Numa Pompilius, when he lived; said

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- to have been friend of Pythagoras, I. 306; of Sabine descent, 308; nominated king by the Romans, 312; came from Cures, was son of Pompon, 314; married Tatia, was fond of country life, 316; in 40th year invited to become king, 320; declines, 322; accepts and goes to Rome, 326; disbands the body of 300 called "Celeres," appoints Flamen Quirinalis, 328; proceeds to make the city more gentle and just, 330; claimed the nymph Egeria loved him, 316, 332; possibly influenced by Pythagoras, 334; instituted the Pontifices, 336; credited with consecration of the Vestal virgins, 160, 338, II. 142; their number, duties, privileges, the punishment for unchastity, 340 f.; said to have built temple of Vesta, 344; fixed 10 months as longest period for mourning, 346, IV. 216; established the Salii, the Fetiales, and many other orders of priests, I. 346; reason for establishing Salii, 350. Built the Regia and had another house on the Quirinal, 354; gave many precepts resembling those of Pythagoreans, 356; story of his conversation with Jupiter, 358; first to build temples to Faith and Terminus, 362; divided people into groups according to trades or arts, 364; amended law permitting fathers to sell sons, adjusted calendar, 366, VII. 580; built temple of Janus, 372; varying accounts of his marriages and offspring, 376; succeeded by Hostilius; his obsequies, 146, 378; quoted, 322
See also I. 154, IV. 178, V. 454, VI. 358, VIII. 152
- Numantia, defeats Mancinus, makes truce owing to Ti. Gracchus, X. 154, 246; taken and destroyed by Scipio Africanus Minor, II. 596, VI. 414, IX. 468, 494, X. 158, 174
- Numerius (1), friend of Marius, IX. 560
- Numerius (2), friend of Pompey, V. 280
- Numidia, king of, captured by Scipio Africanus, III. 194; Bocchus king of, IV. 328; Hiempsal king of, IX. 574; subdued by Pompey, V. 144
- Numidians, used by Carthaginians in their armies, VI. 330; in army of Hannibal, III. 152; V. 464; 520; rout Caesar's cavalry, VII. 564
- Numistro, city in Lucania, V. 502
- Numitor, chose kingdom in preference to gold and silver, but was dispossessed by his brother Amulius; had daughter Ilia, or Rhea, or Silvia, I. 96; his experience with Romulus and Remus, his daughter's children, 102 f.; died in Alba, 172
- Nundinae, market-day coming every 9 days, IV. 162
- Nurses, Spartan, I. 254, IV. 2
- Nussa (Nursia) Sabine city, home town of Sertorius, VIII. 4
- Nymphaeum (1), sacred precinct near Apollonia; story of satyr caught there, IV. 408
- Nymphaeum (2), sacred precinct frequented by Aristotle, VII. 240
- Nymphidia, daughter of Callistus and mother of Nymphidius Sabinus, XI. 224
- Nymphidius Sabinus, prefect of court guard with Tigellinus; by offer of bribe gets soldiers to proclaim Galba emperor, XI. 208 f.; orders Tigellinus to give up his command and aspires to imperial position, 220 f.; says he is son of C. Caesar who succeeded Tiberius; believed to be son of Martianus a gladiator, XI. 222 f.; tries to be made emperor and is slain, 230 f.; his adherents went over to Galba, 258
- "Nympholepti," term applied to natives of Cithaeron with oracular power, II. 246
- Nymphs, Sphragitic, had cave on peak of Cithaeron, II. 246, 272
- Nysius, Neapolitan, puts into Syracuse with food and money for beleaguered garrison of Dionysius, is defeated by Syracusans, then by surprise attack takes city, is defeated by Dion, VI. 86 f.
- Nysa, citadel in India, attacked by Alexander, VII. 390
- Nysaeus, see "Nisaeus."
- Nyssa, sister of Mithridates, captured by Lucullus, II. 524

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Oa, Attic deme, III. 26
- "Oarses," name of Artaxerxes Mnemon at first according to Deinon,
XI. 128
- Oath, Athenian, what it is, IV. 38
- Oath, the great, how taken, VI. 118
- Obal, subdivisions of Spartan people made by Lycurgus, I. 220
- Obolus, its original meaning, IV. 278
- Ocean, nothern, IX. 488
- Ochus, youngest son of Artaxerxes, rival of Dareius for throne, XI. 188;
removes his two remaining rivals Ariaspes and Arsames, 200, 202; did not once come into Persia to avoid giving money to women, VII.
416
- Octavia, sister of Octavius Caesar, daughter of Ancharia, married first to Q. Marcellus, on his death to Antony, IX. 206; mother of Marcellus by Q. Marcellus, dedicated library in honour of her son, v. 522;
IX. 210; bore 2 daughters to Antony, reconciles Octavius and Antony, 214; gets 20 vessels for her brother, 1000 troops for her husband, 216;
on way to Antony, is stopped at Athens by letters from him, 256; returns from Athens, lives in her husband's house, 260; ejected from Antony's house in Rome, takes all his children with her except eldest son by Fulvia, 266 f.; reared 6 of Antony's children with her own, 330; her daughters and whom they married, 332; had book addressed to her by Athenodorus, I. 548
- Octavius (1), governor of Cilicia, dies,
II. 486
- Octavius (2), legate of Crassus, III
402, 408, 412; attempting to rescue Crassus, is slain, 414
- Octavius (3), reputed to be of African descent, VII. 146
- Octavius, C. (1), father of young
Caesar, VII. 196
- Octavius, O. (2), falsely claimed to have been one of Caesar's murderers, executed by Antony and young Caesar, VII. 600
- Octavius, Gn. (1), admiral under Aemilius Paulus, anchors off Samothrace to prevent escape of Perseus, VI. 422
- Octavius Gn. (2), consul, defeats his colleague Cinna in the forum, and puts Cornelius Merula in his place, VIII. 10, IX. 578 f.; remains in Rome on approach of Marius and is slain, 582, IV. 364; IX. 592
- Octavius, L., sent by Pompey to Crete to succeed Metellus in fighting pirates, v. 188
- Octavius, M. (1), tribune of people, opposes Ti. Gracchus' agrarian law, X. 166 f.; ejected from office on proposal of Ti. Gracchus, 170; 206
- Octavius, M. (2), with 2 legions encamped near Utica, asks Cato which of them is to command in province, VIII. 394; with M. Insteius commanded centre for Antony at Actium, IX. 284
- Octavius Caesars, see "Augustus Caesar."
- October, called Domitianus by Domi-
tian for short time, I. 370
- Odeum, built by Pericles, III. 42
- Odysseus, father of Romanus by Circé, I. 92; consulted shades of dead, IX. 490; II. 326; v. 12
- "Odyssey," see "Homer."
- Oedipus, fountain of, IV. 390
- Oenanthé, had great influence in government under Ptolemy IV., X.
124
- Oenarus, priest of Dionysus, lived with Ariadne, I. 40
- Oeneid, Attic tribe, II. 458
- Oeniadae, III. 60; their city destroyed by Aetolians, VII. 366
- Oenopion, son of Theseus by Ariadne according to Ion of Chios, I. 40
- Oenus, at first called Cnacion, river at Sparta, I. 222
- Oetaeans, III. 56
- Ofella, Lucretius, see "Lucretius Ofella."
- Oil, its action, II. 392; spring of, discovered, VII. 388
- Olbianians, VIII. 24
- Olbius, paedagogue of children of Nicogenes, II. 70
- Oligarchy, II. 54, 266 f.
- "Oligoi," conservative party at Athens, III. 32
- Oligyrtus, its garrison expelled from Phlius by Cleomenes, X. 110

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- "Olive," name of spring where Apollo was born, V. 378
- Olizon, opposite Artemesium, II. 22
- Olocrus, mountain near Pydna, VI. 408
- Olorus (1), Thracian king, father of Hegesipyle, II. 412
- Olorus (2), father of Thucydides the historian, descended from preceding II. 412
- Olthacus, Dandarian prince, undertakes to assassinate Lucullus, but fails, II. 518
- Olympia, II. 14; 68; 316; its sacred treasures used by Sulla, IV. 362; VII. 20
- Olympiad, 176th, II. 484
- "Olympian," surname of Pericles; how acquired, III. 22, 112
- Olympias, sister of Arymbas, married Philip of Macedon, VII. 226; devoted Bacchanté, kept great tame serpents, 228; spurred Alexander on to quarrel with his father, established by her son Alexander in Epirus, 246; blamed for urging Pausanias to slay Philip, 250; 296; 340; rebels against Antipater and takes Epirus to rule, 414; put many to death, believed Iolas to have poisoned Alexander, 436; drugged Arrhidaeus and ruined his mind, 438; invited Eumenes to come and take charge of Alexander's little son, VIII. 116; IX. 50
- Olympic games, instituted by Heracles in honour of Zeus, I. 56; Athenian victor got 500 drachmas by Solon's regulation, 466, II. 296. See also "Games."
- Olympic truce, said to have been established by Lycurgus and Iphitus, I. 204, 276 f.
- Olympicium, in Athens, unfinished, I. 496; near Syracuse, III. 266
- Olympiodorus, with 300 Athenians sent to aid of Megarians at Plataea, II. 254
- Olympus, Cleopatra's physician, published history of her last days, IX. 320
- Olympus, town where pirates offered sacrifice, V. 174
- Olympus, mountain, VI. 386; its height, 394
- Olynthus, VII. 20
- Omens: II. 34, 40, 44, 106, 108, 124, 172, 174, 462, 496, 502, 548, 560, 590, III. 14, 100, 122, 124, 208, 218, 244, 256, 288, 294, 336, 362, 366, 372, 382, IV. 46, 98, 174, 210, 260, 280, 340, 346, 358, 372, 410, V. 68, 78, 194, 294, 442, 464, 512, 516, VI. 50, 62, 82, 150, 156, 178, 208, 210, 234, 278, 322, 380, 398 f., 418, VII. 130, 164, 226, 230, 260, 270, 296, 300, 336, 426, 546, 554, 588, 604, VIII. 208, IX. 28, 70, 210, 274, 284, 308, 362, 450, 506, 564, 570, X. 26, 144, 184, 220, 340, XI. 100, 256, 284 f.
- Omisus, commended by Artaxerxes II., XI. 134
- Omphalé, house of, had Hercules as slave, I. 14; III. 70; IX. 336
- Onatius Aurelius, see "Aurelius, C."
- Oneian hills, X. 92
- Onesicritus, philosopher of school of Diogenes the Cynic; his experiences with gymnosophists, VII. 408; appointed chief pilot of fleet by Alexander, 410
Cited: 242, 260, 356, 394, 398
- Onomarchus (1), one of party that seized Delphi and plundered sanctuary, VI. 334
- Onomarchus (2), keeper of Eumenes for Antigonus, VIII. 134
- Onomastus, freedman of Otho, XI. 258
- Ophelas, ruler of Cyrené, first husband of Eurydicé, IX. 32
- Opheltas, with his subjects conducted from Thessaly to Boeotia by Peripolitas, II. 404
- "Opima," why term was applied to "spolia," I. 138
- Opimius, L., failed to get elected consul when Fannius was supported by C. Gracchus, X. 222; elected consul, 226; given full power to act against C. Gracchus, 228; refuses C. Gracchus' terms of peace, 232; attacks party of Fulvius, 234; first consul to exercise power of dictator, convicted of fraud and spent his last days in infamy, 238
- Oplax, Frentanian, slain by Pyrrhus, IX. 398
- Oppius, C., friend of Caesar, cited, v. 138; VII. 484

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- "Optio," latin for scout, XI. 258
- Opuntians, surrender voluntarily to Flaminius, X. 334
- Oracles, anonymous: IV. 294, 304, 316, V. 6, VII. 46, 564, IX. 452, X. 378
- Oracle of Apollo, I. 6, 36, II. 276, IV. 122, VII. 44, 46, 50, 92, 228, VIII. 162 See also "Delphi, oracle of."
- Oracle from Sibylline books, VII. 44
- Oracles of Ammon, Amphiaraiis, Dodona, Heracleia, Ismenus, see "Ammon, etc."
- Oracle from Lebadeia and cave of Trophonius, II. 270, IV. 380
- Oration, funeral, delivered by Publicola in honour of Brutus earlier than any among Greeks, I. 524; by Pericles over those who fell at Samos, III. 80; of Fabius Maximus on the death of his son preserved, 120, 190
- Orations: I. 106, 322, 324, II. 106, 236, 250, 290, 510 f., III. 160, 398, 412, IV. 96, 130, 154 f., 172, 200 f., 204, 206 f., V. 498, VI. 90, 168, 388, 426, 438, 448, VII. 314, 458, VIII. 42, 66, 132, 154, IX. 282, 404, X. 38, 72, 80, 118 f., 164, 204, 230, 234
- Oratory, Asiatic, characterized, IX. 140
- Orchalides, hill afterwards called Alopecus; its location, IV. 318
- Orchomenians, have left wing of Agesilaüs' army at Coroneia; routed by Thebans, V. 46
- Orchomenians, treated severely by Thebans, V. 522; II. 408
- Orchomenus (1), secretly attacked by Aratus, X. 56; 64; Aratus defeated Megistonöis, stepfather of Cleomenes there, XI, 86; surprised and plundered by Antigonus, 104, X. 100; 110
- Orchomenus (2), taken by Lysander, IV. 310; espoused cause of Spartans; Pelopidas attempts to surprise it, V. 376; Sulla defeated Archelaüs, Mithridates' general there, II. 480, 504, IV. 392 f., 408
- Orcynii, in Cappadocia; Antigonus defeated Eumenes there, VIII. 104
- Oreites, their country traversed by Alexander in 60 days, VII. 410
- Oresteion, city in Arcadia, II. 244
- Orestes, consul, took C. Gracchus as quaestor to Sardinia, X. 198
- Oreus, Roman fleet off it defeated by Perseus, VI. 376
- Orexartes, river crossed by Alexander VII. 356
- Orfidius, commander of legion "Adiutrix" for Otho, slain, XI. 304.
- Oricum, VI. 434; V. 284; taken by Caesar, VII. 532
- Oritanians, defeated by Sertorius, VIII. 8
- Orneus, grandfather of Menestheus, I. 72
- Ornis, place just outside Corinth, XI. 44
- Ornytus, with Ioxus led colony into Caria, I. 18
- Oroandes, Cretan, sails off leaving Perseus behind, VI. 422
- Orobazus, Parthian, ambassador from king Arsaces to Sulla, executed on return, IV. 334
- Oromasdes (Oromazdes) Persian god, VII. 312, XI. 200
- Orontes, Persian, closely resembled Alcmaeon, son of Amphiaraiis, XI. 8
- Orontes, Persian, married Rhodoguné, daughter of Artaxerxes, XI. 192
- Oropus, the affair of, VII. 10; brings suit against Athens, II. 368
- Orphans, made subject to taxation by Camillus, II. 96
- Orpheus, Plato banters followers of, II. 612; image of him at Leibethra, VII. 260
- Orphic rites, VII. 226
- Orsodates, rebellious barbarian shot by Alexander, VII. 386
- "Orthagoras," name of Corinthian seer and friend of Timoleon according to Ephorus and Timaeus, VI. 270
- Orthopagus, peak of hill Thurium near Chaeroneia, IV. 382
- Oryssus of Aptaera in Crete, slays Ptolemy, son of Pyrrhus, IX. 448
- Osca, Spanish city where Sertorius had noble Spanish boys educated, VIII. 36, 68
- Oschophoria, Athenian festival instituted by Theseus in honour of Dionysus and Ariadne, I. 46, 48 f.

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Ostanes, son of Dareius and Parysatis, brother of Artaxerxes, XI. 128, 136, 180
- Ostia, VII. 578, IX. 560; seized by Marius, 580
- Ostracism, its nature and purpose, II. 214, 230 f., III. 28, 246, IV. 30; Hipparchus of Cholargus, 1st man to be ostracized, III. 250; Hyperbolus, last man, 246; 202; 226; II. 16; 62; 210; 456
- Otacilius, brother of Marcellus, saved by him in battle in Sicily, v. 438
- Otho, M. (1), praetor, was first to give special seats to knights at spectacles, VII. 112
- Otho, M. (2), married Poppaea. Galba minded to declare him his successor, XI. 246 f.; first of provincial governors to go over to Galba, 248; plots against Galba and is proclaimed emperor by the soldiers, 256 f.; given titles of Caesar and Augustus, 268
His first acts as emperor, 276 f.; at first does not refuse name Nero, 278; troubled by suspicions his paid soldiers had of influential citizens, 280 f.; hears that Vitellius has assumed imperial power, 284; learning that Caecina and Valens, generals of Vitellius, are in possession of the Alps, takes the field, 286; stops at Brixillum and sends his army forward, 288; his general Spurina repels assault on Placentia, 290; his general Celsus defeats Caecina near Cremona, 292; Otho comes to the camp near Cremona and holds council of war, 294; decides on early battle and returns himself to Brixillum, 298; his army defeated by that of Vitellius, 302 f.; learns of defeat and resolves to die, 310 f.; after making some dispositions falls upon his sword, 312 f.; gets modest burial, 316; his troops swear allegiance to Vitellius, 318
- Otryae, place in Phrygia, II. 496
- "Oulamos," as constituted by Lycurgus, was 50 horsemen in square formation, I. 276
- Outer sea, IX. 488
- Ovatio, meaning of the word, description of the thing, v. 494; celebrated by Crassus for Servile war, III. 350
- "Ovicula," surname of Fabius Maximus in childhood, III. 118
- Oxathres, son of Dareius and Parysatis, brother of Artaxerxes Mnemon, XI. 128, 136
- Oxus, river in Asia, has very soft water, VII. 388
- Oxyartes, son of Abuletes, slain by Alexander, VII. 388, 414
- Paccianus, sent to Africa by Sulla to help Ascalis, slain by Sertorius, VIII. 22
- Paccianus, C., taken prisoner at Carrhae, III. 416
- Paccus, attendant of Cato the Elder in Spain, II. 332
- Paches, Athenian, captor of Lesbos, committed suicide, II. 294, III. 226
- Pachynus, headland of Sicily, VI. 52
- Pacorus, son of Hyrodes, marries sister of Artavasdes, III. 420; defeated and slain by Ventidius, III. 422, IX. 212
- Paeania, deme of Demosthenes, VII. 48; of Demon, 68
- Paedareus, Spartan, rejoiced because 300 better than himself, I. 282
- Paedonome, directed boys at Sparta, I. 258
- Paeon, Amathusian, cited, I. 42
- Paeonia, v. 220
- Paeonians, ruled by Autoleon, IX. 368; VI. 402
- Pagasae, fleet of Greeks wintered there after Xerxes fled, II. 54
- "Pagi," divisions of Roman territory made by Numa, I. 362
- Painting, by Protogenes the Caunian, illustrating story of Ialysus, IX. 50; of Hercules and Omphalé, 336; of tyrant Aristratus by Melanthus, XI. 28
- Palaeocopsis, city given Themistocles by Persian king for his support, II. 80
- Palatine, settled by Trojan exiles I. 90, 146, 154, 160, 552, 554, VII. 100, 120, 134, 172
- Palatium, XI. 262
- Palestine, triumphed over by Pompey, v. 230

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Palladium, in Athens, I. 62; on Athenian acropolis, dedicatory offering of Nicias, III. 214; at Delphi, dedicated by Athens, III. 254
- Palladium of Troy, in temple of Vesta, II. 144
- Pallantidae, I. 8; make war on Theseus; betrayed by Leos, are defeated, 24
- Pallantium, where Aratus prevents Aristomachus joining battle with Cleomenes, X. 58, XI. 82
- Pallas, had 50 sons, I. 8
- Pallené, township of, why it has no intermarriage with township of Agnus, I. 26
- "Palm," name of spring in Boeotia where Apollo was born, V. 378
- Palm, custom of giving it to victors begun by Theseus, I. 44
- Palm-tree, bronze, erected on Delos by Nicias in honour of Apollo, III. 216 f.
- Palus Maeotis, VII. 352. See also "Maeotic Lake."
- Pammenes, kept Philip as hostage in Thebes, V. 404 f.; quoted, 382
- Pamphilus, painter, some of his works collected by Aratus and sent to Ptolemy, XI. 28
- Pamphylia, II. 440, V. 312
- Pan, loved Pindar and his verses, I. 318; II. 246
- Panactum, not restored to Athens with walls intact, III. 242, IV. 32; garrisoned by Cassander, reduced by Demetrius and restored to Athens, IX. 54
- Panaetius (1), commands Taenian trireme, II. 38
- Panaetius (2), cited, II. 212 f., 296, 416, VII. 32
- Panathenaic festival, instituted by Theseus, I. 52; musical contests added by Pericles, III. 42
- Pandion, adopted Theseus, I. 24
- Pandosia, city in Italy, IX. 394
- "Panemus," Boeotian name for Metageitnion, II. 138, 274
- Pannonia, armies there faithful to Otho, XI. 284
- Panopé, city destroyed by hosts of Mithridates, IV. 376
- Panopeans, Lysander buried in their soil, IV. 314
- Panopeus, father of Aiglé, I. 40, 66
- Pans, resemble Picus and Faunus, I. 358
- Pansa, consul with Hirtius, begs Cicero to stay at Rome, agreeing to put down Antony, VII. 190; VI. 452; wages war on Antony and is slain with Hirtius, at Mutina, VII. 198, IX. 174
- Pantaleon, most influential Aetolian, XI. 74
- Pantauchus, general of Demetrius, defeated in Aetolia by Pyrrhus, IX. 100, 364
- Panteus, general under Cleomenes in capture of Megalopolis, X. 102; dies with Cleomenes in Egypt, 136; his wife executed by Ptolemy, 138
- Panthers, VII. 174
- Panthoidas, Spartan harmost, slain at Tanagra, V. 376
- Panthoides, Chian, son-in-law of Themistocles, II. 88
- Paphlagonia, subdued by Alexander, VII. 272; VIII. 84; IV. 398; II. 580; triumphed over by Pompey, V. 230; ruled by Philadelphus, IX. 276
- Papiria, Maso's daughter, first wife of Aemilius Paulus, mother of Scipio and Fabius Maximus, VI. 364
- Papirius, M., slain by a Gaul, II. 148
- Pappus, source of Hermippus' story of Demosthenes' death, VII. 74
- Paraetionium, IX. 294
- Paralus, son of Pericles and his first wife, III. 70; last of Pericles' legitimate sons to die, III. 106
- Paralus, Athenian ship, escaped from Aegospotami, IV. 260
- Parapotamii, Boeotian city on the river Assus, in ruins in Sulla's time, IV. 378
- "Parasitein," practice of eating at the public table in the townhall, regulated by Solon, I. 472
- Parauaea, in Macedonia, given Pyrrhus by Alexander, IX. 360
- Parilia, pastoral festival on April 21st, celebrated even before founding of Rome, I. 120; 156
- Paris, defeated by Achilles and Patroclus in Thessaly, I. 78; slew Achilles at gates, IV. 452; his lyre, VII. 62; IX. 338

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Pariscas, eunuch of Cyrus the Younger XI. 152
- Parma, embassy from, acts as arbitrator in dispute between Marius and Catulus, IX. 536
- Parmenides, natural philosopher, III. 10
- Parmenio, conquered Illyrians at time of birth of Alexander, VII. 230; father of Philotas, 248; 264; 276; 284; 316 f.; 318 f.; 326; 342; executed by Alexander, 366
- Parnassus, IV. 374
- Parrhasius, made likenesses of Theseus, I. 10
- Parricide, no penalty for, ordained by Theseus, I. 162
- Parsley, its use, VI. 322 f.
- Parthenon, built in Pericles' time; Callicrates and Ictinus the architects, III., 40, IX. 54
- Parthia, invaded by Alexander, VII. 354; II. 592; III. 370; V. 314; VI. 254
- Parthian arrows, II. 592, III. 388, 390 f. 400
- Parthians, send friendly embassy to Sulla, IV. 334; their power humbled by Tigranes, II. 536; Lucullus plans to invade their country, 570; 590; refer to Pompey settlement of territorial quarrel with Armenians, V. 216; Ateius, tribune of the people, tries to stop Crassus' expedition against them, III. 362; send embassy to Crassus, 368; confront Crassus; their manner of fighting, 386 f.; defeat and slay P. Crassus and his force, 390 f., VII. 172; defeat Crassus' main force, III. 398 f., VII. 172; warred on by Bibulus, IX. 148; threaten Mesopotamia and Syria, 196; under Labienus subduing Asia, 204; defeated by Ventidius, 210; harass Antony's army, 232 f.; 334; 46
- Parysatis, daughter of Artaxerxes I., wife of Darius, mother of Artaxerxes II., Cyrus, Ostanes, Oxathres, XI. 128; favours Cyrus' claim to the throne, 130; intercedes for his life, 132; blamed for revolt of Cyrus, plots death of Stateira, 138 f.; savagely punishes Carian who killed Cyrus, 158 f.; 162; has revenge on Masabates who cut off head and hand of Cyrus, 164 f.; tries to save Greek generals, 168; poisons Stateira, 170 f.; sent off to Babylon by Artaxerxes, 172; restored to favour, causes death of Tissaphernes, approves Artaxerxes' marriage to Atossa, his own daughter, 180 f.
- Pasacas, horse ridden by Cyrus at Cunaxa, XI. 146
- Pasargadae, where Persian king was inducted by priests, XI. 130
- Paseas, father of Abantidas, XI. 4; became tyrant of Sicyon; slain by Nicocles, 8
- Pasicrates, king of Soli, choregus competing against Nicocreon, king of Salamis, VII. 308
- Pasiphaë, accused of too great intimacy with Taurus, I. 36; had temple and oracle at Thalamae, X. 20; had precinct at Sparta, 64
- Pasiphon, dialogue of his cited, III. 218
- Pasitigris river, VIII. 120
- Passaro, place in Molossian land, IX. 356
- Pataecus, boasted he had Aesop's soul; cited, I. 418
- Patara, city, surrenders to Brutus, VI. 198
- Patareans, VI. 130
- Patavium, VII. 554
- "Pater patriae," title conferred on Cicero by the people, VII. 138
- Patrae, its citizens persuaded by Alcibiades to attach their city to sea by long walls, IV. 38; IX. 22; XI. 108; brought over to Rome by Cato the Elder, II. 336; IX. 274
- "Patres conscripti," name given by Romans to senators, I. 124
- Patricians, 100 in number chosen from people by Romulus; who they were and why so called, I. 122 f.; 100 Sabines elected to their numbers, 150; those of Romans and Sabines united, 152; lost much power under Romulus; suspected when he disappeared, 172, 308; 150 in number when Romulus died, 312; accuse people of driving out Coriolanus unjustly, IV. 184; forbidden to have house on Capitoline, II. 188; one censor a patrician, 346

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Patrobius, adherent of Nero, executed by Galba, XI. 240; 270
Patrocles, advises Selencus not to allow Demetrius to remain in country, IX. 118 f.
Patroclus, with Achilles defeated Paris in Thessaly, I. 78; brother of Myrto, II. 278
Patron, came to Italy with Evander, I. 124
 "Patronatus," supposed to be derived from "Patron," I. 124
Patronis, town in Greece, IV. 374
Patrons, protectors, their relation to their clients, I. 126, IX. 472
Paulinus, Suetonius, in command of part of Otho's forces, XI. 288; too slow at battle of Cremona, 292; lost his power to Proculus, XI. 294; 296; 304
Paulus, L. Aemilius (1), consul with Varro, III. 160; slain at Cannae, III. 166; VI. 358; quoted, III. 166
Paulus, L. Aemilius (2), took over army in Macedonia, XI. 206; father of Scipio the Younger, subdued Perseus, II. 346, 362, IV. 364, XI. 124; father of Tertia, and of Scipio the Younger, II. 364. See also "Aemilius Paulus, L." No. 2.
Paulus, L. Aemilius (3), when consul bought by Caesar for 1500 talents, with which he built the Basilica in the forum, v. 268, VII. 514; brother of Lepidus the triumvir, proscribed by him, VII. 200, IX. 178
Pausanias (1), father of Pleistoanax, I. 268, X. 8; commander of all Hellenic forces against Mardonius, joins Aristides, II. 238, 252, 256, 258, 264; at prayer before battle, 266; defeats Mardonius at Plataea, 58, 268 f., X. 8; rapacious and severe toward allies, alienates them, II. 282 f.; has treasonable correspondence with Persians, 418; driven from Byzantium by allies, 422; makes treasonable proposals to Themistocles, discovered and put to death, 62 f.
Pausanias (2), forms juncture with Agis and Lysander before Athens, IV. 268; frustrates Lysander's scheme to get pretext for taking Athens 2nd time, 290; sent with army against Boeotia, 310; comes to Haliartus and asks for body of Lysander, makes truce, 314; flees to Tegea where he dies, 318; was son of Pleistoanax, succeeded by his elder son Agesipolis, X. 8
Pausanias (3), slew Philip of Macedon, VII. 250; 52
Pausanias (4), physician, gets letter from Alexander, VII. 346
Pausanias (5), acting for Seleucus, seizes Demetrius and conducts him to the Syrian Chersonese, IX. 128
Peace, altar of, built by Athenians to commemorate Eurymedon, II. 446; of Antalcidas, v. 62, XI. 176; between Octavius and Antony, IX. 204, 216; between Greeks, v. 98; of Nicias, III. 240, IV. 32; between Philip and Romans, X. 346; between Sextus Pompeius, Antony, and Octavius, IX. 206 f.; between Sulla and Archelatis, IV. 398; between Timoleon and the Carthaginians, VI. 340
 "Peculium," derived from "pecus," I. 532
Pedalium, place in the Chersonese, II. 544
Pedicularis morbus, IV. 438
Pedum, Latin city taken by Volscians under Coriolanus, IV. 186
Pegae, in Megarid, III. 60, XI. 98, 100
Peiraeic gate, at Athens, I. 62, IV. 370
Peirithoüs, becomes friend of Theseus, marries Deidameia, I. 68; helps Theseus carry off Helen from Sparta; is seized by AIdoneus, king of Molossians and killed, 72
Peisianactum, later called Painted Colonnade, adorned by Polygnotus, II. 414
Peisander (1), sent to Athensto change form of government, IV. 74
Peisander (2), put in charge of navy by Agesilais, v. 26; defeated off Cnidus by Pharnabazus and Conon, v. 46
Peisistratidae, expelled by Cleisthenes, III. 8
 "Peisistratidae, new," name given Pericles and his associates by comic poets, III. 50
Peisistratus, related to Solon and great friend of his at first, I. 404, 406; of

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- township Philaïdæ, 428; son of Hippocrates, 490; supported Solon in war on Salamis, 422; leading the Hill-men becomes tyrant of Athens in spite of Solon's opposition, 486 f., 572; courts Solon and retains most of his laws, made law that those maimed in war should be maintained at public expense, 494; expunged verse from Hesiod and inserted one in Inferno of Homer, 40; married Timonassa of Argolis and begot Iophon and Thessalus, II. 376; III, 16; saying of his, II. 376
- Pelagon, Euboean, II. 20
- Pelagians, said to have settled city and called it Rome, I. 90
- Peleus, son of Aeacus and Endeis, I. 20
"Peleus," name given Philip by Lysimachus, Alexander's tutor, VII. 236
- Pelias, father of Acastus, IV. 440
- Pelignians, repulsed at Pydna, VI. 406
- Pella, city of Macedonia, VI. 416
- Pella, L., ex-prætor, condemned by Brutus for embezzlement, VI. 202
- Pellenæ, X. 18; seized by Aetolians, freed by Aratus, XI. 70; stormed by Cleomenes, 90, X. 86
- Pelopidæ, IX. 464
- Pelopidas, his character and career, v. 344; his family and wealth, was friend of Epaminondas, 436 f.; saved by Epaminondas in battle with Spartans against Arcadians at Mantinea, 348; arouses Theban exiles to attempt liberation of Thebes, 354; leads band of exiles to Thebes and slays Theban tyrants, 356 f.; elected boeotarch, drives Spartans from acropolis, 370; with Gorgias devises scheme to embroil Athens with Sparta, 372; wins distinction in battles with Spartans, especially at Tegyra, 376 f., 380, 386
First to side with Epaminondas to give battle to Cleombrotus, 388; before Leuctra has strange dream, 390, 392; with his band of 300 turns the tide at Leuctra, 394 f.; boeotarch with Epaminondas invades Peloponnesus, detaches most of Spartan allies, takes many cities, ravages Spartan land, 396 f.; restored Messenia and settled Ithomé, tried for his life on return, 398 f.; goes to help Thessalians against Alexander of Phærae, 402 f.; goes to Macedonia and acts as arbiter between Ptolemy and Alexander, king of the Macedonians, brings Philip and others as hostages to Thebes, 404; goes once more to help Thessalians against Alexander of Phærae, and to deal with Ptolemy who had killed the king of Macedonia, 406; is taken prisoner along with Ismenias by Alexander of Phærae, 408; visited by Thebé, wife of Alexander, 410; with Ismenias is recovered by Epaminondas and brought home, is sent on embassy to Persian king, 414, XI. 178 f.; highly honoured by Artaxerxes, who grants all his demands, 416; sent once more to help Thessalians against Alexander of Phærae, 420; attacks him at Cynoscephalæ and is slain, 422 f.; bitterly mourned and given splendid funeral by Thessalians, 426 f.
See also II. 212, VI. 344, XI. 34
Quoted: v. 388, 410, 422
- Peloponnesian war, its causes, III, 82 f., 202; its course, 94 f., 226 f., IV. 42 f., 238 f.
- Peloponnesians, their character, II. 414; attack Pylos, and 400 Spartans are cut off on island of Sphacteria, III. 230; IV. 90; defeated by Athenians off Arginusæ islands, III. 108
- Peloponnesus, I. 72, II. 26, 460, III. 56; ravaged first by Tolmides, then by Pericles, 60; ravaged by Athenians, 98; invaded by Thebans under Epaminondas and Pelopidas, v. 396; invaded by Demetrius, IX. 58; by Pyrrhus, 434; freed from Macedonians by Aratus, X. 82; XI. 92; II. 474
- Pelops (1), strongest of kings in Peloponnesus, ancestor of Theseus on his mother's side, I. 6; father of Lysidicé and Pittheus by Hippodameia, 16
- Pelops (2), of Byzantium, gets angry letter from Cicero, VII. 142
- Pelusium, in Egypt, taken by Antony, IX. 142 f.; by Octavius Caesar, 306

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Peneius river, in volume and speed equalled by Apsus, X. 328
- Penelopé, wife of Lysimachus, IX. 60
- Pensons, given to descendants of Aristides by Athens and by Demetrius, II. 296
- Pentakosiomedimnoi, those with 500 measures yearly increase; highest class in Solon's scheme, I. 450, II. 210, 386
- Pentapyla, part of Syracuse, VI. 62
- Penteleium, won over by Cleomenes, X. 86, XI. 90
- Pentheus, character in "Bacchæ" of Euripides, III. 420
- "People's Flight," name of day on which Romulus disappeared, I. 182
- Peparethus, Diocles of, I. 96
- Percoté, city given by Persian king to help support Themistocles, II. 80
- Perdiccas (1), in Thrace, III. 428
- Perdiccas (2), with Alexander on his expedition, VII. 262; advanced to Hephaestion's place after his death, VIII. 78; accomplice of Roxana in murdering Stateira; in great authority after Alexander's death, VII. 436; urged by Demades to seize Macedonia and deliver Greeks, 78; informed of designs of Leonatus by Eumenes, makes him satrap of Cappadocia, sends him back from Cilicia to reduce Armenia to obedience, VIII. 86 f.; 90; slain in mutiny in Egypt, 100
- Pergamenians, VI. 130
- Pergamum, X. 194; occupied by Mithridates, IV. 358; II. 478; home of Athenodorus; its libraries given to Cleopatra, IX. 270
- Pergamus, district of, in Crete, I. 302
- Περὶ αἰτιῶν Ῥωμαϊκῶν, work by Plutarch, II. 140
- Periander, son of Cypselus, XI. 8; arranged joint conference and banquet for 7 wise men at Corinth, I. 412; 432
- Περὶ βασιλείας, work by Theophrastus, II. 68
- Periboea, mother of Aias, married by Theseus, I. 66
- Pericleidas, goes to Athens to get aid for Sparta against Helots and Messenians, II. 454
- Pericles, his family and physical deformity, III. 6 f.; had Damon as teacher in music, 8, II. 214; studied with Zeno the Eleatic and Anaxagoras the Clazomenian, III. 10; as a young man reluctant to face the people 16; joined the party of the people and shunned society, 18; excelled as an orator, 20 f.; aristocratic rather than democratic in administration, 24; opposes Cimon and the Council of the Areiopagus, 26; has Cimon recalled from banishment, 28, II. 458; made lenient to Cimon by Elpinicé, Cimon's sister, 448, III. 30; opposed by Thucydides of Alopecé, leader of the "Good and True," 32; catered to the people, sent out numerous colonies, adorned Athens with public works, 34 f.; had Phidias as general overseer of these works, 40; has musical contest added to Panathenaic festival 42; denounced by Thucydides for lavish expenditure, 46; with banishment of Thucydides has a free hand, 46 f.; untainted by corruption; invites all Greek states to send deputies to a council at Athens to deliberate on various questions, 54 f.; led successful expedition to the Chersonesus, 58; other achievements, 60 f.; right in seeking to confine power of Athenians within lesser Greece; bribes Cleandridas to have Spartan army withdrawn from Attica, 64; subdued cities in Euboea, 66; gets decree passed for expedition against Samians; his relations with Aspasia, 68 f.; conducts war against Samians, 72 f.; receives surrender of Samians, 78
- When Peloponnesian war was imminent, persuaded people to send aid to Corcyraeans in their war against Corinth, 82; accused of thus furnishing enemies pretext for war, 84; held responsible for war, 86, 240; secures acquittal of Aspasia, 92; refuses to let Athenians attack invading army of Archidamus, 94 f.; sends 100 ships to ravage the Peloponnesus, parcels out Aegina among the citizens, razes the Megarid, 98; blamed for

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- the plague, 100, 226; fails in expedition against Epidaurus and is fined, his domestic troubles, 102 f.; recalled to conduct of affairs, 106; asks suspension of law about children born out of wedlock; what this law was, 106 f.; his dying words, 110; an appreciation of him, 112 f.
- See also I. 256, II. 6, 286, 292, 294, 324, 444, 450, III. 212, 214, 290, IV. 2, VII. 22, 32, VIII. 160
- Sayings: III. 24, 36, 46, 58, 80, 110, IV. 8
- Περὶ εὐγενείας, possibly work of Aristotle, II. 296
- Περὶ εὐσεβείας, treatise by Dalmachus, IV. 264
- Περὶ ἡμερῶν, treatise by Plutarch, II. 138
- Periguné, daughter of Sinis, bore Melanippus to Theseus, afterwards lived with Deioneus, son of Eurytus, I. 18
- Περὶ μνημάτων, work by Diodorus the topographer, II. 88
- Perinthus, attacked by Philip, saved by Athenians, VII. 40, VIII. 174; besieged by Alexander, VII. 420
- Perioeci, received 30,000 lots of Laconian land in redistribution of Lycurgus, I. 228; attack Sparta, II. 454
- Peripatetics, older, had no wide or exact acquaintances with writings of Aristotle and Theophrastus, IV. 406
- Periphemus, hero to whom Solon sacrificed, I. 424
- Periphetes, Club-bearer, slain by Theseus, I. 16
- "Periphoretus," surname of the engineer Artemon, III. 78
- Περὶ πλούτου, work by Eratosthenes, II. 74
- Peripolitas, seer, conducted King Opheltas from Thessaly to Boeotia; his posterity, II. 404
- Περὶ ψυχῆς, treatise by Heracleides Ponticus, II. 146
- Περὶ σκυλακισμοῦ, rites performed by Greeks, I. 160
- Peritas, favourite dog of Alexander, VII. 398
- Περὶ θεῶν, treatise by Antiochus the philosopher, II. 564
- Perithoedae, deme of Hyperbolus, III. 248, IV. 28
- Περὶ τοῦ ζεύγους of Isocrates, cited IV. 26
- Perpenna Vento, M., abandons Sicily to Pompey, v. 156; came to Spain to fight Metellus, is forced to join Sertorius, VIII. 38 f.; with Herennius defeated by Pompey, v. 158; defeated, captured, and executed by Pompey, 164, VIII. 72 f.; quoted, 66
- Perrhaebia, VI. 392; proclaimed free at Isthmian games by Flamininus, X. 350
- Persaeus, philosopher, commanded Acrocorinthus for Antigonus, XI. 38; on its capture escaped to Cenchreae; anecdote about him, 52
- Persephoné, festival of; black heifer sacrificed, II. 500
- Perseus (1), his deeds against Aethiopsians, Medes, Armenians, II. 410
- Perseus (2), son of Philip, succeeds him to throne of Macedonia; said to have been really son of Gnathæonion, an Argive sempstress, VI. 374, XI. 124; wages war on Romans, II. 362, VI. 370; his lineage and events prior to his accession, 372 f., IX. 134; in spite of his mean and ignoble character wins successes against Romans, VI. 374 f.; through avarice loses the help of the Bisternæ, 382; basely betrays Genthius the Illyrian king; had 4000 cavalry and nearly 40,000 heavy-armed infantry, 386; taken in the rear by Scipio Nasica, 394; retires to Pydna and prepares for battle, 396; is defeated by Romans under Aemilius Paulus, 400 f.; flees from Pydna to Pella, 414 f.; flees with his treasure from Pella to Amphipolis, from there to Galepsus, then sails across to Samothrace and takes refuge in temple of the Dioscuri, 416 f.; is left in the lurch by the Cretan Croandes, who sails off with his treasure, 422; surrenders to the Romans, 424, II. 346; is led with his children in triumph of Aemilius Paulus, VI. 442 f.; the manner of his death, 450

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Persians, invaded Greece, II. 404; defeated by Greeks at Marathon Plataea, Mycalé, Arbela, 133, 224, III. 6; came into closer relations with Greeks after time of Themistocles, II. 80; defeated by Cimon on banks of Strymon, 422; 438 f.; defeated at the Eurymedon, 442 f.; 446; 464; defeated large forces of Greeks in Egypt, 618; 620; attacked by Agesilais, 464; send money to Demosthenes to aid in struggle against Philip, VII. 48; defeated by Alexander at river Granicus, II. 138, VII. 262; some of their women marry Alexander's Macedonians, 418; guard their women very jealously, II. 72; XI. 154
- "Persians" of Timotheus, opening verse, X. 284
- Persis, invaded and ravaged by Alexander, VII. 334; VIII. 120
- Pessinus, place in Asia Minor, VIII. 268, IX. 508
- Pestilence, in Rome in time of Romulus, I. 166; swept Rome and Italy in time of Numa, 350; at Citium, II. 466; at Velitrae, IV. 144; at Athens, III. 98f., 226 f.; at Rome, II. 162, 206; in Demetrius' army, IX. 118
- Petelia, hill of, Hannibal slays 2500 Romans there, v. 514; mountains of, III. 346
- Peteline Grove, scene of final trial of Manlius, II. 188
- Peteos, father of Menestheus, I. 72
- Peticus, takes Pompey, the two Lentuli, Favonius, and Deiotarus on board his ship, v. 306 f.
- Petilius, praetor, read Numa's books, which were then burned in Comitium, I. 380
- Petillius, supported by Cato the Elder, prosecutes Scipio the Great, II. 344
- Petinus, adherent of Nero, executed by Galba, XI. 240
- Petra, in northern Greece, VI. 392
- Petra, city in Arabia Petraea, v. 220, IX. 296
- Petrachus, the so-called, near Thurium in Boeotia, IV. 382
- Petro, Granus, see "Granus Petro."
- Petronius, in army of Crassus at Carrhae, III. 412; legionary tribune, assists in attempt to save Crassus, 414
- Petronius Turpilianus, of consular rank, ordered by Galba to take his own life, XI. 236, 240
- Peucestas, with Alexander on his expedition, VII. 346 f.; saves Alexander, 404; friend of Eumenes, with other satraps joins him, VIII 118; rejected by soldiers in favour of Eumenes, 120 f.; 124; fought ignobly for Eumenes against Antigonus, 130
- Phaea, the Crommyonian sow, or, as some say, a female robber called sow because of her life and manners, slain by Theseus, I. 18 f.
- Phaeax (1), said to have been Theseus' look-out man on his trip to Crete, I. 34
- Phaeax (2), father of Erasistratus, v. 40
- Phaeax (3), son of Erasistratus, able opponent of Alcibiades, IV. 28; he, not Nicias, striving with Alcibiades when Hyperbolus was banished according to Theophrastus, 30, III. 250; his speech "Against Alcibiades" cited, IV. 28
- Phaedimus, warns Eumenes of plots against his life, VIII. 128
- Phaedo, archonship of, I. 82
- Phaedra, wife of Theseus, met with calamities, I. 64
- Phaenareté, wife of Samon, IX. 358
- Phaenippus, archon eponymous in year of Marathon, II. 228
- "Phaenomerkes," term applied to Spartan maidens, I. 248, 390
- Phaestus, Epimenides of, I. 432
- Phaëthon, first king of Thesprotians and Molossians after the flood; came into Epeirus with Pelasgus, IX. 346
- Phalanx, its strength and weakness, x. 342; VI. 402, 406
- Phalerum, had temple of Scirus and memorial chapels for Nausithois and Phaeax, I. 34; haven of, II. 34; 210; had tomb of Aristides, 296
- Phalinx, Zacynthian, sent by Artaxerxes after Cunaxa to parley with Greeks, XI. 156
- Phallus, phantom of, in home of Tarchetius, king of Albans, I. 94

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Phanias, Lesbian of Eresos, philosopher and historian, II. 40; cited: I. 436, 496, II. 2, 20 f., 40, 74, 80
- Phanodemus, cited: II. 38, 442, 464
- Pharax, Spartan, emissary between Dionysius and Heracleides, defeats Dion at Neapolis, VI. 102, 286; 462
- Pharmacusa, island near which Caesar was captured by pirates, VII. 444
- Pharmuthi, Egyptian month, I. 122
- Pharnabazus (1), IV. 66; assists Spartans at naval battle of Abydos, 80; defeated at Cyzicus by Alcibiades, 80 f.; defeated by Thrasyllus and Alcibiades, 84; attempts to raise siege of Chalcedon, put to flight by Alcibiades, 86; makes peace with Athenian generals on conditions, 88; visited by Alcibiades in Phrygia, 110; bidden by Lysander to kill Alcibiades, 112 f., 300; denounces Lysander to Sparta, 284 f.; v. 20; his province ravaged by Agesilaüs, 28; has conference with him, 32 f.; defeats and slays Peisander off Cnidus, 46, XI. 176; with Conon ravages coasts of Laconia, furnished money for rebuilding walls of Athens, v. 62; quarrels with Iphicrates and so conducts unsuccessful war against Egypt for Artaxerxes, XI. 184; quoted: v. 32 f.
- Pharnabazus (2), son of Artabazus, commands foreign horse under Eumenes, VIII. 96
- Pharnaces, son of Mithridates, revolts and thus drives his father to suicide, submits to Pompey and sends him gifts, v. 222; defeats Domitius and drives him from Pontus, occupies Bithynia and Cappadocia, defeated at Zela by Caesar and driven from Pontus, VII. 560
- Pharnacia, hiding place of Mithridates' women-folk, II. 524
- Pharnapates, most capable general of Hyrodes, slain by Ventidius, IX. 210
- Pharos, visited by Alexander and made site of Alexandria, VII. 298 f.; 560; IX. 296
- Pharsalia, plain of, v. 292
- Pharsalians, proud of cavalry, routed by Ageilaüs, v. 44
- Pharsalus, occupied by Alexander of Pherae, v. 408, 422; battle of, Caesar defeats Pompey, v. 292 f., VI. 134, 136, VII. 180, 182, 546 f., IX. 156
- Pharygae, village of Phocis at foot of Mt. Acrurium, VIII. 222
- Phaselis, Hellenic city, joins Cimon against Persians, II. 440; VII. 272
- Phasis, II. 580; northern boundary of Lucullus' conquests, 618; river in Colchis, v. 206
- Phayllus, athlete of Croton, in Median wars fitted out ship at his own expense and sailed to Salamis, honoured in remembrance by Alexander, VII. 328
- Phegaca, Attic deme, IV. 60
- Pheidias, III. 4; general manager and overseer of public works under Pericles, III. 40; made golden image of Athena, became involved in scandal, 44; charged with embezzlement, dies in prison, 88; moulded Zeus of Homer according to Aemilius Paulus, VI. 428
- "Pheido," surname of Demetrius, VII. 382
- Pheneus, captured by Cleomenes, x. 86, XI. 90
- Pherae (1), ruled by Alexander, v. 402, 406
- Pherae (2), Achaean city, menaced by Cleomenes, x. 78
- Pheraeans, the, see "Alexander of Pherae."
- Phereboea, married by Theseus, I. 66
- Pherecles, approaches priestesses of Dodona for Lysander, IV. 304
- Phereclus, son of Amarsyas, according to Simonides was pilot of ship bearing Theseus and other victims to Crete, I. 34
- Pherecydes (1), though foreigner, honoured at Sparta, x. 24; lyric poet, eaten of worms and died, IV. 440
- Pherecydes (2), cited, I. 36, 58
- Pherecydes, wise man, put to death by Spartans and his skin preserved, v. 390
- Pherendates, commander of Persian infantry at Eurymedon according to Ephorus, II. 440
- Pherenicus, outlawed from Thebes by

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Spartans holding the Cadmeia, v. 352; 356
- Pheristus, with Megellus, repeoples Agrigentum, vi. 344
- Phersephoné, wife of Aïdoneus, I. 72
- Phiditia, Spartan for public messes; etymology of the word, I. 236, v. 54
- Phila, daughter of Antipater, wife first of Craterus then of Demetrius, IX. 32 f., 50, 334; 64; mother of Antigonus and Stratonicé, 76 f., 90, 134; had sister Eurydicé, 116; commits suicide, 112
- "Philadelphus," Greek surname from a special excellence, IV. 142
- Philadelphus, king of Paphlagonia, fights under Antony, IX. 276
- Philaeus, son of Ajax, became Athenian citizen and made over Salamis to Athens, I. 426
- Philagrus, teacher of Metellus Nepos, VII. 148
- Philadae, Attic township to which Peisistratus belonged; named after Philaeus, son of Ajax, I. 428
- Philargyrus, freedman of Cato the Younger, VIII. 328
- Philarus, stream joined by Hoplites, in Boeotia, IV. 316
- Philetas, poet, III. 4
- Philides, horse-breeder, II. 14
- Philinna, mother of Arrhidaeus by Philip of Macedon, VII. 436
- Philip, with Archias and Leontidas persuades Phoebidas to seize Cadmeia, v. 350 f.; polemarch at Thebes, 354; slain, 366
- Philip of Macedon, his character, VII. 232, 234, VIII. 4; progenitor of Perseus, VI. 384; brought as hostage to Thebes by Pelopidas, v. 404 f.; married Olympias, sister of Arymbas, VII. 226; took Potidaea, 230; made Euboea submit to its tyrants, 40, VIII. 170; leaving Alexander as regent, made expedition against Byzantium, VII. 244, VIII. 174; expelled from Hellespont through Phocion, 176; his successes in regard to Amphissa, Elateia, and Phocis, VII. 42; defeats Greeks at Ohaeroneia, II. 138, VII. 48, 244, VIII. 178; proclaimed commander-in-chief of Greeks, IX. 58; marries Cleopatra; VII. 246; IX. 338; slain, VII. 50, VIII. 180
- See also VI. 296, VII. 30, 38, 42, 228, 236, 240, 246, 248, 250, VIII. 78, XI. 52
- Quoted: III. 4, v. 386, VI. 296, VII. 236
- Philip, companion of Alexander, made ruler of large territory in India, VII. 398
- Philip, the Acharnanian, cures Alexander, VII. 276
- Philip (Arrhidaeus), see Arrhidaeus.
- Philip, father of Antigonus, IX. 6
- Philip, son of Antigonus and Stratonicé, younger than his brother Demetrius, died early, IX. 6, 54
- Philip, eldest son of Cassander, after latter's death reigned over Macedonians short time, then died, leaving two brothers, Antipater and Alexander, IX. 86
- Philip, had daughter Antigone by Berenicé, IX. 356
- Philip, successor of Antigonus Doseon, sent into Peloponnesus by latter, XI. 106; supports Aratus as general of Achaeans, wins obedience of Cretans quickly, conducts vigorous campaign against Aetolians, 110; put to death courtiers for attacking Aratus, sets Messenians by the ears, 112; lost his fleet to Romans, ravaged territory of Messenians, 116; got Taurion to poison Aratus, 118; at war with Rome, X. 324; faces Pubilius Villius, 328; driven from mountains along Apsus by Flamininus, 330; 334; meets Flamininus, but refuses his terms, 336; sends unsuccessful embassy to Rome, 338; defeated by Flamininus at Cynoscephalae, II. 350, VI. 372, X. 292, 340, 386; 344; terms of peace with Rome, 346, 362, XI. 122; left kingdom to his son Persens, 124, II. 334
- See also IX. 8, X. 274, 286, 348, 388
- Quoted: X. 344 f., XI. 36
- Philip, freedman of Pompey, v. 320
- Philip (L. Marcius), married mother of young Caesar, negotiates with Cicero, VII. 194
- Philip, the Chalcidian, cited, VII. 356

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Philip of Theangela, cited, VII. 356
- Philippi, IV. 402; battle of, VI. 178, 186, 208, 212
- Philippics, name given Cicero's speeches against Antony, VII. 142, 206
- Philippides, enemy of Stratocles, IX. 30
- Philippides (Kock III. 308), IX. 30, 62
- Philippus, L., moves that Pompey be sent against Sertorius, V. 118, 156
- Philippus, Marcius, censor with Aemilius Paulus, VI. 456
- Philippus, gives his daughter Marcia first to Cato, then to Hortensius, VIII. 292; consul, 330
- Phlistus, his language corrected by Timaeus, III. 210; recalled from exile by Dionysius, the Younger, VI. 22 f.; advises Dionysius to banish Dion, 28, 38; in wait for Dion's fleet at Iapygia, 52; defeated and slain by Syracusans, 76; his books sent to Alexander, VII. 242.
Cited: III. 276, 306, V. 428, VI. 298
- Phillidas, contrives to be appointed secretary to Archias and Philip, the polemarchs, V. 354; helps exiles kill tyrants and drive Spartans from Thebes, 360
- Philo, arsenal of, burned by Sulla, IV. 372
- Philo, represented doctrines of Carneades, founder of New Academy, II. 606; disciple of Cleitomachus, his lectures attended by Cicero, VII. 86; 90
- Philo, the Theban, cited, VII. 356
- Philoboetus, hill in plains of Elatea, IV. 374
- Philochorus, cited, I. 28, 30, 34, 36, 58, 68, 80, III. 292
- Philocles, one of Athenian commanders at Aegospotami, IV. 254; executed by Lysander, 264; 454
- Philocles, cited by Didymus, I. 404
- Philocrates, member of embassy of ten sent to Philip, VII. 38
- Philocrates, servant of C. Gracchus, slays his master and then himself, X. 236
- Philoctetes, once ruled territory about Olizon, II. 22 f.
- Philoctetes, character in play of same name, I. 460
- "Philoctetes," play of uncertain authorship (Nauck 841), cited, I. 460
- Philocyprus, one of kings of Cyprus, loved Solon greatly, named new city Soli in his honour, I. 476.
- Philologus, freedman of Q. Cicero, betrayed Cicero to his murderer, punished by Pomponia, VII. 206
- Philombrotus, succeeded by Solon as archon, I. 436
- Philomelus, Phocian, one of party that seized Delphi and plundered sanctuary, VI. 334
- Philoneicus, Thessalian, offered Bucephalus to Philip for 13 talents, VII. 236
- Philonicus, Licinus, see "Licinius Philonicus."
- Philopoemen, son of Craugis, reared first by Cleander, then by Ecdemus and Megalophanes, X. 256; his appearance, 258; his character, 260; youthful activities and training, 262 f.; stoutly resists Cleomenes when latter seized Megalopolis at night, 264; persuades Megalopolitans to refuse Cleomenes' offer to restore their city, 104, 266; distinguishes himself in battle at Sellasia, 266; refuses service under Antigonus, 270; serves with credit in Crete, is made commander of Achaean cavalry, defeats Aetolians and Eleians at river Larissus, 272; makes Achaeans independent of foreign protectors, changes armour and drill of troops, 276; defeats Machanidas, tyrant of Sparta at Mantinea, 280; honoured at Nemean games, 284
His life attempted by Philip of Macedon, rescues Messene from Nabis, 286; serves with distinction as general of the Gortynians in Crete, 288; saved by Achaeans from being exiled by his native city, 290; chosen general against Nabis, defeated in naval battle, 292; defeats Nabis, 294; gives secret umbrage to Flamininus, 296, 360; brings Sparta into Achaean league, 296; shuts out Flamininus

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- and Diophanes from Sparta and brings it back again into the league, 300; as general of Achaean league, tore down walls of Sparta, annexed it to Megalopolis, and abolished constitution of Lycurgus, 302; defeats Deinocrates, who had induced Messenê to revolt from Achaean league, but is taken prisoner, 310; drinks poison sent in by Deinocrates and dies, 314; his death avenged, his funeral, 314
See also 368, XI. 54
 Quoted: X. 258, 290, 304, 306, 314
- Philosophers, their definition of love, I. 190; fared ill until Plato came, III. 290; troubled Alexander in India, many hanged by him, VII. 392; assist Dio, VI. 46; 294; those at Athens treated with munificence by Pompey, v. 224; how speculative philosopher differs from statesman, III. 54
- Philosophy, higher, influence on Pericles, III. 12; effect of its lack, XI. 24; II. 472
- Philosophy, natural, removes superstition, III. 14; Latin terms of, provided by Cicero, VII. 184
- Philostephanus, cited, I. 276
- Philostratus, philosopher, honoured by Cato in Sicily, VIII. 374; pardoned by Octavius, IX. 318
- Philotas, son of Parmenio and friend of Alexander, VII. 248; 254; 316; 342; suspected of plotting against Alexander, is put to death, 360
- Philotas, physician of Amphissa, his anecdote about Antony, IX. 198
- Philotis, or Tutula, serving-maid, proposes and carries out ruse to defeat Latins, I. 184, II. 176
- Philoxenus, son of Ptolemy, given as hostage to Pelopidas, v. 406
- Philoxenus, dithyrambic poems of, sent to Alexander, VII. 242
- Philoxenus, commander of Alexander's forces on sea-board, VII. 284.
- Phlius, attacked by Agesilaüs in interests of its tyrants, v. 66; joins Achaean league, XI. 80; joins Cleomenes, X. 90, XI. 90; garrison of Oligyrtus expelled from it by Cleomenes, X. 110
- Phlogidas, Spartan, opposed to gold and silver coinage, IV. 276
- Phlogius, accompanied Autolyceus, II. 544
- Phlya, native place of Myron, I. 432; had chapel shrine belonging to Lycomidae, which was burned by barbarians, restored by Themistocles, II. 4; had temple of Apollo the Laurel-bearer, 44
- Φόβος, sacrificed to by Theseus, I. 62; by Alexander, VII. 316. See also "Fear."
- Phocaea, IV. 242
- Phocians, hid in caves near Tithora on advance of Xerxes, IV. 374; forced by Spartans to free Delphians, II. 456; driven from sanctuary at Delphi by Spartans and Delphians, reinstated, III. 62; denounced Thebans to Alexander, VII. 254; proclaimed free at Isthmian games by Flamininus, X. 350
- Phocion, his lineage, pupil of Plato, then of Xenocrates, VIII. 152; his character and power as speaker, 154, VII. 24, 34; attached himself to Chabrias, distinguished himself in sea-fight off Naxos, VIII. 156; strove to be both orator and statesman, his policies, 160; sent with small force to Eretria to oppose Philip, 170; sent to help allies on the Hellespont, 174; expels Philip from Hellespont, brings help to Megara, 176; put in charge of Athens after Chaeroneia, opposes rejoicing at Philip's death and opposition to Alexander, 180; persuades Alexander to turn his arms against the Barbarians and becomes his friend, 182; vexes Alexander by refusing his gift, 184, VII. 340; his domestic life, VIII. 188; advises Athenians to accede to Alexander's request for triremes, 190; resists Harpalus' attempts to bribe him, 192; tries to restrain people when news of Alexander's death is brought, 194
 Opposes Leosthenes, 194, VI. 274; successfully opposes sending expedition against Boeotians, VIII. 198; defeated Micion and his Mace-

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- donians, 200; as envoy persuades Antipater not to invade Attica, 202; with other ambassadors sent to meet Antipater at Thebes, 204; induces Antipater to exempt many from exile, 210; refuses gift of money from Menyllus, 212, XI. 42; persuades Antipater not to exact moneys due from city, VIII. 214; refuses to arrest Nicanor, Cassander's general, 218; deposed from command, 220; sets out with Deinarchus and others to meet Polysperchon, 222; taken back to Athens by Cleitus, virtually under sentence of death, 224; condemned to death by Athenian assembly, 228; drinks the hemlock, 230; his burial, his death avenged, 232
 Sayings: 154, 158, 162, 164 f., 174, 178 f., 190 f., 212, 226, 228 f., X. 4
- Phocis, raided by Xerxes, II. 26; 408; III. 56; IV. 310; occupied by Philip, VII. 42
- Phocus, son of Phocion, victor as vaulting rider of horses, sent by his father to Sparta for training, VIII. 188 f.; 212; 228; takes vengeance on Epicurus and Demophilus for his father's death, 232
- Phoebidas, seized Cadmeia in time of peace, V. 64, 350; slain at Thespieae by Thebans, 376
- Phoebis, sent by Cleomenes to slay ephors, X. 64
- Phoenicia, IV. 252; with exception of Tyre, surrenders to Alexander, VII. 292; 308; its cities subdued by Tigranes, II. 534; V. 196; taken from Tigranes by Lucullus, 202; triumphed over by Pompey, 230; given to Cleopatra by Antony, IX. 216 f.
- Phoenician ships, II. 440, 444, 462, IV. 70, 76
- Phoenicians, send ships to aid of Samians, III. 74; routed in Sicily by Pyrrhus and their territory subdued, IX. 418; call the cow "thor," IV. 382
- Phoenix, reared Achilles, X. 256
- Phoenix, name which Lysimachus, tutor of Alexander, gave himself, VII. 236
- Phoenix, his surrender demanded of Thebans by Alexander, VII. 252
- Phoenix, of Tenedos, commands foreign horse under Eumenes, VIII. 96
- "Phoenix," name of fount where Apollo was born, V. 378
- Phorbas, father of Dexithea, I. 92; loved by Apollo, 318
- Phormio, Athenian general, IV. 2
- Phormio, prosecuted by Apollodorus, used speech written for him by Demosthenes, VII. 36, 216
- Phraata, large city besieged by Antony, IX. 222, 226, 252
- Phraates, Parthian, demands Tigranes of Pompey on plea that he is his son-in-law, and that Euphrates be adopted as boundary between his empire and that of the Romans, V. 204
- Phraates, put his father Hyrodes to death and seized kingdom, III. 422, IX. 218
- Phraortes, Parthian, quarrels with king of the Medes, IX. 254
- Phrasicles, nephew of Themistocles and husband of his daughter Nicomaché, took charge of Asia the youngest, II. 88
- Phrixus, Spartan, V. 90
- Phrygia, II. 432; plundered by Agesilaus, V. 22; subdued by Alexander, VII. 272; IX. 116; Antiochus in battle there, X. 378; added to Pompey's sway by Manilian law, V. 190
- Phrygia, Upper, has Epixyes as satrap, II. 82
- Phrygians, claim Bona or Gynaecceia, and say she was mother of Midas, VII. 462
- Phrynichus (1), won in tragedy, II. 16
 Unidentified play cited (Kock I. 385), III. 222, IV. 54
- Phrynichus (2), Athenian general at Samos, opposes return of Alcibiades from exile, betrayed and denounced by Alcibiades, slain by Hermon, IV. 70 f.
- Phrynis, musician, had two of his nine lute-strings cut out by the ephor Ectrepes, X. 24
- Phthia, wife of Admetus, said to have

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- suggested form of supplication to him, II. 66
- Phthia, daughter of Menon, the Thesalian, married Aeacides and became mother of Deïdameia, Troas, and Pyrrhus, IX. 346
- Phthiotis, Achaeans of, have garrisons put over them by Alexander of Pherae, V. 418; freed by Thebans, 430; X. 350
- Φυλιά, subdivision of Spartans made by Lycurgus, I. 220
- Phylacia, in battle there Bithys, general of Demetrius, defeats Aratus, XI. 76
- Phylacion, mistress of Stratocles, IX. 26
- Phylarchus, his story about Themistocles fabricated, II. 88; great admirer of Cleomenes, XI. 88
Cited: II. 88, 133, VII. 66, IX. 438, X. 20, 60, 114, 118, XI. 88
- Phylé, in Attica, IV. 290, 310, IX. 54, 442
- Phthalidae, men of race of, purified Theseus from bloodshed and feasted him, I. 22; superintended contributions toward a sacrifice to Theseus, 50
- Picenum, III. 340, V. 126 f., 442
- Pictae, deputation reaches Sulla there, IV. 352
- Pictor, see "Fabius Pictor."
- Picus, demi-god, once haunted Aventine, etc., I. 358
- Pierio, said by some to have composed verses sung at banquet of Alexander, VII. 368
- Pigres, general, said by Eumenes to be coming against him, VIII. 94
- "Pilamenaï," connected with "flamines," I. 328
- Pillars of Hercules, III. 250, VI. 310, 368
- Pinarii, descended from Pinus, son of Numa, I. 376
- Pinarius, husband of Thalaea, I. 394
- Pinarus, river, VII. 278
- Pindar (in passage not extant) says son of Theseus and Antiope called Demophoön, I. 64; he and his verses loved by Pan, 318; his descendants spared by Alexander, VII. 254 Pyth. (2, 1 f.), V. 492, (8, 44 f.) XI. 2
- Frg 77 (Bergk I^o. p. 414) II. 22;
Frg 131 (p. 444) I. 180; Frg 169 (p. 458) IX. 104; Frg 199 (p. 466) I. 272; Frg 205 (p. 469) IX. 544; Frg 206 (p. 469) III. 208; Frg 232 (p. 476) V. 516
- Pindarus, freedman, slays Cassius, VI. 234, IX. 184
- Pinus, son of Numa, ancestor of Pinarii, I. 376
- Piracy, ships engaged in it not collected by Lucullus, II. 478
- Piraeus, equipped and connected with Athens, II. 52; tomb of Themistocles near it, 88; entered by Lysander, IV. 270; VII. 2; 68; handed over to Demetrius, IX. 84; captured by Sulla, IV. 360, 372, 452; unsuccessfully attacked by Aratus, guarded by Diogenes, XI. 76; given up to Athenians by Diogenes, 78
- Piræic gate, see "Peiræic gate."
- Pirates, driven from Scyros by Lucullus, II. 426; attack Lucullus on way to Egypt, 476; save Mithridates, 508; Cilician pirates make bargain with Spartacus, then dis-appoint him, III. 342; their depredations in Pompey's time, V. 172 f.; by Gabinian law Pompey sent against them, 178 f.; subdued by Pompey, 182
- Pirithoüs, see "Peirithoüs."
- Plsa, statue of Zeus at, III. 4
- Pisandrus, Plataean hero, II. 246
- Pisaurum, city near Adriatic, colonized by Antony, swallowed by chasms in earth, IX. 274
- Pisis, of Thespieae, urges Boeotians to revolt, spared by Demetrius and made polemarch of Thespieae, IX. 96
- Pisidians, seeking to slay Themistocles, are captured, II. 82; overpowered by Alexander, VII. 272
- Piso, C., historian, cited, I. 378, IX. 594
- Piso, C. Calpurnius, consul, interferes with Pompey in his war on pirates and comes near losing consulship, V. 182; makes report on Catiline's conspiracy, VII. 126; 456
- Piso, L. Calpurnius, marries his daughter to Caesar and is made consul, V. 238, 240, VII. 474, VIII.

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- 306, 316; gets province of Macedonia with support of Clodius, VII. 156; advises Cicero to leave country, 160 f.; urges Caesar to propose settlement with Pompey, 530
- Piso Caesoninus, L. Calpurnius, supported for consul by Pompey, V. 228; assists Curio in taking opinion of senate, 268
- Piso Frugi, C. Calpurnius, Cicero's son-in-law, goes to Pompey to beg aid for Cicero, VII. 160; 188
- Piso Frugi Licinianus, L. Calpurnius, son of Crassus and Scribonia, proclaimed his successor by Galba, XI. 254 f.; slain, 258, 266, 270
- Pissouthnes, Persian satrap, aids Samians, III. 72
- Pitané, fortress of Mithridates, II. 478
- Pittacus, tyrant of Mitylené, I. 438
- Pittheus, son of Pelops, grandfather of Theseus, founded Troezen, etc., I. 6; persuaded Aegeus to take his daughter Aethra, 8; spread report that Poseidon was father of Theseus, 12; father of Henioché, grandfather of Sciron, 56
- Pityussa, island off Spain, attacked by Sertorius, VIII. 18
- Pixodarus, satrap of Caria, hopes to marry his daughter to Arrhidaeus or Alexander, VII. 248
- Placentia, held by Otho's troops, XI. 288 f.
- Plague, see "Pestilence."
- Plain-men, at Athens, favoured oligarchy, I. 434; headed by Lycurgus, 486
- Plancus, L. Munatius, speaks in favour of amnesty after Caesar's murder, VI. 166; joins Antony, IX. 176; abused by Cleopatra, deserts to Octavianus, 268
- Planus, T. Munatius, on trial, supported by Pompey, V. 262
- Plataea, Dalmachus of, I. 572; heroes of, II. 246; meeting place of Hellenic council, II. 274, 278; IV. 310
- Plataea, battle of, Greeks defeat Persians, II. 46, 138, 214, 226, 238, 386, 396, X. 8; Thebans defeat Spartans, V. 376, 400
- Plataeans, had general Arimnæstus, II. 246; vote to move boundary toward Attica, rewarded by Alexander, 248, VII. 326; II. 274; 278; denounced Thebans to Alexander, VII. 254
- Plato, philosopher, adopted Lycurgus' design for a civil polity, I. 300; thought earth in secondary space, 344; sold oil in Egypt to make expenses, 408; says Solon abandoned work on story of lost Atlantis on account of old age, 494; began story of lost Atlantis, 496; gave performance of singing and dancing boys, II. 212, VI. 34; asked to write for Cyrene, makes oracular reply, II. 474; abused by Timæus, III. 210; brought philosophy into good repute, 290; had tendency to melancholy according to Aristotle, IV. 236; admired poetry of Antimachus of Colophon, 282; opposed use of mechanical illustrations to assist geometry, V. 470 f.; had Dion as immediate disciple, VI. 2; how treated in Sicily by Dionysius the Elder, 8; how by Dionysius the Younger, 26; kept Dion with him in the Academy, 32; his last visit to Syracuse, 36; wrote letter to Dionysius the Younger about treatment of Dion's wife, 42; refuses to help Dion in war against Dionysius the Younger, 44; 110; censures Dion for choosing men who proved his ruin, 252; dead when Dionysius came to Corinth, 296; taught Demosthenes according to Hermippus, VII. 12; praised by Cicero, 140; VIII. 152; says great natures exhibit great vices as well as great virtues, IX. 4; 78; his advice to Xenocrates, 466; his death-bed words, 594
- Alcibiades, (112) IV. 2, (122b) I. 256
- Epistles, VI. 252; Epist. IV. (320) VI. 110, (ad fin.) IV. 152, 224, VI. 16
- Epist. VII. (327) VI. 8, (328) 22, (346) 36, (349f.) 40
- Gorgias (464) IX. 200, (518f, 526) II. 292

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Laws (630d) I. 288, (691e) I. 218, 330, (692a) I. 224, (706b) II. 12, X. 292 Menexenus, III. 70
 Meno (93) II. 86
 On the Soul, read by Cato just before his death, VIII. 400
 Phaedrus (254a) IX. 216, (255) IV. 12, (270a) III. 22, (271c) III. 48
 Phaedo (68d) I. 188
 Republic (363) II. 612, (376c) XI. 206, (426e) X. 244, (458d) I. 248, (473d) VII. 216, (475b) 84, (487e) I. 374, (557d) VI. 112, (562c) III. 20
 Symposium (179a) v. 384, (215) II. 320
 Timaeus (37c) I. 292
 Plato, comic poet, IX. 296; (Kock I. 651) II. 90; (Kock I. 654) III. 248, IV. 30; (Kock I. 655) III. 10
 Plebians, their complaints about money-lenders, and secession, IV. 126; unrest among them after Volscian war owing to scarcity of food and money, 144; angry when Coriolanus and other senators oppose free distribution of grain sent by Syracuse, 154; 184; get permission to elect one of consuls from their own body, II. 202, 204; one censor plebeian, 346
 Pleistarchus, brother of Cassander, receives Cilicia after defeat of Antigonus, goes to see Seleucus, IX. 76
 Pleistinus, brother of Faustulus, fell in battle between Romulus and Remus, I. 116
 Pleistoanax, king of Sparta, son of Pausanias, father of Pausanias, X. 8; invades Attica, but is bribed to withdraw, fined and goes into exile, III. 64; Saying, I. 268
 Plemmyrium, captured from Athenians by Gylippus, III. 278
 Plotius, accused Licinia the Vestal and Crassus, III. 314
 Plutarch, Eretrian, asks help of Athens against Philip, defeated and driven from Eretria by Phocion, VIII. 170 f.
 Plutarch, our, had intimate friend, Themistocles of Athens, attended school of Ammonius, the philosopher, II. 90; native of Chaeroneia, VII. 44; IV. 378 f.; visits Rome and acquires the language, VII. 4; saw marble statue of Marius at Ravenna in Gaul, IX. 466; visited scene of battle between Otho and Vitellius, XI. 308; saw tomb of Otho at Brixillum, 316
 Works cited:—
 Life of Aratus, X. 276; of Demosthenes and Cicero in 5th book, VII. 6; of Dion in 12th book, VI. 6; of Lysander, III. 66; of Metellus, IX. 546; of Pericles and Fabius Maximus, III. 6; of Timoleon, VI. 122
 On Days, II. 138
 Roman Questions, II. 140
 Sayings: I. 180, 362, 376, 396, 398, 418, 460, 570, II. 110, 228, 316, 392 f., 398, 410, 490, III. 2 f., 14, 54, 112, 152, 202, 214, 318, 386, 426, 428, 434, 436, IV. 120, 212, 252, 446 f., 450, v. 106, 312, 344, VII. 44, VIII. 344, IX. 476 f., 520, 596, X. 2, 52, 168, 240, 248 f., 278 f., 352, 384 f., XI. 4, 24, 106, 186 f., 196
 Pluto, sacrificed to, by Publicola, I. 556
 Plutus, blind and lifeless at Sparta, I. 232 Plynteria, see "Athena."
 Pnyx, at Athens, had bema, II. 54; I. 60 f.; III. 232
 Po, river, v. 446; crossed by Marius, IX. 526; battle there between Caecina and Otho's men, XI. 298 f.
 Poets, nameless, cited, II. 222; 420; 460; 472; 506; (Kock III. 493), III. 432; IV. 10, v. 414; IV. 326; (Nauck³ 921), 454; (Bergk III⁴. 622), v. 38; (Kock III. 484), 254; (Kock II. 80. 128), VII. 22; (Nauck³ 911), 150; 378; (Nauck³ 921), IX. 318
 Polemarchus, at Sparta fine Agis, I. 238; at Athens chosen by lot, III. 26; at Thebes, v. 66, 354
 Polemon, strives for chief command under Eumenes, VIII. 103
 Polemon, cited, I. 190
 Polemon, topographer, cited, XI. 28
 Polemon, king, taken prisoner by

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Parthians, IX. 224; sent army from Pontus to Antony, 276
- "Poliorketes," title of tyrants, II. 228; surname of Demetrius, IX. 106
- Pollichus, goes to rescue his nephew Heracleides, III. 292
- Pollio, sole remaining prefect of Otho's soldiers, orders them to swear allegiance to Vitellius, XI. 318
- Pollio, Asinius, see "Asinius Pollio."
- Pollis, Spartan, sold Plato as slave in Aegina, VI. 10
- Pollux, see "Castor" and "Dioscuri."
- Polus, Aeginetan, pupil of Archias, VII. 70
- Polyaenus, fought always at side of Philopoemen, X. 282
- Polyalces, ambassador from Sparta to Athens, III. 86
- Polyarchus, Aeginetan, charges Athenians with fortifying their city, II. 52
- Polybius, son of Achaean general Lycortas, friend of Philopoemen, X. 314 f.; gets Scipio's aid in securing return of Achaean exiles, II. 326; VI. 134
Cited: II. 330, v. 380, 524, VI. 404, X. 152, 300 Histories (II. 47, 4 f.) XI. 88, (II. 64, 1) X. 106, (II. 65, 2 & 7) 114, (XXIX) VI. 392, 394
- Polycleitus (1), made statue of Hera at Argos, III. 4
- Polycleitus (2), cited, VII. 356
- Polycleitus (3), adherent of Nero, executed by Galba, XI. 240
- Polycrates (1), tyrant, III. 76; imitated by Lysander in his disregard for oaths, IV. 252
- Polycrates (2), descendant of Aratus and friend of Plutarch, XI. 2 f.
- Polycrates (3), son of Polycrates, XI. 4
- Polycratidas, one of embassy sent to generals of Persian king, quoted, I. 282
- Polycrité, daughter of Lysimachus, voted public maintenance, II. 296
- Polycritus, physician at court of Artaxerxes, XI. 176
- Polydectes, half-brother of Lycurgus, I. 206; died soon after ascending throne, leaving it to Lycurgus, 208; had posthumous son Charilaüs, I. 210; his widow plots against Lycurgus, 212
- Polydorus, king of Sparta, with his colleague Theopompus inserted clause in rhetra of Lycurgus, I. 222; said to have added some lots to those distributed by Lycurgus, 228
- Polyeuctus (1), son of Themistocles and Archippé, II. 86
- Polyeuctus (2), Sphettian, contrasts Demosthenes and Phocion as speakers, VII. 24, VIII. 154; VII. 32; counsels Athenians to go to war with Phillip, VIII. 154; demanded by Alexander, VII. 56
- Polygnotus, painter, his relations with Elpinicé, II. 414
- Polygnotus, tower of, XI. 12 f.
- Polyidus, Plataean hero, II. 246
- Polymachus, of Pella, executed by Alexander for rifling tomb of Cyrus, VII. 416
- Polymedes, father of Glaucus, VIII. 172
- Polyphron, uncle of Alexander of Pherae, slain by him, v. 412
- Polysperchon, with Leptines, puts Callipus to death, VI. 122
- Polysperchon, appointed general-in-chief by Antipater before dying, VIII. 216; quarrels with Cassander after death of Antipater, 114; orders Eumenes to wage war on Antigonus and take 500 talents of treasure at Quinda, 116; plots against Phocion, 216; father of Alexander, 220, IX. 22; has Deinarchus of Corinth executed, refuses to hear Phocion, VIII. 222; good general according to Pyrrhus, IX. 366
- Polystratus, witnesses death of Dareius, VII. 350
- Polyxenus, husband of Thesté, became enemy of Dionysius the Elder, VI. 42
- Polyzelus, Rhodian, cited, I. 446
- Pomaxathres, Parthian, slew Crassus, III. 416, 422
- Pomentinum, city of Italy with marshes near it, VII. 578
- "Pomerium," its etymology, I. 118
- Pompaedius Silo, leader of Latin

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

allies in their effort to obtain Roman citizenship, VIII. 238; challenged Marius to battle, IX. 554

Pompeia, Caesar's third wife, VII. 452; loved by Clodius, 462; divorced by Caesar, 152, 466

"Pompeii," name common to family, IX. 464

Pompeii, Cicero had farm near it, VII. 100

Pompeius, neighbour of Ti. Gracchus, said Eudemus of Pergamum gave Ti. Gracchus royal diadem and purple robe, X. 176

Pompeius, Aulus, tribune of people, called Bataces impostor and died within week, IX. 508

Pompeius, Gnaeus, elder son of Pompey, sent to Syria by his father to raise a fleet, V. 278; enraged at Cicero after Pharsalus, VII. 180, VIII. 370; enamoured of Cleopatra, IX. 192

Pompeius, Sextus, younger son of Pompey, tells Cato of Pompey's death, VIII. 370; supported by Spain, 382; holding Sicily and ravaging Italy, makes peace with Octavius and Antony, IX. 206; attacked by Octavius, 216; driven from Sicily by him, 262

Pompeius Rufus, Q., consul with Sulla, IV. 342; his son slain by Sulpicius' mob, escapes himself, 350

Pompeius Sextus, Strabo, Gnaeus, father of Pompey, able soldier, hated for his greed, V. 116; arrayed against Cinna, saved from mutinous troops by his son, 122

Pompey, son of Strabo, loved by people, his character, V. 116 f.; saved his father Strabo from mutinous soldiers, tried for theft of public property on his father's death, 122; wins favour with his judge, the praetor Antistius, becomes engaged to his daughter, is acquitted, 124; married Antistia, 126; when 23 raises force pre-arranged to joining Sulla, 128; defeats various enemies, 130; is saluted as "Imperator" by Sulla, sent to Gaul to help Metellus, 132; divorces Antistia and marries Acmlia, step-daughter of Sulla,

134; sent against Marians in Sicily, executes Carbo and Q. Valerius, 136 f.; sent by Sulla against Domitius in Africa, 140; defeats and slays Domitius, 142; captures Iampsas and gives his kingdom to Hiempsal, subdues Africa within 40 days, 144; on his return greeted as "Magnus" by Sulla, 146; allowed to have triumph, 148

Is left out of Sulla's will, appointed general against Lepidus, 152; has Brutus, father of the Brutus who killed Caesar, slain, 154; goes to Spain to help Metellus against Sertorius, 156; fights drawn battle with him, 160; after death of Sertorius completely defeats Perpenna, 162; returning from Spain defeats remnant of Spartacus' force, 164; receives 2nd triumph and consulship, 166; in constant collision with his colleague Crassus, 168; given command against pirates by Gabinian law, 176 f.; clears Tyrrhenian and Libyan seas and sea about Sardinia, Corsica, and Sicily in 40 days, 182; drives all piracy from the sea in less than 3 months, 186; treats Metellus in Crete unfairly, 188; given command against Mithridates by Manilian law, 190 f.; meets Lucullus in Galatia, 194; defeats Mithridates near Euphrates river, 200; invades Armenia, 202; defeats Albanians and Iberians about Caucasus mountains, 206 f.; in fortress of Caenum found and read private documents of Mithridates, 212; marches toward Petra, 220; receives news of death of Mithridates, 222; while returning visits Athens and donates 50 talents toward its restoration, 224; divorces Mucia, disbands his army, 226

Attempts to win Cato by marriage alliance, 228; celebrates triumph, 230; begins to lose reputation from this time, 232; refuses to help Cicero threatened with exile, 234; lends his support to Caesar the consul and marries

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

his daughter Julia, 236 f.; with Caesar's help gets his enactments ratified which Lucullus contested, 238; opposed by Clodius, 240; assists in recall of Cicero and by him is reconciled to senate, 242 f.; is given direction of navigation and agriculture, 244; secures abundance of grain for the city, 246; has understanding with Caesar and Crassus at Luca, 248; elected consul with Crassus, with his help introduces laws giving Caesar his provinces for 5 more years, giving Crassus Syria and the expedition against the Parthians, and giving himself Africa, both Spains, and 4 legions, 250

Loses his wife Julia, learns of Crassus' death, 254; elected sole consul, 258; marries Cornelia, daughter of Metellus Scipio, 260; is to retain his provinces another 4 years and receive 1000 talents yearly to maintain his soldiers, 262; demands his 2 legions back from Caesar, recovers from dangerous illness, 264; receives his 2 legions from Caesar, becomes filled with confidence in his power to suppress Caesar, 266; is commanded by the consuls to levy recruits but has difficulty in securing them, 270; issues edict recognizing state of civil war and ordering all the senators to follow him, 276; crosses from Brundisium to Dyrrhachium, 278; gathers great force and has irresistible navy, 280; refuses Caesar's offer of peace, routs his army but fails to take advantage of the victory, 284; pursues Caesar, 288; is forced by his friends to offer battle to Caesar, 290; is defeated by Caesar at Pharsalus, 292 f.; flees from the field of battle, 304; is joined by his wife Cornelia, 310; sails to Pelusium in Egypt, 316; is murdered by Ptolemy's agents, 322; his death avenged by Caesar, 324

See also II. 140, 472, 484 f., 582, 588 f., 594 f., 606, III. 328 f., 348 f., 428 f., IV. 418, 430 f., 442, 448, VI. 132, 136, 190, 198, 252, VII. 102 f., 114, 124, 158, 160, 166, 170, 176 f., 194, 468, 472 f., 478, 494, 500 f., 510, 514 f., 524, 528, 538 f., 548 f., VIII. 4, 32, 48 f., 58, 72, 140, 264, 306 f., 332 f., 340, 344 f., 352, 366 f., 382, IX. 148, 152, 160, 180

Quoted: II. 600, v. 120, 136, 164, 192, 304, 310

Pompeia, only daughter of Numa and Tatia, I. 376; married Marcius, 378

Pompon (1), father of Numa Pompius, I. 314

Pompon (2), son of Numa, ancestor of Pomponii, I. 376

Pomponia, wife of Q. Cicero, inflicts terrible punishment upon Philologus, VII. 208

Pomponii, descended from Pompon, son of Numa, I. 376

Pomponius (1), praetor, announces defeat at Thrasymenté, III. 126

Pomponius (2), companion of C. Gracchus, killed at wooden bridge, X. 234

Pomponius (3), spared by Mithridates, II. 514

Pontic kings, line of, founded by Mithridates, ended by Romans, IX. 12

Pontifex Maximus, his duties, I. 338, 342 f.; Antony, IX. 208; Caesar, VII. 456; P. Licinius Crassus Dives, III. 192; P. L. Crassus Dives Mucianus, X. 162; Metellus Pius, IV. 342, VII. 456; Nasica, X. 194

Pontifices, ascribed to Numa, why so called, I. 336; their duties, 346

Pontius, his servant gives inspired message to Sulla, IV. 412

Pontius Cominius, see "Cominius, Pontius."

"Pontius Glaucus," poem by Cicero when a boy, VII. 84

Pontus, II. 294; held by son of Mithridates, IV. 358; II. 494; 508; ravaged by Lucullus, 510; invaded by Lucullus again, 542; men sent from Rome to regulate its affairs, 586; invaded by Pompey, VII. 106; triumphed over by Pompey, v. 230; freed of Romans by Pharnaces, freed of Pharnaces by Caesar, VII. 560

Popilius, O., defeated by Caesar as

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- candidate for military tribuneship, VII. 450
- Popilius Laenas, alarms Brutus and Cassius by his words, VI. 158
- Popillius, as praetor had banished friends of Ti. Gracchus, flees from Italy, X. 206
- Popillius, military tribune, once when charged with parricide defended by Cicero, is one of his assassins, VII. 204 f.
- Poppaea, wife of Crispinus, her acts, XI. 246 f.
- "Poppaea," name given Sporus by Nymphidius Sabinus, XI. 224
- "Populus," name given to those not in the legions, I. 122
- Porcia (1), sister of Cato the Younger, wife of Lucius Domitius, VIII. 236, 332
- Porcia (2), daughter of Cato the Younger and wife of Bibulus, to whom she bore 2 sons, VIII. 292; mother of Bibulus, VI. 176; cousin and wife of Brutus, insists upon sharing his secret, 152, VIII. 410; VI. 158; manner and time of her death, 246
- "Porcius," derived from "porcus," I. 532
- Porsena, Lars, declares war on Rome when she refuses to restore Tarquin to throne, I. 542; checked at bridge by Horatius and his 2 companions, 544; releases Mucius, who tried to kill him, 546 f.; makes peace with Rome on conditions, 550; honours Cloelia, 552; in retiring left his supplies behind for Romans, 554, 574; bronze statue of him near senate-house, 554
- Porsena's goods cried first, I. 554
- Porus, Indian king, defeated and captured by Alexander, restored to his kingdom and given title of satrap, VII. 394 f.; quoted, 398
- Poseidon, Athenian month, corresponds nearly to January, VII. 532
- Poseidon, patron god of Troezen, reputed father of Theseus, I. 12; Isthmian games in his honour instituted by Theseus, 56; honoured on 8th day of every month, 84; called Securer and Earth-stayer, 86; contends with Athena for Athens, II. 54; v. 8; temples of, at the Isthmus, at Taenarum, at Calauria, plundered by pirates, 174; VII. 70; X. 36
- Poseidonius, tells of his discourse at Rhodes before Pompey against Hermagoras the rhetorician, V. 224; wrote history of Perseus in several books, excuses king for retiring from battle of Pydna, VI. 404 f.; taught Cicero philosophy, VII. 90
- Cited: v. 436, 458, 488 f., 520, VI. 128, 412, IX. 464, 592 f.
- Posidonia, Astyphilus of, II. 460
- Postuma, daughter of Sulla and Valeria, why the name, IV. 442
- Postumius, soothsayer, tells Sulla the omens are good, IV. 352
- Postumius, Livius, led Latin army against Rome, I. 184
- Postumius, Spurius, rival of Ti. Gracchus, X. 162
- Postumius Tubertus (1), made consul along with M. Valerius, I. 554
- Postumius Tubertus (2), as dictator fought Aequians and Volscians, II. 96
- Postumus, surname of child born after father's death, IV. 142
- Potamon, Lesbian, according to Sotion told of Alexander founding city in memory of his dog Peritas, VII. 398
- Potamus, place in Attica, II. 298
- Potheinus, eunuch, managed Ptolemy's affairs, called council of influential men to decide on fate of Pompey, V. 316, VII. 556; drove out Cleopatra, plotted against Caesar, 556; put to death by Caesar, 558, v. 324
- Potheinus, official under Cleopatra, IX. 274
- Potidaea, colony of Corinth, revolts from Athens, III. 84; campaign against, IV. 18; taken by Philip at time of Alexander's birth, VII. 230
- Potitus, Valerius, sent to consult oracle at Delphi about Alban lake, II. 102
- Praecia, controls Cethegus and thus secures Cilicia for Lucullus, II. 488
- Praeneste, IV. 416; younger Marius besieged there, 418; its inhabitants slaughtered by Sulla, 428, IX. 598

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Prænestines, with Volscians make war on Rome, II. 190
- Praesli, their kings said to be waiting for Alexander on banks of Ganges with large forces, revere altars left by him, VII. 400
- Praetor, in Macedonia in time of Lucullus, but Greece had none yet, II. 408; usually granted accused 10 days in which to make defence, VII. 104
- Praetors: C. Antonius, IX. 170; Antistius, V. 124; Brutus and Cassius, VII. 574; Brutus and Servilius, IV. 350; C. Caesar, VII. 138, 462, VIII. 298; Cato the Younger, 340; Cicero, VII. 102; Clodius, III. 336; Didius, in Spain, VIII. 6; Cornelius Lentulus 2nd time, VII. 122, 126; Lepidus, IX. 152; M. Lucullus, of Macedonia, VII. 448; Marius, IX. 472; M. Otho, VII. 112; Aemilius Paulus with 12 victors, VI. 362; Petilius, I. 380; Pomponius, III. 126; Rubrius, VIII. 254; Salonius, II. 384; Sulla, IV. 334; C. Sulpicius, VII. 126; P. Varinus, III. 338; Vatinius, V. 250; C. Vergilius, VII. 164; Verres, 98; Vetus, in Spain, 452
- Pranichus, poet, VII. 368
- Praxagoras, advises Neapolitans to offer sacrifices for Pompey's recovery, V. 264
- Praxiergidae, celebrate the rites of the Plynteria of Athens, IV. 98
- Prayer, Pythagoreans do not allow men to offer it cursorily, I. 354; after praying Roman turned to right, II. 106
- Priapus, Artemis of, II. 510
- Prices, II. 510, IV. 366, IX. 242, X. 148, 360 f., XI. 184
- Priené, bone of contention between Samians and Milesians, III. 72; assigned by Antony as place for dramatic artists to dwell in, IX. 266
- Priestess, Pythian, IV. 304
- Prima, daughter of Hersilia and Romulus, I. 130
- "Principia," Roman word for general's quarters, XI. 228
- "Priscus," original cognomen of Cato the Elder, II. 302
- Priscus, Helvidius, see "Helvidius Priscus."
- Prisoners, exchange of, between Fabius and Hannibal, III. 140
- Proauga, daughter of Agesilatis, v. 52
- Procles, Spartan king, son of Aristodemus and father of Solis, v. 52
- Proconnesus, Aristeas of, I. 178
- Procrustes, slain by Theseus, I. 188
- Procleius, bidden by Octavius to get Cleopatra alive, does so by ruse IX. 314
- Proculus, prefect of guards sent by Otho to army with full authority, XI. 294; leads troops out of Bedriacum for battle, 300; 304
- "Proculus," surname of child born in absence of father from home, IV. 142
- Proculus, Julius, by his story of seeing Romulus ascending to heaven quiets people, I. 176, 310; favourite of Romans, sent to invite Numa to accept the throne, 320
- Prodigies: I. 166, 176 f., 180, 308, 534, II. 98, 126, 168, 452, 460 f., 496, 500, 548, III. 14, 100, 122 f., 244, 254, 288, 372 f., IV. 48, 210, 260 f., 340, 344, V. 180, 420, 442, 512, 516, VI. 48 f., 82, 210 f., 234, 276 f., 290, 398, 418, VII. 130, 164, 204, 260, 300 f., 324, 386 f., 588 f., 604 f., VIII. 208, IX. 274, 308, 450, 508, 572, X. 140, 184 f., 220, 352, XI. 100
- "Prodikoi," name given by Spartans to guardians of fatherless kings, I. 210
- Promachus, won prize by drinking 4 pitchers of wine, VII. 418
- "Promanteia," meaning of word, secured for Athenians by Pericles, III. 64
- Promathion, compiler of history of Italy, cited, I. 96
- Property, III. 204, 218, 316, IV. 12, 280, V. 50, 120
- Prophantus, brother of Cleinias, XI. 6
- Propontis, to be guarded by Cotta, II. 490
- Propylaea, of acropolis, Mnesicles its architect, III. 42 f.
- Proscription, III. 330, IV. 426 f.
- Prosecoa, temple of Artemis, II. 24
- Proserpina, possibly same as Libitina,

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- I. 346; VI. 118; 276. See also "Cora" and "Persephoné."
- Prosper, see "Eutychus."
- Ἰππὸς τοῦς ἐραίπους, speech of Andocides, II. 88
- Protagoras, in discussion with Pericles, III. 104; exiled, 290
- Proteas, boon companion, forgiven by Alexander, VII. 340
- Prothoüs, opposes expedition against Thebes, V. 78
- Prothytes, her surrender demanded of Thebans by Alexander, VII. 252
- Protis, merchant, popular with Gauls, founded Marseilles, I. 408
- Protogenes, Caunian, made painting for Rhodians illustrating story of Ialysus, captured by Demetrius, IX. 50
- Protus, Dion's pilot, VI. 52
- Proverbs: I. 66, II. 540, III. 238, 246, IV. 64, 286, 448, V. 318, VI. 322, 416, VII. 6, 318, VIII. 102, X. 110, 244, XI. 2, 160, 194, 208
- Provinces, extravagance of governors, II. 320; 484; 488
- Proxenus, Macedonian, uncovers spring of oily liquid near river Oxus, VII. 386 f.
- Prusias, in Bithynia, harboured Hannibal, asked by Flamininus to give him up, X. 378
- Prytaneium, I. 456; in Plutarch's time preserved some of Solon's tables of law, I. 472; VII. 76
- Prytanis, I. 456
- Prytanis, father of Lycurgus and Eunomus, I. 206
- Psammon, philosopher, heard by Alexander in Egypt, VII. 304
- Psenophis, of Heliopolis, learned Egyptian priest with whom Solon studied, I. 476
- Psiltucis (or Scillustis) island in Indian ocean marking limit of Alexander's expedition, VII. 410
- Psyché, wife of Marphadates, VIII. 408
- Psylli, Libyan people who charmed snakes, VIII. 372
- Psyttaleia, small island in front of Salamis, II. 238
- Ptoceodorus, Megarian, visited by Dion, VI. 34
- Ptolemaeus (1), eunuch of Mithridates, II. 522
- Ptolemaeus (2), encourages Otho by his prediction, XI. 256
- Ptolemais, daughter of Ptolemy and Eurydicé, married to Demetrius, IX. 78, 116; mother of ruler of Cyrené, 134
- Ptolemy (1), at war with Alexander, king of Macedonia, slew him and succeeded to throne, made peace with Pelopidas, V. 404 f.
- Ptolemy (2), nephew of Antigonus, given as hostage to Eumenes, VIII. 108 f.
- Ptolemy (3), son of Pyrrhus and Antigóné, IX. 360, 368; repulsed by Acrotatus, 440; slain in battle by Oryssus, 446 f.
- Ptolemy (4), son of Chrysermus, friend of King Ptolemy but treacherous toward Cleomenes, X. 130; slain by Cleomenes, 134
- Ptolemy (5), in charge of Alexandria under King Ptolemy, slain by Cleomenes, X. 134
- Ptolemy (6), king of Cyprus, opposed by Cato, slew himself, VI. 130, VIII. 322
- Ptolemy (7), son of Antony and Cleopatra, given Phoenicia, Syria, and Cilicia, IX. 262
- Ptolemy Auletes, flees from Egypt, seeks Roman aid, V. 244 f.; receives kindness from Pompey, 314; disregards Cato's advice not to go to Rome, VIII. 320; bribes Gabinius to help him recover Egypt, IX. 142; prevented by Antony from putting people of Pelusium to death, 144
- Ptolemy Ceraunus, with army perished at hands of Gauls, IX. 416
- Ptolemy Dionysius, indebted to Pompey, V. 314; makes war on his sister at Pelusium, 316; defeated by Caesar, disappears, 324
- Ptolemy Euergetes, X. 16; made ally of Achaeans, XI. 54; sent Aratus 6 talents a year, 96, X. 92; 98 f.; receives Cleomenes kindly, gives him pension of 24 talents, dies before sending him back to Sparta, 122; 274
- Ptolemy Lathyrus, gives royal welcome to Lucullus, but out of fear

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- of Mithridates abandons alliance with Rome, II. 476; IV. 142
- Ptolemy Philadelphus, to help Aratus get back to Sicyon, XI. 10; receives paintings from him, 28; gives Aratus 150 talents for Sicyon, 30, 32 f.
- Ptolemy Philometor (?) X. 146
- Ptolemy Philopator, his character and treatment of Cleomenes, X. 124 f.; 128; has Cleomenes imprisoned, 130; 132; has mother and children of Cleomenes executed, 136; 140; 290; built a ship with 40 banks of oars, IX. 108
- Ptolemy Soter, son of Lagus, companion of Alexander, banished from Macedonia by Philip, VII. 250; received Apama, sister of Barsiné, from Alexander, VIII. 80; threatened with attack by Perdicaas, 90; defeated Demetrius in Syria near Gaza, his general Cilles defeated by Demetrius, IX. 12 f.; had more than one wife, 338; besieged Halicarnassus, with Cassander had subdued all Greece, 18; defeated by Demetrius in Cyprus, 36 f., 336; given title of king, 40, VII. 336; unsuccessfully attacked by Antigonus and Demetrius, IX. 42; 60; marries one daughter to Lysimachus and one to the latter's son Agathocles, 76; marries his daughter Ptolemais to Demetrius and makes peace with him, 78, 116, 354; marries his daughter Antigone to Pyrrhus, his hostage, 356; sends 150 ships to assist Athenians against Demetrius, 82, 360; takes Cyprus, excepting Salamis, from Demetrius, 86; 360; leagued with Seleucus and Lysimachus against Demetrius, sails to solicit Greek cities to revolt, 108 f., 374
- Cited: VII. 356
- Ptoim, mountain near temple of Apollo Tegyraeus, v. 378
- Publicius Bibulus, tribune of the plebs, impeaches Marcellus but fails, v. 510
- Public land, allotment of, by Pericles, III. 24
- Publicola, L. Gellius, with Antony had right wing at Actium, IX. 284 f.
- Publicola, P. Valerius, his lineage, his eloquence and wealth, I. 502; disappointed at not being elected as one of first two consuls, withdraws from public life, 504; takes oath not to submit to Tarquins, 506; brings to justice two sons of Brutus, the consul, for conspiracy to restore Tarquins, 508 f.; protects Vindicius, who revealed the plot to him, 516; elected consul, has Vindicius rewarded, 518; celebrates triumph over Tuscans, first consul to drive into city on a four-horse chariot, 138, 524; takes measures to remove his unpopularity with the people, 526 f.; uses his sole authority to have various important measures passed, 530 f.; has first Lucretius, then M. Horatius as his colleague in consulship, 534; is anxious to dedicate new temple of Jupiter Capitolinus, 536
- Chosen consul 2nd time with T. Lucretius as his colleague to resist Lars Porsena, 542; is wounded in battle with Porsena, proposes honour for Horatius Cocles, 544; consul 3rd time, defeats Tuscan army, 546; makes Porsena arbitrator in dispute with Tarquin and concludes peace with him, 548 f.; sends Cloelia and the other maidens back to Porsena, 550; advises and assists consuls in repelling attack of Sabines, 554; consul 4th time, induces Appius Claudius, a Sabine to move with many friends to Rome, 556 f.; defeats Sabines, 560; celebrates triumph and dies, 562, IV. 200
- Quoted: I. 558
- Publicolae, trace descent to Valerius Publicola, I. 566
- Publius, stole Mithridates' sword-belt, punished by Pharnaces, v. 224
- Publius Silo, see "Pompaedius Silo."
- Pulytion, played part of Torch-bearer when Alcibiades profaned mysteries, IV. 48, 60
- Punishment, II. 282, 516 f., 532, III. 342
- Puteoli, see "Dicaearchia."
- Pyaneption, month of, I. 46, 84, VII. 70, 76

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Pydna, II. 68, VI. 396; battle of, 398 f.
- Pyldes, minstrel at Nemean games, X. 284
- Pythagorae, delegates to Amphictyonic conventions, II. 56
- Pylius, adopted Hercules, I. 78
- Pylos, fortified by Demosthenes, attacked by Peloponnesians, III. 230, 232; Spartans captured there, 234, 238, 244, IV. 32
- Pyramia, in district of Thyreatis; near It Danatis first landed in country, IX. 454
- Pyrenees, II. 126
- Pyrrhampes, comrade of Hercules, III. 44
- Pyrrha, wife of Deucalion, IX. 346
- Pyrrhidae, line of kings descended from Neoptolemus, IX. 346
- "Pyrrhus," surname of Neoptolemus, IX. 346
- Pyrrhus, son of Neoptolemus and Lanassa, IX. 346
- Pyrrhus, son of Aeacides and Phthia, his lineage, IX. 346 f.; as infant given asylum by Glaucias, king of Illyrians, 348 f.; when 12 years old restored to throne of Epeirus by Glaucias, when 17 driven from throne, joins Demetrius, fights at Ipsus, 352 f.; goes to Egypt as hostage for Demetrius, 354; marries Antigone, daughter of Berenicé, returns to Epeirus, 356; slays Neoptolemus, who shared throne, adds to his territory, 360; quarrels with Demetrius, 362; defeats his general Pantauchus, 100 f., 364; his ranking as a general, 102, 366, X. 382; marries several wives after death of Antigone, IX. 368; overran Macedonia, 370; makes agreement with Demetrius, 372; takes Beroea, 110, 374; proclaimed king of Macedonia, 112, 376; enters Athens, 378; driven from Macedonia by Lysimachus, 380
- Invited to Italy by Tarentines, 384; sends Cineas ahead to Tarentum with 3000 soldiers, then crosses himself, 388; defeats the Romans at Heracleia, 394 f.; sends Cineas to Rome with proposals of peace, 402; tries to corrupt Fabricius, 406; warned by Fabricius of danger from poison, 410; sends Cineas again to negotiate peace, defeats Romans at Asculum, 412 f.; invited to Sicily, defeats Carthaginians, 418; puts to death Thoenon, a Syracusan who had invited him to Sicily and incurs bitter hatred, 422; returns to Italy, 424; defeated by Romans at Beneventum, 426
- Returns to Epeirus and defeats Antigonus in Macedonia, 430; invited by Cleonymus to attack Sparta, 434 f.; repulsed from Sparta, 436 f.; loses his son Ptolemy, 448; enters Argos by night, is slain in street fighting, 450 f.
- See also*, II. 306, IX. 58, 74, 86, 98, 106, X. 380
- Sayings: IX. 370; 374; 386 f.; 394, X. 334; IX. 396; 416; 424; 432; 436
- Pythagoras (1), Olympic victor, said to have helped Numa arrange government of Rome, I. 306
- Pythagoras (2), said to have been intimate friend of Numa, said to have lived 5 generations after him, I. 306; why supposed to have influenced Numa, marvels told of him, 332; said first principle of being beyond sense or feeling, said to have been Roman citizen, 334; his statue in forum at Rome, 336; 380; educator of Numa and father of Mamercus, VI. 358
- Pythagoras (3), seer, questioned by Alexander, VII. 426
- Pythagorean philosophers, in Sicily, invite Plato, VI. 22
- Pythagoreans, place element fire in centre of universe and call it Vesta and Unit, I. 344; their precepts enumerated and compared with Numa's, 354 f.; why they do not entrust their precepts to writing, 380
- Pytheas, verbal encounter with Demosthenes, VII. 18, 210; Athenian orator, joins party of Antipater, 66; VIII. 190
- Pythian games, list of victors at, by Aristotle, I. 428; IV. 282; conducted by Demetrius at Athens, IX. 100

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Pythian priestess, approached by Lysander, IV. 304
 Pythium, VI. 392 f.
 Pythocleides, Pericles' music teacher, III. 10
 Pythocles (1), condemned to death with Phocion, VIII. 228
 Pythocles (2), son of Polycrates, XI. 4
 Pythodorus (1), waiting to seize Themistocles, II. 68
 Pythodorus (2), torch-bearer, opposes initiating Demetrius into mysteries irregularly, IX. 60
 Pytholaüs, Phebe's brother, helps slay Alexander of Pherae, V. 430
 Python, story of, associated with birth of Apollo near temple of Apollo Tegyraeus, V. 378
 Python, of Byzantium, answered by Demosthenes, VII. 20
 Python, with Seleucus sent to temple of Serapis to ask whether Alexander should be brought thither, VII. 434
 Python, flute-player, IX. 366
 Pythonicé, mistress of Harpalus, her tomb built by Charicles, VIII. 192
 Pythopolis, founded by Theseus where Soloüs, his friend, was drowned, I. 60
- Quadrans, to be contributed by each citizen toward expense of Publicola's funeral, I. 562; smallest copper coin, VII. 154
 Quadrantia, nickname of Clodia, VII. 154
 Quadrants, of Archimedes, V. 486
 Quaestors, introduced by Publicola, I. 532, 568
 Cato the Elder, II. 310; Cato the Younger, VIII. 268; Cicero, VII. 82, 94; Ti Gracchus, X. 152; Granus Petro, VII. 480; Cornelius Lentulus, 122; M. Lollius, VIII. 272; Marcellus, 276; Sertorius, 8; Sulla, IV. 328; Titius, IX. 234; P. Veturius and M. Minucius, I. 534
 Quinda, treasure there, VIII. 116, IX. 76
 Quinsy, VII. 62
 Quintilis, original name of July, I. 174, 370, II. 178, IV. 412
 Quintio, freedman of Cato the Elder, II. 366
- Quintius, L., see "Flamininus, L. Quintius." Quintus, officer of Crassus, defeated by Spartacus, III. 346
 Quintus, L., popular leader, quieted by Lucullus, II. 486; when praetor attacks Lucullus, 580
 Quirinalis, hill at Rome, named after Quirinus, I. 182; site of Numa's palace, 354
 Quirinus, name of Romulus deified, I. 178, 182, 310; temple of, II. 144
 "Quiris," ancient word for spear or spear-head, I. 182
 "Quirites," derived from "Cures," I. 150, 314
 "Quiritis," epithet applied to Juno, I. 182
 Quotations, anonymous: I. 48; 76; 78; 238; 240; 246; 248; 268; 270; 272; 284; 290; 374; 460; II. 12; 126; 220; 260; 280; 304; 460; 472; III. 20; 34 f.; 122; 196; 212; 368; 428; IV. 10, V. 414; IV. 64; 84; 280; 288; 326; 454; V. 102; 340; 430; VI. 144; 354; VII. 62; 150; VIII. 188; IX. 592; XI. 2
- Rain shower, dissolves assembly, X. 228
 Ramnenses, named from Romulus, one of 3 Roman tribes, I. 152
 Ransom, 250 drachmas per man, III. 142
 Rapax, legion of Vitellius, XI. 302
 Rations, Cato the Elder took 3 Attic bushels per month for himself and retinue, II. 318
 Ratumena, gate of Rome, I. 536
 Ravenna, in Gaul, has marble statue of Marius, IX. 466
 Records, of Athens, II. 226; of Sparta, V. 52
 Recreation, of Cato the Elder, II. 378
 Red Sea, II. 618, V. 214, IX. 296
 Regia, I. 146, 182; built by Numa near temple of Vesta, I. 354
 Regillus, lake, battle of, IV. 122
 Remonia, burial place of Remus, I. 118
 Remonium, afterwards called Rignarium, precinct on Aventine, laid out by Remus, I. 114

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Remus, account of his birth and early life, I. 102 f.; handed over to Numitor, believed to be child of Faustulus and Larentia, 106; laid out precinct on Aventine, first called Remonium, afterwards Rignarium, 114; slain by Romulus, or by Celer, 116, 194; with his foster-fathers buried in the Remonia, 118
- Rent, of public land, forced up by Cato the Elder when censor, II. 356
- Revenue, Athenian, from silver mines at Laureium, II. 10; embezzlement of, by Themistocles and others shown by Aristides, II. 220 f.; revenues from campaign given Athens by Cimon, 432; how farmers of, were held up by Alcibiades once, IV. 14; great revenue required on account of Rome's wars, II. 96; public revenues at Rome, 50,000,000 drachmas from taxes, 85,000,000 more added by Pompey, v. 230
- Revolt, of Thasians from Athens, II. 446; of Helots, 454
- Rex, Marcius, had Tertia, sister of Clodius to wife, VII. 154
- Rhadamanthus, judge under Minos, I. 32; believed to have once dwelt near Haliartus; husband of Alcmene after death of Amphitryon, IV. 312
- Rhamnus, Micion lands there, VIII. 200; captured by Demetrius, IX. 80; III. 226
- Rhamnus, freedman of Antony, takes oath to slay his master if asked, IX. 248
- Rhea (1), see "Ilia."
- Rhea (2), mother of Sertorius, greatly loved by him, VIII. 6, 62 f.
- Rhegium, in Italy, taken by Alcibiades, IV. 52; helps Timoleon outwit Carthaginians, VI. 282; 306; its garrison ordered by Fabius to overrun Bruttium and take Caulonia by storm, III. 182
- Rheneia, island very near Delos, III. 216
- Rhetoric, value of, exemplified by Pericles, III. 48 f.; taught by Aeschines in Rhodes and Ionia, VII. 60
- Rhetra, meaning of term, I. 220, 244; 224; 240; 242; v. 72
- Rhine, VII. 490; bridged and crossed by Caesar, 498
- Rhipaeon mountains, crossed by Gauls, II. 126
- Rhodes, III. 56; Aeschines taught Rhetoric there, VII. 60; gave Alexander belt made by Helicon, VII. 322; ally of Ptolemy, warred on by Demetrius, IX. 48; makes terms with Demetrius, 52; gave Lucullus ships, II. 478; visited by Caesar for study, VII. 446; visited by Pompey, v. 224; visited by Cicero, VII. 90, 174; lost its fleet, 178; taken by Cassius, VI. 192
- Rhodogune, daughter of Artaxerxes, married to Orontes, XI. 192
- Rhoemetaces, Thracian, Caesar's words regarding him, I. 140
- Rhoesaces (1), story of his experience with Cimon, II. 436
- Rhoesaces (2), Persian commander, slain by Alexander, VII. 266
- Rhoeteium, X. 102
- Rhomboid, in Megara, I. 64
- Rhone, canal run along its mouth by Marius, IX. 500
- "Rhopoperperethras," name given Demosthenes by one of Comic poets, VII. 22
- Rhosus, scene of meeting between Seleucus and Demetrius, IX. 76
- Rhus, in Megara, I. 64
- Rhyndacus, river, defeat of part of Mithridates' forces by Lucullus there, II. 504
- Rhyntaces, a little Persian bird, XI. 170
- Riddle, many owls sleeping under tiling, IV. 276
- Right, of selling children restricted by Numa, I. 366; of appeal by defendant to people introduced by Publícola, of appeal by defendant to jurors introduced by Solon, 568; of three children, see "Jus trium liberorum."
- Rignarium, see "Remonium."
- Rites, at Sparta in commemoration of incident at Plataea, II. 266; performed by Athenians in month Anthesterion in commemoration of the deluge, IV. 372; Orphic, practised by Macedonian women, VII. 226 f.; of Mithras, celebrated at

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Olympia by pirates, v. 174; care with which Romans performed sacred rites, iv. 180; mysterious rites at Rome in month of November, v. 442. See also "Funeral rites" and "Marriage."
- Roads, built by O. Gracchus, x. 212; of Italy, all end at gilded column in Forum, xi. 260
- Roma (1), woman who gave her name to city, i. 90; married Latinus, son of Telemachus, and bore him Romulus, 92
- Roma (2), daughter of Italus and Leucaria, or of Telephus, son of Heracles, married Aeneas, or Ascanius, and gave her name to city, i. 92
- Roma Quadrata, built by Romulus, i. 114
- Romans, why they honour second Larentia, i. 100; waged war on Sabines, 132; style of armour adopted from Sabines, 154; feared by neighbours, 168; nominated the Sabine, Numa Pompilius, as king, 312; distracted by pestilence, 350; increased in power after forsaking institutions of Numa, 398; conquered Tarquins and Latins, vi. 420; afflicted by famine, i. 546; defeat Sabines and Latins, 556 f.; could not by its vote enact a law without a previous decree of Senate, iv. 188; agree to pay 1000 lbs. of gold to get rid of Gauls, ii. 164; wish to move to Veii, but finally decide to stay where they are, 170 f.; at war with Tarentum, ix. 382; under Laevinus defeated by Pyrrhus near Heracleia, 394 f.; refuse to make peace with Pyrrhus, 412; lose 6000 men at Asculum according to Hieronymus, 414; after Beneventum get control of Italy and Sicily, 428; wage war on Ligurians, iii. 120; wage war on Gauls, v. 440; bury alive 2 Greeks and 2 Gauls in Forum, 442; send bowl to Delphi to celebrate victory over Gauls, 456; refuse to ransom prisoners after Cannae, and banish those who fled to Sicily, 466 f.; with Achaeans wage war on Nabis, x. 292; defeat Antiochus, then give closer attention to affairs of Greece, vi. 362, x. 302, 364; character changed by conquests, ii. 314; at war with Philip V., x. 324; wage war with Perseus, subdue Macedonia, vi. 370, ix. 134; vi. 452; registered by Aemilius Paulus and Marcus Philippus, the censors, 454; how they punished those who accepted terms from the enemy, x. 156 f.; how they treated the land question, 158 f.; had army under Caepio destroyed by Cimbri, ii. 140; summon Marius to take command against Cimbri and Teutones, ix. 492; 150,000 massacred by Mithridates in one day, iv. 404; defeated at river Lycus by Mithridates, ii. 514; under Lucullus conquer Tigranes and the Armenians, ii. 140; end line of Pontic kings, ix. 12; divided into 3 powerful parties, iii. 334; ready for revolution, vii. 108; defeated by Parthians, 172; defeat Pacorus, son of Hyrodes, or Arsaces, iii. 422; subject to many dire events after death of Nero, xi. 206
- Romanus, son of Odysseus and Circe, colonized Rome, i. 92
- Rome, various theories as to origin of name, i. 90; founded by Romulus on April 21st, i. 4, 120, 122, 314; a sanctuary for fugitives, called sanctuary of God of Asylum, made in it by Romulus and Remus, i. 114; how marked out, 118; grew because she incorporated with herself those she conquered, i. 136; plague and dread portents at, 166; receives grain, part bought in Italy, part sent as gift from Syracuse, iv. 154; menaced by Volscians under Coriolanus, 188; 7 large cities captured from it by Volscians under Coriolanus, 192; again menaced by Coriolanus and Volscians, 194; how saved by Volumnia, mother of Coriolanus, iv. 200 f.; captured by Gauls, then attacked by Latins under Livius Postumius and saved by strategy of Philotis, or Tutola, i. 184 f., 306, ii. 146 f., v. 440; delivered by Camillus, ii. 164 f.; rebuilt within year, 174; struggle there between Sullan and Marian

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- factions concerning Mithridatic war, IV. 348, IX. 558; great changes in government of, introduced by Sulla, IV. 434; captured twice by Sulla, IV. 452; occupied by Caesar, IX. 152; entrusted to Lepidus by the triumvirs, IX. 182; outshone by Athens in great public works, temples, etc. down to time of Caesars, III. 204; required monarchy to heal its ills, VI. 250; history of, planned by Cicero, VII. 186
- Romis, tyrant of Latins, drove out Tuscans and founded Rome, I. 92
- Romulus, varying accounts of his lineage, I. 92 f.; twin son of Ilia, Rhea, or Silvia, 96; exposed near river, 98; reared by Faustulus, swineherd of Amulius, 102; with his brother Remus, attacks and slays Amulius, 112; builds Roma Quadrata, 114; slays his brother Remus, as some say, 116; buries Remus in the Remonia, marks out the city, 118; founded Rome on April 21st, 120; divides men of military age into companies, each consisting of 3000 footmen and 300 horsemen, 122; appointed 100 of most eminent to be councillors, calling the individuals "patricians" and their body a "senate"; called nobles "patrons" and commonalty "clients," rape of Sabine women, 126; origin of nuptial cry "Talasius," 132; slew Acron, king of the Caeninenses, routed his army, and took his city, 134 f., v. 454; meaning of "spolia opima," I. 138
- Attacked by Sabines under Tatius, who is admitted to citadel by Tarpeia, 140; fights Sabines with varying fortune, 144 f.; led to make peace by the ravished daughters of the Sabines, 146 f.; Sabines to dwell with Romans and Tatius to be king with Romulus, 150; 100 Sabines added by election to the patricians and legions enlarged to 6000 footmen and 600 horsemen, people arranged in three bodies, Ramnenses, Tatienses, Lucerenses, 152; Romulus adopted oblong shields of Sabines, 154; said to have introduced consecration of fire and to have appointed holy virgins, called Vestals, to guard it, was a diviner, enacted law concerning divorce, 160; buried Tatius, who was slain by friends of murdered ambassadors, but makes no attempt to bring murderers to justice, 162 f., 322; took Fidenae and made it colony of Rome, 164; captured Cameria, transferred half of survivors to Rome and sent colonists to Cameria, 166; defeats Veientes in two battles, 168; celebrates triumph, becomes haughty in bearing, had about him young men called Celeres, and Lictores, 170 f.; of his own motion divided territory acquired in war among his soldiers, and gave back their hostages to Veientes without consent of patricians, disappeared unaccountably short time after, conjectures as to manner of his death, 174 f., 308, II. 180, v. 178; Julius Proculus, a patrician, said he saw Romulus as a deity and received a message for the Romans from him, the people pray to him under name Quirinus, I. 178; died 54 years of age and in 38th year of his reign, 186
- Romus (1), sent from Troy by Diomedes, son of Emathion, founded Rome, I. 92
- Romus (2), brought to Italy with his brother Romulus, I. 92; named from "ruma," a teat, 102. See also "Remus."
- Roscii, two brothers with Crassus at Carrhae, III. 414.
- Roscius, comedian, had influence on Sulla in his latter days, IV. 438; imitated by Cicero, VII. 94
- Roscius, attacks Chrysoogonus and is accused by him of murder, defended by Cicero and acquitted, VII. 88
- Roscius, "had Milesiaca" of Aristides in his baggage at battle of Carrhae, III. 418
- Roscius Otho, L., opposes Gabinian law, v. 180; introduced law giving knights separate seats at spectacles, VII. 112
- Roxana, married by Alexander, VII. 358; mother of Alexander, IX. 354; to

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- murders Stateira and her sister, VII, 436
- Roxana, sister of Mithridates, put to death at his orders, II. 524
- Roxanes, chiliarch, his angry words to Themistocles, II. 78
- Rubicon, separates Italy from Cisalpine Gaul, VII. 490; crossed by Caesar, 522, v. 272
- Rubrius, tribune, brings in bill for colony on site of Carthage, X. 218
- Rubrius, praetor in Macedonia, had Cato the Younger under him, VIII. 254
- Rubrius, M., with Cato at Utica, VIII. 386
- Rufinus, ancestor of Sulla, was consul, expelled from senate, IV. 324
- "Rufus," concerning the name, IV. 142
- Rufus, L., gave Ti. Gracchus second blow, X. 190
- Rufus, Virginius, see "Virginus Rufus."
- Rullus, Fabius, received title Maximus for expelling descendants of freedmen from senate, v. 148, III. 118
- "Ruma," ancient Roman name for Teat, I. 98
- Rumilia, goddess who presided over rearing of young children, I. 98
- "Ruminalis," name of fig-tree near which twins of Ilia grounded; etymology of word, I. 98
- Rutillius Rufus, P., legate of Caecilius Metellus in Africa, IX. 484; accused falsely by Theophanes; his histories, v. 212; cited, IX. 540 f.
- Sabaco, Cassius, friend of Marius, expelled from senate, IX. 472
- Sabbas, induced by Gymnosophists to revolt from Alexander, VII. 404 f.
- Sabines, attacked by Romulus wantonly, I. 126 f.; their daughters seized by Romans, 128; wage war on Romans, 132; Lacedaemonian colonists, lived in unwall'd villages, 134, 308; under Tattius march on Rome, treacherously admitted into citadel by Tarpeia, 140; challenged to battle by Romulus, 144; repulsed to Regia and temple of Vesta, 146; make peace, adopt Roman months, 154; quarrel with Romans as to appointment of king on death of Romulus, 310; waged war on Tarquin, son of Demaratus, 536; invaded Roman territory, 554; with Latins wage war on Rome and are defeated, 556 f.; campaign against them undertaken on understanding that creditors would deal gently with debtors, IV. 126
- Sabine women, rape of, was act of necessity, I. 112; when and why carried out, 126 f.; rape took place on August 18th, 134; separate combatants and bring peace, 146 f.; quoted, 148 f.; terms of peace, 150; received concessions from Romans, 152
- Sabinus, friend of Cicero, prosecuted by Munatius, VII. 144
- Sabinus, Calvisius, Roman general, XI. 228
- Sabinus, Nymphidius, see "Nymphidius Sabinus."
- Sacred band of Thebans, account of it, v. 382
- Sacred gate, at Athens, IV. 370
- Sacred mount, where plebeians seceded to, beside river Anio, IV. 128
- Sacrifice, of hair to god at Delphi by youth in Theseus' time, I. 10; human sacrifice by Greeks before Salamis, II. 38 f.; sacrifice by Aean-tid tribe of Athens to Sphragitile nymphs, 272; vowed by Fabius Maximus, III. 130; human sacrifice, v. 390 f.; 11 heifers sacrificed to the moon, 20 oxen to Hercules, by Aemilius Paulus, VI. 400
- Saculio, buffoon, executed after Philippi, VI. 228 f.
- Sadalis, king of Thrace, with Antony at Actium, IX. 276
- Sagra river, battle of, fought by Italian Greeks, VI. 420
- Saguntum, battle in the plains of, between Sertorius and Metellus, VIII. 54
- Sais, learned men of, gave Solon story of lost Atlantis, I. 494; Sonchis of, 476
- Salaminian state-galley, for special occasions, III. 20; sent to bring Alcibiades home, IV. 58

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Salamis, bone of contention between Athens and Megara, I. 420; recovered from Athens by Megara, 432; received ashes of Solon, 498; 572; scene of defeat of Xerxes by Athenians, II. 12, 28, 38, 138, 242, 388, 396, 416, 418; overrun by Lysander, IV. 252; plundered by Aratus, XI. 54; given up to Athenians by Diogenes, XI. 78
- Salamis, in Cyprus, Nicocreon, king of, VII. 308; where Demetrius defeated Ptolemy in sea-fight, IX. 36 f.; mother and children of Demetrius besieged there by Ptolemy, 86
- "Salamis," title of poem by Solon, I. 422
- Salii, priests established by Numa, I. 346; to guard bronze buckler that fell from heaven, 350
- Salinae, town in Italy, III. 338
- Salinator, Julius, sent with 6000 men by Sertorius to bar passage of Pyrenees, killed by Calpurnius Lanarius, VIII. 18
- Salius, from Samothrace or Mantinea, did not give his name to Salii, I. 352
- Sallust, cited, II. 504; 580; IV. 450
- Salonius, married his young daughter to Cato the Elder in latter's old age, II. 376
- Salonius, son of Cato the Elder and grandson of Salonius, II. 376; son of Cato by 2nd wife, had son Marcus, died in praetorship, 384
- Salvenius, legionary soldier, brings Sulla oracle about affairs in Italy, IV. 380
- Salvius, commanded Pelignians at Pydna, VI. 406
- Salvius, centurion, helps murder Pompey, v. 318, 322
- Samaena, species of war-ship, III. 76
- Sambuca, of Marcellus, described, v. 470; crushed by Archimedes' engines, 474, 478
- Samians, attacked by Athens for not desisting from war against Milesians, III. 68; fighting Milesians for Priene, defeated by Pericles, who set up democracy, 72; defeated by Pericles off island of Tragia, defeat Athenians, 74; their general Melissus defeated by Pericles, 76, II. 6; surrender to Pericles after 8 months III. 78; driven out and their cities handed over to men they had banished, IV. 268; vote that their festival be called Lysandreia, 280; addressed in letter by Brutus, VI. 130
- Samnites, joining Pyrrhus after Heraclia, are censured, IX. 400; worsted by Romans, invite Pyrrhus back from Sicily, 422; discouraged by many defeats at hands of Romans, do not join Pyrrhus in large numbers, 426; their ambassadors found Manius Curius in his cottage cooking turnips, II. 306; their cities which had revolted, taken by Marcellus, V. 502; spared Roman generals, X. 158; inveterate foes of Rome, IV. 420
- Samon, husband of Phaenareté, IX. 358
- Samos, siege of, II. 6, III. 68, 200; Athenian fleet there, IV. 70, 74, 104, 242; siege of, v. 344; attacked by Lucullus, II. 478; temple of Hera there, v. 174; festivities held there by Antony and Cleopatra, IX. 264 f.
- Samosata, in Syria, besieged by Ventidius, IX. 212
- Samothrace, v. 520; Perseus takes refuge there after Pydna, VI. 418; 422; II. 508; plundered by pirates, v. 174
- Samothracian images, in temple of Vesta, brought to Troy by Dardanus, carried to Italy by Aeneas, II. 144
- Sandaucé, sister of Xerxes, wife of Artaxctus, her three sons sacrificed to Dionysius Carnivorous by the Greeks, II. 38, 238
- Sandon, father of Athenodorus, I. 548
- Sapha, place in Asia where Amphicrates is buried, II. 542
- "Sapiens," its meaning, x. 160
- "Sardians for sale," called by herald at Rome in celebrating victory, I. 170
- Sardinia, x. 198 f.; province of Cato the Elder, II. 318; v. 154
- Sardis, I. 170; visited by Solon, 478; II. 80; 82 f.; burned by Athenians, 224; Cyrus meets Lysander there, IV. 240; 252; submits to Alex-

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- ander, VII. 262 f.; taken by Demetrius, IX. 116; meeting-place of Brutus and Cassius, VI. 200
- Sarmentus, favourite of Octavius Caesar, IX. 272
- Sarpedon, tutor of Cato the Younger, VIII. 238; 242
- Satibarzanes, eunuch of Artaxerxes II., XI. 152
- Satiphernes, friend of Cyrus, slain by Artaxerxes at Cunaxa, XI. 148
- Satricum, captured by Tuscans, recaptured by Camillus, II. 192
- Saturn, temple of, made public treasury by Publicola, I. 532, X. 168
- Saturnalia, slaves then feasted with masters as Numa ordained, I. 386, IV. 386; the time fixed for carrying out Lentulus' plot, VII. 124
- Saturnian age, when there was neither slave nor master, I. 386
- Saturninus, L., tribune of people, supports Marius for fourth consulship, IX. 498 f.; slew Nonius, rival for tribuneship, introduced agrarian law with clause requiring senators to take oath not to oppose what people voted, IX. 542; gets all senators to take oath except Marius, helps Marius oppose Metellus, 544, IV. 446; pitted against nobles by Marius, IX. 548
- Satyreius, P., gave Ti. Gracchus the first blow, X. 190
- Satyrs, resemble Picus and Faunus, I. 358
- Satyrus, seer who helped slay Timophanes according to Theopompus, VI. 270
- Satyrus, actor, points out Demosthenes' weaknesses to him, VII. 16
- Saviour-gods," honorary title given Antigonus and Demetrius by Athenians, IX. 26
- Sayings, anonymous, II. 502; IV. 386; V. 86; VI. 384
- Scaeva, Cassius, see "Cassius Scaeva." "Scaevola," means left-handed, I. 548
- Scaevola, Mucius, see "Mucius Scaevola, C."
- Scalae Caci, beside dwelling of Romulus, near descent into Circus Maximus from Palatine, I. 152
- Scambonidae, deme of Alcibiades, IV. 60
- Scandeia, III. 434
- Scarpheia, Lycon of, VII. 310
- Scaurus, illustrious Roman name, VII. 82
- Scaurus, M. Aemilius, father of Aemilia by Metella, IV. 432, V. 134
- Scedasus, slays himself when his daughters are ravished, V. 390
- Scellius, companion of Antony in flight from Actium, IX. 288
- Scepsis, Metrodorus of, II. 538 f.; Neleus of, IV. 406
- "Schinocephalus," name applied to Pericles by Comic poets, III. 8
- "Schinus," name for squill at times, III. 8
- Schoolmaster of Falerii, punished by Camillus, II. 118
- Sciathus, II. 20
- Scillustis, island in Indian ocean reached by Alexander, VII. 410
- Scionaeans, restored to their homes by Lysander, IV. 270
- Scipio, Gnaeus Cornelius, son of P. Cornelius Nasica, father-in-law of Pompey, sent to Syria with his father to raise fleet, V. 278
- Scipio Asiaticus, L. Cornelius (1), II. 388; conquered Antiochus, 504, III. 398; ambassador with Flamininus to Prusias to demand death of Hannibal, X. 386; brother of Scipio the Great, condemned to pay fine, II. 344; expelled from equestrian order by Cato, 354
- Scipio Asiaticus, L. Cornelius (2), outwitted by Sulla, loses all his men to him, IV. 414, V. 130 VIII. 14
- Scipio, P. Cornelius, made master of horse by Camillus, II. 104
- Scipio Africanus, P. Cornelius, son of Africanus Major, adopted younger son of Aemilius Paulus and Papiria, VI. 366
- Scipio Africanus Major, P. Cornelius, opposed by Cato the Elder, his quaestor, for extravagance on his campaign in Africa, II. 310 f.; conquered Carthaginians in Spain, made consul in spite of Fabius Maximus' opposition, crossed to Africa and defeated Hannibal, III. 190 f., 202, VIII. 2, X. 144, 328; 382; surnamed Africanus, IX. 464; succeeded Cato the Elder in Spain,

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- outwitted by him, II. 332; opposed politically by Cato the Elder, 346, 386, 398; made princeps senatus by Flamininus, X. 372; because of attacks turned back upon people, II. 376; his brother Lucius expelled from senate by Cato, II. 354; had Aemilia to wife, VI. 358; his son adopted the son of Aemilius Paulus and gave him the name Scipio, 366; father-in-law of Scipio Nasica Corculum, 392; inferior to Caesar as general, VII. 478; second only to Pyrrhus as general in opinion of Hannibal, IX. 366
- Scipio Aemilianus Africanus Minor, P. Cornelius, son of Aemilius Paulus, grandson of Scipio the Great by adoption, contemporary of Cato the Elder, II. 346, 364, VI. 364, 366, 446, 458; asked Cato the Elder's aid in behalf of the Achaean exiles, II. 326; consul contrary to the laws, IX. 492; II. 384; at Pydna, took Carthage and Numantia, 596, VI. 412 f.; reproached with aristocratic leaning of his father Aemilius Paulus, VI. 452; supported by common people for censorship, 454; destroyed Carthage, VIII. 2; besieged Numantia, IX. 468, 494 f.; married daughter of Ti. Gracchus the Elder and Cornelia, X. 146, 152; most influential man at Rome, blamed for not saving Mancinus, was waging war on Numantia when Ti. Gracchus began to agitate for agrarian laws, 158; had C. Gracchus under him when besieging Numantia, 174; nearly lost popularity by expressing disapproval of Ti. Gracchus and his measures, 194 f.; had friend Laelius, VIII. 252, X. 160; died under suspicious circumstances, I. 174, X. 218 f.
- Scipio Nasica, P. Cornelius (Scipio Metellus) with two others came to Cicero at midnight to warn of plot, VII. 116; father-in-law of Pompey, saved from trial by him, v. 260, 326; with Hypsaeus and Milo candidates for consulship, VIII. 350; chosen by Pompey as his colleague in consulship, v. 262; opposes compromise with Caesar, VII. 516 f.;
- with his son Gnaeus sent to Syria to raise fleet, v. 278; 288; in Macedonia, to be attacked by Caesar, VII. 510; disputed with Domitius and Spinther over Caesar's office of Pontifex Maximus, VII. 544; v. 290; said to have hid away greater part of treasure he brought from Asia, 336; commanded centre at Pharsalus for Pompey, opposed to Lucius Calvinius, v. 294, VII. 548; VIII. 250; VII. 480; quarrels with Varus, well received by Juba, takes command of forces as proconsul, VIII. 372; VI. 138; escapes from Thapsus with few followers, VIII. 374 f., VII. 562, 570; VIII. 384 f.
- Scipio Nasica Corculum, son-in-law of Scipio Africanus, given task of seizing pass through Perrhaebia, VI. 392; at battle of Pydna, 394, 398, 402; 424; says 80 Romans slain at Pydna, 412; consul, with C. Marcus, laid down office on account of mistake in auspices, v. 444; opposed destruction of Carthage, II. 382
- Scipio Nasica Serapio, large holder of public land, opposed Ti. Gracchus bitterly, X. 174; leads attack against Ti. Gracchus, 188 f.; hated by people; though pontifex maximus, fled from Italy and committed suicide, 194
- Scipio Sallustio, of family of Africanus, put in forefront of battles in Africa by Caesar, VII. 564
- Sciradium, promontory of Salamis, I. 426
- Sciraphidas, declared Spartans should not receive gold and silver coinage, IV. 276
- Sciron, son-in-law of Cychreus, father-in-law of Aeacus, grandfather of Peleus and Telamon, slain by Theseus; disagreement as to his character, I. 20, 188; son of Canethus and Henioché, daughter of Pittheus; Isthmian games in his honour according to some, 56; father of Alyceus, 76
- Scirophorion, Athenian month, v. 78
- Scirus, of Salamis, according to Philochorus furnished pilot and look-out

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- man to Theseus; temple to him at Phalerum, I. 34
- Scopadae, wealth of, II. 434
- Scopas, Thessalian, his remark about happiness, II. 354
- Scorpion, engine devised by Archimedes for short-range work, v. 476
- Scotussa, town in Thessaly, I. 64; how treated by Alexander of Pherae, v. 412; where Flamininus defeated Philip, VI. 372, X. 338; v. 292, VII. 546
- Scribonia, wife of Crassus, mother of Piso, executed by Nero, XI. 254
- Scrophas, quaestor under Crassus, defeated by Crassus, III. 346
- Scyros, isle of, I. 80; inhabited by Dolopians, ruled by Lycomedes, 82; seized by Cimon, settled by Athenians, II. 426; has grave of Theseus, 428
- Scytalé (1), described, IV. 284 f.; 112
- Scytalé (2), fabled serpent, III. 418
- Scythes, ambassador of Agesilaüs, imprisoned in Larissa, v. 42
- Scythia, servant of Pompey, v. 320
- Scythia, v. 220; 298
- Scythia, Pontic, neighbour of Gaul, IX. 488
- Scythians, how they wear their hair, III. 386; shoot as they flee even better than Parthians, 388; twang their bows in midst of their drinking, IX. 44; mingle with Gauls from Pontic Scythia eastward, 488; routed by Alexander, VII. 356
- Sea, Ionian, boundary between Octavius and Antony, IX. 204
- Sea, outer, IX. 488
- Secundus, rhetorician, Otho's secretary, XI. 296
- Sedition, at Athens, I. 436; 486; at Sparta, v. 88; of Messenians, XI. 112; at Rome, first to end in bloodshed since expulsion of kings, X. 190; 234; caused by Cinna, IX. 578; caused by Marius, IV. 344
- Seers, III. 370.
- "Seisactheia," term applied to cancellation of debts under Solon, I. 442, 448
- "Seismatias," name of tomb of Spartan youth crushed in earthquake, II. 454
- Seleucia, on the Tigris, II. 540; always hostile to Parthians, III. 366; 368; 374; captured for Hyrodes by Surena, 378; 418
- "Seleucid," name of a costly kind of bowl, VI. 442
- Seleucus, rumoured to have surrendered Pelusium with consent of Cleopatra, IX. 306; steward of Cleopatra, 322
- Seleucus Nicator, helped by Alexander, VII. 348; 400; 434; expelled from Babylonia by Antigonus, recovered it and set out on expedition to India and Mount Caucasus, IX. 16; begins to wear diadem, 40; 60; defeats Antigonus and Demetrius, 70; had son Antiochus by Apama, the Persian, marries Stratonice, daughter of Demetrius and Phila, 76; makes friendship between Demetrius and Ptolemy, demands Cilicia of Demetrius, and on being refused that, Tyre and Sidon, had domain from India to Syrian sea, 78; leagues with Ptolemy and Lysimachus against Demetrius, 108; arranged engagement between Demetrius and Ptolemais, 116; marches into Cilicia with large force, 118; repulsed by Demetrius, 120; 122; seizes Demetrius and banishes him to Syrian Chersonese, 126; X. 16; most of his former dominions won back by Antiochus the Great, II. 334
- Sellasia, X. 20; 102; Cleomenes defeated there, 112, XI. 106; passes and heights there occupied by Spartans, X. 266
- Selymbria, captured by Alcibiades, IV. 86
- Sempronius Densus, see "Densus, Sempronius."
- Sempronius, Tiberius, consul, assisted by Cato the Elder in subduing regions in Thrace and on Danube, II. 334; see also "Gracchus, TI. Sempronius (1)."
- Senate at Athens, created new by Solon, I. 568; its number increased from 500 to 600, IX. 26
- Senate, at Rome, instituted by Romulus, means council of elders, I. 124; 150 in number, 150, 312; that of Romans and Sabines united, 152;

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- accused of changing government to oligarchy on death of Romulus, 312; had 164 new members added by Publicola, 530, 568; sent embassy to Delphi to consult oracle about Alban lake, II. 102; IV. 126; its decree necessary before people could enact law, 188; 190; permits plebeians to elect one consul from their number, II. 204; likened by Clineas to council of kings, IX. 406; X. 338; sent 10 commissioners to Flaminius in Greece, X. 348; II. 324; 332; insults Ti. Gracchus, X. 174; 194; 198; IV. 350; IX. 584; II. 594; V. 258; 282; VI. 168; 172; 184; VII. 118; 120; 126; 168; 198; 494; IX. 148 f.; 156 f.; 168; 172 f.; 272
- Senate, at Sparta, instituted by Lycurgus, manner of election, I. 218, 282; why number was fixed at 28, 220
- Senate, of 300 Romans at Utica, won in speech by Cato, VIII. 378 f.; distrusted by Cato, refuses to oppose Caesar, 386
- Senate, of Sertorius, VIII. 60
- Senatusconsulta ultima, VII. 118; x. 228
- Seneca, persuades Nero to send Otho out as governor of Lusitania, XI. 248
- Senecio, Socius (or Sosius), friend of Plutarch, I. 2, VI. 2, VII. 2, 78
- Senones, neighbours of Gauls, II. 126
- Senses, how different from arts, IX. 2
- Sentius, praetor of Macedonia, IV. 360
- September, Ides of, nearly coincide with full moon of Attic Metageitnion, I. 538; called Germanicus for a short time by Domitian, 370
- Septempagium, a territory of Veii surrendered to Rome, I. 170
- Septimius (1), once tribune of Pompey's, helps murder him, v. 318 f.
- Septimius (2), defends Nymphidius Sabinus, XI. 234
- Septimuleius, brought head of O. Gracchus to Opimius, X. 236
- Sequani, capture kings of Teutones in Alps, IX. 528; have Caesar's forces among them for winter, VII. 490; remain faithful to Rome, 506
- Serapion, given gifts by Alexander, VII. 340
- Serapis, said by Dionysius to have freed him from chains and bid him sit on Alexander's throne, VII. 428
- Serbonian marshes, called blasts of Typhon by Egyptians, appear to be residual arm of Red Sea, IX. 142
- Sergius, a mime, had great influence with Antony, IX. 158
- Seriphian, the, his encounter with Themistocles, II. 50
- Serpent, why associated with heroes, X. 140; omen of it, 144
- Serranus, father of Atilia, VIII. 250
- Sertorius, Q., subduer of Spain, had no cognomen, IX. 464; one-eyed, belonged to family of some prominence in Sabine city of Nussa, VIII. 4; reared by his widowed mother Rhea, served against Cimbri and Teutones under Caepio and then Marius, sent out as military tribune to Spain by Didius the praetor, 6; saves Roman soldiers in Castulo, appointed quaestor of Cisalpine Gaul, 8; opposed by Sulla in election for tribuneship, joins Cinna, 10; disapproved of the severity of Marius and Cinna, had Marius' body-guard slain, 14; goes to Spain and wins over the Barbarians, 16; sent Julius Salinator with 6000 men to bar passage of Pyrenees, crossed to Africa and returned, 18; returned to Maurusia in Africa to fight against Ascallis, defeated Ascallis and Paccianus, 22
- Invited by Lusitanians to be their leader, 24; organizes them and subdues neighbouring parts of Spain, 26; uses white doe to impress Spaniards, 28; defeats all Roman generals sent against him including Metellus, 30 f.; introduces Roman arms, signals, and formations, educates Spanish boys of highest birth at Osea, 36 f.; joined by Perpenna with 53 cohorts, 40; forces the surrender of the Characitani, 42; opposed by Pompey, 46; takes Lauron in spite of Pompey, 48; fights drawn battle with Pompey, 52; defeated by Metellus but gets new forces, 56; gave name of senate to senators

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- who fled from Rome to him, 60; makes treaty with Mithridates, 66; plotted against by Perpenna and others, 68; murdered by Antonius and others, 72
See also II. 486; 488; 494; V. 146; 156; IX. 590
 Quoted: VIII. 12; 42; 48; 52; 64
- Servii, Galba one of, XI. 210
- Servile war (War of Spartacus), III. 334 f., V. 164, VIII. 252
- Servile war, in Sicily, III. 342, IV. 440
- Servile war at Sparta, I. 292, II. 456
- Servilia (1), mother of Brutus, descended from Servilius Ahala, VI. 126; half-sister of Cato the Younger, daughter of his mother, 128, VIII. 236; wife of Silanus, 284; had intrigue with Caesar, 290, VI. 134 f.; received ashes of Brutus, 246
- Servilia (2), sister of Cato, divorced by Lucullus, II. 594, VIII. 292, 304: with her young son by Lucullus taken to Asia by Cato, attacked by Caesar on this score, 366
- Servilii, Marcus Brutus one on his mother's side, VII. 586
- Servilius, meets Pompey with fleet at river Phasis at head of fleet with which he guarded Euxine, V. 206
- Servilius, C., augur, accused L. Lucullus of peculation, impeached by the son L. Lucullus, II. 470
- Servilius, M., supports granting of triumph to Aemilius Paulus, VI. 436
- Servilius, praetor, sent to forbid Sulla advancing, IV. 350
- Servilius Vatia Isauricus, P. (1), general of Sulla, enjoys successes, IV. 418; V. 150
- Servilius Vatia Isauricus, P. (2), see "Isauricus, P. Servilius."
- Servius (1), added 2 more Vestals to first 4, I. 340
- Servius (2), Sulla's candidate, rejected by people, IV. 356
- Servius Galba, see "Galba, Ser. Sulpicius (1)."
- Sessorium, place of execution, XI. 270
- Sestius, P., given province of Cilicia, accompanied by M. Brutus, VI. 132
- Sestos, many barbarian prisoners captured there by Athenians and their allies, II. 430; IV. 106 f.; 254; taken from Athenians by Lysander and divided among his boatswains and pilots, 268
- Setia, VII. 578
- Seuthas, servant of Aratus, XI. 10
- Sextilius, legate of Lucullus, attacked by Mithrobarzanes, whom he defeats, II. 550; attacks and routs Arabs, 552
- Sextilius, praetor, with lictors seized by pirates, V. 176
- Sextilius, P., governor of Africa, orders Marius not to set foot in Africa, IX. 574
- Sextilis, former name of month August, I. 134, 370, IX. 534
- Sextius (Sextus), Lucius, first plebeian elected consul, II. 206
- Sextius, P., retained Cicero as an advocate, VII. 148
- Sextius Sulla, Carthaginian, contemporary of Plutarch, his explanation of origin of nuptial cry "Talasius," I. 132
- Sextus, nephew of Pompey, VIII. 242
- She-wolf, suckled children of Ilia, considered sacred to Mars, I. 98
- Ships, number at Salamis, II. 40; III. 76; size of those built by Demetrius and Ptolemy Philopator, IX. 108
- Shore-men at Athens, favoured compromise, I. 434; led by Megacles, son of Alcmaeon, 486
- Sibyl, oracle of, quoted, I. 54
- Sibylline books, I. 556; III. 128; V. 442; VII. 44; 122; 580
- Sibyrtius, palaestra of, IV. 8
- Sibyrtius, governor of Arachosia, ordered to wear out the Silver-shields, VIII. 136
- Sicels, negotiate with Nicias, III. 266
- Sicilian grease, III. 208
- Sicilians, honoured Gylippus, I. 298; came to hate Pyrrhus, IX. 422
- Sicily, II. 430; III. 62; Athenian expedition to, III. 250 f., IV. 44 f.; state of, after death of Dion and before expedition of Timoleon, VI. 262; Timoleon's expedition to, 284 f.; receives colonists from Corinth and other places, 316, 344; wealthy, populous, and in faction after departure of Agathocles, IX. 386; Pyrrhus' expedition to, 416; subdued by Romans soon after

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Beneventum, 428; its conquest attempted by Carthaginians, opposed by Marcellus, V. 466; secured for Sulla by Pompey, 136; 182; Cicero quaestor of, VII. 94; allotted to Cato as province, VIII. 362; taken from Sextus Pompeius by Octavius, IX. 262
- Sicinius Vellutus, with Junius Brutus, leader in secession, with him one of first 2 tribunes of the plebs, IV. 130; opposes plan of colony at Velitrae and of new war with Volsci, opposed by Coriolanus, 146; 160 f.
- Sicinnius, said Crassus had hay on his horn, III. 334
- Sicinnus, Persian slave of Themistocles and paedagogue of his children, takes message from him to Xerxes, II. 36
- Sicyon, X. 84; bit of its history, XI. 4; freed of tyrant Nicocles by Aratus, X. 256, XI. 14; though Dorian attached to Achaean league by Aratus, 20; its best paintings in time of Aratus, 28; almost captured by Cleomenes, 90; its territory ravaged by Cleomenes, X. 92; freed by Demetrius, IX. 58
- Sicyonians, defeated by Pericles at Nemea, III. 60; bury Aratus in their city, XI. 120 f.; persuaded to move their city by Demetrius, who gave it new name Demetrius, IX. 58; pronounced judgment against Athenians in their suit with people of Oropus, II. 368
- Sidon, demanded of Demetrius by Seleucus, IX. 78; 254
- Siege-engines, of Niconides the Thesalian, II. 500; employed by Pericles in Samian war, III. 78; those of Athenians set on fire, 270; those of Sulla called for operation of 10,000 pairs of mules, IV. 360
- Sigliuria, built by Publicola, I. 542
- Signia, younger Marius defeated there by Sulla, IV. 414 f.
- Silanus, made likenesses of Theseus, I. 10
- Silanus, Decimus Junius, VII. 116; husband of Servilia, Cato's sister, VIII. 284; reports what Cethegus was heard to say, VII. 126; urges putting conspirators to death, 130; VIII. 286; recanted and said he meant imprisonment, 288, VII. 132
- Silanus, M., friend of Antony, driven off by Cleopatra's flatterers, IX. 272
- Silenus, claimed to be child of Apollo and woman in Pontus, was to be used by Lysander in his scheme for changing succession at Sparta, IV. 306
- Silicius, P., proscribed, VI. 186
- Sillaces, sent against Crassus, III. 376; casts head of Crassus into Parthian banquetting hall, 420
- Silo, Pompaedius, see "Pompaedius Silo."
- Silvia, see "Ilia."
- Silvium, where Sulla was met by servant of Pontus, IV. 412
- Simaetha, female character in Aristophanes' Acharnians, III. 88
- Simmias (1), public prosecutor of Pericles according to Theophrastus, III. 102
- Simmias (2), fought always by side of Philopoemen, X. 282
- Simonides, of Ceos, says Lycurgus not son of Eunomus but that both were sons of Prytanis, I. 206; that Themistocles had chapel of Lycomidæ at Phlya restored at his own expense, II. 4; 16; V. 2; VI. 348; XI. 106.
- Cited: (Frg. 193, Bergk) I. 20; (Frg. 54, Bergk 413) 34; (Bergk III⁴. p. 423) II. 44; (Bergk III⁴. p. 516) V. 342; (Bergk III⁴. p. 412) VI. 2
- Simylus, poet, cited, I. 142
- Sinis, the Pine-bender, father of Periguné, slain on Isthmus by Theseus, I. 16, 66, 188; son of Canethus and Henloché; Isthmian games in his honour according to some, 56
- Sinnaca, hilly country, refuge for Octavius and about 5000 men, III. 408
- Sinopé, founded by Autolycus, II. 542; taken from Syrians by him, 544; 600 Athenian colonists sent there by Pericles, III. 62; besieged and captured by Lucullus, II. 542; Mithridates' body sent there, V. 222; Diogenes of, VII. 258
- Sinopé, daughter of Asopis, mother of Syrus, II. 544

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Sinopians, assisted against Timesilleos by Pericles, III. 60
- Sinora, place where Mithridates had money and treasures, v. 200
- Sinuessa, Marcellus recuperates his soldiers there, v. 510; country seat of Tigellinus there, XI. 278
- Sippius, celebrated for luxury and effeminacy, VIII. 244
- Siren, v. 480
- Siris, river in Italy, IX. 394
- Sisenna, historian, II. 472
- Sisimithres, his citadel captured by Alexander, VII. 388
- Skapté Hylé, in Thrace, Thucydides murdered there, II. 412
- Slaves, treated kindly by Romans of Coriolanus' time, IV. 176 f.; brought in by rich to till land in Italy, X. 160; how treated by Cato the Elder, II. 316, 364; IX. 584; II. 484; VIII. 386; how treated by Spartans, I. 288 f., x. 100; II. 536; III. 108
- Smyrna, VI. 188; where Homer died, VIII. 4
- Socles, Paeonian, at battle of Salamis, II. 42
- Socrates, the sage, not poor according to Demetrius of Phalerum, II. 214; falsely said to have lived in wedlock with Myrto, 296; said he heard Pericles introduce measure regarding the long wall, III. 42; with his disciples came to hear Aspasia, 68; his favour contributed to reputation of Alcibiades, IV. 2; his love for Alcibiades and influence upon him, 8 f., 14; saves Alcibiades' life at Potidaea, defended by Alcibiades in rout at Delium, 18; disapproved of Sicilian expedition, 44, III. 256; had tendency to melancholy according to Aristotle, IV. 236; lost his life for philosophy, III. 290; his fate like that of Phocion, VIII. 232; II. 320; 360; Cato the Elder's opinion of him, 370; had ardent disciple Apollodorus of Phalerum, VIII. 346; work on him by Demetrius of Phalerum, II. 210; by Panaetius, 296
- "Socrates," work by Demetrius of Phalerum, II. 210
- "Socrates," work by Panaetius, II. 296
- Soli (1), new city of Philocyprus, named in honour of Solon, I. 478; Pasocrates king of, VII. 308
- Soli (2), city in Cilicia, besieged by Demetrius, IX. 48; devastated by Tigranes, king of Armenia, restored by Pompey and ex-pirates settled there, v. 186
- Solois, friend of Theseus, in love with Antiopé, in despair drowned himself, I. 58
- Solois, river in Bithynia, named in memory of Theseus' friend, I. 60
- Solon, son of Excestides and a cousin of mother of Peisistratus, I. 404; when young man embarked in commerce and travelled, 406; composed poetry at first with no serious end in view, in philosophy studied chiefly political ethics, in physics is simple and antiquated, 410; met the other wise men at Delphi and again at Corinth, 412; meets Anacharsis and Thales, 414 f.; wrests island of Salamis from Megarians, 420 f.; successfully supports the claim of Athens to Salamis before board of 5 arbiters, 426 f.; arouses Athenians to support Delphians against people of Cirrha, 428; brings peace between the descendants of followers of Cylon and those of Megacles, 430
- Chosen archon and made mediator between rich and poor, 436; rejected position of tyrant but yet showed firmness, 440; cancelled all debts and forbade lending money on person of borrower, 442; pleased neither party by this arrangement, yet appointed to reform constitution and make new laws, repealed laws of Draco, 448; divided people into 4 classes according to property, 450; gave every citizen privilege of entering suit in behalf of one who had suffered wrong, 452; after establishing council of the Areiopagus, if it did not exist in Draco's time, he set up council of 400, 454; made law disfranchising man who in time of faction took neither side; laws regarding marriage, 456 f.; forbade speaking ill of dead, or of living in temples, courts-of-law, public offices, and at festivals, 460; permitted man having no children

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- to will property to whom he pleased, regulated public appearances of women, their mourning and festivals, 462; enacted law that no son not taught a trade should be compelled to support his father, ordered council of Areiopagus to chastise the idle, 464; his laws concerning women absurd, 466; made laws concerning public wells, planting of trees, digging of trenches, setting out hives of bees, exporting products of soil, concerning naturalized citizens, 468 f.; regulated practice of eating at public table in town hall, 472
- All his laws were to have force for 100 years, 472; arranged calendar of the month, 474; sailed to Egypt, then to Cyprus, 476; interviewed Croesus, 478 f.; met Aesop at his court, 484; returned to Athens, endeavoured to reconcile opposing factions, 486; tried to turn Peisistratus from his design of becoming tyrant, reproved Thespis for telling lies in his play, 488; opposed Peisistratus, 490; became Peisistratus' counsellor, began work on story of lost Atlantis, then abandoned it, 494; died in archonship of Hegestratus, 496
- See also* VIII. 160.
- Quoted: (Frg. 1, Bergk II⁴) I. 422; (Frg. 5) 452; (Frg. 6) 570; (Frg. 7) 476; (Frg. 9) 410; (Frg. 11. vv. 1-4) 492; (Frg. 11. vv. 7, 5, & 6) 490; (Frg. 12) 410; (Frg. 13. vv. 7 f.) 408, 566; (Frg. 15) 408; (Frg. 18) 406, 496; (Frg. 19) 478; (Frg. 21) 566; (Frg. 24) 406; (Frg. 26) 496; (Frg. 28) 476; Frg. 31) 410; (Frg. 32) 440; (Frg. 33) 440; (Frg. 34. vv. 4 f.) 448; (Frg. 36. 4 f.) 444; (Frg. 36. vv. 9-12) 444; (Frg. 36. v. 14) 442.
- See also* I. 438; 454; 484; 488; 490; 492; 494.
- Solon, of Plataea, joins party of Athenians going to Polysperchon, VIII. 222
- Solonium, farmstead of Marius, IX. 560
- Sonchis, of Sais, learned Egyptian priest with whom Solon studied, I. 476
- Soothsayers, always about Otho, XI. 256
- Sophanes, rivalled Aristides for 2nd place at Plataea, II. 388; Deceleian, opposes crown for Miltiades, 426
- Sophax, son of Hercules and Tinga, became king of country about Tingis, had son Diodorus, VIII. 24
- Sophenê, II. 548; its people join Lucullus, 568; taken from Tigranes by Lucullus, v. 202
- "Sophia," meant simply cleverness in politics and practical sagacity, II. 6
- "Sophists," origin of term, II. 6; none visited Sparta, I. 230
- Sophocles, in his first plays defeated Aeschylus, Cimon and his fellow-generals being judges, II. 428; general with Pericles on naval expedition, III. 24; general with Nicias, 262; had friendship of Aesculapius, and when dead another deity procured fitting burial for him, I. 320; his tragedies sent to Alexander, VII. 242
- Antigone (563 f.), quoted, VIII. 144
- Oedipus Coloneus (1 f.) IX. 118
- Oedipus Rex (4) IX. 186
- Trachiniae (441 f.) I. 404
- Tyrmanistae (Nauck, p. 270), VI. 260
- (Frg. 788, Nauck) I. 392; (Nauck, p. 249) X. 2; (Nauck, p. 315) VII. 240, IX. 112 f., XI. 196; (Nauck, p. 316) v. 320, VI. 344
- Sophrosynê, daughter of Dionysius the Elder and Aristomache, married Dionysius the Younger, vi. 12
- Sorex, archmime, had great influence with Sulla in his latter days, IV. 438
- Sornatius, routs Menander, general of Mithridates, II. 520; left as guardian of Pontus, 544 f.; 570; 584
- Sosibius (1), cited, I. 280
- Sosibius (2), most influential of Ptolemy's followers, X. 124; Ptolemy's prime minister, fears Cleomenes, 126; plots against him, 130
- Sosigenes, companion of Demetrius, IX. 124
- Sosis, fails in attempt to bring odium upon Dion and is put to death, VI. 72
- Sosistratus, prominent Syracusan, one

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- of first to invite Pyrrhus to Sicily, IX. 422
- Sosius, see "Senecio, Socius (or Sosius)."
- Soso, sister of Abantidas and wife of Prophantus, befriends Aratus, XI. 6
- Sossius, Antony's general, effected much in Syria, IX. 214
- "Soter," name given for exploit, IV. 142
- Soteria, sacrifice to celebrate freeing of Sicyon from its tyrants, XI. 122
- Sotion, cited, VII. 398
- Sotus, his genealogy, did not give his name to Spartan royal line, under him Spartans made Helots their slaves and conquered land from Arcadians, outwitted Cleitorians, I. 206 f.
- Sousamithras, uncle of Pharnabazus, ordered to kill Alcibiades, IV. 112
- Spain, cleared of Carthaginians by O. Scipio and won over to Rome, III. 190; pacified by Aemilius Paulus, VI. 362 f.; invaded by Cimbri and Teutones, IX. 496; occupied by Sertorius, VIII. 16; seat of war between Rome and Sertorius, II. 486; subdued by Sertorius, IX. 464; V. 214; allotted to Caesar as province, VII. 466; allotted to Pompey, III. 360; VII. 512; gone over to younger Pompey, VIII. 382
- Spain, Farther, allotted to Marius, who cleared out the robbers, IX. 474
- Spain, Hither, allotted to Cato the Elder, who subdues Lacetanians, is succeeded by Scipio the Great, II. 330 f.
- Spaniards, III. 140; their horsemen desert to Marcellus, V. 464; treated well by Sertorius, VIII. 16; love Sertorius, their children of noblest birth educated by Sertorius at Osca, 36 f.; these children slain or sold into slavery by Sertorius, 68
- Spanish wars, VI. 362; VIII. 6; 30, II. 486; VII. 530
- Spanus, plebeian living in Spain, gave Sertorius white doe, VIII. 28
- Sparmizes, chief eunuch of Parysatis, traps Mithridates, XI. 160
- Sparta, I. 72; to it Aethra was carried off, 78; suffered long time from lawlessness and confusion, 208; rules for its assembly laid down by Lycurgus, 222; its land redistributed by Lycurgus, 226; movable property distributed by Lycurgus, 228; useless arts banished from it by Lycurgus, 230; 234; sons there not regarded as property of father but of state, 252; observed laws of Lycurgus for 500 years down to time of Agis when gold and silver money came in, 296; visited by Themistocles, II. 52; 240; lost her prestige owing to Pausanias, 420; shaken by earthquake, 452; Greeks meet there to arrange peace, v. 76 f.; after Leuctra, 80; repulses Epaminondas, 96; near it Demetrius wins battle, IX. 84; unsuccessfully attacked by Pyrrhus, 436; degenerated down to time of Agis and Cleomenes, x. 8, 12; sends Agis with army to aid Achaeans, 30 f.; mistress of Peloponnesus, 244; her laws and constitution restored by Antigonus, 118; forced and persuaded into Achaean league, 296 f.; her walls torn down and constitution destroyed by Philopomen, 388; her gates closed by Philopomen against Diophanes and Flamininus, 390; offered his soldiers for plunder by Brutus, VI. 230; why she fell according to Plutarch, v. 92; her government a mixture of democracy and royalty, VI. 112; had temples of Death, Laughter, and Fear, x. 66
- Spartacus, Thracian, chosen one of 3 leaders by escaped gladiators, his exploits and death, III. 336 f.
- Spartacus, war of, see "Servile war."
- Spartan records, v. 52
- Spartans, I. 74; 278, v. 74; knew how to obey, I. 293; on forsaking precepts of Lycurgus sank from highest to lowest place, 398; arbiters in dispute between Athenians and Megarians, 426; II. 18; 240; send 5000 men by night to assistance of Athenians, 244; at battle of Plataea, 264; quarrel with Athenians over meed of valour after Plataea, 274; stopped sending out generals after snub to Pausanias, 286; dislike Themistocles and

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

favour Cimon, 56, 452; attacked by Perioeci, Helots and Messenians, send to Athens for aid which Cimon brings, 454 f.; free Delphians from Phocians, defeat Athenians at Tanagra, 456, III. 28; annoyed at increasing power of Athenians, 54; oppose Panhellenic congress proposed by Pericles, 56; restore sanctuary to Delphians, 62; under Pleistoanax invade Attica, 64; make peace with Athens for 30 years, 68; receive complaints about Athens from Corinth, Megara, and Aegina, 84; send embassy to Athens to arrange Megarian matter, 86; under Archidamus invade Attica, 94; routed by Nicias when he ravaged coasts of Laconia, 230; have some men captured by Cleon on island of Sphacteria, 234, IV. 32; send ambassadors to Athens to treat all issues, III. 242; defeat Argives, Mantineans, and Eleans at Mantinea, IV. 36, V. 92; help Chians in revolt from Athens, IV. 66; defeated by Athenians off Abydos, 78; accuse Tissaphernes to Persian king, defeated by Alcibiades at Cyzicus and lose town, 80 f.; defeat Athenians at Ephesus, 104; defeat Athenians at Aegospotami, 254; appoint Lysander to take command upon the sea, 238; under Callicratidas defeated at Arginusae, appoint Aracus admiral and Lysander vice-admiral with real power, 248; reverse arrangement of Lysander concerning Sestos and restore Sestians, 268; decree that Athenians tear down Peiraeus and long walls, 270; 284; 308

Order Clearchus to help Cyrus, XI. 138 f.; wage war on Persians, 172 f.; send Lysander, then Pausanias against Thebans, IV. 310; defeated by Iphicrates, V. 60; defeated at Onidus and driven off the sea by Artaxerxes, accept peace of Antalcidas, 62, XI. 174 f.; deprive Phoebidas of his command and yet hold Cadmeia, V. 66, 352; 370; defeated for first time in pitched battle by Thebans under Pelopidas at Tegyra, 76, 344, 376, 382; under

Cleombrotus invade Boeotia, 66, 372, 388; under Cleombrotus defeated by Thebans at Leuctra, 78, XI. 178; V. 84; defeat Arcadians in tearless battle, 92; defeated by Thebans at Mantinea, 94, 350; send generals and governors to aid Dionysius, tyrant in Sicily, 420, VI. 34; defeated by Thebans at Mantinea, V. 94, 350; 98; under Agis crushed by Alexander, VII. 58; their debts cancelled by Agis, X. 30; 56; lost 2000 at Philippi, VI. 218

See also, I. 206; 396; IV. 62; 234; IX. 4; X. 74; 300; 302; XI. 82 f.

Sparto, Boeotian, defeated Athenians and slew Tolmides, their general, III. 58, V. 50

Sparton, of Rhodes, his release secured from Alexander by Phocion, VIII. 186

Spercheus, I. 78

Speusippus, most intimate friend of Dion at Athens, VI. 34; urges Dion to free Sicily, 44; 76

Sphacteria, island on which 400 Spartans were cut off, III. 230, IV. 32

Sphaerus, of Borysthenis, disciple of Zeno, taught philosophy to Cleomenes, X. 52; assisted Cleomenes in restoring ancient discipline, 72; cited, I. 220

Sphines, see "Calanus."

Sphodrias, harmost of Thespieae, attempts to seize the Peiraeus, acquitted by help of Agesilatis, V. 66 f., 326, 372

Sphragitic nymphs, see "Nymphs, Sphragitic."

Spiculus, gladiator of Nero's, slain in forum, XI. 222

Spinning, to be only task of Roman matrons, I. 132, 150

Spinther (1), see "Lentulus Spinther, L. Cornelius."

Spinther (2), P. Cornelius Lentulus, accused of engineering Pompey's appointment as "praefectus annonae," V. 244; 290; 306

Spithridates (1), induced by Lysander to revolt from Pharnabazus, IV. 300, V. 20; father of Megabates, seizes camp of Pharnabazus; offended, goes off to Sardis, V. 28

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Spithridates (2), Persian commander, slain by Cleitus, VII. 266, 370
- Spolia opima, to whom granted, I. 138, V. 454
- Sporus, Nero's favourite, taken by Nymphidius Sabinus, XI. 224
- Springs, flowing, theories as to source of their water, VI. 390
- Spurina, in command of part of Otho's forces, XI. 288, 292
- Stageira, native city of Aristotle, restored by Philip, who had destroyed it, VII. 240
- Staphylus, son of Ariadne by Theseus according to some, I. 40; according to others, son of Dionysus and one of 2 Ariadnes, 42
- Stasicrates, artist, popular with Alexander, VII. 424
- Stasius, of Cyprus (Kinkel, Ep. Græc. Frag. I. p. 30) X. 68
- Stateira (1), wife of Artaxerxes II., XI. 136; induces Artaxerxes to put Greek generals to death, therefore plotted against and poisoned by Parysatis, 138 f., 166, 168, 170 f.
- Stateira (2), sister and wife of Dareus, captured by Alexander, dies in child-birth, VII. 310 f.
- Stateira (3), daughter of Dareus, married to Alexander, VII. 418; murdered by Roxana, 436
- Stateira (4), unmarried sister of Mithridates, at his order takes poison, II. 524
- Statianus, left in guard of wagons by Antony, surrounded and slain by Parthians, IX. 222
- Statilius, Epicurean, not informed of plot to murder Caesar, VI. 148
- Statues, III. 184; 216; IV. 234; VI. 126; 154; 318; X. 322
- Statyllius, hater of Caesar, remained with Cato, VIII. 394 f.; served under Brutus, slain at Philippi, 410, VI. 242
- Stenography, introduced by Cicero, VIII. 290
- Stephanus (1), prosecuted by Apollodorus, his speech written by Demosthenes, VII. 36
- Stephanus (2), graceful singer, badly burned by naphtha, VII. 330
- Steps of Fair Shore, see "Scalæ Caci."
- Stertinius, sent by Flamininus to Thrace to deliver cities and islands there from Philip's garrisons, X. 354
- Stesilais, of Ceos, loved by both Aristides and Themistocles, II. 8, 216
- Stesimbrotus, Thasian, nearly contemporary with Cimon, II. 412
Cited: II. 6; 12; 66; 414; 448; 450; 452; III. 24; 44 f.; 74; 104
- Sthenis (1), founder of Sinopé, made statue of Autolyclus, II. 542
- Sthenis (2), of Himera, intercedes for city, V. 138
- Stilbides, freed Nicias from many of his superstitions, III. 290
- Stilpon, philosopher of Megara, brusque with Demetrius, IX. 22
- Steiris, Thrasybulus of, IV. 76
- Stiris, in Phocis, II. 406 f.
- Stoics, followed by Antiochus of Ascalon, VII. 90
- Stolo, Licinius, leads demand that one consul be plebeian, II. 194; made master of horse to dictator, his law passed, fined himself for having too much land, 196
- Stone, herald's, at Athens, I. 472; certain one when rubbed gave off colour and odour of saffron, II. 24; one of vast size fell at Aegospotami, IV. 262
- Storax-shrub, Cretan, IV. 312
- Strabo, philosopher, his "Historical Commentaries" cited, II. 564; VII. 588; cited, IV. 408
- Strabo, Pompeius, see "Pompeius Sextus Strabo, Gnaeus."
- Strato, present at death of Brutus, fights at Actium for Octavius, VI. 244
- Stratocles, invented extravagant honours for Antigonus and Demetrius, account of him, IX. 26 f.; 56 f.; proposes temporarily changing names of months to permit initiating Demetrius into mysteries, 60 f.
- Stratonice (1), daughter of Corrhagus, wife of Antigonus, mother of Demetrius and Philip, IX. 6
- Stratonice (2), daughter of Demetrius and Phila, wife of Seleucus, IX. 76; when already mother of boy by Seleucus, became wife of Antiochus, son of Seleucus, 92; 128 f.; sister of Antigonus, 134

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

Stratonice, concubine of Mithridates, v. 210

Stratonicus, his jest about Sparta, I. 298

Stroebus, told Aristotle about Callisthenes' experience with Alexander, VII. 380

Strymon, river in Thrace with city Eion on its banks, II. 422 f.

Stymphæa, in Macedonia, given Pyrrhus by Alexander, IX. 360

Sucro, Spanish river, where Pompey and Sertorius fight drawn battle, V. 158, VIII. 50

Suetonius Paulinus, see "Paulinus, Suetonius."

Suevi, v. 246; VII. 498

Sugambri, shelter remnants of Uslipites and Tencteri, VII. 496

"Suillius," Roman surname, I. 532

"Sulla," a cognomen or epithet, IX. 464

Sulla, L. Cornelius, his family, early life, personal appearance, IV. 324 f.; when quaestor under Marius gets Jugurtha from Bocchus, 328 f.; wins other successes under Marius and arouses his envy, 330 f.; ran for city praetorship, defeated, 332; elected praetor, after praetorship drove out Gordius and restored Ariobarzanes as king of Cappadocia, 334; quarrels with Marius again, 336; did good service in Social war, 338; consul with Q. Pompeius, married Caecilia, daughter of Metellus, the Pontifex Maximus, 342; contends with Marius to be appointed to the Mithridatic war, 344; pursued to house of Marius, forced to rescind decree for suspension of public business, escapes to the army, begins march against Rome, 350; bursts into Rome, summons senate, and has sentence of death passed on Marius, Sulpicius, and a few others, 354; sets out against Mithridates, 358; besieges and captures Athens, 360 f., 344; captures the Peiræus, 372; transfers his army from Athens to Bœotia, is joined by Hortensius, 374; defeats Archelaüs at Chaeroneia, 382 f.; defeats him at Orchomenus, 392 f.; meets Archelaüs near Delium and arranges terms of peace with Mithridates, 396; receives ambassadors from Mithridates, who objects to some of the terms, 400; meets Mithridates at Dardanus, makes him accept the terms, reconciles him with Ariobarzanes and Nicomedes, wins over Fimbria's soldiers, 404; lays fine of 20,000 talents upon Asia, at Athens seizes the library of Apellicon, 406; takes the hot waters at Aedepsus, prepares to cross to Brundisium, 408

Lands at Tarentum, 410; defeats Norbanus, 412; wins the troops of Scipio the consul from him, 414; defeats Marius, 416; defeats Telesinus the Samnite, 418; had 6000 people of Antemnae massacred in the circus, 422; busies himself with slaughter, 424 f.; executed 12,000 at Praeneste, 428; proclaims himself dictator, bestows gifts on low favourites, 430; celebrates costly triumph and recounts his achievements to the people, 432; consecrates tenth of all his substance to Hercules and feasts people sumptuously, loses his wife Metella, 436; marries Valeria, 438; eaten of worms, dies, 440 f.; is honourably buried, 442

See also I. 540; II. 470; 474; 480; 482; 484; 528; 610; III. 316; 326; 330; v. 126; 130 f.; 144 f.; VII. 86 f.; 106 f.; 114; 122; 442; 446; 478; VIII. 4; 10; 14; 18; 242; IX. 138; 484; 552; 558 f.; 578; 590 f.; 598; X. 384

Quoted: III. 328; IV. 368; 394; 398; 400; 402; 420; 434; 450; v. 150

His "Memoirs" dedicated to Lucullus, II. 484; cited: 544; IV. 340; 368; 370; 380; 400; 412; 440; IX. 530; 534

Sulla, Sextius, see "Sextius Sulla."
Sulpicius, C., praetor, found huge store of weapons in house of Cethegus, VII. 126

Sulpicius, Q., deposed from priesthood v. 446

Sulpicius Galba, C., see "Galba, C. Sulpicius."

Sulpicius Galba, P., invaded Mace-

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- donia late in season and wasted time, X. 326
 Sulpicius Galba, Servius, see "Galba, Ser. Sulpicius."
 Sulpicius Longus, Q., military tribune, met Brennus and agreed that Romans pay 1000 lbs. gold to get rid of Gauls, II. 164
 Sulpicius Rufus, P., allied with Marius, deposed Pompeius and transferred Mithridatic expedition from Sulla to Marius, IV. 348 f., IX. 554, 558; slain, IV. 356
 Sulpicius Rufus, Servius, interrex, declares Pompey sole consul, V. 258; rival with Cato the Younger for consulship, VIII. 354
 "Sun," surname of Alexander, son of Antony and Cleopatra, IX. 218
 Sun, its course according to the mathematicians, VIII. 148
 Sun-dial, set up in Syracuse by Dionysius the Younger, VI. 62
 Sunium, given up to Athenians by Diogenes, XI. 78
 Superstitions: X. 140; XI. 74
 Supplication, method of, II. 66, IV. 172, IX. 350
 "Sura," Latin word for leg, surname of Cornelius Lentulus, how he got it, VII. 122
 Sura, Bruttius, see "Bruttius Sura."
 Sura, P. Cor. Lentulus, see "Lentulus Sura, P. Cor."
 Surena, early career, sent against Romans, III. 376 f.; deceives Romans, 384 f.; personal appearance, 386; defeats Crassus at Carrhae, 388 f.; gets Crassus into his power by treachery, 404; sends head and hand of Crassus to Hyrodes in Armenia, 416; put to death by Hyrodes, 422; quoted, 410; 414
 Surgery: V. 74; IX. 476
 Surnames, among Greeks and Romans, whence derived, I. 532, IV. 142
 Susa, V. 38; 416; VII. 34; entered by Alexander, 332; 418; XI. 140
 Συσσίτια, instituted by Lycurgus, I. 232; details concerning, 236
 Sutrium, besieged by Tuscans, II. 176; lost and recovered in one day, 182 f.
 Sybaris, in Italy, its site colonized by Athenians and named Thurii, III. 34; 418; V. 340
 Sybaris, daughter of Themistocles, married Nicomedes the Athenian, II. 88
 Sycophants, etymology of word, I. 470; set upon Rhoesaces, II. 436; their influence upon Nicias, III. 222
 Symbolum, city, VI. 208
 Synalus, Carthaginian, welcomes Dion at Minoa, VI. 54
 Syracusans, wronged allies of Athens, IV. 44; III. 210; defeated by Nicias, 264; burn Athenian camp at Catana, 266; 270; despair of their city, 274; 282; defeat Athenians in great sea fight, 292 f.; sent Gylippus away on account of his greed, VI. 460, III. 304 f.; maltreat first wife of Dionysius the Elder, VI. 6; from country join Dion, 58; make Dion and Megacles generals with absolute power, 60 f.; with Dion's help repel attack by Dionysius the Younger from the acropolis, 64 f.; reward Dion's mercenaries, 68; defeat and slay Philistus, 76; 80; elect Heracleides and 24 others generals, 82; attack Dion but are easily routed, 84; 86; summon Dion, who saves them, 88 f.; discharge fleet, 106; put themselves under protection of Hicetas of Leontini, 264; put wives, daughters, and friends of Hicetas to death, 340; put Mamercus to death, 342; reward Timoleon, 346, 350; besieged by Marcellus, V. 474 f.; taken with great booty, 484 f.; accuse Marcellus before senate at Rome, become reconciled to him, 496 f.
 Syracuse, IV. 62; siege of, III. 268 f.; 290; II. 212; seized by Callippus, III. 260; VI. 120; its state before expedition of Timoleon, 262; its acropolis surrendered to Timoleon, 290, 298; freed by Timoleon, 310 f.; its citadel destroyed by Timoleon, given new colonists by him, 312 f.; its territory invaded by Hicetas, 336; base for Agathocles in attacking Carthage, IX. 388; 416; in confusion after death of tyrant Hieronymus, V. 466; besieged and captured by Marcellus, 468 f.
 Syria, VI. 370; taken from Tigranes by Lucullus, V. 202; 214; declared

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Roman province by Pompey, 216; triumphed over by Pompey, 230; 278; the province of, voted to Gabinius with support of Clodius, VII. 156; governed by Dolabella, 190; allotted to Crassus, III. 360; 366; threatened by Parthians, IX. 196; 214
- Syrians, those who lost Sinopé descended from Syrus, son of Apollo, and Sinopé, daughter of Asopis, II. 544
- Syrmus, king of Triballi, defeated by Alexander, VII. 252
- Syrtis, Great, VI. 54
- Syrus, son of Apollo and Sinopé, II. 544
- Tachos, Egyptian, gets services of Agesilaüs, v. 100 f.; sails against Egyptians, 104; deserted by Agesilaüs for Nectanabis, flees, 106
- Tacita, Muse especially honoured by Numa, I. 332
- "Tactics," of Evangelus, studied by Philopoemen, X. 264
- Taenarum, V. 174; VIII. 210; IX. 290
- Taenarus, X. 98
- Tagonius, river in Spain, VIII. 42
- Taladius, or Talasio, explanation of use of word in marriage ceremony, I. 130 f., v. 124
- Talaura, reached by Lucullus, II. 526
- Tamynæ, in Eretria, VIII. 170
- Tanagra, battle between Athenians and Spartans, II. 458, III. 28; Thebans defeat Spartans, v. 376
- Tanusius, cited, VII. 496
- Taphosiris, where Antony and Cleopatra played, IX. 338
- Tarentines, in army of Achæans, X. 280. See "Tarentines."
- Tarchetius, story of how Romulus and Remus were born of his daughter's maid, I. 94
- Tarcondemus, king of Upper Cilicia, fights under Antony, IX. 276
- Tarentines, invite Pyrrhus to come to their help against Romans, IX. 384; invite him back from Sicily, 422; many of them slain and 30,000 sold into slavery, III. 184
- Tarentum, IX. 382; 392; garrisoned by Pyrrhus before he left for Sicily, 418; entered by Pyrrhus once more with 20,000 foot and 3000 horse, 426; v. 506; lost by treachery, recovered by Fabius Maximus, III. 178 f., 200; governed by T. Flaminius, X. 324; II. 342; X. 214; IV. 410; where Octavius and Antony make peaceful agreement, IX. 216; station of Octavius' fleet, 278
- Tarpeia (1), one of first Vestals appointed by Numa, I. 340
- Tarpeia (2), daughter of Tarpeius, betrayed citadel to Sabines, crushed by shields piled upon her, I. 140; wrongly called daughter of Tatius, 142; buried on Capitol, 144
- "Tarpeian Hill," name of Capitol in Numa's time, I. 328. See also "Tarpeius."
- Tarpeian Rock, cliff on Capitol from which malefactors were hurled, I. 144; IV. 324; IX. 590
- Tarpeius, captain of guard on Capitol, had daughter Tarpeia, I. 140; convicted of treason by Romulus, 142
- "Tarpeius," former name of Capitol, named from Tarpeia, I. 144
- Tarquin, son of Demaratus, first to ride in chariot in his triumphal procession, I. 138; vowed temple of Jupiter Capitolinus, I. 144, 536
- Tarquin, the Proud, son or grandson of Tarquin who vowed to build temple of Jupiter Capitolinus, I. 536; acted as tyrant, 502, 530; built temple of Jupiter Capitolinus, had Tuscan craftsmen place chariot of terra-cotta on roof, 534 f., 540; driven out by Brutus, 504; sent envoys with letters to Rome to make overtures, 506; property of his family confiscated and a field dedicated to Mars, 518 f.; helped by Tuscans, attacks Rome and is defeated, 522; assisted by Lars Porsena of Clusium, attacks Rome but withdraws without capturing it, 542; helped by Latins but defeated, IV. 122, VI. 420
- Tarquinius, Vestal, devoted a field and honoured by permission to marry, I. 520
- Tarquinius Collatinus, elected as Brutus' colleague, I. 504; advocated giving banished Tarquins their

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- moneys and effects, denounced by Brutus, 506; uncle of the Aquillii and Vitellii, 508; 516; withdraws from city, 518
- Tarquins, opposed by Junius Brutus, VI. 126
- Tarracina, see "Terracina."
- Tarrutius, made second Larentia his wife, I. 102
- Tarsus, under Seleucus, IX. 118; Antipater of, X. 162
- Tarutius, philosopher and mathematician, companion of Varro, calculated exact time of Romulus' birth, I. 120
- Tatia, daughter of Tatius, wife of Numa, preferred quiet life, died 13 years after marriage, I. 316; mother of Pompilia, 376
- Tatienses, one of 3 divisions of Roman people, named from Tatius, I. 152
- Tatius, made general of Sabines, I. 140; accepts Romulus' challenge to battle, 144; to be joint king and general with Romulus, 150; at first sat apart with his 100 councillors, dwelt near site of temple of Moneta, 152; gave his daughter Tatia in marriage to Numa, 316; his death, 162, 166
- Taureas, struck by Alcibiades, IV. 42
- Taurion, officer and friend of Philip, poisons Aratus, XI. 118 f.
- Tauromenium, in Sicily, ruled by Andromachus, welcomes Timoleon's expedition, VI. 284
- Taurus, chief general of Minos, victor in first funeral games in honour of Androgeus, treated Athenian youth cruelly, I. 30; worsted by Theseus, 36
- Taurus, Statilius, commanded Octavius' land forces at Actium, IX. 284
- Taurus, mountain range, II. 548; 552; battle of, 556; 572; 578; citadels of pirates near, V. 184; VI. 370
- Taxes, those levied by Aristides, II. 286; orphans taxed by Camillus, 96; those on wealth increased by Cato the Elder, 354; no special ones at Rome until consulship of Hirtius and Pansa, VI. 452; inhabitants of Asia have one-third remitted by Caesar, VII. 554; amount levied for war with Antony, IX. 268
- Tax-gatherers, greatly afflict Asia, checked by Lucullus, II. 492; 532
- Taxiles (1), ruled realm in India larger than Egypt, wins friendship of Alexander, VII. 390; 408
- Taxiles (2), general of Mithridates, comes from Thrace and Macedonia, summons Archelaüs to join him, IV. 372; 388; II. 554; quoted, 558
- Taygetus, shaken by earthquake, II. 452; V. 416; X. 18
- Technon, servant of Aratus, XI. 10; 16; 42
- Tectosages, Copillus their chieftain, IV. 330
- Tegea, I. 72; IV. 318; V. 94; X. 28; 36; 56; taken by Antigonus, 100
- Tegeans, dispute with Athenians about position in line at Plataea, II. 248; 272
- Tegyra, where Thebans defeat Spartans in pitched battle for first time, V. 76, 376, 382, 386
- Teireos, eunuch, tells Dareios of death of his wife, VII. 310
- Telamon, son of Endeüs the daughter of Sciron and Chariclo, I. 20
- Telamon, in Tyrrenia, landing-place of Marius, IX. 578
- Telecleides (1), Comic poet, cited (Kock, I. p. 219) III. 220; (p. 220) 8, 50
- Telecleides (2), urges Timoleon to be brave, VI. 276
- Telemachus, sent by Timoleon to receive surrender of acropolis of Syracuse, VI. 290
- Telephus, son of Hercules, father of Roma, I. 92
- Teles, mentioned in verse of Hermippus, III. 96
- Telesides, sent by Syracusans to implore help of Dion, VI. 83
- Telesinus, Samnite, nearly overthrew Sulla at gates of Rome, IV. 418; 451
- Telesippa, free-born woman with army of Alexander, VII. 346
- Telestus, his dithyrambic poems sent to Alexander, VII. 242
- Teleutias, half-brother of Agesilaüs on his mother's side, appointed admiral, seizes ships and dockyards of Corinthians, V. 56
- Tellus, quoted by Solon as happier than Croesus, I. 480, 564

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Tellus, temple of, IV. 354; VI. 166
 Telmessus, Aristander of, VII. 226
 Tementid gate, of Syracuse, VI. 60
 Tempe, vale of, occupied by army led by Themistocles, II. 18; v. 306; compared with valley of Apsus river, X. 328
 Tencteri, see "Tenteritae."
 Tenedos, near it naval battle between Lucullus and Neoptolemus, II. 480
 Tenian trireme, deserts from Persians to Greeks, II. 38
 Tensa, sacred chariot, IV. 180
 Tenteritae (Tencteri), defeated by Caesar, VII. 496
 Teratius, ordered by Tarchetius to destroy twins born to handmaid, leaves them at river-side, I. 94
 Terentia, wife of Cicero, VII. 100, VIII. 280; her character, takes message of Vestal virgins to Cicero, VII. 150; hates Clodius, is jealous of Clodia, 154; divorced by Cicero, 186
 Terentius, soldier, said to have slain Galba, XI. 266
 Terentius, L., tentmate of Pompey, bribed to kill him, v. 122
 Terentius Culeo, see "Culeo, Terentius." Terentius Varro, see "Varro, Terentius."
 Teribazus, father of Arpates, XI. 202; courtier of Artaxerxes, 136; advises Artaxerxes to fight at once, 140; gives him new mount at Cunaxa, 148; saves him from Cadusians, 184 f.; angry at Artaxerxes, seeks to embitter Darius against him, 192 f.; slain, 198
 "Termerian mischief," named from Termerus, who killed opponents by dashing his skull against theirs, I. 22
 Termerus, slain by Herakles, I. 22
 Terminus, Roman god, temple to him by Numa, I. 362
 Terpander, though foreigner honoured at Sparta, X. 24; cited, I. 272
 Terracina, VII. 578; IX. 562; 568
 Tertia (1), daughter of Aemilius Paulus and sister of younger Scipio, married son of Cato the Elder, II. 364, VI. 378
 Tertia (2), sister of Clodius, wife of Marcius Rex, VII. 154
 "Tesserarius," Latin for messenger, XI. 258
 Testudo, military, described, IX. 240, 250
 Tethys, in Tuscany, oracle of; its message to Tarchetius, I. 94
 Tetrapolis, in Attica, relieved of Marathonian bull by Theseus, I. 26
 Teucer, informer against Alcibiades, IV. 54
 Teutamus, commander of Silver-shields, envious of Eumenes, who works on his superstition, VIII. 116; with Antigones plots against life of Eumenes, 126, plots to surrender Eumenes to Antigonos, 130
 Teutones, invade Gaul and rout Romans, VIII. 6; with Cimbri invade Italy; details about them, IX. 488; flow into Spain, 496; separating from Cimbri, march through Liguria against Marius, 502; defeated by Marius at Aquae Sextiae, 510; their kings captured by Sequani among Alps, 528
 Thaïs, Athenian, mistress of Ptolemy, proposes to Alexander burning house of Xerxes, VII. 336
 Thalaea, wife of Pinarius, first woman to quarrel with her mother-in-law Gegania in reign of Tarquin the Proud, I. 394
 Thalamae, had temple of Pasiphaë, X. 20
 Thales (1), lyric poet of Crete, persuaded by Lycurgus to go to Sparta on a mission, I. 212; though foreigner honoured at Sparta, X. 24
 Thales (2), engaged in trade, I. 408; only wise man who carried his speculations beyond realm of practical, 410; declined golden tripod, 412; proves desirability of bachelorhood to Solon, 416; adopted Cybisthus, his sister's son, 418; foresaw where market-place of Miletus would be and asked to be buried there, 434
 Thallus, son of Cineas, distinguishes himself under Phocion, VIII. 172
 Thapsacus, vessels of every sort built for Alexander there, VII. 414
 Thapsus (1), near Syracuse, III. 266
 Thapsus (2), battle of, VII. 566, VIII. 378

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Thargelia, her political influence, III. 68
- Thargelion, month of, II. 138; IV. 98
- Tharrhymas, father of Alcetas, introduced Greek customs and letters in Epeirus, IX. 346
- Thasian marble, VIII. 258
- Thasian sea, VI. 208
- Thasians, in revolt from Athens, conquered by Cimon, their lands and gold mines given Athens, II. 446
- Thasos, Steimbrotus of, III. 46
- Theagenes, brother of Timocleia, fell at Chaeroneia, VII. 256
- Theano, priestess, daughter of Menon, refused to curse Alcibiades, IV. 60
- Thearidas, citizen of Megalopolis, captured by Cleomenes, X. 104, 264 f.
- Thearides, brother of Dionysius the Elder, married Areté, VI. 12
- Theatre, Pompey's, opened by him, V. 252; of Marcellus, dedicated by his mother Octavia, 522; one built by Cleomenes in territory of Megalopolis and contest instituted for prize of 40 minas, X. 74
- Thebans, not defeated by Theseus but persuaded to a truce, I. 68; retained in Amphictyonic Council through Themistocles, II. 56; give information to Mardonius, 260; did most of fighting for medizing Greeks, routed by Athenians at Plataea, 270; suspected by Spartans after Mantinea, V. 350; pass decree permitting Athenians to go through Boeotia to expel tyrants at Athens, 354; slay Lysander and repulse Spartans before Haliartus, IV. 362; engaged in Boeotian war, 308; rout Orchomenians at Coroneia, V. 46; enslaved by Archias and Leontidas, 352; defeat Spartans for first time in pitched battle under Epaminondas at Tegyra, 76; defeat Spartans at Plataea, Thespieae, Tanagra, and Tegyra, 374 f., 380; under Epaminondas defeat Spartans at Leuctra, 78; ravage Laconia, 84 f.; defeat Athenians at Cenchreae, 398; send army to free Pelopidas from Alexander of Pherae, 408; treat Orchomenians severely, 522; send Pelopidas as ambassador to Persian king, 414; send Pelopidas to assist cities of Thessaly against Alexander of Pherae, 420; send expedition under Malcitas and Diogeiton to avenge death of Pelopidas and impose severe terms upon Alexander, 430; fight battle of Mantinea, 96; brought into league against Philip, VII. 40 f.; attack Macedonian garrison, 54; given ancient form of government by Demetrius, IX. 114; in sympathy with Macedonians through Brachylas but won over by Flamininus, X. 336; deprived of half their territory by Sulla, IV. 390
- Thebé, daughter of Jason, wife of Alexander of Pherae, visits Pelopidas in prison and conceives great hatred for her husband, V. 410; 420; has her husband slain, 430
- Thebes, I. 68; V. 42; 350; 66; 354; mother-city of Agesilaus' royal line, 330; taken and razed by Alexander, II. 140, VII. 56, 252; IV. 390
- Themis, seated beside Zeus, VII. 376
- Themiscyra, near river Thermodon, II. 510
- Themistocles, son of Neocles, of obscure family, II. 2; his character while yet a boy, 4; his teachers, 6; early interested in public life, always opponent of Aristides, 8; even as young man very ambitious, proposes that revenue from silver mines at Laurium be used for triremes, 10; made Athenians sailors instead of soldiers, 12; very ambitious, 14; made general when Persian invasion threatened, 16; his preparatory measures, 18; surrenders his command to Eurybiades to secure harmony, 20; writes on stones appeals to Ionians with Xerxes' forces, 24; induces people to abandon Athens and trust to their ships, 28; speaks against Eurybiades' proposal to sail to the Isthmus, 32; by a ruse forces Greeks to remain at Salamis, 36; sacrifices 3 royal prisoners, 38; at the battle of Salamis, 40; sounds Aristides, 44; by a ruse gets Xerxes to return to Asia, 46; highly honoured for his services, 48
- Rebuilds and fortifies Athens, keeps Spartans from preventing the work, equips the Piraeus, 52; in-

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- creases privileges of common people, 54; opposes Spartan proposal to exclude from Amphictyonic Alliance all cities which had not taken part in fighting against the Mede, wins hatred of allies by trying to exact money from them, 56; assailed by Timocreon, the lyric poet of Rhodes, 58; offends his fellow-citizens, 60; ostracized, indicted for treason, 62; crossed to Corcyra, then fled to Epirus, 64; fled to Aegae, sent on his way by Nicogenes, 70; interviews Persian king, 72 f.; wins favour with him, 78; three cities given him for bread, wine, and meat, 80; escapes from treacherous attacks on his life, 82; lived in honour at Magnesia, 84; committed suicide in his sixty-fifth year, left 3 sons, 86; had splendid tomb in market-place of Magnesia, 88
See also II. 214 f.; 216 f.; 222 f.; 230; 234 f.; 280; 283; 292 f.; 324; 386 f.; 398; 416 f.; 426; 430; 436; 462; III. 18; 430; V. 392; VII. 152; X. 380.
 Quoted: I. 14; II. 6; 10; 16; 32; 34; 44 f.; 50 f.; 56 f.; 60; 74 f.; 80; 216; 236; 322
- Themistocles, of Athens, descendant of famous Themistocles, Plutarch's intimate friend, II. 90
- Theocritus, seer, points out victim to Pelopidas, V. 394
- Theodectas, citizen of Phaselis, his memory honoured by Alexander, VII. 272
- Theodoros (1), played part of herald in profanation of Eleusinian mysteries, IV. 48, 60
- Theodoros (2), Athenian high priest, IV. 96
- Theodoros (3), of Tarentum, contemporary of Alexander, VII. 284
- Theodoros (4), the Atheist, quoted, VIII. 232
- Theodoros (5), tutor of Antyllus, crucified, IX. 319
- Theodotes, with whom Dion was accused of plotting to overthrow government, VI. 24; uncle of Heraclides, 94; pardoned by Dion, 98
- Theodotus (1), seer, prevents Pyrrhus taking oath, IX. 362
- Theodotus (2), of Chios, teacher of rhetoric, advises Pompey's death, V. 316; shows Pompey's head to Caesar, VII. 554; escapes Caesar's vengeance, put to death by M. Brutus, V. 324
- Theogeiton, Magarian, speaks in Hellenic council, II. 274
- Theomnestus, Academic, his lectures attended by Brutus at Athens, VI. 176
- Theophanes, Lesbian, V. 224; prefect of engineers in Pompey's camp, VII. 178; said to have persuaded Ptolemy to abandon Egypt, V. 246; thinks Egypt a better refuge than Parthia for Pompey, 314, 318; cited, 212
- Theophilus (1), made Alexander a helmet, VII. 322
- Theophilus (2), father of Hipparchus, Antony's steward in Corinth, IX. 292
- Theophrastus (1), bequeathed his books to Neleus of Scepsis, his treatises in library of Apellicon the Teian, IV. 406; praised by Cicero, VII. 140
 Cited: I. 232; 414; 494; (On Royalty) II. 68; 288 f.; III. 66; 102; (Ethics) 110; 240; 250; IV. 24; 266; 284; V. 4; 102; VII. 24; 40; 232; VIII. 34; 324; X. 4
- Theophrastus (2), officer of Antigonus, slain by Aratus, XI. 52
- Theopompus (1), king of Sparta, in his reign first ephors appointed, I. 224
- Theopompus (2), king of Sparta, said by Messenians to have been slain in battle with Aristomenes, X. 48
- Theopompus (3), comic poet, cited, IV. 268
- Theopompus (4), Theban associated with Pelopidas in expulsion of Spartans at Thebes, V. 356
- Theopompus (5), Spartan polemarch, slain at Tegyra, V. 380
- Theopompus (6), cited: I. 224; II. 52; 68; 84; IV. 94; 276; 318; V. 26; 86; 90; VI. 50; 270; VII. 8; 30; 34; 42; 50. 62.
- Theopompus (7), collector of fables, shown favour by Caesar, VII. 554
- Theopompus, king of Sparta, with king

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Polydorus inserted clause in a rhetra, I. 222; quoted, 268; 298
- Theoris, priestess, her death brought about by Demosthenes, VII. 36
- Theorus, ridiculed by Aristophanes, IV. 4
- Theramenes, one of 3 best citizens of Athens, flouted as alien from Ceos and dubbed "Cothurnus," III. 212; IV. 2; helped Alcibiades defeat Byzantians, 90; advises acceptance of Spartan decree, 270
- Thermodon, river, later called Haemon, I. 64; II. 510; in country of Amazons, V. 208; discussion as to what it is as mentioned in oracle, VII. 46
- Thermopylae, death of Leonidas there, II. 24; defeat of Antiochus the Great by Romans there, 336 f., 388, X. 364; V. 46; VII. 252; IX. 52
- Thermus, Minucius, see "Minucius Thermus."
- Thersippus, Athenian, contemporary of Solon, I. 494
- Therycion, sent by Cleomenes to slay ephors, X. 64; commits suicide, 118 f.
- Therycleian bowls, VI. 442; X. 278
- Thesaurus, subterranean chamber at Messene, X. 310
- Theseia, place at Delphi said to be named after Theseus, I. 10
- Theseia, precincts at Athens renamed Heracleia by Theseus, I. 80
- Theseid, author of, wrote "Insurrection of the Amazons," which is pure fable, I. 64
- Theseis, tonsure named after Theseus, I. 10
- Theseum, I. 64
- Theseus, compared with Romulus, founded Athens, I. 4; his lineage, 6; son of Aegeus and Aethra, 8; reared by Pittheus, visited Delphi on coming of age, 10; vigorous, brave, and intelligent as a young man, told truth about his birth, decides to go to Athens by land, 12; is kinsman of Heracles, whom he greatly admired, slew Periphetes and Sinis, 16 f.; begot Melanippus by Periguné, slew Crommyonian sow, 18; slew Sciron, 20; killed Cercyon and Procrustes, arrived at Athens, 22; acknowledged as his son by Aegeus, 24; slew party of Pallantidae in ambush, mastered Marathonian bull, 26; volunteers to go to Crete as one of the tribute of youths, 32; on reaching Crete got from Ariadne the thread which guided him through the labyrinth, slew the Minotaur, sailed off with Ariadne, 36; other stories about Theseus and Ariadne, 38 f.; forgot to hoist white sail as he drew near Attica, 44; buries his father, 46
- Instituted festival of Oschophoria, 48; settled residents of Attica in one city, named it Athens, instituted the Metoecia, 52; invited new settlers, classified them, coined money, 54; attached Megara to Attica, set up pillar on the Isthmus, instituted games there, 56; voyaged into Euxine with Heracles against Amazons, received Antiopé as reward of his valour, 58; waged war with Amazons at Athens, 60 f.; makes treaty of peace with them, 62; after death of Antiopé married Phaedra, 64; other stories of his marriages, said to have aided Lapithae against Centaurs, 66; became friend of Peirithoüs, invited to latter's wedding, 68; took part in rape of Helen, 70; imprisoned by Aidoneus, 72; warred on by Tyndaridae, 74 f.; released by Aidoneus at intercession of Heracles, finding Athens unfriendly, sailed off to Scyros, 80; slain by king Lycomedes, afterwards honoured by Athenians as demigod, 82; his body brought to Athens by Cimon and buried near gymnasium of Ptolemy, 84, II. 428
- Thesmophoria, festival of, V. 352; VII. 76
- Thesmophoroi, VI. 118
- Thesmothetai, took oath to keep statutes of Solon, I. 472; III. 26
- Thespieae, had Spartan harvest Sphodrias, V. 66; 372; 374; Thebans defeat Spartans there and slay Phoebidas, 376; IX. 96
- Thespis, develops tragedy and acts in his own plays, reproved by Solon, I. 488

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Thesprotians, had Phaëthon as first king after the flood, IX. 346
- Thessalian cavalry, of Pyrrhus, IX. 400
- Thessalian cities, a number destroyed by Alexander of Pherae, V. 418
- Thessalian merchants, robbed by Dolopians of Scyros, II. 426
- Thessalians, conquered at Ceresus by Boeotians, II. 138; took no part in fighting against the Mede, 56; 448; III. 56; their country ravaged by Agesilaüs, V. 42; freed from tyranny of Alexander of Pherae by Pelopidas, 402; 406; give splendid funeral to Pelopidas, 424; receive back from Alexander the cities taken away, 430; proclaimed free at Isthmian games by Flamininus, X. 350; given their freedom by Caesar, VII. 554
- Thessalonica, VI. 230; VIII. 258
- Thessalonice, murdered by her son Antipater, IX. 86, 360
- Thessalus, son of Peisistratus and Timonassa, II. 376
- Thessalus, son of Cimon, II. 452; III. 82; brings charge of profanation of mysteries against Alcibiades, IV. 50, 60
- Thessalus, tragic actor, sent to Pixodarus in Caria by Alexander, VII. 248; assigned as actor to Nicocreon, defeated by Athenodorus, 308
- Thessaly, I. 64; medizes, II. 18; traversed by Xerxes, 234; 240; 404; ruled 10 months by Alexander of Pherae, XI. 208; mastered by Demetrius, IX. 96; overrun by Pyrrhus, 98, 362; 380; Philip crushed there, VI. 370; X. 334; entered by Flamininus, 338; IV. 360; V. 286
- Theste, how treated by her brother Dionysius the Elder, VI. 42 f.
- Thetes, or Hectemorioi, tilled lands for rich, paying one-sixth of increase, or pledged their persons for debt, I. 436; lowest property class at Athens, 450; supported Peisistratus, 486
- Thetis, temple of, v. 422
- Thimbron, Spartan general in command against Persians, XI. 174
- Thirty tyrants, set up in Athens by Lysander, IV. 110 f., 274; overthrown by Athenians from Phyle, IV. 290
- Thoas, one of 3 brothers on expedition with Theseus, I. 58
- Thoenon, prominent Syracusan, one of first to invite Pyrrhus to Sicily, executed by him, IX. 422
- Thonis, courtesan, IX. 66
- "Thor," Phoenician word for cow, IV. 382
- Thoranius, sent out by Metellus, slain by Sertorius, VIII. 30
- Thorax (1), helps Lysander storm Lampsacus, IV. 254; executed for having money in his private possession, 284
- Thorax (2), remains by dead body of Antigonus, IX. 72
- Toth, month in Egyptian calendar, I. 122
- Thrace, gold mines of, II. 412; Persians driven out of it by Cimon, 422; 1000 settlers sent there by Pericles, III. 34; 56; 228; regions there subdued by Ti. Sempronius, II. 334; being overrun by Ariarathes, IV. 358; Sadalas, king of, IX. 276
- Thracia, village near Cyzicus, II. 498
- Thracians, checked in their inroads into Chersonesus, III. 58; IV. 106; in army of Aemilius Paulus, VI. 392; 400; in army of Lucullus, II. 560; VII. 228
- Thrasea, authority for story about Marcia and Cato, VIII. 292; chiefly followed Munatius' treatise on Cato, 324
- Thraso, father of Thrasybulus, IV. 104
- Thrasybulus, son of Thraso, denounces Alcibiades at Athens, IV. 104
- Thrasybulus, son of Lycus, IV. 2; helps Alcibiades at Samos, 76; occupied Phyle, assisted by Thebans, 310; sallied from Thebes and overthrew tyrants at Athens, v. 354, 370, XI. 34; assisted Thebans against Spartans, IV. 314
- Thrasydaeus, sent by Philip on embassy to Thebes, VII. 42
- Thrasyllus, repulsed at Ephesus, with Alcibiades' aid defeats Pharnabazus, IV. 84
- Thrasymené, lake in Tuscany, where

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Hannibal defeated Flaminius, III. 124
- "Threskeuein," means celebrating extravagant and superstitious ceremonies, VII. 228
- "Thriambus," name for Dionysus, V. 496
- Thriasian gates, afterwards called Dipylum, III. 86
- Thriasian plain, II. 42; V. 68; 356; XI. 76
- Thucydides, son of Melesias, leader of the "Good and True," for long time opponent of Pericles, III. 22, 32, 212; ostracized, 16, 46, 202, 248; saying about Pericles, 22
- Thucydides, historian, son of Olorus, how connected with family of Cimon, had gold mines in Thrace, died in Skapté Hylé, II. 412; served as model in oratory for Cato the Elder, 308; III. 78; his power as a writer, 208; 210; IV. 54; VII. 32
- Cited: (I. 18. 3) VII. 14; (I. 127. 1) III. 94; (I. 137) II. 68, 72; (II. 39. 1) I. 288; (II. 65. 8) III. 50; (II. 65. 9) 24; (IV. 80) I. 290; (V. 45) IV. 220; (V. 64-75) V. 92; (VI. 15. 4) IV. 16; (VI. 16. 2) 24; (VII. 36-41) III. 280; (VII. 50. 4) 218; (VII. 86. 2) 306; (VIII. 73. 3) IV. 28; (VIII. 76. 4) III. 82; III. 276
- Thudippus, condemned to death with Phocion, VIII. 228
- Thurii, settled by Athenian colonists on site of Sybaris, III. 34; founded by Dionysius Chalceus, 224; IV. 58; its people attack Bruttians, VI. 298; VII. 70
- Thurium, conical-shaped hill, later called Orthopagus, in Boeotia, IV. 382; 384; 390
- Thuro, mother of Chaeron, IV. 382
- Thyateira, IV. 404
- Thyestes, VII. 94
- Thymoetadae, township of, where part of Theseus' fleet was built, I. 38
- Thyrea, captured from Aeginetans, III. 230
- Thyreatis, IX. 454
- Thyrus, freedman of Octavius, flogged by Antony, IX. 304
- Tibareni, desert of, II. 510; 514; subdued by Lucullus, 526
- Tiber, river, I. 90; II. 136; island in, XI. 286
- Tiberius, see "Brutus, Ti. Junius."
- Tidius Sextius, joins Pompey in Macedonia, V. 282
- Tifatum, mountain in Campania, IV. 410
- Tigellinus, with Nymphidius Sabinus by offer of bribe gets soldiers to proclaim Galba emperor, XI. 208 f.; 220; 230; tutor and teacher of Nero, bribes Vinius and escapes vengeance, 240 f.; 244; his adherents went over to Galba, 258; cuts his throat, 278
- Tigranes, king of Armenia, II. 498; son-in-law of Mithridates, his power, 512; asked to surrender Mithridates, 526; 534; his character and career, 536; 538; 590; attacked by Lucullus, 542; 544; warred on by Lucullus, 546 f.; defeated at Tigranocerta, 550 f.; 562 f.; asked by king of Parthians to give Mesopotamia as price of alliance, 570; attacked by Lucullus again, 572; defeated by him, 574 f.; 584; 140, III. 398, IV. 412; V. 202; ravaged Cappadocia, II. 586; V. 186; offers 100 talents for person of Mithridates, receives diadem back from Pompey on condition that he pay 6000 talents, 202, II. 618; quoted, 558
- Tigranes, the Younger, in revolt from his father, invites Pompey to invade Armenia, V. 202; dissatisfied with Pompey's offer of Sophéné, put in chains for triumph, demanded back by Phraates, 204; led in Pompey's triumph, 230; taken from Pompey by Clodius, 240
- Tigranocerta, its inhabitants, besieged by Lucullus, II. 552; captured and its transplanted inhabitants sent to their own cities, 566; 592
- Tigris, Seleucia on it, II. 540; 548
- Tigurini, defeated by Lucullus, VII. 484 f.
- Tilphossium, skirmish near it between Sulla and Dorylaüs, IV. 392
- Timaea, wife of Agis, Spartan king, corrupted by Alcibiades, IV. 64, 292, V. 4 f.
- Timaeus (I), historian, son of Andro-

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- machus, ruler of Tauromenium, VI. 284; criticized for slandering Philistinus, 78; hoped to surpass Thucydides but failed, III. 208 f.
 Cited: I. 204; 302; III. 210; 274; 306; VI. 12; 28; 68; 76; 270; 344; 460
- Timaeus (2), advises Andocides, his fellow-prisoner, to turn State's evidence in matter of Hermae, IV. 56
- Timagenes, introduced Alexas to Antony, IX. 302; cited, V. 244 f.
- Timagoras, Athenian ambassador, bribed by Artaxerxes, executed by Athenians, V. 418, XI. 180
- Timandra, courtesan, buried Alcibiades, IV. 112
- Timanthes, friend of Aratus, XI. 26; painted battle between Achaeans and Aetolians, 74
- Timesileos, tyrant of Sinopé, driven out with aid of Athenians, III. 60 f.
- Timesitheus, general of Liparians, secures release of Roman envoys, honoured by Rome, II. 116
- Timocleia, sister of Theagenes, spared by Alexander, VII. 254 f.
- Timocleides, chosen chief magistrate of Sicyon, died, XI. 4
- Timocrates (1), Rhodian, sent by Artaxerxes to bribe influential Greeks, XI. 174
- Timocrates (2), friend of Dionysius the Younger, given Areté as wife, VI. 42; 56; deserted by Leontines and Campanians, 58; flees from Syracuse, 60
- Timocrates, speech against, written by Demosthenes for another to deliver, VII. 36
- Timocreon, lyric poet of Rhodes, his attack on Themistocles quoted, sent into exile on charge of medizing, II. 58
- Timodemus, father of Timoleon, VI. 266, 354
- Timolais, guest-friend of Philopocemen, X. 298
- Timoleon, Corinthian, VI. 262; family and character, 266 f.; rescues his brother Timophanes in battle, 268; causes his death for being tyrant, 270; gave up all public life, 272; lived retired nearly 20 years, 274; nominated general for expedition to Syracuse, 276; sets sail, 278; escapes Carthaginians at Rhegium by a ruse, 282; puts in at Tauromenium in Sicily, 284; welcomed by none except people of Adranum, 286; defeats Hicetas before Adranum, 288; joined by other cities, receives surrender of Dionysius, 290; receives reinforcements from Corinth, 298; escapes assassination, 300; sends grain to Syracuse from Catania, 304; occupies Messina, then marches against Syracuse, 308; drives Hicetas from Syracuse, 312; invites new settlers to Syracuse, 314; divides land among them, proceeds to free other cities, 318; marches to river Crimesus against Carthaginians, 322; defeats them, 324 f.; returns to Syracuse, 332
 Defeats Hicetas, 336 f.; takes Hicetas prisoner, 338; defeats Mamercus near river Abolus, 340; receives surrender of Mamercus, 342; assists new colonists, 344; ascribes all his successes to fortune, 346; attacked by two popular leaders at Syracuse, 348; loses his sight, 350; dies, 352; quoted, 348
See also 122; II. 138.
- Timolonteum, gymnasium in honour of Timoleon, VI. 354
- Timon, misanthrope, his words to Alcibiades, IV. 42; account of him, IX. 296 f.
- Timon, Phlasiian: cited, I. 332; III. 10; (Silli) VI. 34
- Timonassa, of Argolis, married Peisistratus, II. 376
- "Timoneum," name of Antony's dwelling on Pharos, IX. 300
- Timonides, Leucadian, urges Dion to free Sicily, VI. 46; put in command of mercenaries by Dion, 66; cited, 68; 76
- Timophanes, brother of Timoleon, slain at his instigation, VI. 268 f.
- Timotheus (1), son of Conon, his saying about fortune, banished, IV. 338; right in his criticism of Chares, V. 344; VI. 344; prosecuted for debt by Apollodorus, VII. 36
- Timotheus (2), X. 24; cited: (Bergk III^d. p. 622) V. 38, IX. 104; (Persians, opening verse) X. 284

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Timotheus (3), Macedonian soldier, VII. 286
- Timoxenus, X. 94; chosen general by Achaean league in place of Aratus, XI. 86; 108
- Tinga, wife of Antaeus, bore Sophax to Heracles, VIII. 24
- Tingis, city, sheltered Ascalis, forced to surrender, VIII. 24
- Tiribazus, approached by Antalcidas regarding peace, V. 62
- Tiro, Cicero's freedman, cited, VII. 186; 208
- Tisamenus, prophesies to Pausanias and the Hellenic army, II. 244
- Tisander, son of Epilycus, father of wife of Xanthippus, III. 104
- Tisaphernes, see "Tissaphernes."
- Tisias, plaintiff against Alcibiades in "De Bigis" of Isocrates, IV. 28
- Tisiphonus, brother of Phebé, helped slay Alexander of Pherae, V. 430
- Tissaphernes, satrap, IV. 64; advised by Alcibiades to give little help to Spartans, IV. 68; 76; imprisons Alcibiades at Sardis, 80; accused to Cyrus by Lysander, 240; reveals plot of Cyrus against Artaxerxes, XI. 132, 138; seizes Clearchus and the other Greek generals, 166; makes treaty with Agesilaüs, in which he promised to make Greek cities free and independent of the King, then declares war, V. 20 f.; defeated by Agesilaüs, executed by Tithraustes, 24 f., XI. 180
- Tithora, fortress near Parnassus, IV. 374
- Tithraustes, commander of Persian fleet at Eurymedon according to Ephorus, II. 440; sent by Persian king, beheads Tissaphernes, V. 26
- Titianus, sent to armies with apparent authority, XI. 294; 306
- Titinius, sent by Cassius to reconnoitre, slays himself, VI. 222 f.
- Titinnius, divorced Fannia, IX. 570
- Titius, Q., brought Sulla message from Trophonius, IV. 380
- Titius, M., quaestor, IX. 234; friend of Antony, flees to Octavius, 268
- Titus, son of Brutus, see "Brutus, T. Junius."
- Titus, of Croton, intercepted with letters from Lentulus to Catiline, VII. 126
- Titus Lartius, see "Lartius, T."
- Titus Latinus, see "Latinus, T."
- Tityus, giant, story of, associated with birth of Apollo near temple of Apollo Tegyraeus, V. 378
- Toga, why sole garment of candidates for consulship, IV. 148
- Toga praetexta, to be worn by children of Sabine women, I. 152
- Tolerium, Latin city, captured by Volscians under Coriolanus, IV. 186
- Tolmaeus, father of Tolmides, III. 58
- Tolmides, son of Tolmaeus, ravaged seashore of Peloponnesus, III. 60; against Pericles' advice leads expedition into Boeotia and is slain, 58, 204; 193
- Tolumnius, Tuscan, slain and despoiled by Cornelius Cossus, I. 138, V. 454
- Tomb, of Publicola, within city near Velia, I. 564
- "Torquatus," cognomen or epithet, IX. 464
- Torquatus, IV. 420
- Torquatus, M., inflicted death upon his son for disobedience, III. 146
- Torture, of the boats, its nature, XI. 162 f.
- Toruné, in Epirus, seized by Octavius, IX. 278
- Trachis, I. 70
- Trade, that of Ephesus revived by Lysander, IV. 238
- Tragedy, developed by Thespis at Athens, I. 488; Themistocles won as choregus with it, II. 14; 28; closes with farce, III. 422; actor who takes part of messenger or servant is in high repute, IV. 296; V. 58; VII. 308
- Tragia, in battle off it Pericles defeats Samians, III. 74
- Tragic actor, dress of, IV. 92
- Tragic contest, judges of, appointed by lot, but once Cimon and fellow-generals appointed by the Archon gave decision to Sophocles against Aeschylus, II. 428
- Tragiscus, Cretan, slays tyrant Aristippus, XI. 66
- Tralles, Jason of, III. 420; Caesar's statue in temple of Victory there, VII. 554
- Trallians, demand pay for passage of

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Agesilais' army and are routed, v. 42
- Translations, literal from Greek among Cato the Elder's maxims and proverbs, II. 308
- Trapezus, limit of Eumenes' territory, VIII. 84
- Trasimenus, see "Thrasymene."
- Treasury, of Confederacy of Delos, moved to Athens, III. 34 f.; that at Rome received 20,000 talents from Pompey, v. 230
- Treaties: I. 550; II. 120; 380 f.; 444; 460; 482; III. 28; 68; 240 f.; IV. 32; 36; 86 f.; 180; 220; 398; v. 22; 28; 62; 76; 98 f.; 206; 372 f.; 406; 416; VI. 340; 368 f.; VII. 40; 54
- Treatment, of sick, Cato the Elder's, II. 372
- Trebatius Testa, C., companion of Caesar, writes Cicero, VII. 176
- Trebellius, L., advises Antony to oppose law for cancellation of debts, IX. 156
- Trebia, river, battle of, Hannibal victorious, III. 122 f.
- Trebonius (1), slew C. Lusius, IX. 498
- Trebonius (2), slew Clodius Macer in Africa by order of Galba, XI. 236
- Trebonius, C., tribune, proposes laws for assignment of provinces to triumvirate, gets it passed in spite of Cato, v. 250, VIII. 338; in conspiracy against Caesar, IX. 166, VI. 162; given province of Asia, 168
- Trees, Persians' love for, XI. 186 f.
- Trial, of Chaeroneians for murder of Roman soldiers, II. 408; of Cimon for sparing Macedonia, 448
- Triarius, defeated by Mithridates, II. 584, v. 216
- Triballi, defeated by Alexander, VII. 252
- Tribes, three at Rome, I. 152; two at Rome, 310, 364; thirty-five at Rome, X. 172; four at Athens, I. 468
- Tribunate, Coriolanus charged with trying to take it from people, IV. 166; overthrown by Sulla, restored by Pompey, v. 166 f.
- Tribunes, military, preferred by people to consuls, II. 94; Camillus one 2nd time, 98; Camillus appointed with 5 others, 116; Sertorius one, VIII. 6
- Tribunes, of people, 5 in number to be appointed to protect those needing succour, Junius Brutus and Sicinius Vellutus first to be chosen, IV. 130; enjoy immunity of person and remain in power when dictator is appointed, III. 146, IX. 156; IV. 156; 166; urge bill for division of people, II. 110, 116; 580.
- Antony, one, VII. 204, IX. 148, 152; L. Antonius, 170; Aquillius, VIII. 338; Publicius Bibulus, v. 510; Junius Brutus & Sicinius Vellutus, 1st tribunes, IV. 130; Canidius, v. 244; Cato the Younger, VII. 138; P. Clodius, v. 234, VII. 156, 476, VIII. 316; Curio, VII. 514; Dolabella, IX. 156; Livius Drusus & C. Gracchus, X. 214; Flavius & Moryllus, VII. 584; Fulvius & Manius, X. 324; Genucius, 204; C. Gracchus, 204, 2nd time, 214; T. Gracchus, 160; Lucilius, v. 256; Marius, IX. 468; Metellus & Bestia, VII. 138; Metellus, v. 276, VII. 530, VIII. 296; Metilius, III. 146; Annius Milo, VII. 166; Minucius Thermus, VIII. 298; Mucius, X. 174; M. Octavius, 166; Aulus Pompeius, IX. 508; Rubrius & Livius Drusus, X. 218; L. Saturninus, IX. 498, 542; P. Satyrius, X. 190; Sulpicius, IV. 348, IX. 554; Terentius Culeo, X. 372; Trebonius, v. 250; Virginius, IV. 358
- "Tribunus," derived from "tres" because of 3 divisions of people at Rome, I. 152
- Tribus, each had 10 phratries, I. 152. See also "Tribes."
- "Tribus," derived from "tres."
- Tribute, I. 28 f.; VI. 430
- Triopium, II. 440
- Tripod, of Seven wise men, I. 412
- Tripods, choregic, on temple dedicated by Nicias in precinct of Dionysus, III. 214
- Tripylus, friend of Cleomenes, XI. 96
- Triremes, Athenian, their design improved by Cimon, II. 440
- Tritaea, city of Achaean league, X. 84, XI. 24
- Tritymallus, Messenian, X. 92
- Triumph, origin of, I. 136; explana-

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- tion of difference between major and minor, v. 494; of Aemilius Paulus over Perseus, vi. 440; of Antonius, v. 176; of Caesar over Egypt, Pontus, Africa, vii. 570; over sons of Pompey, 572; of Camillus, ii. 94, 110, 184; of Cato the Elder, 334; of Catulus with Marius, ix. 538; voted Cicero by senate, vii. 174; of Fabius Maximus over Ligurians, iii. 120; after recapture of Tarentum, 186; of great-grandfather of Fabius, 188; of grandfather of Fabius, 188; of Flamininus, x. 362; of Flaminius, v. 444; of Lucullus, ii. 592; of Marcellus, v. 452, 494; first of Marius, ix. 492; of Octavius Caesar, ix. 328; of Pompey, v. 150, 166, 230, iii. 350, 352, 428; of Publicola, i. 524, 562; of Romulus, 136, 170; of L. Scipio, ii. 354; of Surenna, iii. 416; of Sulla, iv. 432; of M. Valerius, brother of Publicola, i. 554; of Ventidius, ix. 214
- Triumvirate, of Caesar, Pompey, and Crassus, iii. 354, vii. 494, viii. 332; of Antony, Octavius, and Lepidus, vii. 200, ix. 180; they divide the world, 204
- Troad, ii. 480; 506
- Troas (1), mother of Aeacides by Arybas, ix. 346
- Troas (2), daughter of Aeacides and Phthia, ix. 348
- Troezen, founded by Pittheus, i. 6; home of Theseus, 188; ii. 28; vii. 64; joined Achaean league, xi. 54; taken over by Cleomenes, x. 90
- Troglodytes, their language understood by Cleopatra, ix. 196
- "Troja," sacred equestrian game, viii. 242
- Trojan women, painted by Polygnotus in Peisanactium, ii. 414
- "Trojan women," of Euripides, witnessed by Alexander of Pherae, v. 414
- Trophonius, oracle of, ii. 270; iv. 380
- Trophy, of Romulus, i. 136; iii. 228
- Troy, founded by Dardanus, ii. 144; taken on 24th of Thargelion, 138; 424; destroyed by Heracles on account of wrong done him by Laomedon, iii. 210
- Tubero, Stoic, called Lucullus Xerxes in a toga, ii. 598
- Tubero, Q. Aelius, see "Aelius Tubero."
- Tubertus, Postumius, see "Postumius Tubertus."
- Tuder, Umbrian city, captured by Crassus, iii. 328; ix. 508
- Tuditanus, cited, x. 362
- Tullia, daughter of Cicero, dies at home of Lentulus, her 2nd husband, vii. 188
- Tullius Cimber, took part in murder of Cicero, vi. 162; given province of Bithynia, 168
- Tullus, friend of Cicero, vii. 154
- Tullus, L. Volcatius, reproaches Pompey, v. 274
- Tullus Amfidius, see "Amfidius, Tullus."
- Tullus Attius, king of Volscians, waged war on Romans, said to be ancestor of Cicero, vii. 82. See also "Tullus Amfidius."
- Tullus Hostilius, see "Hostilius, Tullus."
- Turia, battle near it by Sertorius against Pompey and Metellus, viii. 50
- Turpilianus, Petronius, see "Petronius Turpilianus."
- Turpillius, guest-friend of Metellus, executed on false charge of treachery, ix. 478
- Tuscans, passed from Thessaly into Lydia, and thence into Italy, driven from Latium by Romis, i. 92; colonists from Sardis, 170; driven by Gauls from country stretching from Alps to both seas, ii. 128, ix. 488; defeated with great slaughter by Romulus at Fidenae, i. 168; defeated while assisting Tarquinius Superbus in his attempt to regain throne, 522; routed by Publicola, 546; cut to pieces 300 of Fabii, ii. 136; besiege Sutrium, 176; capture Satricum, expelled same day by Camillus, 192
- "Tuscan sea," name of southern sea, ii. 128; vi. 368. See also "Tyrrhenian sea."
- Tuscan wise men, claimed there were 8 ages in all, iv. 346
- Tuscany, i. 90; men from, prescribed

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- religious details regarding building of Rome, 118; Veli bulwark of, II. 96; ancient Tuscany described, 128; III. 62; ravaged by Hannibal, 122; its dearth of free inhabitants and great number of barbarian slaves, X. 162
- Tusculum, people of, planning revolt, cowed by Camillus, receive rights of Roman citizenship, II. 192; Cato the Elder's family from there, 302; 598; 610; v. 290, VII. 542; 184
- Tutula, see "Philotis."
- "Tyche," name of part of Syracuse, V. 484
- "Tycho," name given his spear by Alexander of Pherae, v. 412
- Tydeus, Athenian general, defeated by Lysander at Aegospotami, IV. 106, 256
- Tyndareus, father of Helen, entrusted her to Theseus, I. 70
- Tyndaridae, why called "Anakes," I. 78. See also "Dioscuri."
- Tynnondas, tyrant of Euboea, I. 438
- "Typhon, blasts of," Egyptian name for Serbonian marshes, IX. 142; v. 392
- Tyrannio, grammarian, arranged books in Apellicon's library and gave copies to Andronicus the Rhodian, IV. 406; given by Lucullus to Murena, who freed him, II. 530
- Tyrants, some titles of, II. 228
- Tyre, besieged by Alexander for 7 months and finally taken, VII. 292; demanded of Demetrius by Seleucus, IX. 78
- Tyrrhenia, see "Tuscany."
- Tyrrhenians, dispossessed of best part of Italy by Gauls, IX. 488. See also "Tuscans."
- Tyrrhenian sea, cleared of pirates by Pompey, v. 182. See also "Tuscan sea."
- Tyrtaeus, X. 52; cited, I. 224
- Uliades, Samian, II. 284
- Ulysses, same as Odysseus, v. 488
- Umbria, III. 328
- Umbricius, priest, XI. 258
- Usipes, or Usipites, defeated by Caesar, VII. 496
- Utica, v. 140; 144; held by Cato, VII. 568: its people give Cato splendid burial, VIII. 406
- Vaccaci, have Pompey wintering among them, VIII. 58
- "Vae victis," said by Brennus, II. 164
- Vaga, large city in Africa in charge of Turpillius, entered by Jugurtha, IX. 478
- Vagises, Parthian envoy, his words to Crassus, III. 368
- Valens, Fabius, see "Fabius Valens."
- Valentia, where Pompey defeated Herennius and Perpenna, v. 158
- Valeria, sister of Publicola, beseeches Volumnia, mother of Coriolanus to appeal to him to save Rome, IV. 200
- Valeria, daughter of Publicola, one of 10 maidens sent as hostages to Lars Porsena, escapes, I. 550 f.; said by some to be represented by equestrian statue, 552
- Valeria, sister of Hortensius the orator and daughter of Messala, married Sulla, IV. 436; gave birth to daughter Postuma, 442
- Valerii, trace descent from Publicola, I. 566
- Valerius, made Romans and Sabines one people, ancestor of P. Valerius Publicola, I. 502
- Valerius, Q., executed by Pompey, v. 138
- Valerius Antias, see "Antias, Valerius."
- Valerius Flaccus, see "Flaccus, Valerius."
- Valerius Leo, see "Leo, Valerius."
- Valerius Maximus (1), M., brother of Publicola, seized letters of Tarquin's conspirators, I. 512; 538; made consul with Tubertus, won 2 battles, got triumphs and home on Palatine, 554; on vote of senate is to guarantee that wealthy creditors will deal gently with debtors, IV. 126; received title Maximus for reconciling people with senate, v. 146
- Valerius Maximus (2), cited, v. 520; vi. 246
- Valerius Potitus, see "Potitus, Valerius."

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Valerius Publicola, see "Publicola, P. Valerius."
- Varguntius, legate of Crassus, slain by Parthians, III. 404
- Varinus, P., praetor, defeated repeatedly by Spartacus, III. 338
- Varius Cotylon, friend of Antony, left with 6 legions to guard Gaul, IX. 178
- Varro, C. Terentius, elected consul, his character, III. 158; defeated at Cannae, 160 f.; welcomed at Rome after Cannae by all, 172
- Varro, M. Terentius, Roman philosopher and historian, gave Tarutius task of calculating precise time of Romulus' birth, I. 120; Pompey's legate in Spain, loses his forces to Caesar, VII. 530; cited, I. 138
- Varro, Cingonius, composed speech for Nymphidius Sabinus, XI. 234; ordered executed by Galba, 236
- Varus, Alfenus, general of Vitellius, XI. 304
- Varus, Attius, see "Attius Varus."
- Vatinius, P., proclaimed praetor instead of Cato, v. 250; VII. 102; sought reconciliation with Cicero, VII. 146; in Epidamnus and Apollonia, VI. 180
- Vedius, slain by people of Picenum for attacking Pompey, v. 128
- "Veientani," name for people of Veii, II. 96
- Veii, Tuscan city, begins war with Rome by demanding Fidenae, is defeated and makes treaty of friendship for 100 years, I. 170; how induced to give up terra-cotta chariot, 536; siege of, II. 96 f.; man of, seized and forced to reveal secret oracles concerning city, 100 f.; capture and sack of, 104; shelters fugitives from battle of Allia, 136
- Velabrum, spot where one Larentia is buried and the other disappeared; two etymologies of word, I. 102
- Vesulus, with Proculus announces to Numa that Romans invite him to be their king, I. 320
- Velia (1), on Palatine, held mansion of Publicola, I. 526; Publicola buried near it, 564
- Velia (2), in Italy, VI. 344; 456
- Velitrae, people of, offer city to Romans, IV. 144; captured by Camillus, II. 202
- Vellutus, Sicinius, see "Sicinius Vellutus."
- Ventidii, two brothers ordered out of Auximum by Pompey, v. 128
- Ventidius Bassus, P., defeats Parthians, slays Labienus and Pharnapates, routs and slays Pacorus, besieges city of Samosata, IX. 208 f.; enjoys triumph over Parthians, 214
- Vento, see "Perpenna Vento, M."
- Venus, identified with Libitina, I. 346; regarded by some as natural cause which supplies from moisture seeds of everything, III. 366; IV. 390; Venus Victrix, ancestress of Caesar's race, v. 292; VIII. 248; of Paphos, 320; IX. 192
- Venusia, refuge of Varro after Cannae, III. 166; v. 514
- Verania, wife of Piso, XI. 270
- Vercellae, battle of, IX. 530
- Vercingetorix, see "Vergentorix."
- Verenia, one of first two Vestals appointed by Numa, I. 340
- Vergentorix, leads revolt against Caesar, VII. 504; surrenders to Caesar, 510
- Vergilia, taken by Volumnia to camp of Volscians, IV. 202
- Vergilio, Attilius, overthrows statue of Galba, XI. 264
- Vergilius, C., praetor of Sicily, writes to Cicero to keep away, VII. 164
- Verginius, tribune of the people, appointed by Cinna to impeach Sulla, IV. 358
- Verginius Rufus, in Gaul, does not join Galba, XI. 216 f.; gets his troops to swear allegiance to Galba, 224 f.; his army, 244; made consul by Otho, 276; 318
- "Verres," its meaning in Latin, VII. 98
- Verres, prosecuted by Cicero, convicted, VII. 98 f.
- "Verrucosus," surname of Fabius Maximus from wart on lip, III. 118
- Vespasian, built 3rd temple of Jupiter Capitolinus, I. 540; commander in Judaea, friendly to Otho, XI. 284; tried to seize supreme power, 286
- Vesta, temple of, I. 146; why built, circular by Numa, name given by

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Pythagoreans to fire at centre of universe, 344; temple of, near Regia, 354; fire of, its nature; temple of, said to contain Palladium of Troy, II. 142 f.
- Vestals, law ordained death for one guilty of unchastity, I. 96; introduced by Romulus to guard sacred fire, 160; consecrated by Numa, account of them, 338; get holy water from spot where shield fell, 350; in flight from Gauls carry off sacred fire, II. 142 f.; 362; III. 172; IX. 182.
- Veto, of tribune, prevails over his colleagues, X. 166
- Vettius (1), friend of C. Gracchus, ably defended at court by him, X. 198
- Vettius (2), accused of plotting against life of Pompey at instigation of Lucullus, II. 608
- Vettius, Spurius, interrex, put acceptance of Numa Pompilius as king to vote of people, I. 326
- Veturius, deserted to Otho, XI. 258
- Veturius, C., condemned to death for refusing to make way for tribune in forum, X. 204
- Veturius, P., one of first two quaestors, I. 534
- Veturius Mamurius, see "Mamurius, Veturius."
- Vetus, praetor in Spain, VII. 452
- Via Nova, II. 126
- Via Sacra, I. 552; VII. 134
- Vibius, Sicilian, made prefect of engineers by Cicero, will not receive him in his house, VII. 162
- Vibius Paciacus, helps young Crassus in his concealment, III. 322 f.
- Vibo, city of Lucania, previously called Hipponium, VII. 162
- Vibullius, friend of Pompey, sent by Caesar to Pompey with peace proposals, v. 284
- Vica Pota, temple of, stands where Publicola had his house built, I. 528
- "Vici," name given villages surrounding Rome, II. 594
- Victory, goddess, IV. 390; VI. 278
- Villius, C., supporter of Ti. Gracchus, put to death, X. 192
- Villius, P., invaded Macedonia late in season and wasted time, X. 326; encamped over against Philip, 328; sailed to confer with Antiochus about freedom of Greeks under his sway, 354
- Vindex, Junius, general in Gaul, revolts from Nero and asks Galba to become emperor, XI. 212 f., 242, 270; defeated by Verginius, commits suicide, 218; 252
- Vindicius, slave, learns of conspiracy of Vitellii and Aquillii and reveals it to Publicola, I. 510; rewarded for revealing plot, 518
- "Vindicta," derived from "Vindicius," I. 518
- Vinius, T., captain of Galba's praetorian guard, urges him to revolt against Nero, XI. 214; reports to Galba decrees of senate, 220; jealous of Verginius Rufus, 226; persuades Galba to make use of Nero's riches, his character, his acts ruin Galba, 228, 272, 230, 240 f.; 250; 262; party to conspiracy against Galba, also slain, 266; 268
- Vipsanian portico, XI. 262
- Virginus, see "Verginius."
- Virtue and Honour, temple to, by Marcellus, v. 512
- "Virtus," its meaning, IV. 120
- Vitellii, corrupted by Tarquin's envoys, won over two of Brutus' sons to join plot to bring back Tarquins, I. 508
- Vitellius, A., proclaimed emperor in Germany, XI. 252 f.; put to death 120 who claimed part in death of Galba and his adherents, 268; corresponds with Otho, 284; his wife and mother cared for by Otho, 286; joined by Otho's troops, 308; 312; I. 540
- Vitellius, L., brother of the emperor, XI. 286
- "Vixerunt," word used of those dead, VII. 134
- Voconius, sent by Lucullus with fleet to intercept Mithridates, is too late, II. 508
- Voconius, had three very ugly daughters, VII. 150
- Volcians, defeated and Corioli captured, IV. 132; 2nd war against them planned, 146; send embassy to Rome demanding back captured

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- territory and cities, 180; through Coriolanus demand restitution of cities and territories torn from them and equal civic rights, 190; withdraw from before Rome, 210; after death of Coriolanus quarrel with Aequians, defeated in battle by Romans, become her subjects, 216 f.; defeated by the dictator Postumius Tubertus, II. 96; with Aequians and Latins invade Roman territory, 176; defeated by Camillus, 180; 182; make war on Rome, 190; had king Tullus Attius, VII. 82
- Volumnia, greatly loved by her son Coriolanus, IV. 126; persuades him to spare Rome, 200 f.; quoted, 202 f.
- Volumnius, actor, put to death after Philippi, VI. 228
- Volumnius, P., philosopher, with Brutus at Philippi, 234, 240 f.
- "Vopiscus," surname of surviving twin, IV. 142
- Votive offerings, III. 210
- Vows, by Fabius Maximus, III. 130
- Vulcan, temple of, I. 166; 174; contained bronze statue of Horatius, 546
- Vultures, why used chiefly by Romans for auguries, why liked by Hercules, I. 114
- Vulturnus, river in district of Casilinum, III. 134
- Wages, paid by Lysander and Alcibiades respectively, IV. 102, 240 f.
- Waggons, four-wheeled, used by Persians in conveying their women folk, II. 70 f.
- Wall, long, at Athens, measure for, introduced by Pericles, III. 42; at Argos, built on advice of Alcibiades, IV. 38; II. 248; at Rome, course of, how marked out, I. 118
- Wars: between Achaeans and Aetolians, XI. 70 f.; between Achaeans and Eleians, X. 58; between Agesilaüs and Persia, II. 464 f., V. 22; of Antony and Caesar against Brutus and Cassius, IX. 182 f.; between Antony and Octavius, VI. 452, VII. 198; of Asiatic cities against Persia, IV. 296; between Athens and Aegina, II. 10 f., VI. 10; between Athens and Philip, VIII. 178 f.; between Athens and Samos, III. 68, 72 f.; Boeotian war (usually called Corinthian) IV. 308 f.; of Caesar in Egypt, VII. 556; between Carthage and Masinissa, II. 380; between Carthage and Rome, 382; between Corcyraeans and Corinthians, III. 82; between Demetrius and Rhodians, IX. 48; between Egypt and Persia, II. 84 f.; XI. 184; between Eumenes and Antigonus, VIII. 102 f.; between Greeks and Persians under Xerxes, II. 16; Hellenic wars, stopped by Themistocles, 18; Jugurthine, IV. 328; Lamian, VII. 66, VIII. 194, IX. 346; between Machanidas and Achaeans, X. 280; Marsic or Social, II. 474, IV. 336 f., VII. 86, VIII. 8, IX. 552; between Megalopolis and Nabis, tyrant of Sparta, X. 288; between Octavius and Antony, IX. 264 f.; Parthian, III. 364 f.; IX. 190, 218 f.; Peloponnesian, II. 212, III. 82 f., 240, 244 f., IV. 238, X. 112; Phocian, VII. 28, 42; against pirates, conducted by Pompey, V. 180 f.; between Pompey and Caesar, VII. 520 f.; between Achaeans and Romans, X. 292; between Romans and Aequians, Volscians, Latins, and Tuscans, II. 176 f.; of Rome in Africa, 310 f.; of Rome with Antiochus the Great, 334, 388, VI. 362, X. 302, 362 f.; of Rome with Carthage, II. 382; of Rome with Cimbri and Teutones, VIII. 6; between Romans and Carthaginians for Sicily, V. 436, 440; of Rome with Falerians and Capenates, II. 98; between Romans and Faliscans, 116; between Romans and Gauls, 198 f.; of Rome with Hannibal, 398, III. 120 f., V. 436; of Rome with Ligurians, III. 120; of Rome against Mithridates, II. 474, 488, IV. 344 f., 358, V. 196 f., IX. 554; of Rome against Numantia, X. 152 f.; of Rome with Perseus, VI. 370 f.; with Philip, 370, X. 324 f.; with Praenestines and Volscians, II. 190; with Sabines and Latins, I. 556; with Spaniards, X.

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- 154; with Tarentum, IX. 382; with Tigranes, II. 542, 546 f.; with Volscians, IV. 132, 170 f.; with Veii, II. 96 f.; Sacred war, III. 62 f.; Sertorian, II. 486, v. 156 f.; Sicilian, IX. 280; Social war in Greece, VII. 40; Spanish (Hither Spain) II. 330 f., 388; between Sparta and Persia, v. 12 f.; between Sparta and other Greeks, 38; between Sparta and Thebes, 58 f., 372 f.; of Spartacus, III. 334 f.
- Wasps, bred in putrefying horses, X. 140
- Water-carrier, in bronze, at Sardis, II. 84
- Water supply, of Rome, private tapping stopped, II. 356
- Way, Appian, Caesar as curator spent large sums of his own money on it, VII. 452
- Wealth, Roman, consisted in flocks and herds chiefly, I. 532; that of Veii great, II. 96 f.; much gold and silver imported from Athens to Sparta by Lysander, IV. 236
- Weapons, II. 560; IX. 530
- "White day," origin of expression, III. 78
- White village, little place between Berytus and Sidon, IX. 254
- Widows, at Rome, penalty for early remarriage, I. 346; II. 96; not permitted to remarry until husband had been dead 10 months, IX. 206
- Wills, Solon's law concerning, I. 460; IV. 20; Roman soldiers made unwritten ones just before battle, 136; will of Caesar, VI. 168; of Antony, IX. 268 f.
- Wine, how introduced to Gauls, II. 126
- Women, regulations of Lycurgus and Numa concerning them compared, I. 390 f.; Roman women, character and customs, 392; regulations of Solon concerning them, 462; 522; 556; 564 f.; II. 52; Persian women watched very carefully by their husbands, 70; Roman women rewarded by being given eulogy at their funerals, 114; 178; 296 f.; their power in Rome, 322; Cato the Elder's opinion of man who struck wife or child, 360; 364; 414; 416; III. 2; 378; 418; IV. 20; how honoured at Rome when Coriolanus' mother saved city, 210; holy women of Germans, VII. 488; VIII. 292; IX. 338; Roman woman had no praenomen, 464; Spartan women ruled their husbands, possessed greater part of wealth in time of Agis, X. 18
- Women's Fortune, temple of, erected at Rome, IV. 210
- Woodpecker, especially honoured by Latins, considered sacred to Mars, I. 98
- Wool, Milesian, IV. 62
- Xanthians, ignore M. Brutus, meet with disaster, VI. 130
- Xanthippides, archon in year of Marodonius' defeat, II. 226
- Xanthippus (1), father of Pericles and Ariphron, IV. 2; gave burial to dog that followed him to Salamis, II. 30, 318; 58; with Cimón and Myronides envoy to Sparta, 244; father of Pericles by Agaristé, conquered Persians at Mycalé, III. 6
- Xanthippus (2), son of Pericles and his 1st wife, III. 70; eldest son of Pericles, had feud with his father, died during plague, 104
- Xanthus, city in Lycia, VII. 270; besieged by Brutus and destroyed, VI. 194
- Xanthus, flute-player, IX. 186
- Xenagoras, son of Eumelus, measured height of Mt. Olympus, VI. 394
- Xenarchus, author, III. 208
- Xenares, friend of Cleomenes, does not encourage him to copy Agis, X. 54
- Xenocles (1) of deme Cholargus, set on high lantern over shrine of sanctuary of mysteries at Eleusis, III. 40
- Xenocles (2) ambassador of Agesilaüs, imprisoned in Larissa, v. 42
- Xenocles (3) exile from Sicyon, helps Aratus in plot to return, XI. 10
- Xenocles (4) of Adramyttium, taught Cicero oratory, VII. 90
- Xenocrates, II. 612; received gift of 50 talents from Alexander, VII. 244; had Phocion as pupil in the Aca-

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- demy, VIII. 152; philosopher, as ambassador not successful with Antipater, 204; paid resident alien tax, 212; morose in disposition, advised by Plato to sacrifice to Muses, IX. 466; anecdote about him, II. 356
- Xenodochus, of Cardia, with Alexander, VII. 370
- Xenophantus, celebrated flute-player, IX. 132
- Xenophilus (1), father of victorious choregus named Aristides, II. 212
- Xenophilus (2), robber captain, hires out a few soldiers to Aratus, XI. 12
- Xenophon (1), Athenian, defeated by Chalcidians in Thrace, III. 226
- Xenophon (2), fought on side of Agesilaus at Coroneia, V. 46; philosopher, in train of Agesilaus, ordered to rear his sons at Sparta, 52; with Ten Thousand marched from sea to Babylon and back, v. 22, IX. 242; IV. 94; v. 330; XI. 142
- Ages. (VI. 4) V. 8
- Anab. (I. 6-11) XI. 132; (I. 8. 26) 146; (II. 1. 7-23) 156
- Cyrop. (IV. 1. 3) v. 528
- Hell. (III. 4. 17) v. 492; (VII. 5. 12-14) 96
- Reip. Lac. (X. 8) I. 206
- Symp. referred to, IV. 274; (I. 1) v. 80
- See also XI. 154.
- Xerxes, father of Artaxerxes, XI. 128; had sister Sandaucé, II. 238; marched through Thessaly and Boeotia against Attica, 234; forces pass of Thermopylae, 24; induced to fight by message from Themistocles, 36; defeated by Greeks at Salamis, 12, 38; induced to retreat to Asia by ruse of Themistocles, 44 f., 240; left Mardonius behind to obstruct pursuit, 12, 240; set 200 talents upon head of Themistocles, 70; met him, 74 f.; 86; 396; defeated by Cimon at Eurymedon, 438 f.; made treaty with Greeks after Eurymedon, 444; IV. 374; v. 42; statue of him left lying by Alexander, VII. 334; XI. 130; quoted, II. 76
- Xypeté, Attic deme, Metagenes of, III. 40
- Year, how computed by early Romans, Greeks, Egyptians, and others, I. 366 f.; method of designating, changed at Athens, IX. 26; great year, IV. 346
- Zacynthians, actual assassins of Dion, VI. 118 f.
- Zacynthus, island of, rendezvous of Dion's supporters, III. 290, VI. 46; X. 370
- Zaleucus, had frequent audiences of Deity, I. 320
- Zarbienus, king of Gordyeni, secretly arranged alliance with Lucullus through Clodius, betrayed and executed, II. 534, 568
- Zarctra, fortress in Euboea, occupied by Phocion, VIII. 172
- Zela, battle of, VII. 560
- Zelea, Arthmius of, II. 18
- Zeno (1), Eleatic, teacher of Pericles in natural philosophy and eristic, III. 10; defended Pericles against charge of conceit, 14
- Zeno (2) of Citium, adopted Lycurgus' design for a civil polity, I. 300; followed by Sphaerus, X. 52; quoted, VIII. 154; XI. 52
- Zeno (3) Cretan, teacher of dancing, XI. 176
- Zenodotia, in Mesopotamia, taken by Crassus, III. 364
- Zenodotus, of Troezen, cited, I. 130
- Zeugitae, class at Athens with yearly increase of 200 measures, I. 450, II. 386
- Zeugma, place where Crassus crossed Euphrates, III. 372; 404
- Zeus, Olympian games in honour of, instituted by Hercules, I. 56; II. 246; 280; statue of, at Pisa, III. 4; procession in honour of, at Athens, VIII. 230
- Zeus Areius, sacrificed to at Passaro, IX. 356
- Zeus, Dodonaean, oracle of, II. 76
- Zeus Eleutherios, II. 272, 274, 276, 278
- Zeus Hecalus, named from Hecalé who entertained Theseus, I. 26
- Zeus, Olympian, III. 260, IV. 390
- Zeus, Soter, II. 246, VII. 68, XI. 122
- Zeus, Syllanius, I. 220

GENERAL INDEX TO ALL THE 'LIVES'

- Zeuxidamus, father of Archidamus, II.
452, v. 2 "
- Zeuxis, quoted, III. 40
- Zoilus, put coats of mail made by him to severe test, IX. 50
- Zopyrus, slave, tutor of Alcibiades, I.
256, IV. 2
- Zopyrus, soldier of Antigonus, slew Pyrrhus, IX. 458
- Zoroaster, had frequent audience with Deity, I. 320
- Zosimé, wife of Tigranes, led in Pom-pey's triumph, v. 230